START

Microfilmed By:

NORTHEAST DOCUMENT
CONSERVATION CENTER
Andover, MA 01810

DECEMBER 1993

Camera Operator:
Kathy Wilder

MASTER
NEGATIVE
NUMBER:
BSO-56-006

MICROFILMED
August 1993 - April 1994

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOK MICROFILMING PROJECT

Funded in part by

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

Grant No. PS-20709-93

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MICROFILMING PROJECT

A Cooperative Project Between the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives and the Boston Public Library
(August 1993 - April 1994)

The Microfilming Project incorporates two collections of scrapbooks housed in two separate repositories. The first set of scrapbooks (80 volumes) resides within the Allen A. Brown Collection of the Boston Public Library (BPL) Music Department. Their call number is M.125.5. The second set of scrapbooks (132 volumes) resides within the Press Clippings collection of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) Archives. They have the designation Pres 56.

The BPL scrapbooks begin with the founding of the BSO in 1881 and continue, through 79 seasons, to 1960. Articles consist mainly of reviews and feature stories from Boston and New York newspapers. Occasionally, magazine articles and press releases are also included. The scrapbooks cover most aspects of the BSO.

The BSO scrapbooks run from 1889, the Orchestra's 9th season, to 1973. In addition to local reviews and features, the volumes contain articles culled from national and international publications. The scrapbooks document, in detail, all aspects of the BSO: The Symphony Orchestra (including subscription concerts, tours, and trips), the Boston Pops, the Tanglewood Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, and Symphony Hall.

The two sets of scrapbooks have been filmed as two separate entities. Researchers wanting to look at specific seasons or subjects must examine both sets of films to ensure full coverage.

The scrapbooks do not represent the complete holdings of either location on the subject of the BSO.

Requests for positive microfilm copies of individual rolls, or of film sets, should be directed to the respective repository:

Music Department
Boston Public Library
Post Office Box 286
Boston, MA 02117

Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives
Symphony Hall
Boston, MA 02115

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOKS

1889 - 1973

132 VOLUMES

Source: Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives

FINDING AID

Boston Symphony Orchestra Scrapbooks (Series 56, Sub-Series 1)

Source: Press Office (Office of the Public Relations Director)

The BSO scrapbooks comprise part of one series in the BSO Archives. Series 56, Press Clippings, is divided by format into 3 sub-series: 1) Scrapbooks, 1889-1973 (132 volumes); 2) Loose Clippings, 1931-1991 (9 record cartons); and 3) Oversize Newspapers and Journals, 1919-1979 (1 oversize box). Each sub-series is arranged chronologically.

The scrapbooks contain concert notices and reviews, record reviews, and feature articles. Early scrapbooks may also contain programs, tickets, and subscription orders. Materials are organized by concert season into the following categories: BSO (including tours); Kneisel Quartet (and later Boston Symphony Chamber Players); Boston Pops (referred to in early years as Promenade concerts); and Tanglewood (including the Tanglewood Music Center, the Tanglewood Festival, Tanglewood-on-Parade, and the Fromm Festival of Contemporary Music).

Reviews and articles cover a wide range of subjects: Founder H.L. Higginson; BSO conductors, players, trustees, and other personnel; guest artists and composers; BSO and Pops performances and recordings; U.S. and overseas tours; BSO/Cecilia Society joint performances; open rehearsals; and special events connected to anniversary celebrations and fundraising.

Feature stories document changes in the size, composition, and location of the orchestra. Topics include the hiring of women and minorities; the unionization of players; controversies (such as the internment of conductor Karl Muck during World War II); the sale of the old Music Hall; and the construction of Symphony Hall and other structures (such as the Koussevitsky Music Shed at Tanglewood).

Reproductions of the materials in the collection may not be made without permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives.

GUIDE TO CONTENTS

Institution: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Series Name: PRESS CLIPPINGS
Series Number: 56
Series Dates: 1889-1991

Sub-series Name: SCRAPBOOKS
Sub-series Number: 1
Sub-series Dates: 1889-1973

VOLUME LISTING

VOL	TITLE	DATES
1	BSO	1889-1890
2	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1890-1891
3	BSO	1891-1892
4	Promenade (Pops)	1892
5	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1892-1893
6	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1893-1894
7	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1894-1895
8	BSO	1895-1896
9	Promenade (Pops)	1895-1896
10	BSO	1896-1897
11	BSO	1897-1898
12	Promenade (Pops)	1897-1898
13	BSO	1898-1899
14	BSO	1899-1900
15	Pops	1899-1900
16	BSO	1900-1901
17	BSO	1901-1902
18	Pops	1901-1903
19	BSO	1902-1903
20	BSO	1903-1904
21	BSO	1904-1905
22	Pops	1904-1905
23	BSO	1905-1906
24	BSO	1906-1907
25	BSO	1907-1908
26	BSO	1908-1909
27	BSO Pops	1909-1910
28	BSO Pops	1910-1911
29	BSO Advertisements	1910-1911
30	BSO Pops	1911-1912
31	BSO Pops	1912-1913
32	BSO Pops	1913-1914
33	BSO Pops	1914-1915
34	BSO Pops	1915-1916
35	BSO Pops	1916-1917
36	BSO Pops	1917-1918
37	Karl Muck	1918
38	BSO Pops	1918-1919
39	BSO Pops	1919-1920
40	BSO Advertisements	1919-1920
41	BSO Pops	1920-1921
42	BSO Pops	1921-1922
43	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1922-1923
44	BSO Pops	1922-1924
45	BSO Pops	1924
46	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1924-1926
47	BSO Pops	1925-1926
48	BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1926-1927
49	BSO Pops	1926-1928
50	BSO	1928
51	BSO Pops	1928-1929
52	BSO Pops U.S. Tour	1929-1930
53	BSO	1930-1931
54	BSO Pops	1931-1932
55	BSO Pops	1932-1933
56	BSO	1933-1934
57	BSO	1934-1935
58	BSO	1935-1936
59	BSO	1936-1937

VOL	TITLE	DATES
60	Pops
	Tanglewood	1936-1937
61	BSO	1937
62	BSO	1937-1938
63	Pops
	Tanglewood	1938
64	BSO	1938-1939
65	Pops
	Tanglewood	1939
66	BSO	1939-1940
67	Tanglewood	1939-1941
68	BSO
	Pops	1940
69	BSO	1940-1941
70	Tanglewood	1940-1944
71	BSO	1941-1942
72	BSO	1942-1943
73	BSO	1943-1944
74	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1944-1945
75	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1945-1946
76	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1946-1947
77	Tanglewood	1947-1948
78	BSO	1947-1949
79	Tanglewood	1949-1950
80	BSO	1949-1951
81	Tanglewood	1950-1951
82	BSO
	Pops	1951-1952
83	BSO
	Pops	1952-1953
84	Tanglewood	1952-1953
85	BSO	1953-1955
86	Tanglewood	1953-1954
87	Tanglewood	1954-1955
88	BSO
	Pops	1955-1956
89	Tanglewood	1955-1956
90	Tanglewood	1955-1956
91	European Tour	1956
92	European Tour	1956-1957
93	BSO
	Pops	1956-1957
94	Tanglewood	1957
95	BSO	1957-1958
96	BSO
	Pops	1958-1959
97	BSO	1958-1959
98	Tanglewood	1958-1959
99	Tanglewood	1959
100	BSO
	Pops	1959-1960
101	Tanglewood	1959-1960
102	Far Eastern Tour	1959-1960
103	BSO
	Pops	1960-1961
104	Tanglewood	1961
105	BSO
	Pops	1961-1962
106	Tanglewood	1962
107	BSO
	Pops	1962-1963
108	Tanglewood	1963
109	BSO
	Pops	1963-1964
110	Tanglewood	1963-1964
111	BSO
	Pops	1964-1966
112	Tanglewood	1965
113	BSO 85th Anniversary	1965
114	BSO
	Pops	1965-1966
115	Tanglewood	1966
116	BSO
	Pops	1966-1967
117	Tanglewood	1967
118	BSO
	Pops	1967-1968
119	Tanglewood	1968-1969
120	BSO
	Pops	1968-1969
121	Tanglewood	1969
122	BSO
	Pops	1969-1970
123	Tanglewood	1970
124	BSO
	Pops	1970-1971
125	Tanglewood	1971
126	BSO
	Pops	1971-1972
127	European Tour	1970-1971
128	European Tour	1971
129	Tanglewood	1972
130	BSO
	Pops	1972-1973
131	Tanglewood	1973
132	BSO
	Pops	1973-1974

MATERIALS NOT FILMED

SUB-SERIES NUMBER	SUB-SERIES NAME	SUB-SERIES DATES
2	Loose Clippings	1931-1991
3	Oversize Newspapers and Journals	1919-1979

COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the Unites States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copyright law.

TECHNICAL DATA

IMAGE PLACEMENT: [✓ IA] IB IIA IIB

REDUCTION RATION: 12X

FILM STOCK:

Kodak
IMAGELINK™ HQ
MICROFILM
35mm x 30.5m · 100ft
Sp 425
DEVELOP BEFORE 07/1995
1461-0325-012-02
CAT 840 3594
19-03

REEL 6

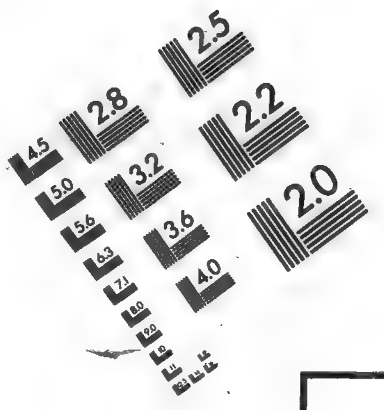
Volume 9-11

Promenade
1895-1896
to
BSO
1897-1898

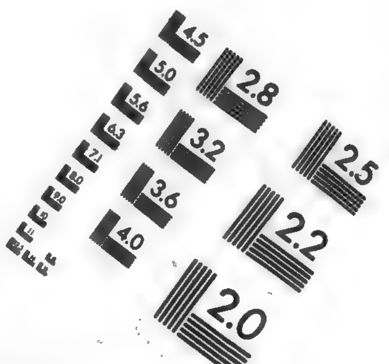
2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

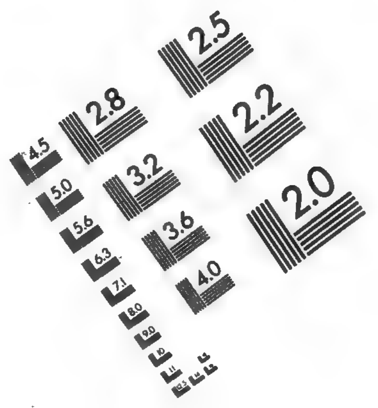
PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



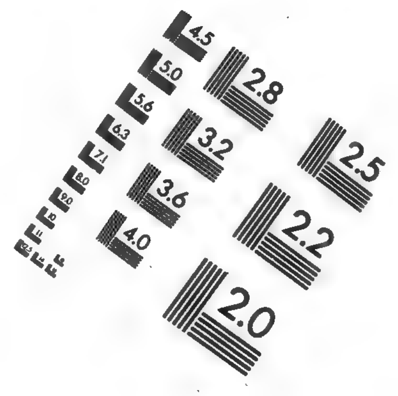
2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0



2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



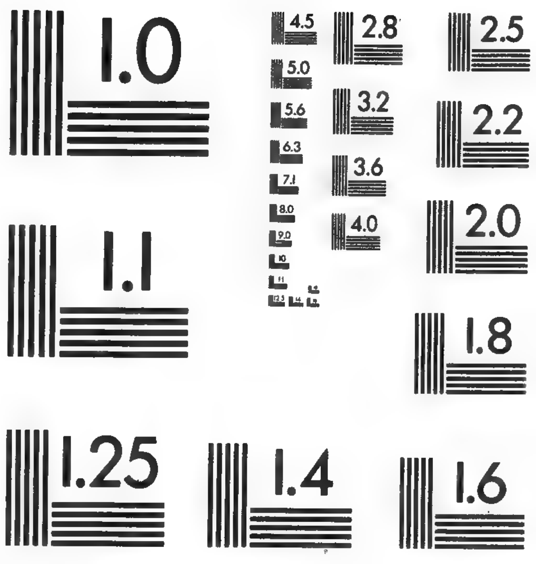
2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0



2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
2.8
2.5
5.0
3.2
2.2
5.6
3.6
6.3
2.0
4.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

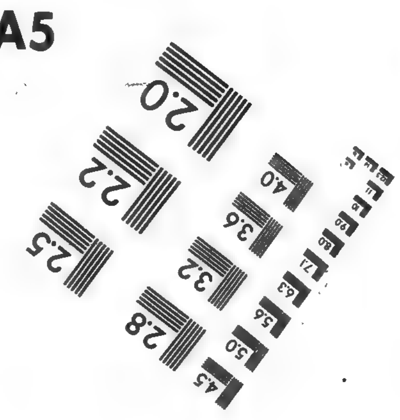
1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

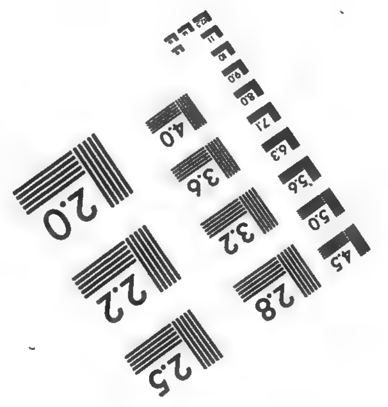
2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

A5

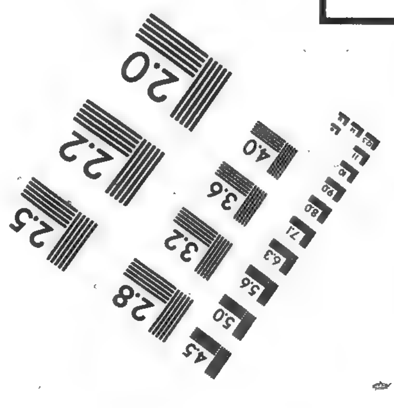


2.0
2.2
4.0
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8

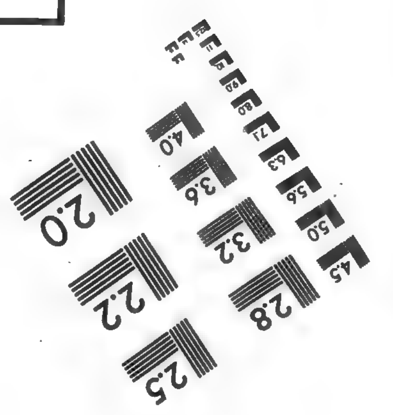


4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8



4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

PRECISIONSM RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

MULTIPLE EXPOSURES
DUE TO COLOR VARIATIONS
AND OVERLAPPING MATERIAL

VOLUME 9

PROMENADE (POPS)

1895 - 1896

SHIPMAN'S
Invoice & Scrap
BOOK

Now for the Pops, With de Novellis as Conductor.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The closing concert of the 14th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be closely followed by the opening night of the 10th series of the Music Hall Promenade Concerts, which is appointed for Saturday, May 11. These entertainments will be conducted on the same plan which has made them so successful in past seasons. The position of conductor will be filled by Mr. Antonio De Novellis, a musician eminently qualified to direct the splendid orchestra which will be placed in his charge. Mr. De Novellis earned a brilliant reputation as an orchestral conductor during his eight years association with Max Strakosch, in the production of grand opera in Italian and English. He came to this country from Naples in 1876, and inaugurated a series of operatic performances at Philadelphia, during the Centennial Exhibition.

After the Philadelphia performances followed a tour of the principal cities of the country, with a company which included Pappenheim, Marie Roze, Clara Louise Kellogg, Annie Louise Cary, Brignoli, Tom Karl and George Conly. Mr. De Novellis's most noteworthy achievement in Boston was the direction of the season of grand opera in Italian at the Mechanics' Building a few years ago, with a notable company, headed by Gerster and Campanini. The financial failure of this enterprise led Mr. De Novellis to forsake the grand opera for the more lucrative position offered him as conductor of light opera by Mr. John McCaull. with whom he remained for six years. Then followed a notable production of the charming opera "Dorothy,' 'by Mr. Duff.

After this Mr. De Novellis joined Francis Wilson, and for five years had the musical direction of the successful comic opera productions of this favorite comedian. At the beginning of the present season, after most satisfactory evidence of his ability in the preparation of the "Fencing Master" and the "Algerians," Mr. DeKoven selected M. De Novellis to take the musical direction of "Rob Roy." The new conductor of the promenade concerts will have ample opportunity to display his sterling qualities as a musician, and will, without doubt, receive a warm welcome from the patrons of these delightful entertainments.

VOL. XCVII, NO. [illegible]

SUNDAY, MAY 12, 1895.

"POPS" OPEN BRILLIANTLY.

Sig. A. de Novellis Welcomed Most Cordially.

New Conductor Acheives a Complete Success — A Treat of Light Music Finely Rendered and Heard Through the Clattering of Glasses and the Popping of Corks.

The 10th season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall opened brilliantly last night. Despite the excessive and discouraging heat, a very large audience was in attendance.

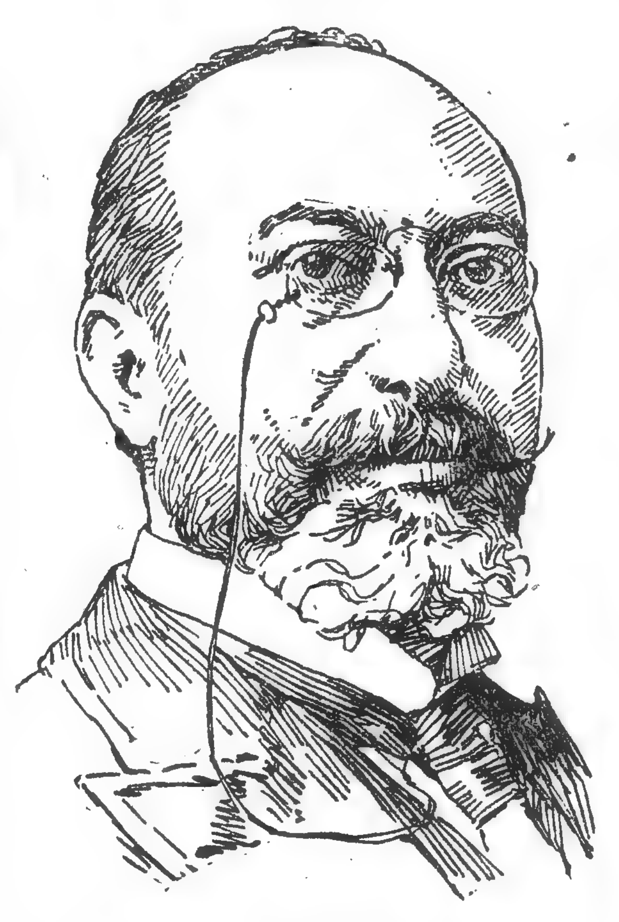
The arrangement of the hall was the same as that of preceding seasons. The ushers were many and attentive and the service was prompt and civil.

The new conductor, Sig. A. de Novellis, was welcomed with the most cordial friendliness, and through the whole concert his efforts were rewarded with the heartiest applause. In fact, such enthusiasm as greeted him at every stage of the performances has been rare at these entertainments. He was evidently the right man in the right place, and he is to be congratulated on the completeness of the success he achieved. As a conductor he has decided worth.

Every number was played with as much care and finish as if the music was not to be heard through the clattering of glasses, the popping of corks, the shuffling of feet and the hum of conversation.

The nuances were conscientiously observed, and the orchestra was kept well in hand. The playing was of an excellence that would have afforded full enjoyment and satisfaction under far more favorable conditions than attended its hearing on this occasion.

The programme was selected and arranged with admirable judgment, and was especially felicitous i n its widely varied contrasts of style.



SIG. A. DE NOVELLIS.

Encores were frequent, and Sig. de Novellis, with a readiness that was perhaps more good-natured than discreet, responded to the demand for them. Thus, the pretty Waldteufel waltz, "Amour et Printemps," was repeated, as was also the last movement of the overture to "iWlliam Tell," which, by the way, was given with stirring brilliancy.

A remarkably impressive performance of the prelude to the third act of "Lohengrin" was applauded with such vigorous persistency that Gillet's "Loiu du Bal," charmingly read, was given in responce. The intermezzo in "Cavalleria Rusticana" was also repeated.

Among the audience were many regular attendants at the Symphony concerts, and many prominent musicians, and the pleasure that the concert afforded all was unmistakable. It was something of a relief to listen to an entertainment of light music, so finely rendered, after a season that has been almost oppressively prolific in music of a more serious cast.

The programmes are to be changed every night, that of tomorrow being:

March, "Hochlands Klange"	Millocker
Overture, "Raymond"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Kaiser"	Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Carmen"	Bizet
Ballet music, "Henry VIII."	Saint-Saens
Overture, "Stradella"	Flotow
"Clair de la Lune" (First time.)	Gillet
Selection, "The Gondoliers"	Sullivan
Selection, "Sphinx"	Thompson
Waltz, "Diesen Kuss der Ganzen Welt," (First time.)	Ziehrer
Polka, "Nuee d'Oiseaux" (First time.)	Waldteufel
March, "The Flag"	Ziehrer

There will be no concert on Thursday night, owing to a long-standing engagement of the hall. The season could not nave begun with more favorable results. The new conductor achieved instant popularity, and the success of the concerts would seem to be already assured.

[illegible], MAY 12, 1895.

FIRST "POP."

Brilliant Opening of the Promenade Concerts.

Great Success of Mr. de Novellis, the Conductor.

Mr. B. L. Whelpley Gives a Piano Concert in Chickering Hall.

There was a very large and enthusiastic audience last evening in Music Hall. The hot weather apparently had no terrors, and, indeed, the temperature of the hall was comfortable, all circumstances taken into consideration. The program was as follows:

March, "Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
Overture, "Masaniello"	Auber
Waltz, "Amour et Printemps" (First time.)	Waldteufel
Selection, "Falka"	Chassaigne
Prelude to Act III., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Intermezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
Suite, "L'Arlesienne," No. 2	Bizet
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppe
Waltz, "Grubenlichter" (First time.)	Zeller
Gavotte, "La Coquette" (First time.)	Sudessi
March, "Tabasco"	Chadwick

Mr. Antonio de Novellis, the conductor this season, was most warmly welcomed, and with just reason; for his abilities as a musician and conductor, and his fine personal qualities are well known to the music-lovers of this city. During his American career he has had varied adventures and vicissitudes. He conducted admirably Italian opera when it was in its glory. He showed his skill and tact in performances of operetta. Last evening he proved himself an excellent leader and programmaker of orchestral concerts. It was a pleasure to see that he is held here in such high esteem; for audiences, like republics, are too often fickle and ungrateful; they are apt to toss their hats in air in honor of the new man, forgetting him who has served them in the past faithfully and well. Mr. de Novellis may well be proud of his success, which was every whit deserved.

Mr. de Novellis conducted with taste, force and intelligence. There was no vain personal display, no posing in the sight of the people, for the man is the personification of modesty. His thoughts were of the orchestra and the pieces played, not of the audience and what it might think or say. Without extravagance of gesture, without mirror-studied grace, he led simply and effectively. Mr. Ellis is to be congratulated on his choice of a conductor.

⁂

The program was well made. The tastes of all were consulted. If anyone was foolish enough to sniff at the overture to "William Tell," he was able to console himself with the thought of the extract from "Lohengrin" that preceded it. By the way, this same overture of Rossini, played with infinite spirit, was most vosiferously applauded, and the famous "galop" was repeated. For the overture wears well, oh victim of Wagneritis; and in its day it was a great a wonder as the Vorspiel to "Die Meistersinger" seems now to the more infuriated Wagnerite. Even the severe-minded Rheinberger loves this overture. And it is, indeed, an ironical circumstance that Schopenhauer, who influenced Wagner mightily, adored the music of Rossini.

But I digress; and yet is not digression in keeping with the informality of these concerts? Away, and keep your distance, ye pedagogues, fifth-hunters and serious minded who insist on parsing each musical sentence. In the smoke, while glasses clink, let there be no thought of the "Solemncholies" of music. It would be easy, for instance, to inquire what Mr. Schuecker was doing with his harp in the first performance of Mascagni's famous Intermezzo; but what would be the use? Mr. Schuecker is a most accomplished harper, and possibly he was trying some experiment that next season in a Symphony concert may excite gaping wonder. Besides the harp sounded normally in the repetition.

Waldteufel's waltz, with its haunting first theme, was redemanded, and there was applause galore throughout the evening.

And the band played an old familiar melody—known as "Loin du Bal." Were there cries "Take it away. We know it by heart?" On the contrary, applause was tumultuous; and the solo 'cellist, Mr. Schulz, looking more than ever like the young Beethoven, began again the well-worn strain.

So there was honest enjoyment, thanks to conductor and orchestra. There was no trying to like a thing, because somebody had previously said that it was great, or because it was stamped with the portentous seal of some eminent, deep-chested and long haired Leipziger Professor or Berlin Music Doctor. There was rhythm in plenty, and there were tunes that set feet in motion and eyes to sparkling.

So should promenade concerts be. And so they will surely be this season, thanks to Mr Ellis, Mr. de Novellis and the admirable orchestra.

PHILIP HALE.

THE POPS AGAIN.

Now that the Pops—or the Promenade concerts—are no longer a thing of anticipation, it is well to inquire into the possible benefit to be gained by constant attendance. This is a restless, nervous age, as some deep thinker has remarked, and even pleasure, real or alleged, must be submitted to test-tube and litmus-paper.

It must be admitted frankly that here in Boston the Pop was an acquired taste. Did not the Sun, which takes a keen and abiding interest in men and things in Boston, did not the censor and the ing[illegible] enjoyment? The Boston [illegible] said the Sun, "want music that is [illegible], gloomy and peculiar, above all, instructive, and the cheery, devil-may-care tunes that make the best minstrelsy of summer are an abomination to their eyes." Was it not the Sun that likened Boston applause [illegible] "the crackling of twigs on a frosty morning?" Four years ago were these deadly arrows shot from the twanging bow, and they still stick.

And yet the people of Boston, by hard, untiring labor, by toiling after it as some toil after virtue, have learned appreciation of a popular concert. They realize that music has other purposes than to agitate and control; it should, in proper season, "cheer up the countenance, expel austerity, bring in hilarity, mitigate anger," or, as Athenaeus well remarks, "produce a sort of gentlemanlike joy." Some of the more hardened wink the eye at the sound of even the name of Offenbach, and as for Strauss, they say to the visiting foreigner, "Oh, you know Strauss is a classic; Brahms thinks highly of him."

Or what is there now lacking in Music Hall to the heart's delight? There is an inclosure, not a pen, as certain disagreeable persons have insisted, for the purpose of preserving class distinctions, but for exhibiting, as in a microcosm, the true democratic feeling that exists in Boston; it exists quietly; it is just a little shy; but it exists. In this pen—if you will have it so, oh Thersites—Columbus Avenue and Marlboro Street are in elbow-jostling proximity. Entrance to it is obtained by purchase, not by an affidavit concerning the validity of a grandfather. Mr. Newbury, in his choicest Bostonese, asks Mr. Cove if he will be good enough to let him look at a program a minute, and Mr. Cove replies, "Why, cert';" and the feet of them tap time to the strains of the waltz.

Is it possible that some, stern-faced, [illegible] object to synchronous deglutition of food and music? Perish the thought! There should be food served at Symphony concerts. The system fortified by a boiled New England dinner would withstand the colossal works of Brahms. Nourished judiciously, a Saturday evening audience would no longer seem at departure an anaemic, etiolated race. So with light music, there are very properly "light refreshments;" and let them be light, without ironic twist or turn. "Truly, now," said Michael Mail, "there's a friendly tie of some sort between music and eating."

Michael is right. Were not the harp and the viol, the tabret and pipe in the feasts of the Hebrews? There was music at the banquet where Tamburlaine the Great drank Koumise, hydromel and wine. Did not Walpole flirt with Mrs. de Boufflers as they ate to the sound of horn and hautboy? But why appeal to history. There are thoughtful philosophers who would confine music to table use.

The benefits are not so much in future as in the unrestrained enjoyment of the present. Listen to the music and delight in rhythm and melody; learn that such pleasure is to be shared in common with citizens and citizenesses; you may never have been introduced, oh Mr. Cabotsworth, and yet they are happy without an intimate knowledge of your mental accomplishments and private views; but, for once, smile pleasantly on the crowd and without thought of incredible social complications. Eat and drink together decently and in moderation. That girl with fish-pool eyes is pretty, even if she is not a patroness of art. That old gentleman has an honest, kindly face, even if he is not a member of your club. One word of caution. When you eat, choose the occasion of a slow movement, as led by Mr. de Novellis. If you devour an ice during a waltz or a galop, sympathy will lead to haste and indigestion. Above all, dismiss thought of business. There is but one golden thought at a Popular concert; "I loafe and invite my soul."

[2]

INCOMPLETE

Boston Sunday Globe.
SUNDAY, MAY 12, 1895.
FORTY PAGES.

NATURAL AS EVER.

First Pop Concert of the Season a Success.

Democracy of Enthusiasm and of Smoke Pervaded the Scene.

Sig Novellis Became a Favorite at Once With the Audience.

"They're as thick as five in a bed," remarked a portly policeman, sagely, last night in Music hall as he looked through an open door upon the crowd that was packed, both sitting and standing, just about as solid as sardines in a box.

It was at the opening pop concert of the season, which has been an interesting subject for anticipation among all sorts and conditions of Bostonians for some time past, and which proved, if possible, a greater financial, as well as artistic, success than any of its predecessors.

The decorations and mechanical arrangements of the hall are substantially the same as in former years, the crowd in a large measure made up of regular habitues, and the most frequent comment heard on every hand at the first glance at the scene was, "How familiar it all appears."

About every element of the hub's population was there, from those in the front rank of the 400 brigade to those who are known to nobody but themselves.

Music, literature, painting, sculpture, medicine and the law were represented by shining lights who touched elbows with dry goods clerks, shop girls and apprentice boys anxious to appear to be in the social swim.

The blue wreaths of smoke from cigarettes and cigars of varying degrees of fragrance mingled in the true democratic spirit of the occasion, soaring to the roof in a hazy density that softened the glare of the electric lights like the sun seen through a London fog.

Those who got in before the concert began clung tenaciously to their seats to the end. Few went out and about the only thing that was able to keep up a circulation was the liquid refreshment of various hues and strength which somehow or other never seemed to encounter an obstacle of collective humanity too dense to be penetrated by the white-aproned waiters who wriggled and squirmed their way about with tireless persistency.

The one preeminently notable feature of the occasion was the enthusiasm, which began early, increased in intensity as the evening wore on, and terminated only with the program itself.

The enthusiasm was inspired by two things—the ideal excellence of the program, which was as fresh and sparkling throughout as a glass of champagne, and the magnetic qualities of the new conductor, Sig A. de Novellis, who made an admirable impression almost from the first moment when the musicians responded to the wave of his baton, and who was kept throughout the evening bowing and smiling in recognition of demonstrative applause, which followed every number upon the program.

Those who came expecting to bewail the absence of former conductors soon discovered that they had no cause whatever for regret, as the new leader is an artist from the polished crown of his head to the tips of his eloquent fingers.

He received a noble greeting, that plainly warmed his heart, the moment he stepped to his place at the center of the stage, and from that time on it seemed as if each successive number placed him higher and higher in the appreciative regard of the auditors, whose continual homage constituted a personal tribute of which any musician might be proud.

He showed himself to be possessed of a ceaseless supply of that rare magnetism and grace which sets the blood of a great audience to tingling in sympathetic unison, and makes every nerve to dance with the snap and dash of his own personality.

The work of the orchestra was very commendable, as a whole, and whether in the lighter numbers or the more stately "Lohengrin," the conductor's baton was promptly followed.

Sig Novellis arranged a capital program, in which three numbers were heard, for the first time here. These were waltzes by Waldteufel and Zeller and a gavotte by Sudessi, dainty little pieces, which evoked encores.

The best performance of the evening was the "William Tell" overture, which aroused about as much enthusiasm as the "Cavalleria" intermezzo. Part of the first and the whole of the latter were repeated.

In fact encores and extras doubled the length of the program, and every number was heartily applauded. The waltz and gavotte selections were given with that delightful dash and swing which add so much to the pleasure of patrons of this class of entertainment, and Sig Novellis appeared to enter into the spirit of these particular numbers so heartily that "an evening with Strauss" should prove specially attractive.

BOSTON POST.
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.
SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 12, 1895.

BIG "POP" NIGHT.

Crowds at Music Hall Welcome Leader Novellis.

The Music Hall promenade concerts opened last night with a "pop" that could be heard for miles.

There was a new leader on the platform, and a few new faces in the orchestra. A great wave of pretty humanity flooded the floor, welled up into the first gallery and overflowed to the second balcony. Every table had its full complement, every seat was occupied, and a mass of standing humanity filled every crevice between table and wall.

"Please let me through, gentlemen," pleaded the waiters in vain. It was a grand inauguration of the summer concert season. The "pop" has become a favored institution.

Society girls, students of music and students of Harvard, clubmen and savants, all have set their stamp of approval, sometimes well bred, sometimes noisy, upon the opening night of the "pop."

Now this is the scene you might have gazed upon if you had been unfortunate enough to have stood in an upper gallery of Music Hall at 10 o'clock last night.

The serried ranks of soberly-arrayed seats had given place to many tables. The light seats were arranged in irregular groups about the tables. Here were gathered daintily gowned women and cavaliers as gay as a Bostonian ever dared be. Pretty gowns of light fabrics made a flutter of many colors. It was too Bohemian a place for regulation evening gowns. In their place were many daring combinations, a little risque for a parlor, but "quite the thing" for a "pop."

At neighboring tables were women of "the swell set" and women quite as swell in a different world. They all lent a dash of beauty to the scene. To and fro waved a hundred fans of many hues, like colored waves, ebbing and flowing lazily.

By the sides of the pretty women were men in evening clothes, men in white duck suits, men in sweaters and golf suits. The crimson of Harvard flamed from a hundred broad-brimmed straw hats.

Side by side with the straw hats were the glossy silk tiles of club men, who gazed at "the boys" with serene contempt. There, too, were the thoughtful faces of musical enthusiasts. The tables were littered with bottles and glasses, from which long straws projected coaxingly.

Many of the men puffed at cigarettes and cigars, till a fragrant haze filled the lofty hall. High in the roof myriad lights shone mistily. Men bent over fair women. A hum of conversation filled the air. There was much low laughter and many coquettish glances.

A SCENE OF GAYETY.

The tables within the rail were besieged. The tables without the rail were conquered. All around men were crowded, standing four and five deep. White-aproned waiters with loaded trays pleaded and pushed through the throng. Part of the first balcony was surrendered to tables and gayety. Every seat was taken by men and women who looked on and listened.

Nor could you find empty seats in the balcony above. Seldom has the great statue looked down upon a hall crowded with such a happy medley. The corridors were thronged with promenaders. The whole hall sparkled like a mammoth tank of champagne. Rail and pillar were decorated with glossy green foliage, which shone dimly through the smoke.

There is a movement among the musicians huddled together on the broad platform. They pick up their instruments, poise them expectantly and gaze at a man who has taken his place on the dais before them with his back towards the hall. This leader is the beau ideal of a Chicago pork packer.

He is of portly build, with head set well down upon square shoulders. His hair has forgotten to keep on growing on top of his head and has turned iron gray behind. When he faces the audience he is bald-headed. When he turns his back on them, he has a head of iron gray hair. His square jaw is concealed beneath a short beard of the same color, cut a la Chicago.

He taps sharply on the rack before him. The chattering crowd becomes hushed. He waves his baton and exquisite melody floats out on the hazy air. All listen spellbound, entranced by the rare music. All too soon comes the finale. Wild, tumultuous is the applause, oft repeated, long continued. It is evident that Adamowski is forgotten, and in place of the former Adonis the Chicago-like Sig. A. de Novellis reigns mightily.

Last night was his field day.

He is a splendid conductor.

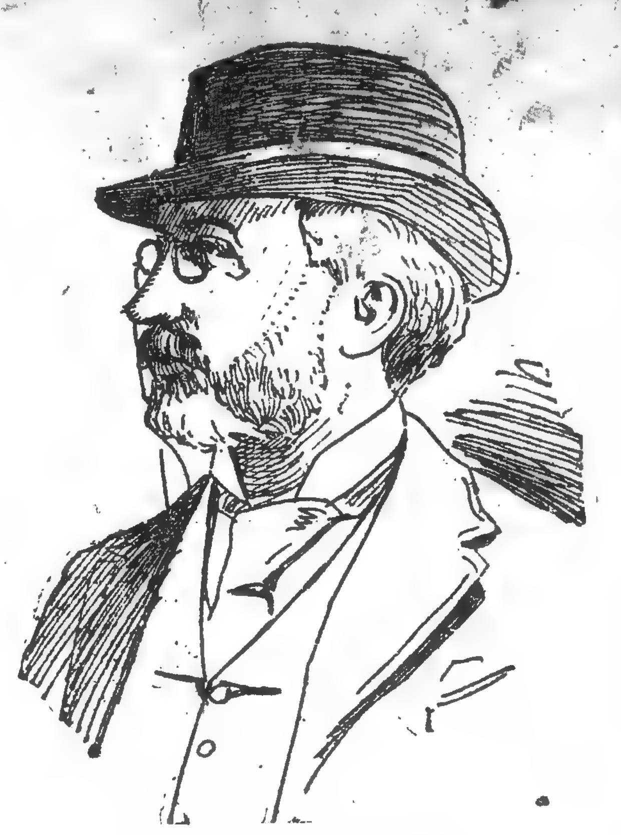
He bows again and again, fairly beaming with good-natured smiles. He points to his orchestra as if to waive the praise to them. But the applause continues with unremitted violence until Novellis mounts the leader's dais once more, and again waves his magic baton. Silence comes instantly. The scene changes from a social gathering to a breathless audience.

The encore ended, the applause is repeated, and the clink of glasses, the popping of corks, the chatter of voices, the [illegible] waving of fans, the coquettish [illegible] are resumed.

ABOUT THE NEW LEADER.

Signor A. de Novellis, who takes the baton from the hands of the ever-popular "Tim" Adamowski, is known all over the country as the musical director for Francis Wilson in all the latter's light opera successes. For six years previously he was associated with John McCaull in the production of the "Black Hussar" and other works.

He came to America from Naples in 1876, his first appearance being under Max Strakosch at the Philadelphia Centennial.



SIG A. de NOVELLIS,
New leader of the Pop Concert Orchestra.

Under Strakosch he directed performances of Italian and English opera by companies including some of the famous stars.

Mr. de Koven also selected him to direct his latest and most ambitious opera, "Rob Roy," on account of his success in bringing out "The Fencing Master" and "The Algerians."

BOSTON HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCVII., NO. 133.
MONDAY, MAY 13, 1895.

AROUND AND ABOUT ATHENS.

Straw Symphony and Summer Girl at the "Pops."

Flirting to the Accompaniment of Inspiring Music—The Prematurely Summer Man—Sig. de Novellis, the Stately New Leader—Bit of M. Clinesque Humor—Mme. Rejane.

The current agitation concerning a more beautiful Boston, while likely to lead to many interesting suggestions from various individual points of view, recalls to the outsider the classic fable of the nymph who invited disaster by longing to be even lovelier than she was. To persons accustomed to the bricks and mortar of New York, so slightly relieved by parks and foilage, Boston, in the May day of the year, is as delighted as Paris, with its Champs Elysees and Parc Monceau, or London with its innumerable squares.

There is likely to come a time, once its transition period is at an end, when the metropolis, with its residential quarter surrounding Central Park, may be as pleasant a place in early summer as London, Paris or Boston, but up to now, thanks to its unsettled character and the successive changes of the gradual uptown movement, New York is the least agreeable city of the four.

The growth of Boston, so admirably planned and directed, leads one to believe that New York will eventually be, compared to Boston, what Paris is to London—a pleasure ground, but not an abiding place; a city of hotels and lodgings, not a city of homes.

Already our New Yorkers of wealth and leisure are making their headquarters in Newport, Lenox, along the Hudson and in New Jersey, regarding their town house as simply a pied-a-terre. Too much cosmopolitanism has made New York brilliant, perhaps, but certainly not endearing.

On the other hand, Boston appeals to the Anglo-Saxon spirit within us as completely as does London or the English country. That it is already beautiful, and even decorative, who would deny! The instinct and taste that prompts the flower beds and floral window boxes in the houses of the town, the planting and encouragement of the purple wisteria and the creeping ivy, have indeed been duplicated here and there in Madison avenue; but the same element of picturesqueness that makes Beacon street and the great, breezy Common akin to Piccadilly and the Green Park, is absent from the New York thoroughfare.

[3]

What makes the [illegible] charming is the fact that the substantial and the decorative are combined to perfection; and when the Public Gardens unfold their almost sylvan beauties, and Commonwealth avenue stretches along like an American edition of the Elysian Fields, it is scarcely a compliment (and certainly not flattery) for a visitor to say that Boston, with its central squares and superior statues, its verdure and its flowers, its ornamental waters and its noble trees, would seem quite beautiful enough already.

There seizes upon humanity, in all great cities at this period of the year, when premature heat plays the deuce with the normal conditions, a longing to listen to sweet music and inspect our fellow-creatures while seated at small tables and indulging in something that has to be uncorked—a liquid symphony absorbed through a straw.

They do it in London, at the Covent Garden promenade concerts. Once the opera season is at an end, they have made it a national institution in France, where the cafe chautaut, with the price of admission calling for one drink, is duplicated ad libitum throughout the Champs Elysees, and, thanks to New York's dearth of parks and squares and open spaces generally, our metropolitan purveyors have, as usual, gone custom "one better" and invented the electric-lighted roof garden, until, on a summer's night, the inhabitants of Mars or Venus must take Manhattan island for a new planet.

The expiring hot wave has brought about a similar state of affairs in Boston, where the summer girl (and the summer man) sprang forth, full armed, at the premier of the "Pops."

The spectacle of such butterfly toilletts against the dim and dusky background of the vast interior of Music Hall reminded one of the beds of tulips in the Public Garden—so brilliant the hues that contrasted with the earthen brown and the evergreens.

The straw symphony that gurgled and flowed in one steady stream throughout the evening, accompanied by a cloud of azure tobacco smoke, did not prevent enthusiastic appreciation of the music—how enthusiastic may be inferred from the fact that the spirited rendering of even the dear old overture to "William Tell" was unroariously encored.

The stately and mature Italian who has succeeded "Little Tim"—Sig. de Novellis—indeed, held his musicians well in hand. And yet, from the purely social and decorative standpoint, who shall not say that the blond and pensive and slender Timothee Adamowski was missed? Adamowski, in his serene and smiling way, led the orchestra as though he were leading a cotillon. The energetic de Novellis takes firm hold of his baton and conducts the corps as though it were a battalion. Adamowski was persuasive; De Novellis is executive.

The summer girl, in the glory of blouses in which the colors of the rainbow were suggested singly, and in hats in which the flowers of the conservatory, the garden and the field were alike conspicuous, performed unheard of feats in coupling two straws so as to act as a continuous conductor, and in flirting with four men at one and the same time. She was in her element, and represnted every "set" in Boston, from "smart" to hopelessly suburban; and yet she was well nigh so invariably charming when thus presented in a body as to deprive the stranger of the final remnant of the absurd tradition that the Maid of (modern) Athens wears spectacles and prattles "theories."

The prematurely summer men, who appeared in white duck trousers and beribboned straw hats, in defiance of the rumor that the extreme heat in Nebraska had been followed by a snow storm, were conspicuous, even in a crowd where the utmost latitude in respect to costume was allowed. White ducks in a cool wave are apt to flutter.

INCOMPLETE

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.
Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.
MONDAY MORNING, MAY 13, 1895.

MUSICAL MATTERS.

The Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

The symphonic Muse has again begun her annual flirtation with Gambrinus and the clash of the cymbals and the clink of the glasses once more intermingle at Music Hall. The much-longed-for "promenade" concerts began Saturday night; but, although a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, and beer by any other name would taste as bitter, the "promenades" will always be better known and cherished as the the "Pops." The intermingling of attractions is not an unpleasant one, "Tannhaeuser" suggests Anhaeuser, Strauss suggests straws, and the latter not only show the direction of the wind but of the sherry cobbler, at times.

This is the season of the year when the Harvard student begins to attend to his musican culture, and begins to see, as through a glass darkly, that the intoxicating strains of Wagner, Mascagni, Gounod, and Chadwick can be mixed without a musical "Katzenjammer" resulting. The scheme of Manager Ellis grows in popular favor from season to season, and nowhere in America can one find a concert of this class where such excellent selections are given, where such admirable execution is attained, and where such social notabilities habitually attend. As usual, the programme presented a wide scope, ranging from a Wagner prelude to tripping waltzes, but it was distinctly evident that Sig, de Novellis intends to avoid the very lightest school of composition while keeping the concerts brilliant, spicy and attractive. Thus, for example, while the old custom of grouping the best numbers in the centre of the programme was followed (Wagner's "Lohengrin Prelude," Rossini's "Wm. Tell" overture, Bizet's second Arlesian suite, and Mascagni's Intermezzo came here) the first and last groups of the concert were by no means given over wholly to dances, as the march from "The Queen of Sheba" and the "Massaniello" overture in the first part, and Suppe's "Light Cavalry" overture in the last part, plainly showed.

The programme was chosen with commendable tact, nothing too heavy or obtruse appearing, yet nothing too light or trashy, and nothing that would be altogether too delicate to make effect amid the necessary bustle of such an occasion (although one might except Gillet's "Loin du Bal," from the fitness); few conductors could have steered between two Scyllas and a Charybdis so well.

Bizet's Second Suite Arlesienne may be spoken of as belonging to the higher numbers of the well-selected programme; for, although it is not comparable with the first Suite, which was culled from the music which Bizet attached to Alphonse Daudet's beautiful play, it is nevertheless intrinsically excellent—an aftermath that is not unworthy of the man who might have become the greatest modern French composer, had he lived a little longer.

Since the tendency of the programmes is toward this better school, one may hope for a number or two from St Saens' "Suite Algerienne" and Massenet's "Dimanche au Village"; and why do not Beethoven's "Battle of Vittoria," as a curiosity, at these concerts.

Not only was the programme most discreetly chosen, but it was excellently played. Sig. de Novellis held his men well in hand and wisely refrained from over-shading; what would have been a merit in a symphony performance, might easily become a blemish in a "pop" concert.

But everything was heartily enjoyed, encores were frequent, and the usual overwhelming audience was present. It is very probable that the concerts this season will be better than ever before, for the following reasons: The Symphony Orchestra has been at a higher technical standard than for years past, and the performers are taken from that organization, the public taste has advanced so that the very simplest of eartickling music is no longer desired, and the conductor has shown himself a man of good sense and sound judgment in the style of the works chosen for this first concert. Wherefore the summer stay at home will have his perspiration tempered with enjoyable concerts, and can realize the application of the lines.—

"For the tired slave Song lifts the languid oar
And bids it aptly fall with chime
That beautifies the fairest shore,
That mitigates the harshest clime."

Louis C. Elson.

Boston Sunday Globe.
SUNDAY, MAY 19, 1895.

Summer Promenades.

The first week of the regular season of "pop concerts" ended with the performance at Music hall last night before a very large audience. The attendance during the past week has been all that the management could desire, and many were turned away every night, unable to secure seats at the reserved tables.

Sig Novellis is very highly praised for the able way in which he leads the orchestra. During the week he introduced no less than 12 novelties in his program, and he promises as many more for the coming week. The program tomorrow evening will be as follows:

March, Jonathan	Millocker
Overture, Fra Diavolo	Auber
Waltz, Les Patineurs	Waldteufel
Selection, Les Brigands	Offenbach
Overture, Die Meistersinger	Wagner
Pizzicati	Gillet
Cavatina	Raff
Bal Costume	Rubinstein
Selection, Boccaccio	Suppe
Waltz, Grubenlichter	Zeller
Polka, Unparteische Kritik	Strauss
March, Fort William Henry	Knecht

Boston Transcript
MONDAY, MAY 13, 1895.

Music Hall: The Promenade Concerts.

The first "Pop" went off with flying colors last Saturday evening, the programme being as follows:

March from "La Reine de Saba"	Gounod
Overture to "La Muette de Portici"	Auber
Waltz, "Amour et Printemps" (First time.)	Waldteufel
Selections from "Falka"	Chassaigne
Prelude to Act III. of "Lohengrin"	Wagner
Overture to "Guillaume Tell"	Rossini
Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
Suite, "L'Arlésienne," No. 2	Bizet
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppé
Waltz, "Grubenlichter" (First time.)	Zeller
Gavotte, "La Coquette" (First time.)	Sudessi
March from "Tabasco"	Chadwick

As far as can be judged by a single experience, Mr. de Novellis, the new conductor of the "Pops," seems to be just the man for the position. To be sure, with such an orchestra—most of whose members are also members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—only two things can interfere with good playing; either apathy and laziness on the part of the players themselves, or else the unskilful meddling of an incompetent conductor. With good will, the orchestra would play well, if left to itself. But there is that in a good conductor which can keep the men well up to the mark, and even push them beyond it at times; and Mr. de Novellis seems to possess this faculty in a conspicuous degree. He conducts not only well but brilliantly, and gets a great deal of effectiveness out of his band. Now and then, as in the prelude to the third act of "Lohengrin," he inclines to push things to rather band-master speed; but this is, upon the whole, not out of harmony with the promenade concert spirit. The overtures to "La Muette" and "Tell" were given with especial brilliancy, and the waltzes went with swing and snap.

The programme was an admirable one of its sort, perhaps even a little too good to last; Mr. de Novellis will find some difficulty, before the season is over, in keeping his programmes up to so high a level. For one thing, however, when concerts are given every evening, every bill need not be wholly new, but pieces can be repeated almost ad libitum. So this opening programme may, after all, be a fairer sample of what is to come than its excellence would at first suggest.

The audience was large and enthusiastic, the tables, whether reserved or free-for-all, being well filled, and a goodly array of listeners occupying the galleries. Encores were frequent and by no means reluctantly given. The decoration of the hall was tasteful as usual. In short, the "Pops" have begun under very favorable auspices this year. Long life to them!

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.
SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 19, 1895.

PANIC AT "POP."

Director De Novellis's Act Averted Possible Death.

PART OF PLASTERING FELL.

Musicians and Audience Started in Alarm for Doors.

LIVELY MUSIC STOPPED THEM.

Quick-witted Director De Novellis, by a heroic exhibition of presence of mind last evening, saved Music Hall from being the scene of a panic that threatened many lives.

Rising supreme above the terrifying influences of the occasion, checking the mad desire which he shared with hundreds of panic-stricken men and women to trample one upon another, he cleverly called his musicians to his aid, and in a moment stilled the tumult with the balm of music, and arrested a stampede that, had it achieved its full force, might have spent itself in the blood and broken bodies of its unfortunate victims.

It was a sublime example of the power of mind over human weakness in a frightful emergency, and gratefully did the great audience, once recalled to its senses, recognize the splendid spirit of De Novellis and his courageous musicians. Cheers and handclapping announced to the ready-minded leader that his remarkable act was appreciated for all its worth, and not a person in the hall appeared to grudge him recognition of the gift which most of them had proved they did not possess.

That charm of the summer night, a pop concert, famed for its delicious revelry, its easy, unfettered enjoyment, enticing hundreds who love to sip cool beverages, float on the waves of fine music and lose themselves i dreams and happy conversation, was in full sway. [illegible] pageant [illegible] ladies and [illegible] gentlemen, arm in arm strolling, [illegible] and enjoying, while every table where those who wish may spend the time in seated pleasure was occupied.

Director De Novellis, in the centre of his orchestra, waved his baton and swayed the throng at will, easy, graceful, masterful, apparently unprepared to display the spirit which a few moments later lifted him to the pinnacle of heroism.

A sweet air was playing, its soft strains floating up and down, bearing its hearers in spirit whither it willed.

The audience was on the full tide of happiness when a crash arrested every other sound and sent a paralyzing chill momentarily to every heart.

There was a great loosening sound in the ceiling, and with a swift downward rush a large piece of plastering flashed to the floor like a comet with a tail of dust.

It landed with a crash on one of the tables. The frail bit of furniture toppled and fell, glasses dropped to the floor splintered and in bits or crunched to powder by the crazy feet that had already answered the electric influence of the sudden brawling sound.

With one impulse the musicians had dropped their instruments in terror. The crowd on the floor heard the startling roar of the falling plaster and had been bereft of its senses.

In an instant the entrancing sound of music had been usurped by an awful uproar, shrieks from women, hoarse exclamations of men.

Few realized what had happened, but personal safety was the predominant thought of all.

There was a race for the doors, and women and men were borne helplessly along.

There had been a few police officers near the exits, and they, far removed from the scene of alarm, had not lost their wits, but their united strength was no more than straws before the whirlwind, and they were swept off their feet.

Men lending their arms to their lady partners, yet never ceasing to press hard against those in front of them, saved many an endangered one from being thrown down and trampled upon. Still the hoarse tumult kept on.

Right here the hero of the night threw himself into the breach. Astonished to see his orchestra suddenly abandon him and run in full flight, he turned and from his elevated post looked down upon the storm-tossed arena.

Rushing about the stage he ordered his men back to their places, employing remonstrance, persuasion, denunciation to call them to their senses.

In a few moments more he had them seated, then instruments were again in their hands, and with an encouraging nod he lifted his stick and away they went in a quick, lively, inspiring, heart-strengthening air—drums beating, horns tooting and fiddles scraping away like mad.

It was all over then in a second. The crowd stood still, turned, saw the orchestra unconcernedly playing on the stage, looked at one another, and then gasping but smiling changed the pace and slowly returned to the hall.

The happy air was continued to the end, and then with one accord every hand and voice in the throng paid tribute to the brave and quick-witted De Novellis whose presence of mind had won the day.

[illegible] 189[illegible]
[illegible] 19, 1895.

ORCHESTRA KEPT ON PLAYING.

Patrons of the "Pop" Concert Participate in a Lively Scramble.

There was a bit of excitement in Music Hall last evening just before the last few numbers of the programme were reached.

Sig. de Novellis was attentively engaged in directing his musicians, when a noise from overhead attracted the notice of many of the attentive listeners. The occupants of gallery seats were the first to observe any disturbance, but it was not long before those seated on the floor became cognizant that something not on the programme had taken place.

Just at this point some thoughtless person cried "Fire!" and there was a general scramble.

Ladies seated in the reserved inclosure did not stop to make an exit through the spaces intended to serve such a purpose, but put into use the experience received in the gymnasium, and vaulted the railing, their one purpose being the nearest way to the street.

Men tumbled over each other, and became mixed up with broken glasses and shattered chairs.

But the orchestra kept on playing, the conductor apparently realizing that his duty for the moment lay in allaying the excitement. This course soon brought the patrons to their senses, and those who had left their chairs returned to finish the contents of their glasses—unless they had been overturned—and enjoy the remaining numbers of the programme.

The cause of all this excitement was the falling of some of the decorations recently used in trimming the hall for the occasion of the banquet given in honor of Archbishop Williams' anniversary.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

During the past week the attendance and enthusiasm manifested by the patrons of these concerts, show in what high favor they are held by the music-loving public. The orchestra under the leadership of Sig. A. de Novellis never played better. The programmes have had an unusual attractiveness and included no less than 12 novelties heard here for the first time. For the coming week, Sig. Novellis, promises as many more together with the most popular selections of past seasons. The programme for tomorrow night is as follows:

March, "Jonathan"	Millocker
Overture, "Fra Diavolo"	Auber
Waltz, "Les Patineurs"	Waldteufel
Selection, "Les Brigands"	Offenbach
Overture, "Die Meistersinger"	Wagner
Pizzicati	Gillet
Cavatina	Raff
Bal costume	Rubinstein
Selection, "Boccaccio"	Suppe
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Polka, "Unparteische Kritik"	Strauss
March, "Fort William Henry"	Knecht

The opening night of the "Pops," which, coming Saturday evening of last week, was too late for us to record in full, was such an emphatic success that we are glad to make mention of it now, even if it is a trifle late. The expiring hot wave seemed to have the effect of increasing rather than of diminishing the attendance, and looking down from the balconies not a vacant table was to be seen, nor after 9 o'clock was there a seat anywhere. It was a charming sight, the spring gowns and hats in all their variegated coloring generously sprinkled about the floor, vieing with the huge clusters of fresh flowers on each side of the platform and the effective decorations in red and green. The new conductor, or, as a New York society contemporary inadvertently prints it, "the non-conductor," received a welcome which must have made him feel at home with his auditors at once, and all through the evening there was enthusiasm galore. Society was well represented, as it has been every evening since. On that first night Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery Sears were at the table which will be set aside for them for the month, and Mr. Loeffler was with them. Mrs. Sears was very pretty in a thin black gown with bands of white insertion, and a large black hat with white lace. At a table near by were Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson and Mrs. Frank Higginson, with friends. Mrs. Higginson and her sister were both in black of thin fabric, and small black bonets with red and pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Sears had a smart party at their table including Miss Gertrude Rice, who was looking unusually well in a pale green gown with white satin choker and belt, and black hat with pink roses and green foliage. Mrs. Sears wore light gray crepon with pink in her hat.

Another table which was noted for its pretty women and good looking men was Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond's, who had with them Miss Shattuck and Miss Anna Palfrey, among others. The last two were perhaps the most smartly gowned in the hall. Mrs. James Blake with Miss Minna Train, Mr. Harry Blake, Mr. Frank Jackson and Mr. Frank Sturgis made a party at another table, and Mr. T. D. Barroll was with one of the largest parties of young people, at a table next that of the R. D. Sears. Harvard students were there in [illegible] numbers [illegible]

[illegible]

SUNDAY, MAY 19, 1895.

SIG. NOVELIS WAS COOL.

A Broken Ventilator Fan and Falling Plaster Scare the "Pop" Concert-Goers—There Is a Small Sized Panic, but the Conductor Sticks to His Post and Presently the Runaways Come Back.

There was a small-sized panic at the "Pop" concert in Music Hall last night, but no one was hurt. Sig. A. de Novelis, the conductor, was the hero of the evening, and by his coolness prevented what might have been a serious matter.

The second intermission was over, and the orchestra was rippling through the harmonious cadences of the "Prince Pro Tem," when suddenly from above there came the sound of a mighty rumbling. Folks thought that a thunderstorm had cut loose. Then the walls of the building began to quake, and a papier-mache rosette, a part of the decorations of the ceiling, fell to the floor amid a little cloud of plaster. The thunderous noise went on.

Forthwith, the jackass-idot, who may be depended on to turn up in such a contingency, yelled "fire!" at the top of his lungs, and some of the timid people on the floor hurried to the door. In a moment a mob of concert-goers, waiters, and even some of the orchestra players, struggled at the exits. Two or three ladies fainted, and the rest of the audience stood up, undecided whether to join the rout or remain.

Sig. Novelis never turned his head nor missed a beat. With those of his musicians who stuck to their posts at his back, he played steadily on. In a few minutes, the alarming noise having ceased, lured by the joyous notes of "Tommy Tompkins, I love you," the runaways came shamefacedly back.

When the number was concluded his auditors showed their appreciation of his sangfroid by giving Sig. Novelis a hand of applause more hearty and universal than even his very good playing received.

Supt. Ellis told a Journal reporter, after it was all over, that one of the fans in the big electric ventilator had worked loose and thumped the sides of the wooden shaft which contained it, and that this had caused the terrifying noise. It was soon remedied, and no damage was done.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The Music Hall Promenade Concerts are again proving a great popular success, and are attracting very large audiences. They are conducted on the same plan that found so much favor in past seasons, and they afford a delightful evening's entertainment. From a musical standpoint they promise to be superior to any series yet given. The orchestra is composed of superb material, and is directed in a masterly manner by Mr. de Novellis, who has proved himself a most welcome acquisition. His fine musicianly qualities, thorough knowledge of his public, excellent taste in arranging programs and careful preparation produce performances which may be accepted as models for popular concerts. The program for Monday evening will include pieces by Millöcker, Auber, Waldteufel, Offenbach, Wagner, Gillet, Raff, Rubinstein, Suppé, Zeller, Strauss, Knecht.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, MAY 26, 1895.

POP CONCERTS.

Music Next Friday Night.

It is very difficult to get a table at the Pops unless one engages it in advance. These concerts seem more popular than ever and the new conductor which Mr. Ellis has secured seems to have met with instant favor. There will be many regrets that owing to long-standing engagements of Music hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 27, 28, 29, and 30. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 31.

The programme for Friday, May 31, will be:

March, "Coronation"	Mayerbeer
Overture, "Stradella"	Flotow
Waltz, "Vienna Blood"	Strauss
Selection, "Princesse de Trebizonde"	Offenbach
Finale, Act I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Serenata, "Mandolin"	Eilenberg
Waltz, "Espana"	Waldteufel
Overture, "Raymond"	Thomas
Waltz, "Les Lagunes"	Strauss
Polka, "La Tzigane"	Gauné
March, "Budapest"	Kral

The Boston Commercial.

SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1895.

The "Pops" at Music Hall.

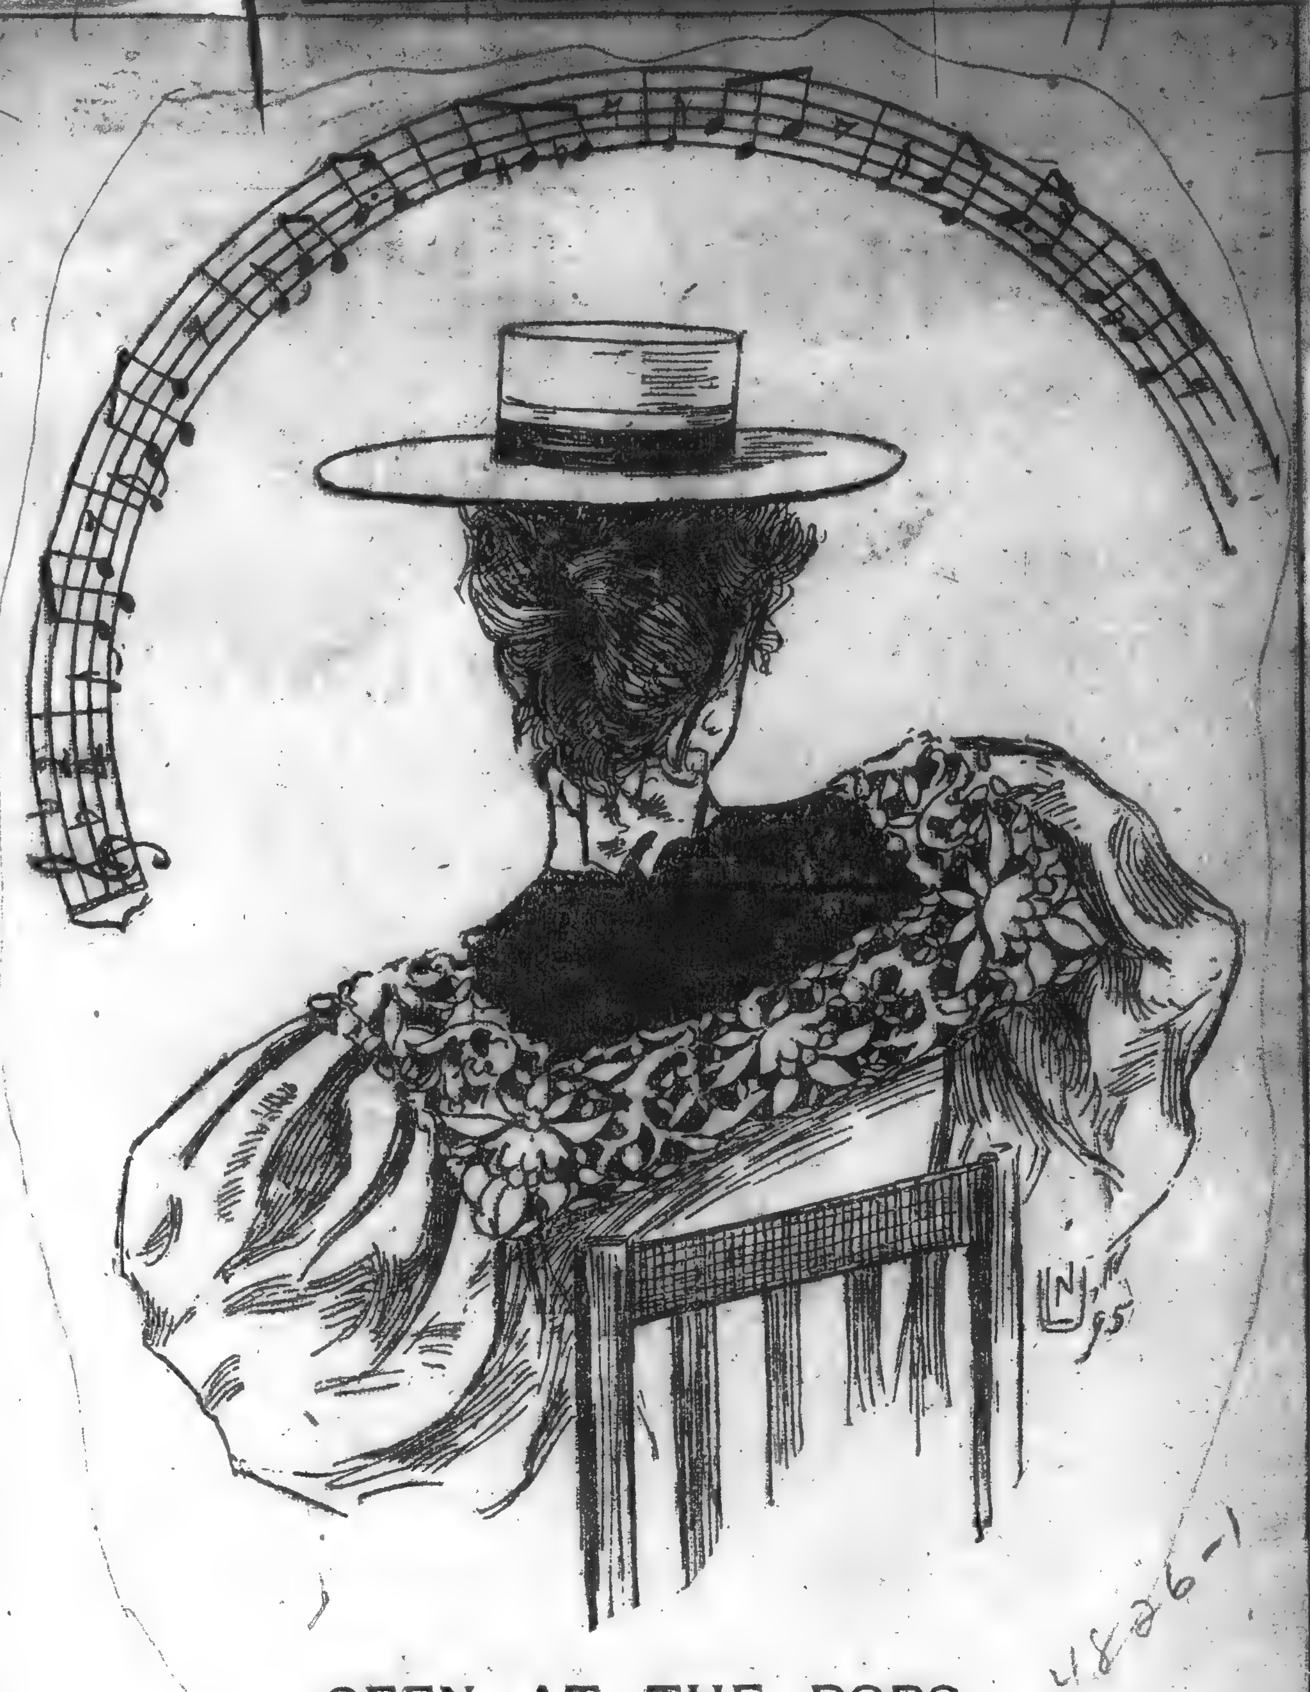
The season of promenade concerts at Music Hall has already become a notable one, inasmuch as the spacious hall is not only filled every evening, including seats at all the tables, but novelties are constantly being produced by the well trained orchestra, its accomplished leader, Sig. de Novellis, being a true artist, and having a thorough understanding of the tastes of his patrons. The audiences are made up of the elite of the city, the bright summer costumes of the ladies adding considerable brilliancy to the scene. Those who have neglected visiting these popular entertainments should improve the first opportunity for going, as the season is by far all too short, and one visit always makes one want to repeat it.

[illegible]

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.

VOL. XCVII., NO. 174.

SUNDAY, JUNE 23, 1895.



SEEN AT THE POPS.

4826-1

Pretty girls and pretty gowns are in great evidence at the "Pop" concerts. It is, in fact, a good place to study the novelties of fashion.

At one of the concerts the past week a girl wore this very striking waist, of which the back view is given. The chief feature was the dark yoke, which in the front simulated a sailor collar, and came to a point at the neck.

Although the scheme of color in this particular waist was black and white, any delicate color may be used, with a dark contrasting shade of either velvet or silk. The waist itself was a braided blouse, drooping in front over the belt, but quite straight at the back. This was of the light color. The yoke was overlaid, just above the point where it joined the blouse, with very rich, heavy applique lace in a genuine antique pattern.

The effect was very striking, so much so that it was chosen out of hundreds of costumes as presenting the most original features. The band on the sailor hat showed the two colors used in the costume.

SUMMER MUSIC.

Only Two Weeks More of the Promenade Concerts.

"The Bohemian Girl" Again at the Castle Square Tomorrow Night—"The Sphinx" to Remain but a Short Time Longer—Musical Gossip at Home and Abroad.

THE PROMENADES.

The summer season of the popular promenade concerts at Music Hall is fast drawing to an end. There remain but two weeks more, as the closing night is announced for Saturday, July 6. During the week just ended Mr. Novellis, in the makeup of his programmes, has maintained the high standard of popular music which has characterized this season's concerts from the opening night. On Friday evening last the orchestra played the introduction to Mascagni's new opera "Ratcliffe" for the first time in America. Composers' night will be introduced frequently during the remaining evenings. The first of these will be tomorrow, when the music will be by Vienna composers. On Wednesday French composers will be represented. The programme for tomorrow evening is:

Persian march	Strauss
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppe
Waltz, "Kaiser"	Strauss
Selection, "Fatinitza"	Suppe
Overture, "Banditenstreiche"	Suppe
a. Fly minuet	Czibulka
b. "A Toi"	Czibulka
Florentine serenade	Godard
Selection, "Merry War"	Strauss
Overture, "Poet and Peasant"	Suppe
Waltz, "Pesther"	Lanner
Polka, "Les Fleurs"	Ziehrer
March, "Jonathan"	Millocker

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 19, 1895.

SIG. NOVELIS WAS COOL.

A Broken Ventilator Fan and Falling Plaster Scare the "Pop" Concert-Goers—There Is a Small Sized Panic, but the Conductor Sticks to His Post and Presently the Runaways Come Back.

There was a small-sized panic at the "Pop" concert in Music Hall last night, but no one was hurt. Sig. A. de Novelis, the conductor, was the hero of the evening, and by his coolness prevented what might have been a serious matter.

The second intermission was over, and the orchestra was rippling through the harmonious cadences of the "Prince Pro Tem," when suddenly from above there came the sound of a mighty rumbling. Folks thought that a thunderstorm had cut loose. Then the walls of the building began to quake, and a papier-mache rosette, a part of the decorations of the ceiling, fell to the floor amid a little cloud of plaster. The thunderous noise went on.

Forthwith, the jackass-idot, who may be depended on to turn up in such a contingency, yelled "fire!" at the top of his lungs, and some of the timid people on the floor hurried to the door. In a moment a mob of concert-goers, waiters, and even some of the orchestra players, struggled at the exits. Two or three ladies fainted, and the rest of the audience stood up, undecided whether to join the rout or remain.

Sig. Novelis never turned his head nor missed a beat. With those of his musicians who stuck to their posts at his back, he played steadily on. In a few minutes, the alarming noise having ceased, lured by the joyous notes of "Tommy Tompkins, I love you," the runaways came shamefacedly back.

When the number was concluded his auditors showed their appreciation of his sangfroid by giving Sig. Novelis a hand of applause more hearty and universal than even his very good playing received.

Supt. Ellis told a Journal reporter, after it was all over, that one of the fans in the big electric ventilator had worked loose and thumped the sides of the wooden shaft which contained it, and that this had caused the terrifying noise. It was soon remedied, and no damage was done.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The Music Hall Promenade Concerts are again proving a great popular success, and are attracting very large audiences. They are conducted on the same plan that found so much favor in past seasons, and they afford a delightful evening's entertainment. From a musical standpoint they promise to be superior to any series yet given. The orchestra is composed of superb material, and is directed in a masterly manner by Mr. de Novellis, who has proved himself a most welcome acquisition. His fine musicianly qualities, thorough knowledge of his public, excellent taste in arranging programs and careful preparation produce performances which may be accepted as models for popular concerts. The program for Monday evening will include pieces by Millöcker, Auber, Waldteufel, Offenbach, Wagner, Gillet, Raff, Rubinstein, Suppé, Zeller, Strauss, Knecht.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, MAY 26, 1895.

POP CONCERTS.

Music Next Friday Night.

It is very difficult to get a table at the Pops unless one engages it in advance. These concerts seem more popular than ever and the new conductor which Mr. Ellis has secured seems to have met with instant favor. There will be many regrets that owing to long-standing engagements of Music hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 27, 28, 29, and 30. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 31.

The programme for Friday, May 31, will be:

March, "Coronation"	Mayerbeer
Overture, "Stradella"	Flotow
Waltz, "Vienna Blood"	Strauss
Selection, "Princesse de Trebizonde"	Offenbach
Finale, Act I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Serenata, "Mandolin"	Eilenberg
Waltz, "Espana"	Waldteufel
Overture, "Raymond"	Thomas
Waltz, "Les Lagunes"	Strauss
Polka, "La Tzigane"	Ganné
March, "Budapest"	Kral

The Boston Commercial.

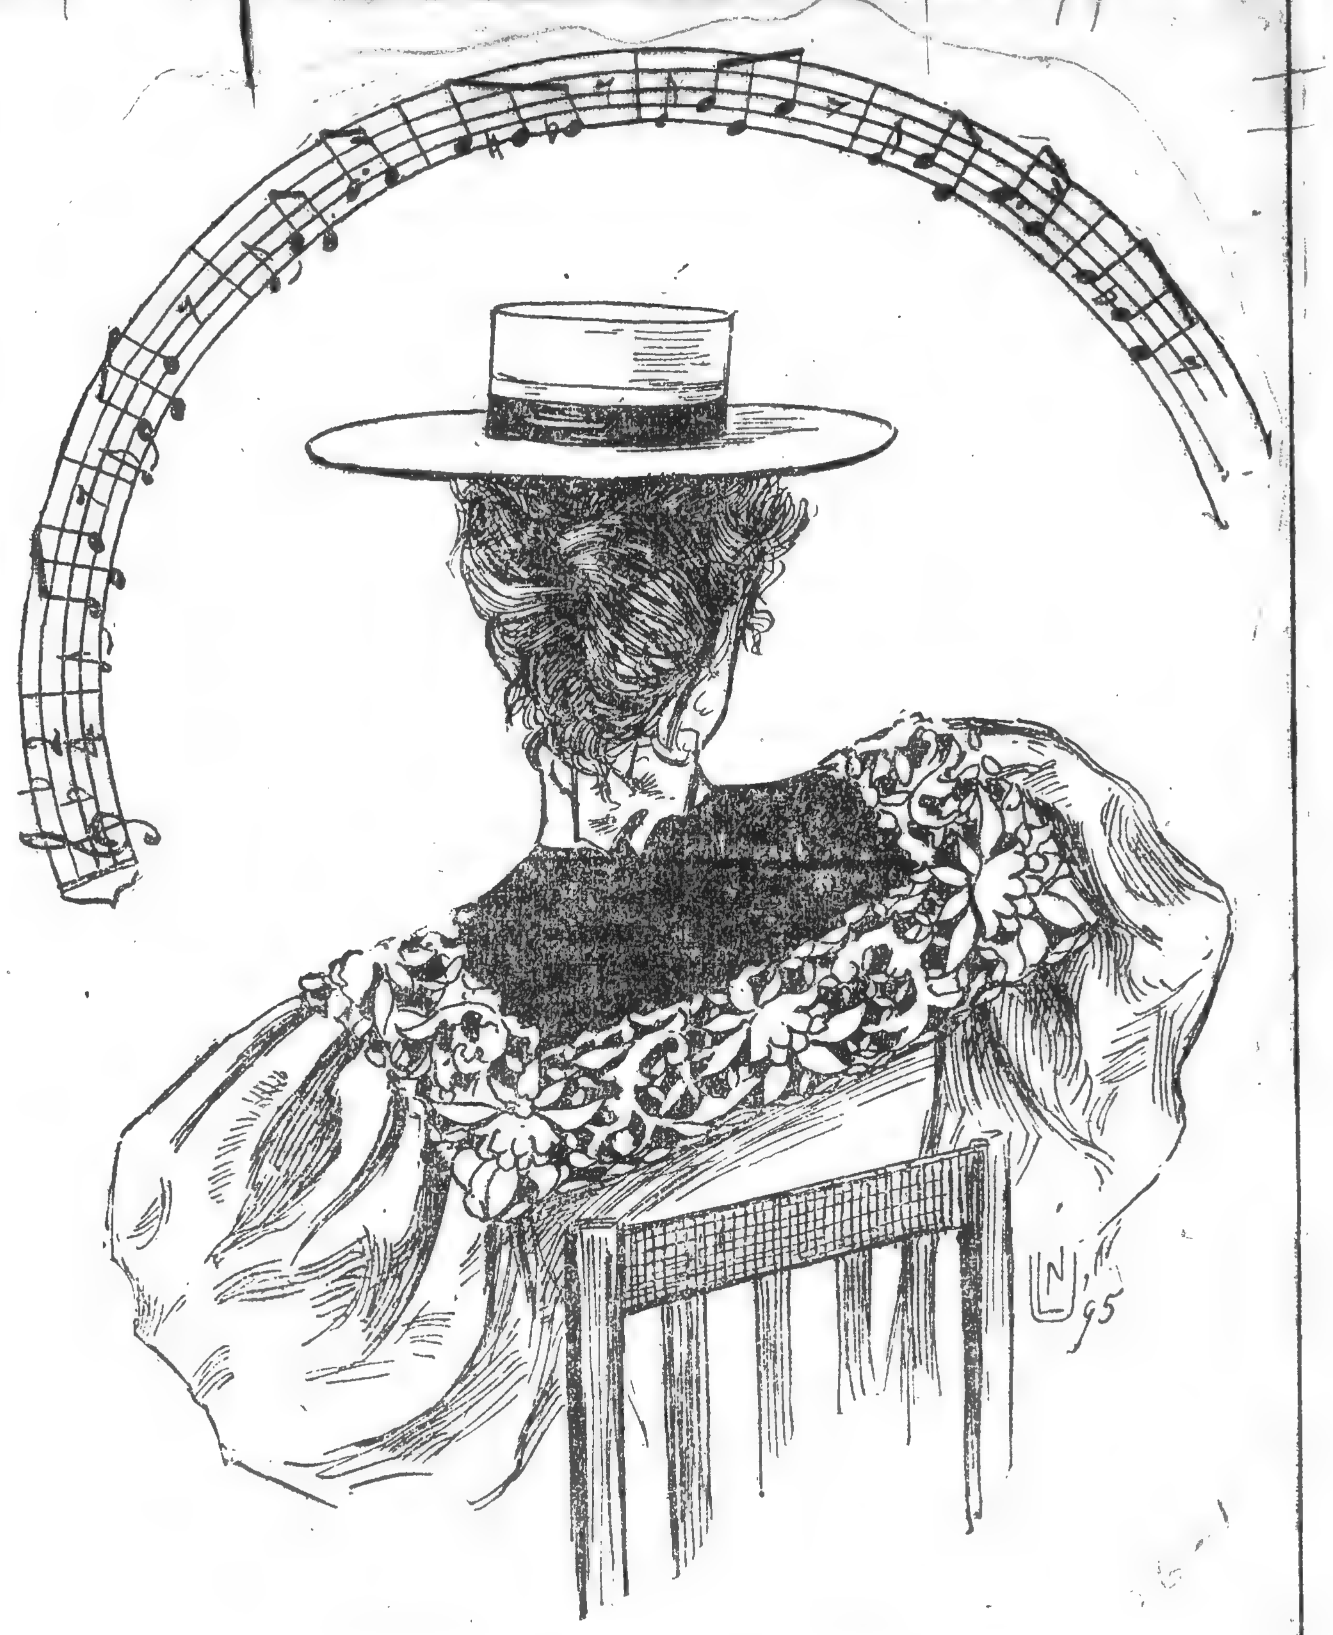
SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1895.

The "Pops" at Music Hall.

The season of promenade concerts at Music Hall has already become a notable one, inasmuch as the spacious hall is not only filled every evening, including seats at all the tables, but novelties are constantly being produced by the well trained orchestra, its accomplished leader, Sig. de Novellis, being a true artist, and having a thorough understanding of the tastes of his patrons. The audiences are made up of the elite of the city, the bright summer costumes of the ladies adding considerable brilliancy to the scene. Those who have neglected visiting these popular entertainments should improve the first opportunity for going, as the season is by far all too short, and one visit always makes one want to repeat it.

SUNDAY HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCVII., NO. 174.

SUNDAY, JUNE 23, 1895.



SEEN AT THE POPS.

Pretty girls and pretty gowns are in great evidence at the "Pop" concerts. It is, in fact, a good place to study the novelties of fashion.

At one of the concerts the past week a girl wore this very striking waist, of which the back view is given. The chief feature was the dark yoke, which in the front simulated a sailor collar, and came to a point at the neck.

Although the scheme of color in this particular waist was black and white, any delicate color may be used, with a dark contrasting shade of either velvet or silk. The waist itself was a braided blouse, drooping in front over the belt, but quite straight at the back. This was of the light color. The yoke was overlaid, just above the point where it joined the blouse, with very rich, heavy applique lace in a genuine antique pattern.

The effect was very striking, so much so that it was chosen out of hundreds of costumes as presenting the most original features. The band on the sailor hat showed the two colors used in the costume.

SUMMER MUSIC.

Only Two Weeks More of the Promenade Concerts.

"The Bohemian Girl" Again at the Castle Square Tomorrow Night—"The Sphinx" to Remain but a Short Time Longer—Musical Gossip at Home and Abroad.

THE PROMENADES.

The summer season of the popular promenade concerts at Music Hall is fast drawing to an end. There remain but two weeks more, as the closing night is announced for Saturday, July 6. During the week just ended Mr. Novellis, in the makeup of his programmes, has maintained the high standard of popular music which has characterized this season's concerts from the opening night. On Friday evening last the orchestra played the introduction to Mascagni's new opera "Ratcliffe" for the first time in America. Composers' night will be introduced frequently during the remaining evenings. The first of these will be tomorrow, when the music will be by Vienna composers. On Wednesday French composers will be represented. The programme for tomorrow evening is:

Persian march	Strauss
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppe
Waltz, "Kaiser"	Strauss
Selection, "Fatinitza"	Suppe
Overture, "Banditenstreiche"	Suppe
a. Fly minuet	Czibulka
b. "A Toi"	Czibulka
Florentine serenade	Godard
Selection, "Merry War"	Strauss
Overture, "Poet and Peasant"	Suppe
Waltz, "Pesther"	Lanner
Polka, "Les Fleurs"	Ziehrer
March, "Jonathan"	Millocker

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.
TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 30, 1895.

SILENT LUTE.

Music and Beer Must Be Taken Separately,

SAY POLICE BOARD.

Licenses Will Be Revoked if Music Is Given.

TWO ORCHESTRAS DISCHARGED.

Music and beer as a Boston combination are doomed.

With one single exception—the "Pop" concerts of the summertide—the sweet strains of the orchestra will be silenced in the haunts where Bostonians gather to drink the foamy beverage and listen to gems from the opera at the same time.

The police captains, obedient to orders received from the commissioners, have gone on the warpath to secure evidence destined to make it a heinous offence for a man or a woman to listen in public places to music's dulcet strains, while tickling his or her tonsils with liquid refreshments of any description whatsoever—or consuming the minutest portion of food.

Full well have the doughty captains done their tasks. Yesterday, the stern edict went forth, wreaking despair in the hearts of many, and predicting shortages in the pockets of a few, which few, however, bethinking themselves of their licenses, meekly obeyed.

Licenses are to be sacrificed if music is furnished.

The order is a general one, and absolute, making exception only in the cases of hotels and the "Pops," which latter come under a special license.

The new ruling applies to all restaurants, and is confessedly an attack on eating places which have been giving post- and inter-prandial concerts.

A Post reporter called on the proprietors of two of these places last night. The proprietor of one had sent his orchestra to New York on the midnight train, the other had sent his men away in the afternoon. Both said they would not attempt to dispute the ruling.

The first proprietor said it would not especially affect his patronage, which was that of a business man's restaurant. The other proprietor thought that the shortage on net receipts would probably be balanced by the saving on musicians' salaries. Both, however, regretted that the commissioners had seen fit to deprive their patrons of music.

Boston Sunday [illegible]
SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1895.

LAST OF THE "POPS."

Close of Promenade Concert Season at Music Hall.

Signor A. de Novellis Given an Enthusiastic Farewell.

Elegant Solid Gold Medal Given by Orchestra and Patrons.

The season of promenade concerts at Music hall closed last night with a complimentary testimonial to Sig A. de Novellis.

There have been great audiences and enthusiastic audiences this season, but not one which could compare with the last for size or abandon.

Every chair was taken at the opening, and when the conductor appeared the place fairly shook with bravos and applause.

Everybody let himself loose and Sig de Novellis saluted and smiled and shook hands in return until there was nothing left to do but stand still and mop his forehead in the attitude of one exhausted for appreciative demonstrations.

This closes the signor's first season in Boston—a season altogether too short, the "pop" patrons think. Nobody could have asked for a better assurance of success and a place in the hearts of Boston music lovers than he received.

At the close of the first part of the program the members of the orchestra and some of the regular patrons of the concerts assembled in the artist's room back of the stage, and Sig A. de Novellis was sent for. Upon making his appearance Mr Sauerquell, librarian of the orchestra, speaking for his associates and the patrons of the concert, presented Sig Novellis with an elegant solid gold medal. The medal is in circular form, adorned with a wreath and ornamented scroll work, having in the center a lyre in bas relief fashioned in green gold. The words, "The Pops" are above the lyre and "Boston, 95" below it. On the reverse side is the following inscription: "Presented to Sig A. de Novellis by the orchestra and patrons of the Music hall promenade concerts, Boston, July 6, 95." The medal is suspended by gold chains from an ornamental top pin, which has a leader's baton as its ornament.

In accepting the gift, Sig de Novellis said: "It is difficult for me to find words to tell you the happiness your kindness has caused me. Although but a temporary resident of Boston, I feel that I am among friends and that I can confidently anticipate a pleasant welcome whenever my professional duties call me back to this city. My experience in directing the Music hall promenades this season has been truly delightful, and, to you, gentlemen of the orchestra, to the many constant patrons, and last, but by no means least, the members of the press who have so generously recognized my efforts during the season, I desire to return my heartfelt thanks. My memories of the pops will always be of the happiest character, and Boston will ever be the hub of my professional universe. I again thank you most sincerely for all your kindness to me."

The presentation and the reception of the gift were in keeping with the pleasant relations which have existed between the members of the orchestra and Sig de Novellis throughout the season. Although he met the gentlemen of the orchestra as an entire stranger, Sig de Novellis will always be held in pleasant remembrance by the musicians he has conducted during the last two months.

SUNDAY HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCVIII., NO. 7.
SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1895.

CLOSING "POP" CONCERT—A PRESENTATION.

Last night this season's promenade concerts in Music Hall closed with a complimentary to Sig. A. de Novellis. A fine audience was in attendance, and the conductor, on his first appearance, was welcomed by a vigorous and enthusiastic round of applause by both the audience and the orchestra. He has made many friends for himself since he has been here, and has won great and well-merited favor from the public that patronizes these concerts. His programme-making has shown equal taste and judgment, and in no previous season of the "Pops" has there been greater satisfaction expressed with the music than there has been during the season just ended. A special feature of last night's programme was a waltz, "Graziella," composed expressly for this occasion by Mr. Knecht, a member of the orchestra, and dedicated to Sig. de Novellis. It is a spirited, tuneful and charming work, and was led by the composer, the grace and prettiness of whose music met with a warm recognition at the hands of the audience. M. Charles Mole played a brilliant flute solo in his now familiar, masterly manner, and was heartily applauded.

At the close of the first part of the programme the members of the orchestra and some of the regular patrons of the concerts assembled in the artists' room back of the stage, and Sig. A. de Novellis, who has been the conductor of the season's concerts, was sent for. Upon making his appearance, Mr. Sauerquell, librarian of the orchestra, speaking for his associates and the patrons of the concert, presented Sig. Novellis with an elegant solid gold medal made from a special design by Messrs. Henry Guild & Son. The medal is in circular form, adorned with a wreath and ornamental scroll work, having in the centre a lyre in bas relief fashioned in green gold. The words "The Pops" are above the lyre, and "Boston, '95," below it. On the reverse side is the following inscription: "Presented to Sig. A. de Novellis by the orchestra and patrons of the Music Hall Promenade Concerts, Boston, July 6, '95." The medal is suspended by gold chains from an ornamental top pin which has a leader's baton as its ornament.

In accepting the gift Sig. de Novellis said: "It is difficult for me to find words to tell you the happiness your kindness has caused me. Although but a temporary resident of Boston, I feel that I am among friends, and that I can confidently anticipate a pleasant welcome whenever my professional duties call me back to this city. My experience in directing the Music Hall promenades this season has been truly delightful, and to you gentlemen of the orchestra, to the many constant patrons, and last, but by no means least, the members of the press who have so generously recognized my efforts during the season, I desire to return my most heartfelt thanks. My memories of the 'pops' will always be of the happiest character, and Boston will ever be the Hub of my professional universe. I again thank you most sincerely for all your kindness to me."

The presentation and the reception of the gift were in keeping with the pleasant relations which have existed between the members of the orchestra and Sig. de Novellis, throughout the season. Although he met the gentlemen of the orchestra as an entire stranger, Sig. de Novellis will always be held in pleasant remembrance by the musicians he has conducted during the last two months.

Boston [illegible]
SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1895.

LAST OF "POPS."

Prosperous Season Closed on Saturday Night.

Sig. A. de Novellis Presented With a Gold Medal.

It Was the Gift of His Associates, Who Appreciate Him.

The Pops are over.

It will be many weeks before Music Hall will resound with the strains of music and the clinking of glasses. Last night was the last. Thousands saw Mr. De Novellis wield his baton and bow suavely in response to their plaudits—and for the last time.

The audience was even more demonstrative than usual, and the orchestra, if possible, outequaled itself.

At the close of the first part of the program the members of the orchestra and some of the regular patrons of the concerts assembled in the Artists' room back of the stage and Mr. de Novellis was sent for. Upon making his appearance Mr. Sauerquell, Librarian of the orchestra, speaking for his associates and the patrons of the concert, presented Mr. Novellis with an elegant solid gold medal made from a special design. The medal is in circular form, adorned with a wreath and ornamental scroll work, having in the centre a lyre in bas relief, fashioned in green gold. The words "The Pops" are above the lyre, and "Boston, '95," below it. On the reverse side is the following inscription: "Presented to Sig. A. de Novellis by the orchestra and patrons of the Music Hall Promenade Concerts, Boston, July 6, '95." The medal is suspended by gold chains from an ornamental top pin, which has a leader's baton as its ornament.

In accepting the gift Mr. de Novellis said: "It is difficult for me to find words to tell you the happiness your kindness has caused me. Although but a temporary resident of Boston, I feel that I am among friends and that I can confidently anticipate a pleasant welcome whenever my professional duties call me back to this city. My experience in directing the Music Hall promenades this season has been truly delightful, and to you gentlemen of the orchestra, to the many constant patrons and last, but by no means least, the members of the press who have so generously recognized my efforts during the season, I desire to return my most heartfelt thanks. My memories of the 'pops' will always be of the happiest character, and Boston will ever be the Hub of my professional universe. I again thank you most sincerely for all your kindness to me."

The presentation and the reception of the gift were in keeping with the pleasant relations which have existed between the members of the orchestra and Mr. de Novellis throughout the season. Although he met the gentlemen of the orchestra as an entire stranger, Mr. de Novellis will alway be held in pleasant remembrance by t musicans whom he has led during the la two months.

The program last night was:

Polonaise	L
Overture, "Rienzi"	Wa
Waltz, "L'Amour et Printemps"	Waldt
Selection, "Aida"
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Fantasia Capriccio for flute	Calliazie
Flute Solo, Mons. Charles Mole.
a. Minuet	Bulzoni
b. "Blissful Dream"	Meyer-Helmund
Selection, "Carmen"	Bizet
Waltz, "Graziella"	Knech
(First time.) Dedicated to Sig. A. de Novellis. (Conducted by the composer.)
Overture, "Tannhauser"	Wagne
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeile
Hungarian March from "Damnation of Faust"	Berlio

Thus closed the "Pops" after a very prosperous season.

COLORED PAPER

Tenth Season

The Music Hall

Promenade Concerts

.1895.

39

BOSTON MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

SEASON 1895.

Monday Evening, July 1

ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

RETAIN THIS CHECK.

EVE. JULY 1

FLOOR CHAIR.

TABLE. 14

44

BOSTON MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

SEASON 1895.

Saturday Evening, July 6

ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

RETAIN THIS CHECK.

EVE. JULY 6

FIRST BALCONY

R 86

Floor Tables 1 to 50 Inclusive.
" " A to H. "
(410 Seats)

Balcony Tables A to J
omitting the I.
AA to GG. Inclusive
(332 Seats)

Music Hall Promenade Concerts

30062
SEASON 1895

C. A. ELLIS, Manager

ADMIT ONE

COLORED PAPER

Tenth Season

The Music Hall
Promenade Concerts

.1895.

Music
Hall
Promenade
Concerts

30062
SEASON 1895

C. A. ELLIS, Manager

ADMIT ONE

39

BOSTON MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

SEASON 1895.

Monday Evening, July 1

ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

RETAIN THIS CHECK.

EVE. JULY 1

FLOOR CHAIR.

TABLE.

14

BOSTON MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

SEASON 1895.

Monday Evening, July 1

ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

TABLE.

44

BOSTON MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

SEASON 1895.

Saturday Evening, July 6

ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

RETAIN THIS CHECK.

EVE. JULY 6

FIRST BALCONY

R

86

Floor Tables 1 to 50 Inclusive
" " A to H. "
(410 Seats)

Balcony Tables A to J
omitting the I.
AA to GG. Inclusive
(332 Seats)

~ ~ BILL OF FARE ~ ~

LUNCH

SANDWICHES.

Ham	10
Tongue	10
Chicken	15
Swiss Cheese	15
Roquefort Cheese	15
Brie Cheese	15
Neufchatel Cheese	15
American Cheese	15
Sardine	15

ICE-CREAM.

Vanilla	20
Lemon	20
Strawberry	20
Chocolate	20
Harlequin	25
Cake	15

PER PLATE.

Cold Ham	25
Cold Smoked Tongue	30
Cold Chicken	30
Swiss Cheese and Water Crackers	25
Roquefort " " " "	25
Brie " " " "	25
Neufchatel Cheese and Water Crackers	20
American " " " "	15
Sardines	30
Pretzels	10

SALADS.

Lobster	40
Chicken	40
Potato	15
Potato with Bread and Butter	25

CIGARS

(All Cigars will be enclosed in sealed envelopes, with the price printed thereon.)

The Celebrated N. S. Londres	From D. Frank & Co	10c., 3 for 25c.
Lord Byron Concha		10c., 3 for 25c.
Celebridad Esquisitos		10c., 3 for 25c.
Celebridad Perfectos		15c., 2 for 25c.
Sublima Perfecto		20c., 3 for 50c.
Dalia Puritano Fino		15c., 2 for 25c.
La Marinela, Key West Cigars (from Estabrook & Eaton)		15c., 2 for 25c.
Marguerite Conchas " " "		10c., 3 for 25c.
El Roble Conchas Especiales	From S. S. Pierce & Co.	10c., 3 for 25c.
La Mora Puritanos		15c., 2 for 25c.
Pembina Bouquet		10c., 3 for 25c.
Pembina Perfecto		15c., 2 for 25c.
Manuel Garcia Regalia Chiquita		15c., 2 for 25c.
Legitimidad Concha Fina Especiales		15c., 2 for 25c.
Espanola Concha Finas		15c. straight.
Ilusion Perfectos		20c. "
Cabanas Camelias		20c., 3 for 50c.
Trespalacios Bellas		20c., 3 for 50c.
Puro Habano Perfecto		25c.
Comercial Americanos		25c.
Carolina Perfectos		25c.
Sweet Caporal Cigarettes		15c.
Richmond Straight Cut Cigarettes		20c.
Egyptian Deities		20c.
Nestor Gianach's		40c.

LIST OF DRINKS

ROCHESTER BREWING CO., Rochester Beer on draught.....10

Claret	15
Rhine Wine	15
Claret Punch	20
Claret Cobbler	20
Rhine Wine Cobbler	20
Ginger Ale (Vincent, Hathaway & Co.)	10
Apollinaris	10
Lemon Soda	10
Plain Soda	10
Plain Lemonade	10
Lemonade with Wine	15
Soda Lemonade	15
Soda Lemonade with Wine	20
Egg Lemonade	20
Apollinaris Lemonade	15

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC ALES AND LAGER BEER.

	PT.
Bass & Co.'s Pale Ale, White Label	25
" " " " Foster's Bot	25
" " " " Dog's Head	25
P. B. Ale	20
Guinness' Stout	25
Muir's Scotch Ale	25
Kaiser Beer	25
Culmbacher Beer	25
Bohemian Beer (Roch. Brew. Co.)	20
Rochester Brew. Co., Standard	20
Bavarian Beer (Roch. Brew. Co.)	20
Rienzi Beer (Roch. Brew. Co.)	25
Norfolk Cabinet Beer	20
Bunker Hill Lager	20
Apollinaris ... Qt., 35,	20
Soda Siphon	25
Ginger Ale (Imported)	25
S. S. Pierce's Cider....Half Pints	15

RHINE WINES.

	QT.	PT.
Table Wine	1.00
Laubenheimer	1.50	.75
Niersteiner	1.50	.75
Liebfraumilch	2.00
Johannisberger Cabinet, Yellow Seal	2.50

CLARETS.

	QT.	PT.
Ordinaire	.80	.40
St. Julien	1.00	.50
Pontet Canet	1.50	.75

SAUTERNES.

	QT.	PT.
Sauterne	1.25	.65
Haut Sauterne	1.50	.75

Patrons will please pay waiters, and report any inattention to the Floor Manager.

39

BOSTON MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

SEASON 1895.

Monday Evening, July 1

ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

RETAIN THIS CHECK.

EVE. JULY 1

FLOOR CHAIR.

44

BOSTON MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

SEASON 1895.

Saturday Evening, July 6

ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

RETAIN THIS CHECK.

EVE. JULY 6

FIRST BALCONY

Floor Tables 1 to 50 In
" " A to K.
(410 Seats)

Balcony Tables A to J
omitting the I.
AA to GG, Inclusive
(332 Seats)

Music Hall

30062
SEASON 1895

C. A. ELLIS, Manager

Promenade Concerts

ADMIT ONE

Fitchburg Railroad

HOOSAC
TUNNEL
ROUTE

THE SHORT AND PICTURESQUE
ROUTE BETWEEN

BOSTON . . AND . . SARATOGA

Fast Express Trains with Palace Sleeping Cars from Boston to Chicago and St. Louis,

Via Niagara Falls and Lake Chautauqua.

THE POPULAR ROUTE TO

MONTREAL

And all points along

The Shores of Lake Champlain

Parlor and Sleeping Cars run through.

Apply for Summer Excursion Book, giving list of towns and rates of fare, at

250 WASHINGTON STREET,
BOSTON.

All trains depart from Union Station, Causeway Street.

J. R. WATSON, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

39

BOSTON MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
SEASON 1895.
Monday Evening, July 1
ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

RETAIN THE CHECK.
EVE. JULY 1
FLOOR CHAIR.

44

BOSTON MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
SEASON 1895.
Saturday Evening, July 6
ADMIT ONE. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

RETAIN THE CHECK.
EVE. JULY 6
FIRST BALCONY

Floor Tables 1 to 50 In
" " A to K.
(410 Seats)

Balcony Tables A to J
omitting the I.
AA to GG. Inclusive
(332 Seats)

Music Hall

30062
SEASON 1895

C. A. ELLIS, Manager

Promenade
Concerts

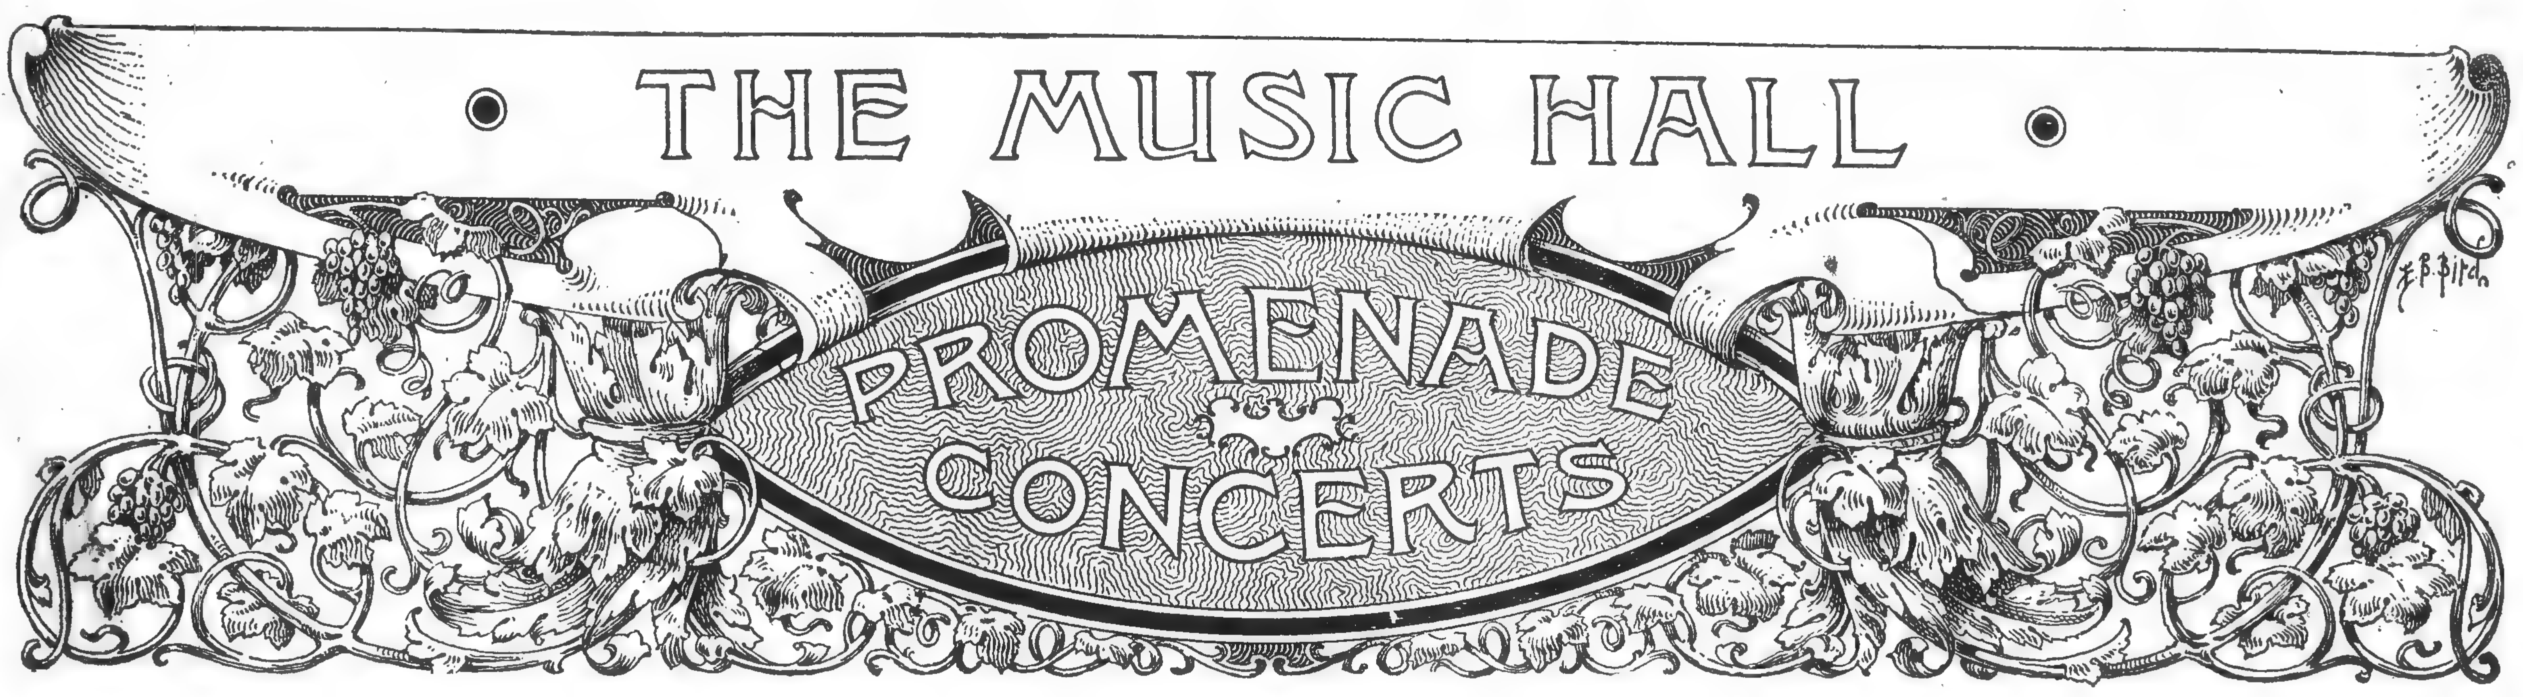
ADMIT ONE

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



G. Waldon Smith, PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular studios in New England. 164 TREMONT STREET, Near Mason Street. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 1.

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Queen of Sheba" . . . . Gounod
2. OVERTURE, "Masaniello" . . . . Auber
3. WALTZ, "Amour et Printemps" . . . . . . Waldteufel
(First time.)
4. SELECTION, "Falka" . . . . Chassaigne

5. PRELUDE TO ACT III., "Lohengrin" . . . . Wagner
6. OVERTURE, "William Tell" . . . . . . Rossini
7. INTERMEZZO, "Cavalleria Rusticana" . . . . . Mascagni
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SUITE, "L'Arlésienne," No. 2. . . . . Bizet

9. OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry" . . . . . . Suppé
10. WALTZ, "Grubenlichter" . . . . Zeller
(First time.)
11. GAVOTTE, "La Coquette" . . . . Sudessi
(First time.)
12. MARCH, "Tabasco" . . . . Chadwick

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Owing to a long-standing engagement of Music Hall, there will be no concert on the evening of Thursday, May 16.

THE LATEST AND MOST POPULAR
ENGLISH SONGS AND BALLADS
AS SUNG BY

Mlles. E FLORENCE, ALICE GOMEZ, ANTOINETTE TREBELLI, CLARA BUTT, CARLOTTA DESVIGNES, BELLE COLE, Messrs. EDWARD LLOYD, BEN DAVIES, PLUNKET GREENE, Signor FOLI, etc., can now be had at any of the leading music dealers of the city; but, in order to get these compositions, you must be prepared to name them. Ask your dealer for Boosey & Co.'s list of English Songs and Ballads by the eminent composers of the day; or, better still, write to the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, - - NEW YORK.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON, MONDAY, MAY 13, 1895.
SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 2.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD, HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

MONDAY, MAY 13.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Hochlands Klänge"	Millöcker
2.	OVERTURE, "Raymond"	A. Thomas
3.	WALTZ, "Kaiser"	Joh. Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Carmen"	Bizet
5.	BALLET MUSIC, "Henry VIII."	Saint-Saëns
6.	OVERTURE, "Stradella"	Flotow
7.	"Clair de la Lune" (First Time.) The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Gillet
8.	SELECTION, "The Gondoliers"	Sullivan
9.	SELECTION, "Sphinx"	Thompson
10.	WALTZ, "Diesen Kuss der ganzen Welt" (First Time.)	Ziehrer
11.	POLKA, "Nuée d'Oiseaux" (First Time.)	Waldteufel
12.	MARCH, "The Flag"	Ziehrer

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Owing to a long-standing engagement of Music Hall, there will be no concert on the evening of Thursday, May 16.

THE LATEST LONDON SUCCESSES
FOR CONCERT AND DRAWING-ROOM.
STEPHEN ADAMS.
"The Forge and the Bell."
"By the Waters."
F. H. COWEN.
"Love lies Asleep in the Rose."
"The Psalm of Life."
J. GREENHILL.
"Autolycus' Song."
"Lovely Jane."
MAUDE VALERIE WHITE.
"Crabbed Age and Youth."
"A Greeting."
A. H. BEHREND.
"Crossing the Bar."
"Little Woman."
F. L. MOIR.
"The Harbour Bay."
HARVEY LÖHR.
"Oh. were I Rich and Mighty."
LIZA LEHMANN.
Irish Love Song.
MARY CARMICHAEL.
Dance Song ("Come Trip It.")
To be had from the leading music dealers or
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth St., New York.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

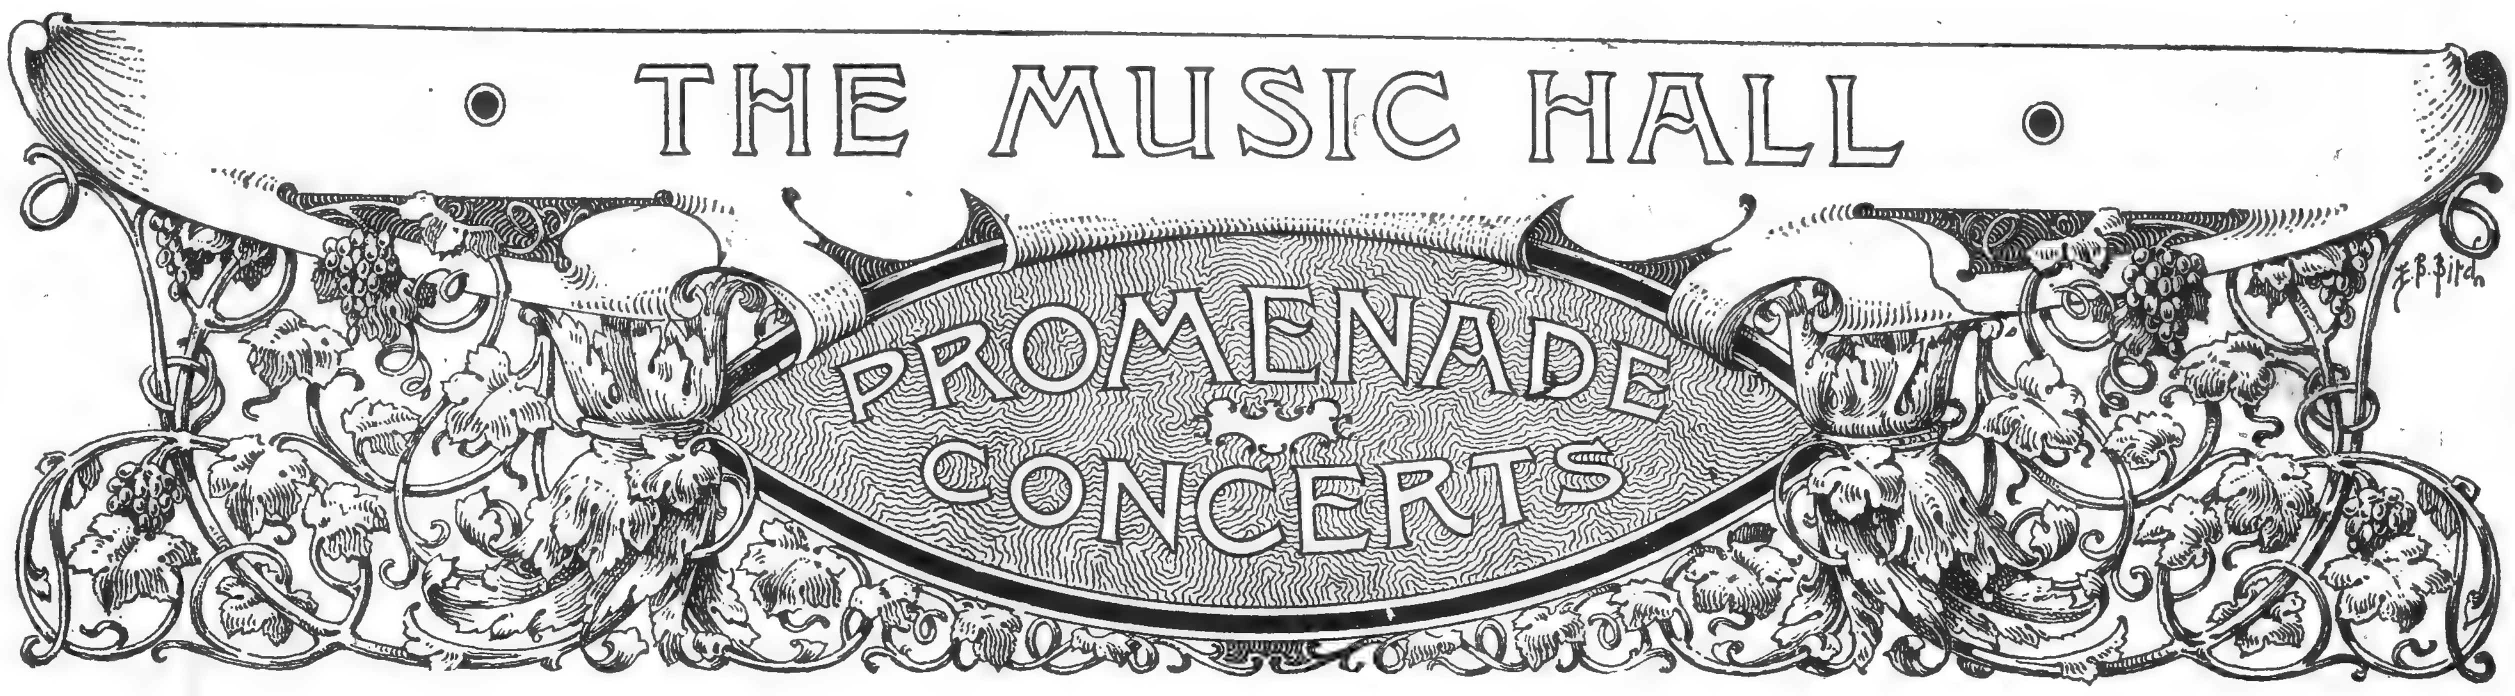
ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

G. Waldon Smith, PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular studios in New England. 164 TREMONT STREET, Near Mason Street. As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

G. Waldon Smith, PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular studios in New England. 164 TREMONT STREET, Near Mason Street. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.



THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 14, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 3.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD, HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated ✳ Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . MUSIC . . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

TUESDAY, MAY 14.

PROGRAMME.

1.	WEDDING MARCH	Mendelssohn
2.	OVERTURE, "Bronze Horse"	Auber
3.	WALTZ, "Gross Wien"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Aïda"	Verdi
5.	BALLET MUSIC, "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
6.	OVERTURE, "Martha"	Flotow
7.	LARGO The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Händel
8.	SELECTION, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
9.	OVERTURE, "Poet and Peasant"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Espana"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "Libelle"	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Jonathan"	Millöcker

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Owing to a long-standing engagement of Music Hall, there will be no concert on the evening of Thursday, May 16.

Our attention has been drawn to the great inconvenience to the musical public by the various editions issued in America of Mlle. Chaminade's Songs and Piano Compositions.

We respectfully beg to inform all who are interested that there is ONE and ONLY ONE EDITION authorized by the composer, and issued by her publishers in Paris and London.

The SOLE right of representation for the United States of America has been given to

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 15, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 4.

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 15.

PROGRAMME.

1. PERSIAN MARCH . . . . Strauss
2. OVERTURE, "Marriage of Figaro" . . . . . . Mozart
3. WALTZ, "Martin" . . . . Zeller
(First Time.)
4. SELECTION, "Robin Hood" . . . . De Koven

5. OVERTURE, "Orpheus aux Enfers" . . . . . . Offenbach
6. "Le Dernier Sommeil de la Vierge" . . . . . . Massenet
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. INTERMEZZO, "I Pagliacci" . . . . . . Leoncavallo
8. BALLET MUSIC, "Sylvia" . . . . Délibes

9. SELECTION, "Rob Roy" . . . . De Koven
(First Time.)
10. WALTZ, "Artist's Life" . . . . Strauss
11. POLKA, "Violanta" . . . . Knecht
12. MARCH, "Boccaccio" . . . . Suppé

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Owing to a long-standing engagement of Music Hall, there will be no concert on the evening of Thursday, May 16.

RHYMES ABOUT A LITTLE WOMAN. Words by William Canton. Music by Mrs. RAYMOND MAUDE. $1.50.

RUMPELSTILTSKIN. A musical play for the young. Written and composed by ALFRED SCOTT-GATTY. $1.00.

NEW EDITION. MOORE'S IRISH MELODIES. The original airs restored, and arranged for the voice, with pianoforte accompaniment, by CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD. (One hundred and nineteen songs.) $2.00.

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, - NEW YORK.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT
THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢.

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer
for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

G. Waldon Smith, PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular studios in New England. 164 TREMONT STREET, Near Mason Street. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 5.

THE MUSIC HALL

Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Budapest" . . . . Kral
(First time.)
2. OVERTURE, "Gazza Ladra" . . . . Rossini
3. WALTZ, "Wine, Woman, and Song" . . . . . . J. Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Faust" . . . . Gounod

---

5. BALLET MUSIC, "Le Cid" . . . . Massenet
6. OVERTURE, "Freischütz" . . . . Weber
7. SERENADE, "Mandolin" . . . . Eilenberg
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
(First time.)
8. SELECTION, "Mikado" . . . . Sullivan

---

9. OVERTURE, "Fledermaus" . . . . Strauss
10. WALTZ, "Estudiantina" . . . . Waldteufel
11. POLKA, "La Tzigane" . . . . Ganné
(First time.)
12. MARCH, "Niagara" . . . . Bayer
(First time.)

THE LATEST AND MOST POPULAR
ENGLISH SONGS AND BALLADS
AS SUNG BY

Mlles. E. FLORENCE, ALICE GOMEZ, ANTOINETTE TREBELLI, CLARA BUTT, CARLOTTA DESVIGNES, BELLE COLE, Messrs. EDWARD LLOYD, BEN DAVIES, PLUNKET GREENE, Signor FOLI, etc., can now be had at any of the leading music dealers of the city; but, in order to get these compositions, you must be prepared to name them. Ask your dealer for Boosey & Co.'s list of English Songs and Ballads by the eminent composers of the day; or, better still, write to the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, - - NEW YORK.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢.

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

J. Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 6.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, MAY 18.

PROGRAMME.

1.	POLONAISE	Chopin
2.	OVERTURE, "Rienzi"	Wagner
3.	WALTZ, "Nid d'Amour"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "Traviata"	Verdi
5.	SELECTION, "Gioconda"	Ponchiell
6.	OVERTURE, "Semiramide"	Rossini
7.	PRELUDE, "The Deluge" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number. Solo Violin, Mr. SCHNITZLER.	Saint-Saëns
8.	DANSE DES BACCHANTES from "Philemon et Baucis"	Gounod
9.	OVERTURE, "Prince Pro Tem"	Thompson
10.	WALTZ, "Morgenblätter"	Strauss
11.	POLKA, "Czarina"	Ganné
12.	MARCH, "Hoch Habsburg."	Kral

THE LATEST LONDON SUCCESSES
FOR CONCERT AND DRAWING-ROOM.

STEPHEN ADAMS.
"The Forge and the Bell."
"By the Waters."

F. H. COWEN.
"Love lies Asleep in the Rose."
"The Psalm of Life."

J. GREENHILL.
"Autolycus' Song."
"Lovely Jane."

MAUDE VALERIE WHITE.
"Crabbed Age and Youth."
"A Greeting."

A. H. BEHREND.
"Crossing the Bar."
"Little Woman."

F. L. MOIR.
"The Harbour Bay."

HARVEY LÖHR.
"Oh, were I Rich and Mighty."

LIZA LEHMANN.
Irish Love Song.

MARY CARMICHAEL.
Dance Song ("Come Trip It.")

To be had from the leading music dealers or
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth St., New York.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT
THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢.

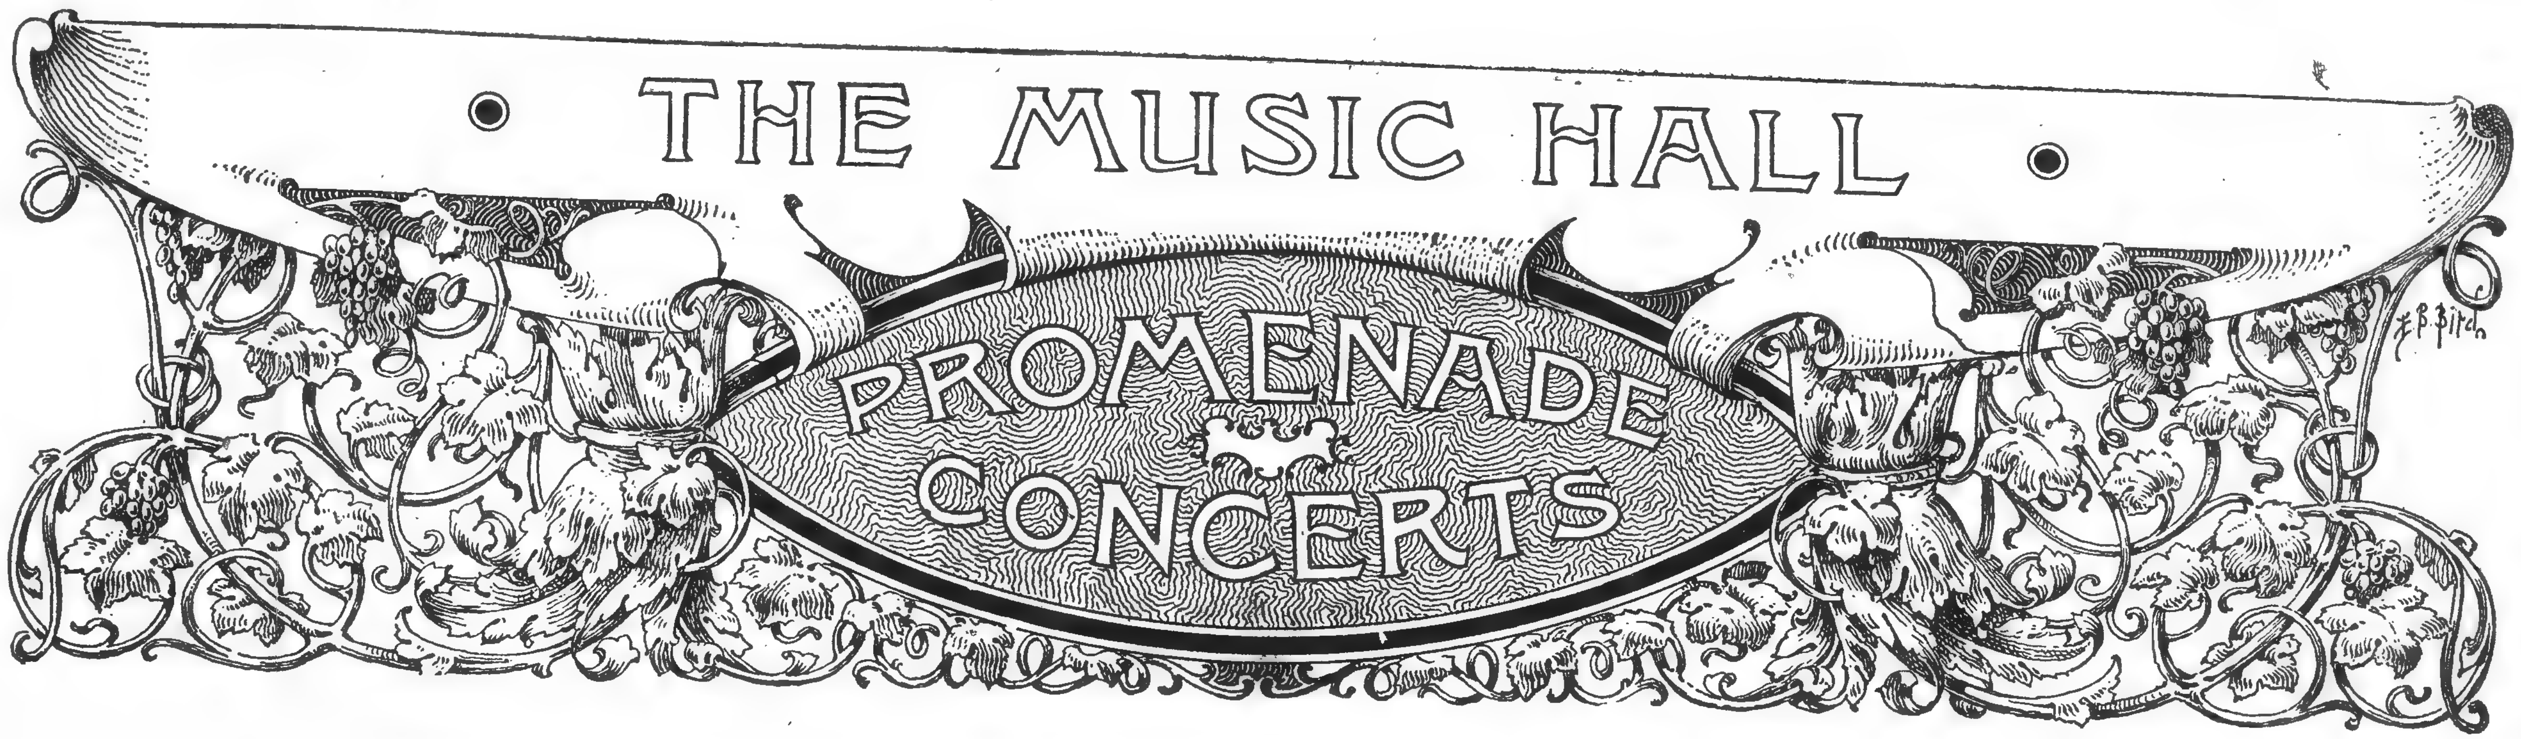
NORFOLK
CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, MAY 20, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 7.

THE . . .
MUSIC . .
HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

MONDAY, MAY 20, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Jonathan"	Millöcker
2.	OVERTURE, "Fra Diavolo"	Auber
3.	WALTZ, "Les Patineurs"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "Les Brigands"	Offenbach
5.	OVERTURE, "Die Meistersinger"	Wagner
6.	PIZZICATI (First Time.)	Gillet
7.	CAVATINA The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Raff
8.	BAL COSTUMÉ a. Berger et Bergère. b. Andalouse.	Rubinstein
9.	SELECTION, "Boccaccio"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
11.	POLKA, "Unparteische Kritik"	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Fort William Henry"	Knecht

Our attention has been drawn to the great inconvenience to the musical public by the various editions issued in America of

Mlle. Chaminade's Songs and Piano Compositions.

We respectfully beg to inform all who are interested that there is ONE and ONLY ONE EDITION authorized by the composer, and issued by her publishers in Paris and London.

The SOLE right of representation for the United States of America has been given to

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT
THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England, 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 21, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 8.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD, HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

TUESDAY, MAY 21, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Tabasco"	Chadwick
2.	OVERTURE, "La Dame Blanche"	Boieldieu
3.	WALTZ, "Violettes"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "La Grande Duchesse"	Offenbach
5.	OVERTURE, "Gouverneur de Tours"	Reinecke
6.	SELECTION, "Fatinitza"	Suppé
7.	INTERMEZZO, "Naila"	Délibes
8.	WALTZ, "La Vague"	Metra
9.	SELECTION, "Erminie"	Jakobowsky
10.	WALTZ, "New Vienna"	Strauss
11.	POLKA, "Tout á la Joie"	Fahrbach
12.	MARCH, "Pour la Patrie"	Millöcker

RHYMES ABOUT A LITTLE WOMAN. Words by William Canton. Music by Mrs. RAYMOND MAUDE. $1.50.

RUMPELSTILTSKIN. A musical play for the young. Written and composed by ALFRED SCOTT-GATTY. $1.00.

NEW EDITION. MOORE'S IRISH MELODIES. The original airs restored, and arranged for the voice, with pianoforte accompaniment, by CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD. (One hundred and nineteen songs.) $2.00.

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, - NEW YORK.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S P. B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS PINTS 20¢.

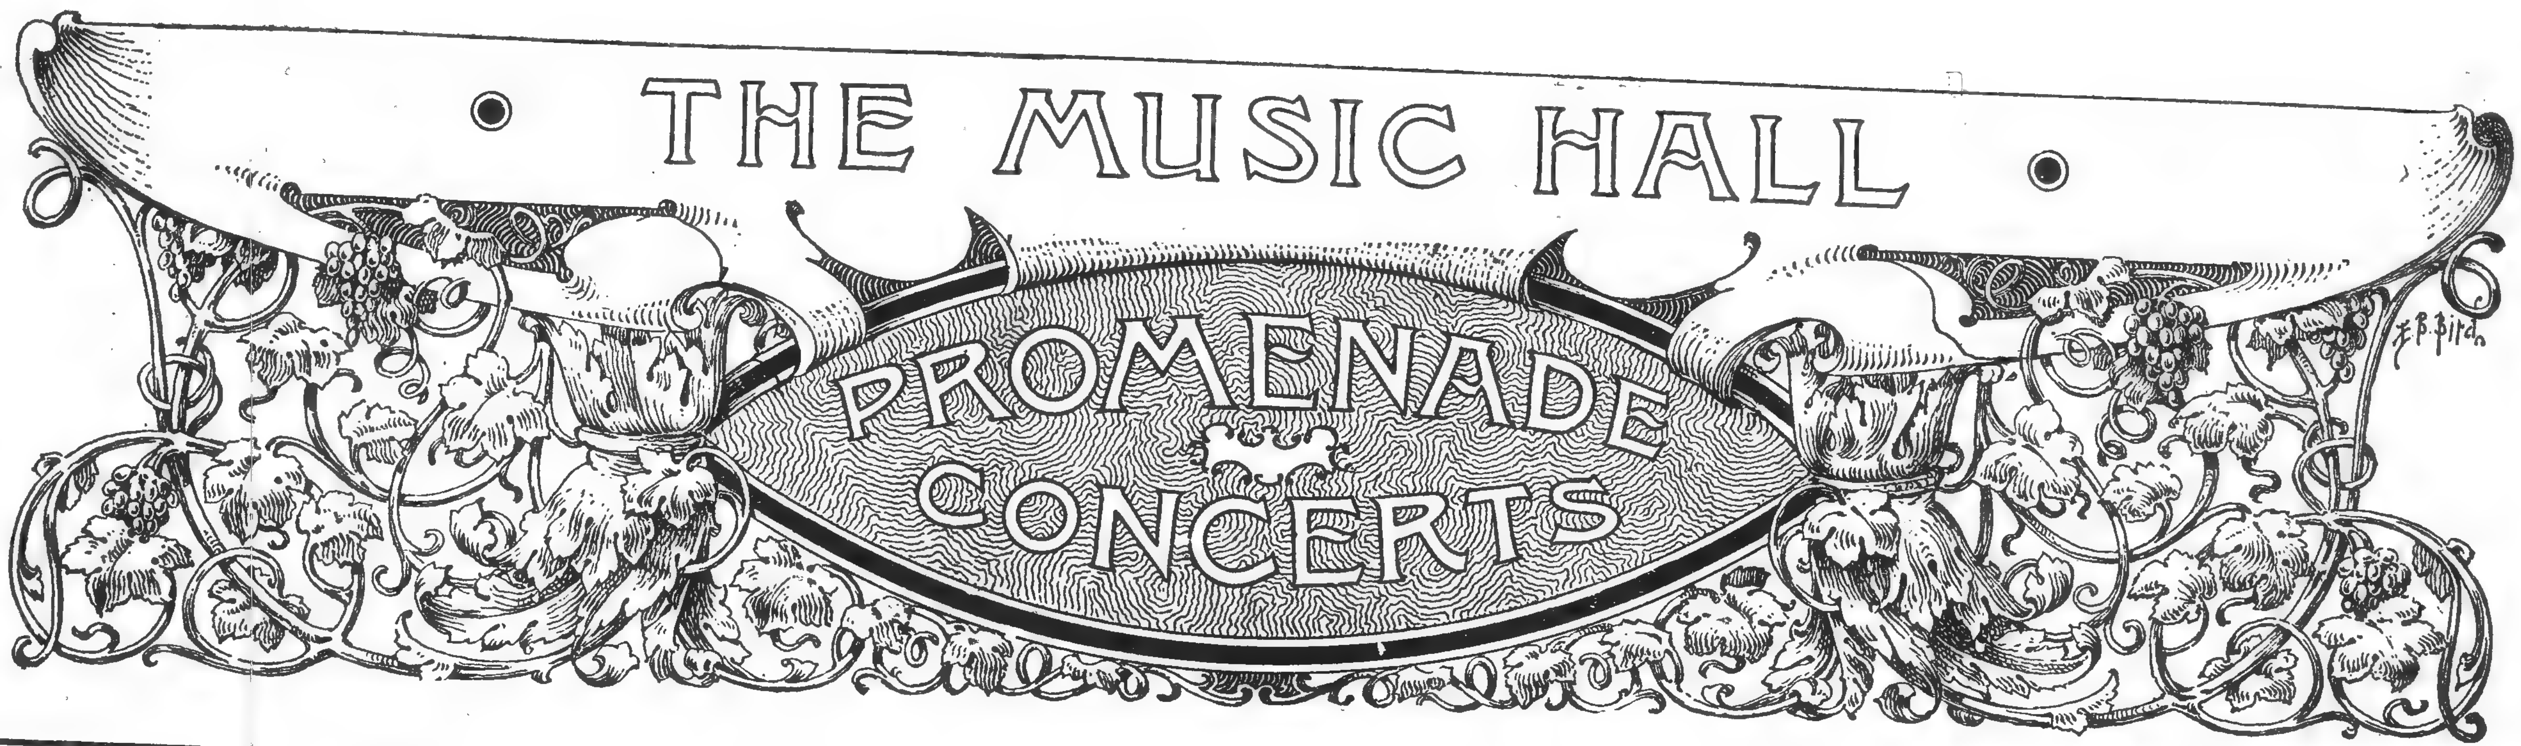
NORFOLK CABINET LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[15]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 22, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 9.

THE MUSIC HALL... Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 22, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Exposition" (First time.) . . . . Fahrbach
2. OVERTURE, "Merry Wives of Windsor" . . . . Nicolai
3. WALTZ, "Seid umschlungen Millionen" . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Cavalleria Rusticana" . . . . Mascagni

5. BALLET MUSIC, "Faust" . . . . Gounod
6. OVERTURE, "Mignon" . . . . A. Thomas
7. a. "TRAUMEREI" . . . . Schumann
   b. "MOTO PERPETUO" (Musical Joke) (First time at these concerts.) . . . . Straus
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Poor Jonathan" . . . . Millöcker

9. OVERTURE, "Zampa" . . . . Herold
10. WALTZ, "Amour et Printemps" . . . . Waldteufel
11. POLKA, "Woman's Heart" . . . . Strauss
12. MARCH, "The Flag" . . . . Ziehrer

THE LATEST AND MOST POPULAR
ENGLISH SONGS AND BALLADS
AS SUNG BY
Mlles. E. FLORENCE, ALICE GOMEZ, ANTOINETTE TREBELLI, CLARA BUTT, CARLOTTA DESVIGNES, BELLE COLE, Messrs. EDWARD LLOYD, BEN DAVIES, PLUNKET GREENE, Signor FOLI, etc., can now be had at any of the leading music dealers of the city; but, in order to get these compositions, you must be prepared to name them. Ask your dealer for Boosey & Co.'s list of English Songs and Ballads by the eminent composers of the day; or, better still, write to the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, - - NEW YORK.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT
THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢.

NORFOLK
CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

[illegible] PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 10.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE . . . MUSIC . . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Jonathan"	Millöcker
2.	OVERTURE, "Masaniello"	Auber
3.	WALTZ, "Harlequin en Voyage" Conducted by the composer.	Zach
4.	SELECTION, "Rigoletto"	Verdi
5.	MARCH, "Indienne"	Meyerbeer
6	OVERTURE, "Oberon"	Weber
7.	a. "MINUET"	Bulzoni
	b. "HYMN TO ST. CECILIA"	Gounod
8.	SELECTION, "Fencing Master"	De Koven
9.	OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
11.	POLKA, "La Mousmé," Mazourka Japonaise (First time.)	Ganné
12.	MARCH, "Hochlands Kläenge"	Millöcker

SPECIAL NOTICE. Owing to long-standing engagements of Music Hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 27, 28, 29, and 30. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 31.

THE LATEST LONDON SUCCESSES
FOR CONCERT AND DRAWING-ROOM.

STEPHEN ADAMS.
"The Forge and the Bell."
"By the Waters."
F. H. COWEN.
"Love lies Asleep in the Rose."
"The Psalm of Life."
J. GREENHILL.
"Autolycus' Song."
"Lovely Jane."
MAUDE VALERIE WHITE.
"Crabbed Age and Youth."
"A Greeting."
A. H. BEHREND.
"Crossing the Bar."
"Little Woman."
F. L. MOIR.
"The Harbour Bay."
HARVEY LÖHR.
"Oh. were I Rich and Mighty."
LIZA LEHMANN.
Irish Love Song.
MARY CARMICHAEL.
Dance Song ("Come Trip It.")

To be had from the leading music dealers or
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth St., New York.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT
THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢.

NORFOLK
CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts.
MARCUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts.
ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[17]

Picturesque reminder of the days when the phrase "piano legs", derogatorily applied, really meant something......

JACOB THOMA, VIOLIN MAKER. Old Violins, Violas, 'Cellos. Instruments taken in Exchange. Artistic Repairs a Specialty. Bows Rehaired. Music Hall Building, Room 7, Boston. Repairer for the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

M. STEINERT & SONS COMPANY,

REPRESENTING STEINWAY & SONS.

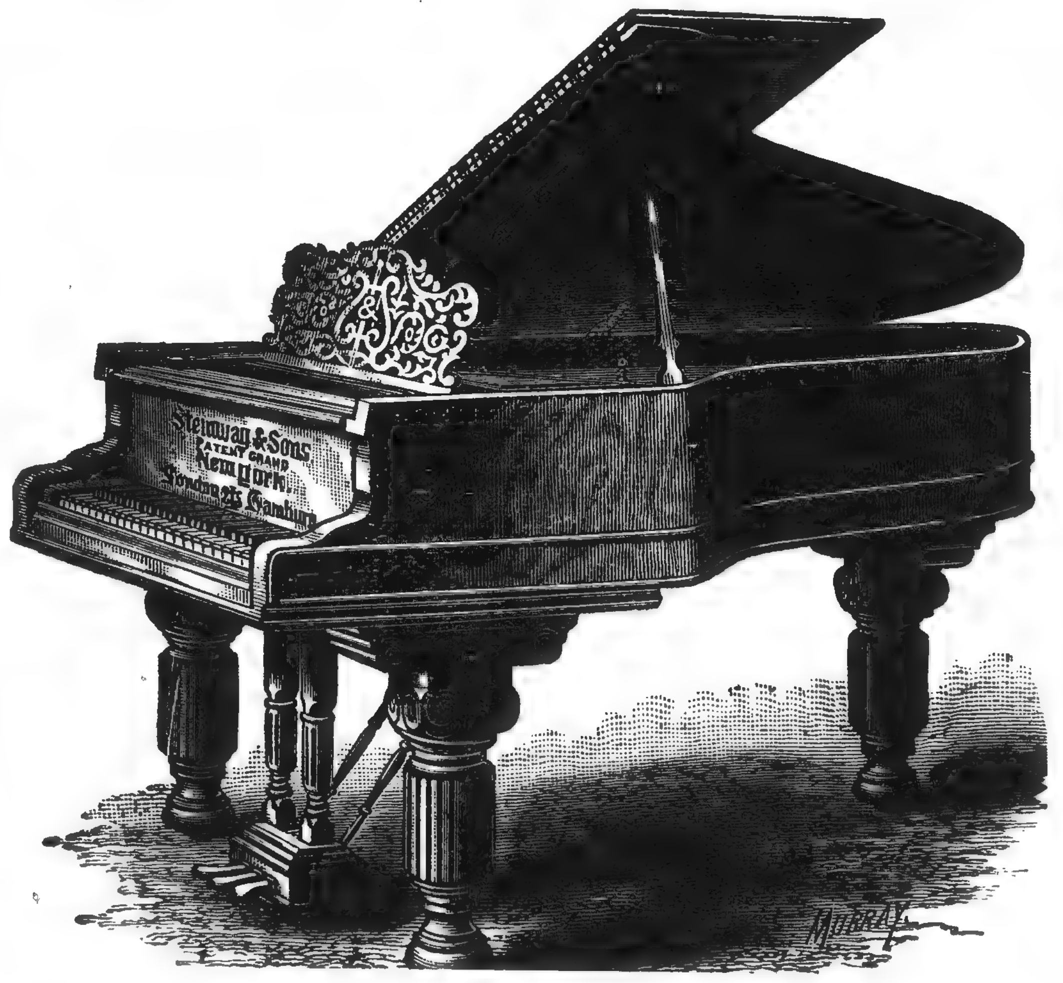
The Recognized Standard Pianos of the World. Pre-eminently the Best Instruments Made.

Exported and sold in all Art Centres of the globe.

Preferred by the Greatest Living Artists.



M. Steinert & Sons Co.,
ALSO
Wholesale and Retail Representatives in the New England States for Hardman,
Gabler, Standard,
Henning, and Weser

DESIGNING-ILLUSTRATING CO.

PIANOS.

STEINERT HALL 190 TREMONT STREET, CORNER BOYLSTON, BOSTON, MASS.

. . THE . .

Mason & Hamlin

PIANOFORTES

EXCEL IN . . .
TONE QUALITY, ACTION.
CASE WORK, DURABILITY,
EVENNESS OF SCALE,
STANDING IN TUNE.

Renting for Seashore a Specialty.

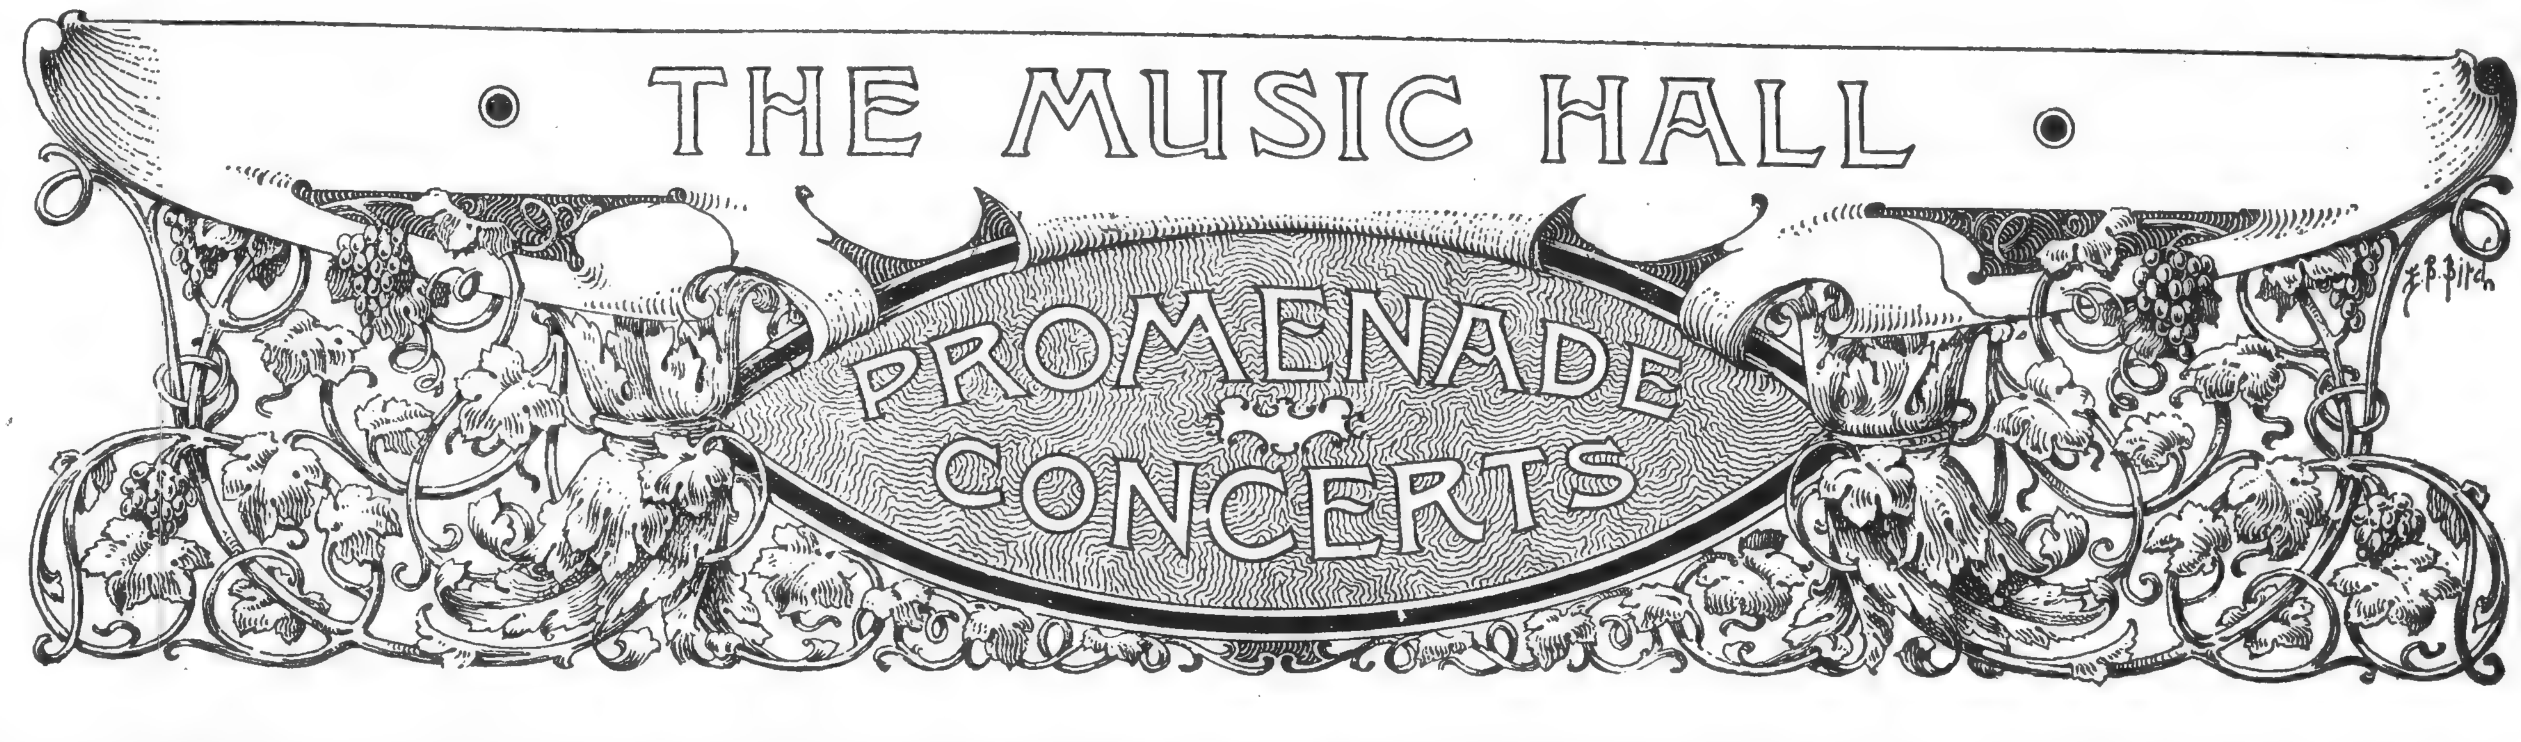
Mason & Hamlin Co.

146 BOYLSTON STREET, OPPOSITE COMMON,
BOSTON.

HENRY F. MILLER PIANOS, 88 Boylston Street, OPPOSITE THE COMMON, NEAR TREMONT STREET.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.



DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON, FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1895.
SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 11.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD, HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Austria"	Zach
2.	OVERTURE, "Tannhäuser"	Wagner
3.	WALTZ, "Blue Danube"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Chimes of Normandy"	Planquette
5.	OVERTURE, "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
6.	INTERMEZZO, "Blissful Dream" (First Time.)	Meyer-Helmund
7.	SERENATA The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Moszkowsk
8.	SELECTION, "Pirates of Penzance"	Sullivan
9.	OVERTURE, "Banditenstreiche"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Près de Toi" (First time.)	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "Violanta"	Knecht
12.	MARCH, "Child of Fortune" (First Time.)	Millöcker

SPECIAL NOTICE. Owing to long-standing engagements of Music Hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 27, 28, 29, and 30. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 31.

Our attention has been drawn to the great inconvenience to the musical public by the various editions issued in America of Mlle. Chaminade's Songs and Piano Compositions.

We respectfully beg to inform all who are interested that there is ONE and ONLY ONE EDITION authorized by the composer, and issued by her publishers in Paris and London.

The SOLE right of representation for the United States of America has been given to

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 12.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Washington Post"	Sousa
2.	OVERTURE, "L'Enfant Prodigue"	Auber
3.	WALTZ, "Legends of the Forest"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "The Merry War"	Strauss
5.	PRELUDE ACT III., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
6.	POLONAISE	Liszt
7.	a. "FLIRTATION"	Steck
	b. MENUET, "Diane Chasseresse" (First Time.)	Chesnau
	The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8.	SELECTION, "Rob Roy"	De Koven
9.	OVERTURE, "Poet and Peasant"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Tales from the Orient"	Strauss
11.	POLKA MAZOURKA, "Mignonette"	Zach
12.	MARCH, "Grüss Gott" (First Time.)	Komzak

SPECIAL NOTICE. Owing to long-standing engagements of Music Hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 27, 28, 29, and 30. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 31.

RHYMES ABOUT A LITTLE WOMAN. Words by William Canton. Music by Mrs. RAYMOND MAUDE. $1.50.

RUMPELSTILTSKIN. A musical play for the young. Written and composed by ALFRED SCOTT-GATTY. $1.00.

NEW EDITION. MOORE'S IRISH MELODIES. The original airs restored, and arranged for the voice, with pianoforte accompaniment, by CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD. (One hundred and nineteen songs.) $2.00.

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, - NEW YORK.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

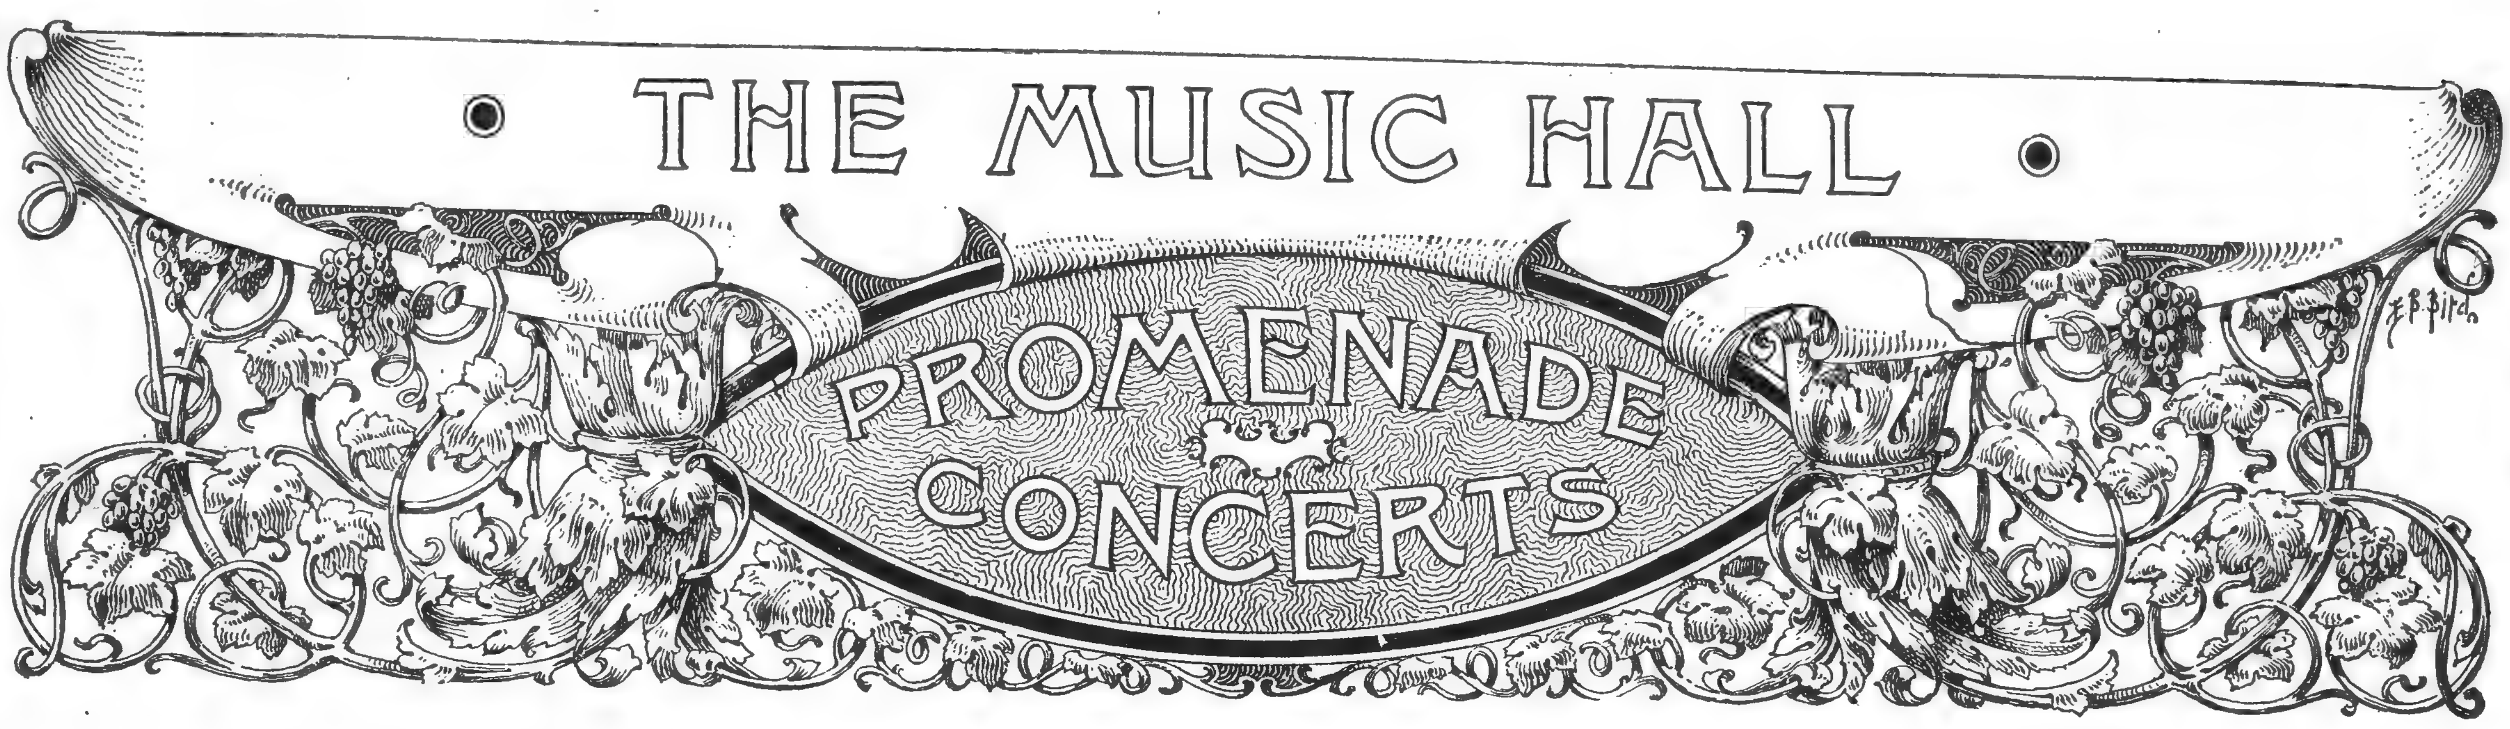
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, MAY 31, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 13.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated
*
Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE . . . .
MUSIC . . .
HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

FRIDAY, MAY 31, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Coronation"	Meyerbeer
2.	OVERTURE, "Stradella"	Flotow
3.	WALTZ, "Violets"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "Princesse de Trebizonde"	Offenbach
5.	FINALE, ACT I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
6.	OVERTURE, "William Tell"	Rossini
7.	SERENATA, "Mandolin" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Eilenberg
8.	WALTZ, "Espana"	Waldteufel
9.	OVERTURE, "Raymond"	Thomas
10.	WALTZ, "Les Lagunes"	Strauss
11.	POLKA, "La Tzigane"	Ganné
12.	MARCH, "Budapest"	Kral

THE LATEST AND MOST POPULAR
ENGLISH SONGS AND BALLADS
AS SUNG BY
Mlles. E. FLORENCE, ALICE GOMEZ, ANTOINETTE TREBELLI, CLARA BUTT, CARLOTTA DESVIGNES, BELLE COLE, Messrs. EDWARD LLOYD, BEN DAVIES, PLUNKET GREENE, Signor FOLI, etc., can now be had at any of the leading music dealers of the city; but, in order to get these compositions, you must be prepared to name them. Ask your dealer for Boosey & Co.'s list of English Songs and Ballads by the eminent composers of the day; or, better still, write to the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, - - NEW YORK.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts.

J. Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[20]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
F. B. Bird

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1895.
SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 14.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Queen of Sheba" . . . . Gounod
2. OVERTURE, "Martha" . . . . Flotow
3. WALTZ, "Rêves de Jeunesse" . . . . P. Müller
(First Time.)
4. SELECTION, "Sphinx" . . . . Thompson
(By request)

5. OVERTURE, "Orpheus aux Enfers" . . . . . . Offenbach
6. POLKA, "La Mousmé," Mazourka Japonaise . . . . Ganné
7. a. "Clair de Lune"
b. Pizzicati . . . . Gillet
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "La Traviata" . . . . Verdi

9. OVERTURE, "La Part du Diable" . . . . Auber
10. WALTZ, "Fin de Siècle" . . . . Knecht
(Conducted by the composer)
11. POLKA, "White Roses" . . . . Fahrbach
12. MARCH, "Bei uns daheim" . . . . Wagner

THE LATEST LONDON SUCCESSES
FOR CONCERT AND DRAWING-ROOM.

STEPHEN ADAMS.
"The Forge and the Bell."
"By the Waters."
F. H. COWEN.
"Love lies Asleep in the Rose."
"The Psalm of Life."
J. GREENHILL.
"Autolycus' Song."
"Lovely Jane."
MAUDE VALERIE WHITE.
"Crabbed Age and Youth."
"A Greeting."
A. H. BEHREND.
"Crossing the Bar."
"Little Woman."
F. L. MOIR.
"The Harbour Bay."
HARVEY LÖHR.
"Oh. were I Rich and Mighty."
LIZA LEHMANN.
Irish Love Song.
MARY CARMICHAEL.
Dance Song ("Come Trip It.")

To be had from the leading music dealers or
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth St., New York.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK
CABINET
Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

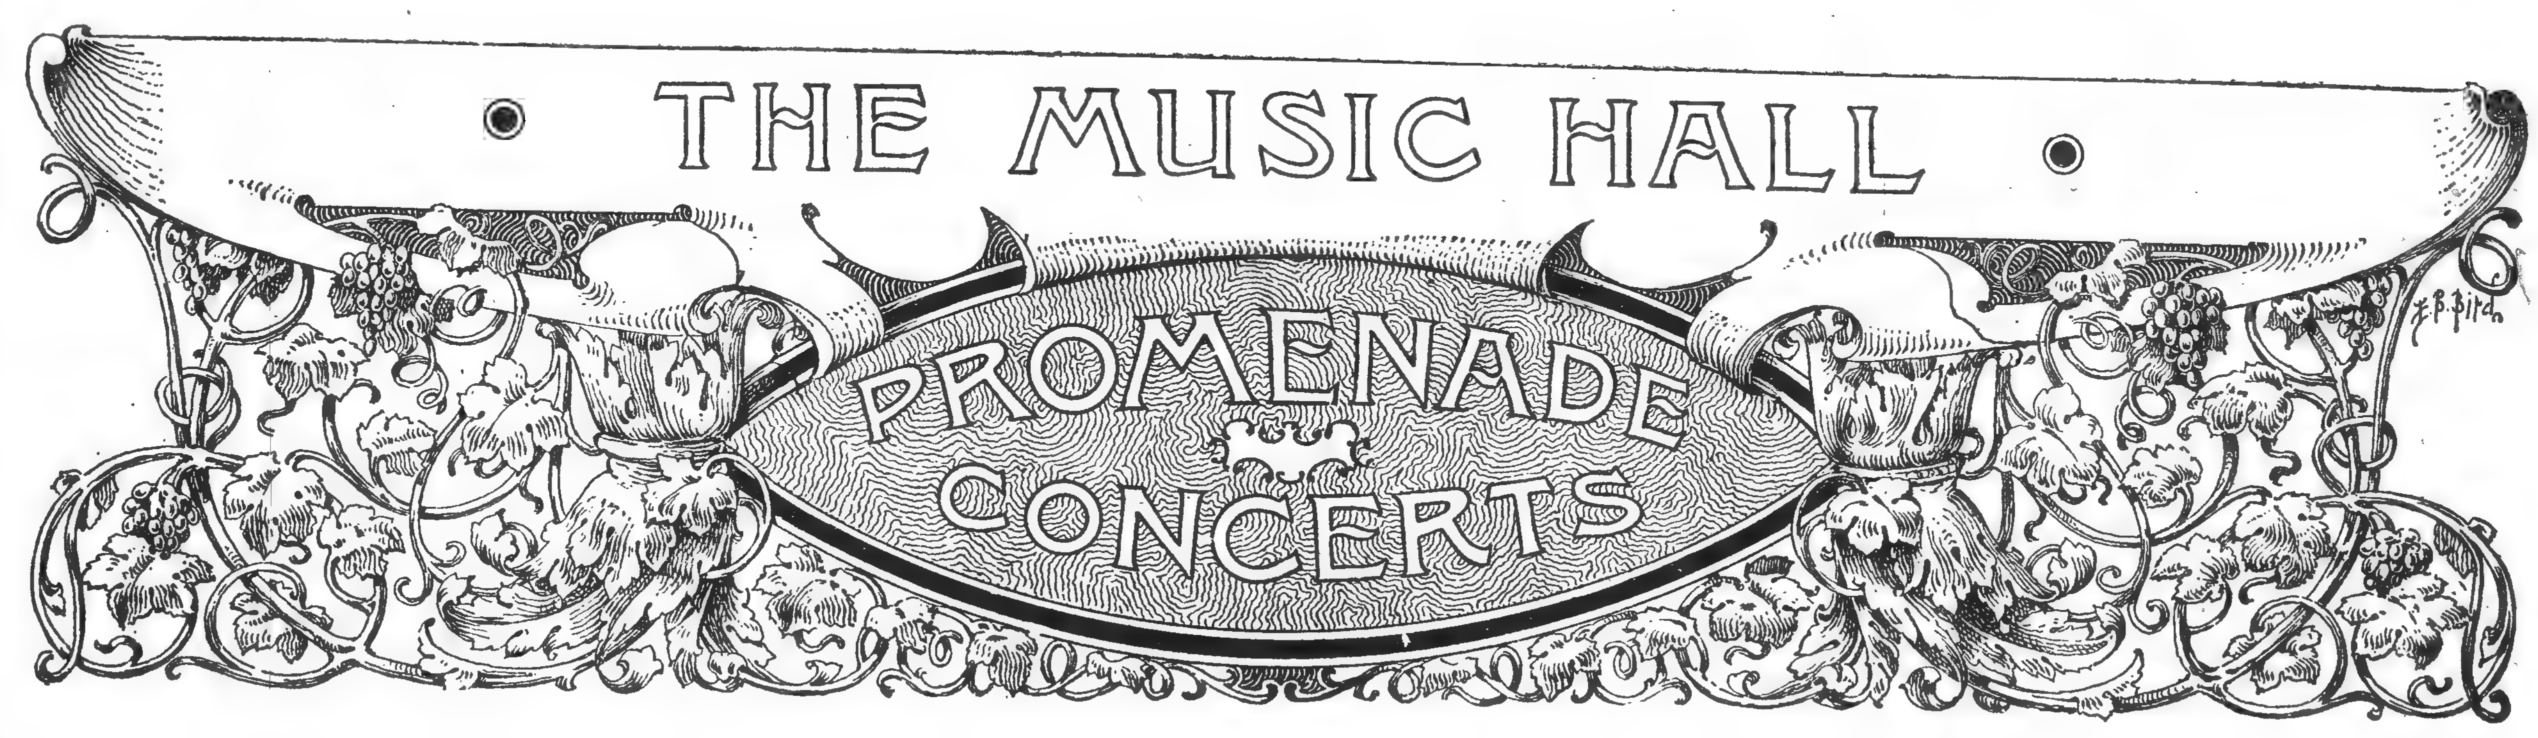
ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[21]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St.



DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 3, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 15.

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

MONDAY, JUNE 3, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	PERSIAN MARCH	Strauss
2.	OVERTURE, "Gazza Ladra"	Rossini
3.	WALTZ, "Meerleuchten" (First time.)	Ziehrer
4.	SELECTION, "Aïda"	Verdi
5.	OVERTURE, "Freischütz"	Weber
6.	FLORENTINE SERENADE The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Godard
7.	LARGO (First Time.) Violin Solo, Mr. J. HOFFMANN. The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Händel
8.	SELECTION, "The Gondoliers"	Sullivan
9.	OVERTURE, "Prince Pro Tem"	Thompson
10.	WALTZ, "Amour et Printemps"	Waldteufel
11.	GAVOTTE, "La Coquette"	Sudessi
12.	MARCH, "The Flag"	Ziehrer

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.

Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.

Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.

To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the

Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.

This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts.
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts.
ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 4, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 16.

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 4, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, from Suite	Lachner
2.	OVERTURE, "Le Roi d'Ys"	Lalo
3.	WALTZ, "Meerleuchten"	Ziehrer
4.	SELECTION, "Falka"	Chassaigne
5.	COLUMBIAN MARCH (Conducted by the composer)	Schulz
6.	"BLISSFUL DREAM"	Meyer-Helmund
7.	a. "ON TIPTOE" (First time.)	Hosmer
	b. MINUET The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Bulzoni
8.	SELECTION, "Faust"	Gounod
9.	OVERTURE, "Rienzi"	Wagner
10.	WALTZ, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
11.	"LA MOUSMÉ," Mazourka Japonaise (By request.)	Ganné
12.	MARCH, "Tabasco"	Chadwick

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.
Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢.

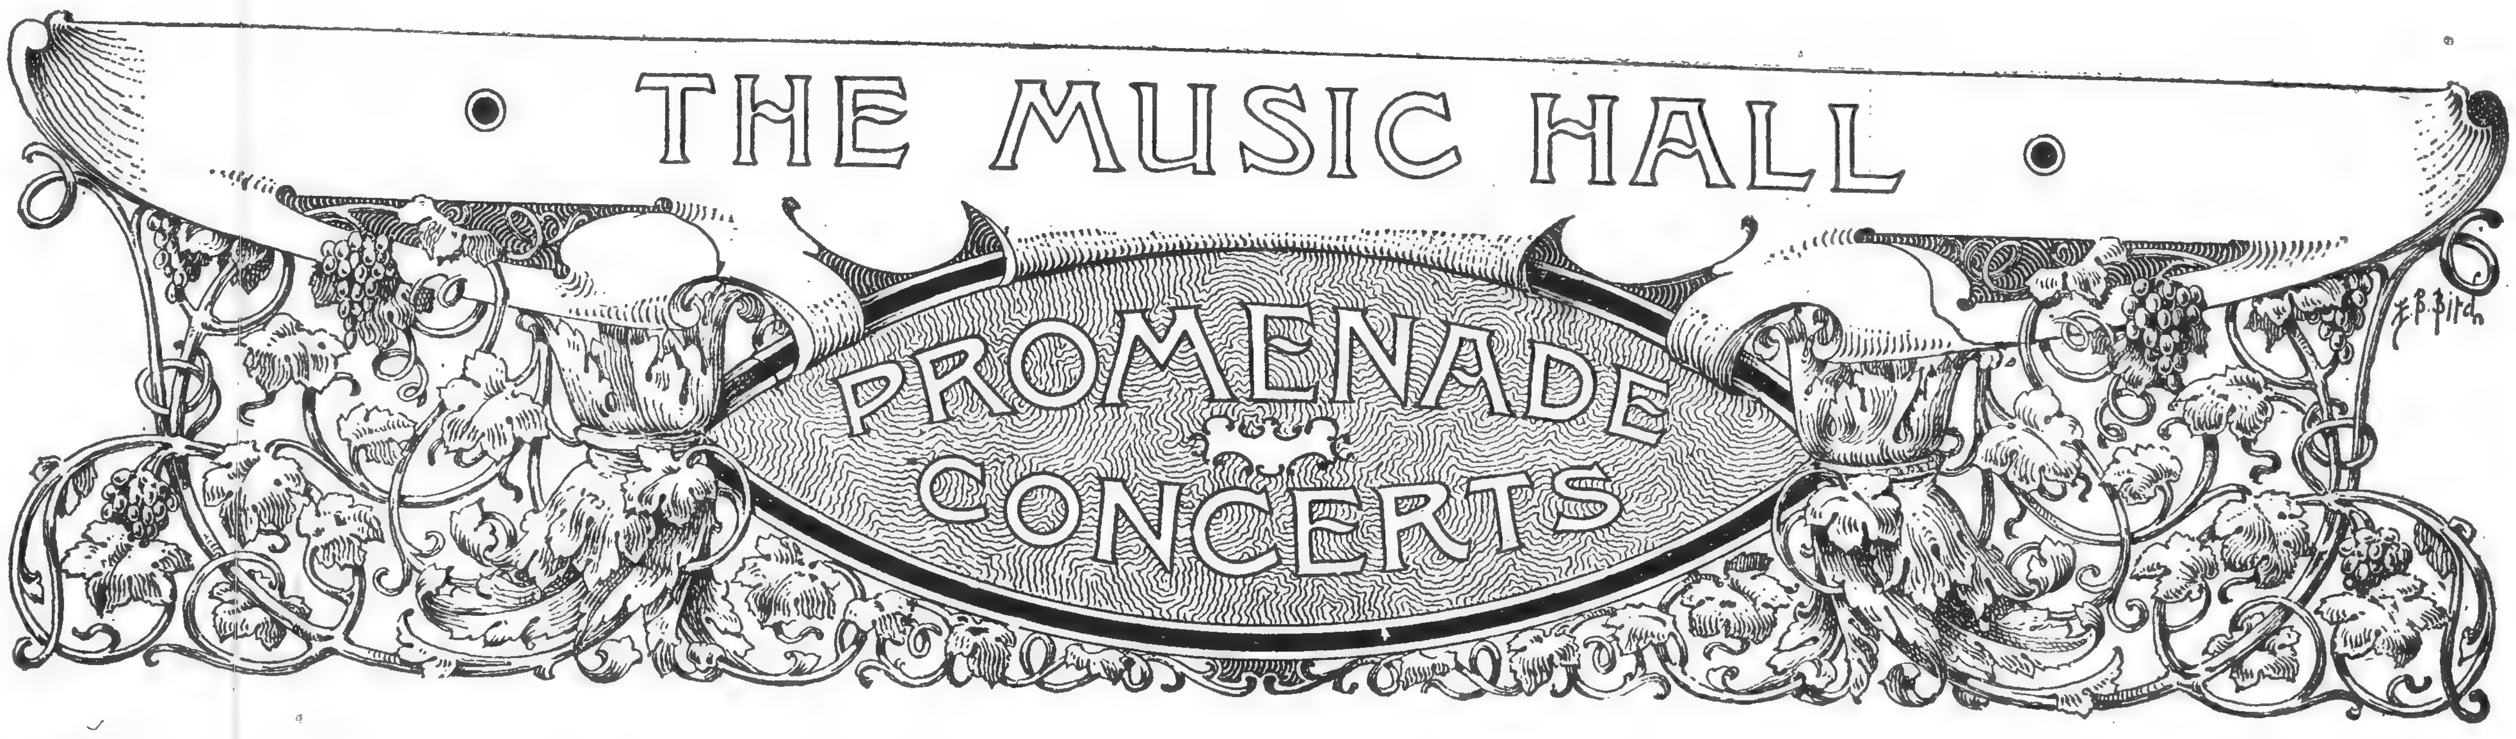
NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 17.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1	MARCH, "Kosciuszko"	Zach
2.	OVERTURE, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
3.	WALTZ, "Vienna Blood"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Rob Roy"	De Koven
5.	OVERTURE, "Semiramide"	Rossini
6.	INTERMEZZO, "Naila"	Délibes
7.	GAVOTTA (First Time.)	Bulzoni
8.	SELECTION, "Ruddygore"	Sullivan
9.	OVERTURE, "Zampa"	Herold
10.	WALTZ, "Kaiser"	Strauss
11.	POLKA, "Czarina"	Ganné
12.	MARCH, "The Flag"	Ziehrer

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[24]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 18.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON,
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Fort William Henry" . . . . Knecht
2. OVERTURE, "Fra Diavolo" . . . . Auber
3. WALTZ, "Dream of Love" . . . . Fahrbach
(First Time.)
4. SELECTION, "Cavalleria Rusticana" . . . . . Mascagni

5. OVERTURE, "Mignon" . . . . Thomas
6. "INVITATION TO DANCE" . . . . Weber
7. a. "FLIEGEN MINUET" . . . . Czibulka
(First Time.)
b. "ON TIPTOE" . . . . Hosmer
(By request.)
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Carmen" . . . . Bizet

9. OVERTURE, "Si j'étais Roi" . . . . Adam
10. WALTZ, "Marien" . . . . Bayer
(First time.)
11. POLKA, "Unparteiische Kritik" . . . . . . Strauss
12. MARCH, "Hochlands Klänge" . . . . . . Millöcker

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.
Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

Bunker Hill Lager
SOLD AT
THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢.

NORFOLK
CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts.
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts.
ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

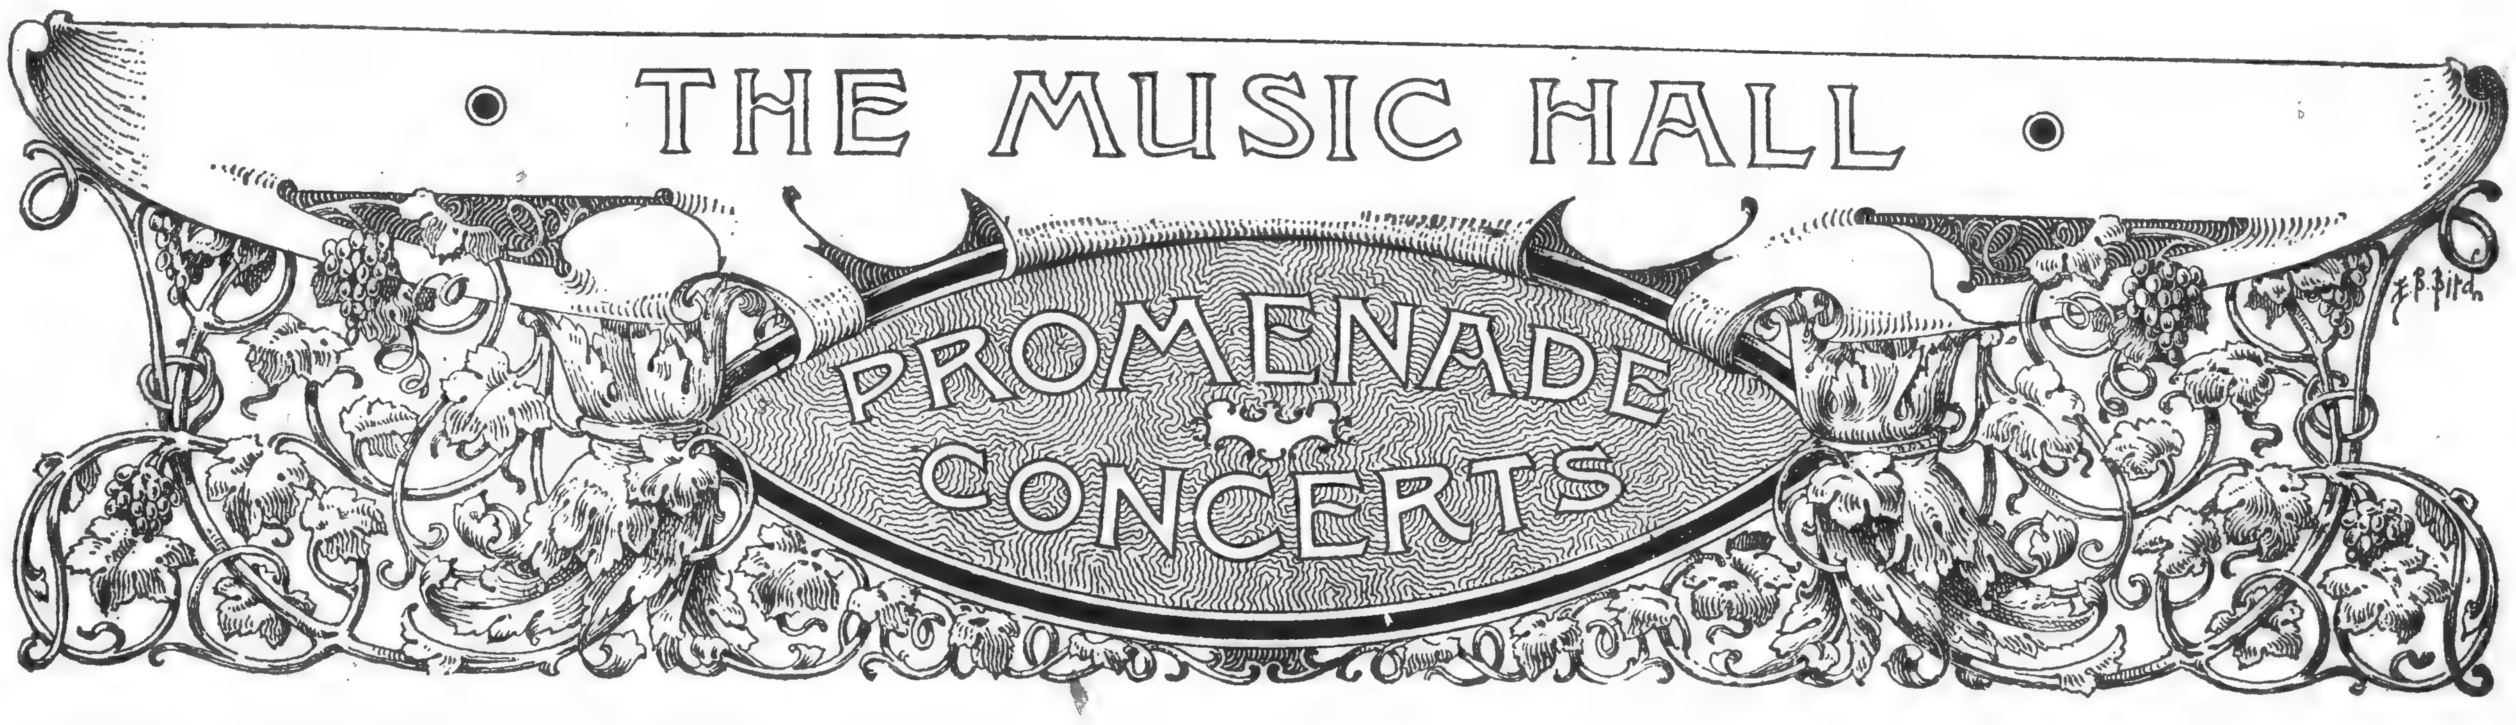
Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[25]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 19.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "The Liberty Bell" . . . . Sousa
2. OVERTURE, "Les Dragons de Villars" . . . . . Maillard
3. WALTZ, "Unsere Frauen" . . . . Fahrbach
(First time.)
4. SELECTION, "Rigoletto" . . . . Verdi

---

5. PATRIOTIC OVERTURE . . . . Schulz
(First time.)
(Conducted by the composer.)
6. FLORENTINE SERENADE . . . . Godard
(By request.)
7. "MOTO PERPETUO" (Musical Joke) . . . . . Strauss
8. SELECTION, "Poor Jonathan" . . . . . . Millöcker

---

9. OVERTURE, "Oberon" . . . . Weber
10. WALTZ, "Artist's Life" . . . . Strauss
11. POLKA, "Queen of my Heart" . . . . . . Strauss
(First Time.)
12. MARCH, "Exposition" . . . . Fahrbach

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL. B. HUNT. DEL.

NORFOLK
CABINET
Norfolk Co. Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[26]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 20.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated Lager Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL... Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Under the Double Eagle" . . . . . J. F. Wagner
(First Time.)
2. OVERTURE, "Banditenstreiche" . . . . . . Suppé
3. WALTZ, "Spirits of the Forest" . . . . Zach
(Conducted by the composer)
4. SELECTION, "Lucia di Lammermoor" . . . . . Donizetti

5. OVERTURE, "Raymond" . . . . A. Thomas
6. a. GAVOTTE from "The Royal Barber" . . . . Dennée
(First time.)
b. INTERMEZZO from the "Symphony Pittoresque" . . Baille
7. PRELUDE, "Lohengrin" . . . . Wagner
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Robin Hood" . . . . De Koven

9. OVERTURE, "Fledermaus" . . . . Strauss
10. WALTZ, "Grubenlichter" . . . . Zeller
11. POLKA, "Libelle" . . . . Strauss
12. MARCH, "Manhattan Beach" . . . . Sousa

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by F. C. BURNAND.
Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL. B. HUNT. DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts.
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

BLANK PAGE

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 10, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 21.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated Lager Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL... Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

MONDAY, JUNE 10, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	POLONAISE	Chopin
2.	OVERTURE, "Stradella"	Flotow
3.	WALTZ, "Wine, Woman, and Song"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Brigands"	Offenbach
5.	OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry"	Suppé
6.	BALLET MUSIC, "Faust"	Gounod
7.	a. INTERMEZZO, "I Pagliacci" b. GAVOTTA (By request.)	Leoncavallo Bulzoni
8.	SELECTION, "Fencing Master"	De Koven
9.	OVERTURE, "Tabasco"	Chadwick
10.	WALTZ, "Les Patineurs"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "Queen of my Heart"	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Liberty Bell"	Sousa

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL B. HUNT DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET

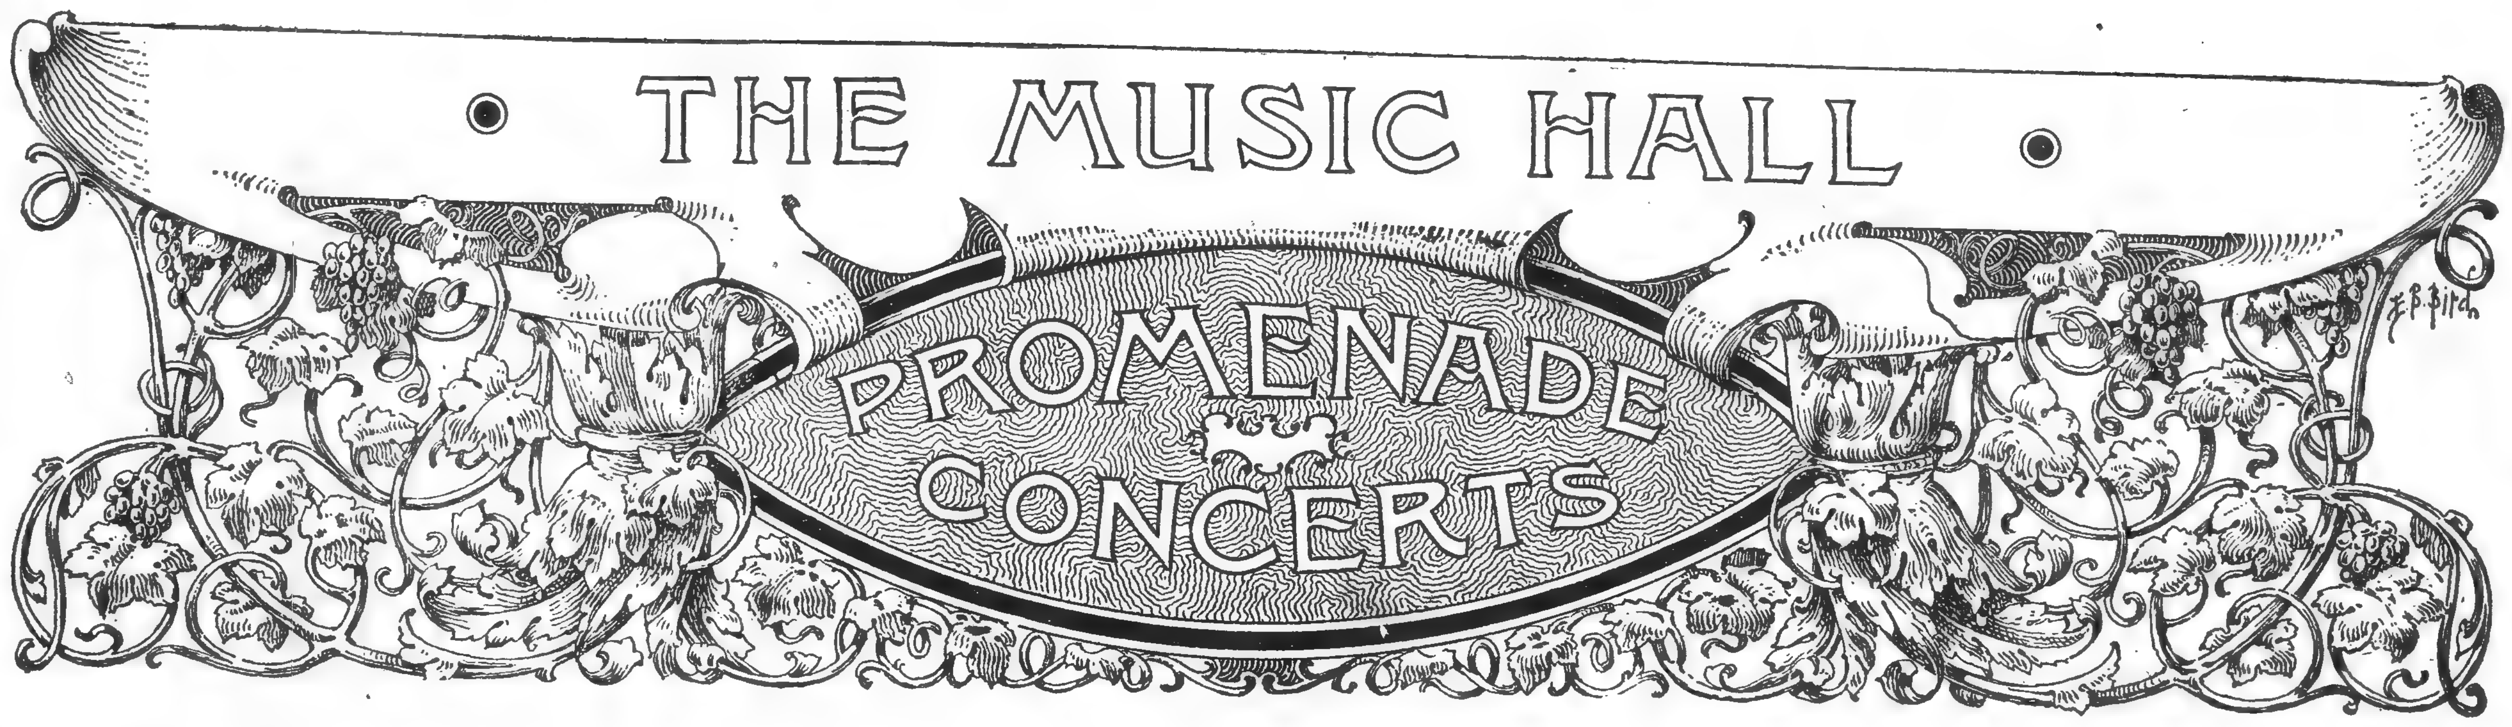
Norfolk Co. Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 22.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH from Suite	Lachner
2.	OVERTURE, "La Dame Blanche"	Boieldieu
3.	WALTZ, "La Serenade"	Metra
4.	SELECTION, "Traviata"	Verdi
5.	OVERTURE, "Poet and Peasant"	Suppé
6.	BALLET MUSIC, "Korrigan"	Widor
7.	SERENATA	Moszkowski
8.	SELECTION, "Princesse Trebizonde"	Offenbach
9.	PRELUDE, ACT III., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
10.	WALTZ, "Amour et Printemps"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "La Tzigane"	Ganné
12	MARCH, "Manhattan Beach"	Sousa

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL. B. HUNT. DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the

Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.

This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 23.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . . MUSIC . . . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Manhattan Beach" . . . . Sousa
2. OVERTURE, "Tannhäuser" . . . . Wagner
3. WALTZ, "Life of Joy" . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Trovatore" . . . . Verdi

---

5. OVERTURE, "Orpheus aux Enfers" . . . . . . Offenbach
6. BALLET MUSIC, "Sylvia" . . . . Délibes
7. a. "CRADLE SONG" . . . . Theo. Bendix
   b. "BUTTERFLY" . . . . Theo. Bendix
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Rob Roy" . . . . De Koven

---

9. OVERTURE, "In the Mountains" . . . . . . A. Foote
10. WALTZ, "Path of Flowers" . . . . Waldteufel
11. POLKA, "Beehive" . . . . Zach
12. MARCH, "Hoch Habsburg" (First time.) . . . . Kral

---

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

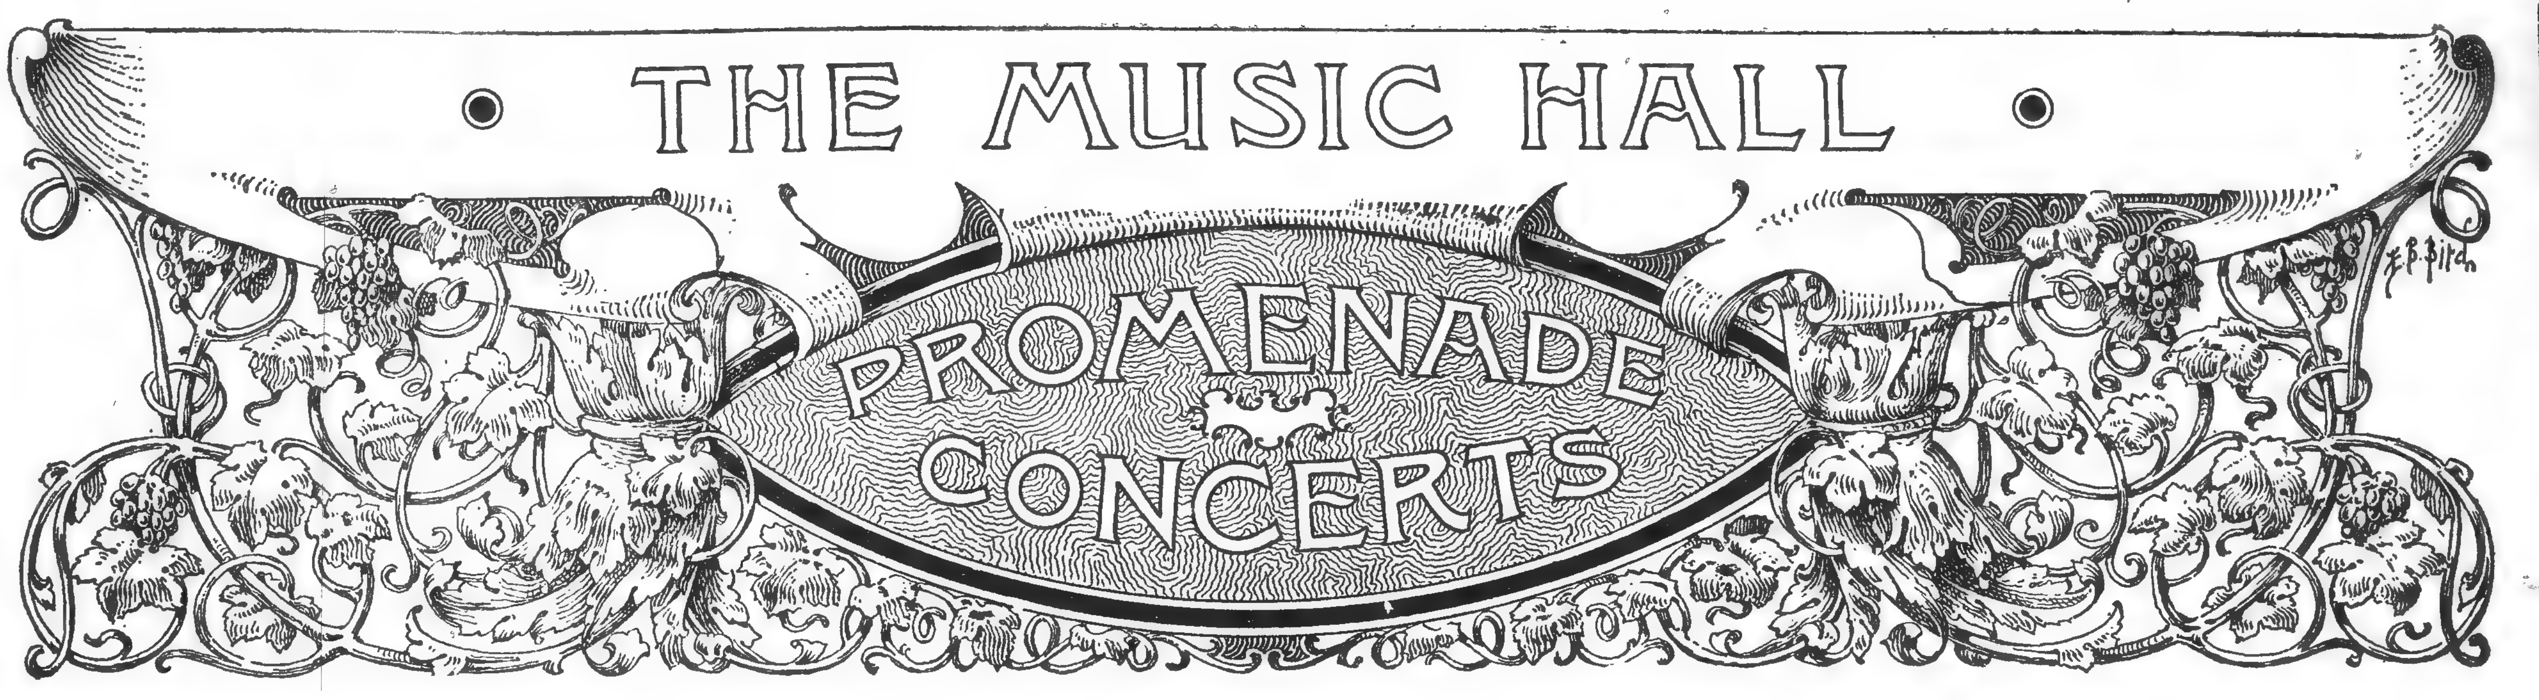
ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.



PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 24.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Under the Double Eagle"	J. F. Wagner
2.	OVERTURE, "Nabucodonosor"	Verd
3.	WALTZ, "Espana"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
5.	OVERTURE, "Martha"	Flotow
6.	"BAL MASQUÉ" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Mrs. H. H. A. Beach
7.	CAVATINA	Raff
8.	SELECTION, "Gondoliers"	Sullivan
9.	WALTZ, "Fin de Siècle" (Conducted by the composer.)	Knecht
10.	OVERTURE, "La Gazza Ladra"	Rossini
11.	POLKA, "Unparteiische Kritik"	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Washington Post"	Sousa

Tuesday, June 18 - - - - SULLIVAN NIGHT

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[32]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL. BOSTON, FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1895. SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 25.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Bonny Poland"	Strube
2.	OVERTURE, "Euryanthe"	Weber
3.	WALTZ, "Thousand and One Nights"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Faust"	Gounod
5.	OVERTURE, "Phèdre"	Massenet
6.	"GRACEFUL DANCE"	Sullivan
7.	"LA VILANELLA" (First Time.) Solo Violin, Mr. SCHNITZLER.	Allard
8.	SELECTION, "Erminie"	Jakobowski
9.	OVERTURE, "Masaniello"	Auber
10.	WALTZ, "Nid d'Amour"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "Coeur de Dame"	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Tzigane" (First Time.)	Lacome

The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

Tuesday, June 18 - - - - SULLIVAN NIGHT

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL·B·HUNT·DEL

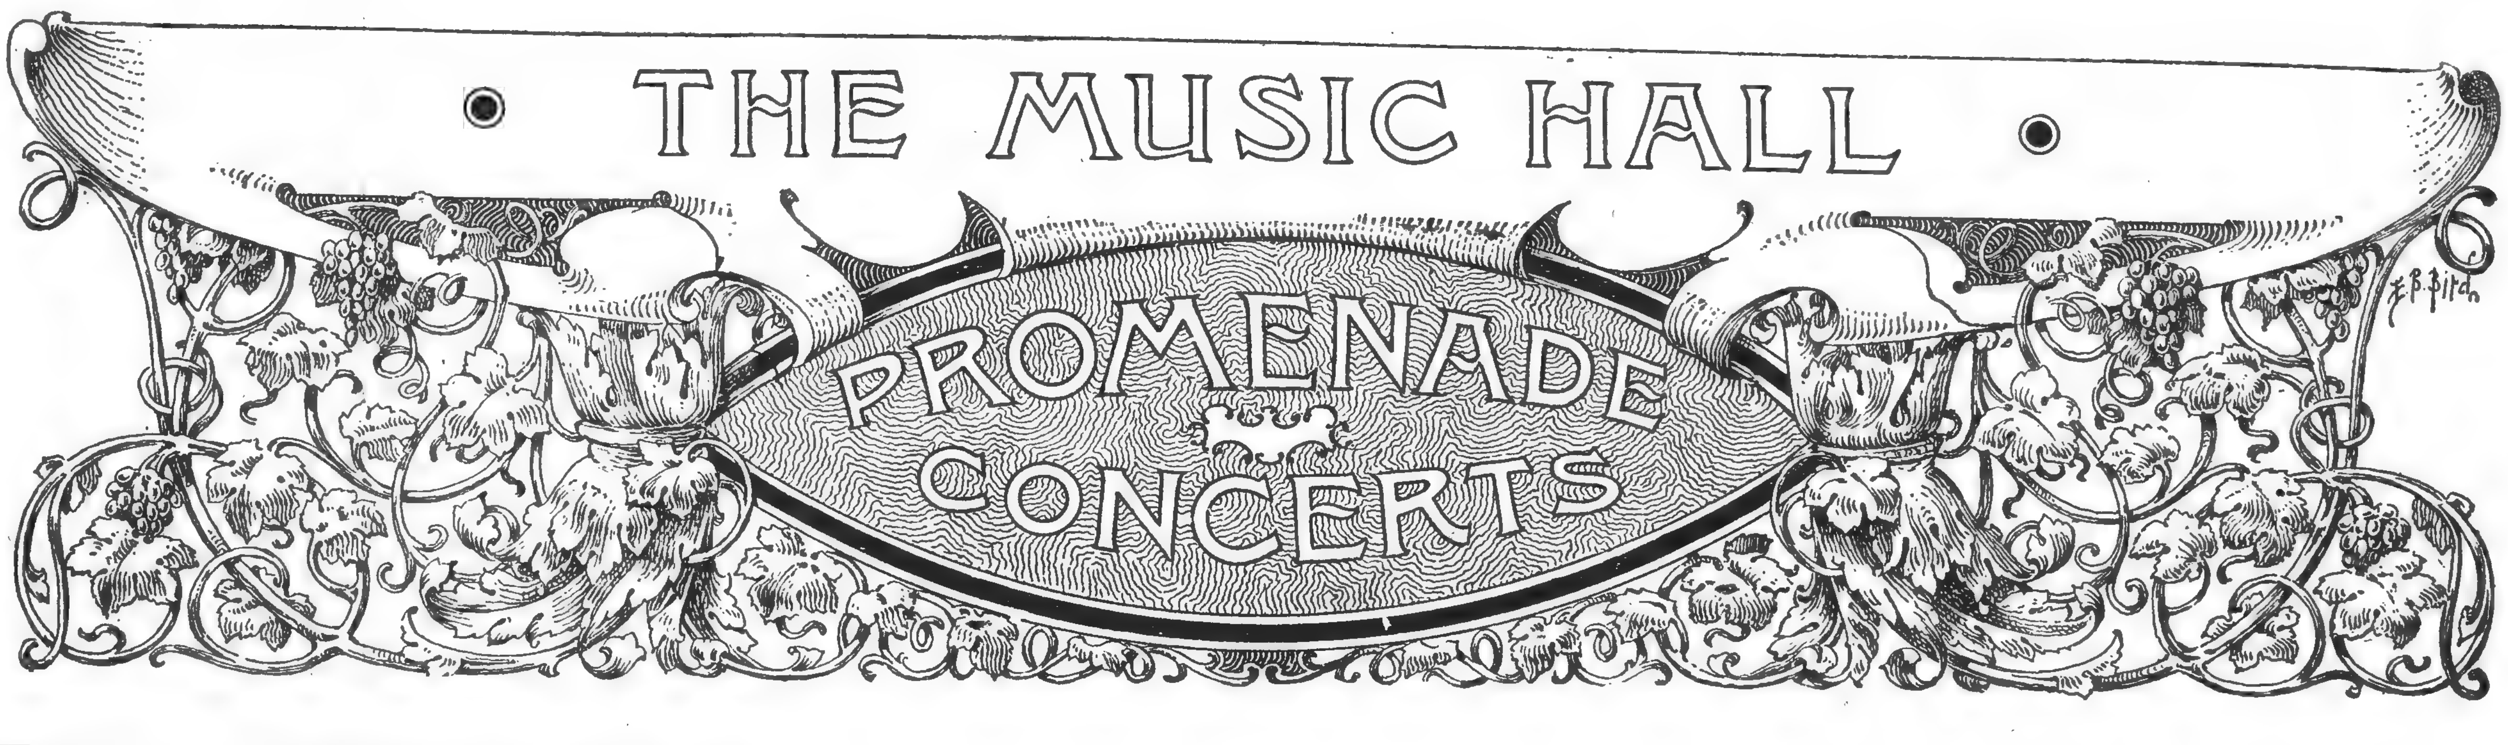
NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

WaldonSmith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 26.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated ✻ Lager Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Tannhäuser"	Wagner
2.	OVERTURE, "Mikado"	Sullivan
3.	WALTZ, "Près de Toi"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "Aïda"	Verdi
5.	OVERTURE, "William Tell"	Rossini
6.	"LA BALLERINE," Morceau de Salon	Gillet
7.	"HYMN TO ST. CECILIA" (First time.) The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Gounod
8.	SELECTION, "Carmen"	Bizet
9.	COLUMBIAN MARCH (By request)	Schulz
10.	WALTZ, "Boston" (Conducted by the composer.)	Pierre Muller
11.	POLKA GALOP, "Ideal Railway" (First Time.)	Knecht
12.	MARCH, "Home, Sweet Home"	Strube

Tuesday, June 18 - - - - SULLIVAN NIGHT

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.
Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.

To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL B. HUNT. DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the

Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.

This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

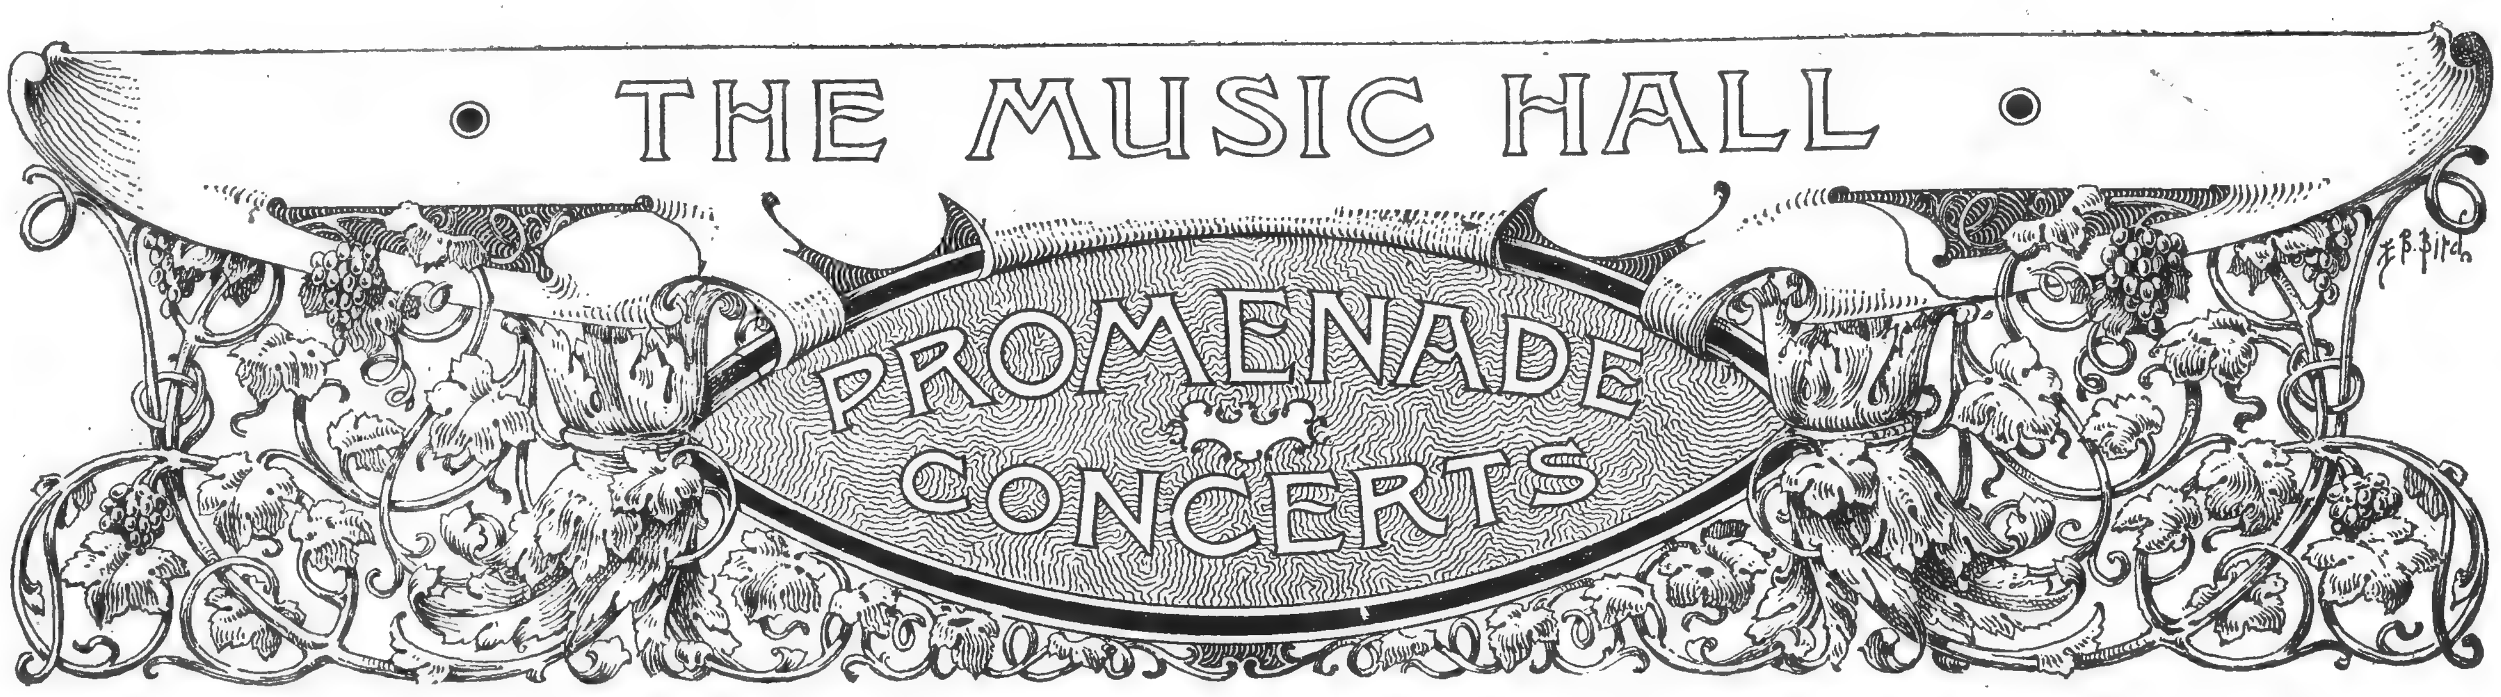
ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[34]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.



THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL. | BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 17, 1895. | SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 27.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

MONDAY, JUNE 17, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	SCHILLER MARCH (First time.)	Meyerbeer
2.	OVERTURE, "Marriage of Figaro"	Mozart
3.	WALTZ, "Promotionen"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Don Carlos" (First time.)	Verdi
5.	OVERTURE, "Rienzi"	Wagner
6.	BALLET MUSIC, "Feramors"	Rubinstein
7.	"BLISSFUL DREAM"	Meyer-Helmund
	The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8.	SELECTION, "Boccaccio"	Suppé
9.	OVERTURE, "Freischütz"	Weber
10.	WALTZ, "Path of Flowers"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "The Beautiful Bostonian" (First Time.)	Abloescher
12.	MARCH, "Tzigane"	Lacome

Tuesday, June 18 - - - - SULLIVAN NIGHT

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

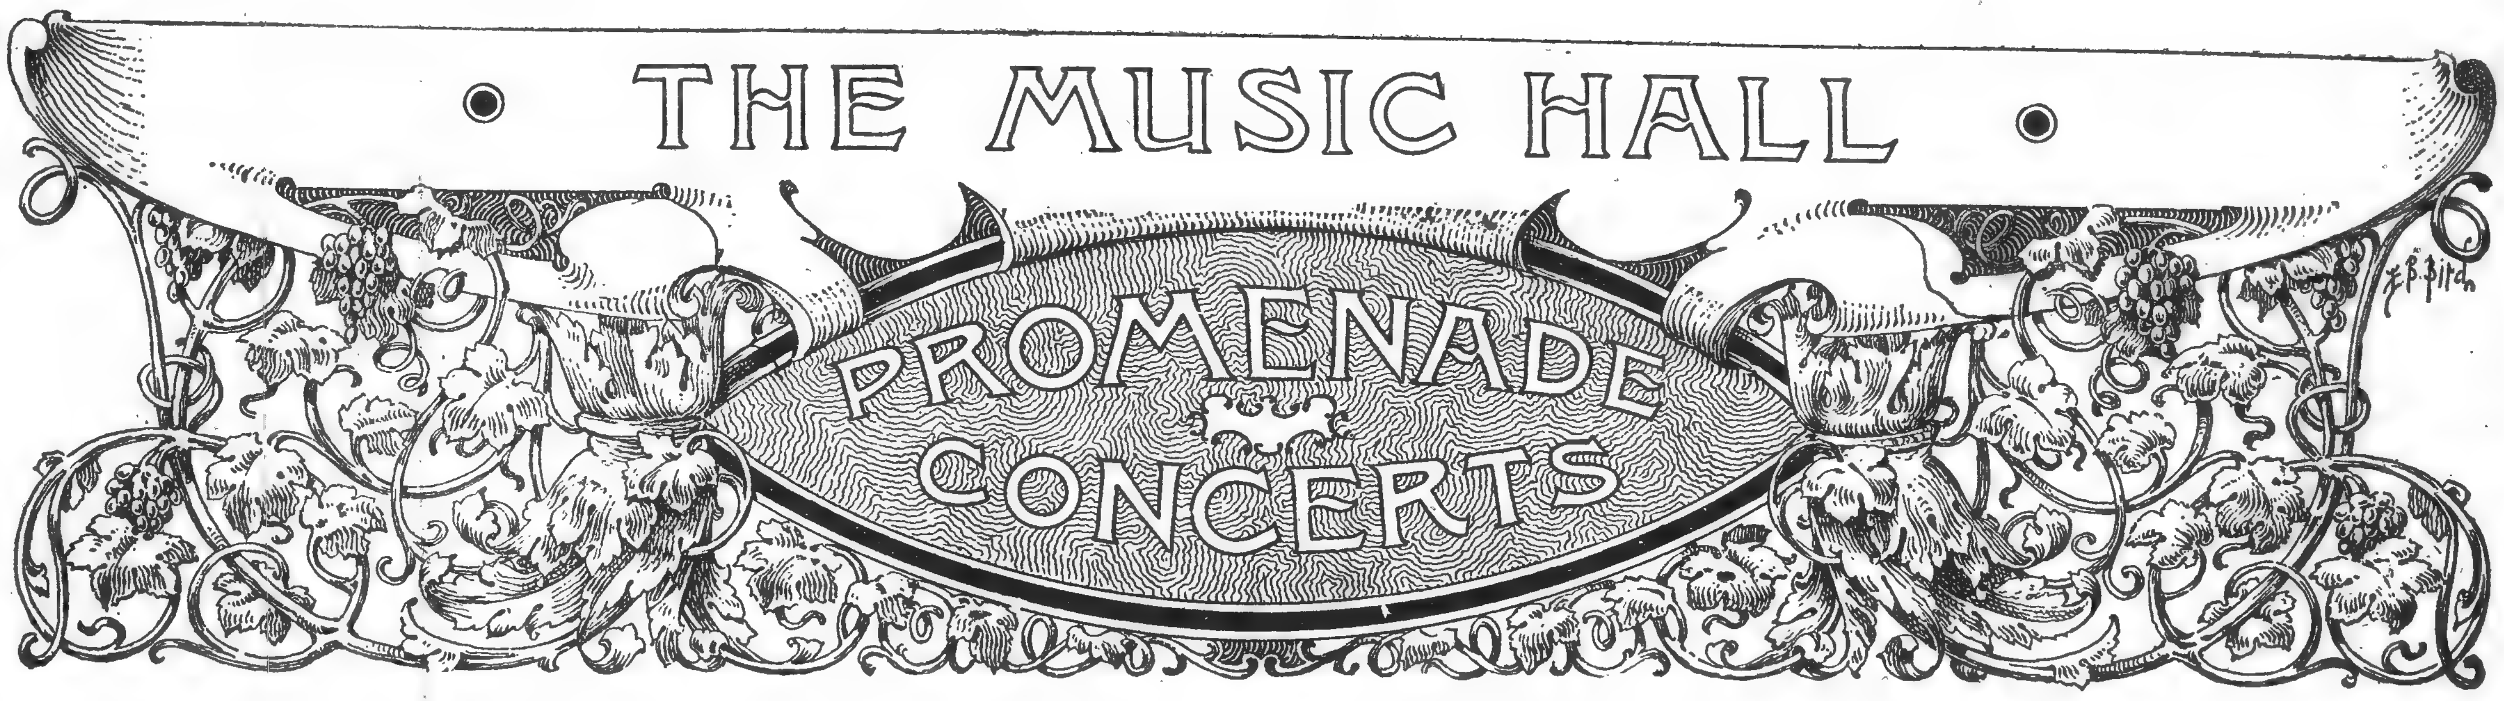
BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.



DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 18, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 28.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated * Lager Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL ...

Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 18, 1895.

SULLIVAN NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1. "WEDDING MARCH" . . . . Mendelssohn
2. OVERTURE, "Mikado" . . . . Sullivan
3. WALTZ, "Grubenlichter" . . . . Zeller
4. SELECTION, "Gondoliers" . . . . Sullivan

---

5. OVERTURE, "Iolanthe" . . . . Sullivan
6. "GRACEFUL DANCE" . . . . Sullivan
7. a. MINUET . . . . Bulzoni
   b. "ON TIPTOE" . . . . Hosmer

   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Ruddygore" . . . . Sullivan

---

9. OVERTURE, "Si j'étais Roi" . . . . Adam
10. WALTZ, "Cagliostro" . . . . Strauss
11. POLKA, "Ideal Railway" . . . . Knecht
12. MARCH, "Tabasco" . . . . Chadwick

Thursday, June 20 - - - Italian Composers' Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.

Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

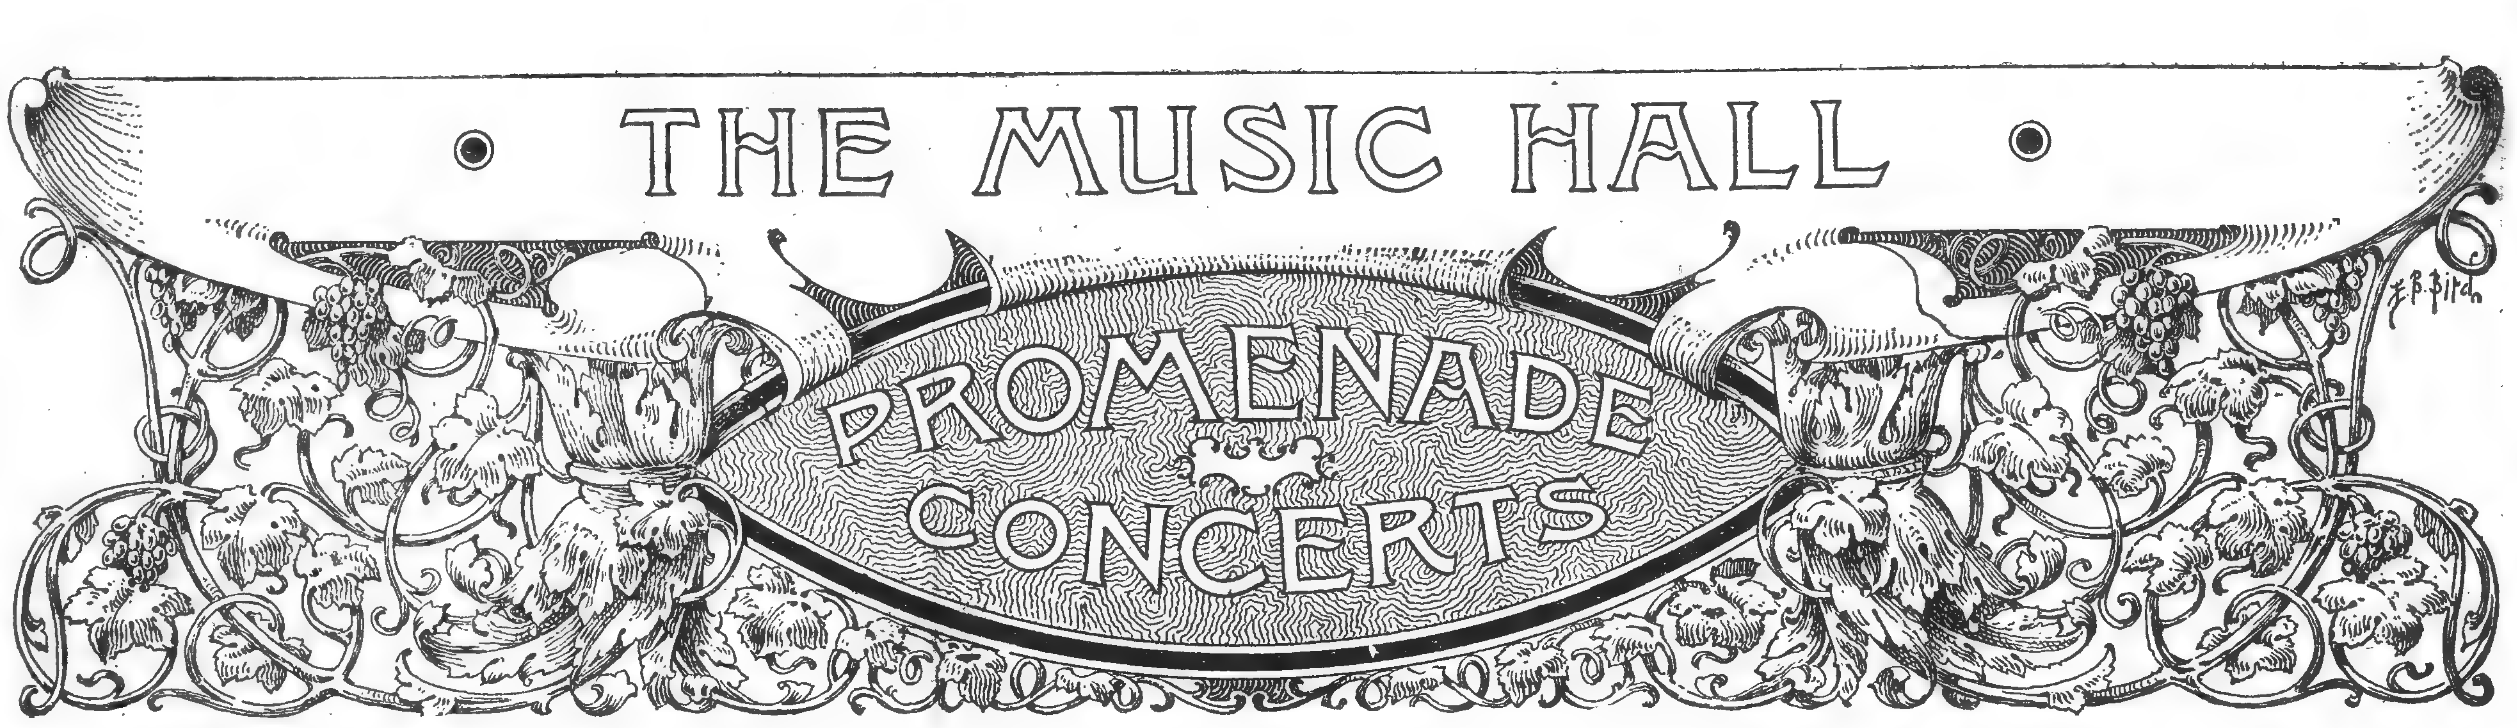
BUNKER HILL
LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK
CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARCUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 29.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Jonathan" . . . . Millöcker
2. OVERTURE, "Ruy Blas" . . . . Mendelssohn
3. WALTZ, "Dreams of Spring-time" . . . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Beggar Student" . . . . . . Millöcker

5. OVERTURE, "Lohengrin" . . . . Wagner
6. BALLET MUSIC, "Boabdil" . . . . . . Moszkowski
7. a. "SPANISH SERENADE" . . . . . . Eilenberg
   b. "TO YOU," Valse Serenade . . . . . . Czibulka
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Fencing Master" . . . . . . De Koven

9. OVERTURE, "Prince Pro Tem" . . . . . . Thompson
10. WALTZ, "Estudiantina" . . . . Waldteufel
11. POLKA, "La Mousmé," Mazourka Japonaise . . . . Ganné
12. MARCH, "Budapest" . . . . Kral

Thursday, June 20 - - - Italian Composers' Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.
Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARCUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 20, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 30.

THE . . . . MUSIC . . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 20, 1895.

ITALIAN COMPOSERS' NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	"CORONATION MARCH"	Meyerbeer
2.	OVERTURE, "Nabucodonosor"	Verdi
3.	WALTZ, "Serenade"	Metra
4.	SELECTION, "Lucia di Lammermoor"	Donizetti
5.	OVERTURE, "Semiramide"	Rossini
6.	INTERMEZZO, "I Pagliacci"	Leoncavallo
7.	a. MINUET	Bulzoni
	b. GAVOTTA The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Bulzoni
8.	SELECTION, "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
9.	OVERTURE on the Themes from "Stabat Mater" (First Time.)	Mercadante
10.	WALTZ, "Les Lagunes"	Strauss
11.	POLKA, "Militaire Française"	P. Muller
12.	"FORT WILLIAM HENRY MARCH"	Knecht

Monday, June 24 - - - Vienna Composers' Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.
Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.

To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE
CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL
LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK
CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

J. Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON, FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1895.
SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 31.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Austria"	Zach
2.	OVERTURE, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
3.	WALTZ, "Boston"	P. Muller
4.	SELECTION, "Rob Roy" (By request.)	De Koven
5.	OVERTURE, "1812"	Tschaikowsky
6.	FLORENTINE SERENADE	Godard
7.	INTRODUCTION TO "RATCLIFFE" (First time in America.)	Mascagni
8.	SELECTION, "Gioconda"	Ponchielli
9.	OVERTURE, "Fledermaus"	Strauss
10.	WALTZ, "Grubenlichter" (By request.)	Zeller
11.	POLKA, "Violanta"	Knecht
12.	MARCH, "Boccaccio"	Suppé

Monday, June 24 - - - Vienna Composers' Night
Wednesday, June 26 - - French Composers' Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL·B·HUNT·DEL

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

J. Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 32.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	"RAKOCZY MARCH"	Berlioz
2.	OVERTURE, "Le Roi d'Ys"	Lalo
3.	WALTZ, "Blue Danube"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Rigoletto"	Verdi
5.	OVERTURE, "King's Frolic"	B. E. Woolf
6.	SUITE, "Peer Gynt"	Grieg
7.	TEMPO DI MINUETTO (First Time.)	Menozzi
8.	SELECTION, "The Brigands"	Offenbach
9.	OVERTURE, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
10.	WALTZ, "Diesen Kuss der ganzen Welt"	Ziehrer
11.	POLKA, "Herzens Königin"	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Kosciuszko"	Zach

Monday, June 24 - - - Vienna Composers' Night
Wednesday, June 26 - - French Composers' Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.
Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE
CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

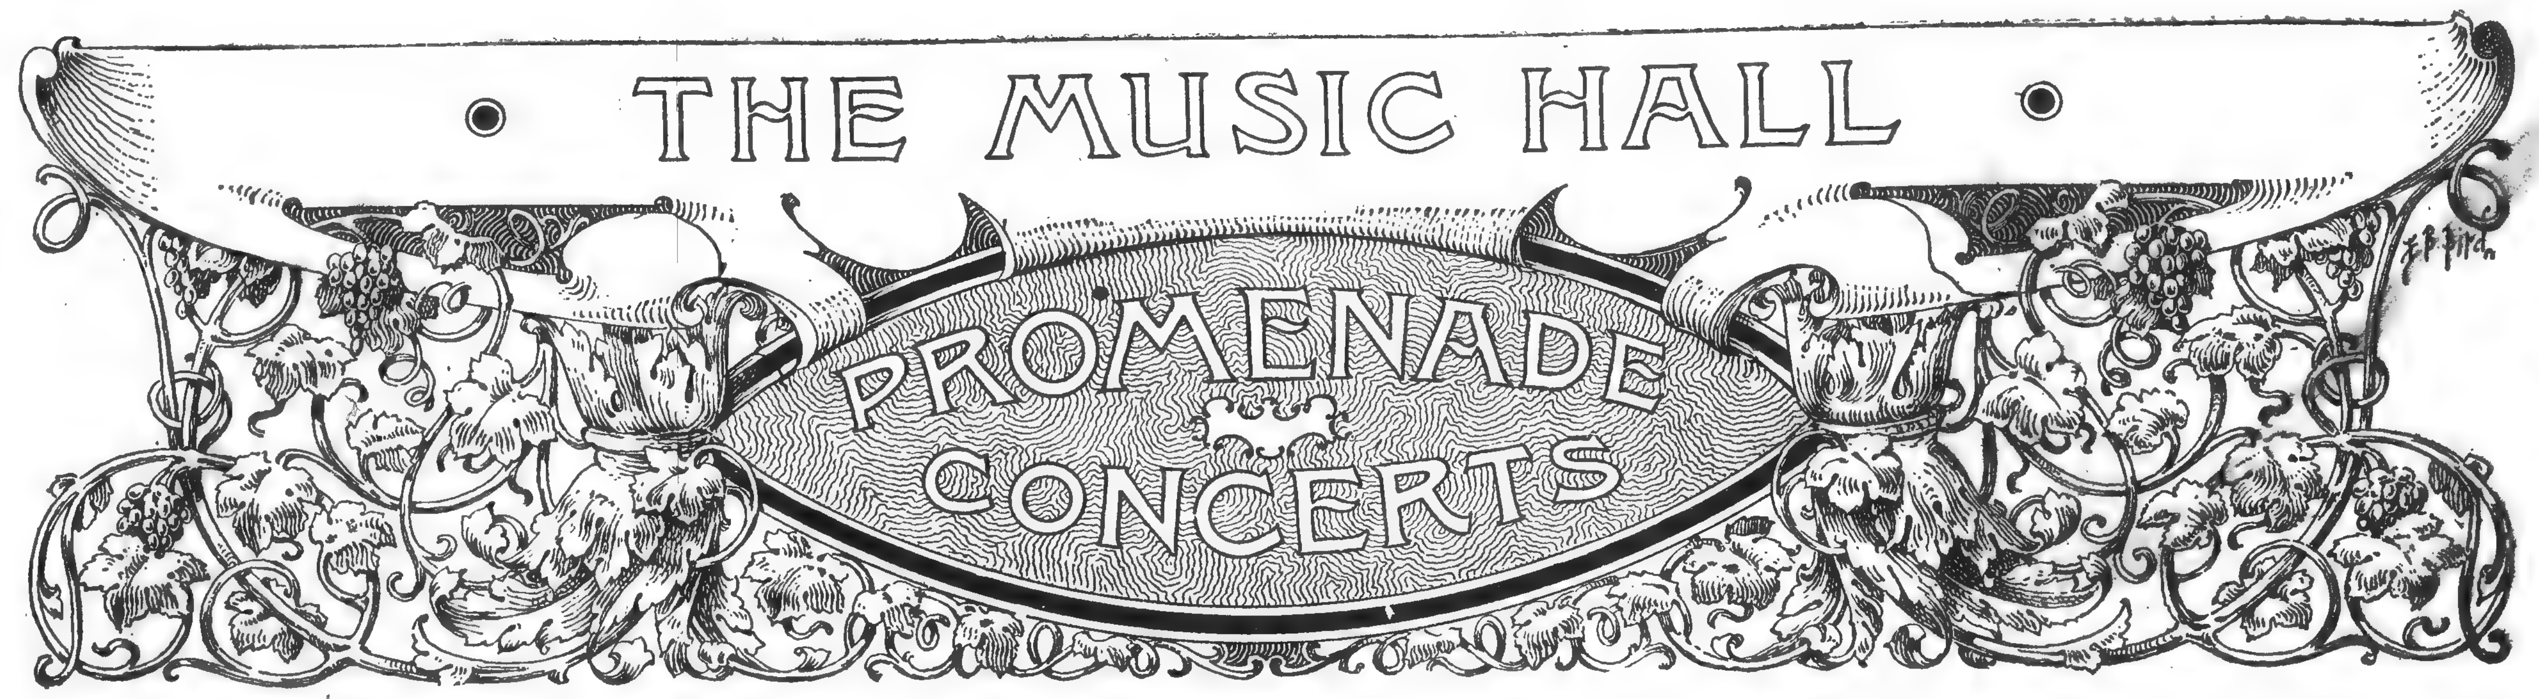
NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $3, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 24, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 33.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD, HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.

Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated * Lager Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

MONDAY, JUNE 24, 1895.
VIENNA COMPOSERS' NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	PERSIAN MARCH	Strauss
2.	OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry"	Suppé
3.	WALTZ, "Kaiser"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Fatinitza"	Suppé
5.	OVERTURE, "Banditenstreiche"	Suppé
6.	a. FLY MINUET	Czibulka
	b. "A TOI" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Czibulka
7.	FLORENTINE SERENADE	Godard
8.	SELECTION, "Merry War"	Strauss
9.	OVERTURE, "Poet and Peasant"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Pesther"	Lanner
11.	POLKA, "Les Fleurs"	Ziehrer
12.	MARCH, "Jonathan"	Millöcker

Wednesday, June 26 - - French Composers' Night
Friday, June 28 - - - - - - Wagner Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by F. C. BURNAND.
Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the

Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.

This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

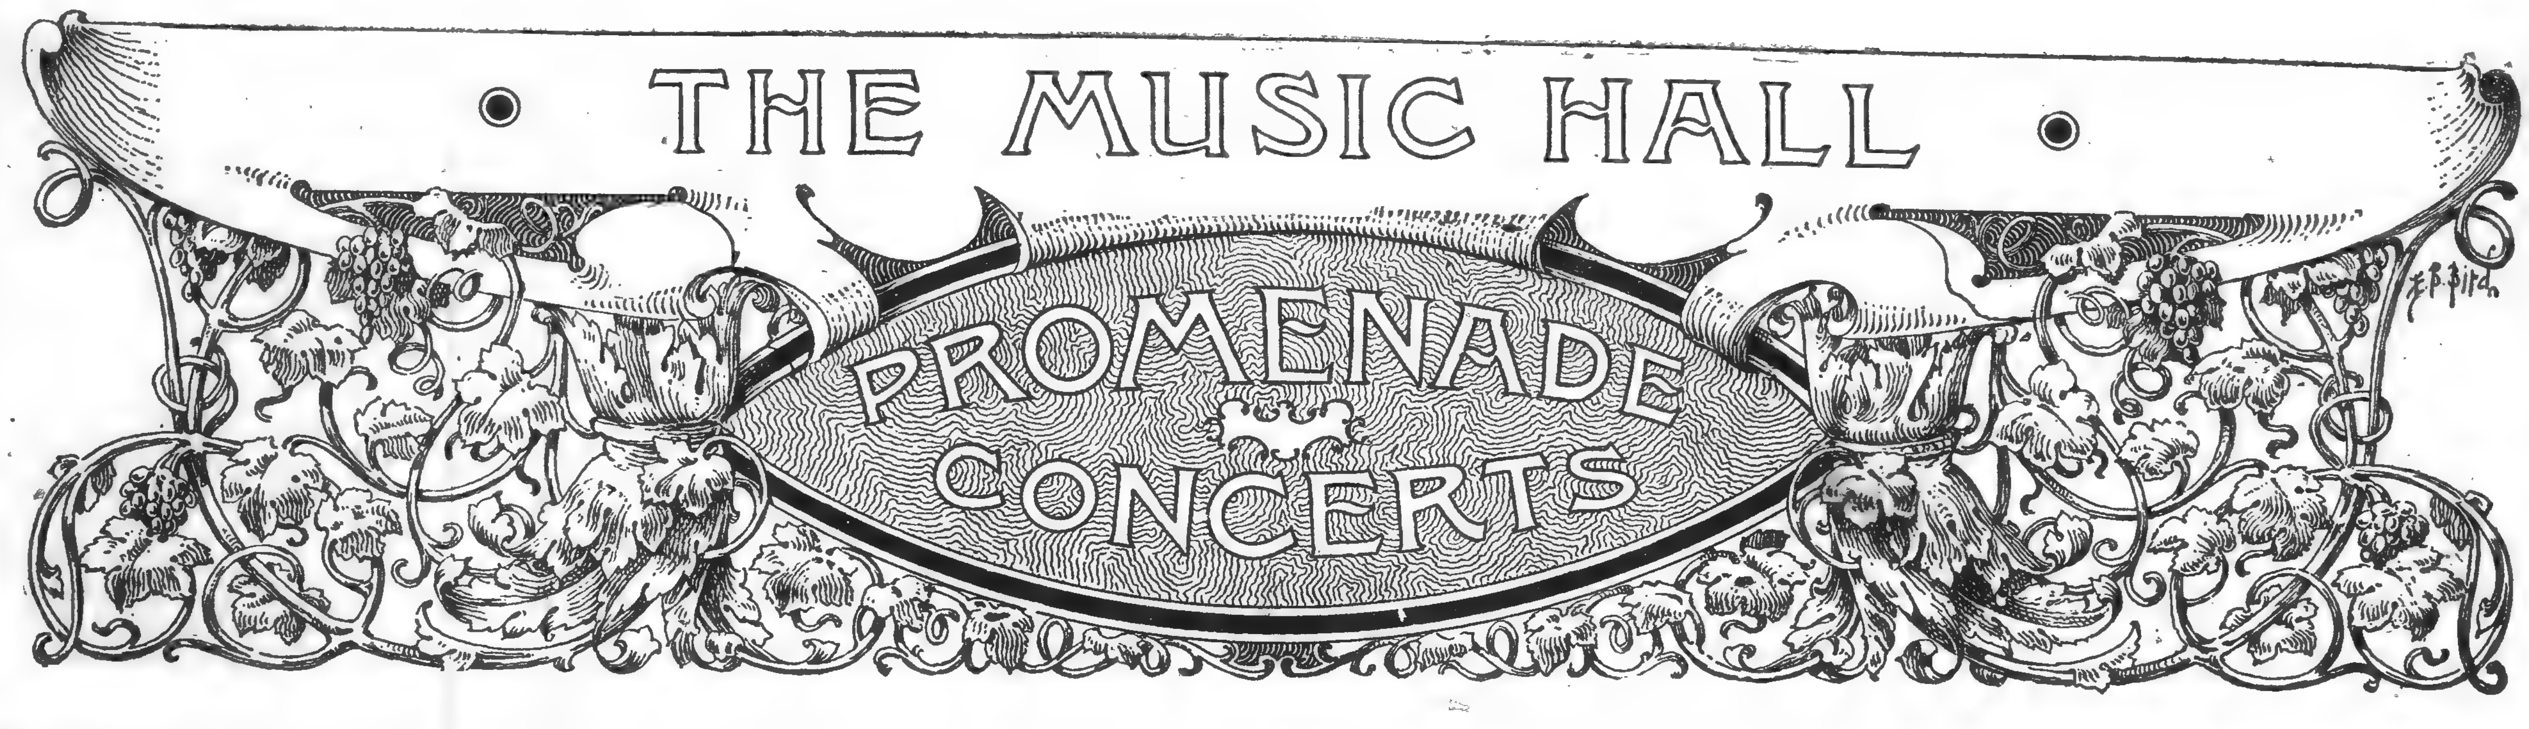
Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARCUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[41]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 25, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 34.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

...TENTH SEASON...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 25, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Under the Double Eagle" . . . . . . Wagner
2. OVERTURE, "Ruy Blas" . . . . . . Mendelssohn
3. WALTZ, "Nid d'Amour" . . . . . . Waldteufel
4. SELECTION, "Don Carlos" . . . . . . Verdi

---

5. OVERTURE, "Die Meistersinger" . . . . . . Wagner
6. ENTR'ACTE, "Mariposa" . . . . . . Diaz (First Time.)
7. a. "CLAIR DE LUNE" . . . . . . Gillet
   b. "FLIRTATION" . . . . . . Steck
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Robin Hood" . . . . . . De Koven

---

9. OVERTURE, "La Gazza Ladra" . . . . . . Rossini
10. WALTZ, "Artists' Life" . . . . . . Strauss
11. POLKA, "Blanche" . . . . . . Wadsworth (First time.)
12. MARCH, "Militaire" . . . . . . L'Orage (First time.)

Wednesday, June 26 - - French Composers' Night
Friday, June 28 - - - - - - Wagner Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.

Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE
CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL
LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK
CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer
for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts.
MARCUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE
CONCERTS
E. B. Bird

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 35.

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St.

As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated
*
Lager
Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE ... MUSIC ... HALL ... Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, 1895.

FRENCH COMPOSERS' NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
2.	OVERTURE, "Phèdre"	Massenet
3.	WALTZ, "Rêve de Jeunesse"	P. Muller
4.	SELECTION, "Carmen"	Bizet
5.	OVERTURE, "Raymond"	A. Thomas
6.	BALLET MUSIC, "Henry VIII."	Saint-Saëns
7.	ROMANZA, "Non e Ver" (Arranged for Cornet Solo by P. Muller.) Solo Cornet, P. MULLER.	T. Mattei

The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

8.	SELECTION, "Giroflé-Girofla"	Lecocq
9.	OVERTURE, "L'Enfant Prodigue"	Auber
10.	WALTZ, "Prequette"	Metra
11.	POLKA, "Enthusiasm"	Muller
12.	MARCH, "Tzigane"	Lacome

Friday, June 28 - - - - - - Wagner Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.
Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.

To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL
LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL. B. HUNT. DEL.

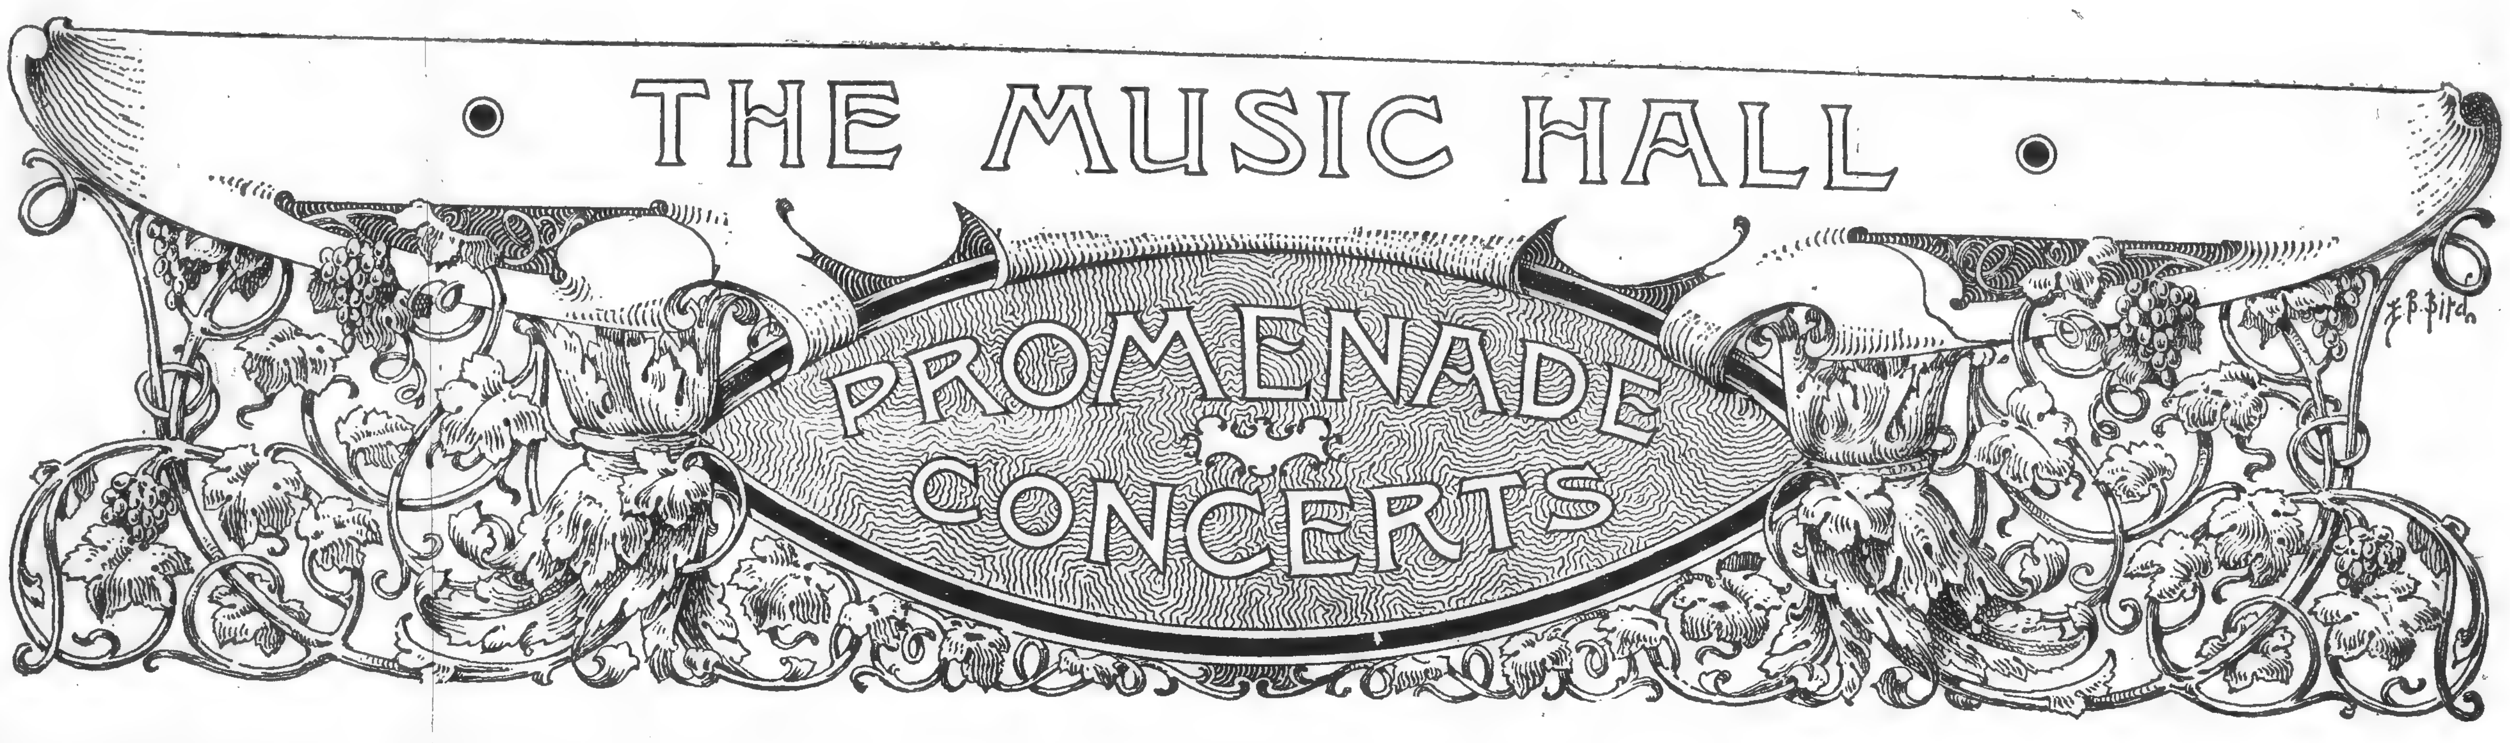
NORFOLK
CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts.
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts.
ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[43]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRADAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 36.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	WEDDING MARCH	Mendelssohn
2.	OVERTURE, "Chimes of Normandy"	Planquette
3.	WALTZ, "Wine, Woman, and Song"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Favorita"	Donizetti
5.	OVERTURE, "Oberon"	Weber
6.	"DANSE MACABRE"	Saint-Saëns
7.	a. "TRAEUMEREI"	Schumann
	b. FUNERAL MARCH OF A MARIONETTE The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Gounod
8.	SELECTION, "Gondoliers"	Sullivan
9.	OVERTURE on the Themes of "Stabat Mater"	Mercadante
10.	WALTZ, "Les Patineurs"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "Ideal Railway"	Knecht
12.	MARCH, "Hochlands Klänge"	Millöcker

Friday, June 28 - - - - - - - Wagner Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL B. HUNT DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[44]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 37.

THE ... MUSIC ... HALL ... Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1895.
WAGNER NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Tannhäuser"	Wagner
2.	OVERTURE, "Rienzi"	Wagner
3.	WALTZ, "Waves of the Danube"	Ivanovich
4.	"RIDE OF THE WALKYRIES"	Wagner
5.	PRELUDE, "Lohengrin" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Wagner
6.	"FIRE CHARM" from "Die Götterdämmerung"	Wagner
7.	AIR, "Louis XIII."	Ghys
8.	SELECTION, "Erminie"	Jakobowski
9.	OVERTURE, "Tannhäuser"	Wagner
10.	WALTZ, "New Vienna"	Strauss
11.	POLKA, "Enthusiasm"	P. Muller
12.	MARCH, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

Tuesday, July 2 - - - - - Comic Opera Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated Lager Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S

P.B. ALE

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER

Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the

Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.

This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 38.

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Coronation" . . . . Meyerbeer
2. OVERTURE, "Zampa" . . . . Herold
3. WALTZ, "Promotionen" . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Il Trovatore" . . . . Verdi

. OVERTURE, "Orpheus aux Enfers" . . . . . . Offenbach
6. ENTR'ACTE, "Mariposa" . . . . Diaz
(By request.)
7. "BLISSFUL DREAM" . . . . Meyer-Helmund
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Rob Roy" . . . . De Koven

9. OVERTURE, "1812" . . . . Tschaikowsky
10. WALTZ, "Espana" . . . . Waldteufel
11. POLKA, "Unparteische Kritik" . . . . Strauss
12. "Hasty Pudding Club Centennial March" . . . . . Purdon

Tuesday, July 2 - - - - - Comic Opera Night
Wednesday, July 3 - - American Composers' Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the

Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.

This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON, MONDAY, JULY 1, 1895.
SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 39.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

MONDAY, JULY 1, 1895.

PROGRAMME.

1.	POLONAISE	Chopin
2.	OVERTURE, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
3.	WALTZ, "Path of Flowers"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "Lucia di Lammermoor"	Donizetti
5.	OVERTURE, "Martha"	Flotow
6.	"LA VILANELLA" Violin Solo, Mr. SCHNITZLER.	Alard
7.	PRELUDE, "Ratcliffe"	Mascagni
8.	SELECTION, "The Brigands"	Offenbach
9.	OVERTURE, "Sphinx"	Thompson
10.	WALTZ, "Thousand and One Nights"	Strauss
11.	POLKA, "Blanche"	Wadsworth
12.	MARCH, "Excelsior, Jr."	Tracy

The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

Tuesday, July 2 - - - - - Comic Opera Night
Wednesday, July 3 - - American Composers' Night
Thursday, July 4 - - - - - - Patriotic Music

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARCUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[47]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JULY 2, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 40.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

TUESDAY, JULY 2, 1895.
COMIC OPERA NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Poor Jonathan"	Millöcker
2.	OVERTURE, "Mikado"	Sullivan
3.	WALTZ, "Vienna" (Conducted by the composer)	Eugene Grünberg
4.	SELECTION, "Fencing Master"	De Koven
5.	OVERTURE, "Fledermaus"	Strauss
6.	SELECTION, "Brigands"	Offenbach
7.	"GRACEFUL DANCE"	Sullivan
8.	SELECTION, "Beggar Student"	Millöcker
9.	OVERTURE, "Sphinx"	Thompson
10.	SELECTION, "Ruddygore"	Sullivan
11.	WALTZ, "Les Patineurs"	Waldteufel
12.	MARCH, "Tabasco"	Chadwick

Wednesday, July 3	American Composers' Night
Thursday, July 4	Patriotic Music
Friday, July 5	Request Night

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,

BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.

The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P. B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE
CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL B. HUNT. DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARCUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[48]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1895.
SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 41.

For 72 Years
CHICKERING PIANOS
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer
Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
7 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL ... Promenade Concerts

... TENTH SEASON ...

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1895.
AMERICAN COMPOSERS' NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Hasty Pudding Club Centennial"	Purdon
2.	OVERTURE, "King's Frolic"	Woolf
3.	POLKA, "Caractéristique"	Pearlie
4.	SUITE, "Spirits of the Forest"	MacDowell
5.	OVERTURE, "Prince Pro Tem"	Thompson
6.	a. "CRADLE SONG"	Bendix
	b. "BUTTERFLIES" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Bendix
7.	"ON TIPTOE"	Hosmer
8.	SELECTION, "Tabasco"	Chadwick
9.	SELECTION, "Rob Roy"	De Koven
10.	WALTZ, "Doctrinen"	Strauss
11.	POLKA, "Blanche"	Wadsworth
12.	MARCH, "Excelsior, Jr."	Tracy

Thursday, July 4 - - - - - - Patriotic Music
Friday, July 5 - - - - - - Request Night
Saturday, July 6, Closing Night and Grand Complimentary Testimonial to Sig. A. de Novellis

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

STABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARCUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
E. B. Bird

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON. Vol. X. No. 42.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1895.

PATRIOTIC MUSIC.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Walküre"	Sontag
2.	OVERTURE, "Jubel"	Weber
3.	WALTZ, "Espana"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "Obispah"	Bendix
5.	OVERTURE, "Galatea"	Suppé
6.	SERENADE, "Mandolin"	Eilenberg
7.	"HYMN TO ST. CECILIA" Solo Violin, Mr. SCHNITZLER. The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Gounod
8.	SELECTION, "Lucia di Lammermoor"	Donizetti
9.	OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Violets"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "Woman's Heart"	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Manhattan Beach"	Sousa

Friday, July 5 - - - - - - Request Night

Saturday, July 6, Closing Night and Grand Complimentary Testimonial to Sig. A. de Novellis

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents. Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL B. HUNT, DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts. TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
F. B. Birch

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 43.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD

Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated
Lager
Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1895.

REQUEST NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	WEDDING MARCH	Mendelssohn
2.	OVERTURE, "Festival"	E. Severn, Jr.
3.	WALTZ, "Harlequin en Voyage" (Conducted by the composer.)	Zach
4.	SELECTION, "Faust"	Gounod
5.	OVERTURE, "Le Roi d'Ys"	Lalo
6.	a. INTERMEZZO from "Ratcliffe" (First time.)	Mascagni
	b. PARAPHRASE, "Loreley" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Nesvadba
7.	LARGO Solo Violin, Mr. SCHNITZLER.	Händel
8.	SELECTION, "Robin Hood"	De Koven
9.	OVERTURE, "La Gazza Ladra"	Rossini
10.	WALTZ, "Path of Flowers"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "Tout à la Joie"	Fahrbach
12.	MARCH, "Walküre"	Sontag

Saturday, July 6, Closing Night and Grand Complimentary Testimonial to Sig. A. de Novellis

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B.
ALE
SOLD AT THESE
CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL
LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL. B. HUNT. DEL.

NORFOLK
CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets
or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.;
Telephone, Haymarket 254,
Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
TRY IT, AND YOU WILL ORDER.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CICARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts.
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."

Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $5.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[51]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
F.B. Bird

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1895.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. X. No. 44.

For 72 Years

CHICKERING PIANOS

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD,
HAVE STOOD
Without a Peer

Chickering & Sons,
791 Tremont Street,
BOSTON.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
*
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . .
MUSIC . .
HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

. . . TENTH SEASON . . .

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Sig. A. de NOVELLIS, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1895.

Closing Night and
Grand Complimentary Testimonial to Sig. A. de Novellis.

PROGRAMME.

1. POLONAISE . . . . Liszt
2. OVERTURE, "Rienzi" . . . . Wagner
3. WALTZ, "L'Amour et Printemps" . . . . Waldteufel
4. SELECTION, "Aïda" . . . . Verdi

5. OVERTURE, "William Tell" . . . . Rossini
6. FANTASIA CAPRICCIO for Flute . . . . Calliazie
Flute Solo, Mons. Charles Mole.
7. a. MINUET . . . . Bulzoni
b. "BLISSFUL DREAM" . . . . Meyer-Helmund
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. SELECTION, "Carmen" . . . . Bizet

9. WALTZ, "Graziella" . . . . Knecht
(First time.)
Dedicated to Sig. A. de Novellis.
(Conducted by the composer.)
10. OVERTURE, "Tannhäuser" . . . . Wagner
11. WALTZ, "Grubenlichter" . . . . Zeller
12. HUNGARIAN MARCH from "Damnation of Faust" . . Berlioz

The Great Success of the London Comic Opera Season,
THE NEW OPERA,
THE CHIEFTAIN.
Libretto by
F. C. BURNAND.
Music by
ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
Vocal Score, $2.00. Pianoforte Score, $1.00. Libretto, 25 cents.
Selections for the Pianoforte, Violin and Piano, and Dance Music published separately.
To be obtained from the leading dealers and the publishers,
BOOSEY & CO.,
9 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.
The above opera will be performed in this country for the first time in September.

The Liszt Organ used at these concerts is from the Mason & Hamlin Company.

HAT-RACKS MAY BE FOUND UNDER EACH CHAIR.

VAN NOSTRAND'S
P.B. ALE
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS
PINTS 20¢

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL B. HUNY. DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer
Boston Eng. Co.

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
Put up in neat and attractive style. Order from your grocer or direct from the
Norfolk Brewery,
Cor. Cedar and Pynchon Streets or Telephone No. 56, Roxbury.
City Office, 69 Blackstone St.; Telephone, Haymarket 254, Boston.
This beer is sold at the Promenade Concerts.
Try it, and you will order.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S LA MARINELA, KEY WEST CIGARS, 15 cts., 2 for 25 cts. ARE SOLD AT THE "POPS."
MARGUERITE, CONCHAS, ... 10 cts., 3 for 25 cts.

J. Waldon Smith PHOTOGRAPHER. Finest and most popular Studios in New England. 164 TREMONT ST., near Mason St. | As a special "pop" advertisement, to any one bringing us this slip, we will make one dozen of our superior cabinets for $2, regular price $6.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
F. B. Bird

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON, MONDAY, MAY 11, 1896.
SUMMER SEASON. Vol. XI. No. 1.

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 568th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

MONDAY, MAY 11.

PROGRAMME.

1. POLONAISE in E . . . . Liszt
2. OVERTURE, "Merry Wives of Windsor" . . . . Nicolai
3. WALTZ, "Freut euch des Lebens" . . . . . Joh. Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Aïda" . . . . Verdi

5. SCENES PITTORESQUES . . . . Massenet
   - a. March.
   - b. Air de Ballet.
   - c. Angelus.
   - d. Fête Bohème.
6. NARCISSUS . . . . Ethelbert Nevin
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. ADAGIO AND GAVOTTE (For String Orchestra) . . . Bach
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. HUNGARIAN RHAPSODY in F . . . . Liszt

9. OVERTURE, "Si j'étais Roi" . . . . Adam
10. WALTZ, "Grubenlichter" . . . . Zeller
11. MAZOURKA, "La Mousmé" . . . . Gane
12. MARCH, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile" Victor Herbert

(First Time.)

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100
TO ALL ALIKE
Hartfords, $80, $60, $50
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated ✻ Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL·B·HUNT·DEL

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Co.
Lager Beer
Boston Phot. Co.

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

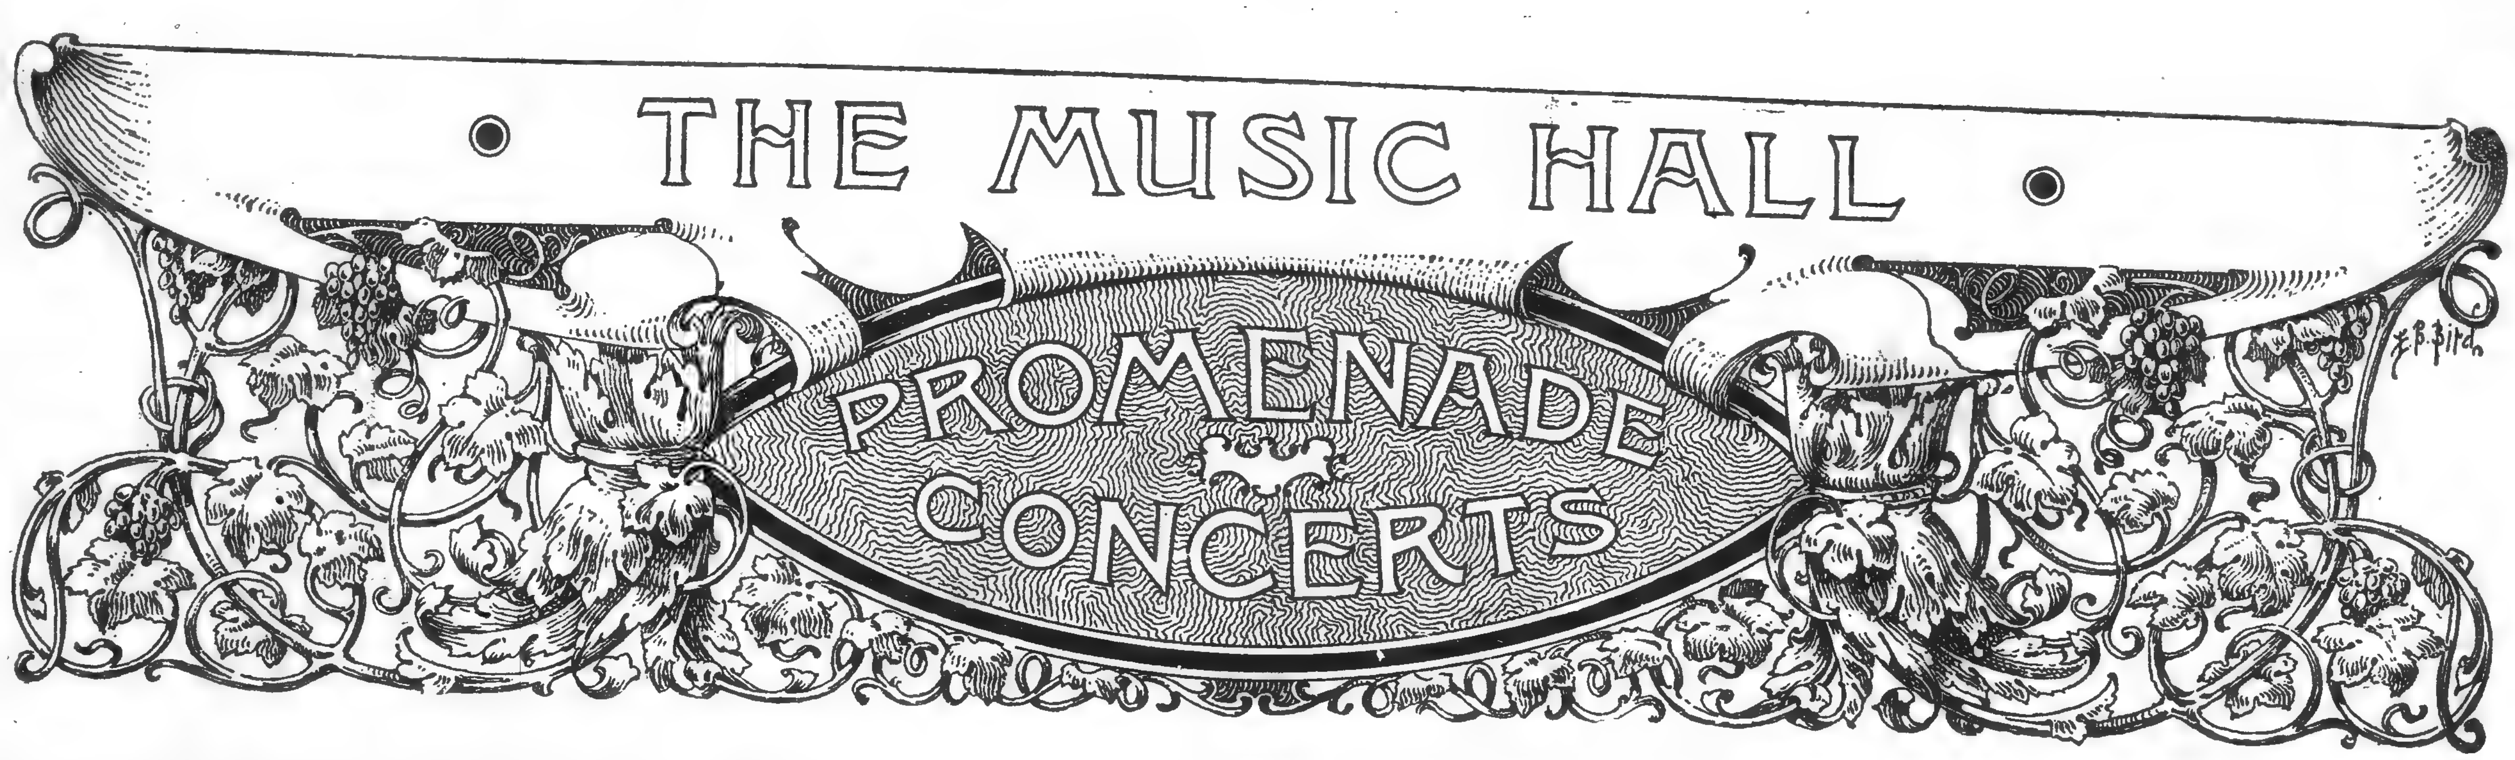
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 2.

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 569th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

TUESDAY, MAY 12.

PROGRAMME.

1.	CORONATION MARCH from "Le Prophète"	Meyerbeer
2.	OVERTURE, "Raymond"	A. Thomas
3.	WALTZ, "Trau, Schau, Wein" (First Time.)	Joh. Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Faust"	Gounod
5.	SUITE, "Peer Gynt" I. Morning Dawn. II. Aase's Death. III. Anitra's Dance. IV. In the Halls of the King of the Dovre Mountains. The Imps are chasing Peer Gynt.	Grieg
6.	PRELUDE from "Gouverneur de Tours"	Reinecke
7.	TWO SLAVONIC DANCES	Dvorák
8.	OVERTURE, "Rienzi"	Wagner
9.	SELECTION, "Mikado"	Sullivan
10.	WALTZ, "Schönbrunner"	Lanner
11.	POLKA, "Tyrolean"	Zeller
12.	MARCH, "Hoch Habsburg" (First Time.)	Kral

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100
TO ALL ALIKE

Hartfords, $80, $60, $50

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song.
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET
Norfolk Lager Beer
Boston Pho. Co.

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[56]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON. Vol. XI. No. 3.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100
TO ALL ALIKE

Hartfords, $80, $60, $50

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 570th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH from Suite . . . . Lachner
2. OVERTURE, "Barber of Seville" . . . . . . Rossini
3. WALTZ, "Kaiser" . . . . Joh. Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Robin Hood" . . . . De Koven

---

5. BALLET MUSIC, "Feramors" . . . . Rubinstein
6. MINUET . . . . Bulzoni
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. OVERTURE, "Poet and Peasant" . . . . Suppé
8. RIDE OF THE VALKYRIES . . . . Wagner

---

9. SELECTION, "Cavalleria Rusticana" . . . . . . Mascagni
10. WALTZ, "Les Patineurs" . . . . Waldteufel
11. GALOP, "Kosakenritt" . . . . Millöcker
12. PERSIAN MARCH . . . . Strauss

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following: —

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, ... 60c.
The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen . . 75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, ... 75c.
Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, ... 60c.
Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, ... 60c.
Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli, ... 60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL·B·HUNT·DEL

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Co. Lager Beer
Boston Pho. Co.

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

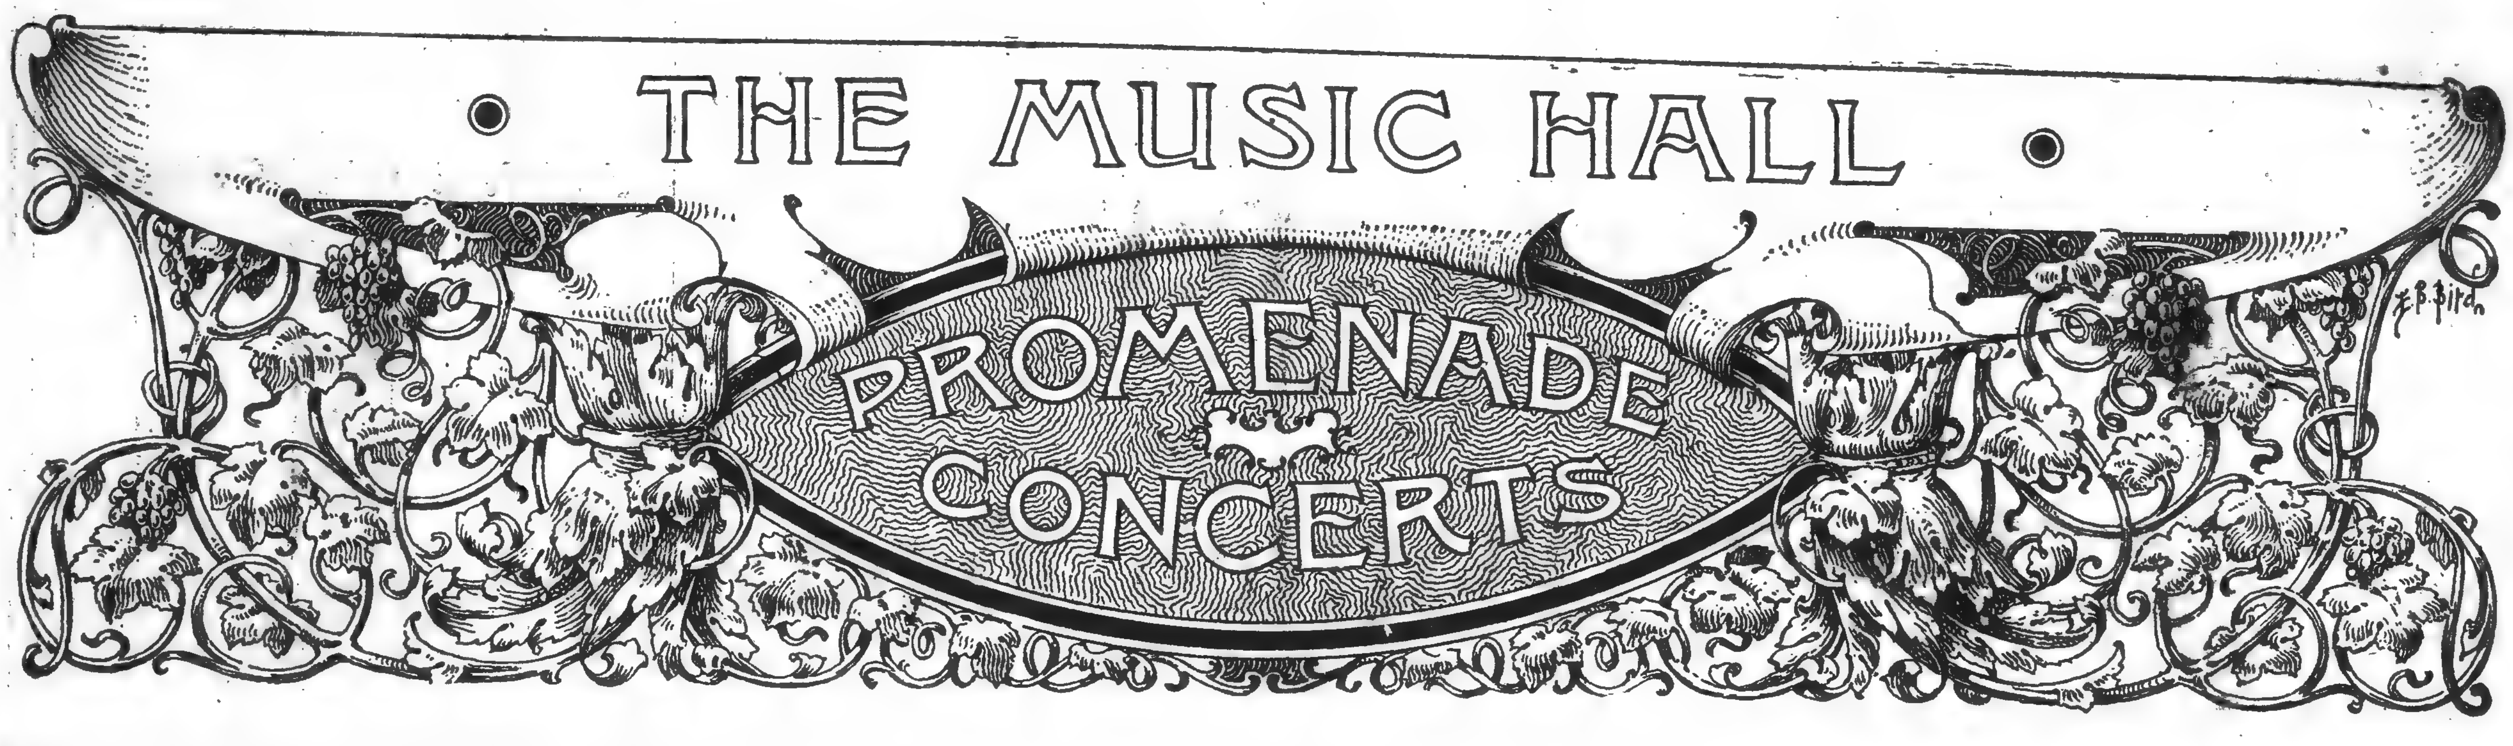
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON, THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1896.
SUMMER SEASON. Vol. XI. No. 4.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100
TO ALL ALIKE

Hartfords, $80, $60, $50

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 571st Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

THURSDAY, MAY 14.

PROGRAMME.

1. TANNHAEUSER MARCH . . . . Wagner
2. OVERTURE, "Semiramide" . . . . . . Rossini
3. WALTZ, "Vienna Blood" . . . . . . Joh. Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Poor Jonathan" . . . . . . Millöcker

---

5. BALLET MUSIC from "Queen of Sheba" . . . . . . Goldmark
6. INTERMEZZO, "Forget-me-not" . . . . . Allen Macbeth
   (First Time.)
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. HYMN, "St. Cecilia" . . . . Gounod
   Solo Violin, MR. I. SCHNITZLER.
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. THIRD MOVEMENT from Symphony No. 6 . . Tschaikowsky
   (First Time at these concerts.)

---

9. OVERTURE, "La Part du Diable" . . . . . . Auber
10. WALTZ, "Arlequin en Voyage" . . . . Zach
11. ON TIPTOE . . . . Hosmer
12. MARCH from "Trial Kiss" . . . . Millöcker
    (First Time.)

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & Co., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P. B. ALE
A MALT TONIC USED BY PHYSICIANS IN THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL AND BOSTON CITY HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY A.G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

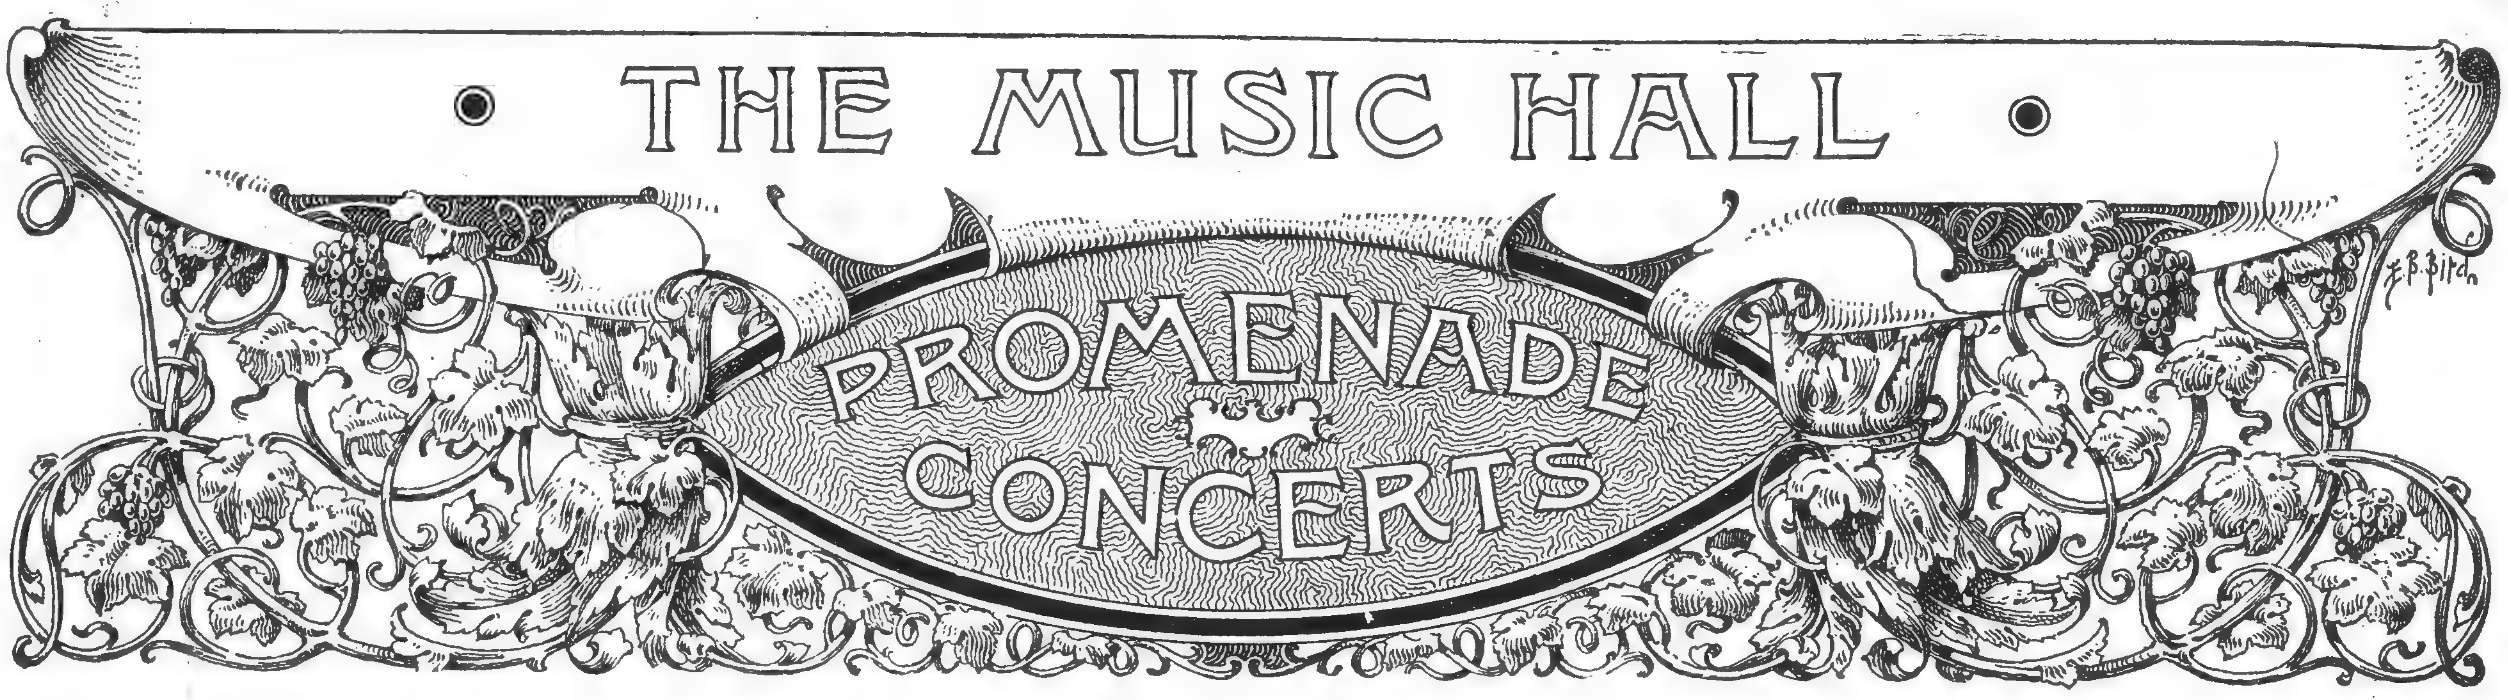
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE: PERFECTOS, 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, MAY 15, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 5.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 572d Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

FRIDAY, MAY 15.

PROGRAMME.

1.	ROYAL TAMBOUR ET VIVANDIERE from "Bal Costumé"	Rubinstein
2.	OVERTURE, "Donna Diana" (First Time at these concerts.)	Reznicek
3.	WALTZ, "Seid umschlungen Millionen"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Carmen"	Bizet
5.	PRELUDE TO ACT I., "LOHENGRIN"	Wagner
6.	FUNERAL MARCH OF A MARIONETTE	Gounod
7.	LE DERNIER SOMMEIL DE LA VIERGE The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Massenet
8.	OVERTURE, "Orpheus aux Enfers"	Offenbach
9.	SELECTION, "Erminie"	Jakobowsky
10.	WALTZ, "Blue Danube"	Strauss
11.	POLKA from "Gypsy Baron" (First Time.)	Strauss
12.	TEUFELSMARSCH	Suppé

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song.
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

2

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100
TO ALL ALIKE

Hartfords, $80, $60, $50

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

P. B. ALE
A MALT TONIC
USED BY PHYSICIANS
IN THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL AND BOSTON CITY HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY
A. G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL B. HUNT DEL

NORFOLK CABINET
Norfolk Lager Beer
Boston Phr. Co.

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE
CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 6.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 573d Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

SATURDAY, MAY 16.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Austria"	Zach
2.	OVERTURE, "Tannhäuser"	Wagner
3.	WALTZ, "Barcarole"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "Fatinitza"	Suppé
5.	TWO MOVEMENTS FROM "BAL COSTUMÉ"	Rubinstein
6.	CAVATINA	Raff
7.	"CLAIR DE LUNE" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Gillet
8.	OVERTURE, "Oberon"	Weber
9.	SELECTION, "The Brigands"	Offenbach
10.	SERENADE, "À toi"	Czibulka
11.	PIZZICATO POLKA	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Fra Bombarda"	Czibulka

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, ... 60c.
The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen . . 75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, ... 75c.
Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, ... 60c.
Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, ... 60c.
Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli, ... 60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100
TO ALL ALIKE
Hartfords, $80, $60, $50
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

A MALT TONIC
USED BY PHYSICIANS
IN THE MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL AND
BOSTON CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY
A. G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

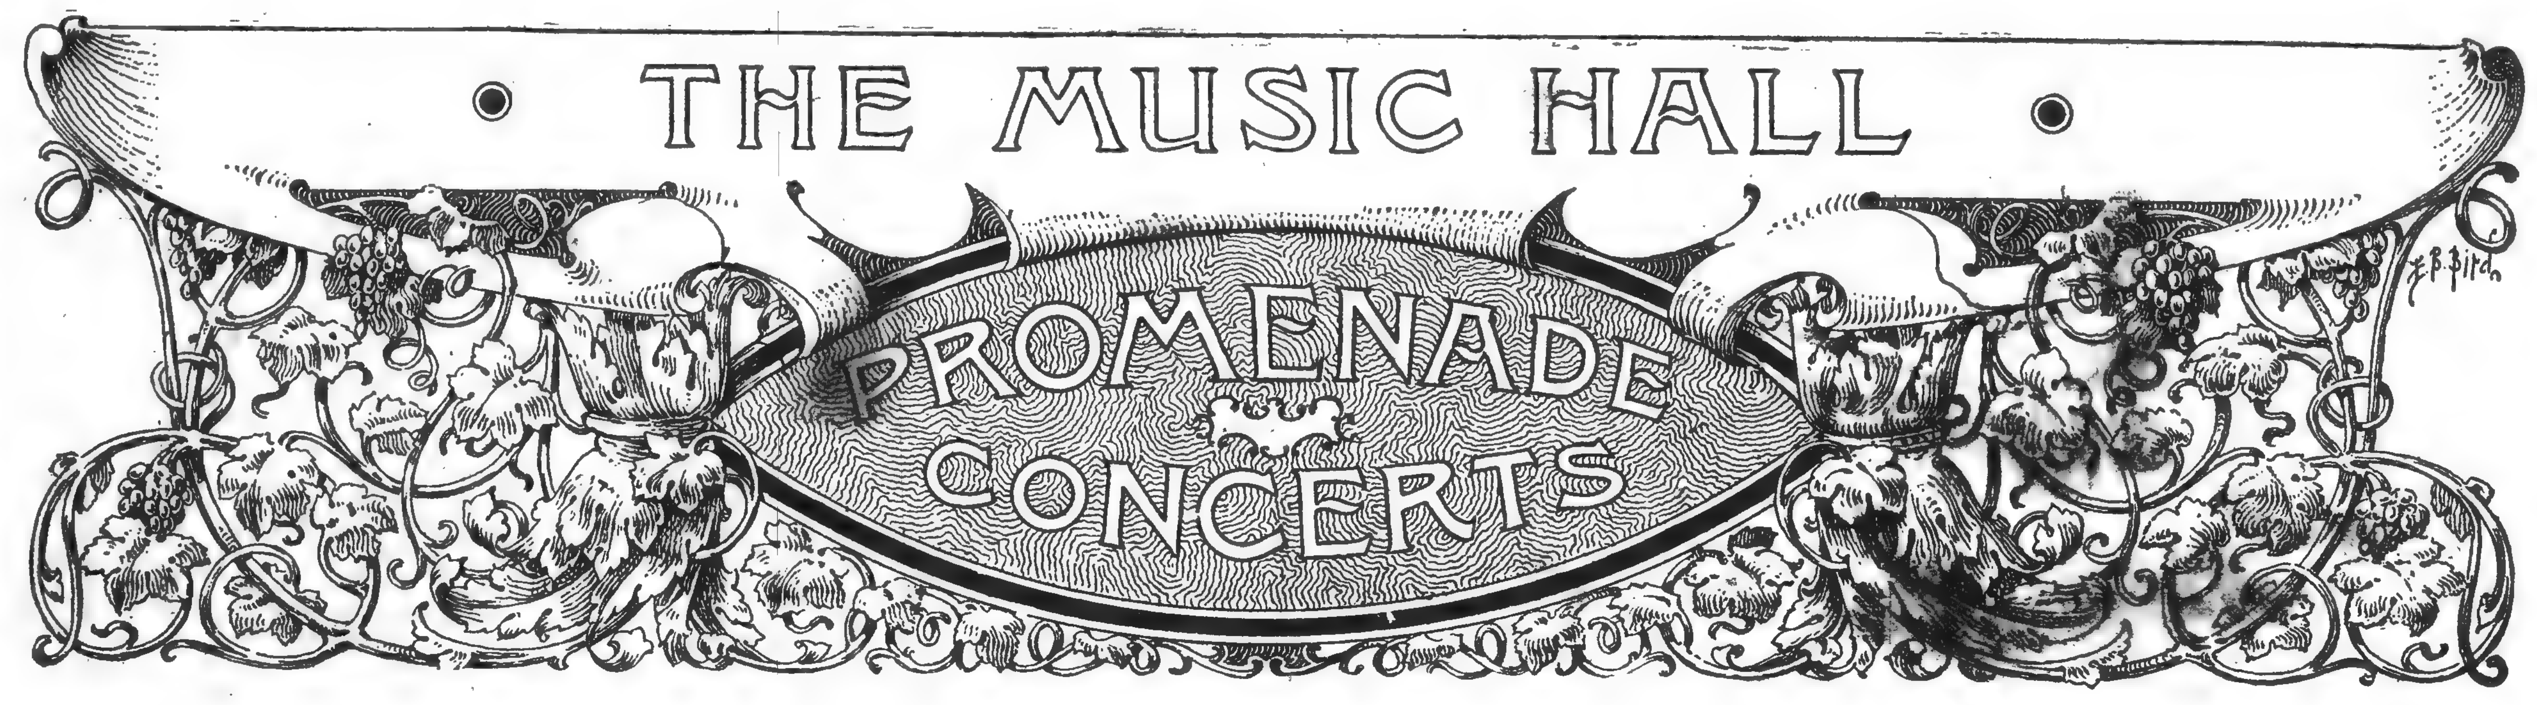
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. { Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[60]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, MAY 18, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON. Vol. XI. No. 7.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 574th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

MONDAY, MAY 18.

PROGRAMME.

1.	SWEDISH WEDDING MARCH	Soedermann
2.	OVERTURE, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
3.	WALTZ, "Fesche Geister"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Gondoliers"	Sullivan
5.	SCHERZO, NOTTURNO, AND WEDDING MARCH,	Mendelssohn
6.	INTERMEZZO from "Naila"	Délibes
7.	ENTRÉE TRIOMPHALE DES BOYARDS (First Time.)	Joh. Halvorsen
8.	MAZOURKA from "Hälka" (First Time.)	Moniuszko
9.	OVERTURE, "Le Brasseur de Preston"	Adam
10.	WALTZ, "O Schöner Mai," from "Prince Methusalem"	Strauss
11.	JOCKEY GALOP (First Time.)	Bayer
12.	MARCH, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.

The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & Co., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100
TO ALL ALIKE
Hartfords, $80, $60, $50
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

P.B ALE
A MALT TONIC —
USED BY PHYSICIANS IN THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL AND BOSTON CITY HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY
A.G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL. B. HUNT. DEL.

NORFOLK CABINET
Norfolk Lager Beer
Boston Eng. Co.

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

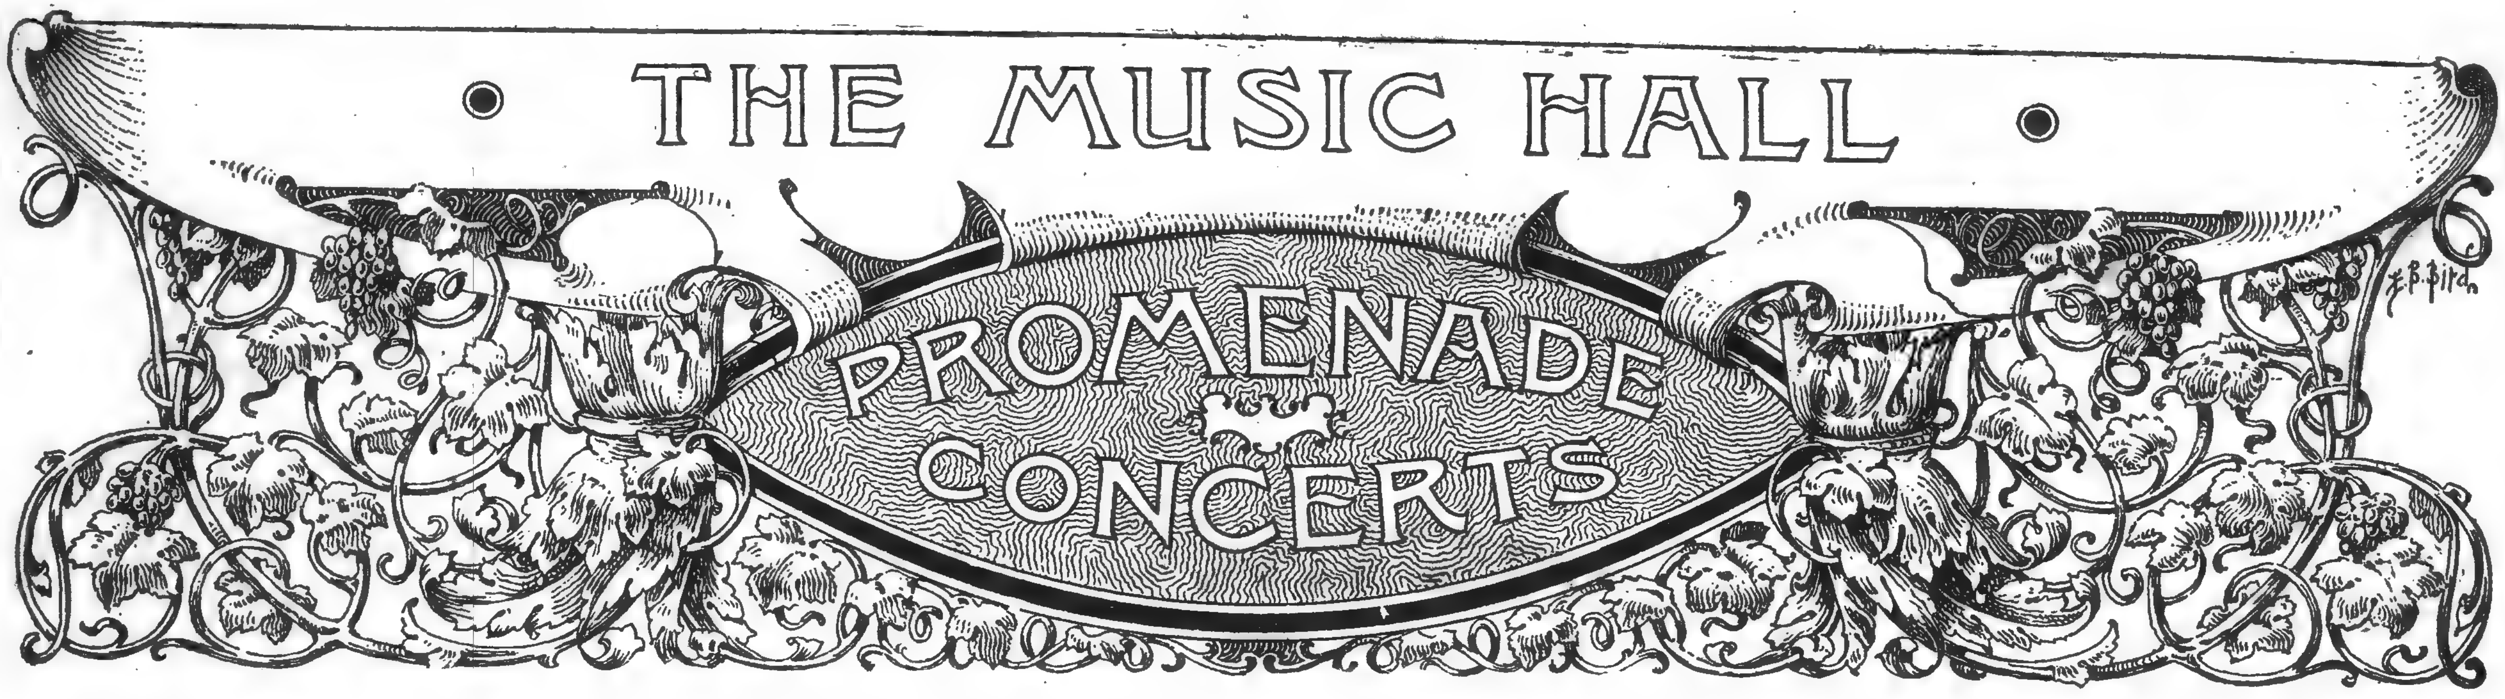
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 8.

THE.... MUSIC.. HALL... Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 575th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

TUESDAY, MAY 19.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
2.	OVERTURE, "Fra Diavolo"	Auber
3.	WALTZ, "Cagliostro"	Strauss
4.	FINALE TO ACT I., "LOHENGRIN"	Wagner
5.	BALLET MUSIC, from "Le Cid"	Massenet
6.	THE DELUGE Solo Violin, Mr. SCHNITZLER. The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Saint-Saëns
7.	PIZZICATI	Gillet
8.	TWO HUNGARIAN DANCES	Brahms
9.	OVERTURE, "Zampa"	Hérold
10.	WALTZ, "Pomone" (First Time.)	Waldteufel
11.	MAZOURKA, "Le Cœur des Femmes"	Joh. Strauss
12.	RADETZKY MARCH	Joh. Strauss, Sr.

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song.
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100
TO ALL ALIKE

Hartfords, $80, $60, $50

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL·B·HUNT·DEL

NORFOLK CABINET
Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON. Vol. XI. No. 9.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100
TO ALL ALIKE

Hartfords, $80, $60, $50

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 576th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 20.

PROGRAMME.

1.	POLONAISE	Chopin
2.	OVERTURE, "La Jolie Parfumeuse"	Offenbach
3.	WALTZ, "Gross-Wien"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "La Fille de Madame Angot"	Lecocq
5.	L'ARLÉSIENNE, No. 1	Bizet
6.	TRAEUMEREI The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Schumann
7.	AIR, "Louis XIII."	Ghys
8.	a. DANSE DES SYLPHES, b. MARCHE HONGROISE, } from "Damnation of Faust" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Berlioz
9.	OVERTURE, "Beautiful Galatea"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Obispah"	Knight
11.	POLKA, "The Mill"	Strauss
12.	FLAG MARCH	Ziehrer

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."	60c.
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen	75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.	75c.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.	60c.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.	60c.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli,	60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P. B. ALE
A MALT TONIC USED BY PHYSICIANS IN THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL AND BOSTON CITY HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY
A. G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. { Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[63]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE
CONCERTS
E. B. Bird

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 10.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100
TO ALL ALIKE

Hartfords, $80, $60, $50

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.

Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE . . . .
MUSIC . .
HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 577th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

THURSDAY, MAY 21.

PROGRAMME.

1.	TABASCO MARCH	Chadwick
2.	OVERTURE, "Abu Hassan"	Weber
3.	WALTZ from "Puppenfee" (First Time.)	Bayer
4.	SELECTION, "Pirates of Penzance"	Sullivan
5.	"SYLVIA" BALLET MUSIC	Délibes
6.	NARCISSUS The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Ethelbert Nevin
7.	MANDOLIN SERENADE	Eilenberg
8.	OVERTURE, "Phèdre"	Massenet
9.	SELECTION, "Boccaccio"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Doctrinen"	Ed. Strauss
11.	MENUET, "Diane Chasseresse"	Chesneau
12.	"PRINCESS NINETTA" MARCH (First Time.)	Strauss

SPECIAL NOTICE. Owing to long-standing engagements of Music Hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 25, 26, 27, and 28. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 29.

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.

"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.

The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS

P.B. ALE

ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

BUNKER HILL LAGER
Sold at these concerts
PINTS 20¢
WILL·B·HUNT·DEL

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. } Telephone, 56 Roxbury
EDWARD RUHL. } or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE
CONCERTS
E.B. Bird

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 11.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100
TO ALL ALIKE

Hartfords, $80, $60, $50

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated
Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 578th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

FRIDAY, MAY 22.

PROGRAMME.

1.	BOCCACCIO MARCH	Suppé
2.	OVERTURE, "Stradella"	Flotow
3.	WALTZ, "Thousand and One Nights"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Fencing-master"	De Koven
5.	MARCIA ALLA TURCA	Beethoven
6.	a. SCHERZO WALTZ b. MALAGUENA } from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
7.	LA COLOMBE The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Gounod
8.	INVITATION TO DANCE	Weber-Berlioz
9.	OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Avec Lui"	Mackay
11.	POLKA from "Puppenfee" (First Time.)	Bayer
12.	MARCH, "Tzigane"	Lacome

SPECIAL NOTICE. Owing to long-standing engagements of Music Hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 25, 26, 27, and 28. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 29.

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B. ALE
A MALT TONIC
USED BY PHYSICIANS
IN THE MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL AND
BOSTON CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY
A. G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

Boston Club Lager
Sold At These Concerts
PINTS 20c.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 12.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 579th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

SATURDAY, MAY 23.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Excelsior, Jr." . . . . Tracey
2. OVERTURE, "Sphinx" . . . . Thompson
3. WALTZ, "Arlequin en Voyage" . . . . Zach
4. SELECTION, "Beggar Student" . . . . . . Millöcker

5. INTRODUCTION TO ACT III., "Lohengrin" . . . Wagner
6. LOVE'S DREAM AFTER THE BALL . . . . Czibulka
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. MAZOURKA, "La Czarine" . . . . Ganné
8. OVERTURE, "William Tell" . . . . Rossini

9. SELECTION, "Robin Hood" . . . . De Koven
10. WALTZ, "Grubenlichter" . . . . Zeller
11. TYROLEAN POLKA . . . . Zeller
12. MARCH, "Poor Jonathan" . . . . Millöcker

SPECIAL NOTICE. Owing to long-standing engagements of Music Hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 25, 26, 27, and 28. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 29.

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, ... 60c.
The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen . . 75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, ... 75c.
Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, ... 60c.
Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, ... 60c.
Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli, ... 60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING Co.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

Boston Club Lager
Sold At These Concerts
PINTS 20c.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

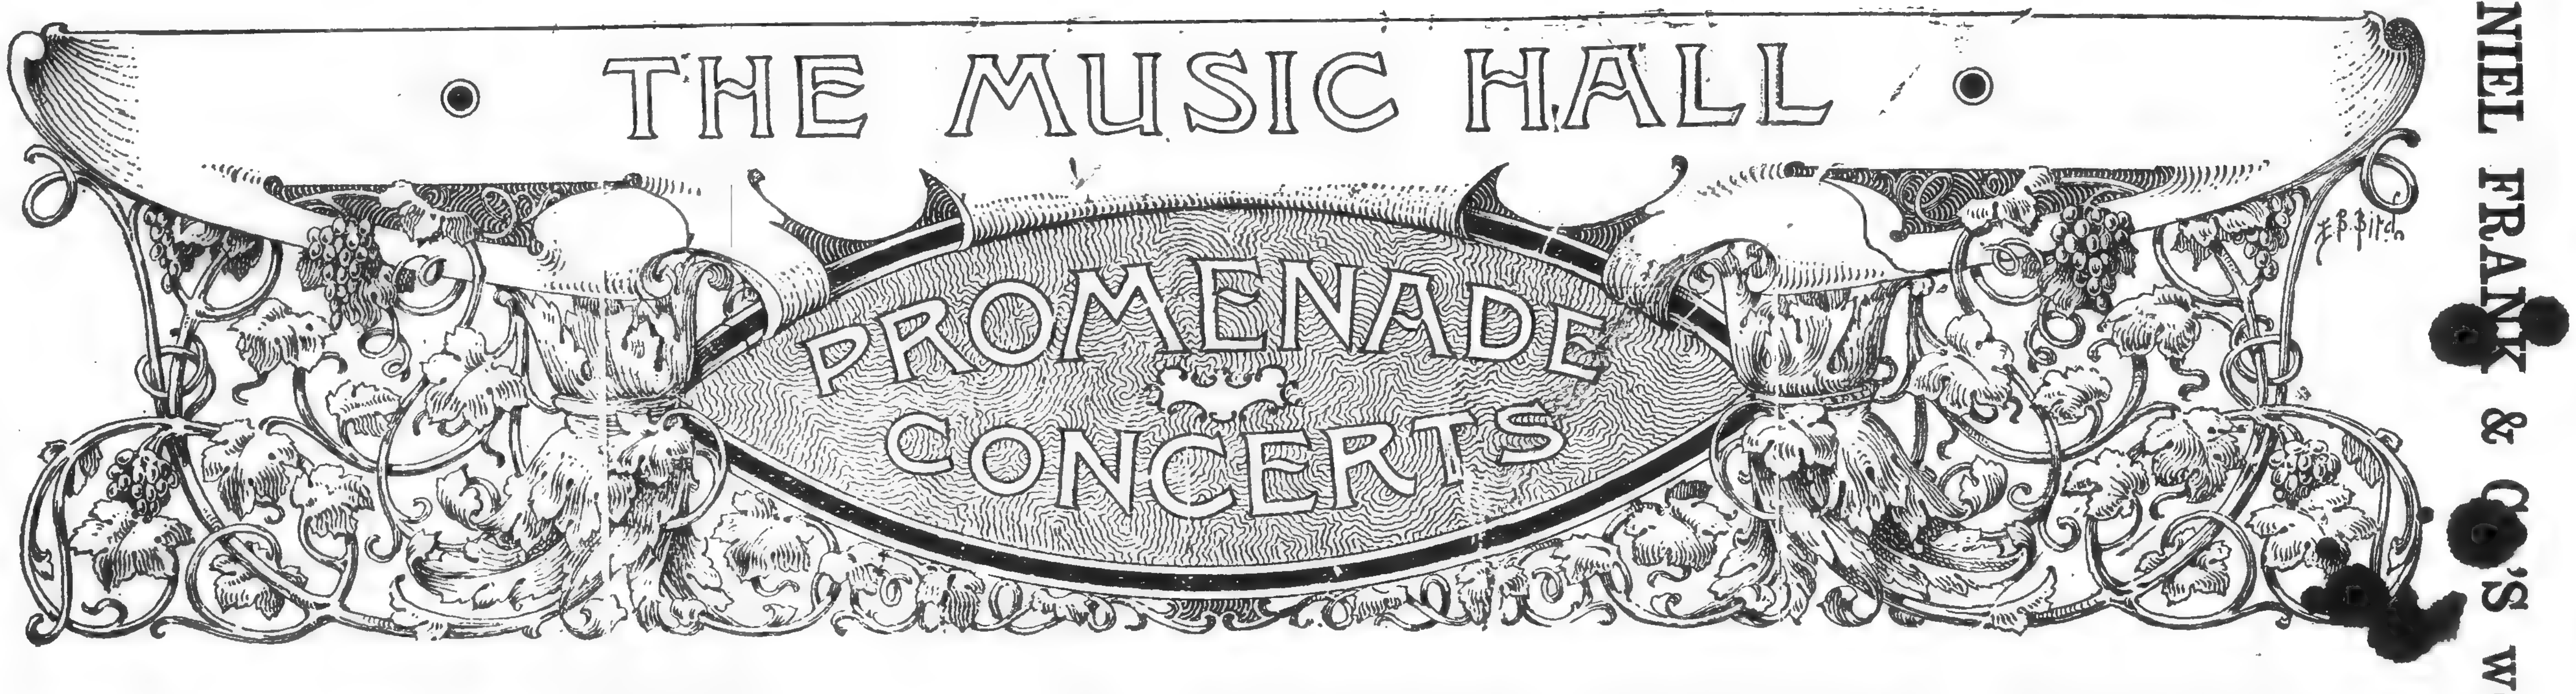
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[66]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 13.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING Co.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 580th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

FRIDAY, MAY 29.

PROGRAMME.

1.	"BOCCACCIO" MARCH	Suppé
2.	"IOLANTHE," Overture	Sullivan
3.	"CAGLIOSTRO," Waltz	Strauss
4.	"Y'S, LE ROI DE," Overture	Lalo
5.	"CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA," Intermezzo	Mascagni
6.	LARGO Solo Violin, MR. SCHNITZLER. The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Haendel
7.	"ERMINIE," Selection	Jakobowsky
8.	"NARCISSUS"	Nevin
9.	"I PAGLIACCI," Selection	Leoncavallo
10.	"GRUBENLICHTER," Waltz	Zeller
11.	"HERZENS KOENIGIN," Polka	Strauss
12.	"TABASCO" MARCH	Chadwick

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c,
The above pieces can be had for full orchestra,
BOOSEY & Co., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS,

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P. B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

Boston Club Lager
Sold At These Concerts
PINTS 20c.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Co. Lager Beer
Boston Phe. Co.
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c, SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[67]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 14.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE .... MUSIC .. HALL ... Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 581st Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

SATURDAY, MAY 30.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Vorwärts," from "Merry War" . . . . Strauss
(First Time.)
2. OVERTURE, "Semiramide" . . . . Rossini
3. WALTZ, "Violettes" . . . . Waldteufel
4. SELECTION, "Faust" . . . . Gounod

5. POLONAISE . . . . Liszt
6. INTERMEZZO, "Forget-me-not" . . . . . . Allen Macbeth
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. SELECTION, "Girofle-Girofla" . . . . Lecocq
8. FIRE-CHARM from "Valkyrie" . . . . . . Wagner

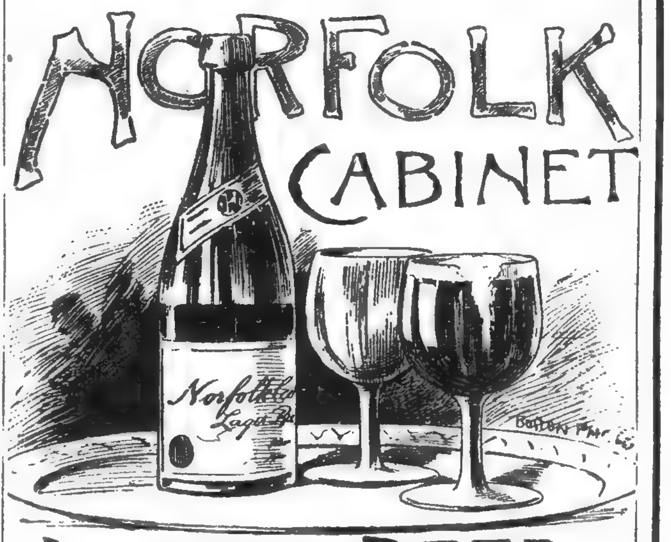
9. OVERTURE, "Tabasco" . . . . Chadwick
10. WALTZ, "Kaiser" . . . . Strauss
11. POLKA from "Queen Indigo" . . . . . . Strauss
12. MARCH, "Donna Juanita" . . . . Suppé

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.
RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84. No 1 in A minor.
No 2 in F major.
No 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.
The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.
Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."
Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

A MALT TONIC — USED BY PHYSICIANS IN THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL AND BOSTON CITY HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY A.G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

Boston Club Lager
Sold At These Concerts
PINTS 20c.



LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[68]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 15.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 582d Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

MONDAY, JUNE I.

NOVELTY NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH from "Puppenfee" . . . . Bayer
(First Time.)
2. FRENCH COMEDY OVERTURE . . . . . . Kéler-Béla
(First Time.)
3. WALTZ, "Tales from the Orient" . . . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "The Huguenots" . . . . . . Meyerbeer
(First Time.)

5. RETRAITE CROATE . . . . Gabriel-Marie
(First Time.)
6. TWO SLAVONIC DANCES . . . . Dvorák
7. RONDE D'AMOUR . . . . Westerhout
(First Time.)
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. OVERTURE, "Martha" . . . . Flotow

9. SELECTION, "Grande Duchesse" . . . . . . Offenbach
10. WALTZ, "España" . . . . Waldteufel
11. MAZOURKA, "La Mésange" . . . . Müller
(First Time.)
12. "JACK" MARCH from "Jack and the Beanstalk" . . Sloane
(First Time.)

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, ... 60c.
The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen . . 75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, ... 75c.
Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, ... 60c.
Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, ... 60c.
Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli, ... 60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B ALE
A MALT TONIC USED BY PHYSICIANS IN THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL AND BOSTON CITY HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY
A. G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

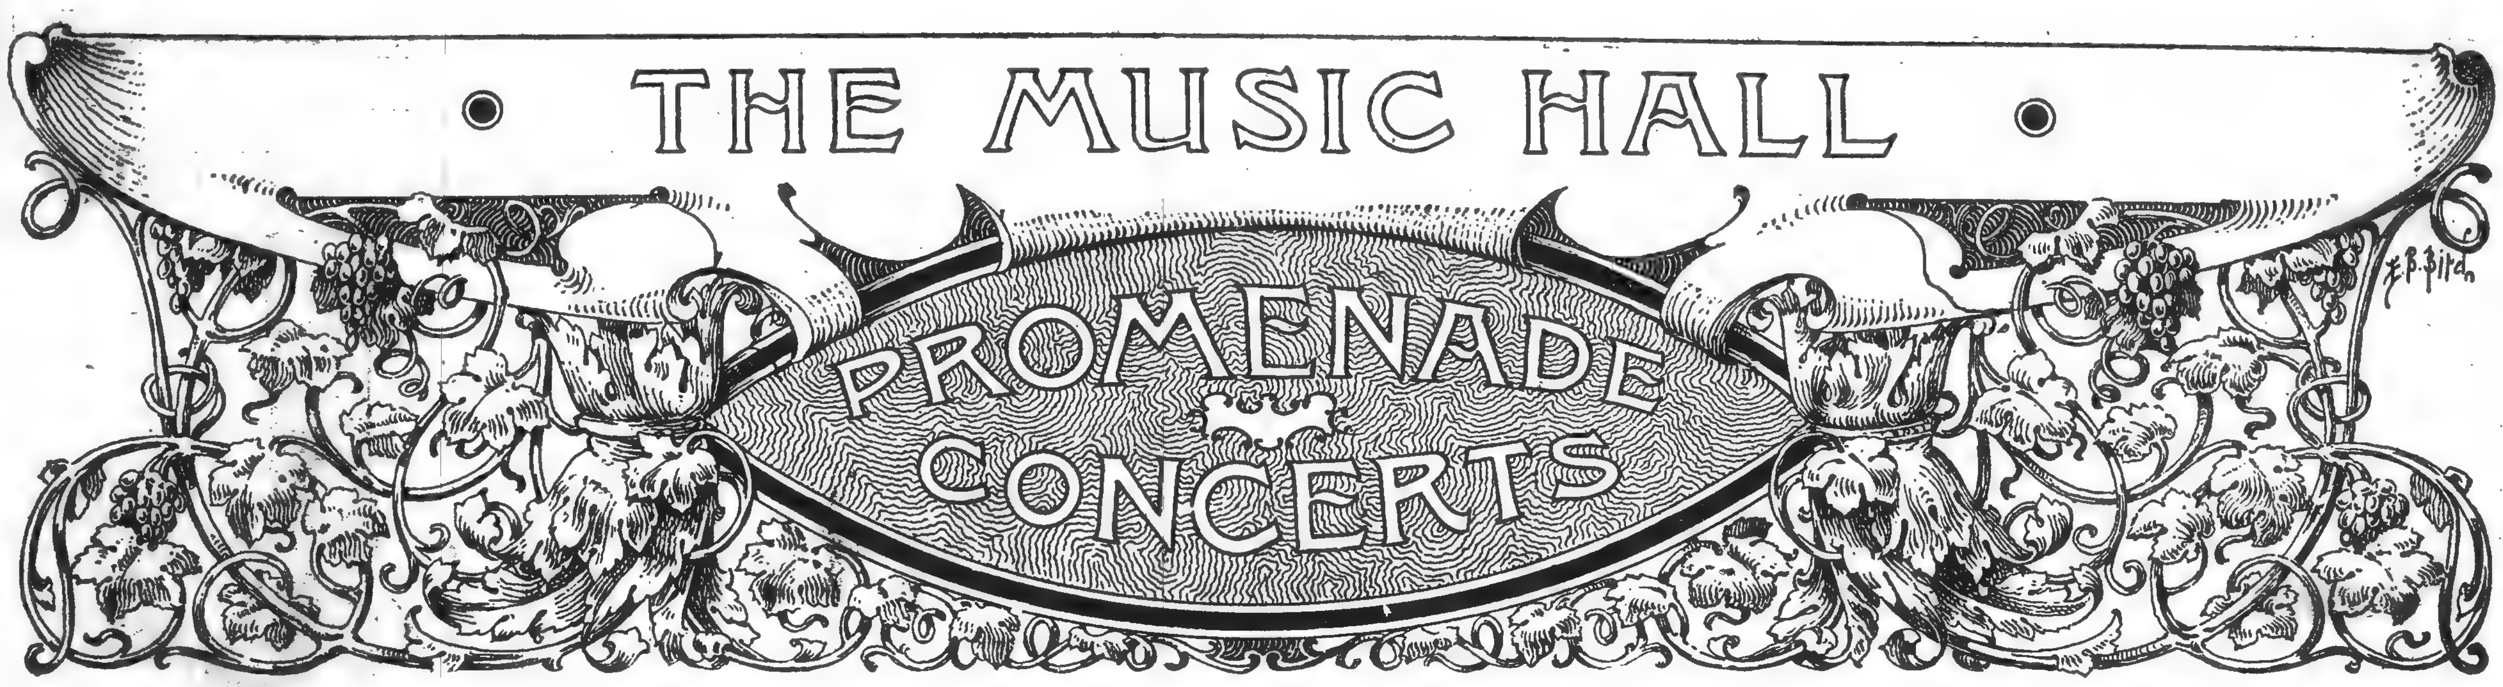
VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. { Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 16.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 583d Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 2.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MANHATTAN BEACH MARCH	Sousa
2.	OVERTURE, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
3.	WALTZ, "Treasure"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Carmen"	Bizet
5.	TWO HUNGARIAN DANCES	Brahms
6.	AUBADE AUX MARIÉS (First Time.)	Lacombe
7.	LOIN DU BAL	Gillet
	The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8.	ENTRÉE TRIOMPHALE DES BOYARDS	Halvorsen
9.	OVERTURE, "Masaniello"	Auber
10.	WALTZ, "Santiago"	Corbin
11.	POLKA, "Sängerlust"	Strauss
12.	MERRY WAR (First Time.)	Strauss

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.
"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.
The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.
BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

P.B ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK
CABINET
Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[70]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE
CONCERTS
F. B. Bird

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 17.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 584th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Kosciuszko"	Zach
2.	OVERTURE, "Tannhäuser"	Wagner
3.	WALTZ, "O Schöner Mai"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Aïda"	Verdi
5.	INTRODUCTION TO ACT III., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
6.	a. DON CÉSAR DE BAZAN	Massenet
	b. SERENATA	Moszkowski
7.	MENUET FOR STRINGS The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Boccherini
8.	OVERTURE, "Phèdre"	Massenet
9.	OVERTURE, "Les Dragons de Villars"	Maillart
10.	WALTZ, "Pomone"	Waldteufel
11.	"FEU D'ARTIFICE" POLKA	Strauss
12.	MARCH from Ballet, "Sun and Earth" (First Time.)	Bayer

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.
RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.
The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.
Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."
Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON
CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

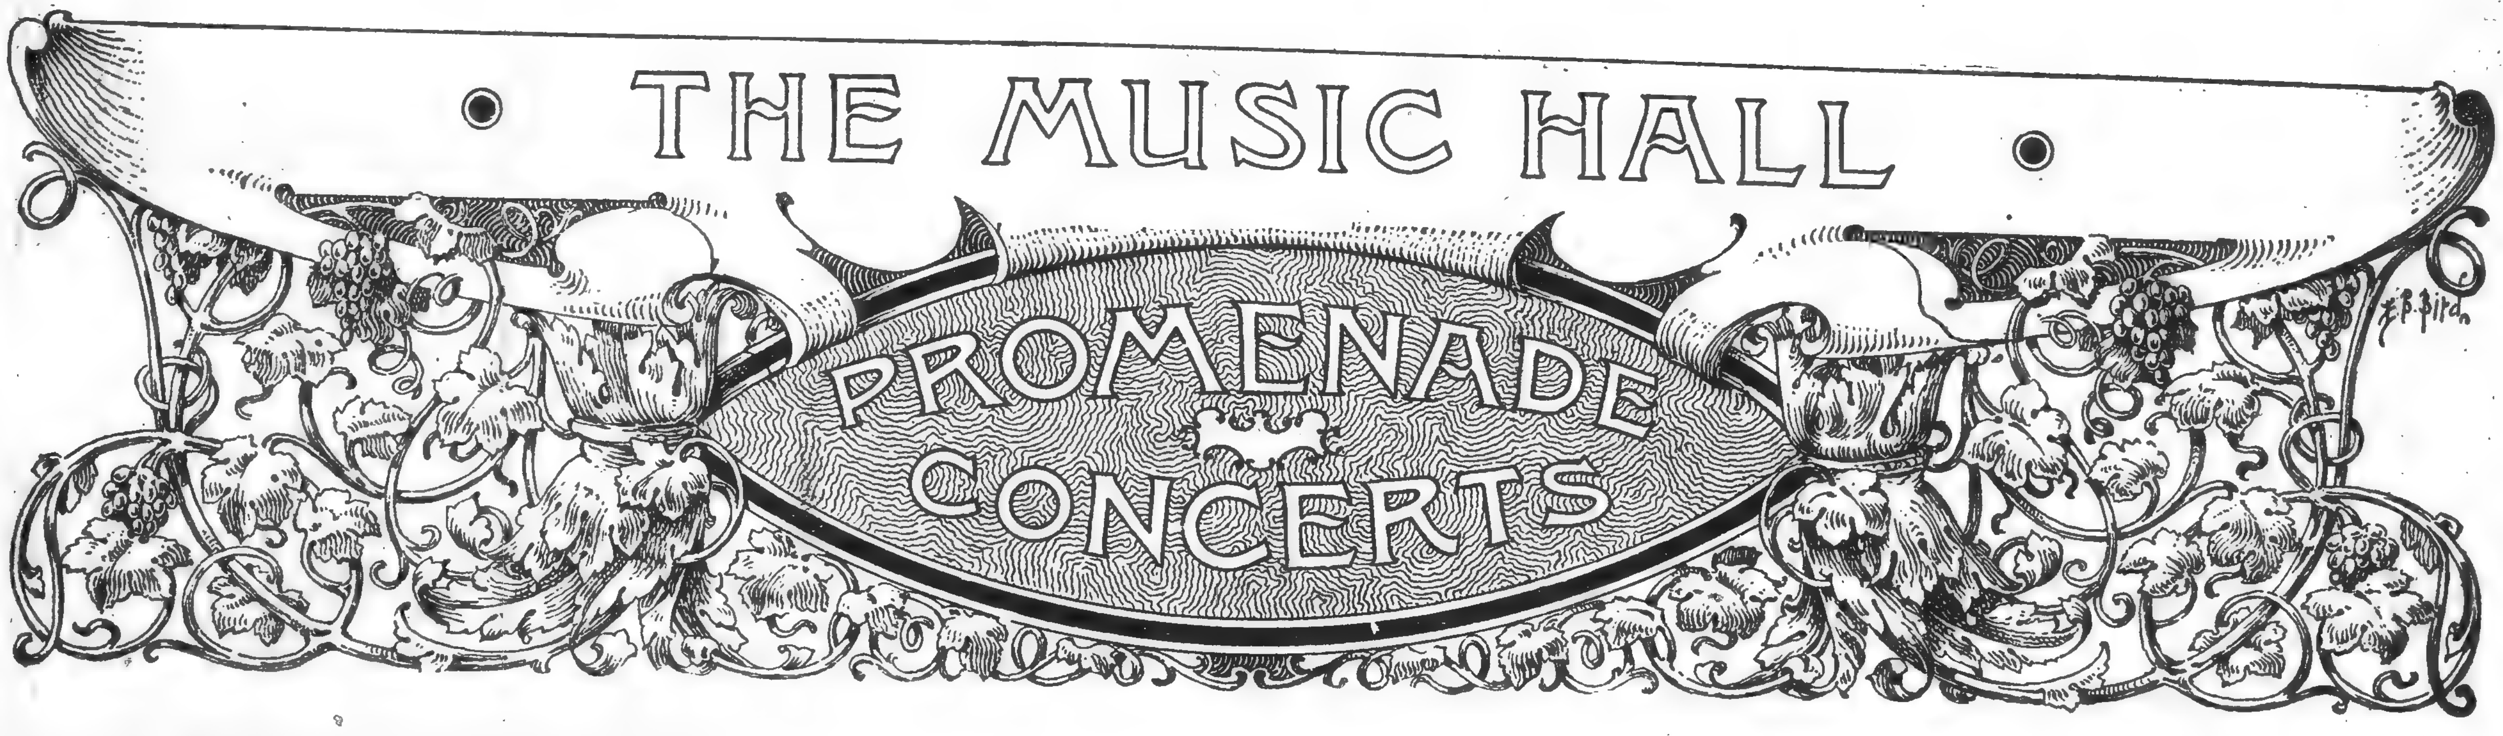
Norfolk Lager Beer
Boston Engr. Co.

NORFOLK
CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 18.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 585th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 4.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH from "Wizard of the Nile" . . . . . . Herbert
2. OVERTURE, "Mignon" . . . . A. Thomas
3. WALTZ, "Roses of the South" . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Ruddygore" . . . . Sullivan

5. SUITE, "Peer Gynt" . . . . Grieg
   - II. Aase's Death.
   - III. Anitra's Dance.
   - IV. In the Halls of the King of the Dovre Mountains. The Imps are chasing Peer Gynt.
6. NEAPOLITAN MANDOLIN PLAYER . . . . . Reinecke
   (First Time.)
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. ENTR'ACTE, "Philémon et Baucis," . . . . . . Gounod
8. SYMPHONIC POEM, "Omphale's Spinning-wheel," . Saint-Saëns
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

9. OVERTURE, "Fledermaus" . . . . Strauss
10. WALTZ, "Meerleuchten" . . . . Ziehrer
   (First Time.)
11. POLKA, "Enthusiasm" . . . . Müller
12. MARCH, "Under the Double Eagle" . . . . Wagner

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, ... 60c.
The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen . . 75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, ... 75c.
Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, ... 60c.
Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, ... 60c.
Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli, ... 60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC—
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

Norfolk Lager Beer

NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 19.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 586th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JUNE 5.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Princess Ninetta" . . . . Strauss
2. OVERTURE, "Pique Dame" . . . . Suppé
(First Time.)
3. WALTZ, "Artist's Life" . . . . Strauss
(First Time.)
4. SELECTION, "Rigoletto" . . . . Verdi

5. BALLET MUSIC, "Queen of Sheba" . . . . . . Goldmark
6. MINUET FOR STRING ORCHESTRA . . . . . Balzoni
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. GRACEFUL DANCE . . . . Sullivan
8. FÊTE BOHÈME . . . . Massenet

9. OVERTURE, "Donna Diana" . . . . Reznicek
10. WALTZ, "Estudiantina" . . . . Waldteufel
11. POLKA, "Tic-Tac" . . . . Strobl
12. MARCH, "Austria" . . . . Zach

See Special Announcement on page 5.

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.
"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.
BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

A·MALT·TONIC USED·BY·PHYSICIANS IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL·AND BOSTON·CITY HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

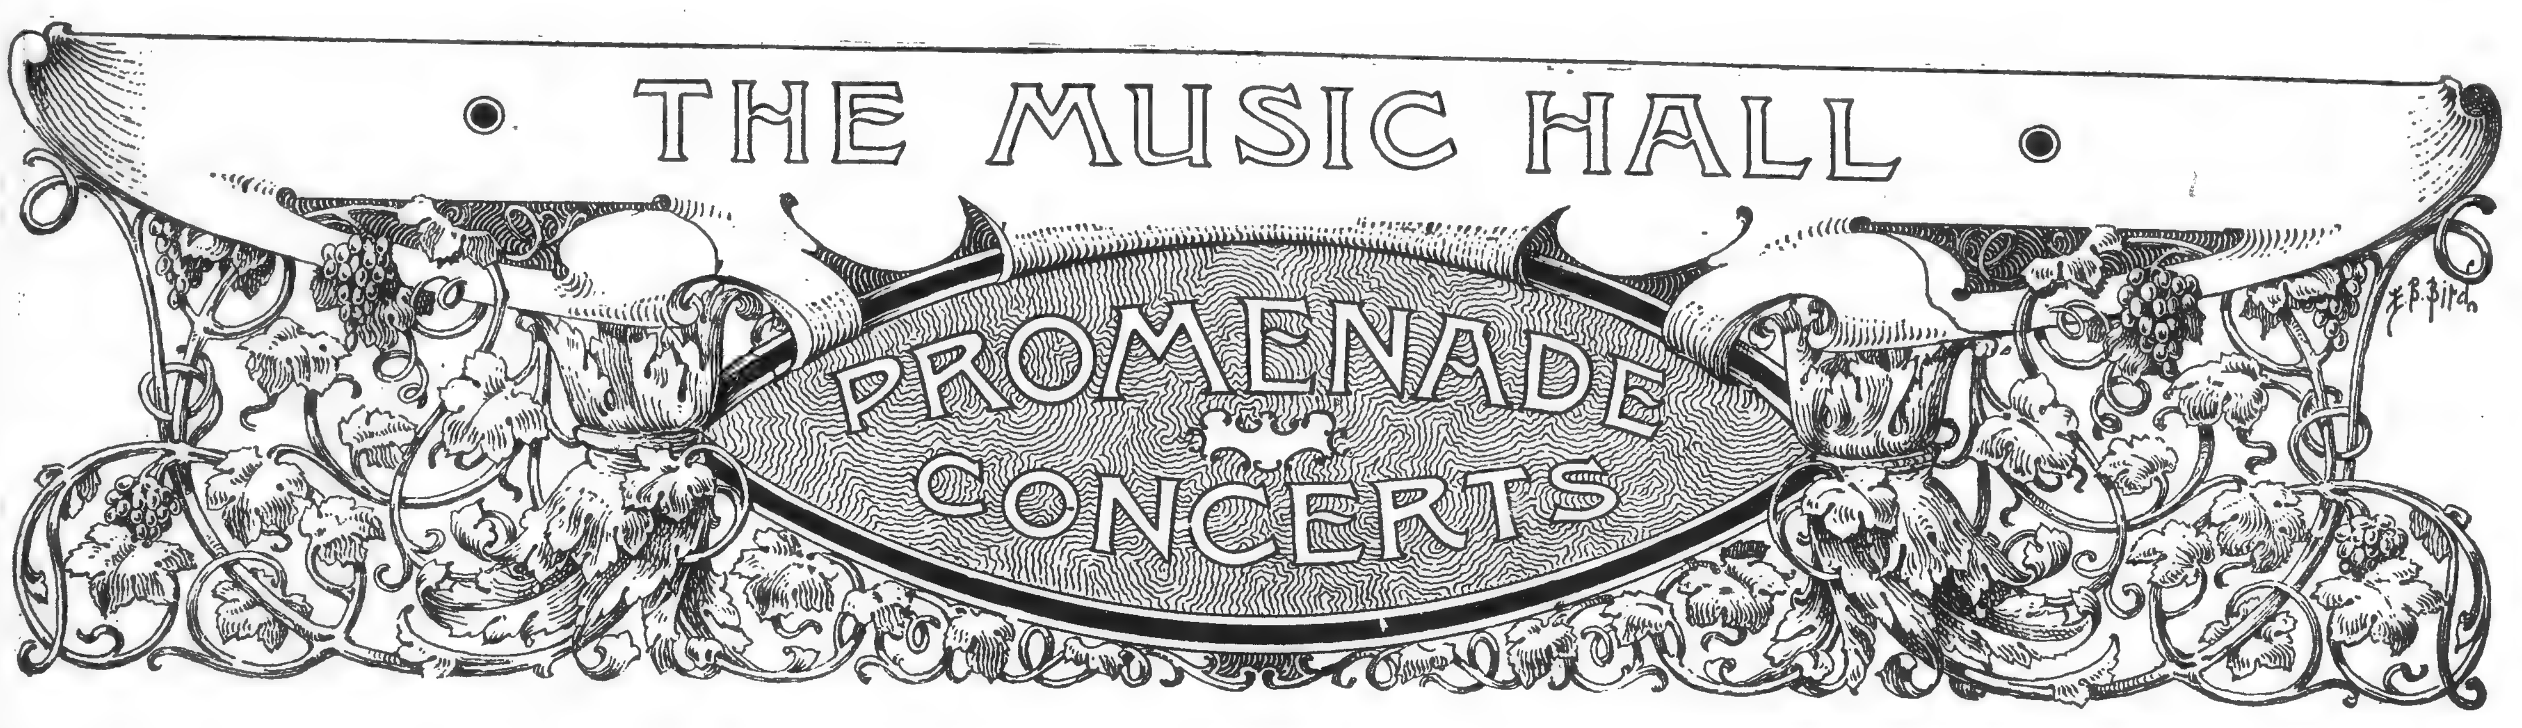
NORFOLK CABINET
Norfolk Lager Beer
Boston Eng. Co.

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANKL & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 20.

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 587th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 6.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Queen of Sheba" . . . . Gounod
2. OVERTURE, "Raymond" . . . . A. Thomas
3. WALTZ, "Puppenfee" . . . . Bayer
4. SELECTION, "Poor Jonathan" . . . . Millöcker

---

5. SELECTION, "Cavalleria Rusticana" . . . . . . Mascagni
6. BLISSFUL DREAM . . . . Meyer-Helmund
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. FUNERAL MARCH OF A MARIONETTE . . . Gounod
8. FINALE TO ACT I, "LOHENGRIN" . . . . . Wagner

---

9. OVERTURE, "Zampa" . . . . Hérold
10. WALTZ, "Grubenlichter" . . . . Zeller
11. POLKA, "The Mill" . . . . Strauss
12. MARCH, "Fra Bombarda" . . . . Czibulka

See Special Announcement on page 5.

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

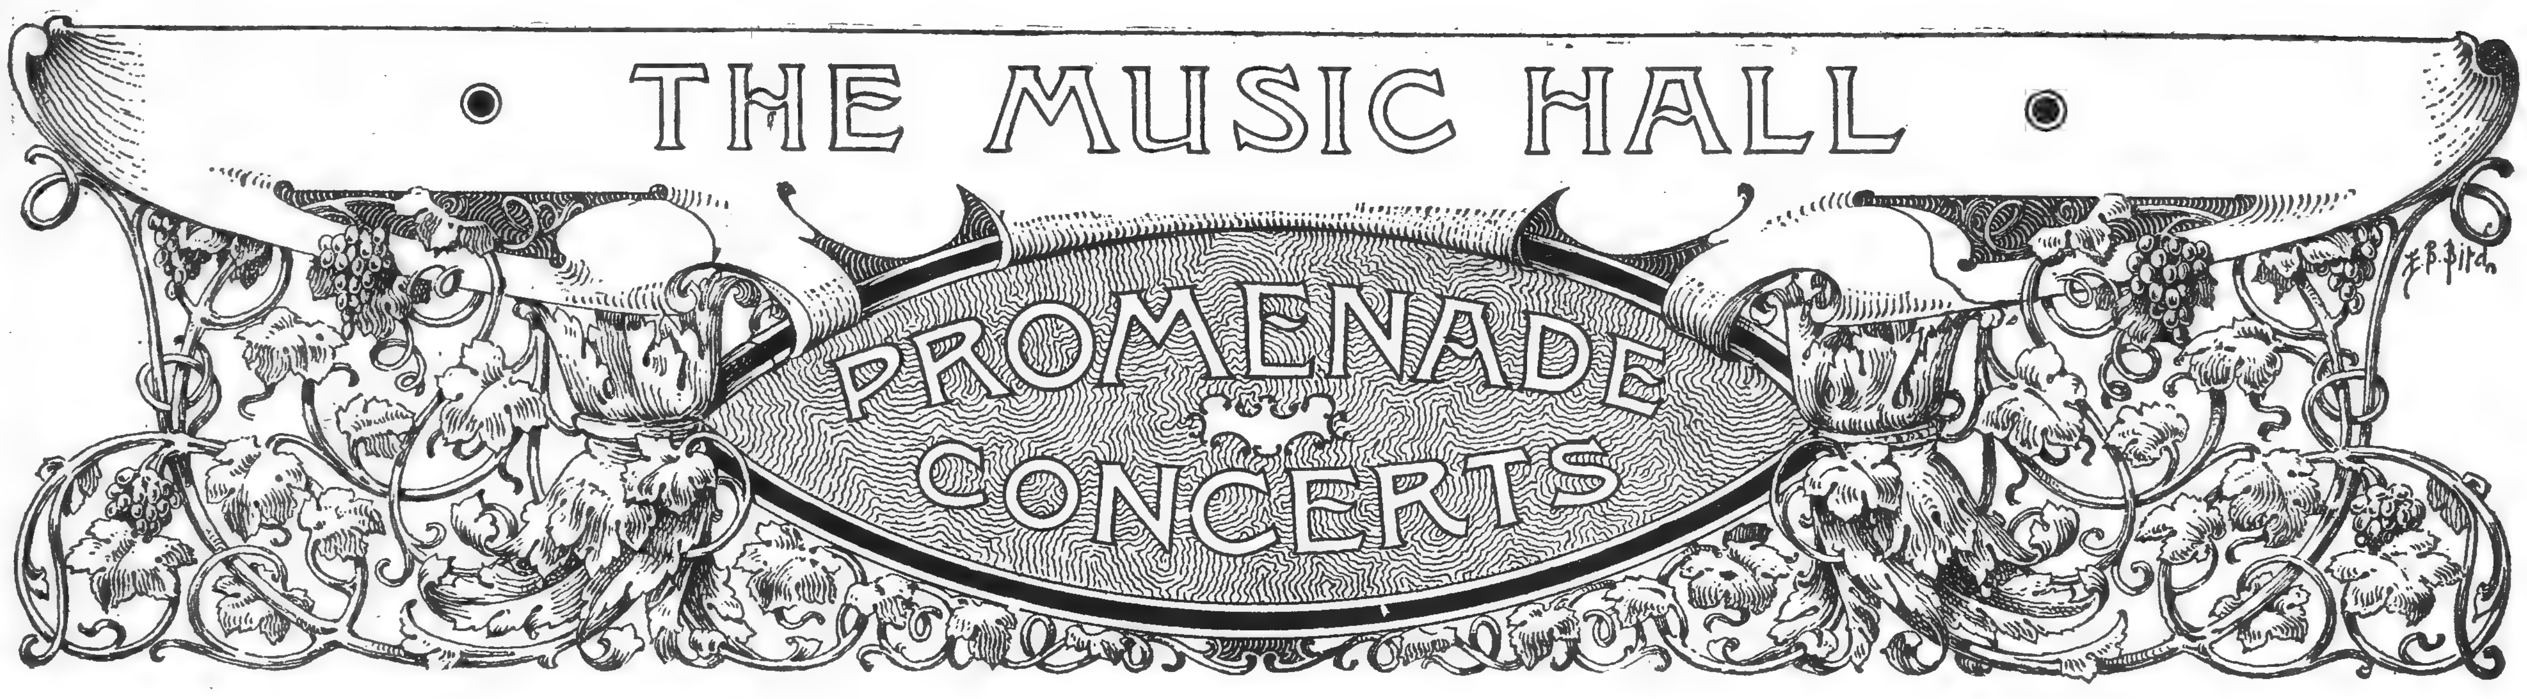
NORFOLK CABINET
LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[74]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 8, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 21.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE....
MUSIC..
HALL...

Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 588th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

MONDAY, JUNE 8.

PROGRAMME.

1. CORONATION MARCH from "Le Prophète" . . . Meyerbeer
2. OVERTURE, "Barber of Seville" . . . . . . Rossini
3. WALTZ, "Freut euch des Lebens" . . . . . Joh. Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Madame Angot" . . . . Lecocq

5. NARCISSUS . . . . Nevin
6. a. SCHERZO WALTZ
   b. MALAGUENA } from "Boabdil" . . . . Moszkowski
7. LOVE'S DREAM AFTER THE BALL . . . . . Czibulka
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. OVERTURE, "Rienzi" . . . . Wagner

9. OVERTURE, "Si j'étais Roi" . . . . Adam
10. WALTZ, "Gross-Wien" . . . . Strauss
11. POLKA from "Gypsy Baron" . . . . Strauss
12. MARCH, "Wien bleibt Wien" . . . . Schrammel

See also, Special Announcement on page 5.

SPECIAL. THURSDAY, June 11. "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish-Alvars, with Harp Obligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, Solo Harpist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B ALE
A·MALT·TONIC—
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON
CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK
CABINET
Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

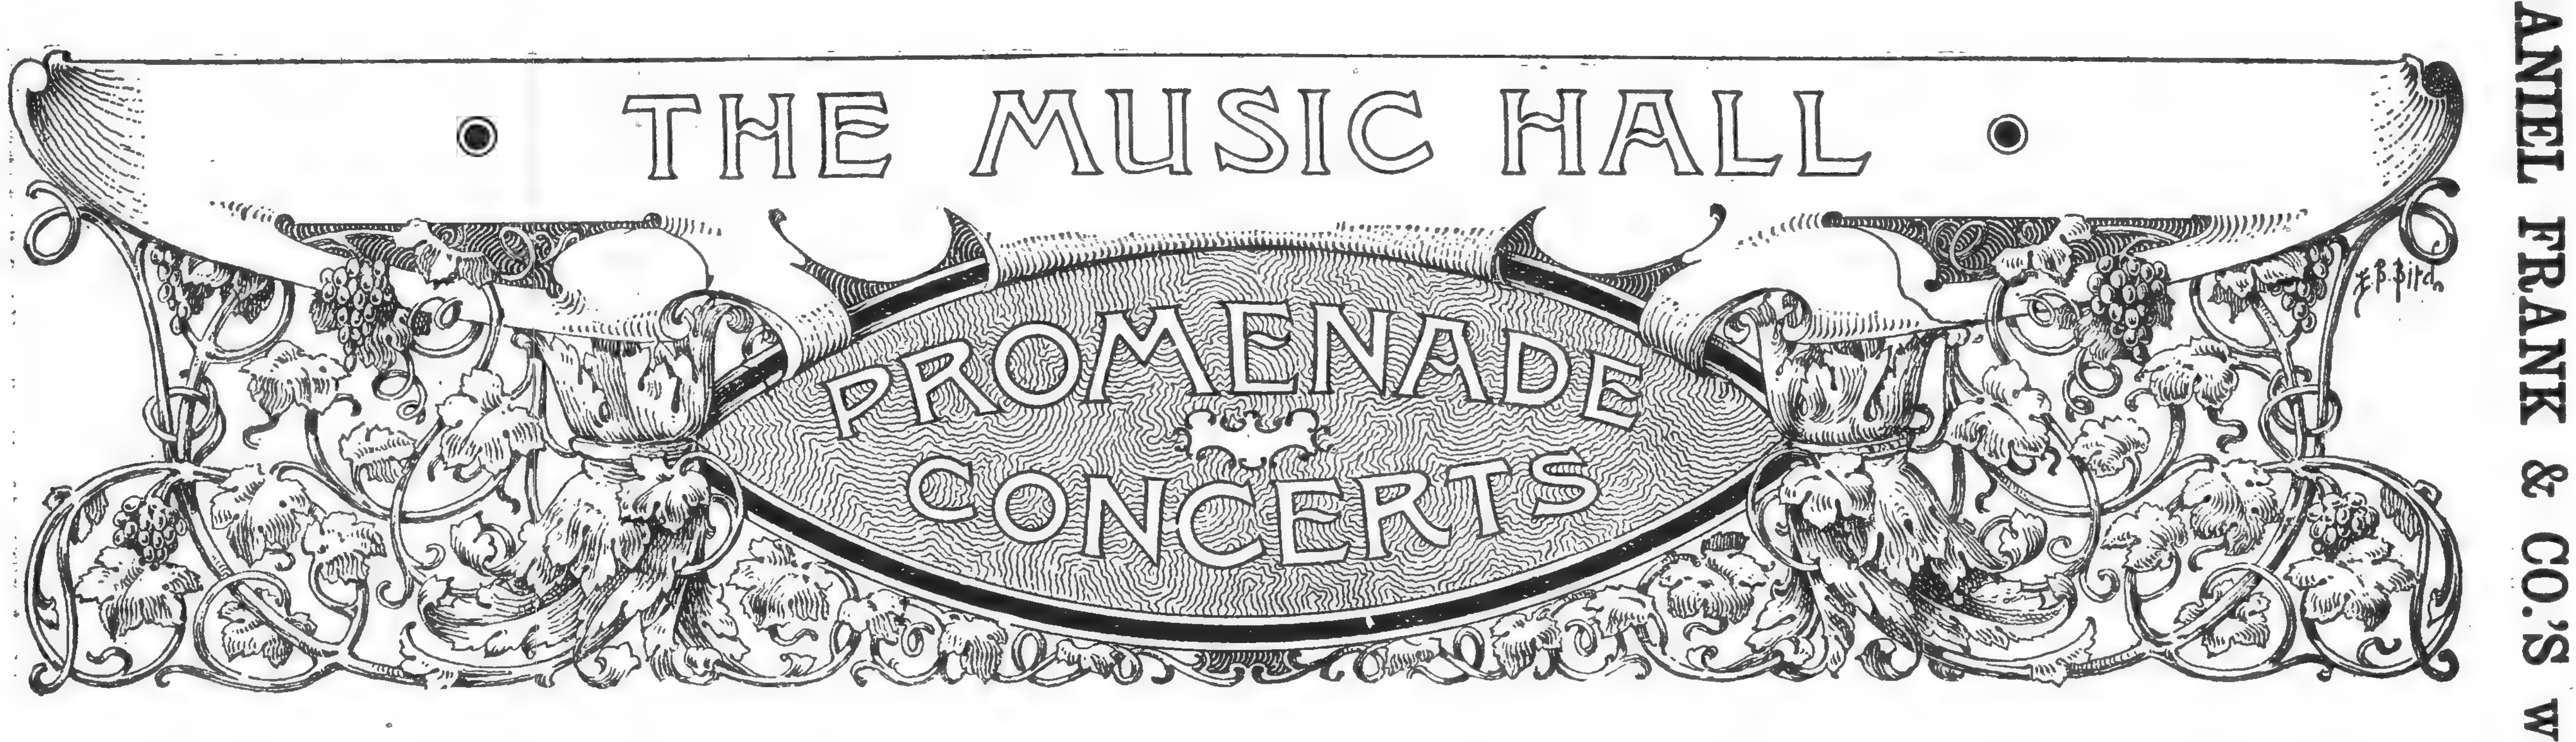
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[75]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 22.

Columbia Bicycles

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches

POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS

CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT

LEWANDO'S,

17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.

Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.

Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated * Lager Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 589th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 9.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Puppenfee"	Bayer
2.	OVERTURE, "Bandit's Frolic"	Suppé
3.	WALTZ, "La Vague"	Metra
4.	SELECTION, "The Chieftain" (First Time.)	Sullivan
5.	SUITE, "The Nut-cracker" I. Trepak. II. Chinese Dance. III. Waltz of the Flowers.	Tschaikowsky
6.	ENTR'ACTE, "La Colombe" The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Gounod
7.	CLAIR DE LUNE	Gil'et
8.	OVERTURE, "William Tell"	Rossini
9.	SELECTION, "Robin Hood"	De Koven
10.	WALTZ, "Wine, Woman, and Song"	Staruss
11.	POLKA, "Tyrolean"	Zeller
12.	MARCH, "Vienna Dude" (First Time.)	J. F. Wagner

See also, Special Announcement on page 5.

SPECIAL. THURSDAY, June 11. "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish-Alvars, with Harp Obligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, Solo Harpist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following: —

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot,	60c.
The Mus cal Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen	75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel,	75c.
Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel,	60c.
Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams,	60c.
Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli,	60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B. ALE

A MALT TONIC USED BY PHYSICIANS IN THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL AND BOSTON CITY HOSPITALS

ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED AND BOTTLED BY
A. G. VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN

SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S BOSTON CLUB LAGER

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.

At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.

H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.

Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 23.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
*
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE.... MUSIC.. HALL... Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 590th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH from "Probekuss" . . . . Millöcker
2. OVERTURE, "Fra Diavolo" . . . . Auber
3. WALTZ, "Mon Rêve" . . . . Waldteufel
4. SELECTION, "Merry War" . . . . Strauss

5. "LA VENDANGE" WALTZ from the Ballet, "Fairy Tale" (First Time.) Brüll
6. TRAEUMEREI . . . . Schumann
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. LA CINQUANTAINE . . . . Marie
8. OVERTURE, "The Mastersingers of Nürnberg" . . . Wagner

9. OFFENBACHIANA . . . . Conradi
10. WALTZ, "Neu-Wien" . . . . Strauss
11. MAZOURKA, "La Mousmé" . . . . Ganné
12. MARCH, "Hoch Habsburg" . . . . Kral

See also, Special Announcement on page 5.

SPECIAL. THURSDAY, June 11. "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish-Alvars, with Harp Obligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, Solo Harpist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.
"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.
The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.
BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON
CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK
CABINET

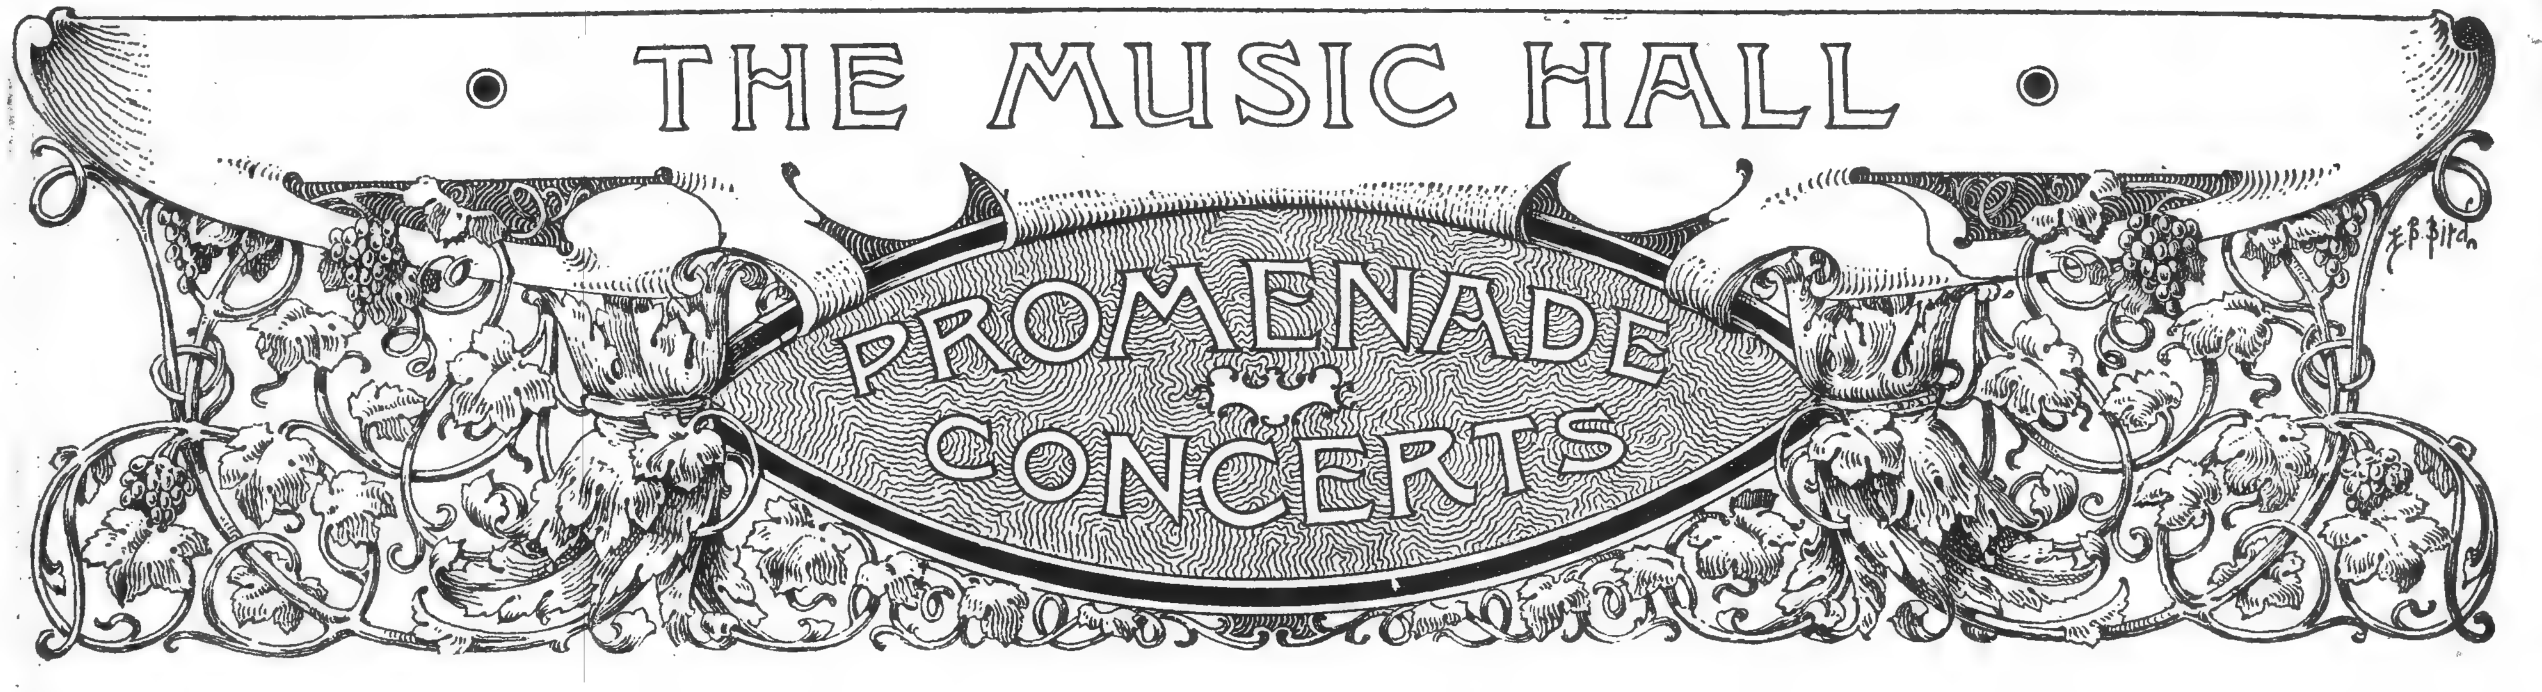
Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 24.

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 591st Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 11.

PROGRAMME.

1.	WERNER MARCH . . . . (First Time.)	Ziehrer
2.	OVERTURE, "Benvenuto Cellini"	Berlioz
3.	WALTZ, "Carlotta"	Millöcker
4.	MARCH, "Greek Pirates"	Parish–Alvars

The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

(First Time.)

Harp Obbligato, Mr. HEINRICH SCHUECKER.

5.	WALTZ AND POLKA from Ballet Music, "Sylvia" .	Délibes
6.	BERCEUSE FOR STRING ORCHESTRA . . .	Clayton Johns

The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

7.	RETRAITE CROATE	Gabriel–Marie
8.	HUNGARIAN RHAPSODY in F	Liszt
9.	LARGO	Haendel

The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

Solo Violin, Mr. SCHNITZLER.

10.	WALTZ, "Serenade"	Metra
11.	POLKA, "Bella-Bocca"	Waldteufel
12.	PERSIAN MARCH	Strauss

See Special Announcement on page 5.

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
Pope Manufacturing Co.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.

Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated * Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

A·MALT·TONIC·
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

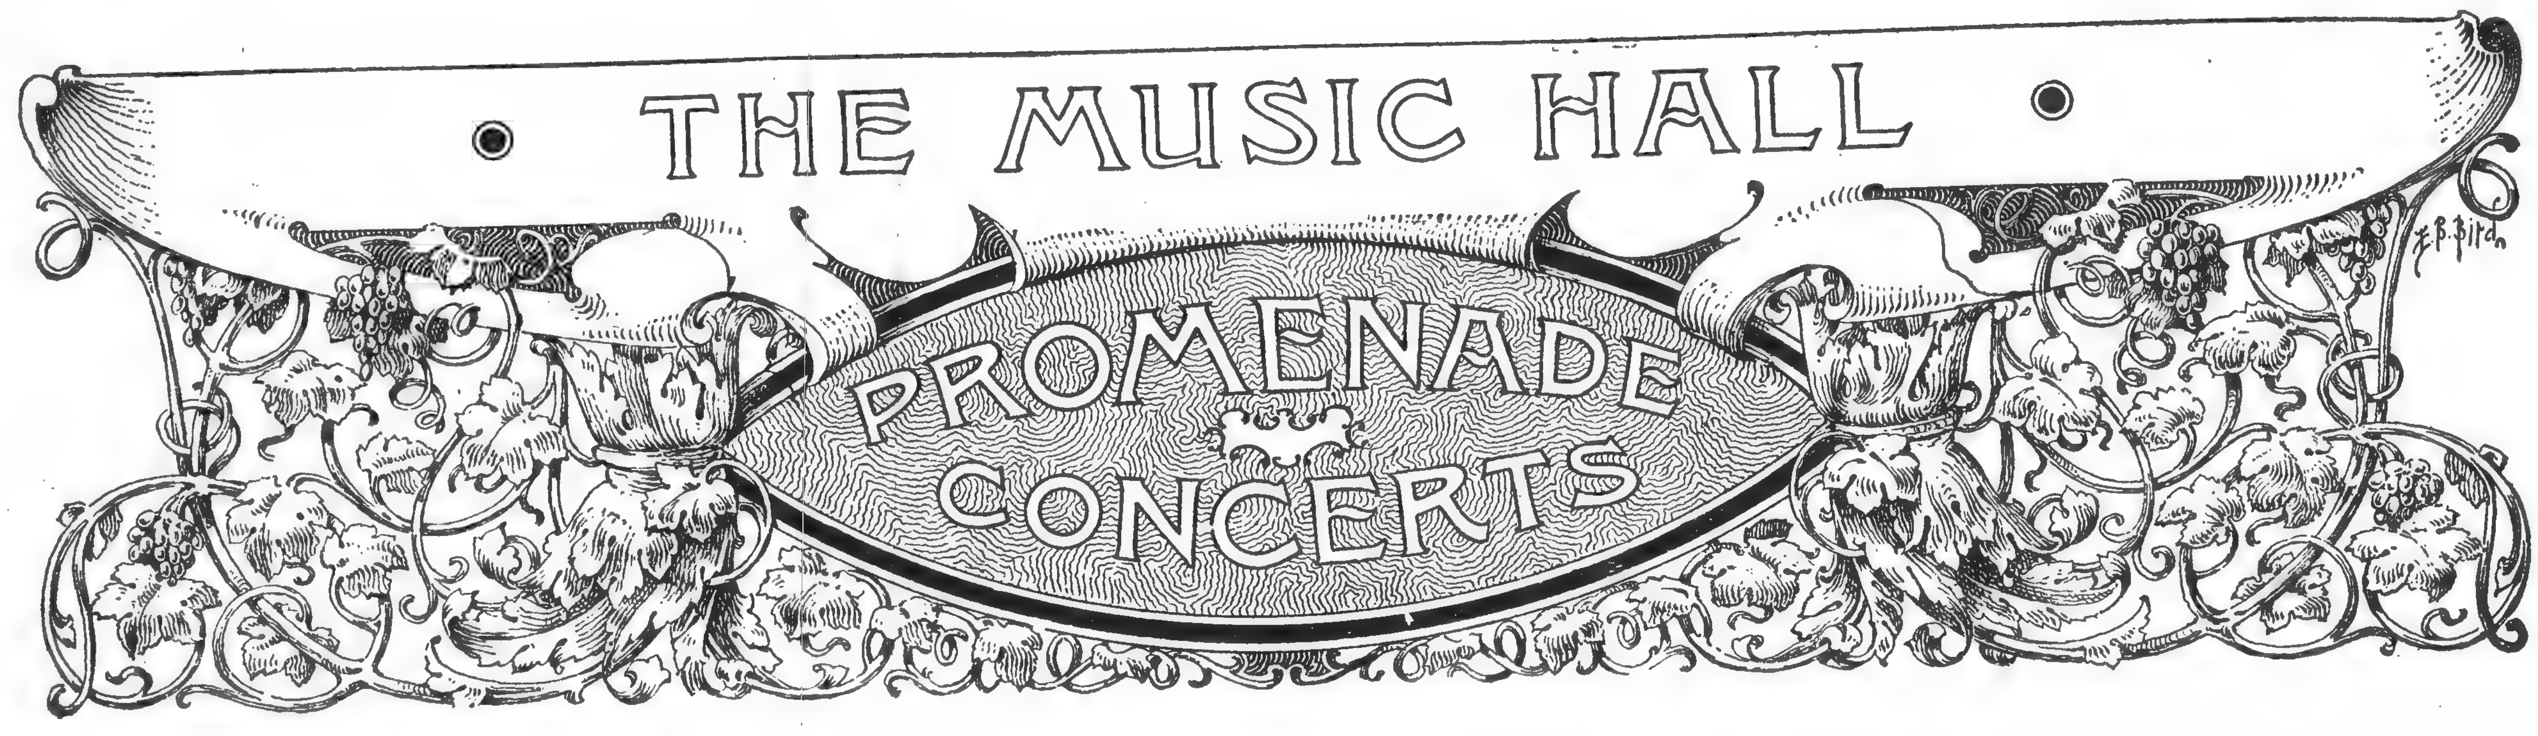
Our "Cabinet" and "Bismarck Braeu" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 25.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches

POPE MANUFACTURING Co.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.

Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 592d Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JUNE 12.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH from Suite . . . . Lachner
2. OVERTURE, "Le Domino Noir" . . . . Auber
3. WALTZ, "Trau, schau, wem," from Comic Opera, "Waldmeister" Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Il Trovatore" . . . . Verdi

---

5. TWO INTERMEZZI from "Carmen" . . . . . . Bizet
(First Time.)
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
6. PRELUDE TO ACT I., "Lohengrin" . . . . . . Wagner
7. RONDE D'AMOUR . . . . Westerhout
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
8. RIDE OF THE VALKYRIES . . . . Wagner

---

9. SELECTION, "Chimes of Normandy" . . . . . Planquette
10. OVERTURE, "Orpheus aux Enfers" . . . . . . Offenbach
11. WALTZ, "Santiago" . . . . Corbin
12. MARCH, "Vorwärts" . . . . Strauss

See Special Announcement on page 5.

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, ... 60c.
The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen . . 75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, ... 75c.
Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, ... 60c.
Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, ... 60c.
Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli, ... 60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager
Boston Phot. Co.

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

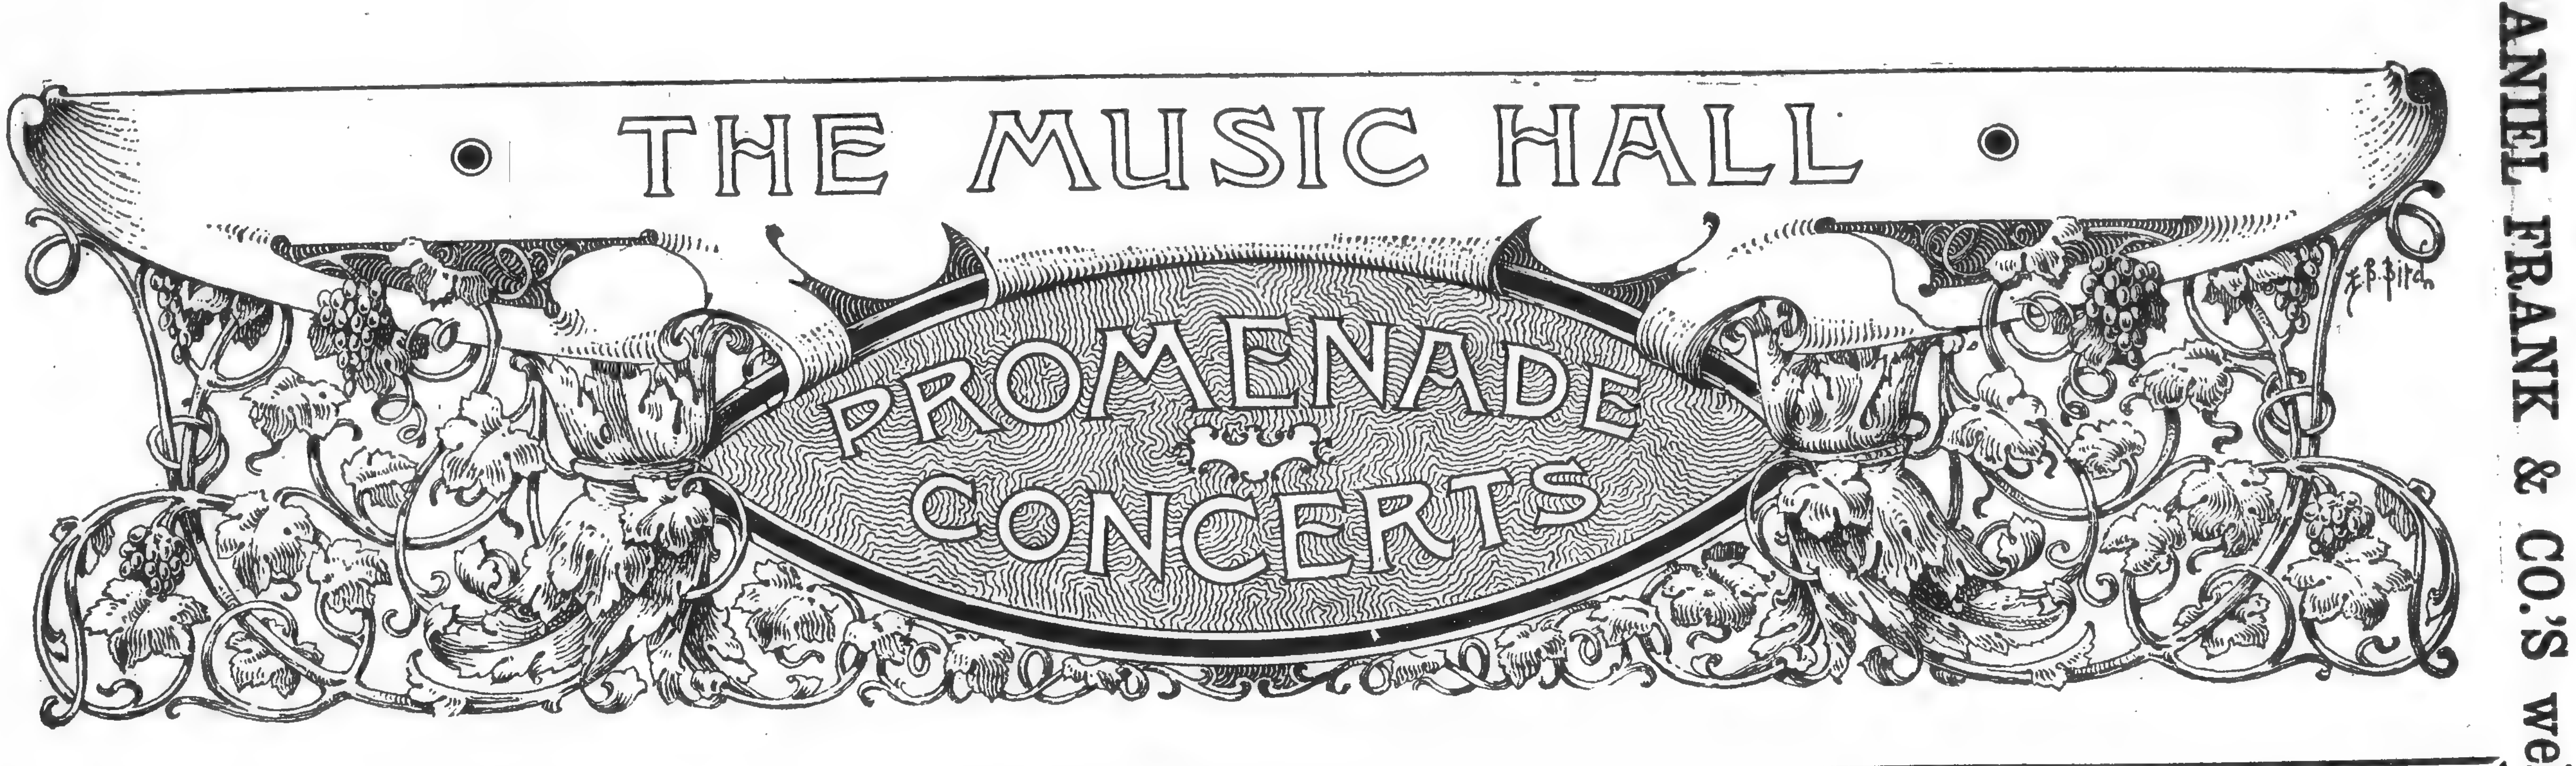
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 26.

Columbia Bicycles

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches

POPE MANUFACTURING Co.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.

Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s

Celebrated Lager Beer

Is the only draught beer

SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.

☞ "Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE.... MUSIC.. HALL... Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 593d Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 13.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "The Flag . . . . Ziehrer
2. OVERTURE, "Martha" . . . . Flotow
3. WALTZ, "Thousand and One Nights" . . . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Fencing-master" . . . . De Koven

---

5. SUITE, "Peer Gynt" . . . . Grieg
   - I. Morning Dawn.
   - II. Aase's Death.
   - III. Anitra's Dance.
   - IV. In the Halls of the King of the Dovre Mountains. The Imps are chasing Peer Gynt.
6. FLIRTATION . . . . Steck
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. MANDOLIN SERENADE . . . . Eilenberg
8. INVITATION TO DANCE . . . . Weber–Berlioz

---

9. OVERTURE, "Beautiful Galatéa" . . . . Suppé
10. WALTZ, "Forest Spirits" . . . . Zach
11. POLKA, "Tic-Tac" . . . . Strobl
12. MARCH, "For the Country" . . . . Millöcker

See Special Announcement on page 5.

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.

"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.

The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & Co., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON
CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK
CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[80]

F. VORENBERG & CO., Fine Art Porcelain, China, Glassware, Lamps, etc., 17 and 19 Winter St., Cor. Music Hall Place, Boston, Mass.

Hop's Most Potent Essence.

We take pleasure in calling your attention to our Bull's Head bottled Ale, an exquisite blend of Hops and Malt. If you are fond of a glass of good, sound ale,—an ale that will refresh, invigorate, and tone up your entire system,—you should try the Bull's Head Ale. This ale resembles the famous Scotch ales, having the same full, rich, malty flavor, blended with the aromatic hop. As a stimulant, tonic, or beverage the Bull's Head Ale has no superior.

Price,
In Champagne Qts., $2.00 per doz.
" " Pts., 1.50 "

Order of your grocer or send direct to us.

J. K. SOUTHER & SONS,
Burton Brewery,
919 PARKER STREET, ROXBURY, MASS.
Telephone, Roxbury 131.

Sold at these concerts.

THURSDAY, JUNE 18.

CADET NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Excelsior, Jr."	Tracey
2.	OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry"	Suppé
3.	WALTZ MILITAIRE, "La Housarde" (First Time.)	Ganne
4.	SELECTION, "Erminie"	Jakobowsky
5.	OVERTURE, "Tabasco"	Chadwick
6.	BLISSFUL DREAM The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Meyer-Helmund
7.	INTERMEZZO, "Tabasco"	Chadwick
8.	WALTZ POTPOURRI, "1492"	Pflueger
9.	OVERTURE, "1812"	Tschaikowsky
10.	WALTZ from "Jack and the Beanstalk"	Sloane
11.	POLKA, "Tyrolean"	Zeller
12.	MARCH from "Jack and the Beanstalk"	Sloane

2

INSURE YOUR BICYCLE AGAINST THEFT IN THE

New England Burglary Insurance Company, of Boston.

(Incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts.)

This Company has a cash capital of $200,000, fully paid in, and is the only stock insurance company in the United States authorized to do this line of business by the Insurance Departments of the various States.

PREMIUM, $2.00 PER ANNUM.

Apply to any Insurance Agent, or to the Company at its Home Office, 178 DEVONSHIRE STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

FOR NEW YORK AND BEYOND.

From PARK SQUARE STATION,
New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Shore Line. Trains leave as follows: L 10.00, 10.03 A.M.; 1.03, *3.00, *5.00 P.M.; *12.00 Midnight; *12.03 Night.

Parlor and buffet smoking cars on day trains, and sleeping cars on night trains. Dining car between Boston and New London on 3.00 and 5.00 P.M. trains.

Fall River Line. Leave Boston week-days 6.00 P.M., Sundays 7.00 P.M., connecting with steamers at Fall River in 80 minutes. Double service (two boats each way daily) will be operated commencing June 29.

Providence Line. Week-days only. Leave Boston 6.30 P.M., connecting with steamers at Fox Point, Providence.

Stonington Line. Week-days only. Leave Boston 6.30 P.M., connecting with steamers at Stonington.

For Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, via transfer steamer "Maryland," 9.00 A.M. week-days, due Washington 9.45 P.M.; 7.04 P.M. week-days and Sundays, due Washington 10.42 A.M.

* Daily. L Bay State Limited; special ticket required.

BOSTON & ALBANY R.R.

Springfield Line
FOR New York.

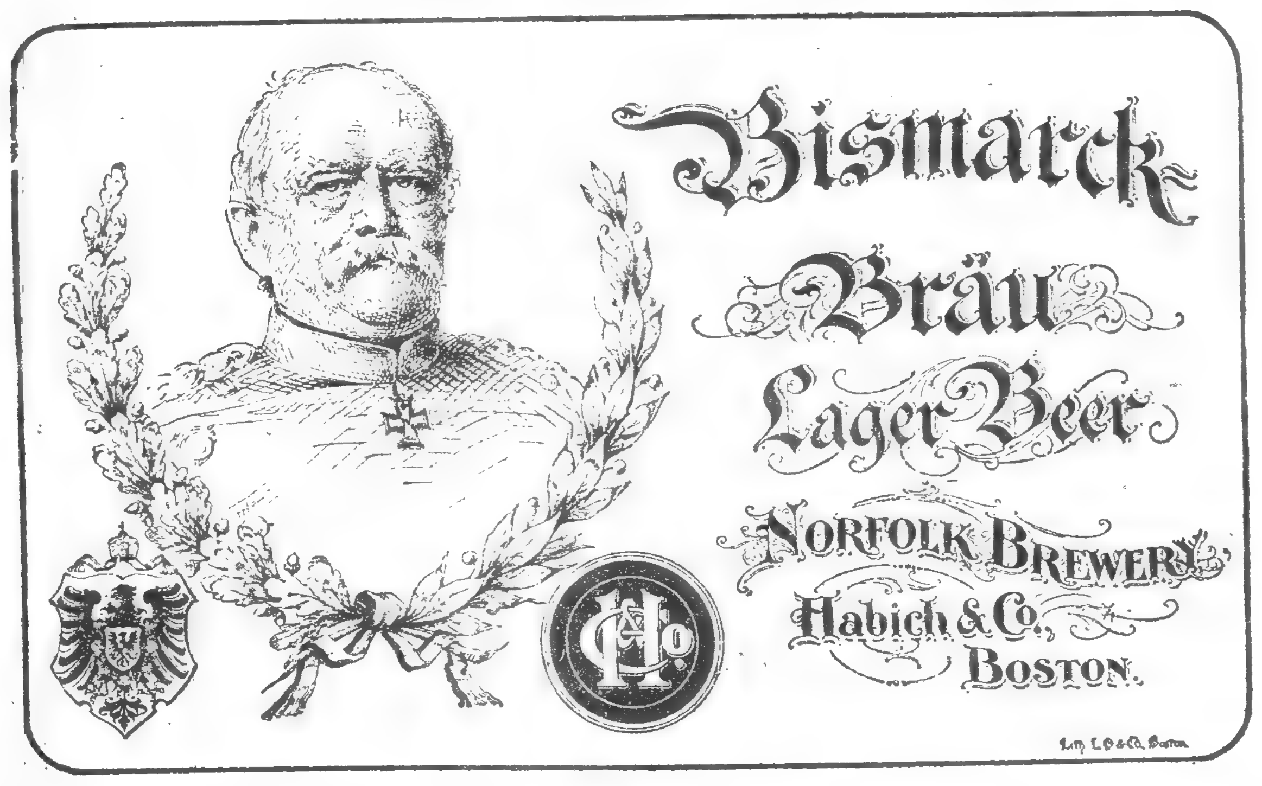
Trains leave Boston 9.00, 11.00, A.M., 12.00 Noon, 4.00,* 11.00* P.M.

City Ticket Office,
366 Washington St.
STATION, KNEELAND ST.

* Run daily.

FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS.



A Nutritious Blood-making Beer of Bavarian Character. A Light Stimulant.

Bottled in Elegant Style at our own Bottling Department.
Sold also in Halves and Quarters.

Norfolk Brewery,
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.

Telephone, 56 Roxbury
Haymarket 254, Boston.

FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS.

"Once worn, Always worn."

"THE JACKSON HAT"

To be had only at

412 WASHINGTON STREET 412

The Best Accident Insurance for Bicyclists.

The Cycle
Combination Policy,

Issued ONLY by the
Ætna Life Insurance Co.

A Policy for $2,000 Death, $10 WEEKLY INDEMNITY. } For Accidents while riding a Bicycle COSTS Select and Preferred Risks, $6.00 Per Annum.

HALF ABOVE AMOUNTS FOR GENERAL ACCIDENTS.

Larger Policies at Pro Rata Rates.

BISHOP & ROBINSON, } Managers Accident Dept.

4 Post-office Square, Boston.

Telephone 2980.

In ANY event,
Drink only the PUREST Whiskey.

THE ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE

Fine Old
Kentucky Taylor.

Full Quarts. Eight Years Old.

WRIGHT & TAYLOR,
Distillers,
Louisville, Ky.

HIRSHFIELD & MULVEY,
Gen'l New England Agents,
5 Doane St., . . Boston.

Commercial and Society
Printing

YOUNG & STAPLES
STATIONERS & PRINTERS
4 P.O. SQ.
BOSTON

Telephone, 2980 Boston.

A Specialty
Card and Wedding
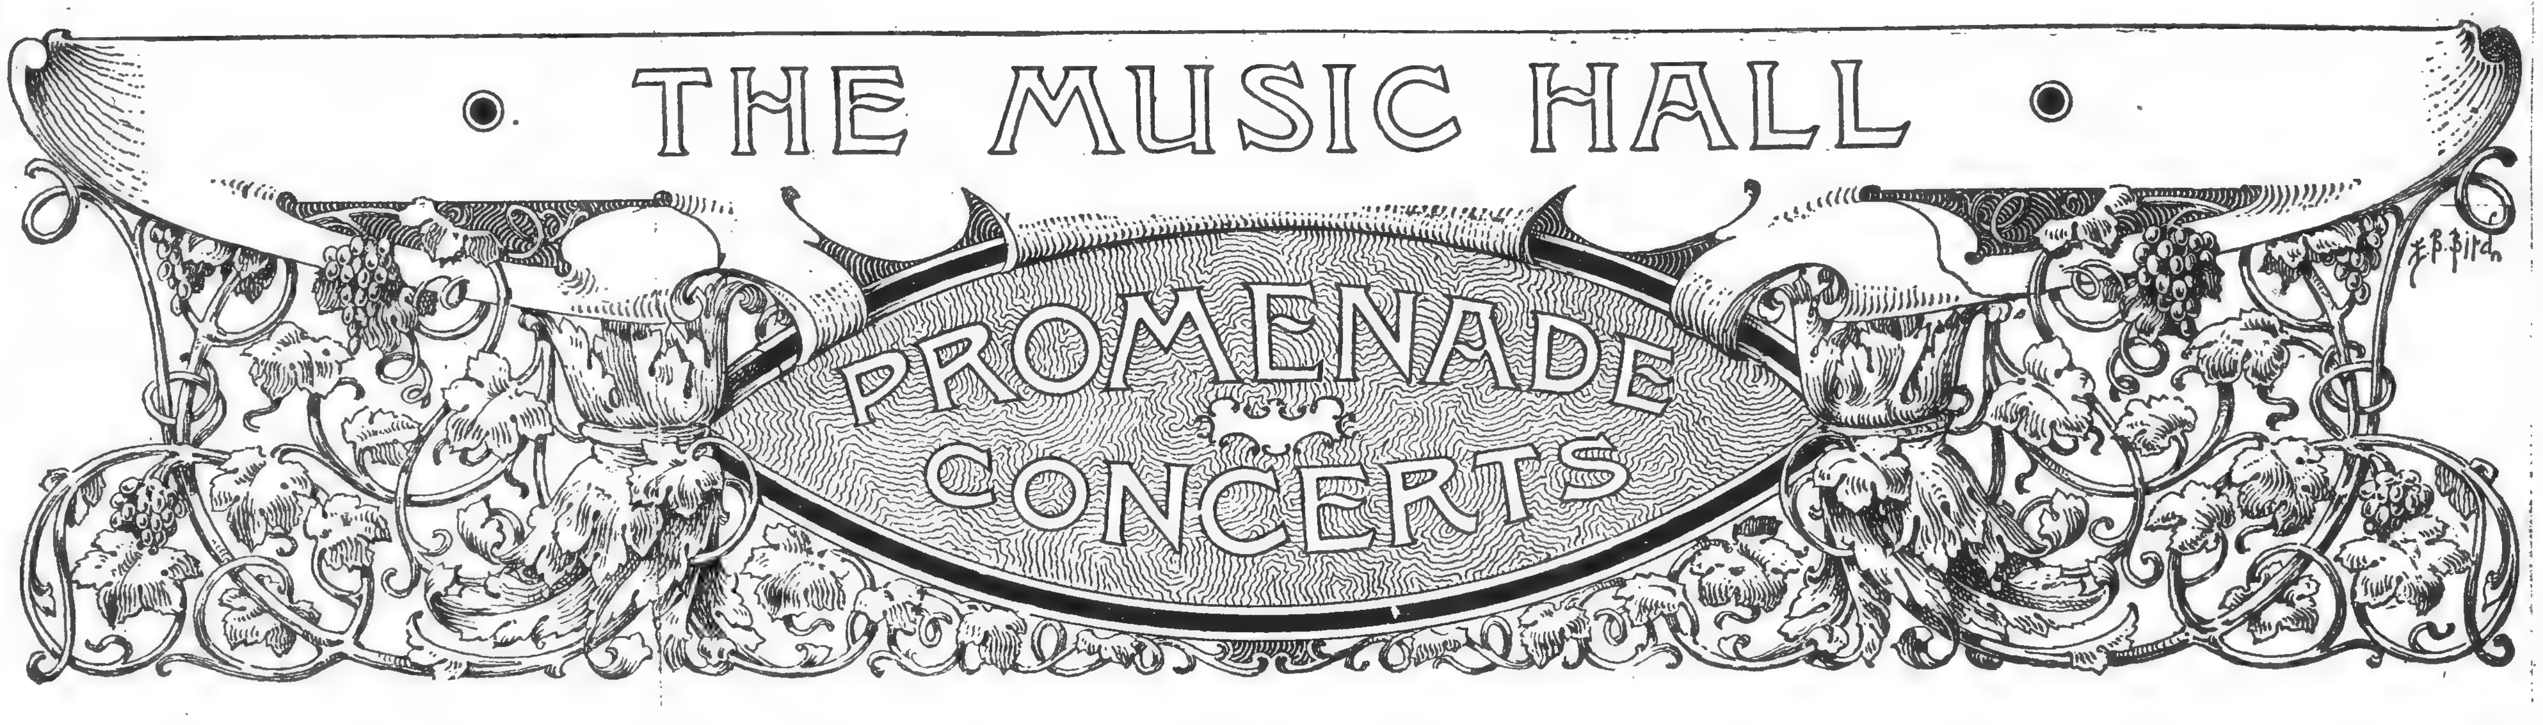
Engraving

PHILIP KRIM, Importer of Rhine Wines, Warranted Unadulterated, and Dealer in GROCERIES AND FOREIGN PRODUCE, No. 163 SHAWMUT AVENUE.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 29.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns Nos.	1 and 2,	from $80 to	$65.
" "	3 " 4,	" 60 to	50.
" "	5 " 6,	" 50 to	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches

POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.

Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 596th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Our Country"	Adams
2.	OVERTURE, "Pique Dame"	Suppé
3.	WALTZ, "Pomone"	Waldteufel
4.	SELECTION, "The Mikado"	Sullivan
5.	BALLET MUSIC, "Henry VIII."	Massenet
6.	OVERTURE, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
7.	MENUET, "Pearl of Orr's Island" (First Time.)	Thos. Ryan
8.	MARCH (First Time.)	Heinrich Gebhard
9.	HYMN to "St. Cecilia" Solo Violin, MR. I. SCHNITZLER. The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Gounod
10.	WALTZ, "Meerleuchten"	Ziehrer
11.	POLKA, "Santa Claus"	Bayer
12.	MARCH, "Am I a Wizard?"	Herbert

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

THURSDAY, June 18. CADETS' NIGHT. Selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk." For programme in full, see page 7. See Special Announcement on page 5.

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz,	Louis Ganne,	75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka,	Louis Ganne,	75c.

The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 30.

THE . . . . MUSIC . . HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 597th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 18.

CADET NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Excelsior, Jr."	Tracey
2.	OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry"	Suppé
3.	WALTZ MILITAIRE, "La Housarde" (First Time.)	Ganne
4.	SELECTION, "Erminie"	Jakobowsky
5.	OVERTURE, "Tabasco"	Chadwick
6.	BLISSFUL DREAM The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Meyer-Helmund
7	INTERMEZZO, "Tabasco"	Chadwick
8.	WALTZ POTPOURRI, "1492"	Pflueger
9.	OVERTURE, "1812"	Tschaikowsky
10.	WALTZ from "Jack and the Beanstalk"	Sloane
11.	POLKA, "Sängerlust"	Strauss
12.	MARCH from "Jack and the Beanstalk"	Sloane

See Special Announcement on page 5.

Monday, June 22.

600th NIGHT.

Special Programme of all the Favorite Selections of the past two seasons.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.
Patterns Nos. 1 and 2, from $80 to $65.
" " 3 " 4, " 60 to 50.
" " 5 " 6, " 50 to 45.
This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS
FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated
Lager
Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.
"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.
The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.
BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON
CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK
CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[84]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
E. B. Bird.

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JUNE 19, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 31.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.

Patterns No.	1	$65.
" "	2	70.
" "	3 and 4	50.
" "	5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.

Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE . . . .
MUSIC . .
HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 598th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JUNE 19.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Princess Ninetta" . . . . Strauss
2. OVERTURE, "Stradella" . . . . Flotow
3. WALTZ, "Doctrinen" . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Faust" . . . . Gounod

5. ENTRÉE TRIOMPHALE DES BOYARDS . . . . Halvorsen
6. a. THE SORCERER'S DANCE } from "Tone Pictures" Farwell
   b. THE SAGE'S DANCE }
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. INTERMEZZO, "Forget me not" . . . . Macbeth
8. OVERTURE, "Le Roi d'Ys" . . . . Lalo

9. SELECTION, "Gondoliers" . . . . Sullivan
10. WALTZ, "Avec Plaisir" . . . . Strobl
    (First Time.)
11. MAZOURKA, "Unparteische Kritik" . . . . Strauss
12. TEUFELS MARCH . . . . Suppé

See Special Announcement on page 5.

MONDAY, JUNE 22.

600th NIGHT.

Special Programme of all the Favorite Selections of the past two seasons.

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song.
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET
Norfolk Cabinet Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABI[illegible] Tele[illegible] Roxbury
EDWARD [illegible] [illegible]ton.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS
F. B. Bird.

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 32.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns	No.	1	$65.
"	"	2	70.
"	"	3 and 4	50.
"	"	5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . .
MUSIC . .
HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 599th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 20.

PROGRAMME.

1.	TANNHAEUSER MARCH	Wagner
2.	OVERTURE, "Masaniello"	Auber
3.	WALTZ, "Meerleuchten"	Ziehrer
4.	SELECTION, "Carmen"	Bizet
5.	MAZOURKA, "La Scandinave" (First Time.)	Ganne
6.	MENUET for String Orchestra The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Boccherini
7.	GAVOTTE, "Louis XIII."	Ghys
8.	OVERTURE, "Poet and Peasant"	Suppé
9.	SELECTION, "Fatinitza"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Vienna Blood"	Strauss
11.	POLKA from "Puppenfee"	Bayer
12.	MARCH from "Puppenfee"	Bayer

See Special Announcement on page 5.

MONDAY, JUNE 22.

600th NIGHT.

Special Programme of all the Favorite Selections of the past two seasons.

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following: —

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."	60c.
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen	75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.	75c.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.	60c.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.	60c.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli,	60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P. B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK
CABINET

Norfolk Cabinet Lager Beer
Boston Eng. Co.

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

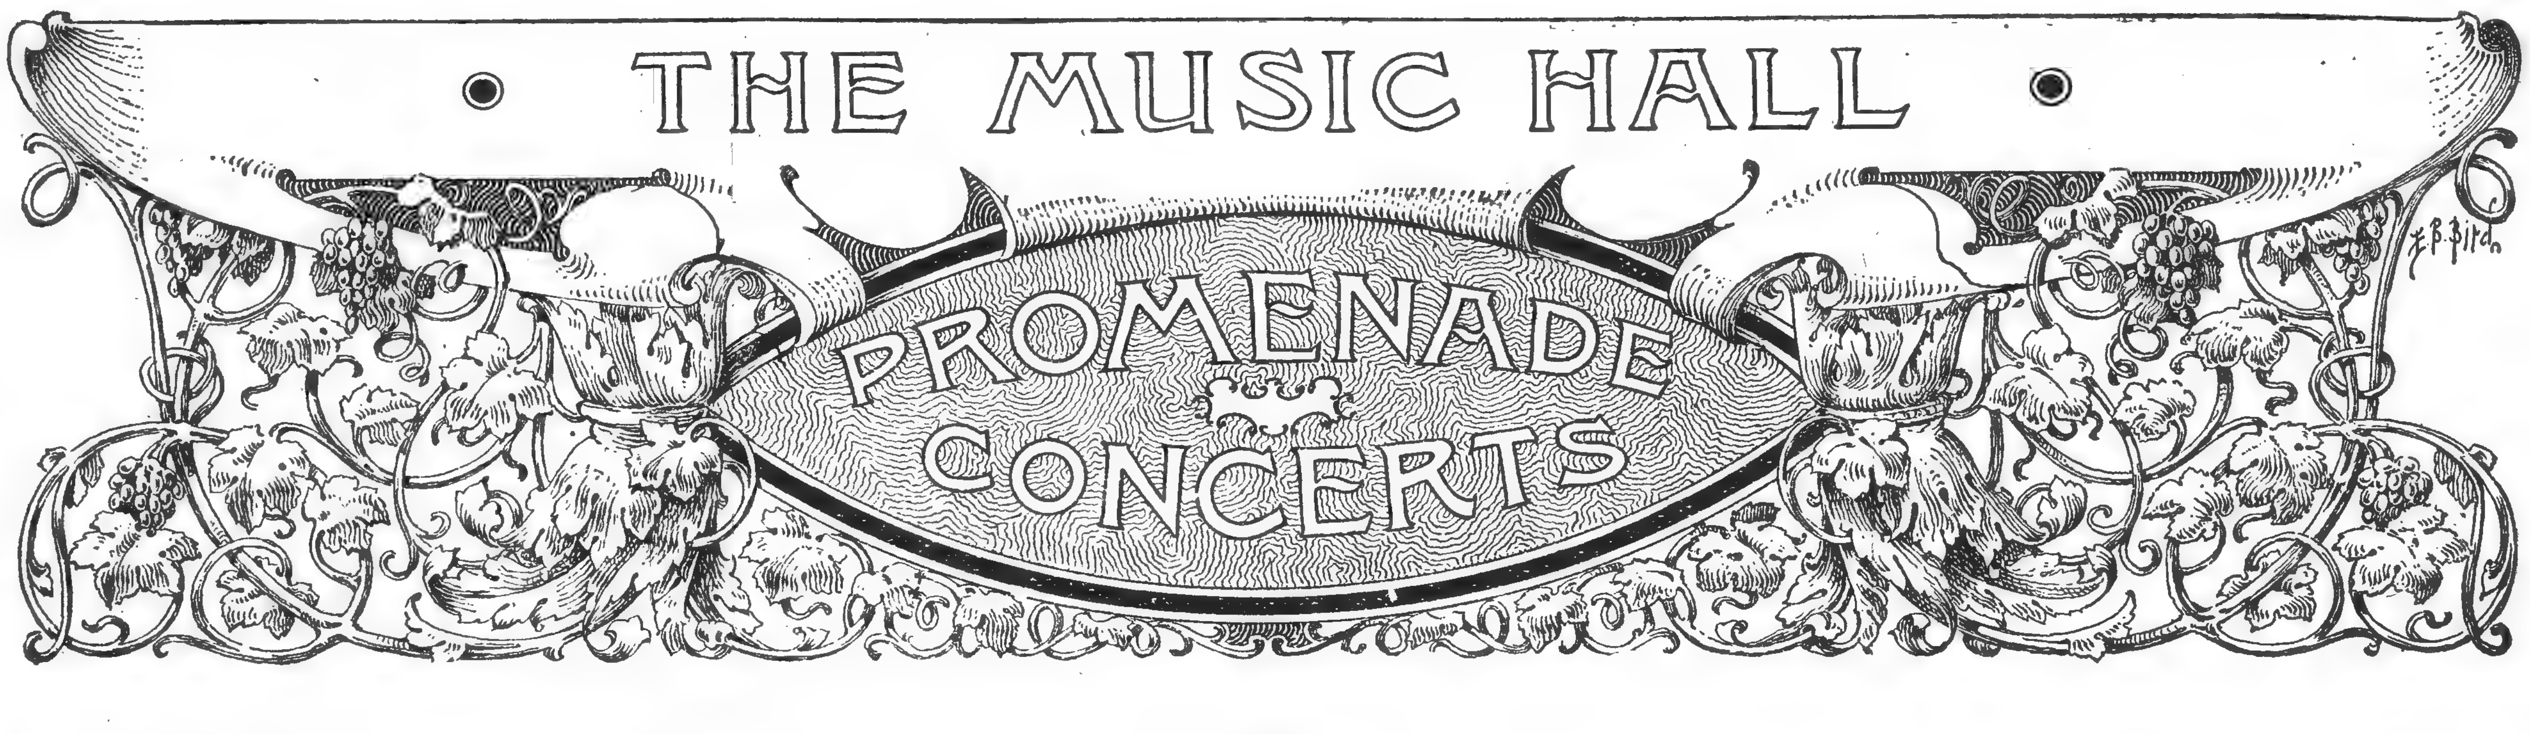
Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 33.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns No. 1 . . . . . . $65.
" " 2 . . . . . . 70.
" " 3 and 4 . . . 50.
" " 5 and 6 . . . 45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE . . . .
MUSIC . .
HALL . . .

Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 600th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

MONDAY, JUNE 22.

600TH PERFORMANCE.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
2.	OVERTURE, "William Tell"	Rossini
3.	WALTZ, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
4.	SELECTION, "Robin Hood"	De Koven
5.	NARCISSUS	Nevin
6.	SUITE, "Peer Gynt" I. Morning Dawn. II. Aase's Death. III. Anitra's Dance. IV. In the Halls of the King of the Dovre Mountains. The Imps are chasing Peer Gynt.	Grieg
7.	LOVE'S DREAM AFTER THE BALL The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Czibulka
8.	INTRODUCTION TO ACT III., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
9.	OVERTURE, "Stradella"	Flotow
10.	WALTZ, "Arlequin en Voyage"	Zach
11.	POLKA, "Gypsy Baron"	Strauss
12.	BOCCACCIO MARCH	Suppé

See Special Announcement on page 5.

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.

"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.

The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

I

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK
CABINET

Norfolk Co
Lager Be
Boston Phr. Co

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

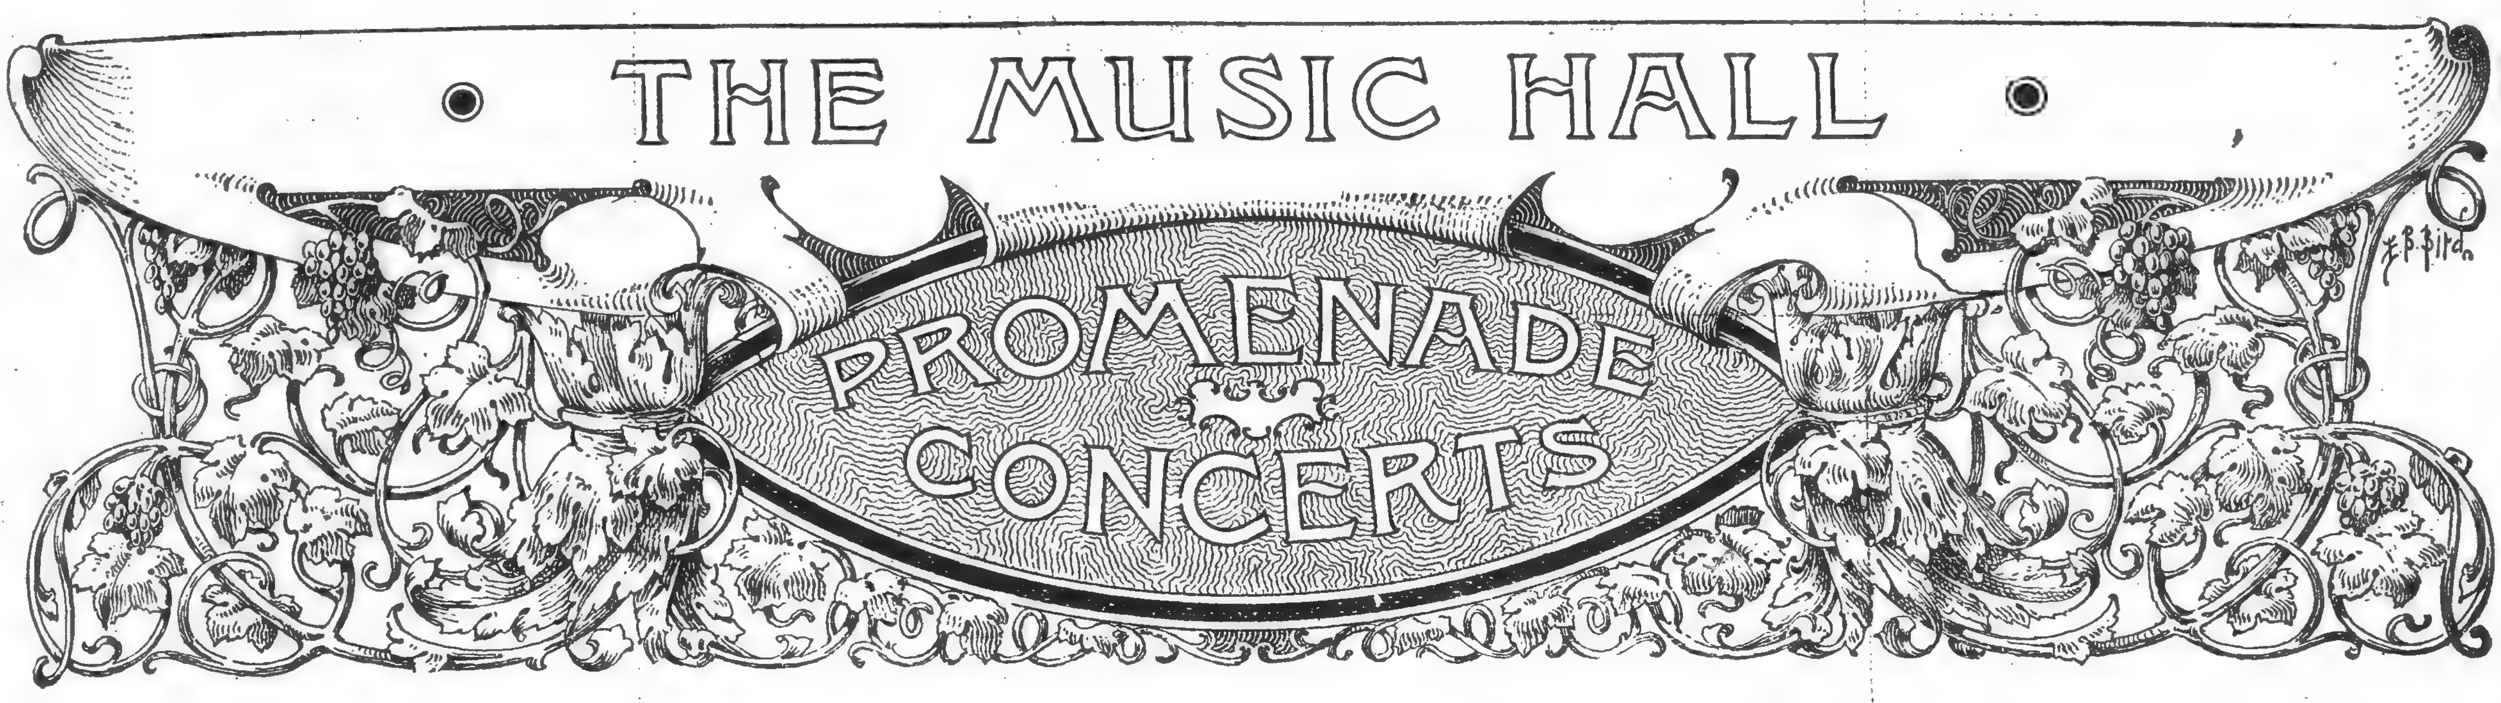
- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 34.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.

Patterns No.	1	$65.
" "	2	70.
" "	3 and 4	50.
" "	5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.

OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester
Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

THE.... MUSIC.. HALL... Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 601st Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 23.

PROGRAMME.

1. WERNER MARCH	Ziehrer
2. OVERTURE, "Oberon"	Weber
3. WALTZ, "Kaiser"	Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Brigands"	Offenbach
5. TWO SLAVONIC DANCES	Dvorák
6. LA VEILLE DE L'ANGE GARDIEN, for String Orchestra, (First Time.)	Pierné
7. AIR DE BALLET, "Campanellino"	Clark
8. OVERTURE, "Sakuntala"	Goldmark
9. SELECTION, "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
10. WALTZ, "Puppenfee"	Bayer
11. POLKA, "Kosakenritt"	Millöcker
12. MARCH, "Wien bleibt Wien"	Schrammel

The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

See Special Announcement on page 5.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24.

First Appearance of the FRENCH HORN QUARTET of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

MR. HACKEBARTH.
MR. HEIN.
MR. SCHUMANN.
MR. LORBEER.

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song.
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager Beer
Boston Print Co.

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 35.

THE.... MUSIC.. HALL... Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 602d Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24.

PROGRAMME.

1.	EXPOSITION MARCH	Fahrbach
2.	OVERTURE, "La Dame Blanche"	Boieldieu
3.	WALTZ, "Neu Vienna"	Strauss
4.	SELECTION, "Il Trovatore"	Verdi
5.	SCARF DANCE	Chaminade
6.	ROMANZA, "Am Strande" (First Time.) The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Carl Hampe
7.	HORN QUARTET
	a. "In einem kühlen Grunde"	Gluck
	b. "Der frohe Wandersmann"	Mendelssohn
	c. "When Evening's Twilight"	Hatton
8.	OVERTURE, "Die Meistersinger"	Wagner
9.	POLONAISE	Liszt
10.	WALTZ, "Land of Flowers" (First Time.)	Hadley
11.	POLKA, "Indigo"	Strauss
12.	MARCH, "Grüss Gott"	Komzak

See Special Announcement on page 5.

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."	60c.
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen	75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.	75c.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.	60c.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.	60c.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli,	60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns No. 1	$65.
" " 2	70.
" " 3 and 4	50.
" " 5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC—
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK
CABINET
Norfolk Lager Beer

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 36.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.

Patterns No.	1	$65.
" "	2	70.
" "	3 and 4	50.
" "	5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK
IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated
* Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 603d Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 25.

FRENCH COMPOSERS' NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1. CORONATION MARCH from "Le Prophète" . . . Meyerbeer
2. OVERTURE, "The Bronze Horse" . . . . . . Auber
3. WALTZ, "Violets" . . . . Waldteufel
4. SELECTION, "La Fille de Madame Angot" . . . Lecocq

5. BALLET MUSIC, "Coppelia" . . . . Délibes
   - a. Notturno.
   - b. Music of the Automatons and Waltz.
   - c. Czardas.
6. LE DERNIER SOMMEIL DE LA VIERGE . . . . Massenet
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7. OVERTURE, "La Jolie Parfumeuse" . . . . . . Offenbach
8. DANSE MACABRE . . . . Saint-Saëns
   Solo Violin, MR. SCHNITZLER.

9. LA COLOMBE . . . . Gounod
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
10. OFFENBACHIANA . . . . Conradi
11. LA MOUSMÉ . . . . Ganne
12. MARCHE, "Tzigane" . . . . Lacome

See Special Announcement on page 5.

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.

"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.

The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Co.
Lager Beer

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH.
EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury
or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[90]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 37.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.

Patterns No.	1	$65.
" "	2	70.
" "	3 and 4	50.
" "	5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 604th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

FRIDAY, JUNE 26.

ITALIAN COMPOSERS' NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH from "Probekuss" . . . . Millöcker
2. OVERTURE, "La Gazza Ladra" . . . . . . Rossini
3. WALTZ, "Tales from the Orient" . . . . . . Strauss
4. SELECTION, "Aïda" . . . . Verdi

---

5. TWO INTERMEZZI from "Carmen" . . . . . . Bizet
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
6. MENUET FOR STRING ORCHESTRA . . . . Bulzoni
7. a. GAVOTTE, "Coquette" . . . . Sudessi
   b. RONDO D'AMOUR . . . . Westerhout
8. OVERTURE, "Semiramide" . . . . Rossini

---

9. INTERMEZZO, "I Pagliacci" . . . . . . Leoncavallo
10. WALTZ, "Promotionen" . . . . Strauss
11. MAZOURKA, "Frauen-Herz" . . . . Strauss
12. MARCH, "Bass Point" . . . . Abloescher
    (First Time.)

See Special Announcement on page 5.

Mlle. CHAMINADE'S New Pianoforte Pieces.

RITOURNELLE. Transcription of the famous song.
TROIS PRELUDES MELODIQUES, Op. 84, No. 1 in A minor.
No. 2 in F major.
No. 3 in D minor.
TERPSICHORE. 6th Air de Ballet.
CHANSON NAPOLITAINE, Op. 82.

The above are considered very fine examples of the most popular and successful lady composer of the present day.

Just published, specially arranged for College and School use, Mlle. CHAMINADE'S famous "Angelus," "Barcarolle," "On Silvery Waves."

Sole Representatives for America,
BOOSEY & CO., 9 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Co. Lager Beer

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

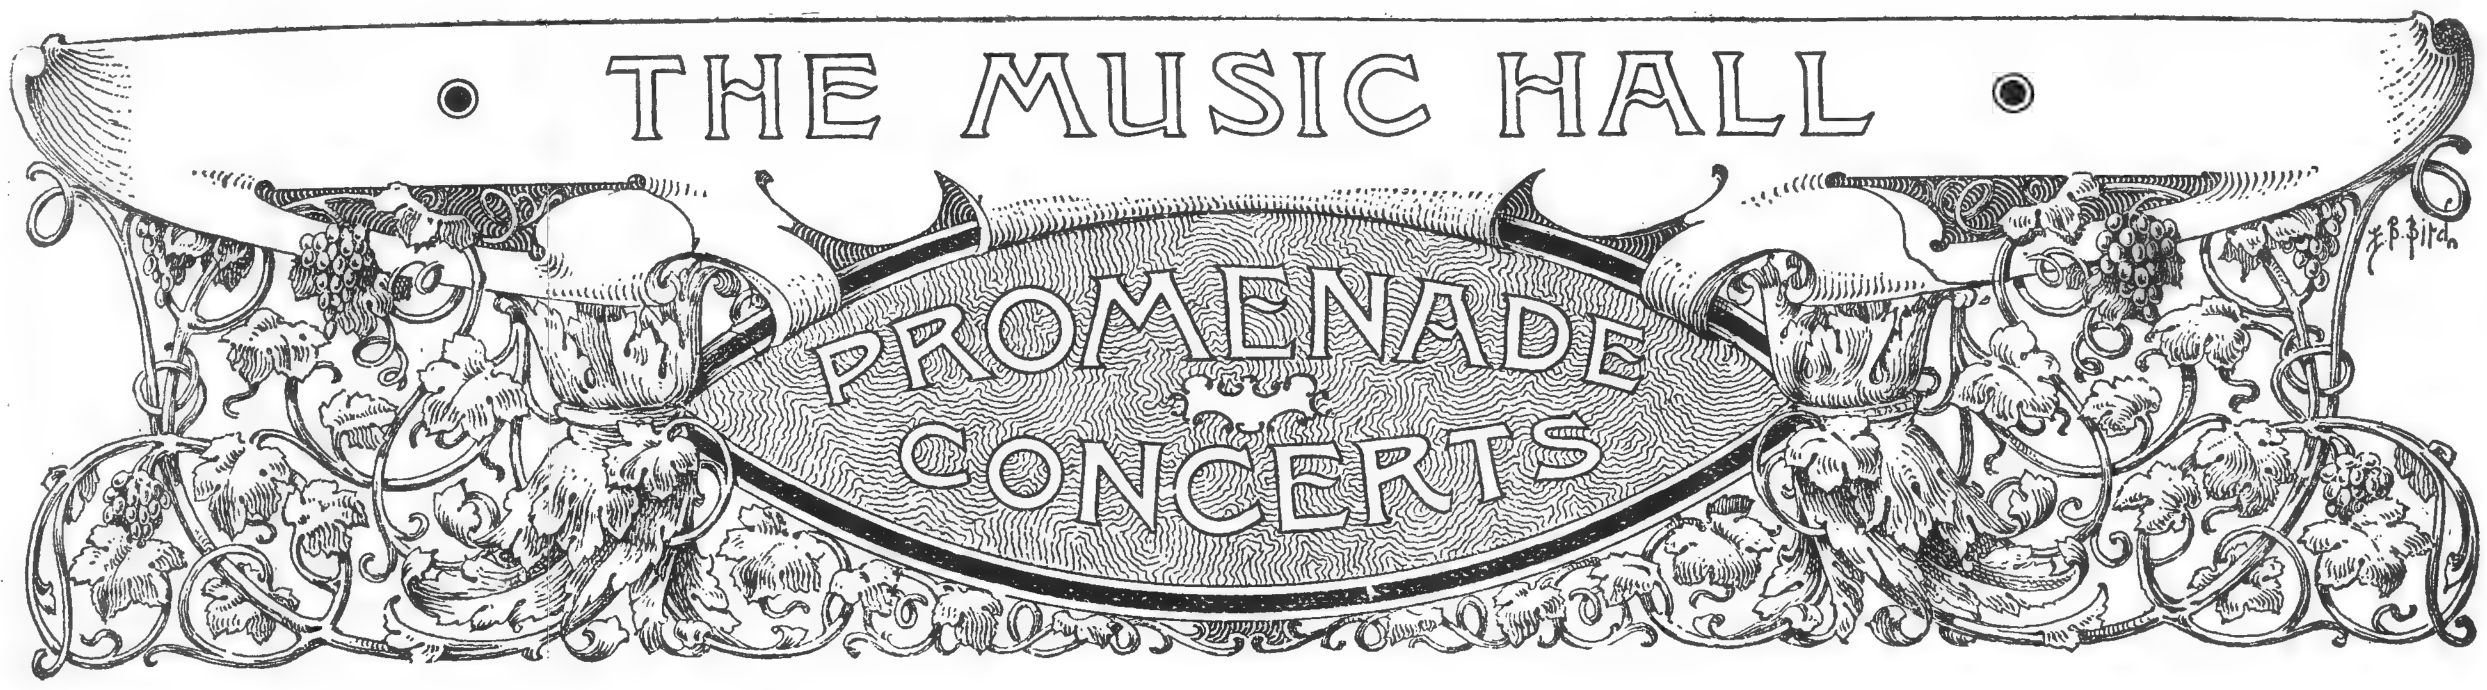
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

[91]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 38.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 605th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 27.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Austria"	Zach
2.	OVERTURE, "Zampa"	Hérold
3.	WALTZ, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
4.	SELECTION, "Ruddygore"	Sullivan
5.	TWO HUNGARIAN DANCES	Brahms
6.	RETRAITE CROATE	Gabriel-Marie
7.	LE DÉLUGE Solo Violin, MR. I. SCHNITZLER. The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Saint-Saëns
8.	WEDDING MARCH	Mendelssohn
9.	OVERTURE, "Pique Dame"	Suppé
10.	WALTZ, "Barcarolle"	Waldteufel
11.	POLKA, "Tic-Tac"	Strobl
12.	POLKA MARCH	Tracy

See Special Announcement on page 5.

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, ... 60c.
The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen . . 75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, ... 75c.
Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, ... 60c.
Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, ... 60c.
Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli, ... 60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

3

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.

Patterns No.	1	$65.
" "	2	70.
" "	3 and 4	50.
" "	5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
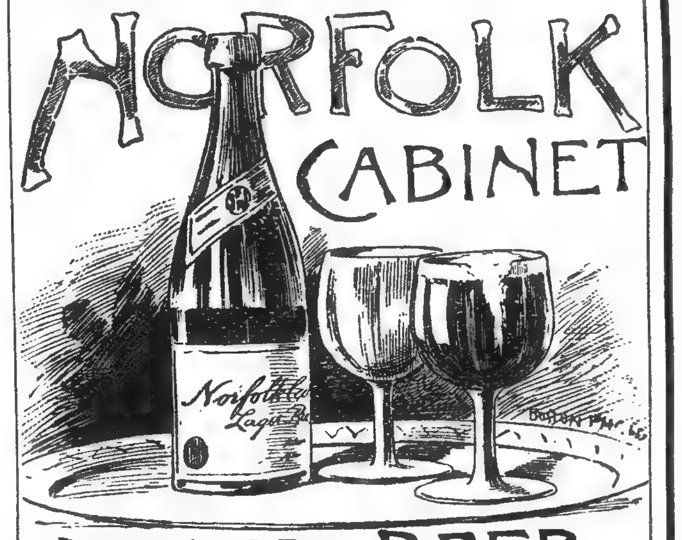
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap,
But how Good."

P.B ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.



LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL.
Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

[92]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 29, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 39.

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 605th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

MONDAY, JUNE 29.

AMERICAN COMPOSERS' NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Washington Post"	Sousa
2.	OVERTURE, "Sphinx"	Thompson
3.	WALTZ, "Waves of the Danube"	Ivanovici
4.	SELECTION, "Fencing-master"	De Koven
5.	SUITE a. In a Haunted Forest. b. Summer Idyll. c. The Shepherdess's Song. d. Forest Spirits.	MacDowell
6.	ON TIPTOE The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Hosmer
7.	MINUET, "Pearl of Orr's Island"	Ryan
8.	DANCE AND MARCH OF THE GNOMES	De Koven
9.	a. CRADLE-SONG b. BUTTERFLIES	Bendix
10.	WALTZ, "Obispah"	Atkinson
11.	POLKA, "Tout à la Joie"	Fahrbach
12.	MARCH, "Up the Street"	Morse

See Special Announcement on page 5.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE
1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.

Patterns No. 1	$65.
" " 2	70.
" " 3 and 4	50.
" " 5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.
Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated Lager Beer
is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
☞ "Not how Cheap, But how Good."

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.

"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, . . . 75c.

The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
P.B. ALE
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.
For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.
HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

THE MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JULY 1, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 41.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD
$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.
Reduction in Price.

Patterns	No. 1	$65.
"	" 2	70.
"	" 3 and 4	50.
"	" 5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated
Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 608th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 1.

GERMAN COMPOSERS' NIGHT.

PROGRAMME.

1.	MARCH, "Puppenfee"	Bayer
2.	OVERTURE, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
3.	WALTZ, "Kaiser"	Strauss
4.	OVERTURE, "Tannhäuser"	Wagner
5.	TWO MOVEMENTS FROM SUITE Allegretto. Perpetuum Mobile.	Moszkowski
6.	"AM MEER," arranged for Orchestra, with Trombone Obbligato by CARL HAMPE	Schubert
7.	TRAEUMEREI The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.	Schumann
8.	HULDIGUNG'S MARCH	Wagner
9.	OVERTURE, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
10.	MARCIA ALLA TURCA	Beethoven
11.	WALTZ, "Meerleuchten"	Ziehrer
12.	MARCH, "Hoch Habsburg"	Kral

See Special Announcement on page 5.

The demand in BOSTON for the latest ENGLISH SONGS is greater than ever. Ask your dealer for the following:—

"MIDSUMMER DREAMS," 2 keys, Guy d'Hardelot, The Musical Courier says, "One of her best songs, fitted to a delightful and clever accompaniment."	60c.
"THE VOICE OF THE FATHER," 4 keys, F. H. Cowen	75c.
"FLORENTINE SERENADE," Georg Henschel, Sung with immense success by Mr. BEN DAVIES.	75c.
"SPRING," 2 keys, Georg Henschel, Sung by Mrs. G. HENSCHEL.	60c.
"FIONA," 4 keys, Stephen Adams, Sung by Mr. EDWARD LLOYD.	60c.
"DEARER FAR," Armando Seppilli,	60c.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., New York.

3

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

P.B. ALE
A·MALT·TONIC—
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Lager

LAGER BEER
A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, . 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

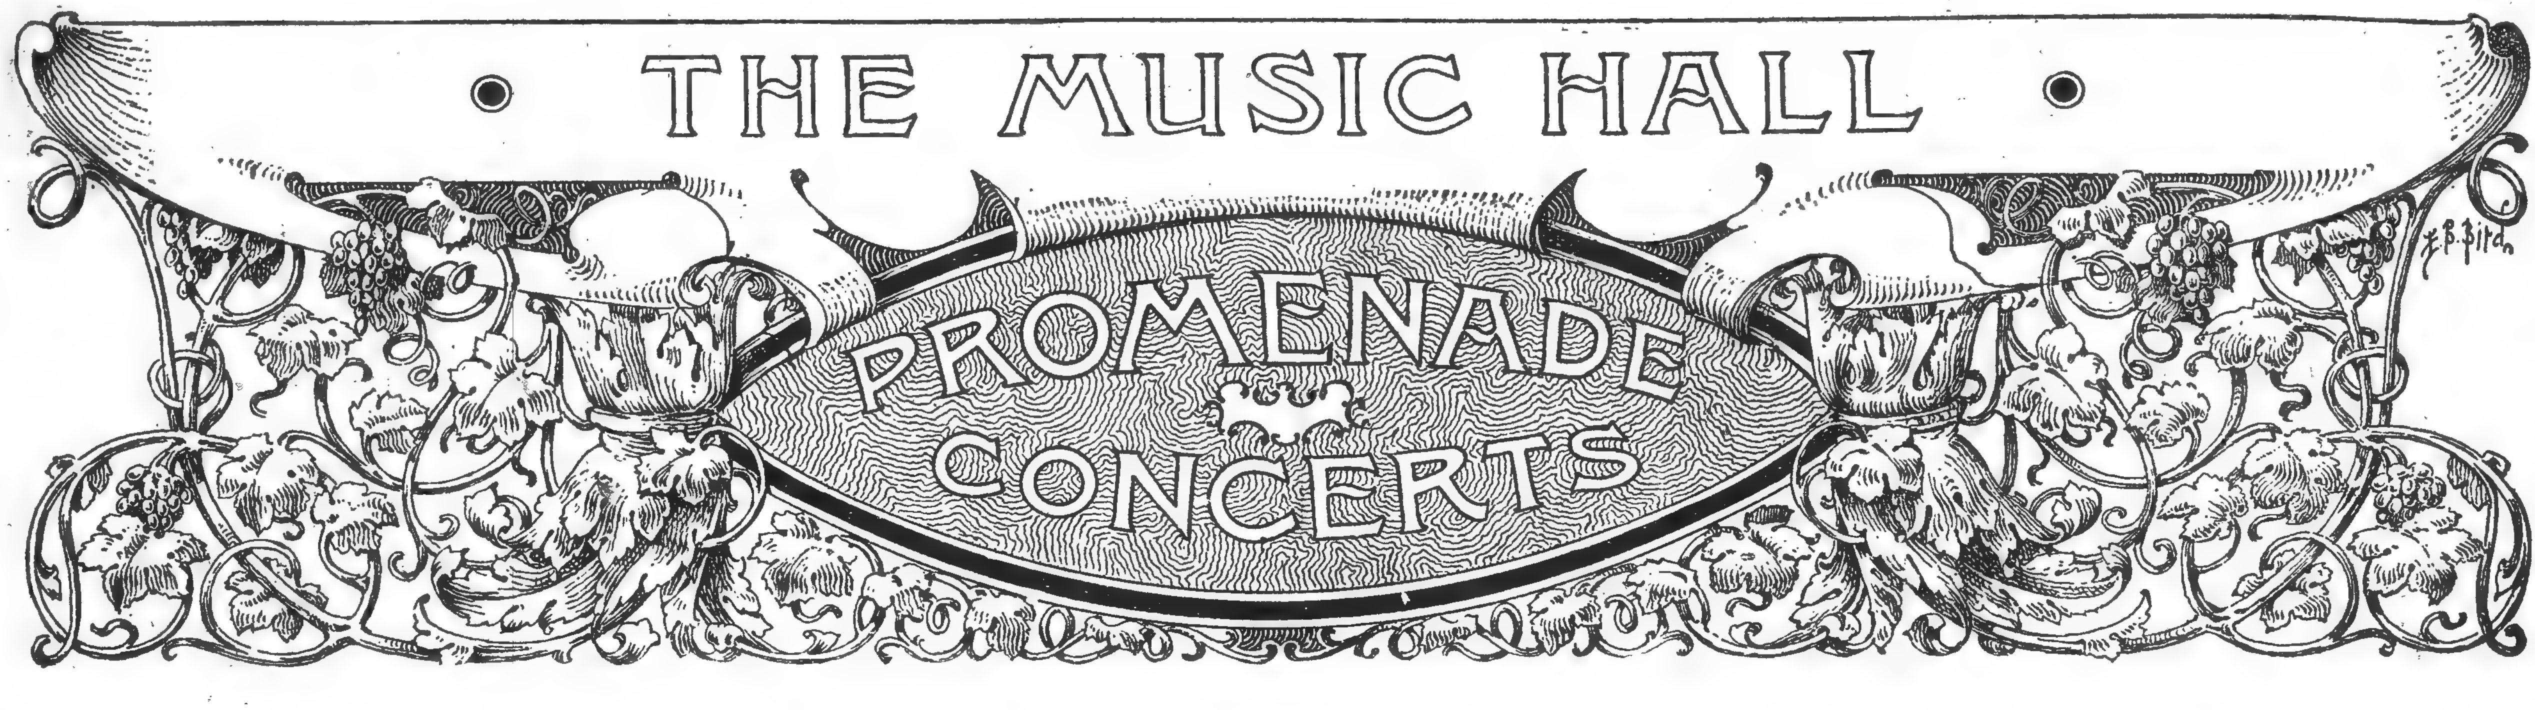
DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



PUBLISHED BY
C. A. ELLIS,
MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1896.

SUMMER SEASON.
Vol. XI. No. 42.

Columbia Bicycles
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

$100 TO ALL ALIKE

1896 Hartford Bicycles.

Reduction in Price.

Patterns	No.	1	$65.
"	"	2	70.
"	"	3 and 4	50.
"	"	5 and 6	45.

This is the best value for the money offered in medium grade machines.

Boston Branches
POPE MANUFACTURING CO.
200 Boylston Street
and
84 Massachusetts Avenue.

TENNIS FLANNELS
CLEANSED TO EQUAL NEW
AT
LEWANDO'S,
17 TEMPLE PLACE, BOSTON.
Back Bay Branch, 284 Boylston Street.
OUR LAUNDRY WORK IS SUPERIOR.
Bundles called for and delivered in Boston and suburbs.

Rochester Brew. Co.'s
Celebrated ✱ Lager Beer
Is the only draught beer
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
"Not how Cheap, But how Good."

THE MUSIC HALL . . . Promenade Concerts

ELEVENTH SEASON

The 609th Performance.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager. F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

THURSDAY, JULY 2.

Closing Night and Grand Complimentary Testimonial to Mr. Max Zach.

PROGRAMME.

1. MARCH, "Princess Ninetta" . . . . Strauss
2. OVERTURE, "Mignon" . . . . A. Thomas
3. WALTZ, "Le Retour d'Arlequin" (First Time.) . . . . Zach
4. OVERTURE, "Orpheus aux Enfers" . . . . Offenbach

---

5. ENTR'ACTE, "Rosamunde" . . . . Schubert
   The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
6. PRELUDE TO ACT I., "Lohengrin" . . . . . Wagner
7. LA COLOMBE . . . . Gounod
8. VIOLIN SOLO with Piano Accompaniment.
   a. Legende . . . . Wieniawski
   b. Spanish Dance . . . . Sarasate
   MR. I. SCHNITZLER. MR. ZACH, Accompanist.

---

9. WALTZ, "Freut euch des Lebens" . . . . Strauss
10. OVERTURE, "Light Cavalry" . . . . Suppé
11. LOVE'S DREAM AFTER THE BALL . . . . . Czibulka
12. MARCH, "Vienna Dude" . . . . Wagner

Owing to the sudden illness of Mr. Schuecker the Harp Solo will be omitted.

The Pianoforte is a Steinway, furnished by M. Steinert & Sons' Company.

The VERY LATEST Successes from PARIS.

"LA HOUSARDE,"
Military Waltz, . . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.

"LA SCANDINAVE,"
Norwegian Mazurka, . . Louis Ganne, ... 75c.

The above pieces can be had for full orchestra.

BOOSEY & CO., 9 E. Seventeenth St., NEW YORK.
SOLE AGENTS FOR ENOCH & CO., PARIS.

BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

PB ALE
A·MALT·TONIC
USED·BY·PHYSICIANS·
IN·THE·MASSACHUSETTS
GENERAL·AND
BOSTON·CITY
HOSPITALS
ESTABLISHED 1821
BREWED·AND·BOTTLED·BY
A·G·VAN NOSTRAND
BUNKER HILL BREWERIES
CHARLESTOWN
SOLD EVERYWHERE

VAN NOSTRAND'S
BOSTON CLUB LAGER
SOLD AT THESE CONCERTS.
PINTS, 20 CTS.

NORFOLK CABINET

Norfolk Cabinet Lager

LAGER BEER

A Particularly Fine Lager Beer for Family Use.

For sale at the S. S. PIERCE CO. and all other leading Grocery Stores in New England.
At WEBER'S, 25 Temple Place,
At BRIGHAM'S, 642 Washington Street,
At MARSTON'S, 23 Brattle Street,
And numerous others.

Our "CABINET" and "BISMARCK BRAEU" (see page 7 of this programme) are the most popular refreshments at these concerts.

HABICH & CO.
H. W. HABICH. EDWARD RUHL. Telephone, 56 Roxbury or 254 Haymarket, Boston.

DANIEL FRANK & CO.'S well-known N.S. and CELEBRIDAD CIGARS FOR SALE AT THESE CONCERTS. Telephone 1655.

ESTABROOK & EATON'S MARGUERITE PERFECTOS, 10c. EACH. CONCHAS, 10c., 3 FOR 25c. SOLD AT THE "POPS."

PROMENADE CONCERTS
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. SEASON
OF EIGHTEEN HUNDRED AND
NINETY-SIX. ☘ ☘ POSITIVELY
NOT TRANSFERABLE. ☘ ☘ ☘ ☘

1896

Admit Mr. XXXXXX

ASSISTANT MANAGER.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.
ONLY 10 MORE
MUSIC HALL | Promenade Concerts
GRAND ORCHESTRA OF 50.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.
Every Evening (Except Sunday) 8 to 11.
POPULAR MUSIC.
TOMORROW (MONDAY) EVENING,
600th CONCERT.
ADMISSION 25c.
Reserved Seats on floor or balcony 25c. Extra.

FINAL PROMENADE CONCERT.

Brilliant Closing Last Evening of a Successful Season.

Music Hall presented an attractive scene, last evening, on the occasion of the closing of the series of "Pop" concerts which, for the eleventh season, have been the leading form of enjoyment for stay-at-homes. The character of these entertainments is exactly right for the early-summer evenings, and that they are popular is evidenced by the large patronage given them. This season has been a successful one from this point of view, and the patronage has been on a line with the audiences found at any strictly first-class entertainment in the winter season. The make-up of the programmes each season has been most satisfactory, and steady improvement has been the aim of the conductors.

This season the musicians have been led by Max Zach, from the Symphony Orchestra ranks, in which organization he plays first viola. He is the sixth Symphony man who has served in different seasons as conductor of these promenades, the others being John C. Mullaly, Wilhelm Rietzel, Franz Kneisel, E. Gruenberg and T. Adamowski. The musicians this season have been chosen from the same organization. While favorite standard compositions have been placed on the programmes, as well as the works of the great composers, many novelties also have been heard, nearly fifty having been given this season for the first time. Regular patrons must have noticed the favor which has been accorded the "Grubenlichter" waltz by Zeller. This has been on the bills every week, and enthusiastically applauded each time. As an extra number it has been interpolated many times by request. Another favorite number has been an arrangement of airs from the always popular "Robin Hood."

Last evening's programme was well-planned, with a wide range of composers. A brace of violin solos was one of the numbers, a legend by Wieniawski and a Spanish dance by Sarasate, played by Mr. I. Schnitzler, who received and responded to a double encore. A large audience occupied every available seat at the tables and both balconies were filled, as well. There were many table parties of people who came up from places along the North Shore and elsewhere, and the audience was a striking one in the matter of gowns and millinery.

Mr. F. R. Comee, who, in the absence of Mr. C. A. Ellis, has managed the concerts this summer, has done everything possible to promote the comfort and enjoyment of visitors to the hall, and it is owing to his good judgment and untiring efforts that the long series of entertainments has been such a pleasing and successful one.

There was a big crowd Thursday, the last night of the Pops, at the Music Hall, and at the close no end of enthusiasm for Mr. Zach, whose new position has been such as to make for himself a fine reputation in that capacity, as well as a violinist. Indeed, the season has shown emphatically what a success Mr. Comee has been as a manager and Mr. Zach as a conductor. The music and the programmes have been satisfactory throughout, and the majority of the patrons were, until the last week, when they were leaving town for good, made up of the best society and musical set. Mr. Comee has received the heartiest congratulation for the way in which he has carried through this the first series of Pops of which he has had sole charge, and he deserves all that can be said, and more.

On Thursday night, in the crush of tables on the floor, was especially noted the one occupied by Mrs. Charles Whitney of Milton and party. Mrs. Whitney, always handsome and stately, looked especially well in a gown of thin black stuff with a touch of white and a black and violet toque. At Mrs. Gardner's table, nearby, which was not occupied until 10 o'clock, were Miss Olga Gardner, with her brother, John L. Gardner, 2d, and Mr. Russell Sullivan, with their hostess. Mrs. Gardner was all in white, her low cut and sleeveless bodice partially covered with a fine deep white lace collarette. Her hat was of white straw, with white wings, and her veil, which she did not raise as usual, was of a thick meshed white lace. Miss Olga Gardner was in pink and silver, with a small white and pink hat. Col. and Mrs. A. M. Benson of Dorchester were at a table, with Mrs. Sheldon of the Beresford and Mr. Allen Sheldon. Mrs. Sheldon was distinctly elegant in a black satin coat-bodice opening over white, and revers of pale green and white brocade. Her toque was of deep pink roses and black. Mrs. Benson was in grass linen, with white silk blouse and a flower hat.

Others there were Mr. John C. Abbott, Mr. Pierre La Rose of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morrill, Capt. and Mrs. Alline, Dr. and Mrs. Fenderson, Mrs. Zach and her brother, Mrs. F. R. Comee, Col. Thomas and party, Mr. E. H. Little, Miss Gertrude Ball and Dr. and Mrs. Mixter.

Miss Kate Soley, the daughter of Lieut. John C. Soley, U. S. N., of New York, is visiting Mrs. Henry T. Spooner. She was with a party at the "Pops" Thursday night.

LAST OF THE "POPS."

Eleventh Season of the Promenade Concerts at Music Hall Close Last Night—Its Success, Financially and Otherwise.

The 11th annual season of the promenade concerts at Music Hall ended last night. This last concert was the 42d of the season of '96; the 609th in the whole line of concerts. Mr. Zach conducted. The program follows:

March, "Princess Ninetta"	Strauss
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin" (First time.)	Zach
Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"	Offenbach
Entra'acte, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
Prelude to Act I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
La Colombe	Gounod
Violin solo with piano accompaniment. a—Legende	Wieniawski
b—Spanish Dance Mr. I. Schnitzler. Mr. Zach, accompanist.	Sarasate
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Strauss
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppe
"Love's Dream After the Ball"	Czibulka
March, "Vienna Dude"	Wagner

Viewed from any joint, this past season has been the best of the eleven. Should anyone look askant at this, it is necessary in corroboration only to point to the unprecedented numerousness of the audiences that nightly thronged the hall, to the excellence and admirable variety of the programs, and to the many evidences of Mr. Max Zach's popularity.

And why, ask some, does not the season last longer? Why should not the jubilee go on? To answer this Mr. Comee must be brought in; and he says, "because experience has proved it good policy to end the season early in July." Experience applies arbitrary rules to everything.

The "Pops" seemed more than ever during this last season the most natural sequence in the world to the Symphony concerts. They attracted, it almost appeared, the same people, garbed more agreeably and gayly, however, and with smiles on their faces and real mirth in their laughter, and with anything but scores in their hands. That these audiences at the "Pops" become more sociable and yet better and better in "tone," as they say, season after season, was amply illustrated this year. A sufficient proof was the presence at the concert last night, and at the previous concerts this week, of many a visitor from the Bostonian annexes at Nahant and Beverly and Manchester-by-the-Sea. Financially, the season excelled even last season.

Last night's program was a good specimen of all the programs. Like most of the others, it had its novelty—the waltz written by Mr. Zach. The work was worthy of its associates. The first waltz theme is particularly fresh and charming. Its performance was redemanded. There were novelties enough during the season to lend interest to every program, with three to spare. The favorite of favorites was Zeller's "Grubenlichter" waltz. It was played at least a dozen times.

The other feature of last night's concert was the fiddling of Mr. Schnitzler. The first number, the legend by Wieniawski, enabled him to display his artistic fervor; the second, his admirable technique. So applausive was the audience afterward that he was induced to play again the finale of Sarasate's rhapsodical composition. As for encores, there was enough and to spare.

At the conclusion of the concert, as at its beginning, Mr. Zach was cheered vigorously by the audience. His conducting of the concerts throughout the season has been praiseworthy. His musical judgment was always deserving of applause. His arrangement of the programs, satisfactory as it was at the start, improved concert by concert. He kept to the letter the word which he expressed to a Journal reporter a few days after his selection as conductor—that he would aim to please, not to educate; to keep abreast of the times, not to deal in antiques.

In the absence of Mr. Ellis the concerts this year were managed by Mr. F. R. Comee. Their record making success is a sufficient encomium upon his management.

PROMENADE CONCERTS
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. SEASON
OF EIGHTEEN HUNDRED AND
NINETY-SIX. ❧ ❧ POSITIVELY
NOT TRANSFERABLE. ❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

1896

Admit Mr. XXXXXX

ASSISTANT MANAGER.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.
ONLY 10 MORE
MUSIC HALL | Promenade Concerts
GRAND ORCHESTRA OF 50.
Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.
Every Evening (Except Sunday) 8 to 11.
POPULAR MUSIC.
TOMORROW (MONDAY) EVENING,
600th CONCERT.
ADMISSION 25c.
Reserved Seats on floor or balcony 25c. Extra.

FINAL PROMENADE CONCERT.

Brilliant Closing Last Evening of a Successful Season.

Music Hall presented an attractive scene, last evening, on the occasion of the closing of the series of "Pop" concerts which, for the eleventh season, have been the leading form of enjoyment for stay-at-homes. The character of these entertainments is exactly right for the early-summer evenings, and that they are popular is evidenced by the large patronage given them. This season has been a successful one from this point of view, and the patronage has been on a line with the audiences found at any strictly first-class entertainment in the winter season. The make-up of the programmes each season has been most satisfactory, and steady improvement has been the aim of the conductors.

This season the musicians have been led by Max Zach, from the Symphony Orchestra ranks, in which organization he plays first viola. He is the sixth Symphony man who has served in different seasons as conductor of these promenades, the others being John C. Mullaly, Wilhelm Rietzel, Franz Kneisel, E. Gruenberg and T. Adamowski. The musicians this season have been chosen from the same organization. While favorite standard compositions have been placed on the programmes, as well as the works of the great composers, many novelties also have been heard, nearly fifty having been given this season for the first time. Regular patrons must have noticed the favor which has been accorded the "Grubenlichter" waltz by Zeller. This has been on the bills every week, and enthusiastically applauded each time. As an extra number it has been interpolated many times by request. Another favorite number has been an arrangement of airs from the always popular "Robin Hood."

Last evening's programme was well-planned, with a wide range of composers. A brace of violin solos was one of the numbers, a legend by Wieniawski and a Spanish dance by Sarasate, played by Mr. I. Schnitzler, who received and responded to a double encore. A large audience occupied every available seat at the tables and both balconies were filled, as well. There were many table parties of people who came up from places along the North Shore and elsewhere, and the audience was a striking one in the matter of gowns and millinery.

Mr. F. R. Comee, who, in the absence of Mr. C. A. Ellis, has managed the concerts this summer, has done everything possible to promote the comfort and enjoyment of visitors to the hall, and it is owing to his good judgment and untiring efforts that the long series of entertainments has been such a pleasing and successful one.

There was a big crowd Thursday, the last night of the Pops, at the Music Hall, and at the close no end of enthusiasm for Mr. Zach, whose new position has been such as to make for himself a fine reputation in that capacity, as well as a violinist. Indeed, the season has shown emphatically what a success Mr. Comee has been as a manager and Mr. Zach as a conductor. The music and the programmes have been satisfactory throughout, and the majority of the patrons were, until the last week, when they were leaving town for good, made up of the best society and musical set. Mr. Comee has received the heartiest congratulation for the way in which he has carried through this the first series of Pops of which he has had sole charge, and he deserves all that can be said, and more.

On Thursday night, in the crush of tables on the floor, was especially noted the one occupied by Mrs. Charles Whitney of Milton and party. Mrs. Whitney, always handsome and stately, looked especially well in a gown of thin black stuff with a touch of white and a black and violet toque. At Mrs. Gardner's table, nearby, which was not occupied until 10 o'clock, were Miss Olga Gardner, with her brother, John L. Gardner, 2d, and Mr. Russell Sullivan, with their hostess. Mrs. Gardner was all in white, her low cut and sleeveless bodice partially covered with a fine deep white lace collarette. Her hat was of white straw, with white wings, and her veil, which she did not raise as usual, was of a thick meshed white lace. Miss Olga Gardner was in pink and silver, with a small white and pink hat. Col. and Mrs. A. M. Benson of Dorchester were at a table, with Mrs. Sheldon of the Beresford and Mr. Allen Sheldon. Mrs. Sheldon was distinctly elegant in a black satin coat-bodice opening over white, and revers of pale green and white brocade. Her toque was of deep pink roses and black. Mrs. Benson was in grass linen, with white silk blouse and a flower hat.

Others there were Mr. John C. Abbott, Mr. Pierre La Rose of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morrill, Capt. and Mrs. Alline, Dr. and Mrs. Fenderson, Mrs. Zach and her brother, Mrs. F. R. Comee, Col. Thomas and party, Mr. E. H. Little, Miss Gertrude Ball and Dr. and Mrs. Mixter.

Miss Kate Soley, the daughter of Lieut. John C. Soley, U. S. N., of New York, is visiting Mrs. Henry T. Spooner. She was with a party at the "Pops" Thursday night.

LAST OF THE "POPS."

Eleventh Season of the Promenade Concerts at Music Hall Closed Last Night—Its Success, Financially and Otherwise.

The 11th annual season of the promenade concerts at Music Hall ended last night. This last concert was the 42d of the season of '96; the 609th in the whole line of concerts. Mr. Zach conducted. The program follows:

March, "Princess Ninetta"	Strauss
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin" (First time.)	Zach
Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"	Offenbach
Entra'acte, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
Prelude to Act I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
La Colombe	Gounod
Violin solo with piano accompaniment.
a—Legende	Wieniawski
b—Spanish Dance	Sarasate
Mr. I. Schnitzler. Mr. Zach, accompanist.
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Strauss
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppe
"Love's Dream After the Ball"	Czibulka
March, "Vienna Dude"	Wagner

Viewed from any joint, this past season has been the best of the eleven. Should anyone look askant at this, it is necessary in corroboration only to point to the unprecedented numerousness of the audiences that nightly thronged the hall, to the excellence and admirable variety of the programs, and to the many evidences of Mr. Max Zach's popularity.

And why, ask some, does not the season last longer? Why should not the jubilee go on? To answer this Mr. Comee must be brought in; and he says, "because experience has proved it good policy to end the season early in July." Experience applies arbitrary rules to everything.

The "Pops" seemed more than ever during this last season the most natural sequence in the world to the Symphony concerts. They attracted, it almost appeared, the same people, garbed more agreeably and gayly, however, and with smiles on their faces and real mirth in their laughter, and with anything but scores in their hands. That these audiences at the "Pops" become more sociable and yet better and better in "tone," as they say, season after season, was amply illustrated this year. A sufficient proof was the presence at the concert last night, and at the previous concerts this week, of many a visitor from the Bostonian annexes at Nahant and Beverly and Manchester-by-the-Sea. Financially, the season excelled even last season.

Last night's program was a good specimen of all the programs. Like most of the others, it had its novelty—the waltz written by Mr. Zach. The work was worthy of its associates. The first waltz theme is particularly fresh and charming. Its performance was redemanded. There were novelties enough during the season to lend interest to every program, with three to spare. The favorite of favorites was Zeller's "Grubenlichter" waltz. It was played at least a dozen times.

The other feature of last night's concert was the fiddling of Mr. Schnitzler. The first number, the legend by Wieniawski, enabled him to display his artistic fervor; the second, his admirable technique. So applausive was the audience afterward that he was induced to play again the finale of Sarasate's rhapsodical composition. As for encores, there was enough and to spare.

At the conclusion of the concert, as at its beginning, Mr. Zach was cheered vigorously by the audience. His conducting of the concerts throughout the season has been praiseworthy. His musical judgment was always deserving of applause. His arrangement of the programs, satisfactory as it was at the start, improved concert by concert. He kept to the letter the word which he expressed to a Journal reporter a few days after his selection as conductor—that he would aim to please, not to educate; to keep abreast of the times, not to deal in antiques.

In the absence of Mr. Ellis the concerts this year were managed by Mr. F. R. Comee. Their record making success is a sufficient encomium upon his management.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

[illegible] "POP[illegible]

[illegible] summer season of [illegible] Music Hall ends [illegible] testimonial to [illegible] Zach has [illegible] tation and gained many [illegible]

[illegible] fine programme has been [illegible] a violin solo by Mr. [illegible] and a harp solo by Mr. Schuec[illegible] The season promises to end as it be[illegible] most brilliantly. This is the programme:—

March, "Princess Ninetta"	Strauss
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin"	Zach
(First time.)
Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"	[illegible]ach
Entr'acte, "Rosamunde"	[illegible]ert
Harp solo.
a. Adante	Ross[illegible]ars.
b. Mazourka	E. [illegible]muecker
Mr. Heinrich Schuecker.
Hungarian rhapsody	Liszt
Violin solo with piano accompaniment.
[illegible] Legende	[illegible]ienawski
[illegible]panish dance	Sarasate
[illegible] I. Schmitzler, Mr. Zach, accompanist.
[illegible], "Freut euch des Lebens"	Strauss
[illegible]mezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
[illegible]s Dream After the Ball	Czibul[illegible]
[illegible]ch, "Vienna Dude"	Wagn[illegible]

SUCCESSFUL SEASON ENDED.

No More "Pop" Concerts for Boston This Year.

That of Last Night Brought the Season to a Close—It Was the 609th Since the Inauguration of the Concerts in 1885—Acting Manager Comee Receives Due Credit.

The renowned "Pop" concert season ended last evening, with great applause and many expressions of regret from a houseful of summer folk.

Last night's performance was the 609th since the concert series was begun in 1885. Forty-two entertainments have been given this season, with increased profit to the management. The report for this year's concerts reflects very commendably on Mr. Comee's business ability. In the absence of Manager Ellis, who has been in Europe all the season, Mr. Comee has had entire charge of the entertainments, and there are, at least, two things for which he is happily responsible: A steady improvement in the character of "Pop" patrons, and a general, frank admission of "Pop" patrons of satisfaction with the music and the business service of the house.

Mr. Max Zach, conductor, who sits at the first desk of the violas in the Symphony orchestra, is the sixth conductor chosen from the orchestra. During several years he has been a member of the Adamowski quartet. This year he has acquitted himself with entire satisfaction, if the word of the "Pop" management and the applause of its patrons counts for anything.

Forty-five new selections have been given. Of all the scores Zella's "Grubenlichter" has been the favorite. Manager Comee has been asked again and again to run the piece, either as an encore or as an extra.

The season has closed comparatively early, because the management has found by experience that, although the financial end would not be considered apprehensively, there seems to be no urgent reason for keeping the musicians from a vacation, playing to houses not made up of the regular "Pop" quality.

Gentile Bohemia in Boston has had one more season of popular concerts, and there is no good reason why it should not be content, and look forward to the regular Symphony programme in the winter.

CLOSE OF THE "POP" CONCERTS.

Bouquets and Bravcs for the Musicians in Music Hall.

Genteel bohemia, en masse, was at Music hall last night to say goodby to Mr Max Zach and the dear, delightful allurements of the pops.

The 11th season closed happily all around. The place rang with "bravos" and the musicians were pelted with boutonnieres. Mr F. R. Comee, who has been acting manager for two seasons, had only encouraging things to say of the financial results. He was beaming with good spirits, as a manager may who lives to see his pet enterprise grow popular and prosperous.

The performance was the 609th since the concerts started in 1885. In the present season there have been 42 concerts.

Mr Zach has made himself the admired of all admirers to artistic Boston. In fact he has proved himself a delightful surprise to some of the concert goers. One of the "regulars," who is in close touch with the management and also a musician, said last evening that Mr Zach has been, from every point of view, an ideal conductor; none other had pleased the people better or shown himself a greater master of his art.

Mr Zach is the sixth conductor chosen from the symphony. His judgment has been infallible, his taste excellent, and he has handled his men splendidly. What has made him specially popular is that he rarely refused an encore.

The classic has been properly spiced with the "catchy." At least 45 compositions have been given their first presentation, making an average of more than one each night.

The special favorite of the season has been Zella's inspiring "Grubenlichter," which has been on the program at least once a week and has been played as an "extra" a dozen times more.

Mr Comee would give no figures, but he said there had been a healthy increase over the receipts last season.

[illegible] night. [illegible] the repeated strains of music that have assailed them these many months.

The Music hall promenades will close this evening with a complimentary concert to Mr Max Zach, the conductor. The program will be as follows: March, Princess Ninetta, Strauss; overture, Mignon, A. Thomas; Waltz, Le Retour d'Arlequin, Zach; overture, Orpheus aux Enfers, Offenbach; entr'acte, Rosamunde, Schubert; harp solos, Mr Heinrich Schueoker; Hungarian rhapsody, Liszt; violin solo, with piano accompaniment, Mr I. Schnitzler, Mr Zach accompanist; waltz, Freut euch des Lebens, Strauss; intermezzo, Cavalleria Rusticana, Mascagni; Love's Dream After the Ball, Czibulka; March, Vienna [illegible]de, Wagner.

LAST NIGHT OF "POPS."

The annual summer season of promenade concerts at Music Hall ends tonight with a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, conductor of the orchestra. Mr. Zach has made an excellent reputation and gained many friends.

A remarkably fine programme has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Sshnitzer and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. The season promises to end as it began, most brilliantly. This is the programme:—

March, "Princess Ninetta"	Strauss
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin"	Zach
(First time.)
Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"	Offenbach
Entr'acte, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
Harp solo.
a. Adante	Rossini-Alvars.
b. Mazourka	E. Schuecker
Mr. Heinrich Schuecker.
Hungarian rhapsody	Liszt
Violin solo with piano accompaniment.
a. Legende	Wienawski
b. Spanish dance	Sarasate
Mr. I. Schmitzler, Mr. Zach, accompanist.
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Strauss
Intermezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
Love's Dream After the Ball	Czibulka
March, "Vienna Dude"	Wagner

The annual summer season of promenade concerts at Music Hall ends tonight with a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, conduotor of the orchestra. Mr. Zach has made an excellent reputation and gained many friends. A remarkably fine programme has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. The season promises to end as it began, most brilliantly.

LAST NIGHT OF "POPS."

The annual summer season of promenade concerts at Music Hall ends tonight, with a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, conductor of the orchestra. Mr. Zach has made an excellent reputation and gained many friends.

A remarkably fine program has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler, and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. The season promises to end as it began, most brilliantly. The following is the program:

March, "Princess Ninetta"	Strauss
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin"	Zach
(First time.)
Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"	Offenbach
Entr'acte, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
Harp solo.
a. Andante	Rossini-Alvars
b. Mazourka	E. Schuecker
Mr. Heinrich Schuecker.
Hungarian Rhapsody	Liszt
Violin solo with piano accompaniment.
a. Legende	Wieniawski
b. Spanish Dance	Sarasate
Mr. I. Schnitzler. Mr. Zach, accompanist.
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Strauss
Intermezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
"Love's Dream After the Ball"	Czibulka
March, "Vienna Dude"	Wagner

[illegible] a souvenir of the occasion.

For the closing Promenade concert tonight, at Music Hall, a most excellent programme has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. This concert will be a testimonial to the conductor of the orchestra, Mr. Max Zach, who has won such hearty and merited praise for his excellent work. A large audience is assured. The programme in full is: March, "Pincess Ninetta," Strauss; overture, "Mignon," A. Thomas; waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin" (first time), Zach; overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers," Offenbach; entr'acte, "Rosamunde," Schubert; harp solo, andante, Rossini-Alvars, mazourka, E. Schuecker, Mr. Heinrich Schuecker; Hungarian rhapsody, Litz; Violin solo, with piano accompaniment, Legende, Wieniawski, Spanish dance, Sarasate, Mr. I. Schnitzler, Mr. Zach accompanist; waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens," Strauss; intermezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; "Love's Dream After the Ball," Czibulka; march, "Vienna Dude," Wagner.

LAST TWO NIGHTS OF THE PROMENADES.

The Promenade Concerts at Music Hall are almost at an end for the present season. Tomorrow (Thursday) is the closing night, and will be a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, who has conducted the orchestra so admirably during the season. Mr. Schnitzler has kindly consented to play a violin solo. Mr. Schuecker will also play a harp solo.

Tonight the program is devoted entirely to the works of German composers, and is as follows:

March, "Puppenfee"	Bayer
Overture, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
Waltz, "Kaiser"	Strauss
Overture, "Tannhauser"	Wagner
Two Movements from Suite	Mosskowski
Allegretto.
Perpetuum Mobile.
"Am Meer," arranged for orchestra, with trombone obligato, by Carl Hampe	Schubert
Traeumerei	Schumann
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
Huldigung's March	Wagner
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
March, [illegible]	Beethoven
[illegible]	[illegible]

This Week Winds Up the Promenade Concerts at Music Hall.

There remains only four more Pop concerts this season, and Thursday evening will see the last audience of the season of 1896 depart. Monday evening will be American composer's night; Tuesday evening, the French Horn quartette will make its second appearance—it created quite a furore last week; Wednesday will be German composer's night, and Thursday will be the closing night and a complimentary testimonial to the leader, Mr. Max Zach, when, in addition to a choice programme, there will be a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker.

Programme for Monday night:

March, "Washington Post"	Sousa
Overture, "Sphinx"	Thompson
Waltz, "Waves of the Danube"	Ivanovici
Selection, "Fencing Master"	De Koven
Suite	MacDowell
On Tiptoe	Hosmer
Minuet, "Pearl of Orr's Island"	Ryan
Dance and March of the Gnomes	De Koven
Cradle Song Buttterflies	Bendix
Waltz, "Obispah"	Atkinson
Polka, "Tout a Joie"	Waldteufel
March, "Up the Street"	Morse

——Next Thursday evening will conclude this season's promenade concerts, a testimonial having been arranged for Max Zach on the final performance. Tomorrow evening has been set aside as "American Composers' Night," and a most attractive programme has been arranged. On Tuesday the French Horn Quartet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra make their second appearance, and on Wednesday German Composers' Night will be celebrated. The season has been a great success, and reflects great credit upon the clever management, as well as upon Mr. Zach, who has proved so able and efficient a conductor during the past weeks.

——Mrs. Fiske Warren in the daintiest possible gown of rose colored organdie, trimmed with valenciennes insertion, with pink satin stock and girdle and a large all white picture hat, was far and away the most beautiful woman at the promenade concert, Thursday evening. Mrs. Warren's party included Mr. Warren, Miss Sallie Fairchild and Mr. Jack Fairchild. Miss Fairchild wore a pretty gown of biscuit cloth with yoke and girdle of eminence velvet and small bonnet trimmed with roses. Others in the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Francis Skinner, who occupied a balcony table, Prof. J. J. Hayes of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor, who entertained a party of ten, Miss Minnie Bigelow, Mr. John S. Clark and Mrs. A. Shuman and party.

——Mrs. John L. Gardner was a prominent figure at the promenade concert Monday evening, wearing a cool and fresh gown of gray organdie, and a large flower laden black hat. Miss Lena Little was among Mrs. Gardner's guests. Others in the house were Mrs. S. Annette Lane, accompanied by Mr. Lane and Mr. J. D. Cola, of Bombay, and Mr. S. Hooper-Hooper.

——There was a large and enthusiastic audience at the promenade concert Friday evening, a few of the well known people in the large audience being Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Mixter, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Walters, Mrs. William Copley Winslow, Miss Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. L. Shannon Davis, Mr. E. E. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raymond, the Misses Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pope, Mr. Prentiss Parker and Mrs. T. F. Corbett.

This week will bring to a close the very successful season of Promenade Concerts at Music Hall. The interest in these performances is as great as it was during the early part of the season, and the programmes for this week will serve to sustain that interest to the closing night Monday, American Composers' Night. Tuesday, second appearance of the French Horn Quartet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Messrs. Hackebarth, Hein, Lorbeer and Schumann. Wednesday, German Composers' Night. Thursday, Closing Night, and grand complimentary testimonial to Mr. Max Zach. Violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler, and harp solo by Mr. Schuecker.

——The Promenade Concert on Friday evening, drew the usual fashionable gathering. Among those noticed, were Mr. and Mrs. Augustus P. Gardner, and the Misses Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hasrick with Mr. and Mrs. James Means; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Nowell with Miss Simms, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Comee and friends, and Mr. Emil Paur with Mr. Harry Mason.

——Mr. Max Zach, the leader of the Promenade Concert Orchestra, is sure of a large and brilliant audience on Thursday evening. The final "Pop" concert of the season at Music Hall takes the form of a testimonial to him. A word of praise and thanks is due to Mr. F. R. Comee, who has displayed excellent management of this season's series of entertainments.

Music Hall Promenades.

The summer promenade concerts in Music hall will close next Thursday evening with a testimonial to conductor Max Zach. Included in the program will be a violin solo by Mr Schnitzler and a harp solo by Mr Schuecker. Tomorrow night German composers will be interpreted. The program this evening will be as follows:

March, The Flag	Ziehrer
Overture, "Fingal's Cave	Mendelssohn
Waltz, Wine, Woman and Song	Strauss
Selection, Merry War	Strauss
Ballet music, Queen of Sheba	Goldmark
Overture, Raymond	Thomas
Intermezzo, Naila	Delibes
Selections by the French horn quartet of the Boston Symphony orchestra.
Finale to act I, Lohengrin	Wagner
Loin du Bal	Gillet
Polka, The Beautiful Bostonian	Abloescher
March, Fra Bombarda	Czibulka

ONLY TWO MORE "POP" CONCERTS.

Tonight and tomorrow evening and the promenade concerts at Music Hall end their present season. For the closing night a grand testimonial will be tendered Mr. Max Zach, who has conducted the orchestra so admirably.

A remarkably fine programme has been arranged, including a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler, a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker, and a new waltz composed by Mr. Zach. Tonight will be German composers' night, with this programme:—

March, "Puppenfee"	Bayer
Overture, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
Walts, "Kaiser"	Strauss
Overture, "Tannhauser"	Wagner
Two Movements from Suite	Moszkowski
Allegretto.
Perpetuum Mobile.
"Am Meer," arranged for orchestra, with trombone obbligato by Carl Hampe	Schubert
Traeumerei	Schumann
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
Huldigung's March	Wagner
[illegible] Wives of Windsor"	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]OMENADE CONCERTS.

There remain only four more of the Music Hall promenade concerts. Thursday, July 2, will be the closing night. These concerts have now been given during the early summer months each season for eleven years, and have delighted thousands. Their fame is not alone confined to Boston. Parties from the West and South who annually spend their summer vacation among the mountains of New Hampshire or the shores of Maine invariably spend a few days in Boston.

The "Pops" or promenade concerts, being one of the most popular summer amusements, receive their patronage. The verdict of these summer tourists is unanimous that there cannot be found in this country an amusement where music and refreshments are served, conducted on so high a standard. The attendance the past week has been more than gratifying to the management and Conductor Zach.

The programmes for the remaining four evenings have been carefully selected by Mr. Zach, and are as follows: Tomorrow (Monday), American composers' night; Tuesday evening, the French Horn Quartet, composed of Messrs. Hackebarth, Hein, Schumann, and Lorbeer; Wednesday, German composers' night. For the closing night, Thursday, a grand testimonial will be tendered Mr. Max Zach, the popular conductor of the orchestra. Among the features of this concert will be a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker, a violin solo by Mr. Schuitzler, with piano accompaniment by Mr. Zach. Mr. Zach has also composed a new waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin," a companion to his popular composition, "Arlequin en Voyage."

Tickets should be secured early for the closing concerts, as every season there are many who are disappointed at not being able to secure choice location of seats. The programme in full for tomorow evening is:

March, "Washington Post," Sousa; overure, "Sphinx," Thompson; waltz, "Waves f the Danube," Ivanovici; selection, "Fencing Master," De Koven; suite, MacDowell; "On Tiptoe," Hosmer; minet, "Pearl of Orr's Island," Ryan; "Dance and March of the Gnomes," De Koven; (a) "Cradle Song," (b) "Butterlies," Bendix; waltz, "Obispah," Atkinon; polka, "Tout a Joie," Waldteufel; arch, "Up the Street," Morse.

THE HERALD AND THE "POPS

Colored Picture of Music Hal Much Appreciated.

The Sunday Edition Given as a Souve nir to Patrons of the Promena Concerts—Scenes Last Night at Bo ton's Pleasant Evening Resort—A Excellent Programme.

Music Hall was thronged last eveni with an assemblage of musical, litera dramatic and other people, who enjoy the excellent programme, and incident ly the pleasure of social talk w smoke and beer. Beside the regular tractions, the patrons of the popu promenade concerts were given an tractive souvenir in the shape of Boston Sunday Herald of this we which had on the first page of its colo supplement a beautiful and realistic production of a scene at the "Po concert.

Heralds were placed about the spacl hall on every table, and attracted mu attention. In fact, it was a question times which interested the auditors more, the music or The Herald's sple id colored plate. Heralds were eve where, and none were lying as t were placed by the waiters. W many had seen the colored plate in course of their Sunday reading, but were attracted to them as they w last night, when they looked at the production, and then at the actual sc about them.

A Herald reporter walked about t tables, and found many of the a dience reading the news columns, aft glancing at the artistic representati of the actual picture about them. T Herald's colored supplement was adm ingly commented upon by the fair s and, of course, their escorts thoug "It was just the proper thing." In fa everybody from the management do thought so, too, and the introduct of The Herald at the concert, add much to the evening, especially in moments when the orchestra was tak a brief respite.

During the intermission The Hera was read in preference to the p gramme, and the next number was f gotten for the nonce, in the perusal the many newsy and interesting artic in the big illustrated sheet. One wo naturally suppose that people who h come to indulge in an evening of mu and social pleasure would care lit for a few pages of a Sunday paper, in most cases The Herald's artis colored supplement, containing, as does, not only a vivid scene and recoll tion of the "Pops," but several grap portraitures and a historical sketch London's Ancients' British Honoura Artillery company, was neatly folded and carried away as a souvenir of one the last nights at the promenade co certs in Music Hall.

It was an innovation which was th oughly appreciated by all present, t furnishing by the management of cop of The Herald, and will prove a deligh ful remembrance of a series of m popular concerts, which will be alwa cherished by Boston's music loving p lic.

The complete deadness of the city s mer will have arrived when the "Po cease from popping. It has been a m season in Music Hall, and the remai nights will bring many wanderers halcyon for one more taste of th music, beer [illegible]

INFORMATION OBSCURED

NIGHT OF "POPS."

nnual summer season of promenade certs at Music Hall ends tonight with a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, conductor of the orchestra. Mr. Zach has made an excellent reputation and gained many friends.

A remarkably fine programme has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Sshnitzer and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. The season promises to end as it began, most brilliantly. This is the programme:—

March, "Princess Ninetta"..............Strauss
Overture, "Mignon"..............A. Thomas
Waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin"........Zach
(First time.)
Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"....Off bach
Entr'acte, "Rosamunde".............ert
Harp solo.
a. Adante ....Ross ars.
b. Mazourka..................E. nuecker
Mr. Heinrich Schuecker.
Hungarian rhapsody..................Liszt
Violin solo with piano accompaniment
Legende ....ienawski
panish dance....................,Sarasate
. I. Schmitzler, Mr. Zach, accompanist.
z, "Freut euch des Lebens"..........Strauss
mezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana"....Mascagn
s Dream After the Ball...........Czibulk
ch, "Vienna Dude"...................Wagn

SUCCESSFUL SEASON ENDED.

No More "Pop" Concerts for Boston This Year.

That of Last Night Brought the Season to a Close—It Was the 609th Since the Inauguration of the Concerts in 1885 — Acting Manager Comee Receives Due Credit.

The renowned "Pop" concert season ended last evening, with great applause and many expressions of regret from a houseful of summer folk.

Last night's performance was the 609th since the concert series was begun in 1885. Forty-two entertainments have been given this season, with increased profit to the management. The report for this year's concerts reflects very commendably on Mr. Comee's business ability. In the absence of Manager Ellis, who has been in Europe all the season, Mr. Comee has had entire charge of the entertainments, and there are, at least, two things for which he is happily responsible: A steady improvement in the character of "Pop" patrons, and a general, frank admission of "Pop" patrons of satisfaction with the music and the business service of the house.

Mr. Max Zach, conductor, who sits at the first desk of the violas in the Symphony orchestra, is the sixth conductor chosen from the orchestra. During several years he has been a member of the Adamowski quartet. This year he has acquitted himself with entire satisfaction, if the word of the "Pop" management and the applause of its patrons counts for anything.

Forty-five new selections have been given. Of all the scores Zella's "Grubenlichter" has been the favorite. Manager Comee has been asked again and again to run the piece, either as an encore or as an extra.

The season has closed comparatively early, because the management has found by experience that, although the financial end would not be considered apprehensively, there seems to be no urgent reason for keeping the musicians from a vacation, playing to houses not made up of the regular "Pop" quality.

Gentile Bohemia in Boston has had one more season of popular concerts, and there is no good reason why it should not be content, and look forward to the regular Symphony programme in the winter.

CLOSE OF THE "POP" CONCERTS.

Bouquets and Bravcs for the Musicians in Music Hall.

Genteel bohemia, en masse, was at Music hall last night to say goodby to Mr Max Zach and the dear, delightful allurements of the pops.

The 11th season closed happily all around. The place rang with "bravos" and the musicians were pelted with boutonnieres. Mr F. R. Comee, who has been acting manager for two seasons, had only encouraging things to say of the financial results. He was beaming with good spirits, as a manager may who lives to see his pet enterprise grow popular and prosperous.

The performance was the 609th since the concerts started in 1885. In the present season there have been 42 concerts.

Mr Zach has made himself the admired of all admirers to artistic Boston. In fact he has proved himself a delightful surprise to some of the concert goers. One of the "regulars," who is in close touch with the management and also a musician, said last evening that Mr Zach has been, from every point of view, an ideal conductor; none other had pleased the people better or shown himself a greater master of his art.

Mr Zach is the sixth conductor chosen from the symphony. His judgment has been infallible, his taste excellent, and he has handled his men splendidly. What has made him specially popular is that he rarely refused an encore.

The classic has been properly spiced with the "catchy." At least 45 compositions have been given their first presentation, making an average of more than one each night.

The special favorite of the season has been Zella's inspiring "Grubenlichter," which has been on the program at least once a week and has been played as an "extra" a dozen times more.

Mr Comee would give no figures, but he said there had been a healthy increase over the receipts last season.

Music Hall [illegible] much needed vacation after the "Pops" finish tonight. Its old sides must ache with the repeated strains of music that have assailed them these many months.

The Music hall promenades will close this evening with a complimentary concert to Mr Max Zach, the conductor. The program will be as follows: March, Princess Ninetta, Strauss; overture, Mignon, A. Thomas; Waltz, Le Retour d'Arlequin, Zach; overture, Orpheus aux Enfers, Offenbach; entr'acte, Rosamunde, Schubert; harp solos, Mr Heinrich Schuecker; Hungarian rhapsody, Liszt; violin solo, with piano accompaniment, Mr I. Schnitzler, Mr Zach accompanist; waltz, Freut euch des Lebens, Strauss; intermezzo, Cavalleria Rusticana, Mascagni; Love's Dream fter the Ball, Czibulka;March, Vienna de, Wagner.

LAST NIGHT OF "POPS."

The annual summer season of promenade concerts at Music Hall ends tonight with a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, conductor of the orchestra. Mr. Zach has made an excellent reputation and gained many friends.

A remarkably fine programme has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Sshnitzer and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. The season promises to end as it began, most brilliantly. This is the programme:—

March, "Princess Ninetta"..............Strauss
Overture, "Mignon"..................A. Thomas
Waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin"............Zach
(First time.)
Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"......Offenbach
Entr'acte, "Rosamunde"................Schubert
Harp solo.
a. Adante .... Rossini-Alvars.
b. Mazourka......................E. Schuecker
Mr. Heinrich Schuecker.
Hungarian rhapsody.........................Liszt
Violin solo with piano accompaniment.
a. Legende .... Wienawski
b. Spanish dance........................Sarasate
Mr. I. Schmitzler, Mr. Zach, accompanist.
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"..........Strauss
Intermezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana"....Mascagni
Love's Dream After the Ball...........Czibulka
March, "Vienna Dude"....................Wagner

The annual summer season of promenade concerts at Music Hall ends tonight with a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, conductor of the orchestra. Mr. Zach has made an excellent reputation and gained many friends. A remarkably fine programme has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. The season promises to end as it began, most brilliantly.

LAST NIGHT OF "POPS."

The annual summer season of promenade concerts at Music Hall ends tonight, with a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, conductor of the orchestra. Mr. Zach has made an excellent reputation and gained many friends.

A remarkably fine program has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler, and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. The season promises to end as it began, most brilliantly. The following is the program:

March, "Princess Ninetta"...........Strauss
Overture, "Mignon".............A. Thomas
Waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin"........Zach
(First time.)
Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"..Offenbach
Entr'acte, "Rosamunde"...........Schubert
Harp solo.
a. Andante................. Rossini-Alvars
b. Mazourka................E. Schuecker
Mr. Heinrich Schuecker.
Hungarian Rhapsody......................Liszt
Violin solo with piano accompaniment.
a. Legende.................... Wieniawski
b. Spanish Dance..................Sarasate
Mr. I. Schnitzler. Mr. Zach, accompanist.
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens".....Strauss
Intermezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana"....
Mascagni
"Love's Dream After the Ball".....Czibulka
March, "Vienna Dude"................Wagner

For the closing Promenade concert tonight, at Music Hall, a most excellent programme has been selected, including a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker. This concert will be a testimonial to the conductor of the orchestra, Mr. Max Zach, who has won such hearty and merited praise for his excellent work. A large audience is assured. The programme in full is: March, "Pincess Ninetta," Strauss; overture, "Mignon," A. Thomas; waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin" (first time), Zach; overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers," Offenbach; entr'acte, "Rosamunde," Schubert; harp solo, andante, Rossini-Alvars, mazourka, E. Schuecker, Mr. Heinrich Schuecker; Hungarian rhapsody, Litz; Violin solo, with piano accompaniment, Legende, Wieniawski, Spanish dance, Sarasate, Mr. I. Schnitzler, Mr. Zach accompanist; waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens," Strauss; intermezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; "Love's Dream After the Ball," Czibulka; march, "Vienna Dude," Wagner.

LAST TWO NIGHTS OF THE PROMENADES.

The Promenade Concerts at Music Hall are almost at an end for the present season. Tomorrow (Thursday) is the closing night, and will be a grand testimonial to Mr. Max Zach, who has conducted the orchestra so admirably during the season. Mr. Schnitzler has kindly consented to play a violin solo. Mr. Schuecker will also play a harp solo.

Tonight the program is devoted entirely to the works of German composers, and is as follows:

March, "Puppenfee".....................Bayer
Overture, "Rosamunde"..............Schubert
Waltz, "Kaiser".........................Strauss
Overture, "Tannhauser"..............Wagner
Two Movements from Suite.....Moszkowski
Allegretto.
Perpetuum Mobile.
"Am Meer," arranged for orchestra, with trombone obligato, by Carl Hampe ....Schubert
Traeumerei ....Schumann
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
Huldigung's March......................Wagner
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"..
Nicolai
Marcia Alla Turca.................Beethoven
Waltz, "Meerleuchten"..................Ziehrer
March, "Hoch Habsburg"..................Kral

LAST NIGHTS OF

This Week Winds Up the Promenade Concerts at Music Hall.

There remains only four more Pop concerts this season, and Thursday evening will see the last audience of the season of 1896 depart. Monday evening will be American composer's night; Tuesday evening, the French Horn quartette will make its second appearance—it created quite a furore last week; Wednesday will be German composer's night, and Thursday will be the closing night and a complimentary testimonial to the leader, Mr. Max Zach, when, in addition to a choice programme, there will be a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler and a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker.

Programme for Monday night:

March, "Washington Post"...............Sousa
Overture, "Sphinx"................. Thompson
Waltz, "Waves of the Danube".......Ivanovici
Selection, "Fencing Master"......... De Koven
Suite.................................. MacDowell
On Tiptoe ....Hosmer
Minuet, "Pearl of Orr's Island"............Ryan
Dance and March of the Gnomes..... De Koven
Cradle Song } ....Bendix
Buttterflies }
Waltz, "Obispah"............... ....Atkinson
Polka, "Tout a Joie"................ Waldteufel
March, "Up the Street"....................Morse

——Next Thursday evening will conclude this season's promenade concerts, a testimonial having been arranged for Max Zach on the final performance. Tomorrow evening has been set aside as "American Composers' Night," and a most attractive programme has been arranged. On Tuesday the French Horn Quartet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra make their second appearance, and on Wednesday German Composers' Night will be celebrated. The season has been a great success, and reflects great credit upon the clever management, as well as upon Mr. Zach, who has proved so able and efficient a conductor during the past weeks.

——Mrs. Fiske Warren in the daintiest possible gown of rose colored organdie, trimmed with valenciennes insertion, with pink satin stock and girdle and a large all white picture hat, was far and away the most beautiful woman at the promenade concert, Thursday evening. Mrs. Warren's party included Mr. Warren, Miss Sallie Fairchild and Mr. Jack Fairchild. Miss Fairchild wore a pretty gown of biscuit cloth with yoke and girdle of eminence velvet and small bonnet trimmed with roses. Others in the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Francis Skinner, who occupied a balcony table, Prof. J. J. Hayes of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor, who entertained a party of ten, Miss Minnie Bigelow, Mr. John S. Clark and Mrs. A. Shuman and party.

——Mrs. John L. Gardner was a prominent figure at the promenade concert Monday evening, wearing a cool and fresh gown of gray organdie, and a large flower laden black hat. Miss Lena Little was among Mrs. Gardner's guests. Others in the house were Mrs. S. Annette Lane, accompanied by Mr. Lane and Mr. J. D. Cola, of Bombay, and Mr. S. Hooper-Hooper.

——There was a large and enthusiastic audience at the promenade concert Friday evening, a few of the well known people in the large audience being Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Mixter, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Walters, Mrs. William Copley Winslow, Miss Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. L. Shannon Davis, Mr. E. E. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raymond, the Misses Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pope, Mr. Prentiss Parker and Mrs. T. F. Corbett.

This week will bring to a close the very successful season of Promenade Concerts at Music Hall. The interest in these performances is as great as it was during the early part of the season, and the programmes for this week will serve to sustain that interest to the closing night Monday, American Composers' Night. Tuesday, second appearance of the French Horn Quartet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Messrs. Hackebarth, Hein, Lorbeer and Schumann. Wednesday, German Composers' Night. Thursday, Closing Night, and grand complimentary testimonial to Mr. Max Zach. Violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler, and harp solo by Mr. Schuecker.

——The Promenade Concert on Friday evening, drew the usual fashionable gathering. Among those noticed, were Mr. and Mrs. Augustus P. Gardner, and the Misses Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hasrick with Mr. and Mrs. James Means; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Nowell with Miss Simms, Mr. and Mrs. F R. Comee and friends, and Mr. Emil Paur with Mr. Harry Mason.

—— Mr. Max Zach, the leader of the Promenade Concert Orchestra, is sure of a large and brilliant audience on Thursday evening. The final "Pop" concert of the season at Music Hall takes the form of a testimonial to him. A word of praise and thanks is due to Mr. F. R. Comee, who has displayed excellent management of this season's series of entertainments.

Music Hall Promenades.

The summer promenade concerts in Music hall will close next Thursday evening with a testimonial to conductor Max Zach. Included in the program will be a violin solo by Mr Schnitzler and a harp solo by Mr Schuecker. Tomorrow night German composers will be interpreted. The program this evening will be as follows:

March, The Flag ....Ziehrer
Overture, "Fingal's Cave ....Mendelssohn
Waltz, Wine, Woman and Song ....Strauss
Selection, Merry War ....Strauss
Ballet music, Queen of Sheba ....Goldmark
Overture, Raymond ....Thomas
Intermezzo, Naila ....Delibes
Selections by the French horn quartet of the Boston Symphony orchestra.
Finale to act 1, Lohengrin ....Wagner
Loin du Bal ....Gillet
Polka, The Beautiful Bostonian .....Abloescher
March, Fra Bombarda ....Czibulka

ONLY TWO MORE "POP" CONCERTS.

Tonight and tomorrow evening and the promenade concerts at Music Hall end their present season. For the closing night a grand testimonial will be tendered Mr. Max Zach, who has conducted the orchestra so admirably.

A remarkably fine programme has been arranged, including a violin solo by Mr. Schnitzler, a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker, and a new waltz composed by Mr. Zach. Tonight will be German composers' night, with this programme:—

March, "Puppenfee"...........................Bayer
Overture, "Rosamunde"..................Schubert
Waltz, "Kaiser"..............................Strauss
Overture, "Tannhauser"....................Wagner
Two Movements from Suite..........Moszkowski
Allegretto.
Perpetuum Mobile.
"Am Meer," arranged for orchestra, with trombone obbligato by Carl Hampe..Schubert
Traeumerei.............................Schumann
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
Huldigung's March..........................Wagner
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"....Nicolai
Marcia Alla Turca....................Beethoven
Waltz, "Meerleuchten"......................Ziehrer
March, "Hoch Habsburg"......................Kral

PROMENADE CONCERTS.

There remain only four more of the Music Hall promenade concerts, as Thursday, July 2, will be the closing night. These concerts have now been given during the early summer months each season for eleven years, and have delighted thousands. Their fame is not alone confined to Boston. Parties from the West and South who annually spend their summer vacation among the mountains of New Hampshire or the shores of Maine invariably spend a few days in Boston.

The "Pops" or promenade concerts, being one of the most popular summer amusements, receive their patronage. The verdict of these summer tourists is unanimous that there cannot be found in this country an amusement where music and refreshments are served, conducted on so high a standard. The attendance the past week has been more than gratifying to the management and Conductor Zach.

The programmes for the remaining four evenings have been carefully selected by Mr. Zach, and are as follows: Tomorrow (Monday), American composers' night; Tuesday evening, the French Horn Quartet, composed of Messrs. Hackebarth, Hein, Schumann and Lorbeer; Wednesday, German composers' night. For the closing night, Thursday, a grand testimonial will be tendered Mr. Max Zach, the popular conductor of the orchestra. Among the features of this concert will be a harp solo by Mr. Schuecker, a violin solo by Mr. Schuitzler, with piano accompaniment by Mr. Zach. Mr. Zach has also composed a new waltz, "Le Retour d'Arlequin," a companion to his popular composition, "Arlequin en Voyage."

Tickets should be secured early for the closing concerts, as every season there are many who are disappointed at not being able to secure choice location of seats. The programme in full for tomorrow evening is:

March, "Washington Post," Sousa; overture, "Sphinx," Thompson; waltz, "Waves of the Danube," Ivanovici; selection, "Fencing Master," De Koven; suite, MacDowell; "On Tiptoe," Hosmer; minuet, "Pearl of Orr's Island," Ryan; "Dance and March of the Gnomes," De Koven; (a) "Cradle Song," (b) "Butterflies," Bendix; waltz, "Obispah," Atkinson; polka, "Tout a Joie," Waldteufel; march, "Up the Street," Morse.

THE HERALD AND THE "POPS"

Colored Picture of Music Hall Much Appreciated.

The Sunday Edition Given as a Souvenir to Patrons of the Promenad Concerts—Scenes Last Night at Bo ton's Pleasant Evening Resort—A Excellent Programme.

Music Hall was thronged last evenin with an assemblage of musical, literar dramatic and other people, who enjoy the excellent programme, and incidentally the pleasure of social talk wi smoke and beer. Beside the regular tractions, the patrons of the popu promenade concerts were given an tractive souvenir in the shape of Boston Sunday Herald of this we which had on the first page of its colo supplement a beautiful and realistic production of a scene at the "Po concert.

Heralds were placed about the spaci hall on every table, and attracted mu attention In fact, it was a question times which interested the auditors more, the music or The Herald's sple id colored plate. Heralds were eve where, and none were lying as th were placed by the waiters. Wh many had seen the colored plate in course of their Sunday reading, but f were attracted to them as they we last night, when they looked at the production, and then at the actual sce about them.

A Herald reporter walked about t tables, and found many of the a dience reading the news columns, aft glancing at the artistic representati of the actual picture about them. T Herald's colored supplement was adm ingly commented upon by the fair s and, of course, their escorts thoug "It was just the proper thing." In fa everybody from the management do thought so, too, and the introducti of The Herald at the concert, add much to the evening, especially in t moments when the orchestra was taki a brief respite.

During the intermission The Hera was read in preference to the pr gramme, and the next number was fo gotten for the nonce, in the perusal the many newsy and interesting artic in the big illustrated sheet. One wou naturally suppose that people who h come to indulge in an evening of mu and social pleasure would care lit for a few pages of a Sunday paper, b in most cases The Herald's artis colored supplement, containing, as does, not only a vivid scene and recoll tion of the "Pops," but several grap portraitures and a historical sketch London's Ancients' British Honoura Artillery company, was neatly folded and carried away as a souvenir of one the last nights at the promenade co certs in Music Hall.

It was an innovation which was th oughly appreciated by all present, t furnishing by the management of cop of The Herald, and will prove a deligh ful remembrance of a series of mo popular concerts, which will be alwa cherished by Boston's music loving p lic.

The complete deadness of the city su mer will have arrived when the "Po cease from popping. It has been a m season in Music Hall, and the remai nights will bring many wanderers for one more taste of that halcyon bination—smoke, beer and music.

Mrs. J. L. Gardner [illegible] "request" night was [illegible] attractive, and so was the hostess in her green and white organdie made over mauve, with lilac stock and girdle. Her hat was of purple straw with a lot of flowers on it.

On Cadet night Mrs. H. D. Burnham was decidedly the smartest costumed of the society set there. Her gray gown with white lace and a quantity of ribbon on the bodice had the true cachet of style. Her hat was of purple with full ruchings of tulle of the same color. She had a party with her. Mrs. Burnham, by the way, was also noted in the class day throng at the Beck tea for her modish, perfect fitting costume of a fine purple and white stripe, the bodice of violet chiffon, with bertha of deep yellow lace, yellow stock and belt and violet hat.

Nobody in the crowd at the "Pops" on Harvard night, which was Monday, not even the students themselves, enjoyed the fun and excitement more than did Joseph Jefferson, the veteran actor, who was at a table with several friends. It was a very large night altogether. Manager Comee being a Harvard man himself entered into the spirit of the scene con amore, and with an enthusiasm which left nothing undone for the enjoyment and comfort of everybody. The glee club and as many more as could find room on the stage, ranged up in front of and behind the orchestra, made a stunning showing as they sang "Fair Harvard" for all it was worth, every student on the floor and in the galleries joining in to swell the mighty volume of sound.

—Figuratively speaking Music Hall was "painted red" in honor of Harvard Monday night. The electric lights were veiled in crimson shades. Red banners, adorned with the letter H hung from the balconies; over the stage, lettered in crimson, was a placard bearing the names of the "victorious nine." The programs were printed on crimson paper, crimson flowers decked the stage, while even the ushers wore crimson badges and jacqueminot boutonnaires. Among the audience were noted Mr. Joseph Jefferson, Colonel and Mrs. Fairchild, Mr. William Cosgrove, Mr Kenneth Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua B. Holden, Mr. Godfrey Morse, Mrs. Leopold Morse, Mr. and Mrs. John Dana Shepard, Mrs. Frederick Galloupe, Mrs. Phinheas Adams, Mr. Carl Sobeski, Hon. Robert M. Morse, Hon. Robert M. Morse, Jr., Miss Marion H. Brazier, Mr. Arthur Allen, Miss Gertrude Byrne, Mrs. Henry W. Chapin, Mrs. John G. Blake, President James R. Kendrick, Miss Elizabeth Shaw and Mr. Harry Woodruff.

—"Request Night" at Music Hall on Tuesday evening brought together a goodly showing of society people, prominent among them being Mrs. John L. Gardiner, escorted by Mr. Ingersoll of Philadelphia, Mrs. Frank Perkins, Mrs. Thomas Porter Lovell, with Miss Musette Lovell, Miss Marion Gage and escorts, Mr. Ward M. Tenny, Mr. Carl Brenemen, Miss Sherman, Mme. Wagniere, Mr. George F. Blake, Dr. John S. Phelps and Mr. Sheape Rose, who returned from Paris the previous day.

THE PROMENADES.

The summer season of the popular promenade concerts at Music Hall is near the end. There remains only nine more evenings in which to enjoy the music, smoke and drink a little.

Conductor Zach has arranged a number of special programmes, the next to be on Wednesday, which will be devoted entirely to compositions by French composers. The programme for this evening contains many of the favorite selections played during the earlier part of the season.

Promenade Concerts.

Another successful week of the concerts at Music Hall closes this evening. The week has been especially interesting, inasmuch as there have been several "special" nights, the programmes on those occasions being admirably arranged. For instance, Monday night was "Harvard Night," Tuesday, "First Request Night" and Thursday, "Cadet Night." Under Conductor Zach's direction, the orchestra shows every evidence of skilled training, and each number on the well arranged programmes is admirably played. That the concerts will maintain their popularity until the end of the season there is no doubt, for every evening sees not only the seats around the tables all occupied, but a large number of people occupying balcony seats.

[illegible] Brookline [illegible] her presence [illegible] the one [illegible] dainty gowning [illegible] ring, save perhaps the charming group of fair Lasell girls, chaperoned by Mrs Jeannette Lovell. Mrs Gardner wore a cream organdie made over the palest violet, and made exceedingly simple. A girdle, stock and band at the wrist of her long gathered-in sleeves of violet ribbon was the only bit of adornment, except a sailor-shaped collar of white linen, trimmed with white lace. Her hat was one of the modish purple satin straws with changeable purple wings and a vine of soft purple and white flowers around the front brim. White gloves, veil and patent leather shoes with silver buckles completed one of the most summerish costumes worn yet at the "Pops." The Lovells had for their guest Miss Marion Gage. Others noted were Mrs Frank Perkins, looking unusually well in a dark green and crimson toque; Mr Karl Brenemen, Mr Geo. F. Blake, Mr Ward M. Tenney and a large party from Malden.

—Harvard night at the "Pop" was a red-letter one in point of attendance and color—in fact, everything wore a vermilion hue; the soft red glow of the shaded incandescents and the big arc light beneath the clock lent a deliciously rosy and warm tint to the scene. Many of the ladies, with true loyalty to fair Harvard, wore touches of red about their toilets. A brunette beauty of the young married set carried a huge bunch of jack roses. Mr Fred Comee and all the attaches wore the Harvard crimson, either as a boutonniere or in a ribbon carried across their immaculate shirt fronts. Every table except Mrs John L. Gardner's was occupied. Noticed in and about the ring were Hon and Mrs Joshua Holden, the Misses Holden and friends, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard, with Mr Frank Locke, Mr Waldo Heyward, Miss May Piper, Miss Putnam, Mr Irving Locke, Mr and Mrs Charles Cross and Mr Charles Burrill; Mrs Leopold Morse and son, Mr Godfrey Morse, Mr William Cosgrove, Mr Kenneth Lewis, Col and Mrs Charles Fairchild, Mrs Frederick Galloupe with friends, Mr Nelson E. Metcalf, Mr Carl Sobeski, Miss Elizabeth Shaw, Mr Charles S. Brown, Mr and Mrs Robert B. Metcalf, Miss Ethel Alba Davis, Mrs Henry H. Chapin with friends, Mrs Phinehas Adams, Miss Anna S. Robbins, Mr Lipsiger, Mrs Arthur Allen, Mrs Mary E. Blake, Mr Joseph Jefferson and Mr and Mrs James C. Davis.

—A pleasant party at the "Pops" Friday evening was that entertained by Mrs E. M. Palfrey of Boylston st. Her guests included Miss Adelaide M. Kenney, Mrs M. B. Steinauer, Mr George W. Palfrey and Mr William C. Pree of Brookline.

—An unusual program will be presented tomorrow night at the "Pops" to commemorate the 600th performance. Thursday and Friday will be dedicated to France and Italy, when the composers of the two countries will be honored by conductor Zach.

—Cadet night at the Promenade concert, Thursday evening, called forth one of the largest audiences of the season; and quite the most attractive. The gowns of the ladies were almost without exception light and effective, and the hall presented an unusually pleasing appearance, filled, as it was with the youth and flower of Boston's social element. Blue banners were hung at intervals about the balconies, and the programs were printed in cadet blue. Prominent among those present were noted Captain and Mrs. Henry Alline, Mr. Robert Barnet, Mr. Arthur Warren Pope, Mr. Arthur Brigham, Mr. Charles F. Rollins, Mr. Ralph Bartlett, Mr. Arthur Seldridge, Col. Henry Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. George Warren Favor, Miss Elizabeth Ahl, Col. James Ahl, Col. James Lake, Mr. and Mrs. William Scymaur, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Davenport. Mr. Holker Abbott, Mrs. N. M. Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. John Dana Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Metcalf, Mr. John Hayes, Mr. Walter De Land Came, Mr. Arthur Gilman, Miss Sara Laughton and Major and Mrs. Oakes.

Cadet night at the "Pops" Thursday, was the synonym for a big crush, in which the Cadets and their friends naturally figured prominently, and it only added another to the successes which Manager Comee is making of his season of concerts at the Music Hall. Some there were Mr. Bayard Thayer and party, Mr. Robert Barnet, the playwright, Mr. Frank Lawrence, Mr. Edward Leland and party, Mr. and Mrs. John Shepard and friends, Mr. George Warren Favor and his bride (Miss Mary Ahl), Miss Ahl, Mr. H. B. Perkins, Mr. P. Sprague and party, Mr. J. G. White and party, Mr. and Mrs. C. Morrill, Mr. Ernest McKim, Miss Lilian Nichols, Mr. Daniel Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Davenport, Mr. William Seymour, Mr. Walter De Land Came and party, Mrs. George Winslow, Miss Maud Binney, Mr. Frank Lock and friends, Mr. A. B. Sloan, Mr. Frank Sise, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Belknap and Mr. William Ulman.

— "Harvard Night," at the Promenade Concert on Monday evening, called out a large and brilliant gathering. Crimson was used artistically in bunting, flags and incandescent lights. Among the large audience were Mrs. Robert M. Morse and her daughter, Miss S. Morse, with her fiancé, Mr. Louis Whiting, who occupied a table with friends; Mr. and Mrs. Lander Bouvé and Miss Helen Bouvé, Mr. Daniel H. Lane and Mr. Harry Robinson. with a party of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hayes, Miss Gertrude Davis, Mr. John J. Hayes, Jr., Miss Louise Kimball and Mr. Thatcher Kimball. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Knapp and Mr. John Batchelder.

TUESDAY, JUNE 1[illegible]

HARVARD NIGHT AT "POP" CONCERT.

Special Programme, Fine Decorations and Much Enthusiasm.

Notwithstanding the fact that Harvard did not come out victorious in yesterday's game with Brown University, the enthusiasm which had been gathering on account of an expected victory found its outlet at the "Pop" concert, last evening. Manager F. R. Comee had made preparations to recognize in a fitting way success on the part of the Cambridge men, and had they come out ahead, the celebration at Music Hall would have been a notable one. However, Mr. Crane knew that the students would be present in large numbers, and, that they might not mistake their way, the big electric sign, "Promenade Concerts," which spans Hamilton place, was brilliant with red lights, which gave a warm glow to the court and as far out as Tremont street.

Inside, there were banners of red, with a white "H.," hanging all about the hall, and red globes on the electric lights, and red shades on the stage lights, made the scene a brilliant one. The programme, which was on bright red paper, was composed of selections from the many burlesque operas which have been given by the Harvard clubs, and "Fair Harvard" also found a place of honor on the bill. When this was given, as many Harvard men as could went upon the stage and sang under the leadership of Director Zach. All other Harvard students, about the hall, remained standing while the singing was going on. There was a large audience, and much applause throughout the evening.

ONLY TEN MORE "POP" CONCERTS.

The summer season of that favorite amusement attraction, the promenade concerts at Music Hall, is fast nearing the end. There will be only 10 more, as the season will positively close Thursday, July 2. The past week's concerts have been of unusual interest, owing to the excellent programme presented by Conductor Zach. Especially enthusiastic were the audiences on Harvard and Cadet nights, when every seat in the hall was sold before the doors were opened. Patrons contemplating spending an evening at these concerts should bear in mind that in order to secure choice seats at tables it is necessary to secure them several days in advance. During the remaining nights there will be a number of features. Tomorrow night will be the 600th performance, when the orchestra will play the favorite selections of the past two seasons. Next Thursday will be French composers' night; Friday, Italian composers' night; Monday, June 29, American composers' night; Wednesday, July 1, German composers' night. On the closing night, Thursday, July 2, there will be a grand testimonial to the popular conductor of the orchestra, Mr. Max Zach. The programme in full for the 600th performance tomorrow evening is:

March, "Queen of Sheba"……Gounod
Overture, "William Tell"……Rossini
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"……Zeller
Selection, "Robin Hood"……De Koven
Narcissus……Nevin
Suite, "Peer Gynt"……Grieg
  I. Morning Dawn.
  II. Aase's Death.
  III. Anitra's Dance.
  IV. In the Halls of the King of the Dovre Mountains. The Imps are chasing Peer Gynt.
Love's Dream After the Ball……Czibulka
Introduction to Act III., "Lohengrin"……Wagner
Overture, "Stradella"……Flotow
Waltz, "Arlequin en Voyage"……Zach
Polka, "Gypsy Baron"……Strauss
Boccaccio March……Suppe

The Harvard night, Monday, at the "pops" was a resplendent one. The decorations were, appropriately, crimson, and the hall was packed to an overflow with students and their friends. A feature of the occasion was the last selection of the orchestra, "Up the Street," which was composed by R. G. Morse, '96. The editors of the Crimson were present and ranged on the platform together with the Glee Club. An interested and sympathetic spectator was Joseph Jefferson.

—All previous gatherings at the Music hall "Pops" pale when compared with that of Thursday—Cadet night—for quality of audience and color in the dainty toilets of the ladies, who outnumbered the men in a large degree. There was the sedate chaperon, the gray-haired mother, the bride and the sweet girl graduate in her white muslin frock, in fact, there were several, arrayed in fairy-like texture, with large white hats laden with blossoms. They were prettily grouped, too, in the ring, making a most pleasing effect viewed from any vantage point. About the balconies were blue banners bearing the corps letters, and on either side of the stage were handsome American flags. The programs were done in cadet blue and white, and the numbers presented by conductor Zach had the true military flavor, which included the music of the Cadet successes. Among many familiar faces were Mr R. A. Barnet, Mr Arthur Warren Pope, Capt and Mrs W. H. Alline, Maj Fred Farrow, Mr Arthur Brigham, Mr Charles Rollins, Mr Ralph Bartlett, Mr Arthur Selfridge, Mr and Mrs R B. Metcalf, Mr Carl J. Fraap, Mr Fitzgerald, Mrs Henry Burnham and party of three, Mr William Seymour, Mr and Mrs Edgar Davenport, Mr Holker Abbott with friends, Col James Lake, Miss Sarah Laughton, Mrs N. M. Winslow, Mr Walter Deland Came, Maj and Mrs Oakes, Mr and Mrs George Warren Favor, Miss Elizabeth Hay Ahl, Col Harry Hastings, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard, Mr Frank Locke, Miss Blanche Souther, Miss May Piper, Miss Anna S. Robbins, Miss Putnam, Mr Charles Robbins, Mr and Mrs Charles Cross and Mr [illegible]

[illegible] OF NEW ENGLAND

CRIMSON [illegible]

"Harvard Night" at the Music Hall Promenade Concert—Boys Were There.

"Harvard night" was the attraction at the Music Hall promenade concert last evening, and standing room was indeed at a premium. Under the management of Mr. Comee the crowd of 2500 persons were well cared for, and the different numbers of the programme were loudly applauded. The lights, the programmes and the decorations were all crimson in honor of the occasion, while over the platform was a large placard bearing the fifteen recent victories of the Harvard baseball nine. Representatives of the "Harvard Crimson," college societies and baseball team were seated about the specially reserved tables.

Several of the numbers on the programme were the compositions of students, and when "Fair Harvard" was played by the orchestra the college glee club took possession of the stage and sang the song as it has seldom been sung before.

Thursday will be "Cadets' night," when selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk" will be the special attractions.

This evening at the Music Hall Promenades will be "Harvard Night." The orchestra will play the following selections:

Manhattan Beach March……Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"……Suppe
Waltz, "Estudiantina"……Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah"……Atkinson
Overture, "Sphinx"……Thompson
Overture, "Granada"……Barry
Selection, "Proserpina"……[illegible]
Potpourri from "Brangle-Brink"……Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"……Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"……Zeller
Fair Harvard.
March, "Up the Street"……Morse

Boston Journal.
TWELVE PAGES.
TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

HARVARD NIGHT AT THE "POPS."

Harvard owned Music Hall last night. It was the Crimson night at the "Pops," and notwithstanding Brown's victory at base ball in the afternoon, the celebration was just as glorious as if Capt. Dean's men had been the wallopers. The lights over the entrance in Hayward Place were like balls of fire; the hall was trimmed with the college colors; Harvard men, forgetful of "grinding," crowded themselves into all available and unavailable space, and, to cap the enthusiasm, the Glee Club, accompanied by Conductor Max Zach's orchestra, sang "Fair Harvard." There was a crimson tone to everything.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

HARVARD NIGHT AT "POPS."

Everything at Music Hall last night was crimson. It was Harvard night, and as Mgr. Comee is a Harvard man the decorations were especially elaborate. The great sign in Hamilton pl. glared luridly; the chandeliers over the stage danced under crimson tinted skirts; crimson banners bearing a big H hung from the galleries; the programmes [illegible] paper, [illegible] employes wore [illegible] crimson ribbon. Over the stage was a placard bearing a list of Harvard's base-ball victories.

The hall was packed with students and sympathizers. There was much cheering, but no such rampant roystering as has been witnessed in past years. Eight of the 12 musical numbers were compositions of the Pi Eta or Hasty Pudding Society. The last selection, the march "Up the Street," was written by R. G. Morse, a '96 man. Of course the Glee Club and as many more as could find room on the stage ranged up in front of and behind the orchestra and sang "Fair Harvard," while all the other students in the hall rose to their feet. The editors of the Crimson and the members of the Glee Club occupied tables reserved for them by the management. Joseph Jefferson was one of the enthusiasts at a table.

Boston Transcript
FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1896.

Promenade Concert This Evening Planned Especially for Bicyclists.

Again will the big electric "Promenade Concert" sign blaze forth in Hamilton place, this evening, when the series, which was interrupted for a few days, owing to Music Hall's being otherwise engaged, will be continued. The hall was used for a large banquet, last night, and today much quick work was necessary to get the place in readiness for the concerts. Manager F. R. Comee was very early on the scene, and a corps of workmen rapidly took down the special decorations used for the banquet. Then the hundred reserved tables had to be put into position, as well as the large number of other tables. The familiar summer trimmings, the "grove" on the stage, and other decorations all had to be placed as they were before. The rail enclosing the reserved tables was put up again, and the hundreds of chairs brought out from storage. Manager Comee has planned this evening for the special benefit of bicyclists and they may get their wheels [illegible] free at the hall. There are [illegible] numbers on the programme [illegible] have been [illegible] tle "Bic[illegible] Islan[illegible]

Mrs. J. L. Gardner's table at the "Pop" "request" night was unusually attractive, and so was the hostess in her green and white organdie made over mauve, with lilac stock and girdle. Her hat was of purple straw with a lot of flowers on it.

On Cadet night Mrs. H. D. Burnham was decidedly the smartest costumed of the society set there. Her gray gown with white lace and a quantity of ribbon on the bodice had the true cachet of style. Her hat was of purple with full ruchings of tulle of the same color. She had a party with her. Mrs. Burnham, by the way, was also noted in the class day throng at the Beck tea for her modish, perfect fitting costume of a fine purple and white stripe, the bodice of violet chiffon, with bertha of deep yellow lace, yellow stock and belt and violet hat.

Nobody in the crowd at the "Pops" on Harvard night, which was Monday, not even the students themselves, enjoyed the fun and excitement more than did Joseph Jefferson, the veteran actor, who was at a table with several friends. It was a very large night altogether. Manager Comee being a Harvard man himself entered into the spirit of the scene con amore, and with an enthusiasm which left nothing undone for the enjoyment and comfort of everybody. The glee club and as many more as could find room on the stage, ranged up in front of and behind the orchestra, made a stunning showing as they sang "Fair Harvard" for all it was worth, every student on the floor and in the galleries joining in to swell the mighty volume of sound.

—Figuratively speaking Music Hall was "painted red" in honor of Harvard Monday night. The electric lights were veiled in crimson shades. Red banners, adorned with the letter H hung from the balconies; over the stage, lettered in crimson, was a placard bearing the names of the "victorious nine." The programs were printed on crimson paper, crimson flowers decked the stage, while even the ushers wore crimson badges and jacqueminot bouttonaires. Among the audience were noted Mr. Joseph Jefferson, Colonel and Mrs. Fairchild, Mr. William Cosgrove, Mr Kenneth Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua B. Holden, Mr. Godfrey Morse, Mrs. Leopold Morse, Mr. and Mrs. John Dana Shepard, Mrs. Frederick Galloupe, Mrs. Phinheas Adams, Mr. Carl Sobeski, Hon. Robert M. Morse, Hon. Robert M. Morse, Jr., Miss Marion H. Brazier, Mr. Arthur Allen, Miss Gertrude Byrne, Mrs. Henry W. Chapin, Mrs. John G. Blake, President James R. Kendrick, Miss Elizabeth Shaw and Mr. Harry Woodruff.

—"Request Night" at Music Hall on Tuesday evening brought together a goodly showing of society people, prominent among them being Mrs. John L. Gardiner, escorted by Mr. Ingersoll of Philadelphia, Mrs. Frank Perkins, Mrs. Thomas Porter Lovell, with Miss Musette Lovell, Miss Marion Gage and escorts, Mr. Ward M. Tenny, Mr. Carl Brenemen, Miss Sherman, Mme. Wagniere, Mr. George F. Blake, Dr. John S. Phelps and Mr. Sheape Rose, who returned from Paris the previous day.

—Cadet night at the Promenade concert, Thursday evening, called forth one of the largest audiences of the season; and quite the most attractive. The gowns of the ladies were almost without exception light and effective, and the hall presented an unusually pleasing appearance, filled, as it was with the youth and flower of Boston's social element. Blue banners were hung at intervals about the balconies, and the programs were printed in cadet blue. Prominent among those present were noted Captain and Mrs. Henry Alline, Mr. Robert Barnet, Mr. Arthur Warren Pope, Mr. Arthur Brigham, Mr. Charles F. Rollins, Mr. Ralph Bartlett, Mr. Arthur Seldridge, Col. Henry Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. George Warren Favor, Miss Elizabeth Ahl, Col. James Ahl, Col. James Lake, Mr. and Mrs. William Seymaur, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Davenport, Mr. Holker Abbott, Mrs. N. M. Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. John Dana Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Metcalf, Mr. John Hayes, Mr. Walter De Land Came, Mr. Arthur Gilman, Miss Sara Laughton and Major and Mrs. Oakes.

THE PROMENADES.

The summer season of the popular promade concerts at Music Hall is near the d. There remains only nine more evengs in which to enjoy the music, smoke d drink a little.

Conductor Zach has arranged a number special programmes, the next to be Wednesday, which will be devoted enrely to compositions by French compors. The programme for this evening ntains many of the favorite selections ayed during the earlier part of the ason.

Promenade Concerts.

Another successful week of the conrts at Music Hall closes this evening. e week has been especially interest, inasmuch as there have been sevl "special" nights, the programmes those occasions being admirably arnged. For instance, Monday night s "Harvard Night," Tuesday, "First quest Night" and Thursday, "Cadet ght." Under Conductor Zach's on, the orchestra shows every evice of skilled training, and each mber on the well arranged promes is admirably played. That concerts will maintain their popuity until the end of the season there o doubt, as every evening sees not the seats around the tables all occpied, but a large number of people cupying balcony seats.

—"Request Night" at the "Pops" called Mrs John L. Gardner in from her Brookline home, and her presence was the one bit of danity gowning in the ring, save perhaps the charming group of fair Lasell girls, chaperoned by Mrs Jeannette Lovell. Mrs Gardner wore a cream organdie made over the palest violet, and made exceedingly simple. A girdle, stock and band at the wrist of her long gathered-in sleeves of violet ribbon was the only bit of adornment, except a sailor-shaped collar of white linen, trimmed with white lace. Her hat was one of the modish purple satin straws with changeable purple wings and a vine of soft purple and white flowers around the front brim. White gloves, veil and patent leather shoes with silver buckles completed one of the most summerish costumes worn yet at the "Pops." The Lovells had for their guest Miss Marion Gage. Others noted were Mrs Frank Perkins, looking unusually well in a dark green and crimson toque; Mr Karl Brenemen, Mr Geo. F. Blake, Mr Ward M. Tenney and a large party from Malden.

—Harvard night at the "Pop" was a red-letter one in point of attendance and color—in fact, everything wore a vermilion hue; the soft red glow of the shaded incandescents and the big arc light beneath the clock lent a deliciously rosy and warm tint to the scene. Many of the ladies, with true loyalty to fair Harvard, wore touches of red about their toilets. A brunette beauty of the young married set carried a huge bunch of jack roses. Mr Fred Comee and all the attaches wore the Harvard crimson, either as a boutonniere or in a ribbon carried across their immaculate shirt fronts. Every table except Mrs John L. Gardner's was occupied. Noticed in and about the ring were Hon and Mrs Joshua Holden, the Misses Holden and friends, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard, with Mr Frank Locke, Mr Waldo Heyward, Miss May Piper, Miss Putnam, Mr Irving Locke, Mr and Mrs Charles Cross and Mr Charles Burrill; Mrs Leopold Morse and son, Mr Godfrey Morse, Mr William Cosgrove, Mr Kenneth Lewis, Col and Mrs Charles Fairchild, Mrs Frederick Galloupe with friends, Mr Nelson E. Metcalf, Mr Carl Sobeski, Miss Elizabeth Shaw, Mr Charles S. Brown, Mr and Mrs Robert B. Metcalf, Miss Ethel Alba Davis, Mrs Henry H. Chapin with friends, Mrs Phinehas Adams, Miss Anna S. Robbins, Mr Lipsiger, Mrs Arthur Allen, Mrs Mary E. Blake, Mr Joseph Jefferson and Mr and Mrs James C. Davis.

—A pleasant party at the "Pops" Friday evening was that entertained by Mrs E. M. Palfrey of Boylston st. Her guests included Miss Adelaide M. Kenney, Mrs M. B. Steinauer, Mr George W. Palfrey and Mr William C. Pree of Brookline.

—An unusual program will be presented tomorrow night at the "Pops" to commemorate the 600th performance. Thursday and Friday will be dedicated to France and Italy, when the composers of the two countries will be honored by conductor Zach.

Cadet night at the "Pops" Thursday, was the synonym for a big crush, in which the Cadets and their friends naturally figured prominently, and it only added another to the successes which Manager Comee is making of his season of concerts at the Music Hall. Some there were Mr. Bayard Thayer and party, Mr. Robert Barnet, the playwright, Mr. Frank Lawrence, Mr. Edward Leland and party, Mr. and Mrs. John Shepard and friends, Mr. George Warren Favor and his bride (Miss Mary Ahl), Miss Ahl, Mr. H. B. Perkins, Mr. P. Sprague and party, Mr. J. G. White and party, Mr. and Mrs. C. Morrill, Mr. Ernest McKim, Miss Lilian Nichols, Mr. Daniel Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Davenport, Mr. William Seymour, Mr. Walter De Land Came and party, Mrs. George Winslow, Miss Maud Binney, Mr. Frank Lock and friends, Mr. A. B. Sloan, Mr. Frank Sise, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Belknap and Mr. William Ulman.

—"Harvard Night," at the Promenade Concert on Monday evening, called out a large and brilliant gathering. Crimson was used artistically in bunting, flags and incandescent lights. Among the large audience were Mrs. Robert M. Morse and her daughter, Miss S. Morse, with her fiancée, Mr. Louis Whiting, who occupied a table with friends; Mr. and Mrs. Lander Bouvé and Miss Helen Bouvé, Mr. Daniel H. Lane and Mr. Harry Robinson, with a party of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hayes, Miss Gertrude Davis, Mr. John J. Hayes, Jr., Miss Louise Kimball and Mr. Thatcher Kimball. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Knapp and Mr. John Batchelder.

Boston Transcript

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

HARVARD NIGHT AT "POP" CONCERT.

Special Programme, Fine Decorations and Much Enthusiasm.

Notwithstanding the fact that Harvard did not come out victorious in yesterday's game with Brown University, the enthusiasm which had been gathering on account of an expected victory found its outlet at the "Pop" concert, last evening. Manager F. R. Comee had made preparations to recognize in a fitting way success on the part of the Cambridge men, and had they come out ahead, the celebration at Music Hall would have been a notable one. However, Mr. Crane knew that the students would be present in large numbers, and, that they might not mistake their way, the big electric sign, "Promenade Concerts," which spans Hamilton place, was brilliant with red lights, which gave a warm glow to the court and as far out as Tremont street.

Inside, there were banners of red, with a white "H.," hanging all about the hall, and red globes on the electric lights, and red shades on the stage lights, made the scene a brilliant one. The programme, which was on bright red paper, was composed of selections from the many burlesque operas which have been given by the Harvard clubs, and "Fair Harvard" also found a place of honor on the bill. When this was given, as many Harvard men as could went upon the stage and sang under the leadership of Director Zach. All other Harvard students, about the hall, remained standing while the singing was going on. There was a large audience, and much applause throughout the evening.

ONLY TEN MORE "POP" CONCERTS.

The summer season of that favorite amusement attraction, the promenade concerts at Music Hall, is fast nearing the end. There will be only 10 more, as the season will positively close Thursday, July 2. The past week's concerts have been of unusual interest, owing to the excellent programme presented by Conductor Zach. Especially enthusiastic were the audiences on Harvard and Cadet nights, when every seat in the hall was sold before the doors were opened. Patrons contemplating spending an evening at these concerts should bear in mind that in order to secure choice seats at tables it is necessary to secure them several days in advance. During the remaining nights there will be a number of features. Tomorrow night will be the 600th performance, when the orchestra will play the favorite selections of the past two seasons. Next Thursday will be French composers' night; Friday, Italian composers' night; Monday, June 29, American composers' night; Wednesday, July 1, German composers' night. On the closing night, Thursday, July 2, there will be a grand testimonial to the popular conductor of the orchestra, Mr. Max Zach. The programme in full for the 600th performance tomorrow evening is:

March, "Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Selection, "Robin Hood"	De Koven
Narcissus	Nevin
Suite, "Peer Gynt"	Grieg
I. Morning Dawn.
II. Aase's Death.
III. Anitra's Dance.
IV. In the Halls of the King of the Dovre Mountains. The Imps are chasing Peer Gynt.
Love's Dream After the Ball	Czibulka
Introduction to Act III., "Lohengrin"
	Wagner
Overture, "Stradella"	Flotow
Waltz, "Arlequin en Voyage"	Zach
Polka, "Gypsy Baron"	Strauss
Boccaccio March	Suppe

The Harvard night, Monday, at the "pops" was a resplendent one. The decorations were, appropriately, crimson, and the hall was packed to an overflow with students and their friends. A feature of the occasion was the last selection of the orchestra, "Up the Street," which was composed by R. G. Morse, '96. The editors of the Crimson were present and ranged on the platform together with the Glee Club. An interested and sympathetic spectator was Joseph Jefferson.

—All previous gatherings at the Music hall "Pops" pale when compared with that of Thursday—Cadet night—for quality of audience and color in the dainty toilets of the ladies, who outnumbered the men in a large degree. There was the sedate chaperon, the gray-haired mother, the bride and the sweet girl graduate in her white muslin frock, in fact, there were several, arrayed in fairy-like texture, with large white hats laden with blossoms. They were prettily grouped, too, in the ring, making a most pleasing effect viewed from any vantage point. About the balconies were blue banners bearing the corps letters, and on either side of the stage were handsome American flags. The programs were done in cadet blue and white, and the numbers presented by conductor Zach had the true military flavor, which included the music of the Cadet successes. Among many familiar faces were Mr R. A. Barnet, Mr Arthur Warren Pope, Capt and Mrs W. H. Alline, Maj Fred Farrow, Mr Arthur Brigham, Mr Charles Rollins, Mr Ralph Bartlett, Mr Arthur Selfridge, Mr and Mrs R B. Metcalf, Mr Carl J. Fraap, Mr Fitzgerald, Mrs Henry Burnham and party of three, Mr William Seymour, Mr and Mrs Edgar Davenport, Mr Holker Abbott with friends, Col James Lake, Miss Sarah Laughton, Mrs N. M. Winslow, Mr Walter Deland Came, Maj and Mrs Oakes, Mr and Mrs George Warren Favor, Miss Elizabeth Hay Ahl, Col Harry Hastings, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard, Mr Frank Locke, Miss Blanche Souther, Miss May Piper, Miss Anna S. Robbins, Miss Putnam, Mr Charles Rollins, Mr and Mrs Charles Cross and Mr Charles Burrill.

BOSTON POST

The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

CRIMSON "POP."

"Harvard Night" at the Music Hall Promenade Concert—Boys Were There.

"Harvard night" was the attraction at the Music Hall promenade concert last evening, and standing room was indeed at a premium. Under the management of Mr. Comee the crowd of 2500 persons were well cared for, and the different numbers of the programme were loudly applauded. The lights, the programmes and the decorations were all crimson in honor of the occasion, while over the platform was a large placard bearing the fifteen recent victories of the Harvard baseball nine. Representatives of the "Harvard Crimson," college societies and baseball team were seated about the specially reserved tables.

Several of the numbers on the programme were the compositions of students, and when "Fair Harvard" was played by the orchestra the college glee club took possession of the stage and sang the song as it has seldom been sung before.

Thursday will be "Cadets' night," when selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk' 'will be the special attractions.

This evening at the Music Hall Promenades will be "Harvard Night." The orchestra will play the following selections:

Manhattan Beach March	Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"	Suppé
Waltz, "Estudiantina"	Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah"	Atkinson
Overture, "Sphinx"	Thompson
Overture, "Granada"	Barry
Selection, "Proserpina"
Potpourri from "Brangle-Brink"	Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"	Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Fair Harvard.
March, "Up the Street"	Morse

Boston Journal.

TWELVE PAGES.

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

HARVARD NIGHT AT THE "POPS."

Harvard owned Music Hall last night. It was the Crimson night at the "Pops," and notwithstanding Brown's victory at base ball in the afternoon, the celebration was just as glorious as if Capt. Dean's men had been the wallopers. The lights over the entrance in Hayward Place were like balls of fire; the hall was trimmed with the college colors; Harvard men, forgetful of "grinding," crowded themselves into all available and unavailable space, and, to cap the enthusiasm, the Glee Club, accompanied by Conductor Max Zach's orchestra, sang "Fair Harvard." There was a crimson tone to everything.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

HARVARD NIGHT AT "POPS."

Everything at Music Hall last night was crimson. It was Harvard night, and as Mgr. Comee is a Harvard man the decorations were especially elaborate. The great sign in Hamilton pl. glared luridly; the chandeliers over the stage danced under crimson tinted skirts; crimson banners bearing a big H hung from the galleries; the programmes were printed on crimson paper, and every employee had a crimson ribbon. Over the stage was a placard bearing a list of Harvard's base-ball victories.

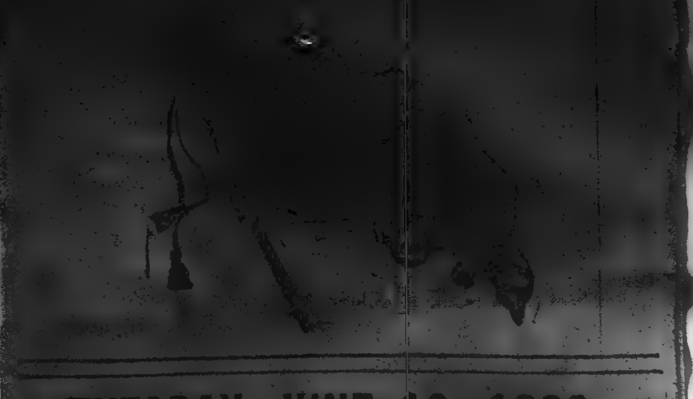
The hall was packed with students and sympathizers. There was much cheering, but no such rampant roystering as has been witnessed in past years. Eight of the 12 musical numbers were compositions of the Pi Eta or Hasty Pudding Society. The last selection, the march "Up the Street," was written by R. G. Morse, a '96 man. Of course the Glee Club and as many more as could find room on the stage ranged up in front of and behind the orchestra and sang "Fair Harvard," while all the other students in the hall rose to their feet. The editors of the Crimson and the members of the Glee Club occupied tables reserved for them by the management. Joseph Jefferson was one of the enthusiasts at a table.

Boston Transcript

FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1896.

Promenade Concert This Evening Planned Especially for Bicyclists.

Again will the big electric "Promenade Concert" sign blaze forth in Hamilton place, this evening, when the series, which was interrupted for a few days, owing to Music Hall's being otherwise engaged, will be continued. The hall was used for a large banquet, last night, and today much quick work was necessary to get the place in readiness for the concerts. Manager F. R. Comee was very early on the scene, and a corps of workmen rapidly took down the special decorations used for the banquet. Then the hundred reserved tables had to be put into position, as well as the large number of other tables. The familiar summer trimmings, the "grove" on the stage, and other decorations all had to be placed as they were before. The rail enclosing the reserved tables was put up again, and the hundreds of chairs brought out from storage. Manager Comee has planned the evening for the special benefit of bicyclists and they may get their wheels checked free at the hall. There are always twelve numbers on the programme, and their titles have been so arranged as to form an acrostic "Bicycle Night," with Boccaccio [illegible] Iolanthe overture, Cagliostro [illegible] on.



TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

HARVARD BOYS AT POP

The Crowd Sang When the Song of the Alma Mater, "Fair Harvard," Was Sweetly Played.

The management of the promenade concerts fairly outdid itself last evening in its elaborate reception of the Harvard men, to whom the night was dedicated. A hazy red glow spread over the entire large hall, of which one hardly noticed the reason at first, so soft was the light. Close examination showed, however, that all the arc lights were fitted with crimson shades, while the red draperies of the balconies lent a subdued tint, which made one feel that the room was aflame. Even the programs were red. Harvard flags hung from every pillar in the balcony, while an enormous score board over the orchestra told of the victories of the crimson nine.

If Managers Ellis and Comee gave the boys a hearty welcome, the students themselves were nothing if not appreciative. Each number was encored until the walls resounded.

When the orchestra began playing their college music, tremendous enthusiasm prevailed, rattling cheers, prolonged clapping and every noise that was a noise filled the air with reverbations thicker that the smoky atmosphere.

The excitement grew as the program progressed, until the orchestra was unheard.

At the selection before "Fair Harvard" the fellows crowded to the front, and when the orchestra burst out in that beautiful college melody, the large crowd of students sang in unison the hymn of their alima mater.

A tremendous cheering for Harvard, for all the teams, and for the managers, and the crowd dispersed, in good order, leaving the impression that Harvard men are gentlemen, even under excitement.

The program for tonight:

March, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner
Overture, "Fledermaus"	Strauss
Waltz, "Sounds from the Vienna Woods"	Strauss
Zither solo, Mr. Abloescher.
Selection, "La Grande Duchesse"	Offenbach
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Elegie, for string orchestra	Strube
Serenade, for string orchestra	Strube
Retraite Croate	Gabriel-Marie
Overture, "Tannhauser"	Wagner
Largo	Haendel
Waltz, "Estudiantina"	Strauss
Tyrolean Polka	Zeller
March, "Vienna Dude"	Wagner

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

CRIMSON MUSIC.

"Fair Harvard" Night at the Music Hal Pops—Fearful and Wonderful Result of Students' Attempt to Sing.

Everything last night was crimson in Music hall, for it was Harvard night at the "pops." Crimson bunting and flags, crimson colored programs, girls in crimson waists and boys with crimson scarfs drinking crimson wine.

Over the platform hung a list of the glorious victories won this season by the Harvard baseball team—15 in all—and the audience was largely made up of Harvard students and their friends.

The house was packed, and strange to say it was an extremely quiet crowd for about two hours, or until No. 11 on the program was reached. This was "Fair Harvard," and the students in the audience decided that they wanted to give that part of the concert themselves. So about 700 of them made a rush for the platform.

The musicians were panic stricken—fiddles, cellos, horns, drums and piccolos fled in consternation. The industrious little artist who works the snare and kettle drums and several other implements had all he could do to save his chattels, and the three big double basses sought refuge in flight. Nothing could stay the progress of the athletic young students.

They mounted the platform from all directions, and then one of them attempted to give "Fair Harvard" as a solo. If he had had a voice like a steam calliope he might have been heard, but his notes were drowned in the pandemonium that reigned. So the whole crowd took up the strain and fairly lifted the roof with their ear-splitting endeavors to sing.

It was a great success, as far as noise was concerned. Then they sang one or two other songs, which seemed to offer a safety valve for their enthusiasm.

Quiet was soon restored, and the banished musicians were allowed to return to their places and give the final number on the program, which contained many selections from Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta operettas.

Every number was loudly encored, and many were the plaudits showered upon Mr Zach and his band of artists.

PROMENADE CONCERTS

POPULAR MUSIC,
LIGHT REFRESHMENTS,
Grand Orchestra of 50

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

ELEVENTH SEASON. 594TH PERFORMANCE.

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 15, 1896.

HARVARD NIGHT.

Programme.

MANHATTAN BEACH MARCH	Sousa
OVERTURE, "Jolly Students"	Suppé
WALTZ, "Estudiantina"	Waldteufel
SELECTION, "Obispah"	Knight
OVERTURE, "Sphinx"	Thompson
OVERTURE, "Granada"	Barry
SELECTION, "Proserpina"	Mason
POT-POURRI from "Brangle-Brink"	Carpenter
OVERTURE, "Alcayde"	Barry
WALTZ, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
FAIR HARVARD.
MARCH, "Up the Street"	Morse

Admission, 25 Cents.

Reserved Seats, at Tables or in Balcony, 25 cts. extra,
Now on sale at Box Office, Music Hall.

☞ BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

TOWN TOPICS

THE hopes of Boston now consist in looking forward to the innocuous joys of Class Day at Cambridge—may the gods give good weather to all, and the continuing expectation of husbands to the college belles!—and in frequenting the Music Hall "Pops." As Col. John T. Wheelwright sang in boyhood's happy days:

Pan and Apollo,
Pipes and stops,
And all that wild Cassandra sang,
May all go hang—may all go hang!
We meet and beat them, net, all hollow,
With "Pops," great "Pops," praise God for "Pops."

The quinquennial catalogue incarnate being at the "Pops" on several nights, I trust I am not expected to particularize. Abbott, Amory, Bowditch, Cabot, Curtis—it is a well-known Boston counting-in rhyme.

MONDAY "Pop" was called Harvard Night. By the great manes of John Harvard, whose statue, a replica of the sweet young beauty of Sherman Hoar, United States District Attorney, I swear I know not why. Is not every "Pop" night a Harvard night? Are not the ingenuous youths from Cantabridge visible and audible, full of enthusiasm, picturesque shirts and pimples, every time that music enjoys herself in Music Hall? Where would the "Pops" be without Harvard, and where would Harvard be without the "Pops?" Where would the Charles be without water? Where would the Ancient and Honorable Artillery be with it?

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

HARVARD BOYS AT POP

The Crowd Sang When the Song of the Alma Mater, "Fair Harvard," Was Sweetly Played.

The management of the promenade concerts fairly outdid itself last evening in its elaborate reception of the Harvard men, to whom the night was dedicated. A hazy red glow spread over the entire large hall, of which one hardly noticed the reason at first, so soft was the light. Close examination showed, however, that all the arc lights were fitted with crimson shades, while the red draperies of the balconies lent a subdued tint, which made one feel that the room was aflame. Even the programs were red. Harvard flags hung from every pillar in the balcony, while an enormous score board over the orchestra told of the victories of the crimson nine.

If Managers Ellis and Comee gave the boys a hearty welcome, the students themselves were nothing if not appreciative. Each number was encored until the walls resounded.

When the orchestra began playing their college music, tremendous enthusiasm prevailed, rattling cheers, prolonged clapping and every noise that was a noise filled the air with reverbations thicker that the smoky atmosphere.

The excitement grew as the program progressed, until the orchestra was unheard.

At the selection before "Fair Harvard" the fellows crowded to the front, and when the orchestra burst out in that beautiful college melody, the large crowd of students sang in unison the hymn of their alima mater.

A tremendous cheering for Harvard, for all the teams, and for the managers, and the crowd dispersed, in good order, leaving the impression that Harvard men are gentlemen, even under excitement.

The program for tonight:

March, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner
Overture, "Fledermaus"	Strauss
Waltz, "Sounds from the Vienna Woods"	Strauss
Zither solo, Mr. Abloescher.
Selection, "La Grande Duchesse"	Offenbach
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Elegie, for string orchestra	Strube
Serenade, for string orchestra	Strube
Retraite Croate	Gabriel-Marie
Overture, "Tannhauser"	Wagner
Largo	Haendel
Waltz, "Estudiantina"	Strauss
Tyrolean Polka	Zeller
March, "Vienna Dude"	Wagner

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

CRIMSON MUSIC.

"Fair Harvard" Night at the Music Hal Pops—Fearful and Wonderful Result of Students' Attempt to Sing.

Everything last night was crimson in Music hall, for it was Harvard night at the "pops." Crimson bunting and flags, crimson colored programs, girls in crimson waists and boys with crimson scarfs drinking crimson wine.

Over the platform hung a list of the glorious victories won this season by the Harvard baseball team—15 in all—and the audience was largely made up of Harvard students and their friends.

The house was packed, and strange to say it was an extremely quiet crowd for about two hours, or until No. 11 on the program was reached. This was "Fair Harvard," and the students in the audience decided that they wanted to give that part of the concert themselves. So about 700 of them made a rush for the platform.

The musicians were panic stricken—fiddles, cellos, horns, drums and piccolos fled in consternation. The industrious little artist who works the snare and kettle drums and several other implements had all he could do to save his chattels, and the three big double basses sought refuge in flight. Nothing could stay the progress of the athletic young students.

They mounted the platform from all directions, and then one of them attempted to give "Fair Harvard" as a solo. If he had had a voice like a steam calliope he might have been heard, but his notes were drowned in the pandemonium that reigned. So the whole crowd took up the strain and fairly lifted the roof with their ear-splitting endeavors to sing.

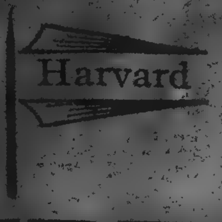
It was a great success, as far as noise was concerned. Then they sang one or two other songs, which seemed to offer a safety valve for their enthusiasm.

Quiet was soon restored, and the banished musicians were allowed to return to their places and give the final number on the program, which contained many selections from Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta operettas.

Every number was loudly encored, and many were the plaudits showered upon Mr Zach and his band of artists.

MUSIC HALL

PROMENADE CONCERTS



POPULAR MUSIC,
LIGHT REFRESHMENTS,

Grand Orchestra of 50

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

ELEVENTH SEASON. 594TH PERFORMANCE.

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 15, 1896.

HARVARD NIGHT.

Programme.

MANHATTAN BEACH MARCH	Sousa
OVERTURE, "Jolly Students"	Suppé
WALTZ, "Estudiantina"	Waldteufel
SELECTION, "Obispah"	Knight
OVERTURE, "Sphinx"	Thompson
OVERTURE, "Granada"	Barry
SELECTION, "Proserpina"	Mason
POT-POURRI from "Brangle-Brink"	Carpenter
OVERTURE, "Alcayde"	Barry
WALTZ, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
FAIR HARVARD.
MARCH, "Up the Street"	Morse

Admission, 25 Cents.

Reserved Seats, at Tables or in Balcony, 25 cts. extra,
Now on sale at Box Office, Music Hall.

☞ BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

TOWN TOPICS

THE hopes of Boston now consist in looking forward to the innocuous joys of Class Day at Cambridge—may the gods give good weather to all, and the continuing expectation of husbands to the college belles! —and in frequenting the Music Hall "Pops." As Col. John T. Wheelwright sang in boyhood's happy days:

> Pan and Apollo,
> Pipes and stops,
> And all that wild Cassandra sang,
> May all go hang—may all go hang!
> We meet and beat them, net, all hollow,
> With "Pops," great "Pops," praise God for "Pops."

The quinquennial catalogue incarnate being at the "Pops" on several nights, I trust I am not expected to particularize. Abbott, Amory, Bowditch, Cabot, Curtis—it is a well-known Boston counting-in rhyme.

MONDAY "Pop" was called Harvard Night. By the great manes of John Harvard, whose statue, a replica of the sweet young beauty of Sherman Hoar, United States District Attorney, I swear I know not why. Is not every "Pop" night a Harvard night? Are not the ingenuous youths from Cantabridge visible and audible, full of enthusiasm, picturesque shirts and pimples, every time that music enjoys herself in Music Hall? Where would the "Pops" be without Harvard, and where would Harvard be without the "Pops?" Where would the Charles be without water? Where would the Ancient and Honorable Artillery be with it?

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

HARVARD BOYS AT POP

The Crowd Sang When the Song of the Alma Mater, "Fair Harvard," Was Sweetly Played.

The management of the promenade concerts fairly outdid itself last evening in its elaborate reception of the Harvard men, to whom the night was dedicated. A hazy red glow spread over the entire large hall, of which one hardly noticed the reason at first, so soft was the light. Close examination showed, however, that all the arc lights were fitted with crimson shades, while the red draperies of the balconies lent a subdued tint, which made one feel that the room was aflame. Even the programs were red. Harvard flags hung from every pillar in the balcony, while an enormous score board over the orchestra told of the victories of the crimson nine.

If Managers Ellis and Comee gave the boys a hearty welcome, the students themselves were nothing if not appreciative. Each number was encored until the walls resounded.

When the orchestra began playing their college music, tremendous enthusiasm prevailed, rattling cheers, prolonged clapping and every noise that was a noise filled the air with reverbations thicker that the smoky atmosphere.

The excitement grew as the program progressed, until the orchestra was unheard.

At the selection before "Fair Harvard" the fellows crowded to the front, and when the orchestra burst out in that beautiful college melody, the large crowd of students sang in unison the hymn of their alima mater.

A tremendous cheering for Harvard, for all the teams, and for the managers, and the crowd dispersed, in good order, leaving the impression that Harvard men are gentlemen, even under excitement.

The program for tonight:

March, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner
Overture, "Fledermaus"	Strauss
Waltz, "Sounds from the Vienna Woods"	Strauss
Zither solo, Mr. Abloescher.
Selection, "La Grande Duchesse"	Offenbach
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Elegie, for string orchestra	Strube
Serenade, for string orchestra	Strube
Retraite Croate	Gabriel-Marie
Overture, "Tannhauser"	Wagner
Largo	Haendel
Waltz, "Estudiantina"	Strauss
Tyrolean Polka	Zeller
March, "Vienna Dude"	Wagner

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1896.

CRIMSON MUSIC.

"Fair Harvard" Night at the Music Hal Pops—Fearful and Wonderful Result of Students' Attempt to Sing.

Everything last night was crimson in Music hall, for it was Harvard night at the "pops." Crimson bunting and flags, crimson colored programs, girls in crimson waists and boys with crimson scarfs drinking crimson wine.

Over the platform hung a list of the glorious victories won this season by the Harvard baseball team—15 in all—and the audience was largely made up of Harvard students and their friends.

The house was packed, and strange to say it was an extremely quiet crowd for about two hours, or until No. 11 on the program was reached. This was "Fair Harvard," and the students in the audience decided that they wanted to give that part of the concert themselves. So about 700 of them made a rush for the platform.

The musicians were panic stricken—fiddles, cellos, horns, drums and piccolos fled in consternation. The industrious little artist who works the snare and kettle drums and several other implements had all he could do to save his chattels, and the three big double basses sought refuge in flight. Nothing could stay the progress of the athletic young students.

They mounted the platform from all directions, and then one of them attempted to give "Fair Harvard" as a solo. If he had had a voice like a steam calliope he might have been heard, but his notes were drowned in the pandemonium that reigned. So the whole crowd took up the strain and fairly lifted the roof with their ear-splitting endeavors to sing.

It was a great success, as far as noise was concerned. Then they sang one or two other songs, which seemed to offer a safety valve for their enthusiasm.

Quiet was soon restored, and the banished musicians were allowed to return to their places and give the final number on the program, which contained many selections from Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta operettas.

Every number was loudly encored, and many were the plaudits showered upon Mr Zach and his band of artists.

MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

Harvard

Harvard

POPULAR MUSIC,
LIGHT REFRESHMENTS,

Grand Orchestra of 50

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

ELEVENTH SEASON. 594TH PERFORMANCE.

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 15, 1896.

HARVARD NIGHT.

Programme.

MANHATTAN BEACH MARCH	Sousa
OVERTURE, "Jolly Students"	Suppe
WALTZ, "Estudiantina"	Waldteufel
SELECTION, "Obispah"	Knight
OVERTURE, "Sphinx"	Thompson
OVERTURE, "Granada"	Barry
SELECTION, "Proserpina"	Mason
POT-POURRI from "Brangle-Brink"	Carpenter
OVERTURE, "Alcayde"	Barry
WALTZ, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
FAIR HARVARD.
MARCH, "Up the Street"	Morse

Admission, 25 Cents.

Reserved Seats, at Tables or in Balcony, 25 cts. extra,
Now on sale at Box Office, Music Hall.

☞ BICYCLES CHECKED FREE.

TOWN TOPICS

THE hopes of Boston now consist in looking forward to the innocuous joys of Class Day at Cambridge—may the gods give good weather to all, and the continuing expectation of husbands to the college belles! —and in frequenting the Music Hall "Pops." As Col. John T. Wheelwright sang in boyhood's happy days:

Pan and Apollo,
Pipes and stops,
And all that wild Cassandra sang,
May all go hang—may all go hang!
We meet and beat them, net, all hollow,
With "Pops," great "Pops," praise God for "Pops."

The quinquennial catalogue incarnate being at the "Pops" on several nights, I trust I am not expected to particularize. Abbott, Amory, Bowditch, Cabot, Curtis—it is a well-known Boston counting-in rhyme.

MONDAY "Pop" was called Harvard Night. By the great manes of John Harvard, whose statue, a replica of the sweet young beauty of Sherman Hoar, United States District Attorney, I swear I know not why. Is not every "Pop" night a Harvard night? Are not the ingenuous youths from Cantabridge visible and audible, full of enthusiasm, picturesque shirts and pimples, every time that music enjoys herself in Music Hall? Where would the "Pops" be without Harvard, and where would Harvard be without the "Pops?" Where would the Charles be without water? Where would the Ancient and Honorable Artillery be with it?

MUSIC HALL PROMENADES.

The announcement that Mr. Schuecker, solo harpist of the Symphony Orchestra, was to appear at these concerts tomorrow evening has created a lively demand for tickets by lovers of this instrument. The programme for this evening is: March from "Probekuss," Millocker; overture, "Fra Diavolo," Auber; waltz, "Mon Reve," Waldteufel; selection, "Merry War," Stauss; "La Vendange" waltz from the ballet, "Fairy Tale," Brull (first time); Traeumerei, Schumann; La Cinquantaine, Marie; overture, "The Mastersingers of Nurnberg," Wagner; Offenbachiana, Conradi; waltz, "Neu-Wien," Strass; mazourka, "La Mousme," Ganne; march, "Hoch Habsburg," Kral.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADES.

The season of the Music Hall promenade concerts is at its height and the big audiences that crowd around the tables and fill the balconies each evening best tell of the continued popularity of these summer entertainments. Conductor Zach has fully sustained the predictions made earlier in the season by his friends. His programmes have all maintained a high standard of popular music, from the opening night. Special attractions are announced for this week on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Monday will be known as "Harvard Night," and already one of the largest audiences of the season is assured. Tuesday the first "Request" programme will be given and Thursday will be "Cadets Night," on which occasion the orchestra will play selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk." The programme for tomorrow evening is:

Manhattan Beach March..................Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"..................Suppe
Waltz, "Estudiantina"..................Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah"..................Atkinson
Overture, "Sphinx"..................Thompson
Overture, "Granada"..................Barry
Selection, "Proserpina"..................Mason
Pot-Pourri from "Brangle-Brink"..................Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"..................Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"..................Zeller
"Fair Harvard."
March, "Up the Street"..................Morse

In spite of the theatres and the Chute, the "Pops" still more than hold their own as a popular evening diversion. On Tuesday night at the Music Hall were noted Mr. Russell Sturgis, Dr. C. J. Blake, Mr. C. U. Cotting, Mr. William Rotch, Prof. J. B. Greenough of Harvard, Mr. Walter Cotton and Mr. Alexander Higginson, with parties large and small. On Wednesday night Mr. Guy Norman brought a number of smart people, and so did Mr. Percival Lowell. Prof. Barrett Wendell was there, and Mr. Herbert Leeds, Mr. B. P. Cheney, Mr. Arthur Burnham, Mr. Robert Boit and party, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Rich, Col. Thomas the Governor's secretary, and Mr. R. H. Boutwell.

Tomorrow at the "Pops" will be Harvard night, and a big turnout of the university boys is expected. Thursday, another fine programme, devoted to the Cadets, will be in order, which ought to turn into an ovation, as it doubtless will, to Mr. Barnet, the clever author of "Tabasco," Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Bean Stalk," sacred to Cadet successes, as well as to the "Merry-Go-Round," now in full tide of success at the Tremont, which easily ranks with the best of the others.

Harvard Night.

Tonight will be "Harvard Night" at the promenade concerts in Music Hall. The programme will be made up largely of selections from plays given by the Hasty Pudding Club and the Pi Eta Society.

Programme:

1. Manhattan Beach March, Sousa.
2. Overture, "Jolly Students," Suppe.
3. Waltz, "Estudiantina," Waldteufel.
4. Selection, "Obispah," Atkinson.
5. Overture, "Sphinx" Thompson.
6. Overture, "Granada," Mason.
7. Selection, "Proserpina," Mason.
8. Pot-Pourri from "Branglebrink," Carpenter.
9. Overture, "Alcayde," Barry.
10. Waltz, "Grubenlichter," Zeller.
11. Fair Harvard.
12. March, "Up the Street," Mason.

The "Pop" concerts continue to live up to any version of their name, and are both snappy and popular. On warm evenings, when one "wants to go somewhere," but does not feel inclined to spend the evening without refreshment for several hours, the "Pop" concert is just what is needed. To sit and sip cool drinks, listen to music of the finest quality, and still feel at liberty to converse with one's party if one desires, is ideal enjoyment. The character of the programmes given strikes the right medium between the classic and the common, and exactly attains "the popular." Mr. Max Zach has proved a great success as a conductor.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADES.

These popular concerts are now entering upon the last half of the present season. The management announce special attractions, the first to take place tomorrow evening, at which Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, solo harpist of the Symphony Orchestra, will play the harp obligato to the "Greek Pirates' March" by Parish Alvars. Mr. Schuecker stands alone the peer of any playing that popular instrument in this country. Many have already secured their seats, as this concert promises to be one of the most interesting of the season. An excellent program has also been arranged for this evening, including "Largo" by Handel, Mr. Schintzler playing the violin solo.

—A number of well-known people have been in attendance at the "Pops" during the week, every table being occupied. Among them were Mr William Rotch, Mr Russell Sturgis, Prof J. B. Greenough, Dr Clarence J. Blake, Mr C. M. Cotting and party, Mr Alexander Higginson, Mr Walter Cotton and party, all on Tuesday night. Mr Percival Lowell, Mr Herbert Leeds, Prof Barrett Wendell, Mr Arthur Burnham, Mr Robert Boit and party, Mr B. P. Cheney, Col H. A. Thomas, with Mr R. H. Boutwell, Mr and Mrs Guy Norman, Mr and Mrs Charles J. Rich were in the ring on Wednesday. Friday night Mr Henry Austin, Dr and Mrs William Pitt Brechin, Mr John G. Abbott with Mr Walter De Land Came, Mr T. L. Drew, Mr Carl Sobeski, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard with party, which included Mrs Martha Dana Shepard, Mr Willoughby Richardson, Mr and Mrs A. T. Waite, Mr Legarde, Miss Mary L. Greenleaf, Mrs Corbett with large party of ladies, and Mr J. R. Kendrick were among those who enjoyed the program. Harvard and Cadet nights will be notable.

—Mr W. H. H. Soule sailed yesterday on the Pavonia for Liverpool. He will return the last of August.

—Tomorrow is Harvard night at the "Pops." Selections from all the popular college burlesques will be given, and Mr Comee has several entertaining features to offer. Thursday is cadets' night, and it will be a big affair, many having arranged to come in after the class day exercises at Cambridge.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADES.

The season of the Music Hall promenade concerts is at its height, and the big audiences that crowd around the tables and fill the balconies each evening best tell of the continued popularity of these delightful summer entertainments.

Conductor Zach has fully sustained the predictions made earlier in the season by his friends. His programmes have all been of a high standard of popular music from the opening night.

Special attractions are announced for the coming week on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Monday will be known as Harvard night, and already one of the largest audiences of the season is assured.

Today the first request programme will be given, and Thursday will be Cadets' night, on which occasion the orchestra will play selections from the popular successes "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr." and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

The programme in full for Monday evening is:

Manhattan Beach March..............Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"..............Suppe
Waltz, "Estudiantina"..............Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah"..............Atkinson
Overture, "Sphinx"..............Thompson
Overture, "Granada"..............Barry
Selection, "Prosperina"..............Mason
Potpourri from "Brangle-Brink"..............Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"..............Barry
Waltz, "Grübenlichter"..............Zeller
Fair Harvard.
March, "Up the Street"..............Morse

Music Hall Promenades.

The attendance at these concerts the past week has been unusually large, clearly demonstrating that these entertainments have a very strong following among summer amusement seekers. The coming week will be a very attractive one, and indications point to some of the largest audiences of the season. Every year one evening is set apart for "Harvard," complimentary to the large number of students who attend these concerts. Harvard night has always been one of the features of the season, but this year the demand for tickets has been greater than in any past season.

This concert will occur tomorrow evening, and the program below shows many selections from the successful burlesque given by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta societies. Tuesday night will be the first "request night," and Thursday "cadets' night," at which selections will be played from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior Jr" and "Jack and the Beanstalk." The 600th performance of the concerts will be Monday evening, June 22, for which special features will be announced later.

The program for Monday evening (Harvard night) is as follows:

Manhattan Beach March..............Sousa
Overture, Jolly Students..............Suppe
Waltz, Estudiantina..............Waldteufel
Selection, Obispah..............Atkinson
Overture, Sphinx..............Thompson
Overture, Granada..............Barry
Selection, Proserpina..............Mason
Potpourri from Brangle-Brink..............Carpenter
Overture, Alcayde..............Barry
Waltz, Grubenlichter..............Zeller
Fair Harvard.
March, Up the Street..............Morse

—Mr. William Rotch, Mr. Charles U. Cotting, Mr. Russell Sturgis, Prof. J. B. Greenough, Dr. Charles J. Blake, Mr. Alexander Higginson and Mr. Walter Coffin and party were among the large audience at the "Pop" concert on Tuesday evening.

[illegible] 'Fra Diavolo,' Auber; [illegible] Reve," Waldteufel; selection, "Merry War," Strauss; "La Vendange" waltz from the ballet "Fairy Tale," first time, Brull; "Traeumerei," Schumann; "La Cinquantaine," Marie; overture, "The Mastersingers of Nurnberg," Wagner; "Offenbachiana," Conradi; waltz, "Neu-Wien," Strauss; mazourka, "La Mousme," Ganne; march, "Hoch Habsburg," Kral. Tomorrow, Thursday evening, Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, solo harpist of the Symphony Orchestra, will play a selection on that popular instrument.

Promenade Concert.

The programme for the promenade concert this evening is:

1. March from "Probekuss," Millocker.
2. Overture, "Fra Diavolo," Auber.
3. Waltz, "Mon Reve," Waldteufel.
4. Selection, "Merry War," Strauss.
5. "La Vendange" Waltz from the Ballet, "Fairy Tale," (First time). Brull.
6. Traeumerei, Schumann.
7. La Cinquantaine, Marie.
8. Overture, "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," Wagner.
9. Offenbachiana, Conradi.
10. Waltz, "Neu-Wien," Strauss.
11. Mazourka, "La Mousme," Ganne.
12. March, "Hoch Habsburg," Kral.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Monday, June 15. Harvard Night. Selections from the successful burlesques given by the "Hasty Pudding" and "Pi Eta" Societies, as follows: "Obispah," "The Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," and "Alcayde."

Tuesday, June 16. First request night.

Thursday, June 18. Cadets' night. Selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr." and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Only a few weeks remain in which to enjoy the fine music of the Music Hall promenade concerts, and people are so well aware of this that the seats are filled early every evening. Thursday, July 2, is to be the closing night. Mr. Zach has won the approval of the public as conductor, and is greeted with applause every evening. It is a truly Bostonese enjoyment to sit and sip in music and other things at the same time, when the music, as well as the assembled company, is of the best, and all visitors to town who have heard of the famous pops clamor to be taken there at once on arriving in town.

CAMBRIDGE TRIBUNE

SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1896.

The promenade concert on Monday evening will be a Harvard night. The programme will be:

Manhattan Beach March..............Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"..............Suppe
Waltz, "Estudiantina"..............Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah"..............Knight
Overture, "Sphinx"..............Thompson
Overture, "Granada"..............Barry
Selection, "Proserpina"..............Mason
Pot-Pourri from "Brangle-Brink"......Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"..............Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"..............Zeller
Fair Harvard..............
March, "Up the Street"..............Morse

Thursday, June 18. Cadets night. Selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tobasco," "Excelsior Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

THE POPS.

A Special Harvard Programme for Tomorrow Night.

This week there will be several special nights at the Promenade concerts at Music hall. Tomorrow will be "Harvard Night" when selections will be played from the successful burlesques given by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta societies, as follows: "Obispah," "The Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink," and "Alcayde." Tuesday will be the first "Request Night" and Thursday, "Cadet Night" when selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk" will be given.

The programme for tomorrow or "Harvard" night will be:

Manhattan Beach March..............Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"..............Suppé
Waltz, "Estudiantina"..............Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah"..............Knight
Overture, "Sphinx"..............Thompson
Overture, "Granada"..............Barry
Selection, "Proserpina"..............Mason
Pot-Pourri from "Brangle-Brink"....Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"..............Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"..............Zeller
Fair Harvard
March, "Up the Street"..............Morse

THE P[illegible]

One strong [illegible] success of these concerts [illegible] in the program each evening [illegible] sures a variety possible only [illegible] tertainments. The management announces special features for [illegible] two weeks which will undoubtedly [illegible] of great interest to the "Pop" patrons as follows: Thursday evening, June [illegible] the "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish Alvars, will be played with a beautiful harp obbligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, the solo harper of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This will afford the admirers of Mr. Schuecker an opportunity to hear him at his best. Monday evening, June 15, will be Harvard Night, when selections will be given from burlesques presented by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta Societies, as follows: "Obispah," "Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday evening, June 16, will be the first Request Night of the season. Thursday evening, June 18, will be Cadets Night, when selections will be given from the popular productions of Boston's crack military corps, as follows: "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk." Saturday evening, June 20, will be the 600th concert, and a special program will be given, comprising all the favorite selections of the past two seasons.

This is the program for tomorrow (Monday) evening:

Coronation music from "Le Prophete"..Meyerbeer
Overture, "Barber of Seville"..........Rossini
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"........Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Madame Angot"..........Lecocq
Narcissus..........Nevin
a. Scherzo waltz, from "Boabdil"........Moszkowski
b. Malaguena, from "Boabdil"..Moszkowski
Love's Dream After the Ball..........Czibulka
Overture, "Rienzi"..........Wagner
Overture, "Si j'etais Roi"..........Adam
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"..........Strauss
Polka, from "Gypsy Baron"..........Strauss
March, "Wien bleibt Wien"......Schrammel

THE HARVARD CRIMSON.

MONDAY, JUNE 8. 1896.

Promenade Concert.

The programme for the promenade concert this evening is:

1. Coronation March from "Le Prophete," Meyerbeer.
2. Overture, "Barber of Seville." Rossini.
3. Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens," Joh. Strauss.
4. Selection, "Madame Angot," Lecocq.
5. Narcissus, Nevin.
6. a. Scherzo Waltz } from "Boabdil," b. Malaguena } Moszkowski.
7. Love's Dream After The Ball. Czibulka.
8. Overture, "Rienzi," Wagner.
9. Overture, "Si j'etais Roi," Adam.
10. Waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss.
11. Polka from "Gypsy Baron," Strauss.
12. March, "Wien bleibt Wien," Schrammel.

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 161.

TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1896.

THE PROMENADES.

The promenade concerts at Music Hall enter upon the last half of their regular summer season with the concert this evening. Thursday, July 2, is announced as the closing night. On Thursday evening of this week, in addition to the regular programme, Mr. Schuecker will play a harp solo with orchestra accompaniment. The programme for this evening is:

March, "Puppenfee"..............Bayer
Overture, "Bandit's Frolic"..............Suppe
Waltz, "La Vague"..............Metra
Selection, "The Chieftain"..............Sullivan
Suite, "The Nut Cracker"..............Tschaikowsky
    I. Trepak.
    II. Chinese Dance
    III. Waltz of the Flowers.
Entr'acte, "La Colombe"..............Gounod
Clair de Lune..............Gillet
Overture, "William Tell"..............Rossini
Selection, "Robin Hood"..............De Koven
Waltz, "Wine, Woman and Song"......Strauss
Polka, "Tyrolean"..............Zeller
March, "Vienna Dude"..............J. F. Wagner

Music Hall Promenades.

There are now only a few more weeks in which to enjoy the excellent music at the promenade concerts in Music hall, as Thursday, July 2, will be the closing night. The announcement that Mr Schnecker would appear as soloist on Thursday evening has created a large demand for tickets.

The program for this evening is as follows:

March, Puppenfee..............Bayer
Overture, Bandit's Frolic..............Suppe
Waltz, La Vague..............Metra
Selection, The Chieftain..............Sullivan
Suite, The Nutcracker..............Tschaikowsky
Entr'acte, La Colombe..............Gounod
Clair de Lune..............Gillet
Overture, William Tell..............Rossini
Selection, Robin Hood..............De Koven
Waltz, Wine, Women and Song..............Strauss
Polka, Tyrolean..............Zeller
March, Vienna Dude..............J. F. Wagner

MUSIC HALL PROMENADES.

The announcement that Mr. Schuecker, solo harpist of the Symphony Orchestra, was to appear at these concerts tomorrow evening has created a lively demand for tickets by lovers of this instrument. The programme for this evening is: March from "Probekuss," Millocker; overture, "Fra Diavolo," Auber; waltz, "Mon Reve," Waldteufel; selection, "Merry War," Stauss; "La Vendange" waltz from the ballet, "Fairy Tale," Brull (first time); Traeumerei, Schumann; La Cinquantaine, Marie; overture, "The Mastersingers of Nurnberg," Wagner; Offenbachiana, Conradi; waltz, "Neu-Wien," Strass; mazourka, "La Mousme," Ganne; march, "Hoch Habsburg," Kral.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADES.

The season of the Music Hall promenade concerts is at its height and the big audiences that crowd around the tables and fill the balconies each evening best tell of the continued popularity of these summer entertainments. Conductor Zach has fully sustained the predictions made earlier in the season by his friends. His programmes have all maintained a high standard of popular music, from the opening night. Special attractions are announced for this week on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Monday will be known as "Harvard Night," and already one of the largest audiences of the season is assured. Tuesday the first "Request" programme will be given and Thursday will be "Cadets Night," on which occasion the orchestra will play selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk." The programme for tomorrow evening is:

Manhattan Beach March....................Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"....................Suppe
Waltz, "Estudiantina"....................Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah"....................Atkinson
Overture, "Sphinx"....................Thompson
Overture, "Granada"....................Barry
Selection, "Proserpina"....................Mason
Pot-Pourri from "Brangle-Brink"....Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"....................Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"....................Zeller
"Fair Harvard."
March, "Up the Street"....................Morse

In spite of the theatres and the Chute, the "Pops" still more than hold their own as a popular evening diversion. On Tuesday night at the Music Hall were noted Mr. Russell Sturgis, Dr. C. J. Blake, Mr. C. U. Cotting, Mr. William Rotch, Prof. J. B. Greenough of Harvard, Mr. Walter Cotton and Mr. Alexander Higginson, with parties large and small. On Wednesday night Mr. Guy Norman brought a number of smart people, and so did Mr. Percival Lowell. Prof. Barrett Wendell was there, and Mr. Herbert Leeds, Mr. B. P. Cheney, Mr. Arthur Burnham, Mr. Robert Boit and party, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Rich, Col. Thomas the Governor's secretary, and Mr. R. H. Boutwell.

Tomorrow at the "Pops" will be Harvard night, and a big turnout of the university boys is expected. Thursday, another fine programme, devoted to the Cadets, will be in order, which ought to turn into an ovation, as it doubtless will, to Mr. Barnet, the clever author of "Tabasco," Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Bean Stalk," sacred to Cadet successes, as well as to the "Merry-Go-Round," now in full tide of success at the Tremont, which easily ranks with the best of the others.

Harvard Night.

Tonight will be "Harvard Night" at the promenade concerts in Music Hall. The programme will be made up largely of selections from plays given by the Hasty Pudding Club and the Pi Eta Society.

Programme:

1. Manhattan Beach March, Sousa.
2. Overture, "Jolly Students," Suppe.
3. Waltz, "Estudiantina," Waldteufel.
4. Selection, "Obispah," Atkinson.
5. Overture, "Sphinx" Thompson.
6. Overture, "Granada," Mason.
7. Selection, "Proserpina," Mason.
8. Pot-Pourri from "Branglebrink," Carpenter.
9. Overture, "Alcayde," Barry.
10. Waltz, "Grubenlichter," Zeller.
11. Fair Harvard.
12. March, "Up the Street," Mason.

—o—

The "Pop" concerts continue to live up to any version of their name, and are both snappy and popular. On warm evenings, when one "wants to go somewhere," but does not feel inclined to spend the evening without refreshment for several hours, the "Pop" concert is just what is needed. To sit and sip cool drinks, listen to music of the finest quality, and still feel at liberty to converse with one's party if one desires, is ideal enjoyment. The character of the programmes given strikes the right medium between the classic and the common, and exactly attains "the popular." Mr. Max Zach has proved a great success as a conductor.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADES.

These popular concerts are now entering upon the last half of the present season. The management announce special attractions, the first to take place tomorrow evening, at which Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, solo harpist of the Symphony Orchestra, will play the harp obligato to the "Greek Pirates' March" by Parish Alvars. Mr. Schuecker stands alone the peer of any playing that popular instrument in this country. Many have already secured their seats, as this concert promises to be one of the most interesting of the season. An excellent program has also been arranged for this evening, including "Largo" by Handel, Mr. Schintzler playing the violin solo.

—A number of well-known people have been in attendance at the "Pops" during the week, every table being occupied. Among them were Mr William Rotch, Mr Russell Sturgis, Prof J. B. Greenough, Dr Clarence J. Blake, Mr C. M. Cotting and party, Mr Alexander Higginson, Mr Walter Cotton and party, all on Tuesday night. Mr Percival Lowell, Mr Herbert Leeds, Prof Barrett Wendell, Mr Arthur Burnham, Mr Robert Boit and party, Mr B. P. Cheney, Col H. A. Thomas, with Mr R. H. Boutwell, Mr and Mrs Guy Norman, Mr and Mrs Charles J. Rich were in the ring on Wednesday. Friday night Mr Henry Austin, Dr and Mrs William Pitt Brechin, Mr John G. Abbott with Mr Walter De Land Came, Mr T. L. Drew, Mr Carl Sobeski, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard with party, which included Mrs Martha Dana Shepard, Mr Willoughby Richardson, Mr and Mrs A. T. Waite, Mr Legarde, Miss Mary L. Greenleaf, Mrs Corbett with large party of ladies, and Mr J. R. Kendrick were among those who enjoyed the program. Harvard and Cadet nights will be notable.

—Mr W. H. H. Soule sailed yesterday on the Pavonia for Liverpool. He will return the last of August.

—Tomorrow is Harvard night at the "Pops." Selections from all the popular college burlesques will be given, and Mr Comee has several entertaining features to offer. Thursday is cadets' night, and it will be a big affair, many having arranged to come in after the class day exercises at Cambridge.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADES.

The season of the Music Hall promenade concerts is at its height, and the big audiences that crowd around the tables and fill the balconies each evening best tell of the continued popularity of these delightful summer entertainments.

Conductor Zach has fully sustained the predictions made earlier in the season by his friends. His programmes have all been of a high standard of popular music from the opening night.

Special attractions are announced for the coming week on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Monday will be known as Harvard night, and already one of the largest audiences of the season is assured.

Today the first request programme will be given, and Thursday will be Cadets' night, on which occasion the orchestra will play selections from the popular successes "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr." and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

The programme in full for Monday evening is:

Manhattan Beach March............Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"...........Suppe
Waltz, "Estudiantina"..........Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah".............Atkinson
Overture, "Sphinx"..............Thompson
Overture, "Granada"..................Barry
Selection, "Prosperina".............Mason
Potpourri from "Brangle-Brink"............ Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"...................Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"..............Zeller
Fair Harvard.
March, "Up the Street".............Morse

Music Hall Promenades.

The attendance at these concerts the past week has been unusually large, clearly demonstrating that these entertainments have a very strong following among summer amusement seekers. The coming week will be a very attractive one, and indications point to some of the largest audiences of the season. Every year one evening is set apart for "Harvard," complimentary to the large number of students who attend these concerts. Harvard night has always been one of the features of the season, but this year the demand for tickets has been greater than in any past season.

This concert will occur tomorrow evening, and the program below shows many selections from the successful burlesque given by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta societies. Tuesday night will be the first "request night," and Thursday "cadets' night," at which selections will be played from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior Jr" and "Jack and the Beanstalk." The 600th performance of the concerts will be Monday evening, June 22, for which special features will be announced later.

The program for Monday evening (Harvard night) is as follows:

Manhattan Beach March ....Sousa
Overture, Jolly Students ....Suppe
Waltz, Estudiantina ....Waldteufel
Selection, Obispah ....Atkinson
Overture, Sphinx ....Thompson
Overture, Granada ....Barry
Selection, Proserpina ....Mason
Potpourri from Brangle-Brink ....Carpenter
Overture, Alcayde ....Barry
Waltz, Grubenlichter ....Zeller
Fair Harvard.
March, Up the Street ....Morse

—Mr. William Rotch, Mr. Charles U. Cotting, Mr. Bussell Sturgis, Prof. J. B. Greenough, Dr. Charles J. Blake, Mr. Alexander Higginson and Mr. Walter Coffin and party were among the large audience at the "Pop" concert on Tuesday evening.

The following is the programme at the Music Hall promenades this evening: March from "Probekuss," Millocker; overture, "Fra Diavolo," Auber; waltz, "Mon Reve," Waldteufel; selection, "Merry War," Strauss; "La Vendage," waltz from the ballet "Fairy Tale," first time, Brull; "Traeumerei," Schumann; "La Cinquantaine," Marie; overture, "The Mastersingers of Nurnberg," Wagner; "Offenbachiana," Conradi; waltz, "Neu-Wien," Strauss; mazourka, "La Mousme," Ganne; march, "Hoch Habsburg," Kral. Tomorrow, Thursday evening, Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, solo harpist of the Symphony Orchestra, will play a selection on that popular instrument.

Promenade Concert.

The programme for the promenade concert this evening is:

1. March from "Probekuss," Millocker.
2. Overture, "Fra Diavolo," Auber.
3. Waltz, "Mon Reve," Waldteufel.
4. Selection, "Merry War," Strauss.
5. "La Vendange" Waltz from the Ballet, "Fairy Tale," Brull. (First time).
6. Traeumerei, Schumann.
7. La Cinquantaine, Marie.
8. Overture, "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," Wagner.
9. Offenbachiana, Conradi.
10. Waltz, "Neu-Wien," Strauss.
11. Mazourka, "La Mousme," Ganne.
12. March, "Hoch Habsburg," Kral.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Monday, June 15. Harvard Night. Selections from the successful burlesques given by the "Hasty Pudding" and "Pi Eta" Societies, as follows: "Obispah," "The Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," and "Alcayde."

Tuesday, June 16. First request night.

Thursday, June 18. Cadets' night. Selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr." and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

—o—

Only a few weeks remain in which to enjoy the fine music of the Music Hall promenade concerts, and people are so well aware of this that the seats are filled early every evening. Thursday, July 2, is to be the closing night. Mr. Zach has won the approval of the public as conductor, and is greeted with applause every evening. It is a truly Bostonese enjoyment to sit and sip in music and other things at the same time, when the music, as well as the assembled company, is of the best, and all visitors to town who have heard of the famous pops clamor to be taken there at once on arriving in town.

CAMBRIDGE TRIBUNE

SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1896.

The promenade concert on Monday evening will be a Harvard night. The programme will be:

Manhattan Beach March.....................Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students".............. Suppe
Waltz, "Estudiantina".............. Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah".................. Knight
Overture, "Sphinx"...................Thompson
Overture, "Granada".......................Barry
Selection, "Proserpina". ....Mason
Pot-Pourri from "Brangle-Brink" .....Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde" ....Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"......Zeller
Fair Harvard ...
March, "Up the Street". ...... Morse

Thursday, June 18. Cadets night. Selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tobasco," "Excelsior Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

THE POPS.

A Special Harvard Programme for Tomorrow Night.

This week there will be several special nights at the Promenade concerts at Music hall. Tomorrow will be "Harvard Night" when selections will be played from the successful burlesques given by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta societies, as follows: "Obispah," "The Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink," and "Alcayde." Tuesday will be the first "Request Night" and Thursday, "Cadet Night" when selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk" will be given.

The programme for tomorrow or "Harvard" night will be:

Manhattan Beach March.................Sousa
Overture, "Jolly Students"..............Suppé
Waltz, "Estudiantina"........... .Waldteufel
Selection, "Obispah"....................Knight
Overture, "Sphinx"................Thompson
Overture, "Granada"....................Barry
Selection, "Proserpina"...............Mason
Pot-Pourri from "Brangle-Brink"....Carpenter
Overture, "Alcayde"....................Barry
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"..................Zeller
Fair Harvard
March, "Up the Street"...................Morse

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

One strong factor in the continued success of these concerts is the change in the program each evening. This insures a variety possible only in such entertainments. The management announces special features for the next two weeks which will undoubtedly be of great interest to the "Pop" patrons, as follows: Thursday evening, June 11, the "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish-Alvars, will be played with a beautiful harp obbligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, the solo harper of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This will afford the admirers of Mr. Schuecker an opportunity to hear him at his best. Monday evening, June 15, will be Harvard Night, when selections will be given from burlesques presented by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta Societies, as follows: "Obispah," "Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday evening, June 16, will be the first Request Night of the season. Thursday evening, June 18, will be Cadets Night, when selections will be given from the popular productions of Boston's crack military corps, as follows: "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk." Saturday evening, June 20, will be the 600th concert, and a special program will be given, comprising all the favorite selections of the past two seasons.

This is the program for tomorrow (Monday) evening:

Coronation music from "Le Prophete".. Meyerbeer
Overture, "Barber of Seville"..........Rossini
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"........ Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Madame Angot"............Lecocq
Narcissus ....Nevin
a. Scherzo waltz, from "Boabdil"...... Moszkowski
b. Malaguena, from "Boabdil"...Moszkowski
Love's Dream After the Ball.........Czibulka
Overture, "Rienzi".....................Wagner
Overture, "Si j'etais Roi"..............Adam
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"...................Strauss
Polka, from "Gypsy Baron"...........Strauss
March, "Wien bleibt Wien".......Schrammel

THE HARVARD CRIMSON.

MONDAY, JUNE 8, 1896.

Promenade Concert.

The programme for the promenade oncert this evening is:

1. Coronation March from "Le Prophete," Meyerbeer.
2. Overture, "Barber of Seville." Rossini.
3. Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens," Joh. Strauss.
4. Selection, "Madame Angot," Lecocq.
5. Narcissus, Nevin.
6. a. Scherzo Waltz } from "Boabdil," b. Malaguena } Moszkowski.
7. Love's Dream After The Ball. Czibulka.
8. Overture, "Rienzi," Wagner.
9. Overture, "Si j'etais Roi," Adam.
10. Waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss.
11. Polka from "Gypsy Baron," Strauss.
12. March, "Wien bleibt Wien," Schrammel.

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 161.

TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1896.

THE PROMENADES.

The promenade concerts at Music Hall enter upon the last half of their regular summer season with the concert this evening. Thursday, July 2, is announced as the closing night. On Thursday evening of this week, in addition to the regular programme, Mr. Schuecker will play a harp solo with orchestra accompaniment. The programme for this evening is:

March, "Puppenfee"....................Bayer
Overture, "Bandit's Frolic"..............Suppe
Waltz, "La Vague"........................Metra
Selection, "The Chieftain"...........Sullivan
Suite, "The Nut Cracker"......Tschaikowsky
  I. Trepak.
  II. Chinese Dance
  III. Waltz of the Flowers.
Entr'acte, "La Colombe"...............Gounod
Clair de Lune.............................Gillet
Overture, "William Tell"...............Rossini
Selection, "Robin Hood"...........De Koven
Waltz, "Wine, Woman and Song"......Strauss
Polka, "Tyrolean"..........................Zeller
March, "Vienna Dude"...........J. F. Wagner

Music Hall Promenades.

There are now only a few more weeks in which to enjoy the excellent music at the promenade concerts in Music hall, as Thursday, July 2, will be the closing night. The announcement that Mr Schnecker would appear as soloist on Thursday evening has created a large demand for tickets.

The program for this evening is as follows:

March, Puppenfee ....Bayer
Overture, Bandit's Frolic ....Suppe
Waltz, La Vague ....Metra
Selection, The Chieftain ....Sullivan
Suite, The Nutcracker ....Tschaikowsky
Entr'acte, La Colombe ....Gounod
Clair de Lune ....Gillet
Overture, William Tell ....Rossini
Selection, Robin Hood ....De Koven
Waltz, Wine, Women and Song ....Strauss
Polka, Tyrolean ....Zeller
March, Vienna Dude ....J F Wagner

[illegible] and the elegance of [illegible] which make these concerts popu- [illegible] an excellent programme, changing [illegible] evening, and rendered by as fine [illegible] orchestra as can be found anywhere [illegible] an entertainment of this kind, Con- [illegible] Zach's ready response to a demand for encores, and the excellence of the arrangements that have been made for the comfort and the pleasure of the public. The management announces the following special features for the next two weeks: Thursday evening, June 11, the "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish-Alvars, will be played, with a harp obligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, the solo harpist of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Monday evening, June 15, will be Harvard night, when selections from the successful burlesques presented by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta societies in the last five years will be rendered, as follows: "Obispah," "Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday evening, June 16, will be the first "request night" of the season. Thursday evening, June 18, will be Cadets' night, when selections will be given from the popular productions of Boston's crack military corps, as follows: "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk." Saturday evening, June 20, will be the 600th concert, and a special programme will be given comprising all the favorite selections of the past two seasons. The programme for tomorrow evening is:

Coronation March from "Le Prophete"	Meyerbeer
Overture—"Barber of Seville"	Rossini
Waltz—"Freut euch des Lebens"	Joh. Strauss
Selection—"Mme. Angot"	Lecocq
Narcissus	Nevin
Scherzo waltz from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
Malaguena from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
"Love's Dream After the Ball"	Czibulka
Overture—"Rienzi"	Wagner
Overture—"Si j'etais Roi"	Adam
Waltz—"Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Polka from "Gpysy Baron"	Strauss
March—"Wien bleibt Wien"	Schrammel

Monday night opened the week at the "Pops" with the same gratifying crowd around the tables, and in the balconies. A few of those noted there were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bigelow Williams, Mr. Robert Clark, Dr. Edward E. and Dr. F. L. Jack, Mr. Alexander Higginson and party, and Mrs. Cornelius Walker.

Friday night, however, as usual, was the banner one of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Burnham had with them Miss Minnie Ames. The latter was in a soft gray gown with a large hat trimmed with purple and white, very cool and effective. Mrs. Burnham was in black with a violet hat. One of the smartest parties there was that made up of Col. Henry L. Higginson, his niece, Miss Pauline Shaw, the Francis Shaws, Mr. Parker Fenno and Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Jr. Mr. George Steadman had a party in the balcony. Mr. and Mrs. James W. Cartwright had Mr. and Mrs. William B. Fulkner with them, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond were also there.

Monday night, June 15, will be a special Harvard night at the "Pops," when selections will be given from the successful burlesque given by the "Hasty Pudding" and Pi Eta societies, as follows: "Obispah," "The Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpin," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday, June 16, is first request night. Thursday, June 18, is Cadets' night, with selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Elcelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk. Saturday, June 20, will be the 600th night. Special programme of all the favorite selections of the past two seasons.

Wednesday night at the "Pop," where there was the usual crowd to cheer Manager Comee's heart, the "Lohengrin" wedding music in this bridal month of June received such an enthusiastic redemand that a repetition was imperative. It was beautifully played. Among the large number around the tables were Mr. and Mrs. William Power Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Tyler, the latter in a cool outing suit of ecru barred with white, and a hat which was a veritable garden of pink roses, Mr. and Mrs. Lander Bouve, Dr. and Mrs. William Wesselhoeft, Mr. H. R. W. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Gay, who came in after their afternoon at the Country Club, Mr. James M. Hooper, Mr. Fred Stickney and party, Mrs. Francis Bacon and Miss Bacon, and Judge and Mrs. Bumpus, the latter in bodice of black shot with blue and small black toque with bluettes.

Mme. De Angelis, whose annual recital takes place in her handsome rooms at the Copley on Thursday, had a most attractive table at the "Pop" concert Monday night. Her guests were a group of young western girls, whose bright, pretty faces and dainty gowns drew many an admiring glance from those around. They were Miss Baden, Miss Moore, Miss Rierson and Miss Williamson. Several young gentlemen were included in the party. The young women are all sailing for Europe in July with their friend and teacher, Mme. De Angelis.

—— Mr. Percival Lowell, Mr. Herbert C. Leeds, Mr. Robert Bolt and a party of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Rich, Mr. Guy Norman, Prof. Barrett Wendell, Mr. B. Percy Cheney, Mr. Roland Boutwell and Col. Henry A. Thomas (Gov. Wolcott's secretary) were seen at the Promenade concert, Wednesday evening.

—— On Friday evening, at the Prominade concert were Mr. John C. Abbott, the Hon. Albert E. Pillsbury. Mr. Henry Austin, Dr. and Mrs. William Pitt Bracken, Mr. Willoughby Richards, Mr. J. R. Kendrick and Mr. Arthur Gilmore.

Music Hall Promenades.

Patrons of the Music hall promenade concerts should appreciate the generous and prompt response to a demand for encores made by conductor Zach, also the addition of extra selections which frequently results in an increase of the numbers performed from the 12 regularly announced to 15, and sometimes as high as 20. Special features for the next two weeks are announced as follows: Thursday evening, June 11, the "Greek Pirates March" by Parish-Alvars, will be played, with a beautiful harp obligato by Mr Heinrich Schuecker, the solo harpist of the Boston symphony orchestra. This will afford the admirers of this talented young artist an opportunity to hear him at his best, and it will also meet a very general desire by the lovers of harp music for a solo on this popular instrument.

Monday evening, June 15, will be Harvard night, when selections from the successful burlesques presented by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta societies in the last five years, will be given as follows: "Obispah," "Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday evening, June 16, will be the first request night of the season. Thursday evening, June 18, will be cadets night, when selections will be given from the popular productions of Boston's crack military corps, as follows: "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior Jr," and "Jack and the Bean Stalk." Saturday evening, June 20, will be the 600th concert, and a special program will be given comprising favorite selections of the past two seasons.

Tomorrow evening the following program will be given:

Coronation march from Le Prophete	Meyerbeer
Overture, Barber of Seville	Rossini
Waltz, Freut euch des Lebens	Joh. Strauss
Selection, Madame Angot	Lecocq
Narcissus	Nevin
Scherzo waltz	Moszkowski
Malaguena	Moszkowski
Love's dream after the ball	Czibulka
Overture, Rienzi	Wagner
Overture, Si j'etais Roi	Adam
Waltz, Gross-Wien	Strauss
Polka from Gypsy Baron	Strauss
March, Wien bleibt Wien	Schrammel

——No matter what the mercury may indicate, there is no falling off in attendance at the pops. On Friday, the smartest of the week, there was an unusual array of stylish femininity, and despite the absence of Mrs Gardner, society was largely represented all around her table, in pleasing array. One of the best set up groups was that of Mr and Mrs Henry D. Burnham, who had with them Miss Minnie Ames, the best dressed woman present. Mrs Burnham was in black, with a dash of white on the bodice, and her hat was a chic affair of green foliage and cream roses with white aigrettes. Miss Ames was in gray crepe, the bodice covered with delicately traced black and white net. Her hat was a beauty, a purple satin straw, with large white wings outstretched on either side and a close cluster of white roses on the back. Near the Burnham table was Mrs Arthur Richmond, in a grewish gown and flowered toque. Adjoining Mrs Gardner's table was a party of 10, including Mr and Mrs Henry L. Higginson, Mr and Mrs Francis Shaw, Miss Pauline Shaw, Mr Parker Fenno and Mr Burnett. Scattered among the ring tables were Miss Abby Jean McCutcheon, with her brother, Mr Frank McCutcheon, and party, Dr and Mrs William Pitt Breslin and party, Mr and Mrs Louis Harlow and friends from Newton, Mr John C. Abbott, Mr and Mrs George Frye, Miss Amory,, with party, Mrs Alan Mackintosh, with a party of 16 young people of Brookline, which included Misses Louise and Bessie Hart Mackintosh and their three brothers, Mr and Mrs James W. Cartwright, Mr and Mrs William Faulkner and several Harvard and Tech men.

——A large audience applauded an unusually fine program at the "Pop" on Monday night. Among the notables present were Mr and Mrs Henry Bigelow Williams of the Kensington, with friends; a table party which included the Misses Hall, daughters of Mme Edna Hall; another with Miss Kittie Fay, Mrs Cornelius Walker, with a party, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard and large party, Dr Frederick L. Jach and brother Dr Edwin Jach with friends, Mrs John M. Reber, Mr and Mrs Frank S. Chick and Misses Pierson, Baden and Moore, chaperoned by Mme E. M. de Angelis of the Copley.

——Monday, June 15, will be a great night at the "Pop," when crimson will prevail, it being "Harvard night." Conductor Zach will present selections from the various Harvard burlesques. Mr Comee announces "Cadet night" for Thursday, June 18, and Saturday, the 20th, will be the 600th night, when a special program of favorite selections will be presented.

——Thursday called out a large audience at the "Pop," which included several jolly table parties, including the Misses Hall and Mr Oliver Hereford, son of Rev Brooke Hereford, who were chaperoned by Mme Edna Hall of Dartmouth st. Elsewhere were Prof Barrett Wendell and party. Dr Chadwick and friend and Mr and Mrs Edward Sherburne.

Next Monday evening will be the annual "Harvard night" at the promenade concerts in Music Hall. The orchestra will play selections from the successful burlesques given by the "Hasty Pudding" and "Pi Eta" societies. This evening the popular harpist of the Symphony orchestra, Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, will play the harp solo in "Greek Pirates March" by Parish Alvars.

MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

POPULAR MUSIC,
LIGHT REFRESHMENTS,

Grand Orchestra of 50

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

ELEVENTH SEASON. 580TH PERFORMANCE.

FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 29, 1896.

Programme.

BOCCACCIO MARCH,	Suppé
IOLANTHE OVERTURE,	Sullivan
CAGLIOSTRO WALTZ,	Strauss
Y'S LE ROI DE, OVERTURE,	Lalo
CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA,	Mascagni
LARGO. Solo Violin, Mr. SCHNITZLER.	Haende
ERMINIE. Selection,	Jakobowsky
NARCISSUS	Nevin
I PAGLIACCI. Intermezzo.	Leoncavallo
GRUBENLICHTER WALTZ	Zeller
HERZEN KOENIGIN POLKA	Strauss
TABASCO MARCH	Chadwick

Admission, 25 Cents.

Reserved Seats, at Tables or in Balcony, 25 cts. extra,
Now on sale at Box Office, Music Hall.

BICYCLES Checked FREE.

The conductor ticks his music stand with his baton; the merry jargon subsides to a low, suppressed hum; the musicians bring their instruments to position, a low rumbling of the drums is heard, constantly increasing in volume and strength; the conductor frantically waves his outstretched arms; the whole orchestra sends forth a glorious flood of symphony that breaks upon the ear as waves booming upon some level strand. The soul is carried away with its irresistible charm, the mind is inspired with noble and lofty themes, and the heart beats fast in rhythm with its noisy harmony. The sound recedes and takes a light and more airy tone, which mounts higher and higher, until a climax is reached; and again the crashing of cymbals, drums and deafening chords, so loud and grand, tell us that the promenade concert has begun.

* * *

Concerts and Recitals.

The Promenade Concerts at Music Hall reopen this evening with a programme especially arranged, complimentary to the wheelmen and known as Bicycle Night. Special arrangements for checking wheels free have been made. The programme is acrostically arranged as follows:

Boccaccio March	Von Suppé
Iolanthe Overture	Sullivan
Cagliostro Waltz	Strauss
Y's Le Roi De, Overture	Lalo
Cavalleria Rusticana	Mascagni
Largo	Handel
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
Erminie, Selection	Jakobowsky
Narcissus	Nevin
Pagliacci, Intermezzo	Leoncavallo
[illegible]	Zeller
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

—— Monday evening called out a brilliant gathering at the Promenade Concert, when those present were: Mr. Alexander Higginson, Mr. Robert Clark, Miss Gertrude Hall, Mr. J. R. Kendrick and party, Mme. D'Angelis and friends, Dr. Fred. L. Jack, Mrs. Cornelius Walker, Miss Katherine Fay, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bigelow Williams and Dr. Edwin Jack.

——Hon Melvin O. Adams, Dr Burton C. Russell, Mr and Mrs Harry Gay, Mr Alexander Brown and party and Dr Wesselhoeft were "in the ring" at the "Pop" on Wednesday.

Boston Transcript

THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1896.

Promenade Concert Tonight.

Following is the programme for the promenade concert in Music Hall this evening:

March from "Wizard of the Nile"	Herbert
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Roses of the South"	Strauss
Selection, "Ruddygore"	Sullivan
Suite, "Peer Gynt"	Grieg
Neapolitan Mandolin Player (first time)	Reinecke
Entr'acte, "Philémon et Baucis,"	Gounod
Symphonic Poem, "Omphale's Spinning-wheel,"	Saint-Saëns
Overture, "Fledermaus"	Strauss
Waltz, [illegible] (first time)	[illegible]
Polka, [illegible]	[illegible]
March, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

It is easy to understand the elements of success which make these concerts popular—an excellent programme, changing every evening, and rendered by as fine an orchestra as can be found anywhere at an entertainment of this kind, Conductor Zach's ready response to a demand for encores, and the excellence of the arrangements that have been made for the comfort and the pleasure of the public. The management announces the following special features for the next two weeks: Thursday evening, June 11, the "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish-Alvars, will be played, with a harp obligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, the solo harpist of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Monday evening, June 15, will be Harvard night, when selections from the successful burlesques presented by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta societies in the last five years will be rendered, as follows: "Obispah," "Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday evening, June 16, will be the first "request night" of the season. Thursday evening, June 18, will be Cadets' night, when selections will be given from the popular productions of Boston's crack military corps, as follows: "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk." Saturday evening, June 20, will be the 600th concert, and a special programme will be given comprising all the favorite selections of the past two seasons. The programme for tomorrow evening is:

Coronation March from "Le Prophete"	Meyerbeer
Overture—"Barber of Seville"	Rossini
Waltz—"Freut euch des Lebens"	Joh. Strauss
Selection—"Mme. Angot"	Lecocq
Narcissus	Nevin
Scherzo waltz from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
Malaguena from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
"Love's Dream After the Ball"	Czibulka
Overture—"Rienzi"	Wagner
Overture—"Si j'etais Roi"	Adam
Waltz—"Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Polka from "Gpysy Baron"	Strauss
March—"Wien bleibt Wien"	Schrammel

Monday night opened the week at the "Pops" with the same gratifying crowd around the tables, and in the balconies. A few of those noted there were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bigelow Williams, Mr. Robert Clark, Dr. Edward E. and Dr. F. L. Jack, Mr. Alexander Higginson and party, and Mrs. Cornelius Walker.

Friday night, however, as usual, was the banner one of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Burnham had with them Miss Minnie Ames. The latter was in a soft gray gown with a large hat trimmed with purple and white, very cool and effective. Mrs. Burnham was in black with a violet hat. One of the smartest parties there was that made up of Col. Henry L. Higginson, his niece, Miss Pauline Shaw, the Francis Shaws, Mr. Parker Fenno and Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Jr. Mr. George Steadman had a party in the balcony. Mr. and Mrs. James W. Cartwright had Mr. and Mrs. William B. Fulkner with them, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond were also there.

Monday night, June 15, will be a special Harvard night at the "Pops," when selections will be given from the successful burlesque given by the "Hasty Pudding" and Pi Eta societies, as follows: "Obispah," "The Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpin," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday, June 16, is first request night. Thursday, June 18, is Cadets' night, with selections from the popular successes, "1492," "Tabasco," "Elcelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Beanstalk. Saturday, June 20, will be the 600th night. Special programme of all the favorite selections of the past two seasons.

Wednesday night at the "Pop," where there was the usual crowd to cheer Manager Comee's heart, the "Lohengrin" wedding music in this bridal month of June received such an enthusiastic redemand that a repetition was imperative. It was beautifully played. Among the large number around the tables were Mr. and Mrs. William Power Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Tyler, the latter in a cool outing suit of ecru barred with white, and a hat which was a veritable garden of pink roses, Mr. and Mrs. Lander Bouve, Dr. and Mrs. William Wesselhoeft, Mr. H. R. W. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Gay, who came in after their afternoon at the Country Club, Mr. James M. Hooper, Mr. Fred Stickney and party, Mrs. Francis Bacon and Miss Bacon, and Judge and Mrs. Bumpus, the latter in bodice of black shot with blue and small black toque with bluettes.

Mme. De Angelis, whose annual recita takes place in her handsome rooms at the Copley on Thursday, had a most attractive table at the "Pop" concert Monday night. Her guests were a group of young western girls, whose bright, pretty faces and dainty gowns drew many an admiring glance from those around. They were Miss Baden, Miss Moore, Miss Rierson and Miss Williamson. Several young gentlemen were included in the party. The young women are all sailing for Europe in July with their friend and teacher, Mme. De Angelis.

—— Mr. Percival Lowell, Mr. Herbert C. Leeds, Mr. Robert Boit and a party of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Rich, Mr. Guy Norman, Prof. Barrett Wendell, Mr. B. Percy Cheney, Mr. Roland Boutwell and Col. Henry A. Thomas (Gov. Wolcott's secretary) were seen at the Promenade concert, Wednesday evening.

—— On Friday evening, at the Prominade concert were Mr. John C. Abbott, the Hon. Albert E. Pillsbury. Mr. Henry Austin, Dr. and Mrs. William Pitt Bracken, Mr. Willoughby Richards, Mr. J. R. Kendrick and Mr. Arthur Gilmore.

Music Hall Promenades.

Patrons of the Music hall promenade concerts should appreciate the generous and prompt response to a demand for encores made by conductor Zach, also the addition of extra selections which frequently results in an increase of the numbers performed from the 12 regularly announced to 15, and sometimes as high as 20. Special features for the next two weeks are announced as follows: Thursday evening, June 11, the "Greek Pirates March" by Parish-Alvars, will be played, with a beautiful harp obligato by Mr Heinrich Schuecker, the solo harpist of the Boston symphony orchestra. This will afford the admirers of this talented young artist an opportunity to hear him at his best, and it will also meet a very general desire by the lovers of harp music for a solo on this popular instrument.

Monday evening, June 15, will be Harvard night, when selections from the successful burlesques presented by the Hasty Pudding and Pi Eta societies in the last five years, will be given as follows: "Obispah," "Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde" Tuesday evening, June 16, will be the first request night of the season. Thursday evening, June 18, will be cadets night, when selections will be given from the popular productions of Boston's crack military corps, as follows: "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior Jr," and "Jack and the Bean Stalk." Saturday evening, June 20, will be the 600th concert, and a special program will be given comprising favorite selections of the past two seasons.

Tomorrow evening the following program will be given:

Coronation march from Le Prophete	Meyerbeer
Overture, Barber of Seville	Rossini
Waltz, Freut euch des Lebens	Joh. Strauss
Selection, Madame Angot	Lecocq
Narcissus	Nevin
Scherzo waltz	Moszkowski
Malaguena	Moszkowski
Love's dream after the ball	Czibulka
Overture, Rienzi	Wagner
Overture, Si j'etais Roi	Adam
Waltz, Gross-Wien	Strauss
Polka from Gypsy Baron	Strauss
March, Wien bleibt Wien	Schrammel

——No matter what the mercury may indicate, there is no falling off in attendance at the pops. On Friday, the smartest of the week, there was an unusual array of stylish femininity, and despite the absence of Mrs Gardner, society was largely represented all around her table, in pleasing array. One of the best set up groups was that of Mr and Mrs Henry D. Burnham, who had with them Miss Minnie Ames, the best dressed woman present. Mrs Burnham was in black, with a dash of white on the bodice, and her hat was a chic affair of green foliage and cream roses with white aigrettes. Miss Ames was in gray crepe, the bodice covered with delicately traced black and white net. Her hat was a beauty, a purple satin straw, with large white wings outstretched on either side and a close cluster of white roses on the back. Near the Burnham table was Mrs Arthur Richmond, in a grewish gown and flowered toque. Adjoining Mrs Gardner's table was a party of 10, including Mr and Mrs Henry L. Higginson, Mr and Mrs Francis Shaw, Miss Pauline Shaw, Mr Parker Fenno and Mr Burnett. Scattered among the ring tables were Miss Abby Jean McCutcheon, with her brother, Mr Frank McCutcheon, and party, Dr and Mrs William Pitt Breslin and party, Mr and Mrs Louis Harlow and friends from Newton, Mr John C. Abbott, Mr and Mrs George Frye, Miss Amory,, with party, Mrs Alan Mackintosh, with a party of 16 young people of Brookline, which included Misses Louise and Bessie Hart Mackintosh and their three brothers, Mr and Mrs James W. Cartwright, Mr and Mrs William Faulkner and several Harvard and Tech men.

——A large audience applauded an unusually fine program at the "Pop" on Monday night. Among the notables present were Mr and Mrs Henry Bigelow Williams of the Kensington, with friends; a table party which included the Misses Hall, daughters of Mme Edna Hall; another with Miss Kittie Fay, Mrs Cornelius Walker, with a party, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard and large party, Dr Frederick L. Jach and brother Dr Edwin Jach with friends, Mrs John M. Reber, Mr and Mrs Frank S. Chick and Misses Pierson, Baden and Moore, chaperoned by Mme E. M. de Angelis of the Copley.

——Monday, June 15, will be a great night at the "Pop," when crimson will prevail, it being "Harvard night." Conductor Zach will present selections from the various Harvard burlesques. Mr Comee announces "Cadet night" for Thursday, June 18, and Saturday, the 20th, will be the 600th night, when a special program of favorite selections will be presented.

——Thursday called out a large audience at the "Pop," which included several jolly table parties, including the Misses Hall and Mr Oliver Hereford, son of Rev Brooke Hereford, who were chaperoned by Mme Edna Hall of Dartmouth st. Elsewhere were Prof Barrett Wendell and party. Dr Chadwick and friend and Mr and Mrs Edward Sherburne.

Next Monday evening will be the annual "Harvard night" at the promenade concerts in Music Hall. The orchestra will play selections from the successful burlesques given by the "Hasty Pudding" and "Pi Eta" societies. This evening the popular harpist of the Symphony orchestra, Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, will play the harp solo in "Greek Pirates March" by Parish Alvars.

MUSIC HALL
PROMENADE CONCERTS

POPular MUSIC,

LIGHT REFRESHMENTS,

Grand Orchestra of 50

Mr. MAX ZACH, Conductor.

ELEVENTH SEASON. 580TH PERFORMANCE.

FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 29, 1896.

Programme.

BOCCACCIO MARCH,	Suppé
IOLANTHE OVERTURE,	Sullivan
CAGLIOSTRO WALTZ,	Strauss
Y'S LE ROI DE, OVERTURE,	Lalo
CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA,	Mascagni
LARGO. Solo Violin, Mr. SCHNITZLER.	Haende
ERMINIE. Selection,	Jakobowsky
NARCISSUS	Nevin
I PAGLIACCI. Intermezzo.	Leoncavallo
GRUBENLICHTER WALTZ	Zeller
HERZEN KOENIGIN POLKA	Strauss
TABASCO MARCH	Chadwick

Admission, 25 Cents.

Reserved Seats, at Tables or in Balcony, 25 cts. extra,
Now on sale at Box Office, Music Hall.

BICYCLES Checked FREE.

The conductor ticks his music stand with his baton; the merry jargon subsides to a low, suppressed hum; the musicians bring their instruments to position, a low rumbling of the drums is heard, constantly increasing in volume and strength; the conductor frantically waves his outstretched arms; the whole orchestra sends forth a glorious flood of symphony that breaks upon the ear as waves booming upon some level strand. The soul is carried away with its irresistible charm, the mind is inspired with noble and lofty themes, and the heart beats fast in rhythm with its noisy harmony. The sound recedes and takes a light and more airy tone, which mounts higher and higher, until a climax is reached; and again the crashing of cymbals, drums and deafening chords, so loud and grand, tell us that the promenade concert has begun.

* * * * * * * *

Concerts and Recitals.

The Promenade Concerts at Music Hall reopen this evening with a programme especially arranged, complimentary to the wheelmen and known as Bicycle Night. Special arrangements for checking wheels free have been made. The programme is acrostically arranged as follows:

Boccaccio March	Von Suppé
Iolanthe Overture	Sullivan
Cagliostro Waltz	Strauss
Y's Le Roi De, Overture	Lalo
Cavalleria Rusticana	Mascagni
Largo	Handel
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
Erminie, Selection	Jakobowsky
Narcissus	Nevin
I Pagliacci, Intermezzo	Leoncavallo
Grubenlichter Waltz	Zeller
Herzen Koenigin Polka	Strauss
Tabasco March	Chadwick

—— Monday evening called out a brilliant gathering at the Promenade Concert, when those present were: Mr. Alexander Higginson, Mr. Robert Clark, Miss Gertrude Hall, Mr. J. R. Kendrick and party, Mme. D'Angelis and friends, Dr. Fred. L. Jack, Mrs. Cornelius Walker, Miss Katherine Fay, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bigelow Williams and Dr. Edwin Jack.

——Hon Melvin O. Adams, Dr Burton C. Russell, Mr and Mrs Harry Gay, Mr Alexander Brown and party and Dr Wesselhoeft were "in the ring" at the "Pop" on Wednesday.

Boston Transcript

THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1896.

Promenade Concert Tonight.

Following is the programme for the promenade concert in Music Hall this evening:

March from "Wizard of the Nile"	Herbert
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Roses of the South"	Strauss
Selection, "Ruddygore"	Sullivan
Suite, "Peer Gynt"	Grieg
Neapolitan Mandolin Player (first time)	Reinecke
Entr'acte, "Philémon et Baucis,"	Gounod
Symphonic Poem, "Omphale's Spinning-wheel,"	Saint-Saëns
Overture, "Fledermaus"	Strauss
Waltz, "Meerleuchten" (first time)	Ziehrer
Polka, "Enthusiasm"	Müller
March, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Patrons of the Music Hall promenade concerts will be especially interested in the announcement of special features arranged by the management for the coming two weeks. Thursday evening, June 11, the "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish-Alvars, will be played with a beautiful harp obligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, the solo harpist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This will afford the admirers of this talented young artist an opportunity to hear him at his best, and it will also meet a very general desire by the lovers of harp music for a solo on this popular instrument.

Monday evening, June 15, will be Harvard night, when selections will be given from the successful burlesques presented by the "Hasty Pudding" and "Pi Eta" Societies in the last five years, as follows: "Obispah," "Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday evening, June 16, will be the first request night of the season. Thursday evening, June 18, will be Cadets' night, when selections will be given from the popular productions of Boston's crack military corps, as follows: "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Bean Stalk."

Saturday evening, June 20, will be the 600th concert, and a special programme will be given, comprising all the favorite selections of the past two seasons.

Below is given the programme for tomorrow evening:

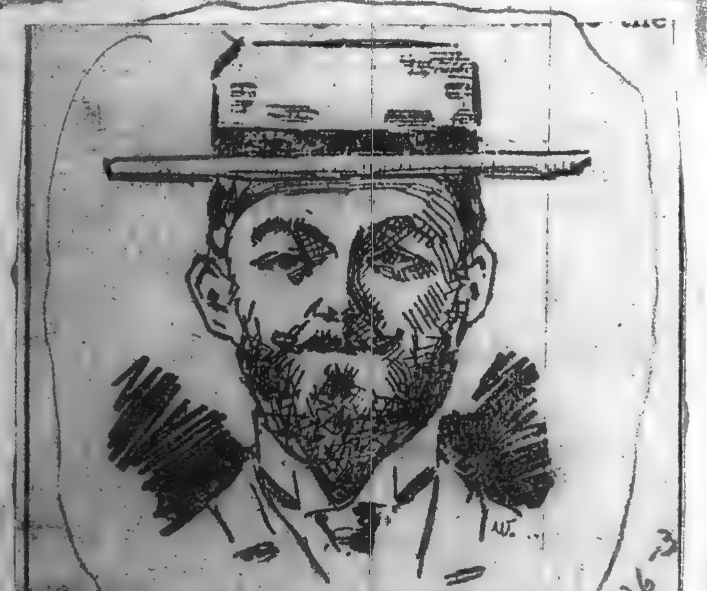
Coronation March from "Le Prophete," Meyerbeer; overture, "Barber of Seville," Rossini; waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens," Joh. Strauss; selection, "Madame Angot," Lecocq; "Narcissus," Nevin; (a) Scherzo Waltz, (b) Malaguena, from "Boabdil," Moszkowski; "Love's Dream After the Ball," Czibulka; overture, "Rienzi," Wagner; overture, "Si j'etais Roi," Adam; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; polka from "Gypsy Baron," Strauss; march, "Wien bleibt Wien," Schrammel.

—A large audience applauded an unusually fine program at the "Pop" on Monday night. Among the notables present were Mr and Mrs Henry Bigelow Williams of the Kensington, with friends; a table party which included the Misses Hall, daughters of Mme Edna Hall; another with Miss Kittie Fay, Mrs Cornelius Walker, with a party, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard and large party, Dr Frederick L. Jach and brother Dr Edwin Jach with friends, Mrs John M. Reber, Mr and Mrs Frank S. Chick and Misses Pierson, Baden and Moore, chaperoned by Mme E. M. de Angelis of the Copley.

THE POPS.

The programme for the Promenade concert at Music hall tomorrow evening, will be:

Coronation March from "Le Prophète"	Meyerbeer
Overture, "Barber of Seville"	Rossini
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Madame Angot"	Lecocq
Narcissus	Nevin
Scherzo Waltz Malaguena } from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
Love's Dream after the Ball	Czibulka
Overture, "Rienzi"	Wagner
Overture, "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Polka from "Gypsy Baron"	Strauss
March, "Wieb bleibt Wien"	Schrammei



SEEN AT THE "POP."

4826-3

MUSIC HALL.

MUSIC HALL | PROMENADE CONCERTS.

GRAND ORCHESTRA OF 50.

Mr. Max Zach, Conductor.

POPULAR MUSIC.

EVERY EVENING (Except Sunday) 8 to 11.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MONDAY, JUNE 15. HARVARD NIGHT. SELECTIONS FROM THE SUCCESSFUL BURLESQUES GIVEN BY THE "HASTY PUDDING" AND "PI ETA" SOCIETIES, AS FOLLOWS: "OBISPAH," "THE SPHINX," "GRANADA," "PROSERPINA," "BRANGLE-BRINK" and "ALCAYDE."

TUESDAY, JUNE 16. FIRST REQUEST NIGHT.

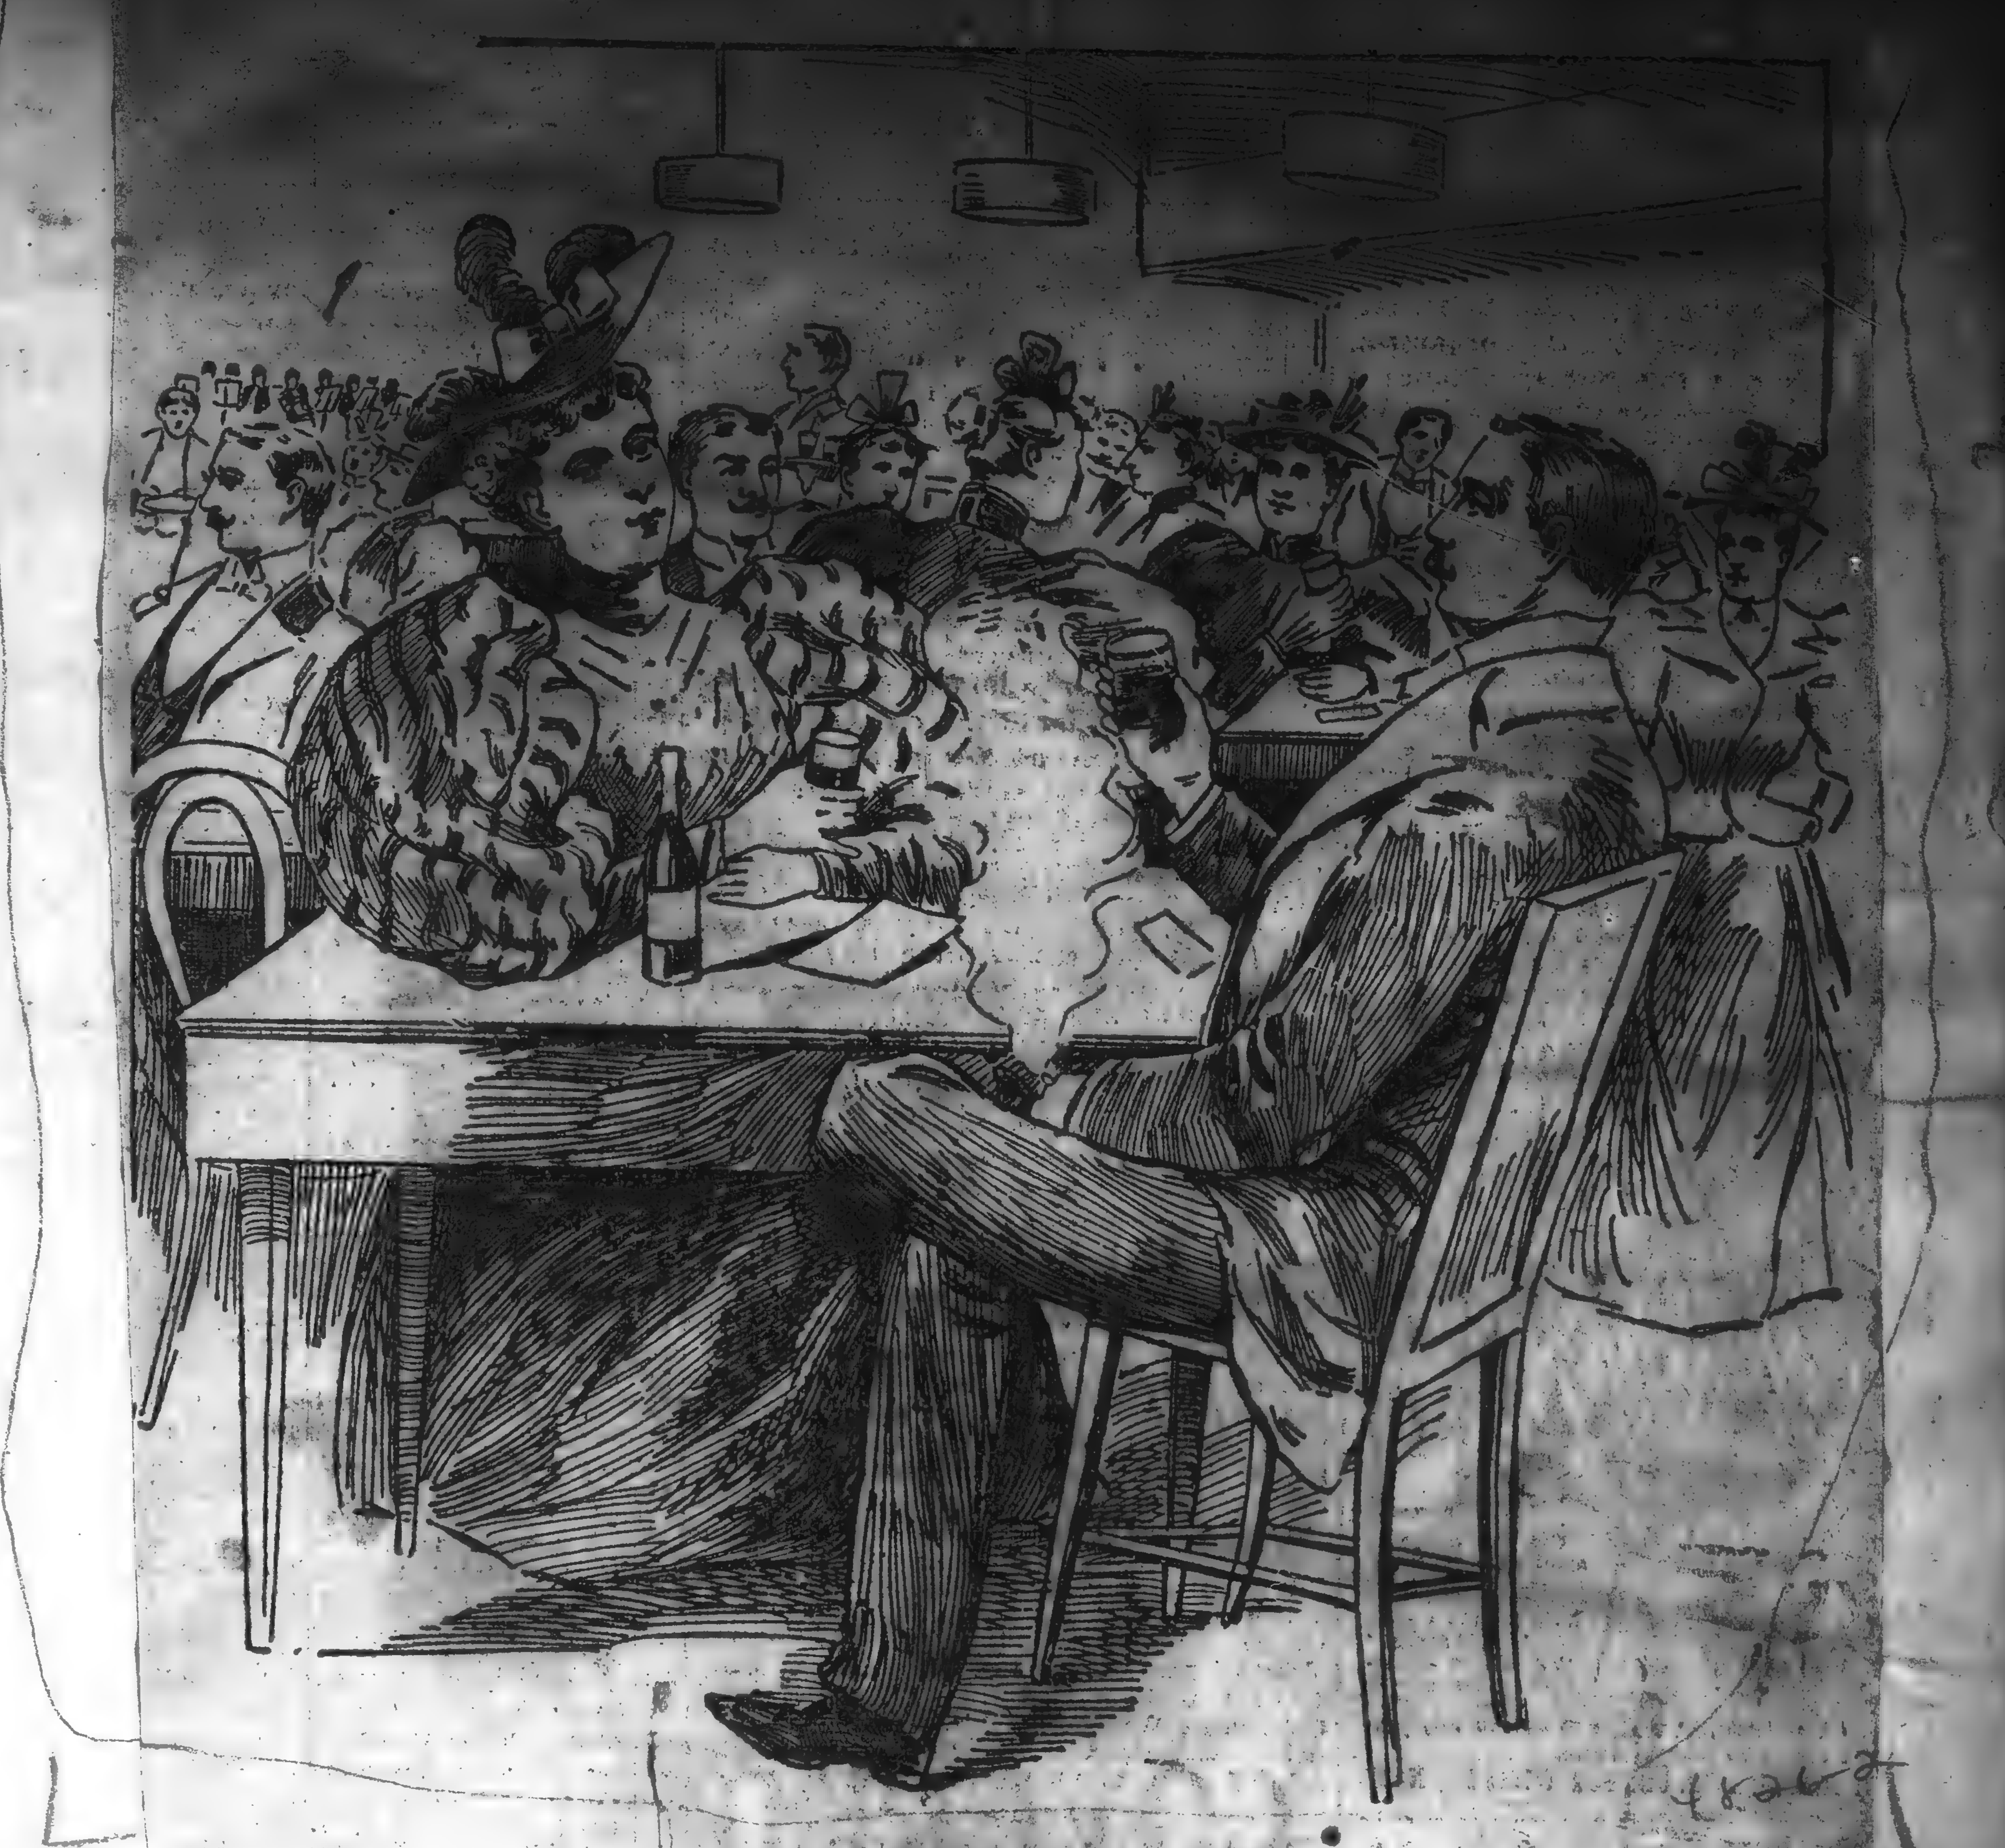
THURSDAY, JUNE 18. CADETS' NIGHT. SELECTIONS FROM THE POPULAR SUCCESSES, "1492," "TABASCO," "EXCELSIOR, JR.," AND "JACK AND THE BEANSTALK."

SATURDAY, JUNE 20. 600TH NIGHT. SPECIAL PROGRAMME OF ALL THE FAVORITE SELECTIONS OF THE PAST TWO SEASONS.

ADMISSION 25c.

[illegible] seats on Floor or Balcony

THE GAY SOCIETY GIRL AT TH



4826-2

Music Hall Concerts.

Programmes of unusual excellence have been offered the numerous patrons of the "pop" concerts this week and their interpretation by the fine orchestra has been admirable. As usual there has been considerable variety in the selections and the listeners have shown the greatest enthusiasm. These concerts have again proven themselves to be thoroughly pleasant affairs and a visit to Music Hall is a most delightful way to pass the evening.

—The promenade concerts more than held their own last week, notwithstanding the many counter attractions. Noted in the audience on Monday evening were Mrs. Cornelius Walker and party and a number of well known young society people who occupied three tables, among them being Miss Katherine Fay and the Misses Shattuck; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chick and party, Miss Gertrude Hall, Mr. John C. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bigelow Williams and party, and Mr. and Mrs. John Dana Shepard and party. On Tuesday evening both Dr. Conrad Wesselhoeft and Dr. W. S Bigelow entertained guests. On Wednesday evening Mr. Melvin O. Adams, Dr. Burton C. Russell, Mr. and Mrs Harry Gay, Mr. Alexander Brown and party and Dr. Conrad Wesselhoeft were en eveidence. Thursday's audience included Professor Barrett Wendell, Mme. Hall, Miss Gertrude Hall and sister, Mr. Oliver Hereford, Mr. and Mrs Edward Sherman and Dr. Chadwick. Friday was evidently the red letter night of the week, and among the large throng of people who enjoyed the excellent program was a large party from Brookline including Mr. and Mrs. William B. Faulkner, Mr. and Mrs. W S. Cartwright, Mrs. Mackintosh, Miss Bessie Mackintosh, Miss Louise Mackintosh, the Messrs. Mackintosh and a number of Harvard men. Others in the house were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Harlowe, Mr. Oscar W. Berry, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Stedman, Mr. Leverett Morss, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. George Frye, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burnham and Miss Minnie Ames, Doctor and Mrs. William Pitt Brecken, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Shaw, Miss Pauline Shaw, Mr. Henry L. Higginson, Miss Amory, Mrs. Arthur Richmond and Mr. John C. Abbott.

—Monday, June 15, has been set aside by the Promenade Concert managers as "Harvard Night." Selections from the successful burlesques given by the "Hasty Pudding" and "Pi Eta" societies will be introduced, including "Obispah," "The Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." A good showing of Harvard men will be in attendance and the occasion promises to be a merry one. Tuesday, June 16, is to be "request night," and Mr. Zach will arrange his programme in accordance with suggestions from the. public Thursday, June 18, is "Cadets' Night," and the audience will have the privilege and delight of listening to a resume of the popular successes "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr." and "Jack and the Beanstalk." On Saturday, June 20, which happens to be the 600th night, a special programme, including the favorite selections of the past two years will be presented.

—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burnham, Mr. Henry Higginson, Mr. John C. Abbott, Miss Minnie Ames, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., Mr. Parker Fenno and Miss Amory were among those attending the Promenade Concert, Friday evening.

[102]

MUSIC HALL "POP" CONCERTS.

Music lovers have much to interest them at the popular concerts now under full sway at Music Hall, and as the music is all of a first-class popular order and rendered by an efficient orchestra, there is nothing left to be desired. Director Zach has offered programmes full of interesting numbers and they have held the undivided attention of the large audiences. It is unfortunate that a break occurs in these concerts, but owing to yearly engagements of the hall the concerts of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week will be omitted. They will reopen Friday, May 29, with a programme especially arranged complimentary to the visiting wheelmen, when the programme will be:

"Boccaccio" march	Suppe
"Iolanthe," overture	Sullivan
"Cagliostro," waltz	Strauss
"Y's, Le Roi De," overture	Lalo
"Cavalleria Rusticana," intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
"Erminie," selection	Jakobowsky
"Narcissus"	Nevin
"I Pagliacci," selection	Leoncavallo
"Grubenlichter," waltz	Zeller
"Herzens Koenigin," polka	Strauss
"Tabasco" march	Chadwick

---

* * * * *

It is not often that one sees such displays of affection at the Music Hall "pops," as a young man trying to put his arm around the waist of a young women with him! This occurred down in one of the back seats at the end of the hall last night. It did not seem to be wholly consciously done on the part of the young man, but it caused much amusement to the surrounding guests. The very fact that he did it in the growing interest of his conversation, rather than offensively, rather added to the interest of the on-lookers. Directly behind the couple sat four young people, who made very merry over it. One young man, in whispering to one of the young ladies about it, put his arm on the back of the chair in the same way, when she turned round sharply with a warning.

* * * * *

......

The promenades still continue to be favorite amusement of a large number of our musical public. The orchestra for this evening will play the following selections: March, "Kosciusko," Zach; overture, "Tannhauser," Wagner; waltz, "O Schoner Mai," Strauss; selection, "Aida," Verdi; introduction to Act 3, "Lohengrin," Wagner; (a) Don-Cesar de Bazan, Massenet; (b) Serenata, Moszkowski; minuet for strings, Boccherini; overture, "Phedre," Massenet; overture, "Les Dragons de Villars," Maillart; waltz, "Pomone," Waldteufel; "Feu d'Artifice," polka, Strauss; march from ballet, "Sun and Earth" (first time), Bayer.

......

—Prof. Barrett Wendell, Mme. Edna Hall, Dr. James Chadwick, Miss Gertrude Hall, Mr. Oliver Herford, Mr. and Mrs. William O. Sheafe, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sherburne were among those at the Promenade Concert on Thursday evening.

—Mrs. Arthur Rotch sails for Europe, the middle of this month. She was much admired, the other evening, at the "Pop," in black chiffon and sparkling jets, which suited admirably her coloring.

There was a crush at the "Pops" Friday night, so that a number of smart people were too late to secure tables, which state of things only went to prove that the four days' break necessitated by prerental of the hall only whetted society's appetite for these fascinating concerts. Mrs. Arthur Rotch was, perhaps, the most observed of any of the society crowd of women that night. She certainly looked exceedingly handsome in her half-mourning, with a lace and jet toque. She is one of the few young matrons who can wear black and look younger instead of older in it. She was with Mr. Percival Lowell and several others. Mrs. Fiske Warren was at a table with friends, Mrs. Gardner, who was in pale blue, with black hat and feathers, had at her table Mr. Clayton Johns with other guests; Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had a party with him, including Mr. Paul Butler and Mr. Franz Zerrahn.

Others there were Mrs. Gordon Abbott and Mrs. Randolph Coolidge, with parties; Mrs. Zerrahn, Mr. Clayton Johns, Mr. Wadsworth Longfellow, Gen. F. A.

The 584th promenade concert at Music Hall comes tonight. These concerts are well patronized by the fashionable element and are blessings to real music lovers, because they give so much fine music for a very small sum. Out of the 200 tables on the floor and in the first balcony only about 90 are reserved, as are seats at the theatre—the others and seats in the second balcony are free to all those who pay 25 cents for admission. The programmes furnished by Mr. Max Zach have all been of an excellent character, but latterly he has added a popular element and has introduced many novelties which have caught the fickle fancy of the public. Mr. Comee has shown great wisdom in the management and has done much for the comfort of the patrons. Free checking of bicycles is not the least of his thoughful deeds.

The "pop" concerts continue on the topmost wave of success, and Mr. Zach is proving a great favorite as conductor. It is to be regretted that more floor space cannot be obtained, for nearly every evening tables are "grabbed" and many "left lamenting" like the father of the famous Lord Ullen's daughter. Those who do get the coveted tables, however, have jolly times, and the others have to go into the galleries, where the music sounds just as well and where its cheering character soon chases away disappointment.

—Mme. D'Angelis of the Copley, chaperoned a group of attractive girls at the promenade concert on Tuesday evening. In the party were Miss Ettiemay Pierson of Minneapolis, Mamie O. Baden and Mary E. Moore, all of whom wore stunning gowns, and were much admired. At another table were Hon. and Mrs. Thomas E. Riley with Mrs. Alice Kent Robertson, Mrs. George F. H. Murray, Mr. Carl Sobeski and Mr. Charles Smith. Doctor and Mrs. John G. Blake with Miss Marie Blake and Messrs. Arthur and Fulton Blake also occupied a table.

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Patrons of the Music Hall promenade concerts will be especially interested in the announcement of special features arranged by the management for the coming two weeks. Thursday evening, June 11, the "Greek Pirates' March," by Parish-Alvars, will be played with a beautiful harp obligato by Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, the solo harpist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This will afford the admirers of this talented young artist an opportunity to hear him at his best, and it will also meet a very general desire by the lovers of harp music for a solo on this popular instrument.

Monday evening, June 15, will be Harvard night, when selections will be given from the successful burlesques presented by the "Hasty Pudding" and "Pi Eta" Societies in the last five years, as follows: "Obispah," "Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." Tuesday evening, June 16, will be the first request night of the season. Thursday evening, June 18, will be Cadets' night, when selections will be given from the popular productions of Boston's crack military corps, as follows: "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr.," and "Jack and the Bean Stalk."

Saturday evening, June 20, will be the 600th concert, and a special programme will be given, comprising all the favorite selections of the past two seasons.

Below is given the programme for tomorrow evening:

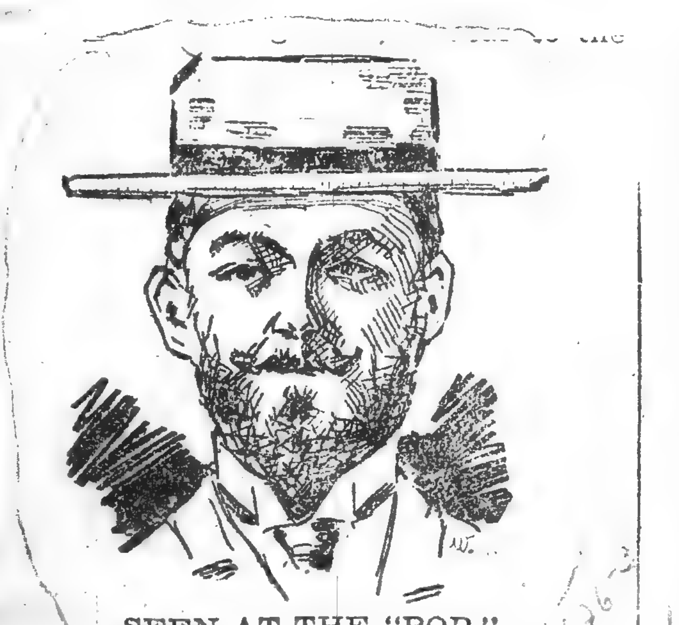
Coronation March from "Le Prophete," Meyerbeer; overture, "Barber of Seville," Rossini; waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens," Joh. Strauss; selection, "Madame Angot," Lecocq; "Narcissus," Nevin; (a) Scherzo Waltz, (b) Malaguena, from "Boabdil," Moszkowski; "Love's Dream After the Ball," Czibulka; overture, "Rienzi," Wagner; overture, "Si j'etais Roi," Adam; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; polka from "Gypsy Baron," Strauss; march, "Wien bleibt Wien," Schrammel.

——A large audience applauded an unusually fine program at the "Pop" on Monday night. Among the notables present were Mr and Mrs Henry Bigelow Williams of the Kensington, with friends; a table party which included the Misses Hall, daughters of Mme Edna Hall; another with Miss Kittie Fay, Mrs Cornelius Walker, with a party, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard and large party, Dr Frederick L. Jach and brother Dr Edwin Jach with friends, Mrs John M. Reber, Mr and Mrs Frank S. Chick and Misses Pierson, Baden and Moore, chaperoned by Mme E. M. de Angelis of the Copley.

THE POPS.

The programme for the Promenade concert at Music hall tomorrow evening, will be:

Coronation March from "Le Prophète"	Meyerbeer
Overture, "Barber of Seville"	Rossini
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Madame Angot"	Lecocq
Narcissus	Nevin
Scherzo Waltz Malaguena } from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
Love's Dream after the Ball	Czibulka
Overture, "Rienzi"	Wagner
Overture, "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Polka from "Gypsy Baron"	Strauss
March, "Wieb bleibt Wien"	Schrammei



SEEN AT THE "POP."

MUSIC HALL.

MUSIC HALL | PROMENADE CONCERTS.

GRAND ORCHESTRA OF 50.

Mr. Max Zach, Conductor.

POPULAR MUSIC.

EVERY EVENING (Except Sunday) 8 to 11.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

MONDAY, JUNE 15. HARVARD NIGHT. SELECTIONS FROM THE SUCCESSFUL BURLESQUES GIVEN BY THE "HASTY PUDDING" AND "PI ETA" SOCIETIES, AS FOLLOWS: "OBISPAH," "THE SPHINX," "GRANADA," "PROSERPINA," "BRANGLE-BRINK" and "ALCAYDE."

TUESDAY, JUNE 16. FIRST REQUEST NIGHT.

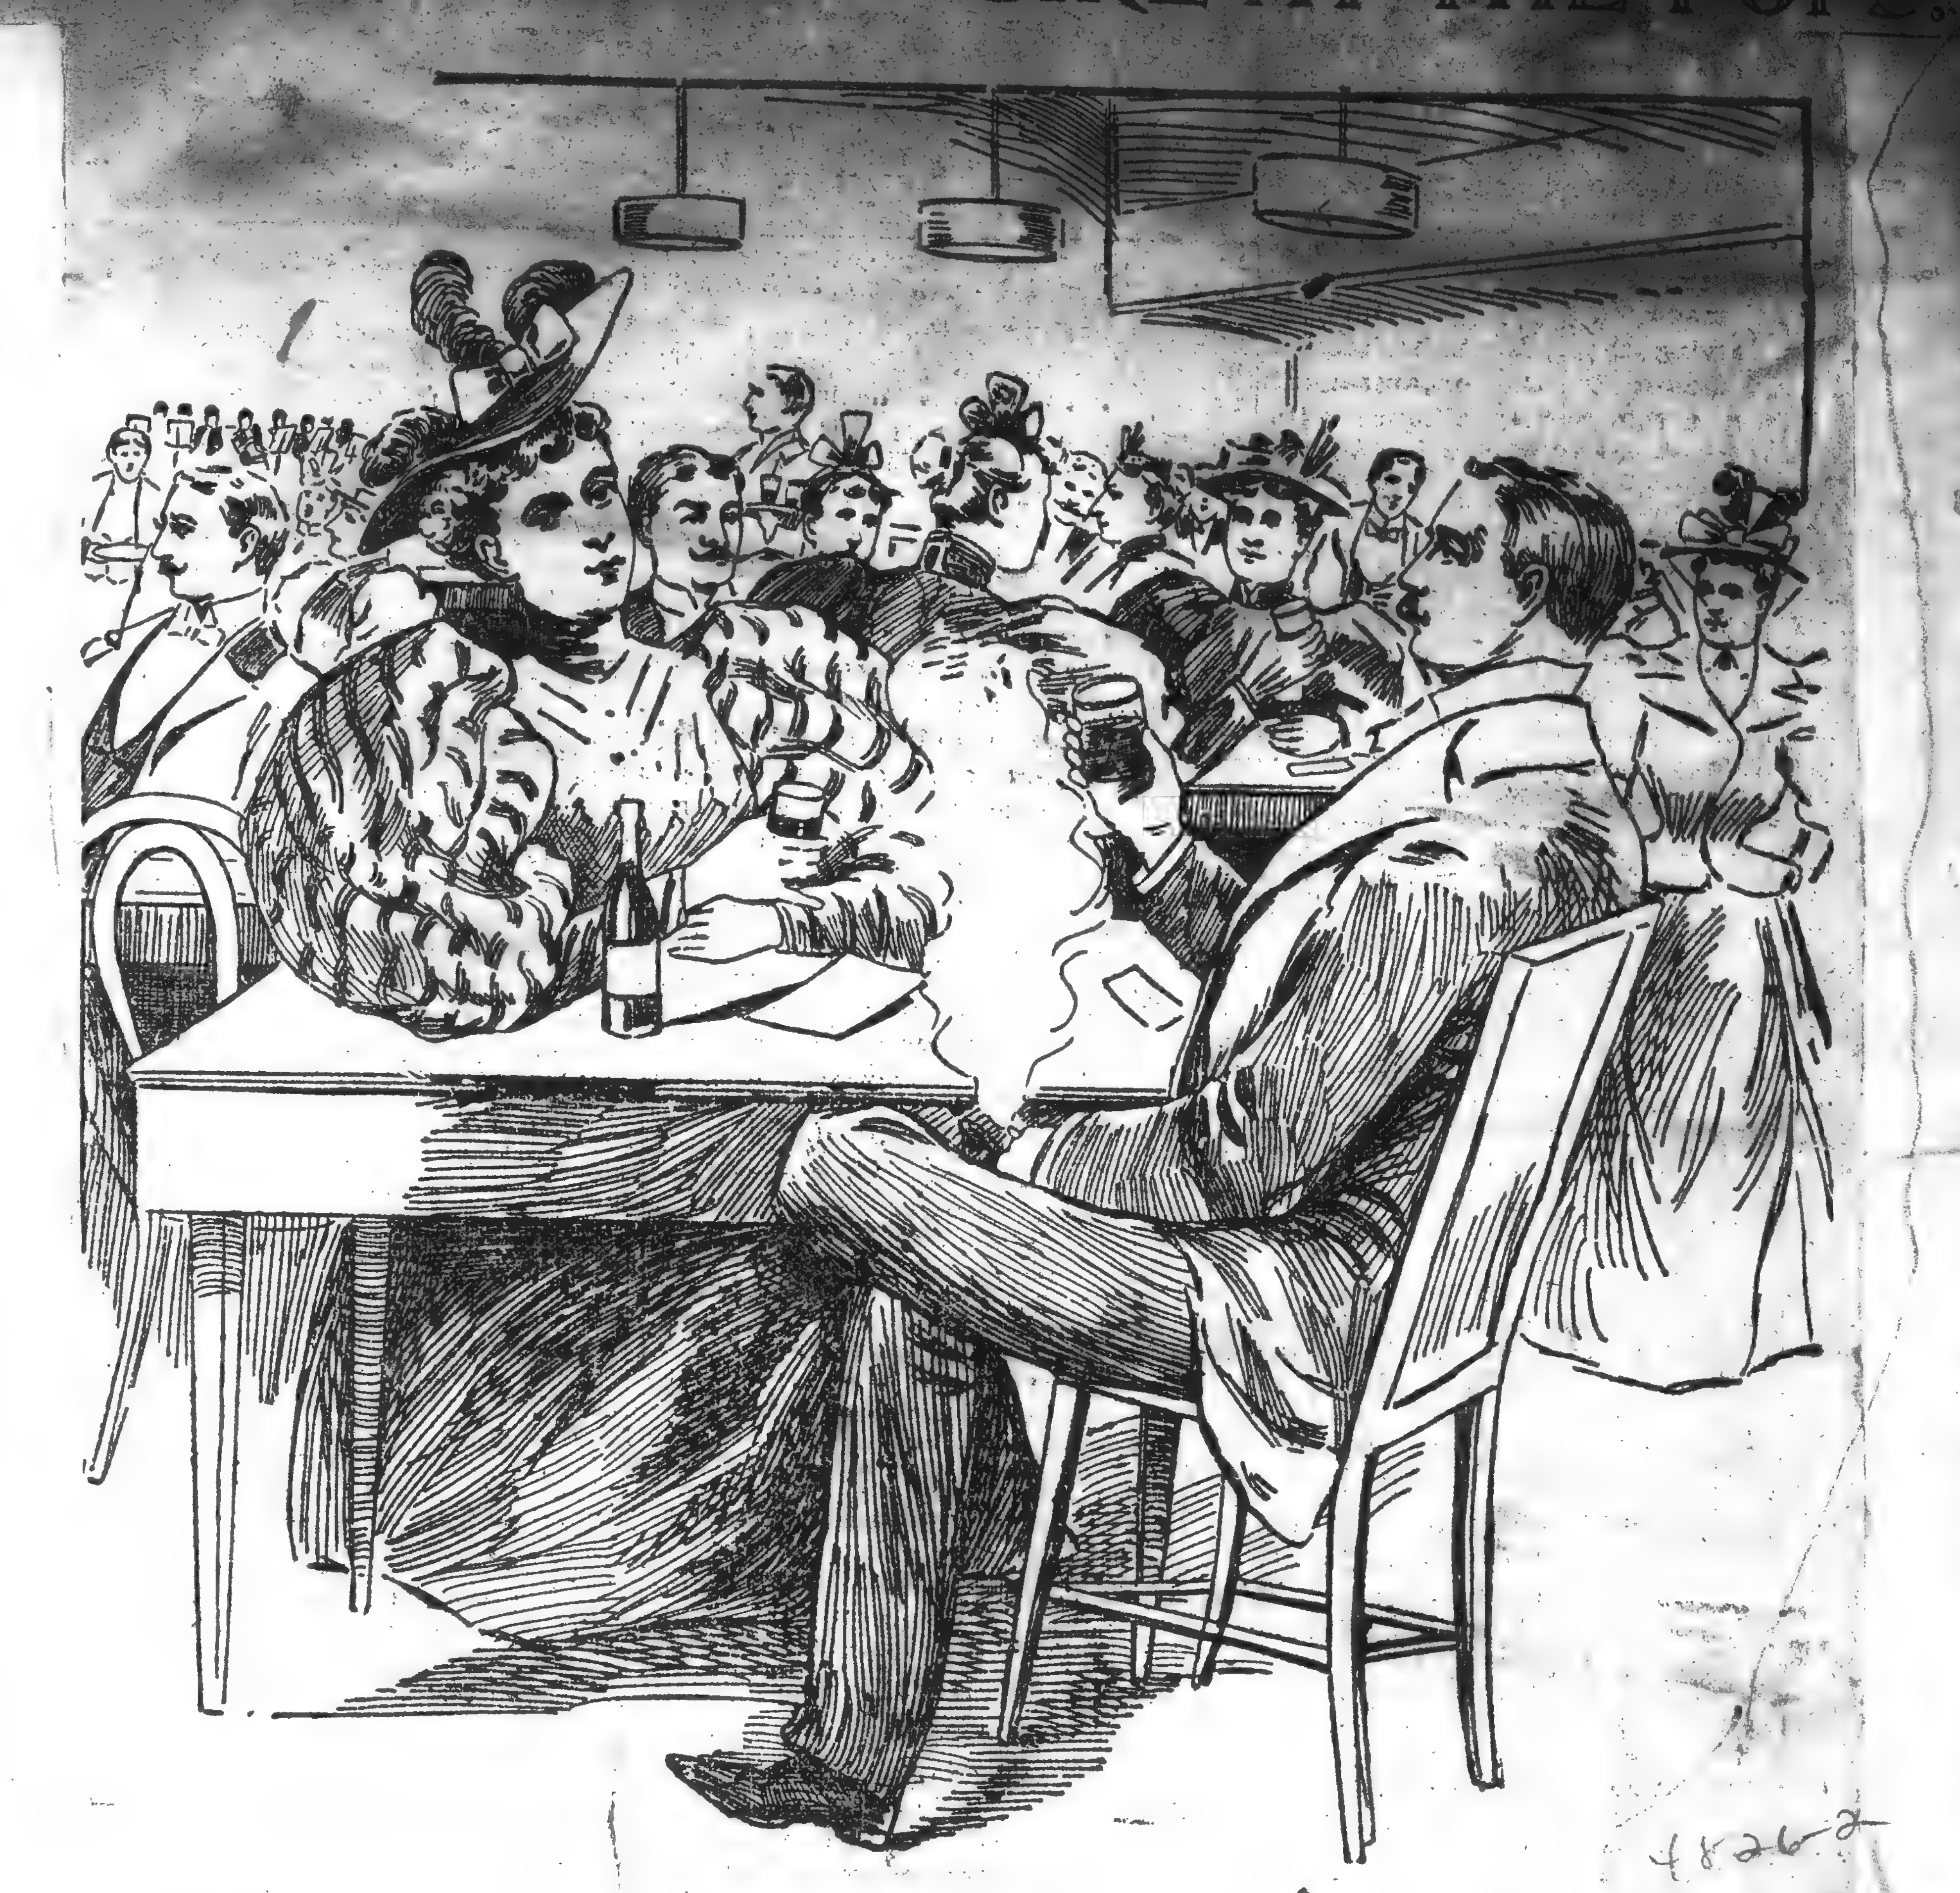
THURSDAY, JUNE 18. CADETS' NIGHT. SELECTIONS FROM THE POPULAR SUCCESSES, "1492," "TABASCO," "EXCELSIOR, JR.," AND "JACK AND THE BEANSTALK."

SATURDAY, JUNE 20. 600TH NIGHT. SPECIAL PROGRAMME OF ALL THE FAVORITE SELECTIONS OF THE PAST TWO SEASONS.

ADMISSION 25c.

Reserved Seats on Floor or Balcony 25c. Extra. 1t je7

THE GAY SOCIETY GIRL AT THE POP



4826-2

Music Hall Concerts.

Programmes of unusual excellence have been offered the numerous patrons of the "pop" concerts this week and their interpretation by the fine orchestra has been admirable. As usual there has been considerable variety in the selections and the listeners have shown the greatest enthusiasm. These concerts have again proven themselves to be thoroughly pleasant affairs and a visit to Music Hall is a most delightful way to pass the evening.

——The promenade concerts more than held their own last week, notwithstanding the many counter attractions. Noted in the audience on Monday evening were Mrs. Cornelius Walker and party and a number of well known young society people who occupied three tables, among them being Miss Katherine Fay and the Misses Shattuck; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chick and party, Miss Gertrude Hall, Mr. John C. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bigelow Williams and party, and Mr. and Mrs. John Dana Shepard and party. On Tuesday evening both Dr. Conrad Wesselhoeft and Dr. W. S Bigelow entertained guests. On Wednesday evening Mr. Melvin O. Adams, Dr. Burton C. Russell, Mr. and Mrs Harry Gay, Mr. Alexander Brown and party and Dr. Conrad Wesselhoeft were en eveidence. Thursday's audience included Professor Barrett Wendell, Mme. Hall, Miss Gertrude Hall and sister, Mr. Oliver Hereford, Mr. and Mrs Edward Sherman and Dr. Chadwick. Friday was evidently the red letter night of the week, and among the large throng of people who enjoyed the excellent program was a large party from Brookline including Mr. and Mrs. William B. Faulkner, Mr. and Mrs. W S. Cartwright, Mrs. Mackintosh, Miss Bessie Mackintosh, Miss Louise Mackintosh, the Messrs. Mackintosh and a number of Harvard men. Others in the house were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Harlowe, Mr. Oscar W. Berry, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Stedman, Mr. Leverett Morss, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. George Frye, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burnham and Miss Minnie Ames, Doctor and Mrs. William Pitt Brecken, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Shaw, Miss Pauline Shaw, Mr. Henry L. Higginson, Miss Amory, Mrs. Arthur Richmond and Mr. John C. Abbott.

——Monday, June 15, has been set aside by the Promenade Concert managers as "Harvard Night." Selections from the successful burlesques given by the "Hasty Pudding" and "Pi Eta" societies will be introduced, including "Obispah," "The Sphinx," "Granada," "Proserpina," "Brangle-Brink" and "Alcayde." A good showing of Harvard men will be in attendance and the occasion promises to be a merry one. Tuesday, June 16, is to be "request night," and Mr. Zach will arrange his programme in accordance with suggestions from the public Thursday, June 18, is "Cadets' Night," and the audience will have the privilege and delight of listening to a resume of the popular successes "1492," "Tabasco," "Excelsior, Jr." and "Jack and the Beanstalk." On Saturday, June 20, which happens to be the 600th night, a special programme, including the favorite selections of the past two years will be presented.

MUSIC HALL "POP" CONCERTS.

Music lovers have much to interest them at the popular concerts now under full sway at Music Hall, and as the music is all of a first-class popular order and rendered by an efficient orchestra, there is nothing left to be desired. Director Zach has offered programmes full of interesting numbers and they have held the undivided attention of the large audiences. It is unfortunate that a break occurs in these concerts, but owing to yearly engagements of the hall the concerts of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week will be omitted. They will reopen Friday, May 29, with a programme especially arranged complimentary to the visiting wheelmen, when the programme will be:

"Boccacolo" march	Suppe
"Iolanthe," overture	Sullivan
"Cagliostro," waltz	Strauss
"Y's, Le Roi De," overture	Lalo
"Cavalleria Rusticana," intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
"Erminie," selection	Jakobowsky
"Narcissus"	Nevin
"I Pagliacci," selection	Leoncavallo
"Grubenlichter," waltz	Zeller
"Herzens Koenigin," polka	Strauss
"Tabasco" march	Chadwick

* * * * *

It is not often that one sees such displays of affection at the Music Hall "pops." as a young man trying to put his arm around the waist of a young women with him! This occurred down in one of the back seats at the end of the hall last night. It did not seem to be wholly consciously done on the part of the young man, but it caused much amusement to the surrounding guests. The very fact that he did it in the growing interest of his conversation, rather than offensively, rather added to the interest of the on-lookers. Directly behind the couple sat four young people, who made very merry over it. One young man, in whispering to one of the young ladies about it, put his arm on the back of the chair in the same way, when she turned round sharply with a warning.

* * * * *

……

The promenades still continue to be favorite amusement of a large number f our musical public. The orchestra for his evening will play the following seections: March, "Kosciusko," Zach; verture, "Tannhauser," Wagner; waltz, "O Schoner Mai," Strauss; selection, "Aida," Verdi; introduction to Act 3, "Lohengrin," Wagner; (a) Don Cesar de Bazan, Massenet; (b) Serenata, Moszkowski; minuet for strings, Boccherini; overture, "Phedre," Massenet; overture, "Les Dragons de Villars," Maillart; waltz, "Pomone," Waldteufel; "Feu d'Artifice," polka, Strauss; march from ballet, "Sun and Earth" (first time), Bayer.

……

There was a crush at the "Pops" Friday night, so that a number of smart people were too late to secure tables, which state of things only went to prove that the four days' break necessitated by prerental of the hall only whetted society's appetite for these fascinating concerts. Mrs. Arthur Rotch was, perhaps, the most observed of any of the society crowd of women that night. She certainly looked exceedingly handsome in her half-mourning, with a lace and jet toque. She is one of the few young matrons who can wear black and look younger instead of older in it. She was with Mr. Percival Lowell and several others. Mrs. Fiske Warren was at a table with friends, Mrs. Gardner, who was in pale blue, with black hat and feathers, had at her table Mr. Clayton Johns with other guests; Charles Francis Adams, Jr., nad a party with him, including Mr. Paul Butler and Mr. Franz Zerrahn.

Others there were Mrs. Gordon Abbott and Mrs. Randolph Coolidge, with parties; Mrs. Zerrahn, Mr. Clayton Johns, Mr. Wadsworth Longfellow, Gen. F. A.

The 584th promenade concert at Music Hall comes tonight. These concerts are well patronized by the fashionable element and are blessings to real music lovers, because they give so much fine music for a very small sum. Out of the 200 tables on the floor and in the first balcony only about 90 are reserved, as are seats at the theatre—the others and seats in the second balcony are free to all those who pay 25 cents for admission. The programmes furnished by Mr. Max Zach have all been of an excellent character, but latterly he has added a popular element and has introduced many novelties which have caught the fickle fancy of the public. Mr. Comee has shown great wisdom in the management and has done much for the comfort of the patrons. Free checking of bicycles is not the least of his thougful deeds.

The "pop" concerts continue on the topmost wave of success, and Mr. Zach is proving a great favorite as conductor. It is to be regretted that more floor space cannot be obtained, for nearly every evening tables are "grabbed" and many "left lamenting" like the father of the famous Lord Ullen's daughter. Those who do get the coveted tables, however, have jolly times, and the others have to go into the galleries, where the music sounds just as well and where its cheering character soon chases away disappointment.

——Mme. D'Angelis of the Copley, chaperoned a group of attractive girls at the promenade concert on Tuesday evening. In the party were Miss Ettiemay Pierson of Minneapolis, Mamie O. Baden and Mary E. Moore, all of whom wore stunning gowns, and were much admired. At another table were Hon. and Mrs. Thomas E. Riley with Mrs. Alice Kent Robertson, Mrs. George F. H. Murray, Mr. Carl Sobeski and Mr. Charles Smith, Doctor and Mrs. John G. Blake with Miss Marie Blake and Messrs. Arthur and Fulton Blake also occupied a table.

——Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burnham, Mr. Henry Higginson, Mr. John C. Abbott, Miss Minnie Ames, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., Mr. Parker Fenno and Miss Amory were among those attending the Promenade Concert, Friday evening.

——Prof. Barrett Wendell, Mme. Edna Hall, Dr. James Chadwick, Miss Gertrude Hall, Mr. Oliver Herford, Mr. and Mrs. William O. Sheafe, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sherburne were among those at the Promenade Concert on Thursday evening.

——Mrs. Arthur Rotch sails for Europe, the middle of this month. She was much admired, the other evening, at the "Pop," in black chiffon and sparkling jets, which suited admirably her coloring.

[102]

Society Girl Sees Strange Sights at Music Hall.

WHERE VIRTUE AND VICE HOBNOB.

Cosmopolitan and Bohemian Boston Is There—The Butterfly Writes Her Impressions for Sunday Post Readers.

I am only a moth, a miller, a night butterfly, anything you like, but oh, what a lot I know, what a very great deal I have seen, and I have only been out one season.

All winter long I fluttered everywhere, from the theatre to the ball room, from the banquet hall to the private supper room, and now every night those who know where to look for me will find me here at the "Pop" concerts.

Few notice me, and so unobserved I see everything and everybody. All the people with whom I have become acquainted during the winter drift in one by one, and I think of the times and the places where I have seen them and I take a keen pleasure in recalling it all and watching them in these new surroundings. Someone has said: "Life is a comedy to him who thinks, a tragedy to him who feels." I am only a moth, so I have no soul. I never feel. I only laugh, and oh, so heartily, at the unconscious comedians who compose the human race.

Novelists sit in their studies and rack their brains for types and plots with unwritten romances happening underneath their very windows.

Through the smoke which curls up from the cigars in the Music Hall below, I see five hundred men and women, anyone of whom has a life story, which faithfully painted would make one writer famous.

Each man is a hero or a villain in his own little world, usually a mixture of both.

Each woman is a saint or a sinner, oftener something of each.

I look at first one and then the other and amuse myself.

I watch the girl who sits at the fifth table back in the centre to right and admire her.

Is she not beautiful, with her dainty Dresden china face?

A PICTURE OF LOVELINESS.

Her lips are as red as the leaves of a Jacqueminot rose; nobody but myself notices how thin and selfish they will be when the color fades. Her features are as clear cut as an exquisite cameo; nobody but myself knows that it is wine which has put the delicate coloring in her cheeks and the sparkle in her eyes.

Ah! what a pace she goes! She lives more in two weeks than many women do in all their lives.

The unmistakable stamp of dissipation has not yet appeared upon her face, and I shall be gone before it comes, so I shall be spared that annoyance, and I see her now as one of the most beautiful girls in Boston—the girl with the Dresden china face.

With his back to the orchestra and staring insolently into the faces of those in front of him, I see a man whose heart has never known a throb of tenderness, of kindness or of sympathy for years. The blood in his veins is ice. His heart is a machine. He is an officer in the United States Navy and is invited everywhere. He pays his poker debts and is called a man of honor, but I saw him blast a young girl's reputation by a shrug of his shoulders and an insinuating sneer. Still he makes the most perfect smoke rings I ever saw and is an excellent pistol shot, both of which, of course, are very much to his credit.

There, close to the railing, on the left is a man who looks like an undertaker, but he is a politician.

He smiles and bows and sees everybody. He will always see everybody until after election, for he is a candidate for an office. He is a lean and hungry Cassius, with an ambition which knows no check.

I have seen him in his quiet moments throw his head back upon his office chair and dream of dignities and honors so high that I dare not even whisper them.

His wife is always at home now, but then she is a dowdy little thing, and loves him a great deal, which of course is a nuisance.

Next to the politician's table is a famous society beauty. She does not say much, because she does not know what to say. Her father is very rich and the society reporters say she is beautiful, and she trustingly believes them.

If she sold hooks and eyes in a shop, the same reporters might think she had a very long nose, and they possibly might notice that her ears stuck out from her head in a conspicuous manner; but a girl with a million never has a long nose.

Sitting at one of the inexpensive outside tables I see a man in a shabby coat, who scarcely seems to breathe when the orchestra is playing.

He is a music teacher, very ambitious and very poor; so poor is he that I have seen him lay his head upon his arms and the tears trickle down upon the ivory keys of his piano because he was hungry and because his shabby shoes and hat hurt his pride.

Nobody but he and I know how much he has endured and suffered, and nobody but ourselves know the exquisite pleasure he has derived from feeling that he was sacrificing for his art's sake.

Music is his life. It is food and drink and happiness—it is everything to him. If the world could only see and hear him sing as I have, in his bare little Tremont street studio, they would crown his unruly red, gold hair with laurel.

When he is wretched and discouraged and miserable, ah! how he sings. I can hear his voice vibrating through the empty hallways now, singing "He Cometh to Bring Us Salvation." It is very sad. I almost forget to laugh at him, even when I stop to think that by simply saying "Yes" the poor musician could become a rich tradesman.

A MAN WHOM MONEY CANNOT BUY.

He has an uncle who refuses to recognize him and his art, but is willing, should he give it up, to take him into his own household, treat him as a son, and make him a member of an old-established business firm.

This young fellow almost makes me think there are some things and people money cannot buy.

On the other side of the same inexpensive table a railroad magnate sits. His face is shrewd and sharp and keen. He sips his wine indifferently, and a cynical smile often plays about the corner of his mouth at some quiet thought which comes to him. Yet during certain numbers on the programme something of the poor music teacher's soul shines in the railroad magnate's eyes. There is a bond of sympathy between this stern, unyielding man of business and the sensitive, unworldly musician who often blushes like a girl.

A little later in the evening I shall see them nodding and smiling approval at each other as they keep time to the music with their fingers.

There is so much to amuse me here that I come night after night.

I laugh so merrily at the people with the blank, uncomprehending expression in their eyes, who applaud so vigorously.

The people who only come to stare and be stared at interest me as do the people who hunger and thirst after Bohemia in a timid, respectable way.

The music, the light and the gayety fascinate me, for after all I am only a moth miller, a night butterfly.

THE SOCIETY GIRL.

[illegible] Zach is showing ex[illegible] [illegible]ment in the selection of good popular music. The program for tomorrow evening will be known as Novelty Night, and will be as follows:

March from "Puppenfee" (First time.)	Bayer
French comedy overture (First time.)	Keler-Bela
Waltz—"Tales from the Orient"	Strauss
Selection—"The Huguenots" (First time.)	Meyerbeer
Retraite Croate (First time.)	Gabriel-Marie
Two Slavonic dances	Dvorak
Ronde D'Amour (First time.)	Westerhout
Overture—"Martha"	Flotow
Selection—"Grande Duchesse"	Offenbach
Waltz—"Espana"	Waldteufel
Mazourka—"La Mesange" (First time.)	Muller
"Jack" March from "Jack and the Beanstalk" (First time.)	Sloane

---

—After an interval of four days in which no concerts were given, the Music hall "Pops" opened again Friday evening and will continue until Thursday, July 2.

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1896.

THE "POPS" TONIGHT.

The "Pop Concerts," after a break of nearly a week, resume tonight. The program will be unusually attractive from a musical standpoint, and in addition the idea of the twelve selections to be played by the orchestra, the beginning of which spell "Bicycle Night," complimentary to the visiting wheelmen, should assure a large audience in Music Hall this evening. The program is:

Boccaccio March	Suppe
Iolanthe overture	Sullivan
Cagliostro Waltz	Strauss
Y's Le Roi De, overture	Lalo
Cavalleria Rusticana	Mascagni
Largo	Haende
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzer.
Erminie. Selection	Jakobowsky
Narcissus	Nevin
I Pagliacci. Intermezzo	Leoncavallo
Grubenlichter Waltz	Zeller
Herzen Koenigin Polka	Strauss
Tabasco March	Chadwick

—At 9 o'clock Friday night only one table remained unoccupied of those reserved at the "Pop" concert by Mr Clayton Johns—that of Mrs John L. Gardner. During a "pianissimo" act of the orchestra, a group of men approached the table and deliberately sat down, awaiting the termination of the number, whereupon Mr Johns tapped one on the shoulder and whispered the fatal fact, "This is Mrs Jack Gardner's table, and she is expected every moment." They moved on. This little episode convinced the balcony that Mrs Jack would surely arrive, which she did at exactly 9.30.

SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1896.

THE PROMENADES.

The Music Hall promenade concerts continue upon the top wave of popularity and afford the music-loving public a constant source of pleasure. The great repertoire of the orchestra is constantly added to and the vast resources of the library that has been accumulated in the twelve successive years of the existence of this musical enterprise are utilized with admirable taste by Mr. Zach in the making of his programs. It is unfortunate that a break is necessary on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, but this is due to yearly engagements of the hall. On Friday, May 29, the concerts will reopen, with the first special evening, "Bicycle Night," with a program especially arranged complimentary to the wheelmen as follows:

"Boccaccio," march	Suppe
"Iolanthe," overture	Sullivan
"Cagliostro," waltz	Strauss
"Y's, Le Roi De," overture	Lalo
"Cavalleria Rusticana," intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
"Erminie," selection	Jakobowsky
"Narcissus"	Nevin
"I Pagliacci," selection	Leoncavallo
"Grubenlichter," waltz	Zeller
"Herzens Koenigin," polka	Strauss
"Tabasco," march	Chadwick

The past week has been without conspicuous features from a social point of view. The "Pops," of course, are the regular meeting place for the people of the younger set, and they are proving as attractive as ever. The presence of Adamowski is missed, but Zach has always been popular among the smart set, and his direction is proving satisfactory in every respect. Out at the Country Club golf is having its reign, but in a few days the great races will be on, and all society will be turned in that direction. In a few days, too, will begin the reign of the June bride, and a number of specially prominent weddings will take place.

ENTERTAINING WHEELMEN.

Judging from the present outlook New England wheelmen will own the city on Friday and Saturday. The usual theatre party will be held at the Tremont Theatre, and the night will also be known as Bicycle Night at Music Hall. A choice program has been arranged for the entertainment of the cyclers. Wheels will be checked free of charge at both places of amusement, and owing to the large number of visitors that will be in the city there will undoubtedly be a large delegation of wheelmen in attendance at both places. President Sterling Elliott of the L. A. W. has received an invitation to attend the popular concert on that evening, and there are hundreds of wheelmen who will undoubtedly improve the opportunity to listen to the special program which has been arranged for the occasion.

TABLE GOSSIP.

—Three notable society women graced the "pop" concert on bicycle night, Friday. Most fitting was it that Mrs Arthur Rotch, the leader in the wheeling smart set, should lend her presence. Mrs Rotch, who first made a reputation abroad as "the beautiful American wheelwoman," is more widely known in New York, possibly, than here, and at the famous and exclusive Michaux club she is a leader, as well as a picture of beauty and grace, mounted. Mrs Rotch has discarded her widow's weeds and is wearing lighter material, although still the somber black. She was the center of attraction on Friday night seated in the front row, beneath conductor Zach and attended by Mr Percival Lowell. Mrs Rotch wore a black chiffon bodice, relieved by jet, her beautiful dark auburn hair done in a sort of aureole effect, carried away from the face and surmounted by a dainty creation of black lace and jet. She was one of the first to arrive in the ring and one of the last to depart. Not all the elect sit in the front section of the ring for directly in the center toward Apollo, was Mrs Fiske Warren and a party of friends, the hostess radiant in a stunning toilet of heavy black watered silk, with yoke of black net, appliqued in rich white lace and edged with a fold of cerise satin. On her head was a creation in the form of a toque of cerise velvet studded with jet beads and finished at the side with a cluster of ribbon loops and aigrettes. Mrs John L. Gardner arrived short after 9, clad in blue silk, a string of diamonds around her throat and wearing a large black hat with three big nodding plumes. She was accompanied by Mr and Mrs Randolph Coolidge and with Mr Clayton Johns as advance guard, a merry party, entertained all within earshot. Others noted were Mr Paul Butler and party, Mr and Mrs Franz Zerrahn and friends, Lieut Winder, Mr Charles Francis Adams Jr and party, Mr Matthew Luce and party, Mr Gardiner W. Lane, Mr and Mrs Edwin Sheafe, Mrs Ronald A. Stuart with Mr F. D. Robinson and daughter, Mr Fred Brackett, Mr Harry Norwell, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard with Col Harry Hastings, Mrs Martha Dana Shepard with Mr and Mrs George B. Winster, Mr and Mrs C. H. Gilman, Miss Lillian Reeves, Mrs T. J. Corbett, Mr and Mrs George F. Steele, Mrs Mary E. Blake, Miss Katherine Gordon and Miss Anna S. Robbins.

Conductor Zach will present a [illegible] program tomorrow evening at the promenade concert in Music hall, seven of the 12 selections being given here for the first time this season. These are the compositions by Bayer, Keler-Bela, Meyerbeer, Gabriel-Marie, Westerhout, Muller and Sloane. The program is as follows:

March from Puppenfee	Bayer
French comedy overture	Keler-Bela
Waltz, Tales from the Orient	Strauss
Selection, The Huguenots	Meyerbeer
Retriate Croate	Gabriel-Marie
Two Slavonic dances	Dvorak
Ronde D'Amour	Westerhout
Overture, Martha	Flotow
Selection, Grande Duchesse	Offenbach
Waltz, Espana	Waldteufel
Mazourka, La Mesange	Muller
Jack march from Jack and the Beanstalk	Sloane

THE MUSIC HALL POPS.

Nothing succeeds like success. This can be truthfully said regarding the "Pop" concerts at Music Hall. Conductor Zach was received with enthusiasm on Friday night after a short break owing to previous engagements of the hall. The very best amusement seekers are to be seen at the tables nightly, and the audiences applaud the fine programmes, demanding encore after encore. A novelty programme has been arranged for tomorrow evening as follows: March from "Puppenfee" (first time), Bayer; French comedy overture (first time), Keler-Bela; waltz, "Tales From the Orient," Strauss; selection, "The Huguenots" (first time), Meyerbeer; retraite croate (first time), Gabriel-Marie; two slavonic dances, Dvorak; Ronde D'Amour (first time), Westerhout; overture, "Martha," Flotow; selection, "Grande Duchesse," Offenbach; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel; mazourka, "Le Mesange" (first time), Muller; "Jack" march from "Jack and the Beanstalk" (first time), Sloane.

—Col Fairchild, Miss Sally Fairchild, Miss Eldredge, Mrs Apthorp, Mr T. Russell Sullivan and Mr Eldredge at the Gardner table, Mr Clarence Hollander, with Miss Gertrude Edmands, Mr and Mrs William Hooper with a party, Mr Walter de Land Came and three friends, Mr Karl Breueman, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard and party from Dorchester, Mr Frank Chick, Dr Frederick L. Jack with friends, Miss Marie Ware Laughton, Mr Charles Hayden, Mr Barroll, Dr Galloupe and party and Miss Hecht with friends were among those present at the last Saturday "Pop."

—Mr Edward B. Horne of Malden had a party at the Music hall "Pop" Friday evening. Mr and Mrs Frederic Beebe chaperoned the party, which included Mrs John S. Woodruff, Miss Pauline Foss, Miss Alice Stearns, Miss Blanche Barker, Mr Henry P. Dole, Mr Phineas W. Sprague and Mr Leon F. Foss.

—Everyone flocked to Music Hall Friday night, glad to welcome a renewal of the "Pop" concerts after a lamented cessation of nearly a week. Bicycle night was a great success; every table was taken and the balconies were crowded. Mrs. John L. Gardner's table was the last to be occupied, and it was quarter before ten when the much-talked of leader of society appeared. Mrs. Gardner was attired in palest blue silk, trimmed with sheer white lace, and a large black hat laden with plumes. In her party were Mrs. Randolph Coolidge in a bodice of white Dresden silk, flowered in pink, and small toque of tan straw with black quills, lace and rose buds and Mrs. Clayton Johns who occupied a seat on the left of Mrs. Gardner. Mrs. Arthur Rotch, accompanied by Mr. Percival Lowell, and dressed all in black, with small black bonnet, was exceedingly lovely. Mrs. Fiske Warren was charming in a gown of black watered moire with bits of white about the yoke and stock of cerise velvet. Mrs. Warren's hat was the most stylish possible combination of cerise velvet and black tips, a toilet well suited to set off to advantage her beauty and exquisite coloring. Mrs. Ronald Stuart was another strikingly elegant woman present in a stunning Parisian gown of green and white. Mrs. Stuart's party included Mr. Harry Norwell, Mr Fred Brackett and Mr. F. D. Robinson and Miss Robinson of Cleveland, who are guests at the Brunswick. Others in the house were Mr. Paul Butler, Miss Lillian Reeves, Miss Louise Drost, Miss Katherine Gordon, Mrs. T. J Corbett, Mr. Walter DeLand Came, Mr. and Mrs. John Dana Shepard, Mrs. Martha Dana Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Steele, Mr. Frank Beebe, Colonel Henry Hastings, Lieutenant Winder, Mr. Charles Francis Adams, jr., and party, Mr. Matthew Luce and party, Mrs. Mary E. Blake and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sheafe.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The resumption of the "Pop" concerts on Friday evening was marked by the attendance of an immense audience. Conductor Zach has met with much success in his programmes, as has been fully demonstrated by the many encores demanded each evening. These concerts will now continue without interruption until July 2. For tomorrow evening an especially attractive programme has been arranged, introducing seven selections not heard here before:

March from "Puppenfee"	Bayer
French Comedy Overture	Keler-Bela
Waltz—"Tales from the Orient"	Strauss
Selection—"The Huguenots"	Meyerbeer
Retraite Croate	Gabriel-Marie
Two Slavonic Dances	Dvorak
Ronde d'Amour	Westerhout
Overture—"Martha"	Flotow
Selection—"Grand Duchesse"	Offenbach
Waltz—"Espana"	Waldteufel
Mazourka—"La Mesange"	Muller
"Jack" March from "Jack and the Beanstalk"	Sloane

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

AT THE "POP" CONCERTS.

A Society Girl Sees Strange Sights at Music Hall.

WHERE VIRTUE AND VICE HOBNOB.

Cosmopolitan and Bohemian Boston Is There—The Butterfly Writes Her Impressions for Sunday Post Readers.

I am only a moth, a miller, a night butterfly, anything you like, but oh, what a lot I know, what a very great deal I have seen, and I have only been out one season.

All winter long I fluttered everywhere, from the theatre to the ball room, from the banquet hall to the private supper room, and now every night those who know where to look for me will find me here at the "Pop" concerts.

Few notice me, and so unobserved I see everything and everybody. All the people with whom I have become acquainted during the winter drift in one by one, and I think of the times and the places where I have seen them and I take a keen pleasure in recalling it all and watching them in these new surroundings. Someone has said: "Life is a comedy to him who thinks, a tragedy to him who feels." I am only a moth, so I have no soul. I never feel. I only laugh, and oh, so heartily, at the unconscious comedians who compose the human race.

Novelists sit in their studies and rack their brains for types and plots with unwritten romances happening underneath their very windows.

Through the smoke which curls up from the cigars in the Music Hall below, I see five hundred men and women, anyone of whom has a life story, which faithfully painted would make one writer famous.

Each man is a hero or a villain in his own little world, usually a mixture of both.

Each woman is a saint or a sinner, oftener something of each.

I look at first one and then the other and amuse myself.

I watch the girl who sits at the fifth table back in the centre to right and admire her.

Is she not beautiful, with her dainty Dresden china face?

A PICTURE OF LOVELINESS.

Her lips are as red as the leaves of a Jacqueminot rose; nobody but myself notices how thin and selfish they will be when the color fades. Her features are as clear cut as an exquisite cameo; nobody but myself knows that it is wine which has put the delicate coloring in her cheeks and the sparkle in her eyes.

Ah! what a pace she goes! She lives more in two weeks than many women do in all their lives.

The unmistakable stamp of dissipation has not yet appeared upon her face, and I shall be gone before it comes, so I shall be spared that annoyance, and I see her now as one of the most beautiful girls in Boston—the girl with the Dresden china face.

With his back to the orchestra and staring insolently into the faces of those in front of him, I see a man whose heart has never known a throb of tenderness, of kindness or of sympathy for years. The blood in his veins is ice. His heart is a machine. He is an officer in the United States Navy and is invited everywhere. He pays his poker debts and is called a man of honor, but I saw him blast a young girl's reputation by a shrug of his shoulders and an insinuating sneer. Still he makes the most perfect smoke rings I ever saw and is an excellent pistol shot, both of which, of course, are very much to his credit.

There, close to the railing, on the left is a man who looks like an undertaker, but he is a politician.

He smiles and bows and sees everybody. He will always see everybody until after election, for he is a candidate for an office. He is a lean and hungry Cassius, with an ambition which knows no check.

I have seen him in his quiet moments throw his head back upon his office chair and dream of dignities and honors so high that I dare not even whisper them.

His wife is always at home now, but then she is a dowdy little thing, and loves him a great deal, which of course is a nuisance.

Next to the politician's table is a famous society beauty. She does not say much, because she does not know what to say. Her father is very rich and the society reporters say she is beautiful, and she trustingly believes them.

If she sold hooks and eyes in a shop, the same reporters might think she had a very long nose, and they possibly might notice that her ears stuck out from her head in a conspicuous manner; but a girl with a million never has a long nose.

Sitting at one of the inexpensive outside tables I see a man in a shabby coat, who scarcely seems to breathe when the orchestra is playing.

He is a music teacher, very ambitious and very poor; so poor is he that I have seen him lay his head upon his arms and let the tears trickle down upon the ivory keys of his piano because he was hungry and because his shabby shoes and hat so hurt his pride.

Nobody but he and I know how much he has endured and suffered, and nobody but ourselves know the exquisite pleasure he has derived from feeling that he was sacrificing for his art's sake.

Music is his life. It is food and drink and happiness—it is everything to him. If the world could only see and hear him sing as I have, in his bare little Tremont street studio, they would crown his unruly red, gold hair with laurel.

When he is wretched and discouraged and miserable, ah! how he sings. I can hear his voice vibrating through the empty hallways now, singing "He Cometh to Bring Us Salvation." It is very sad. I almost forget to laugh at him, even when I stop to think that by simply saying "Yes" the poor musician could become a rich tradesman.

A MAN WHOM MONEY CANNOT BUY.

He has an uncle who refuses to recognize him and his art, but is willing, should he give it up, to take him into his own household, treat him as a son, and make him a member of an old-established business firm.

This young fellow almost makes me think there are some things and people money cannot buy.

On the other side of the same inexpensive table a railroad magnate sits. His face is shrewd and sharp and keen. He sips his wine indifferently, and a cynical smile often plays about the corner of his mouth at some quiet thought which comes to him. Yet during certain numbers on the programme something of the poor music teacher's soul shines in the railroad magnate's eyes. There is a bond of sympathy between this stern, unyielding man of business and the sensitive, unworldly musician who often blushes like a girl.

A little later in the evening I shall see them nodding and smiling approval at each other as they keep time to the music with their fingers.

There is so much to amuse me here that I come night after night.

I laugh so merrily at the people with he blank, uncomprehending expression in their eyes, who applaud so vigorously.

The people who only come to stare and be stared at interest me as do the people who hunger and thirst after Bohemia in a timid, respectable way.

The music, the light and the gayety fascinate me, for after all I am only a moth miller, a night butterfly.

THE SOCIETY GIRL.

THE PROMENADES.

The summer season of the popular promenade concerts at Music Hall is attracting more and more attention and commendation from the best class of music lovers. Mr. Zach is showing excellent judgment in the selection of good popular music. The program for tomorrow evening will be known as Novelty Night, and will be as follows:

March from "Puppenfee" (First time.)	Bayer
French comedy overture (First time.)	Keler-Bela
Waltz—"Tales from the Orient"	Strauss
Selection—"The Huguenots" (First time.)	Meyerbeer
Retraite Croate (First time.)	Gabriel-Marie
Two Slavonic dances	Dvorak
Ronde D'Amour (First time.)	Westerhout
Overture—"Martha"	Flotow
Selection—"Grande Duchesse"	Offenbach
Waltz—"Espana"	Waldteufel
Mazourka—"La Mesange" (First time.)	Muller
"Jack" March from "Jack and the Beanstalk" (First time.)	Sloane

---

——After an interval of four days in which no concerts were given, the Music hall "Pops" opened again Friday evening and will continue until Thursday, July 2.

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1896.

THE "POPS" TONIGHT.

The "Pop Concerts," after a break of nearly a week, resume tonight. The program will be unusually attractive from a musical standpoint, and in addition the idea of the twelve selections to be played by the orchestra, the beginning of which spell "Bicycle Night," complimentary to the visiting wheelmen, should assure a large audience in Music Hall this evening. The program is:

Boccaccio March	Suppe
Iolanthe overture	Sullivan
Cagliostro Waltz	Strauss
Y's Le Roi De, overture	Lalo
Cavalleria Rusticana	Mascagni
Largo Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzer.	Haende
Erminie. Selection	Jakobowsky
Narcissus	Nevin
I Pagliacci. Intermezzo	Leoncavallo
Grubenlichter Waltz	Zeller
Herzen Koenigin Polka	Strauss
Tabasco March	Chadwick

——At 9 o'clock Friday night only one table remained unoccupied of those reserved at the "Pop" concert by Mr Clayton Johns—that of Mrs John L. Gardner. During a "pianissimo" act of the orchestra, a group of men approached the table and deliberately sat down, awaiting the termination of the number, whereupon Mr Johns tapped one on the shoulder and whispered the fatal fact, "This is Mrs Jack Gardner's table, and she is expected every moment." They moved on. This little episode convinced the balcony that Mrs Jack would surely arrive, which she did at exactly 9.30.

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1896.

THE PROMENADES.

The Music Hall promenade concerts continue upon the top wave of popularity and afford the music-loving public a constant source of pleasure. The great repertoire of the orchestra is constantly added to and the vast resources of the library that has been accumulated in the twelve successive years of the existence of this musical enterprise are utilized with admirable taste by Mr. Zach in the making of his programs. It is unfortunate that a break is necessary on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, but this is due to yearly engagements of the hall. On Friday, May 29, the concerts will reopen, with the first special evening, "Bicycle Night," with a program especially arranged complimentary to the wheelmen as follows:

"Boccaccio," march	Suppe
"Iolanthe," overture	Sullivan
"Cagliostro," waltz	Strauss
"Y's, Le Roi De," overture	Lalo
"Cavalleria Rusticana," intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.	Haendel
"Erminie," selection	Jakobowsky
"Narcissus"	Nevin
"I Pagliacci," selection	Leoncavallo
"Grubenlichter," waltz	Zeller
"Herzens Koenigin," polka	Strauss
"Tabasco," march	Chadwick

The past week has been without conspicuous features from a social point of view. The "Pops," of course, are the regular meeting place for the people of the younger set, and they are proving as attractive as ever. The presence of Adamowski is missed, but Zach has always been popular among the smart set, and his direction is proving satisfactory in every respect. Out at the Country Club golf is having its reign, but in a few days the great races will be on, and all society will be turned in that direction. In a few days, too, will begin the reign of the June bride, and a number of specially prominent weddings will take place.

ENTERTAINING WHEELMEN.

Judging from the present outlook New England wheelmen will own the city on Friday and Saturday. The usual theatre party will be held at the Tremont Theatre, and the night will also be known as Bicycle Night at Music Hall. A choice program has been arranged for the entertainment of the cyclers. Wheels will be checked free of charge at both places of amusement, and owing to the large number of visitors that will be in the city there will undoubtedly be a large delegation of wheelmen in attendance at both places. President Sterling Elliott of the L. A. W. has received an invitation to attend the popular concert on that evening, and there are hundreds of wheelmen who will undoubtedly improve the opportunity to listen to the special program which has been arranged for the occasion.

TABLE GOSSIP.

——Three notable society women graced the "pop" concert on bicycle night, Friday. Most fitting was it that Mrs Arthur Rotch, the leader in the wheeling smart set, should lend her presence. Mrs Rotch, who first made a reputation abroad as "the beautiful American wheelwoman," is more widely known in New York, possibly, than here, and at the famous and exclusive Michaux club she is a leader, as well as a picture of beauty and grace, mounted. Mrs Rotch has discarded her widow's weeds and is wearing lighter material, although still the somber black. She was the center of attraction on Friday night seated in the front row, beneath conductor Zach and attended by Mr Percival Lowell. Mrs Rotch wore a black chiffon bodice, relieved by jet, her beautiful dark auburn hair done in a sort of aureole effect, carried away from the face and surmounted by a dainty creation of black lace and jet. She was one of the first to arrive in the ring and one of the last to depart. Not all the elect sit in the front section of the ring for directly in the center toward Apollo, was Mrs Fiske Warren and a party of friends, the hostess radiant in a stunning toilet of heavy black watered silk, with yoke of black net, appliqued in rich white lace and edged with a fold of cerise satin. On her head was a creation in the form of a toque of cerise velvet studded with jet beads and finished at the side with a cluster of ribbon loops and aigrettes. Mrs John L. Gardner arrived short after 9, clad in blue silk, a string of diamonds around her throat and wearing a large black hat with three big nodding plumes. She was accompanied by Mr and Mrs Randolph Coolidge and with Mr Clayton Johns as advance guard, a merry party, entertained all within earshot. Others noted were Mr Paul Butler and party, Mr and Mrs Franz Zerrahn and friends, Lieut Winder, Mr Charles Francis Adams Jr and party, Mr Matthew Luce and party, Mr Gardiner W. Lane, Mr and Mrs Edwin Sheafe, Mrs Ronald A. Stuart with Mr F. D. Robinson and daughter, Mr Fred Brackett, Mr Harry Norwell, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard with Col Harry Hastings, Mrs Martha Dana Shepard with Mr and Mrs George B. Winster, Mr and Mrs C. H. Gilman, Miss Lillian Reeves, Mrs T. J. Corbett, Mr and Mrs George F. Steele, Mrs Mary E. Blake, Miss Katherine Gordon and Miss Anna S. Robbins.

Music Hall Promenades.

Conductor Zach will present a novelty program tomorrow evening at the promenade concert in Music hall, seven of the 12 selections being given here for the first time this season. These are the compositions by Bayer, Keler-Bela, Meyerbeer, Gabriel-Marie, Westerhout, Muller and Sloane. The program is as follows:

March from Puppenfee	Bayer
French comedy overture	Keler-Bela
Waltz, Tales from the Orient	Strauss
Selection, The Huguenots	Meyerbeer
Retriate Croate	Gabriel-Marie
Two Slavonic dances	Dvorak
Ronde D'Amour	Westerhout
Overture, Martha	Flotow
Selection, Grande Duchesse	Offenbach
Waltz, Espana	Waldteufel
Mazourka, La Mesange	Muller
Jack march from Jack and the Beanstalk	Sloane

THE MUSIC HALL POPS.

Nothing succeeds like success. This can be truthfully said regarding the "Pop" concerts at Music Hall. Conductor Zach was received with enthusiasm on Friday night after a short break owing to previous engagements of the hall. The very best amusement seekers are to be seen at the tables nightly, and the audiences applaud the fine programmes, demanding encore after encore. A novelty programme has been arranged for tomorrow evening as follows: March from "Puppenfee" (first time), Bayer; French comedy overture (first time), Keler-Bela; waltz, "Tales From the Orient," Strauss; selection, "The Huguenots" (first time), Meyerbeer; retraite croate (first time), Gabriel-Marie; two slavonic dances, Dvorak; Ronde D'Amour (first time), Westerhout; overture, "Martha," Flotow; selection, "Grande Duchesse," Offenbach; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel; mazourka, "Le Mesange" (first time), Muller; "Jack" march from "Jack and the Beanstalk" (first time), Sloane.

——Col Fairchild, Miss Sally Fairchild, Miss Eldredge, Mrs Apthorp, Mr T. Russell Sullivan and Mr Eldredge at the Gardner table, Mr Clarence Hollander, with Miss Gertrude Edmands, Mr and Mrs William Hooper with a party, Mr Walter de Land Came and three friends, Mr Karl Breueman, Mr and Mrs John Dana Shepard and party from Dorchester, Mr Frank Chick, Dr Frederick L. Jack with friends, Miss Marie Ware Laughton, Mr Charles Hayden, Mr Barroll, Dr Galloupe and party and Miss Hecht with friends were among those present at the last Saturday "Pop."

——Mr Edward B. Horne of Malden had a party at the Music hall "Pop" Friday evening. Mr and Mrs Frederic Beebe chaperoned the party, which included Mrs John S. Woodruff, Miss Pauline Foss, Miss Alice Stearns, Miss Blanche Barker, Mr Henry P. Dole, Mr Phineas W. Sprague and Mr Leon F. Foss.

——Everyone flocked to Music Hall Friday night, glad to welcome a renewal of the "Pop" concerts after a lamented cessation of nearly a week. Bicycle night was a great success; every table was taken and the balconies were crowded. Mrs. John L. Gardner's table was the last to be occupied, and it was quarter before ten when the much-talked of leader of society appeared. Mrs. Gardner was attired in palest blue silk, trimmed with sheer white lace, and a large black hat laden with plumes. In her party were Mrs. Randolph Coolidge in a bodice of white Dresden silk, flowered in pink, and small toque of tan straw with black quills, lace and rose buds and Mrs. Clayton Johns who occupied a seat on the left of Mrs. Gardner. Mrs. Arthur Rotch, accompanied by Mr. Percival Lowell, and dressed all in black, with small black bonnet, was exceedingly lovely. Mrs. Fiske Warren was charming in a gown of black watered moire with bits of white about the yoke and stock of cerise velvet. Mrs. Warren's hat was the most stylish possible combination of cerise velvet and black tips, a toilet well suited to set off to advantage her beauty and exquisite coloring. Mrs. Ronald Stuart was another strikingly elegant woman present in a stunning Parisian gown of green and white. Mrs. Stuart's party included Mr. Harry Norwell, Mr Fred Brackett and Mr. F. D. Robinson and Miss Robinson of Cleveland, who are guests at the Brunswick. Others in the house were Mr. Paul Butler, Miss Lillian Reeves, Miss Louise Drost, Miss Katherine Gordon, Mrs. T. J Corbett, Mr. Walter DeLand Came, Mr. and Mrs. John Dana Shepard, Mrs. Martha Dana Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Steele, Mr. Frank Beebe, Colonel Henry Hastings, Lieutenant Winder, Mr. Charles Francis Adams, jr., and party, Mr. Matthew Luce and party, Mrs. Mary E. Blake and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sheafe.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The resumption of the "Pop" concerts on Friday evening was marked by the attendance of an immense audience. Conductor Zach has met with much success in his programmes, as has been fully demonstrated by the many encores demanded each evening. These concerts will now continue without interruption until July 2. For tomorrow evening an especially attractive programme has been arranged, introducing seven selections not heard here before:

March from "Puppenfee"	Bayer
French Comedy Overture	Keler-Bela
Waltz—"Tales from the Orient"	Strauss
Selection—"The Huguenots"	Meyerbeer
Retraite Croate	Gabriel-Marie
Two Slavonic Dances	Dvorak
Ronde d'Amour	Westerhout
Overture—"Martha"	Flotow
Selection—"Grand Duchesse"	Offenbach
Waltz—"Espana"	Waldteufel
Mazourka—"La Mesange"	Muller
"Jack" March from "Jack and the Beanstalk"	Sloane

[illegible] Globe.

SU[illegible], MAY 24, 1896.

Promenade Concerts.

That the Music hall promenade concerts meet the demand of an immense public cannot be questioned after the attendance of the past two weeks, as "all sold" became a stock phrase at the box office nearly every evening. There is a never-failing care on the part of the conductor, Zach, in the selection and arrangement of the programs, and the musical tact and skill shown in affording the desired contrast in the numbers calls for hearty praise.

Patrons of these popular entertainments are reminded that there will not be any concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, owing to annual engagements of Music hall. The first of many special evenings will be on Friday, May 29, when the concerts will be resumed with an acrostic program, complimentary to the visiting wheelmen, entitled "Bicycle Night," arranged as follows:

Boccaccio march	Suppe
Iolanthe, overture	Sullivan
Cagliostro, waltz	Strauss
Y's, Le Roi De, overture	Lalo
Cavalleria Rusticana, intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
Solo violin, Mr Schnitzler
Erminie, selection	Jakobowsky
Narcissus	Nevin
I Pagliacci, selection	Leoncavallo
Grubenlichter, waltz	Zeller
Herzens Koenigin, polka	Strauss
Tabasco march	Chadwick

Next Friday evening at the Music hall promenade concerts will be "bicycle night," and several tables have been reserved for Messrs Elliott, Sanger, Bald and other prominent cyclists. The selections for the program are arranged in the form of an anagram.

—Friday night should be marked with a "red letter," as it called to Music hall the best audience, in point of quality, that has gathered within its laurel-trimmed walls this season. Not only was it brilliant in a social light, but the gowns of the ladies and the millinery display was something to remember, seen from any vantage point. Long before the now fashionable hour to arrive—9 o'clock—the tables were surrounded by some of the smartest folks in town. Mrs Gardner was attended by Col Henry L. Higginson and Mr Gardner, and had as guest Miss Lena Little. Mrs Gardner, who is looking uncommonly well this season, wore a buttercup yellow crepon with tiny white spots on its surface. It was made somewhat in blouse effect and relieved by a soft fold at the throat and waist of violet velvet. Her hat was a coarse yellow straw with a quantity of pale yellow chiffon and black wings at the back. Miss Little was modishly gowned in a grayish gauze, over a dark changeable silk, and wore a large flat hat of black and white straw, with black trimmings. Neither of the men wore evening dress, although that sort of attire prevailed to a large extent throughout the ring. The next most attractive table was that occupied by Mr and Mrs Henry Burnham and Mr and Mrs Philip V. R. Ely, Mrs Burnham in dove gray cashmere, with bodice of white satin ribbons and ecru lace insertion and large green straw hat, Mrs Ely in black, brightened with white lace and cerise. Near the Gardners was a jolly party of six, with Mr and Mrs William Hooper as host and hostess, the latter looking radiant also in yellow, with large black hat, adorned with red roses. Near the stage sat Mrs Ronald A. Stuart, accompanied by her brother, Mr Fred Brackett, and Mr S. Robson of Cleveland, O. Mr and Mrs Randolph Coolidge, with friends, were in close proximity, as were Mrs J. H. Stoddart and party. Elsewhere on the floor were noted Mr John T. Wheelwright, Mr and Mrs C. M. Ingersoll Jr, Miss Linzee, Mr Charles Sumner Hawes, Mrs Harry Chapin, Miss Mabel Bond, Mr and Mrs Fred Beebe, Mr Percival Lowell and friends, and Judge Dewey with Mr Pevear and ladies. In the balcony were Mr and Mrs R. M. Field, the Misses Ball, Mr Herbert Leeds, Lieut Winder, Mr Franklyn Roberts with Mrs J. P. Sutherland, Mr O. A. Jenkins and party, Col and Mrs Edmands, with friends, Mr Ward M. Tenney and Mr H. A. Latimer.

—On Tuesday night quite a number of the smart cycling set wheeled to the pop concert and "put up" their wheels in the convenient place arranged by the management. On the floor were noted Mr and Mrs J. C. R. Peabody, Mr and Mrs Henry Burnham, Miss Alice Kent Robertson, Mr Shroeder, Mr Stansy, Miss Henrietta Sargent, Mrs George Norman, Mr George von L. Meyer, Mr Isidor Braggiotte, Dr and Mrs W. C. Denny, Mr and Mrs Harry H. Gay, Miss Nostrand, Mr and Mrs Alexander Steinert, Mrs G. W. Wakefield, Mrs Max Zach, Mr Harold Going, Mr O. B. Mann, Mr Charles Hayden, Mr Robert Kane, Mr and Mrs Frank Bemis, Mr Morton Cobb and Mrs S. Hooper Hooper.

—Mr Bulkley Wells, who married Miss Grace Livermore of Jamaica Plain, is building a summer home at Magnolia, a copy of an old English house in the time of Henry VIII. Mr and Mrs Wells will occupy it early in July.

—Mrs and Miss Goodwin, mother and sister of Mr J. Cheever Goodwin, the composer, who have been spending some time in Boston, have sailed for

---

[illegible]

PUBLISHED [illegible] YEAR
VOL. [illegible], NO. 145.

SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1896.

THE POPS.

The second week of the Music Hall promenade concerts ended last night with the largest and most enthusiastic audience of the season.

The orchestra this year is decidedly the best that has been heard in these concerts, and in his direction and control of the men, Mr. Zach exhibits a skill which has won for him the heartiest esteem of the audiences. The popularity of the promenades is demonstrated in the eager advance demand for seats. There will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, but they will be resumed on Friday, with a programme complimentary to the visiting wheelmen, who will be in the city at that time. It is:

"Boccacio," march	Suppe
"Iolanthe," overture	Sullivan
"Cagliostro," waltz	Strauss
"Y's, Le Roi De," overture	Lalo
"Cavalleria Rusticana," intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
"Erminie," selection	Jakobowsky
"Narcissus"	Nevin
"I Pagliacci," selection	Leoncavallo
"Grubenlichter," waltz	Zeller
"Herzens Koenigin," polka	Strauss
"Tabasco," march	Chadwick

Miss Eldridge of West Cedar street and her party filled the seats at Mrs. Gardner's table last night at the "Pop."

Miss Hopkins of Baltimore, who has been visiting Miss Eldridge, and is an extremely pretty, graceful girl, was of Mr. Percival Lowell's party at the "Pops" Wednesday night, with Mr. and Mrs. John Morison, Capt. and Mrs. John Bigelow and several besides. Around Mrs. Gardner's table that night were seated a group of the younger set, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howe of Brookline, the Misses Shattuck, Mr. Fenno, Mr. Herbert Brown and Mr. Isidore Braggiotti. Mrs. Gardner was in blue, the coat bodice faced with white, with gold embroidery, and a large flower hat.

Friday, however, was the banner night at the "Pops," as it will be doubtless through the season. Every table was full, and there was a brave showing of pretty gowns and hats. Indeed, the colors of the costumes were far ahead in brilliancy of any which had been worn before. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burnham, the latter the best gowned woman in the hall by all odds, were with the Philip Elys. Col. and Mrs. Edmands were there; Mr. John T. Wheelwright had with him a party of five, including Miss Linzee, and Mr. Percival Lowell also had a table full. Mr. Herbert Leeds was there with his mother, Mrs. James Leeds, and Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Coolidge brought several people. Mr. and Mrs. John L. Gardner had at their table Mr. Henry L. Higginson and Miss Lena Little. Miss Little was handsome in soft gray made over purple, with a black and white toque. Mrs. Gardner was in maize, done up with violet, and a yellowish hat. Mr. Philip Saltonstall, Judge Dewey, Lieut. Winder of the Wabash, Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper, with a party, and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Field were also there.

There was a very pretty party from Malden at the "Pop" concert in Music Hall on Monday evening last. They came in just before 9 o'clock and attracted no little attention. Among those at the tables were: Mr. and Mrs. A. McGregor, Jr., Mr. George C. Dutton and Miss Dutton, Mr. Sprague, Miss Foss, Mr. Russell, Miss Tufts, Miss Stevens, Mr. Foss, Mr. Hitchcock and Miss Hall. After the concert they drove out to Malden.

week.

Monday night opened quite as brilliantly as the first "Pop" evening the week before, for every table was occupied, and we could scarcely see a vacant seat in the balconies. Mr. and Mrs. Franz Zerrahn brought in a party from Milton, making the most attractive table perhaps in the hall, and Miss "Peggy" Perkins, with a party, including her fiance, Mr. George Rice, was quite the prettiest girl of her smart set we thought there. Mr. J. L. Gardner was there at his wife's table, and Mr. Alexander Higginson had a party. Hon. George P. Lawrence, president of the Senate, was especially noted, and so were the Misses Shattuck, Mr. Henry Wainwright and Mr. George F. Babbitt.

Tuesday night Mrs. J. C. R. Peabody was the prettiest among the many women of the smart set at the concert. Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Burnham, Mr. George H. Norman, Mr. J. C. R. Peabody, Mr. S. Hooper Hooper, Miss Henrietta Sargent, Mr. Braggiotti, Hon. William C. Lovering and party, including his daughters; Dr. and Mrs. Charles Inches, Mr. Clayton Johns, Dr. Jack, Mr. Clarence Hollander and party and Mr. Arthur Silsbee were also in the crowd of well-known people around the tables. A bit of picturesqueness was added to the scene by Mr. Frank Seabury and his party, including Mrs. Inches and Mr. Fred Silsbee, who came in their bicycle costumes, and very fit and becoming they were. By the way, Mr. Comee, who seems to have thought of everything for the comfort of his patrons, in small as well as large ways, has made provision for checking wheels, as it is getting to be quite the [illegible] to ride in on them from the near

---

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 24, 1896.

In consequence of Music Hall having been previously engaged for Anniversary week service the Promenade Concerts will be suspended for four nights, resuming on Friday evening May 29. The following is the programme for that evening, which is Bicycle Night, and which will be seen is in the form of an acrostic.

Boccaccio March	Suppe
Iolanthe Overture	Sullivan
Cagliostro Waltz	Strauss
Y's Le Roi De, Overture	Lalo
Cavalleria Rusticana	Mascagni
Largo	Haende
Solo Violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
Erminie. Selection	Jakobowsky
Narcissus	Nevin
Ipagliacci. Intermezzo	Leoncavallo
Grubenlichter Waltz	Zeller
Herzen Koenigin Polka	Strauss
Tabasco March	Chadwick

Bicycles will be checked free.

FOUR NIGHTS LOST.

Alackaday! Alackaday!
Where shall we pleasure seek
Till Friday night? The "Pops" give way
To Anniversary Week!

—Mrs. John L. Gardner, with a party of friends, was at the promenade concert Wednesday evening. Mrs. Gardner wore a becoming gown of blue mohair with revers of white satin and touches of gold. Her hat was of white straw laden with flowers. The Misses Shattuck and Isadore Bragiotti accompanied Mrs. Gardner. The Shattucks were attired one in a cloth gown of changeable tan and purple, with a large hat trimmed with green, and the other in purple crepon with a small hat. Others in the house were Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Spinney with Mrs. Bartlett, Dr. Dunham with party, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Mr. and Mrs. Ratshesky, Mr. Killalee and Mr. David Lithgoe, Mr. Parker C. Chandler, Mr. Charles L. Vialle, Mrs. Gurney, Mr. David Barry, Mr. Grant Stewart and Mr. Karl Breneman and party.

—The promenade concerts grow more and more popular each year, and are attended by no end of people. Bicyclists consider it a favorite rendezvous, and after a spin through the Fens enjoy an evening at Music Hall. Mr. Comee having made arrangements to check bicycles free, which is certainly a great accommodation to lovers of wheeling. One of the balcony tables was occupied on Tuesday evening, by a party of cyclists including Mrs. Charles Inches, Mr. Frank Seabury and Mr. Fred Silsbee, all of whom were in bicycling togs, while others in the house were Mrs. W. G. Wakefield, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. R. Peabody with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burnham, Mrs. Alice Kent Robinson, Mr. Shroeder and Mr. Stasny, Miss Henrietta Sargent, Mr. George Norman, Mr. George von L. Meyer, Mr. Bragiotti, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Denny, Miss Nostrand, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bemis, Mr. and Mrs. Morton E. Cobb, Mr. Leighton Beale, Mr. S. Hooper Hooper, Mr. Robert Came, Mr. Charles Robbins, Mrs. Sawyer, Mr. Charles Hayden, Mr. Fred Brackett and Mr. Sidney Brackett, Mr. O. D. Mann and Mrs. Max Zach with Mr. Harold Going.

—Friday was the banner night of the season at the promenade concert, and the audience was one of unusual brilliance. First and foremost was Mrs. Gardner in a gown of yellowish crepon, with white dots, combined with violet velvet. Her yellow straw hat was trimmed with yellow chiffon and wings. Mrs. Gardner's party consisted of Mr. Gardner, Miss Lena Little and Mr. John L. Higginson. Miss Little wore a grey silk gown, veiled with changeable gauze, and a large hat of black and white. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burnham had with them Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ely. Mrs. Burnham was in grey with trimmings of white lace. Mrs. William Hooper (Miss Elsie Perkins), who was escorted by Mr. Hooper, looked very chic in a gown of pale yellow silk striped with black. Colonel and Mrs. Edmands were conspicuous figures on Friday Mrs. Edmands being richly and becomingly attired in a gown of black and white striped silk, trimmed with white lace, and a small bonnet of black and white. Mrs. George Stoddard, one of Boston's fashionable and really elegant women, wore a bodice of Cashmere silk, relieved with pale blue satin ribbon, a dark skirt, and a large white hat with black wings. Others in the house were Mr. Stoddard, Judge Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beebe, Mr. Herbert Leeds and Mrs. Leeds, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Field, Colonel John T. Wheelwright, Miss Linzee, Mrs. J. P. Sutherland, Mr. Franklin Roberts, Mrs. Ronald A. Stuart, Mr. Fred Brackett, Mr. Ward M. Tenney, Miss Gertrude Ball, Miss Ball and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Taylor, Jr., with party of friends.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1896.

A SPECIAL BICYCLE POP.

On Friday Evening, May 29, a Curious and Special Programme.

The manager of the "Pop" concerts has made arrangements for a "bicycle night" on next Friday evening, when the following special programme will be offered. Please observe the initial letters of the pieces.

"Boccaccio" March	Suppé
"Iolanthe," Overture	Sullivan
"Cagliostro," Waltz	Strauss
"Y's, le roi de." Overture	Lalo
"Cavalleria Rusticana," Intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
Solo Violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
"Erminie," Selection	Jakobowsky
"Narcissus"	Nevin
"I Pagliacci," Selection	Leoncavallo
"Grubenlichter," Waltz	Zeller
"Herzens Koenigin," Polka	Strauss
"Tabasco" March	Chadwick

[illegible] a week ago, which was [illegible] "Pop" until Friday, Mr. Charles [illegible]child, whose business interests have kept him so much in New York this year, was at a table with his daughter, Miss Sally Fairchild, and several of her friends. Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper were there with a party, including Miss "Peggy" Perkins and Mr. George Rice. Mrs. Apthorp was with a table full of friends, Dr. George H. Monks had a party, [illegible] Hollander.

[illegible]

(From Town T[illegible])

The dearth of weddi[illegible] general superstition respec[illegible] of May, the hiatus between [illegible] the storing up of energy for the [illegible] coming Country Club spring [illegible] ing, have continued to [illegible] week in Boston. The one well in the desert was the "Pop" concerts. Hitherto, with occasional lapses, the great and only Timotheus Adamowski, Boston's very own, has wielded the conductor's baton at these functions, and there was a general feeling of misgiving on the opening night until it became evident that "there were others," and that Mr. Max Zach understood his business. Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, the omnipresent, was very visible the first night, having a small party, including Miss Olga Gardner, her niece, and Mr. Charles Sampson, that obliging Achates who, in the absence of brighter lights, always flickers at Mrs. Jack's side. A "flock of Hoopers" gleamed conspicuously from the balcony, Mrs. "Bob" and Mrs. "Billy," very airily togged out, as usual. Mrs. William F. Apthorp—or, as she wishes to be called, plain Mrs. Apthorp, since in her case there are no others—was with the Iasigis and wore a really remarkable hat.

I missed Mrs. Fiske Warren, the Titianesque aspirant to the glories of the stage, who is dubbed La dame aux Chapeaux, owing to her wonderful collection of headgear. It is said of her that she experiences a distinct emotion when bargaining for a bonnet. At one of the central tables I saw Mrs. William Fay and Miss Katherine Fay, with Holker Abbott and Gordon Dexter, and not far off was Mrs. Charles Inches, who is still considered by some to be one of the "Hub Beauties." Mrs. Arthur Richmond and her husband were the best-looking people in the place, and Miss Anna Palfrey and Bryce Allan the most talked about, owing to their lofty seats in the social sanhedrin and their approaching marriage, which takes place June 2 at Beverly Farms.

Miss Charlotte Houston, who has been prodigiously puffed by obscure paragraphers as a great beauty, looked very nice indeed, I thought. Miss Houston's renown is entirely due to a chance remark made by me several months ago, that on one occasion she reminded me of Mrs. George Curzon, during her belleship as Miss Mary Leiter. Of course Harvard—straw-hatted and summer-shirted—turned out in great shape, as did one or two of those now famous athletes fresh from Olympian victories and the hospitalities of King George. But where was the airy sect of the "Visionists" this year—that little coterie of young men who pride themselves upon their individuality to the exclusion of social laws. I missed their staccato chatter and the probing of the ego. Where, too, was George Santayana, the social arbiter of Harvard, the maker of sonnets and the professor of ethical esthetics? And "Dick" Hovey, of the Daudet mane and Maeterlinckian mania? I felt constrained to cry with the Spanish proverb: "There are no birds in last year's nests."

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 144.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

Patrons of the Music Hall promenade concerts are reminded that there will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week, owing to annual engagement of the hall during anniversary week. They will reopen on Friday, the 29th. An unusually attractive programme has been arranged by Conductor Zach for this evening, as follows:

March, "Excelsior, Jr."	Tracey
Overture, "Sphinx"	Thompson
Waltz, "España"	Waldteufel
Selection, "Beggar Student"	Millocker
Introduction to Act III., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
"Love's Dream After the Ball"	Czibulka
Two Hungarian dances	Brahms
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Selection, "Robin Hood"	De Koven
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Tyrolean polka	Zeller
March, "Poor Jonathan"	Millocker

The Boston Commercial.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

The Promenade Concerts.

The attendance at the concerts at Music Hall this week has been very large and lovers of music have had much that was admirable placed before them. The programmes of the week have met the popular demand in every respect and the music has been interpreted by the orchestra in a most artistic manner. Mr. Zach, the new leader, has won considerable reputation already and the programmes arranged by him retain the high art level that has always distinguished these thoroughly pleasant affairs. It is very evident that these concerts are to be more popular if anything, than ever, as they have started in upon their eleventh season with unusual brilliancy.

Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1896.

Promenade Concerts.

That the Music hall promenade concerts meet the demand of an immense public cannot be questioned after the attendance of the past two weeks, as "all sold" became a stock phrase at the box office nearly every evening. There is a never-failing care on the part of the conductor, Zach, in the selection and arrangement of the programs, and the musical tact and skill shown in affording the desired contrast in the numbers calls for hearty praise.

Patrons of these popular entertainments are reminded that there will not be any concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, owing to annual engagements of Music hall. The first of many special evenings will be on Friday, May 29, when the concerts will be resumed with an acrostic program, complimentary to the visiting wheelmen, entitled "Bicycle Night," arranged as follows:

Boccaccio march	Suppe
Iolanthe, overture	Sullivan
Cagliostro, waltz	Strauss
Y's, Le Roi De, overture	Lalo
Cavalleria Rusticana, intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
Solo violin, Mr Schnitzler
Erminie, selection	Jakobowsky
Narcissus	Nevin
I Pagliacci, selection	Leoncavallo
Grubenlichter, waltz	Zeller
Herzens Koenigin, polka	Strauss
Tabasco march	Chadwick

Next Friday evening. at the Music hall promenade concerts will be "bicycle night," and several tables have been reserved for Messrs Elliott, Sanger, Bald and other prominent cyclists. The selections for the program are arranged in the form of an anagram.

—Friday night should be marked with a "red letter," as it called to Music hall the best audience, in point of quality, that has gathered within its laurel-trimmed walls this season. Not only was it brilliant in a social light, but the gowns of the ladies and the millinery display was something to remember, seen from any vantage point. Long before the now fashionable hour to arrive—9 o'clock—the tables were surrounded by some of the smartest folks in town. Mrs Gardner was attended by Col Henry L. Higginson and Mr Gardner, and had as guest Miss Lena Little. Mrs Gardner, who is looking uncommonly well this season, wore a buttercup yellow crepon with tiny white spots on its surface. It was made somewhat in blouse effect and relieved by a soft fold at the throat and waist of violet velvet. Her hat was a coarse yellow straw with a quantity of pale yellow chiffon and black wings at the back. Miss Little was modishly gowned in a grayish gauze, over a dark changeable silk, and wore a large flat hat of black and white straw, with black trimmings. Neither of the men wore evening dress, although that sort of attire prevailed to a large extent throughout the ring. The next most attractive table was that occupied by Mr and Mrs Henry Burnham and Mr and Mrs Philip V. R. Ely, Mrs Burnham in dove gray cashmere, with bodice of white satin ribbons and ecru lace insertion and large green straw hat, Mrs Ely in black, brightened with white lace and cerise. Near the Gardners was a jolly party of six, with Mr and Mrs William Hooper as host and hostess, the latter looking radiant also in yellow, with large black hat, adorned with red roses. Near the stage sat Mrs Ronald A. Stuart, accompanied by her brother, Mr Fred Brackett, and Mr S. Robson of Cleveland, O. Mr and Mrs Randolph Coolidge, with friends, were in close proximity, as were Mrs J. H. Stoddart and party. Elsewhere on the floor were noted Mr John T. Wheelwright, Mr and Mrs C. M. Ingersoll Jr, Miss Linzee, Mr Charles Sumner Hawes, Mrs Harry Chapin, Miss Mabel Bond, Mr and Mrs Fred Beebe, Mr Percival Lowell and friends, and Judge Dewey with Mr Pevear and ladies. In the balcony were Mr and Mrs R. M. Field, the Misses Ball, Mr Herbert Leeds, Lieut Winder, Mr Franklyn Roberts with Mrs J. P. Sutherland, Mr O. A. Jenkins and party, Col and Mrs Edmands, with friends, Mr Ward M. Tenney and Mr H. A. Latimer.

—On Tuesday night quite a number of the smart cycling set wheeled to the pop concert and "put up" their wheels in the convenient place arranged by the management. On the floor were noted Mr and Mrs J. C. R. Peabody, Mr and Mrs Henry Burnham, Miss Alice Kent Robertson, Mr Shroeder, Mr Stansy, Miss Henrietta Sargent, Mrs George Norman, Mr George von L. Meyer, Mr Isidor Braggiotte, Dr and Mrs W. C. Denny, Mr and Mrs Harry H. Gay, Miss Nostrand, Mr and Mrs Alexander Steinert, Mrs G. W. Wakefield, Mrs Max Zach, Mr Harold Going, Mr O. B. Mann, Mr Charles Hayden, Mr Robert Kane, Mr and Mrs Frank Bemis, Mr Morton Cobb and Mrs S. Hooper Hooper.

—Mr Bulkley Wells, who married Miss Grace Livermore of Jamaica Plain, is building a summer home at Magnolia, a copy of an old English house in the time of Henry VIII. Mr and Mrs Wells will occupy it early in July.

—Mrs and Miss Goodwin, mother and sister of Mr J. Cheever Goodwin, the composer, who have been spending some time in Boston, have sailed for

---

SUNDAY HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR
VOL. XCIX., NO. 145.

SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1896.

THE POPS.

The second week of the Music Hall promenade concerts ended last night with the largest and most enthusiastic audience of the season.

The orchestra this year is decidedly the best that has been heard in these concerts, and in his direction and control of the men, Mr. Zach exhibits a skill which has won for him the heartiest esteem of the audiences. The popularity of the promenades is demonstrated in the eager advance demand for seats. There will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, but they will be resumed on Friday, with a programme complimentary to the visiting wheelmen, who will be in the city at that time. It is:

"Boccacio," march	Suppe
"Iolanthe," overture	Sullivan
"Cagliostro," waltz	Strauss
"Y's, Le Roi De," overture	Lalo
"Cavalleria Rusticana," intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
"Erminie," selection	Jakobowsky
"Narcissus"	Nevin
"I Pagliacci," selection	Leoncavallo
"Grubenlichter," waltz	Zeller
"Herzens Koenigin," polka	Strauss
"Tabasco," march	Chadwick

Miss Eldridge of West Cedar street and her party filled the seats at Mrs. Gardner's table last night at the "Pop."

Miss Hopkins of Baltimore, who has been visiting Miss Eldridge, and is an extremely pretty, graceful girl, was of Mr. Percival Lowell's party at the "Pops" Wednesday night, with Mr. and Mrs. John Morison, Capt. and Mrs. John Bigelow and several besides. Around Mrs. Gardner's table that night were seated a group of the younger set, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howe of Brookline, the Misses Shattuck, Mr. Fenno, Mr. Herbert Brown and Mr. Isidore Braggiotti. Mrs. Gardner was in blue, the coat bodice faced with white, with gold embroidery, and a large flower hat.

Friday, however, was the banner night at the "Pops," as it will be doubtless through the season. Every table was full, and there was a brave showing of pretty gowns and hats. Indeed, the colors of the costumes were far ahead in brilliancy of any which had been worn before. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burnham, the latter the best gowned woman in the hall by all odds, were with the Philip Elys. Col. and Mrs. Edmands were there; Mr. John T. Wheelwright had with him a party of five, including Miss Linzee, and Mr. Percival Lowell also had a table full. Mr. Herbert Leeds was there with his mother, Mrs. James Leeds, and Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Coolidge brought several people. Mr. and Mrs. John L. Gardner had at their table Mr. Henry L. Higginson and Miss Lena Little. Miss Little was handsome in soft gray made over purple, with a black and white toque. Mrs. Gardner was in maize, done up with violet, and a yellowish hat. Mr. Philip Saltonstall, Judge Dewey, Lieut. Winder of the Wabash, Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper, with a party, and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Field were also there.

There was a very pretty party from Malden at the "Pop" concert in Music Hall on Monday evening last. They came in just before 9 o'clock and attracted no little attention. Among those at the tables were: Mr. and Mrs. A. McGregor, Jr., Mr. George C. Dutton and Miss Dutton, Mr. Sprague, Miss Foss, Mr. Russell, Miss Tufts, Miss Stevens, Mr. Foss, Mr. Hitchcock and Miss Hall. After the concert they drove out to Malden.

week.

Monday night opened quite as brilliantly as the first "Pop" evening the week before, for every table was occupied, and we could scarcely see a vacant seat in the balconies. Mr. and Mrs. Franz Zerrahn brought in a party from Milton, making the most attractive table perhaps in the hall, and Miss "Peggy" Perkins, with a party, including her fiance, Mr. George Rice, was quite the prettiest girl of her smart set we thought there. Mr. J. L. Gardner was there at his wife's table, and Mr. Alexander Higginson had a party. Hon. George P. Lawrence, president of the Senate, was especially noted, and so were the Misses Shattuck, Mr. Henry Wainwright and Mr. George F. Babbitt.

Tuesday night Mrs. J. C. R. Peabody was the prettiest among the many women of the smart set at the concert. Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Burnham, Mr. George H. Norman, Mr. J. C. R. Peabody, Mr. S. Hooper Hooper, Miss Henrietta Sargent, Mr. Braggiotti, Hon. William C. Lovering and party, including his daughters; Dr. and Mrs. Charles Inches, Mr. Clayton Johns, Dr. Jack, Mr. Clarence Hollander and party and Mr. Arthur Silsbee were also in the crowd of well-known people around the tables. A bit of picturesqueness was added to the scene by Mr. Frank Seabury and his party, including Mrs. Inches and Mr. Fred Silsbee, who came in their bicycle costumes, and very fit and becoming they were. By the way, Mr. Comee, who seems to have thought of everything for the comfort of his patrons, in small as well as large ways, has made provision for checking wheels, as it is getting to be quite the thing to ride in on them from the near country.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 24, 1896.

In consequence of Music Hall having been previously engaged for Anniversary week service the Promenade Concerts will be suspended for four nights, resuming on Friday evening May 29. The following is the programme for that evening, which is Bicycle Night, and which will be seen is in the form of an acrostic.

Boccaccio March	Suppe
Iolanthe Overture	Sullivan
Cagliostro Waltz	Strauss
Y's Le Roi De, Overture	Lalo
Cavalleria Rusticana	Mascagni
Largo	Haende
Solo Violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
Erminie. Selection	Jakobowsky
Narcissus	Nevin
Ipagliacci. Intermezzo.	Leoncavallo
Grubenlichter Waltz	Zeller
Herzen Koenigin Polka	Strauss
Tabasco March	Chadwick

Bicycles will be checked free.

FOUR NIGHTS LOST.

Alackaday! Alackaday!
Where shall we pleasure seek
Till Friday night? The "Pops" give way
To Anniversary Week!

—Mrs. John L. Gardner, with a party of friends, was at the promenade concert Wednesday evening. Mrs. Gardner wore a becoming gown of blue mohair with revers of white satin and touches of gold. Her hat was of white straw laden with flowers. The Misses Shattuck and Isadore Bragiotti accompanied Mrs. Gardner. The Shattucks were attired one in a cloth gown of changeable tan and purple, with a large hat trimmed with green, and the other in purple crepon with a small hat. Others in the house were Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Spinney with Mrs. Bartlett, Dr. Dunham with party, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Mr. and Mrs. Ratshesky, Mr. Killalee and Mr. David Lithgoe, Mr. Parker C. Chandler, Mr. Charles L. Vialle, Mrs. Gurney, Mr. David Barry, Mr. Grant Stewart and Mr. Karl Breneman and party.

—The promenade concerts grow more and more popular each year, and are attended by no end of people. Bicyclists consider it a favorite rendezvous, and after a spin through the Fens enjoy an evening at Music Hall. Mr. Comee having made arrangements to check bicycles free, which is certainly a great accommodation to lovers of wheeling. One of the balcony tables was occupied on Tuesday evening, by a party of cyclists including Mrs. Charles Inches, Mr. Frank Seabury and Mr. Fred Silsbee, all of whom were in bicycling togs, while others in the house were Mrs. W. G. Wakefield, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. R. Peabody with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burnham, Mrs. Alice Kent Robinson, Mr. Shroeder and Mr. Stasny, Miss Henrietta Sargent, Mr. George Norman, Mr. George von L. Meyer, Mr. Bragiotti, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Denny, Miss Nostrand, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bemis, Mr. and Mrs. Morton E. Cobb, Mr. Leighton Beale, Mr. S. Hooper Hooper, Mr. Robert Came, Mr. Charles Robbins, Mrs. Sawyer, Mr. Charles Hayden, Mr. Fred Brackett and Mr. Sidney Brackett, Mr. O. D. Mann and Mrs. Max Zach with Mr. Harold Going.

—Friday was the banner night of the season at the promenade concert, and the audience was one of unusual brilliance. First and foremost was Mrs. Gardner in a gown of yellowish crepon, with white dots, combined with violet velvet. Her yellow straw hat was trimmed with yellow chiffon and wings. Mrs. Gardner's party consisted of Mr. Gardner, Miss Lena Little and Mr. John L. Higginson. Miss Little wore a grey silk gown, veiled with changeable gauze, and a large hat of black and white. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burnham had with them Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ely. Mrs. Burnham was in grey with trimmings of white lace. Mrs. William Hooper (Miss Elsie Perkins), who was escorted by Mr. Hooper, looked very chic in a gown of pale yellow silk striped with black. Colonel and Mrs. Edmands were conspicuous figures on Friday Mrs. Edmands being richly and becomingly attired in a gown of black and white striped silk, trimmed with white lace, and a small bonnet of black and white. Mrs. George Stoddard, one of Boston's fashionable and really elegant women, wore a bodice of Cashmere silk, relieved with pale blue satin ribbon, a dark skirt, and a large white hat with black wings. Others in the house were Mr. Stoddard, Judge Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beebe, Mr. Herbert Leeds and Mrs. Leeds, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Field, Colonel John T. Wheelwright, Miss Linzee, Mrs. J. P. Sutherland, Mr. Franklin Roberts, Mrs. Ronald A. Stuart, Mr. Fred Brackett, Mr. Ward M. Tenney, Miss Gertrude Ball, Miss Ball and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Taylor, Jr., with party of friends.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1896.

A SPECIAL BICYCLE POP.

On Friday Evening, May 29, a Curious and Special Programme.

The manager of the "Pop" concerts has made arrangements for a "bicycle night" on next Friday evening, when the following special programme will be offered. Please observe the initial letters of the pieces.

"Boccaccio" March	Suppé
"Iolanthe," Overture	Sullivan
"Cagliostro," Waltz	Strauss
"Y's, le roi de," Overture	Lalo
"Cavalleria Rusticana," Intermezzo	Mascagni
Largo	Haendel
Solo Violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
"Erminie," Selection	Jakobowsky
"Narcissus"	Nevin
"I Pagliacci," Selection	Leoncavallo
"Grubenlichter," Waltz	Zeller
"Herzens Koenigin," Polka	Strauss
"Tabasco" March	Chadwick

ly, a week ago, which was op" until Friday, Mr. Charles child, whose business interests have kept him so much in New York this year, was at a table with his daughter, Miss Sally Fairchild, and several of her friends. Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper were there with a party, including Miss "Peggy" Perkins and Mr. George Rice, Mrs. Apthorp was with a table full of friends, Dr. George H. Monks had a party, and so did Mr. T. C. Hollander.

TOWN TOPICS.

(From Town Topics.)

The dearth of weddings, owing to the general superstition respecting the month of May, the hiatus between seasons, and the storing up of energy for the forthcoming Country Club spring race meeting, have continued to make a very dull week in Boston. The one well in the desert was the "Pop" concerts. Hitherto, with occasional lapses, the great and only Timotheus Adamowski, Boston's very own, has wielded the conductor's baton at these functions, and there was a general feeling of misgiving on the opening night until it became evident that "there were others," and that Mr. Max Zach understood his business. Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, the omnipresent, was very visible the first night, having a small party, including Miss Olga Gardner, her niece, and Mr. Charles Sampson, that obliging Achates who, in the absence of brighter lights, always flickers at Mrs. Jack's side. A "flock of Hoopers" gleamed conspicuously from the balcony, Mrs. "Bob" and Mrs. "Billy," very airily togged out, as usual. Mrs. William F. Apthorp—or, as she wishes to be called, plain Mrs. Apthorp, since in her case there are no others—was with the Iasigis and wore a really remarkable hat.

I missed Mrs. Fiske Warren, the Titianesque aspirant to the glories of the stage, who is dubbed La dame aux Chapeaux, owing to her wonderful collection of headgear. It is said of her that she experiences a distinct emotion when bargaining for a bonnet. At one of the central tables I saw Mrs. William Fay and Miss Katherine Fay, with Holker Abbott and Gordon Dexter, and not far off was Mrs. Charles Inches, who is still considered by some to be one of the "Hub Beauties." Mrs. Arthur Richmond and her husband were the best-looking people in the place, and Miss Anna Palfrey and Bryce Allan the most talked about, owing to their lofty seats in the social sanhedrin and their approaching marriage, which takes place June 2 at Beverly Farms.

Miss Charlotte Houston, who has been prodigiously puffed by obscure paragraphers as a great beauty, looked very nice indeed, I thought. Miss Houston's renown is entirely due to a chance remark made by me several months ago, that on one occasion she reminded me of Mrs. George Curzon, during her belleship as Miss Mary Leiter. Of course Harvard—straw-hatted and summer-shirted—turned out in great shape, as did one or two of those now famous athletes fresh from Olympian victories and the hospitalities of King George. But where was the airy sect of the "Visionists" this year—that little coterie of young men who pride themselves upon their individuality to the exclusion of social laws. I missed their staccato chatter and the probing of the ego. Where, too, was George Santayana, the social arbiter of Harvard, the maker of sonnets and the professor of ethical esthetics? And "Dick" Hovey, of the Daudet mane and Maeterlinckian mania? I felt constrained to cry with the Spanish proverb: "There are no birds in last year's nests."

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 144.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

Patrons of the Music Hall promenade concerts are reminded that there will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week, owing to annual engagement of the hall during anniversary week. They will reopen on Friday, the 29th. An unusually attractive programme has been arranged by Conductor Zach for this evening, as follows:

March, "Excelsior, Jr."	Tracey
Overture, "Sphinx"	Thompson
Waltz, "Espana"	Waldteufel
Selection, "Beggar Student"	Millocker
Introduction to Act III., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
"Love's Dream After the Ball"	Czibulka
Two Hungarian dances	Brahms
Overture, "William Tell"	Rossini
Selection, "Robin Hood"	De Koven
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Tyrolean polka	Zeller
March, "Poor Jonathan"	Millocker

The Boston Commercial.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

The Promenade Concerts.

The attendance at the concerts at Music Hall this week has been very large and lovers of music have had much that was admirable placed before them. The programmes of the week have met the popular demand in every respect and the music has been interpreted by the orchestra in a most artistic manner. Mr. Zach, the new leader, has won considerable reputation already and the programmes arranged by him retain the high art level that has always distinguished these thoroughly pleasant affairs. It is very evident that these concerts are to be more popular if anything, than ever, as they have started in upon their eleventh season with unusual brilliancy.

[illegible] PAGES.

TABLE GOSSIP.

[illegible] and somewhat decorously the first "pop" concert opened in Music hall on Monday. Not until near the final number did the audience bestir itself with any degree of enthusiasm, when it suddenly awoke to the consciousness of having a really clever leader in Mr Max Zach, whose efforts were warmly approved by the Mrs Gardner set and the fringe of college boys on the inner edge of the outer circle—of tables. It was distinctively a representative gathering from various walks in life and with many new faces. Not until 9 o'clock was the fashionable element in evidence. A little before 9 Mrs Gardner entered, accompanied by Miss Olga Gardner and friends. She was met by Mr Charles Sampson, who had preceded her with a large party of jolly folks, who occupied two tables close by. Mrs Gardner was gowned in a white silk, with fine black stripes, the upper bodice covered with a valenciennes lace collarette. She wore a broad toque of black, with a mass of foliage and bright flowers, a black lace veil and white dressed kid gloves. Miss Gardner wore a bodice of pompadour silk, with old rose satin shoulder knots, and large hat. Mrs William P. Fay chaperoned a large party occupying two tables, and which included Miss Eleanor Shattuck, Miss Emery and Miss Kittie Fay. Mrs Fay was attended by her brother, Mr Holker Abbott, who was one of several well-known society men who sat at the Gardner table for awhile. Elsewhere in the ring were noted Mr Lawrence Haughton, Mrs Curtis Guild Jr, her sister, Miss Johnson, and party, Dr Wolff, Miss Aagot Lunde, Mr Filene, Mr and Mrs H. Staples Potter, Mr Harry Potter and his fiance, Mrs Phinehas Adams, Mr Karl Brenemen, Mr and Mrs Henry Benjamin Temby, Miss Anna S. Robbins, Mr L. A. Hayden, Mr Walter De Land Came, Mr Mahlon C. Spaulding, Mr John B. Abbott, Mr Gordon Dexter, Prof George Santayana, Mr William F. Rotch, Dr and Mrs Charles Inches and Mr Jack Tilden. A large and pleasnat party occupied two tables on the outskirts chaperoned by Mrs Alfred Hudson of New York, consisting of Miss Louise and Miss Bessie Hart Mackintosh, Miss Lotta Britton, Messrs Alfred and Harry Mackintosh of Brookline, Mr Thomas Stead Nelson, Mr Joseph Heilbrun, Mr G. Ernest Fales and Mr Lewis Proctor of Harvard and Tufts colleges. In the balcony nearly over the clock was the Hooper table, with Mrs William Hooper, a striking figure in her maize and black-striped silk and small bonnet, with one ripe, red rose set coquettishly on the side. Facing her sat Mrs Robert Hooper, in a very smart gown, with glittering steel and jet, and a Parisian toque of eminence purple velvet and jet. Messrs Robert and William Hooper added much to the dignity of that section of the balcony. At nearly corresponding tables to the Hoopers, at the other side of the hall, were Mr and Mrs William H. Sherman of Commonwealth av, with Mr and Mrs Jere Williams. Others noted were Mrs Frederick Galloupe, Mrs Charles H. Stevens, Mrs Fred R. Comee, Mr Carl Sobeski, Miss Frances Crowe, Mrs Alice E. Cram, Mr Alexander Higginson and Mr and Mrs Arthur Richmond.

—Tuesday night more warmth was shown at the Music hall "pops," the attendance being quite as large as on the opening night, and the same fashionable tardiness displayed. Mr Bryce Allan won the distinction of appearing in the only white vest and white tie of any one in attendance. With the utmost nonchalance Mr Allan sat throughout the evening, quite unconscious of the many remarks of the boys on his faultless attire and on the stylish appearance of his fiancee, Miss Anna Palfrey, who was by all odds the most fetching in appearance of any of the ladies. Miss Palfrey wore a black thin crepon made over burnt orange silk, the bodice yoke of rich white embroidery, with "Vs" extending to waist line, the effect reproduced on the modish skirt. Her hat was of soft cream white material, relieved by touches of green velvet, while directly in front, resting on the flat crown, was a white winged bird. In the party were Hon George von L. Meyer and Mr and Mrs Herbert M. Sears, the latter in a dark blue white-spotted foulard silk, relieved by a yoke of white embroidery over white. Her hat was medium sized, composed of black jetted lace and a cluster of black ostrich tips. Nearer the stage Mrs M. A. Friend chaperoned her daughter and her fiance, Mr Leo Meilzinger. Mr and Mrs A. A. Wadleigh, with Mr and Mrs William H. Prior, occupied a ring table. Others noted were Mr and Mrs Henry Clay Barnabee, Mr Edward Jones and party and Miss Barnabee.

[illegible] Mr and Mrs Harry Burnham, Mr Arthur Burnham, Mr Edward Gray, Mr and Mrs W. F. Apthorp, Miss Charlotte Houston, Mr Frank Seabury, Mr Herbert M. Sears, Mr Matthew Luce, Mr Clayton Johns, Mr W. P. Blake and Mr and Mrs Eban Stanwood and party. Thursday night there were present among others Mr Herman Duryea and party, Mr Philip Saltonstall, Mr and Mrs Robert Hooper, Mr and Mrs Frank Lee, Mrs H. L. Higginson, Mr Alex. H. Higginson, Mr C. P. Curtis, Mr and Mrs Franz Zerrahn, Mr Bryce J. Allan and party, Mr Harry Wainwright and Mr Isidore Braggiotti. Mr John Duff, Mr S. Gannett Wells, Mr George Nelson, Mr J. R. Kendrick, Mr Richard D. Ware, Mr Harry S. Chapman, all with friends, were noticed Friday night. The "pops" are more popular than ever. Tomorrow night is the 574th concert.

Music Hall Promenades.

The season of promenade concerts at Music hall has already become a notable one, inasmuch as the spacious hall is not only filled every evening, including seats at the tables, but novelties are constantly being produced by the well trained orchestra and its accomplished leader, Mr Max Zach. The audiences the past week have included the elite of the city, the bright summer costumes of the ladies adding considerable brilliancy to the scene. Those who have neglected visiting these popular entertainments should improve the first opportunity, as the season by far is all too short and one visit usually makes one want to repeat it.

The program tomorrow evening will be as follows:

Swedish Wedding March	Soedermann
Overture, Mignon	A. Thomas
Waltz, Fesche Geister	Strauss
Selection, Gondoliers	Sullivan
Scherzo, Notturno and Wedding March	Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from Naila	Delibes
Entree Triomphale Des Bayards	Joh. Halvorsen
Mazourka from Halka	Moniuszko
Overture, Le Brasseur de Preston	Adam
Waltz, O Schoner Mai from Prince Methusalem	Strauss
Jockey Galop	Bayer
March, Under the Double Eagle	Wagner

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 140.

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The season of the "Pop" concerts at Music Hall is fairly under way, and the attendance is steadily large. Last night there was another fine audience to listen to the admirable music prepared for the occasion by Mr. Max Zach, who is showing a special gift in that direction, and is giving some of the most attractive and well-arranged programmes that have ever been heard at these concerts. The selections for tonight are:

March, "Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
Overture, "Fra Diavolo"	Auber
Waltz, "Cagliostro"	Strauss
Finale to act I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
Suite No. 1	E. A. MacDowell
The Deluge Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.	Saint-Saens
Pizzicati	Gillet
Two Hungarian dances	Brahms
Overture, "Zampa"	Herold
Waltz, "Pomone"	Waldteufel
Mazourka, "Le Coeur des Femmes"	Joh. Strauss
Radetzky March	Joh. Strauss, Sr.

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

Music Hall Promenades.

The second week of the promenade concerts began in Music hall last evening with an attendance that plainly indicated a warm temperature out of doors, for the audience was one of the largest of the season. Conductor Zach has arranged the following program for this evening:

March, Queen of Sheba	Gounod
Overture, Fra Diavolo	Auber
Waltz, Cagliostro	Strauss
Finale to Act I, Lohengrin	Wagner
Suite No. 1	E A MacDowell
The Deluge Solo violin, Mr Schnitzler.	Saint-Saens
Pizzicati	Gillet
Two Hungarian Dances	Brahms
Overture, Zampa	Herold
Waltz, Pomone	Waldteufel
Mazourka, Le Cœur des Femmes	Joh Strauss
Radetzky March	Joh Strauss Sr

Boston Transcript

WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

The programme for the promenade concert in Music Hall, this evening, has been arranged as follows:

Polonaise	Chopin
Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse"	Offenbach
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Selection, "La Fille de Mme. Angot"	Lecocq
L'Arlesienne, No. 1	Bizet
Traeumerei	Schumann
Perpetuum Mobile	Strauss
(a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust"	Berlioz
[illegible] "Beautiful Galatea"	Suppé
[illegible]	Knight
[illegible]	Strauss
[illegible]	[illegible]

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

* * *

The eleventh season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall opened the 11th. Mr. Max Zach then made his début here as a conductor. The program included a march and two waltzes, overtures by Nicolai and Adam, Liszt's polonaise in E, Massenet's Scènes pittoresques, pot-pourris, &c. Mr. Zach conducted with firmness and taste.

Have you ever seen Boston unbending at a Pop. concert? To the earnest student of sociology it is a pathetic sight. Some in the audience glare because there is the sound of talking and laughter while the band plays. I fear these lovers of music miss sadly the analytical programs of Brother Apthorp, and they listen intently, as though they expected an examination before departure. There are some who drink beer furtively, as though they were snatching a horrid joy. The trouble with these concerts is that the audiences are not educated down to them. There should be preparatory lectures on the Art of Listening to Light Music. I should not be surprised if some of the frequenters petitioned for a "symphony night" each week. Lord, Lord, this dreary cant about the educational power of music, and how even at a promenade concert the mind may be corrupted by immoral overtures and dissipated dances!

There are some who look skew-eyed at the drinkers of beer. At such concerts, however a good musician can get along without music, but he must have beer. Or, as a friend said the other night as he saw pretty women smiling—whose names by the way are not in the Blue Book—and honest fellows drinking beer and blowing tobacco smoke, "This would be very pleasant, if it were not for the music." It appears that music irritates him, dags him, to use his own expression. I confess I do not share his opinion. To me amiable or jolly music with beer recalls the maxim of William Maginn: "As to the beautiful mutual adaptation of cold rum and cold water, that is beyond all praise, and indeed forms a theme of never ceasing admiration, being one of Nature's most exquisite achievements."

"This Country, with its Institutions, Belongs to the People who Inhabit it."

BOSTON EVENING RECORD.

"POPS" TONIGHT.

An attractive programme will be given by Mr. Max Zach and his excellent orchestra at the "Pops" this evening. The bright costumes of the ladies are a very potent factor in the brilliant ensemble. The programme:—

Polonaise, Chopin; Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse," Offenbach; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot," Lecocq; L'Aarlesienne, No. 1, Bizet; Traeumerei, Schumann; Perpetuum Mobile, Strauss; (a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz; overture, "Beautiful Galatea," Suppe; waltz, "Obispah," Knight; polka, "The Mill," Strauss; Flag March, Zichrer.

BOSTON POST.

Tonight and Saturday evening will be the only opportunity to listen to the fine music of the Promenade Orchestra at Music Hall for nearly a week, as there will be no concerts next week on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, owing to annual engagement of the hall. They will continue without interruption commencing Friday, May 29. A very attractive programme has been arranged for this evening.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

Established 1813.

The Official Paper of the State.

The Official Paper of the City.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 22, 1896.

THE PROMENADES.

This season the promenade concerts at Music Hall promise to surpass all others in attendance and popularity, judging from the enthusiasm shown each evening. There will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, owing to the annual engagements of Music Hall.

The programme for this evening is: Boccaccio march, Suppe; overture, "Stradella," Flotow; waltz, "Thousand and One Nights," Strauss; selection, "Fencing-master," De Koven; Marcia Alla Turca, Beethoven; a. scherzo waltz, b. malaguena, from "Boabdil," Moszkowski; La Colombe, Gounod; invitation to dance, Weber-Berlioz; overture, "Light Cavalry," Suppe; waltz, "Avec Lui," Mackay; polka from "Puppenfee," (first time), Bayer; march, "Tzigane," Lacome.

Boston Daily Globe.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

Special notice is given to the patrons of the Music hall "pops" that there will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. They will resume Friday evening and continue without interruption. The program for this evening is as follows: March, "Excelsior Jr," Tracey; Overture, "Sphinx," Thompson; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel; selection, "Beggar Student," Millocker; introduction to act 3, "Lohengrin," Wagner; "Love's Dream After the Ball," Czibulka; two Hungarian dances, Brahms; overture, "William Tell," Rossini; selection, "Robin Hood," de Koven; waltz, "Grubenlichter," Zeller; Tyrolean polka, Zeller; march, "Poor Jonathan," Millocker.

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1896.

SUMMER MUSIC.

Patrons of the Music Hall "pops" are reminded that commencing next week there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuseday, Wednesday and Thursday, owing to annual engagements of Music Hall in anniversary week. The concerts will resume on Friday evening, May 29, and continue each evening until close of season. The following attractive program will be given this evening:

Boccaccio March	Suppe
Overture, "Stradella"	Flotow
Waltz, "Thousand and One Nights"	Strauss
Selection, "Fencing Master"	De Koven
Marcia Alla Turca	Beethoven
a, Scherzo Waltz; b, Malaguena, from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
La Colombe	Gounod
Invitation to Dance	Weber-Berlioz
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppe
Waltz, "Avec Lui"	Mackay
Polka from "Puppenfee" (First time.)	Bayer
March, "Tzigane"	Lacome

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The first week of the 11th season of these popular entertainments began last Monday evening as natural as ever. Democracy of enthusiasm and smoke pervaded the scenes. The orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Max Zach, never played better. The programs have had an unusual attractiveness, including a number of novelties, and Mr. Zach promises many more, together with the most popular selections of past seasons. The program for tomorrow night is as follows:

Swedish wedding march	Soedermann
Overture—"Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz—"Fesche Geister"	Strauss
Selection—"Gondoliers"	Sullivan
Scherzo, notturno and wedding march	Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from "Naila"	Delibes
Entree Triomphale des Bayards (First time.)	Joh. Halvorsen
Mazourka from "Halka" (First time.)	Moniuszko
Overture—"Le Brasseur de Preston"	Adam
Waltz—"O Schoner Mai," from "Prince Methusalem"	Strauss
Jockey galop (First time.)	Bayer
March—"Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

The Worst on record!!

THE CORRECT THING.

"The airs are very correctly played at the 'Pops' at Music Hall by the orchestra."

"Yes, they've got 'em Max Zach-ly right every time."

Boston Courier
Sunday May 17

SUNDAY, [illegible] 189[illegible]

FORTY-[illegible] PAGES.

TABLE GOSSIP.

[illegible] and somewhat decorously the first "pop" concert opened in Music hall on Monday. Not until near the final number did the audience bestir itself with any degree of enthusiasm, when it suddenly awoke to the consciousness of having a really clever leader in Mr Max Zach, whose efforts were warmly approved by the Mrs Gardner set and the fringe of college boys on the inner edge of the outer circle—of tables. It was distinctively a representative gathering from various walks in life and with many new faces. Not until 9 o'clock was the fashionable element in evidence. A little before 9 Mrs Gardner entered, accompanied by Miss Olga Gardner and friends. She was met by Mr Charles Sampson, who had preceded her with a large party of jolly folks, who occupied two tables close by. Mrs Gardner was gowned in a white silk, with fine black stripes, the upper bodice covered with a valenciennes lace collarette. She wore a broad toque of black, with a mass of foliage and bright flowers, a black lace veil and white dressed kid gloves. Miss Gardner wore a bodice of pompadour silk, with old rose satin shoulder knots, and large hat. Mrs William P. Fay chaperoned a large party occupying two tables, and which included Miss Eleanor Shattuck, Miss Emery and Miss Kittie Fay. Mrs Fay was attended by her brother, Mr Holker Abbott, who was one of several well-known society men who sat at the Gardner table for awhile. Elsewhere in the ring were noted Mr Lawrence Haughton, Mrs Curtis Guild Jr, her sister, Miss Johnson, and party, Dr Wolff, Miss Aagot Lunde, Mr Filene, Mr and Mrs H. Staples Potter, Mr Harry Potter and his fiance, Mrs Phinehas Adams, Mr Karl Brenemen, Mr and Mrs Henry Benjamin Temby, Miss Anna S. Robbins, Mr L. A. Hayden, Mr Walter De Land Came, Mr Mahlon C. Spaulding, Mr John B. Abbott, Mr Gordon Dexter, Prof George Santayana, Mr William F. Rotch, Dr and Mrs Charles Inches and Mr Jack Tilden. A large and pleasnat party occupied two tables on the outskirts chaperoned by Mrs Alfred Hudson of New York, consisting of Miss Louise and Miss Bessie Hart Mackintosh, Miss Lotta Britton, Messrs Alfred and Harry Mackintosh of Brookline, Mr Thomas Stead Nelson, Mr Joseph Heilbrun, Mr G. Ernest Fales and Mr Lewis Proctor of Harvard and Tufts colleges. In the balcony nearly over the clock was the Hooper table, with Mrs William Hooper, a striking figure in her maize and black-striped silk and small bonnet, with one ripe, red rose set coquettishly on the side. Facing her sat Mrs Robert Hooper, in a very smart gown, with glittering steel and jet, and a Parisian toque of eminence purple velvet and jet. Messrs Robert and William Hooper added much to the dignity of that section of the balcony. At nearly corresponding tables to the Hoopers, at the other side of the hall, were Mr and Mrs William H. Sherman of Commonwealth av, with Mr and Mrs Jere Williams. Others noted were Mrs Frederick Galloupe, Mrs Charles H. Stevens, Mrs Fred R. Comee, Mr Carl Sobeski, Miss Frances Crowe, Mrs Alice E. Cram, Mr Alexander Higginson and Mr and Mrs Arthur Richmond.

—Tuesday night more warmth was shown at the Music hall "pops," the attendance being quite as large as on the opening night, and the same fashionable tardiness displayed. Mr Bryce Allan won the distinction of appearing in the only white vest and white tie of any one in attendance. With the utmost nonchalance Mr Allan sat throughout the evening, quite unconscious of the many remarks of the boys on his faultless attire and on the stylish appearance of his fiancee, Miss Anna Palfrey, who was by all odds the most fetching in appearance of any of the ladies. Miss Palfrey wore a black thin crepon made over burnt orange silk, the bodice yoke of rich white embroidery, with "Vs" extending to waist line, the effect reproduced on the modish skirt. Her hat was of soft cream white material, relieved by touches of green velvet, while directly in front, resting on the flat crown, was a white winged bird. In the party were Hon George von L. Meyer and Mr and Mrs Herbert M. Sears, the latter in a dark blue white-spotted foulard silk, relieved by a yoke of white embroidery over white. Her hat was medium sized, composed of black jetted lace and a cluster of black ostrich tips. Nearer the stage Mrs M. A. Friend chaperoned her daughter and her fiance, Mr Leo Meltzinger. Mr and Mrs A. A. Wadleigh, with Mr and Mrs William H. Prior, occupied a ring table. Others noted were Mr and Mrs Henry Clay Barnabee, Mr Edward Jones and party and Miss Barnabee.

[illegible] Mr and Mrs Harry Burnham, Mr Arthur Burnham, Mr Edward Gray, Mr and Mrs W. F. Apthorp, Miss Charlotte Houston, Mr Frank Seabury, Mr Herbert M. Sears, Mr Matthew Luce, Mr Clayton Johns, Mr W. P. Blake and Mr and Mrs Eben Stanwood and party. Thursday night there were present among others Mr Herman Duryea and party, Mr Philip Saltonstall, Mr and Mrs Robert Hooper, Mr and Mrs Frank Lee, Mrs H. L. Higginson, Mr Alex. H. Higginson, Mr C. P. Curtis, Mr and Mrs Franz Zerrahn, Mr Bryce J. Allan and party, Mr Harry Wainwright and Mr Isidore Braggiotti. Mr John Duff, Mr S. Gannett Wells, Mr George Nelson, Mr J. R. Kendrick, Mr Richard D. Ware, Mr Harry S. Chapman, all with friends, were noticed Friday night. The "pops" are more popular than ever. Tomorrow night is the 574th concert.

Music Hall Promenades.

The season of promenade concerts at Music hall has already become a notable one, inasmuch as the spacious hall is not only filled every evening, including seats at the tables, but novelties are constantly being produced by the well trained orchestra and its accomplished leader, Mr Max Zach. The audiences the past week have included the elite of the city, the bright summer costumes of the ladies adding considerable brilliancy to the scene. Those who have neglected visiting these popular entertainments should improve the first opportunity, as the season by far is all too short and one visit usually makes one want to repeat it.

The program tomorrow evening will be as follows:

Swedish Wedding March	Soedermann
Overture, Mignon	A. Thomas
Waltz, Fesche Geister	Strauss
Selection, Gondoliers	Sullivan
Scherzo, Notturno and Wedding March	Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from Naila	Delibes
Entree Triomphale Des Bayards	Joh. Halvorsen
Mazourka from Halka	Moniuszko
Overture, Le Brasseur de Preston	Adam
Waltz, O Schoner Mai from Prince Methusalem	Strauss
Jockey Galop	Bayer
March, Under the Double Eagle	Wagner

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 140.

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The season of the "Pop" concerts at Music Hall is fairly under way, and the attendance is steadily large. Last night there was another fine audience to listen to the admirable music prepared for the occasion by Mr. Max Zach, who is showing a special gift in that direction, and is giving some of the most attractive and well-arranged programmes that have ever been heard at these concerts. The selections for tonight are:

March, "Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
Overture, "Fra Diavolo"	Auber
Waltz, "Cagliostro"	Strauss
Finale to act I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
Suite No. 1	E. A. MacDowell
The Deluge	Saint-Saens
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
Pizzicati	Gillet
Two Hungarian dances	Brahms
Overture, "Zampa"	Herold
Waltz, "Pomone"	Waldteufel
Mazourka, "Le Coeur des Femmes"	Joh. Strauss
Radetzky March	Joh. Strauss, Sr.

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

Music Hall Promenades.

The second week of the promenade concerts began in Music hall last evening with an attendance that plainly indicated a warm temperature out of doors, for the audience was one of the largest of the season. Conductor Zach has arranged the following program for this evening:

March, Queen of Sheba	Gounod
Overture, Fra Diavolo	Auber
Waltz, Cagliostro	Strauss
Finale to Act I, Lohengrin	Wagner
Suite No. 1	E A MacDowell
The Deluge	Saint-Saens
Solo violin, Mr Schnitzler.
Pizzicati	Gillet
Two Hungarian Dances	Brahms
Overture, Zampa	Herold
Waltz, Pomone	Waldteufel
Mazourka, Le Cœur des Femmes	Joh Strauss
Radetzky March	Joh Strauss Sr

Boston Transcript

WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

The programme for the promenade concert in Music Hall, this evening, has been arranged as follows:

Polonaise	Chopin
Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse"	Offenbach
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Selection, "La Fille de Mme. Angot"	Lecocq
L'Arlesienne, No. 1	Bizet
Traeumerei	Schumann
Perpetuum Mobile	Strauss
(a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hon[illegible] "Damnation of Faust"	Berlioz
Overture, "Beautiful Galatea"	Suppé
[illegible]	Knight
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

* * *

The eleventh season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall opened the 11th. Mr. Max Zach then made his début here as a conductor. The program included a march and two waltzes, overtures by Nicolai and Adam, Liszt's polonaise in E, Massenet's Scènes pittoresques, pot-pourris, &c. Mr. Zach conducted with firmness and taste.

Have you ever seen Boston unbending at a Pop. concert? To the earnest student of sociology it is a pathetic sight. Some in the audience glare because there is the sound of talking and laughter while the band plays. I fear these lovers of music miss sadly the analytical programs of Brother Apthorp, and they listen intently, as though they expected an examination before departure. There are some who drink beer furtively, as though they were snatching a horrid joy. The trouble with these concerts is that the audiences are not educated down to them. There should be preparatory lectures on the Art of Listening to Light Music. I should not be surprised if some of the frequenters petitioned for a "symphony night" each week. Lord, Lord, this dreary cant about the educational power of music, and how even at a promenade concert the mind may be corrupted by immoral overtures and dissipated dances!

There are some who look skew-eyed at the drinkers of beer. At such concerts, however a good musician can get along without music, but he must have beer. Or, as a friend said the other night as he saw pretty women smiling—whose names by the way are not in the Blue Book—and honest fellows drinking beer and blowing tobacco smoke, "This would be very pleasant, if it were not for the music." It appears that music irritates him, dags him, to use his own expression. I confess I do not share his opinion. To me amiable or jolly music with beer recalls the maxim of William Maginn: "As to the beautiful mutual adaptation of cold rum and cold water, that is beyond all praise, and indeed forms a theme of never ceasing admiration, being one of Nature's most exquisite achievements."

"This Country, with Its Institutions, Belongs to the People who Inhabit It."

BOSTON EVENING RECORD.

"POPS" TONIGHT.

An attractive programme will be given by Mr. Max Zach and his excellent orchestra at the "Pops" this evening. The bright costumes of the ladies are a very potent factor in the brilliant ensemble. The programme:—

Polonaise, Chopin; Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse," Offenbach; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot," Lecocq; L'Aarlesienne, No. 1, Bizet; Traeumerei, Schumann; Perpetuum Mobile, Strauss; (a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz; overture, "Beautiful Galatea," Suppe; waltz, "Obispah," Knight; polka, "The Mill," Strauss; Flag March, Zichrer.

BOSTON POST.

Tonight and Saturday evening will be the only opportunity to listen to the fine music of the Promenade Orchestra at Music Hall for nearly a week, as there will be no concerts next week on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, owing to annual engagement of the hall. They will continue without interruption commencing Friday, May 29. A very attractive programme has been arranged for this evening.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 22, 1896.

THE PROMENADES.

This season the promenade concerts at Music Hall promise to surpass all others in attendance and popularity, judging from the enthusiasm shown each evening. There will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, owing to the annual engagements of Music Hall.

The programme for this evening is: Boccacio march, Suppe; overture, "Stradella," Flotow; waltz, "Thousand and One Nights," Strauss; selection, "Fencing-master," De Koven; Marcia Alla Turca, Beethoven; a. scherzo waltz, b. malaguena, from "Boabdil," Moszkowski; La Colombe, Gounod; invitation to dance, Weber-Berlioz; overture, "Light Cavalry," Suppe; waltz, "Avec Lui," Mackay; polka from "Puppenfee," (first time), Bayer; march, "Tzigane," Lacome.

Boston Daily Globe.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

Special notice is given to the patrons of the Music hall "pops" that there will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. They will resume Friday evening and continue without interruption. The program for this evening is as follows: March, "Excelsior Jr," Tracey; Overture, "Sphinx," Thompson; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel; selection, "Beggar Student," Millocker; introduction to act 3, "Lohengrin," Wagner; "Love's Dream After the Ball," Czibulka; two Hungarian dances, Brahms; overture, "William Tell," Rossini; selection, "Robin Hood," de Koven; waltz, "Grubenlichter," Zeller; Tyrolean polka, Zeller; march, "Poor Jonathan," Millocker.

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1896.

SUMMER MUSIC.

Patrons of the Music Hall "pops" are reminded that commencing next week there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuseday, Wednesday and Thursday, owing to annual engagements of Music Hall in anniversary week. The concerts will resume on Friday evening, May 29, and continue each evening until close of season. The following attractive program will be given this evening:

Boccaccio March	Suppe
Overture, "Stradella"	Flotow
Waltz, "Thousand and One Nights"	Strauss
Selection, "Fencing Master"	De Koven
Marcia Alla Turca	Beethoven
a, Scherzo Waltz; b, Malaguena, from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
La Colombe	Gounod
Invitation to Dance	Weber-Berlioz
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppe
Waltz, "Avec Lui"	Mackay
Polka from "Puppenfee"	Bayer
(First time.)
March, "Tzigane"	Lacome

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The first week of the 11th season of these popular entertainments began last Monday evening as natural as ever. Democracy of enthusiasm and smoke pervaded the scenes. The orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Max Zach, never played better. The programs have had an unusual attractiveness, including a number of novelties, and Mr. Zach promises many more, together with the most popular selections of past seasons. The program for tomorrow night is as follows:

Swedish wedding march	Soedermann
Overture—"Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz—"Fesche Geister"	Strauss
Selection—"Gondoliers"	Sullivan
Scherzo, notturno and wedding march	Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from "Naila"	Delibes
Entree Triomphale des Bayards	Joh. Halvorsen
(First time.)
Mazourka from "Halka"	Moniuszko
(First time.)
Overture—"Le Brasseur de Preston"	Adam
Waltz—"O Schoner Mai," from "Prince Methusalem"	Strauss
Jockey galop	Bayer
(First time.)
March—"Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

The Worst on record!!

THE CORRECT THING.

"The airs are very correctly played at the 'Pops' at Music Hall by the orchestra."

"Yes, they've got 'em Max Zach-ly right every time."

Boston Courier Sunday May 17

[165]

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

FORTY-FOUR PAGES.

TABLE GOSSIP.

Quietly and somewhat decorously the first "pop" concert opened in Music hall on Monday. Not until near the final number did the audience bestir itself with any degree of enthusiasm, when it suddenly awoke to the consciousness of having a really clever leader in Mr Max Zach, whose efforts were warmly approved by the Mrs Gardner set and the fringe of college boys on the inner edge of the outer circle—of tables. It was distinctively a representative gathering from various walks in life and with many new faces. Not until 9 o'clock was the fashionable element in evidence. A little before 9 Mrs Gardner entered, accompanied by Miss Olga Gardner and friends. She was met by Mr Charles Sampson, who had preceded her with a large party of jolly folks, who occupied two tables close by. Mrs Gardner was gowned in a white silk, with fine black stripes, the upper bodice covered with a valenciennes lace collarette. She wore a broad toque of black, with a mass of foliage and bright flowers, a black lace veil and white dressed kid gloves. Miss Gardner wore a bodice of pompadour silk, with old rose satin shoulder knots, and large hat. Mrs William P. Fay chaperoned a large party occupying two tables, and which included Miss Eleanor Shattuck, Miss Emery and Miss Kittie Fay. Mrs Fay was attended by her brother, Mr Holker Abbott, who was one of several well-known society men who sat at the Gardner table for awhile. Elsewhere in the ring were noted Mr Lawrence Haughton, Mrs Curtis Guild Jr, her sister, Miss Johnson, and party, Dr Wolff, Miss Aagot Lunde, Mr Filene, Mr and Mrs H. Staples Potter, Mr Harry Potter and his fiance, Mrs Phinehas Adams, Mr Karl Brenemen, Mr and Mrs Henry Benjamin Temby, Miss Anna S. Robbins, Mr L. A. Hayden, Mr Walter De Land Came, Mr Mahlon C. Spaulding, Mr John B. Abbott, Mr Gordon Dexter, Prof George Santayana, Mr William F. Rotch, Dr and Mrs Charles Inches and Mr Jack Tilden. A large and pleasnat party occupied two tables on the outskirts chaperoned by Mrs Alfred Hudson of New York, consisting of Miss Louise and Miss Bessie Hart Mackintosh, Miss Lotta Britton, Messrs Alfred and Harry Mackintosh of Brookline, Mr Thomas Stead Nelson, Mr Joseph Heilbrun, Mr G. Ernest Fales and Mr Lewis Proctor of Harvard and Tufts colleges. In the balcony nearly over the clock was the Hooper table, with Mrs William Hooper, a striking figure in her maize and black-striped silk and small bonnet, with one ripe, red rose set coquettishly on the side. Facing her sat Mrs Robert Hooper, in a very smart gown, with glittering steel and jet, and a Parisian toque of eminence purple velvet and jet. Messrs Robert and William Hooper added much to the dignity of that section of the balcony. At nearly corresponding tables to the Hoopers, at the other side of the hall, were Mr and Mrs William H. Sherman of Commonwealth av, with Mr and Mrs Jere Williams. Others noted were Mrs Frederick Galloupe, Mrs Charles H. Stevens, Mrs Fred R. Comee, Mr Carl Sobeski, Miss Frances Crowe, Mrs Alice E. Cram, Mr Alexander Higginson and Mr and Mrs Arthur Richmond.

—Tuesday night more warmth was shown at the Music hall "pops," the attendance being quite as large as on the opening night, and the same fashionable tardiness displayed. Mr Bryce Allan won the distinction of appearing in the only white vest and white tie of any one in attendance. With the utmost nonchalance Mr Allan sat throughout the evening, quite unconscious of the many remarks of the boys on his faultless attire and on the stylish appearance of his fiancee, Miss Anna Palfrey, who was by all odds the most fetching in appearance of any of the ladies. Miss Palfrey wore a black thin crepon made over burnt orange silk, the bodice yoke of rich white embroidery, with "Vs" extending to waist line, the effect reproduced on the modish skirt. Her hat was of soft cream white material, relieved by touches of green velvet, while directly in front, resting on the flat crown, was a white winged bird. In the party were Hon George von L. Meyer and Mr and Mrs Herbert M. Sears, the latter in a dark blue white-spotted foulard silk, relieved by a yoke of white embroidery over white. Her hat was medium sized, composed of black jetted lace and a cluster of black ostrich tips. Nearer the stage Mrs M. A. Friend chaperoned her daughter and her fiance, Mr Leo Meilzinger. Mr and Mrs A. A. Wadleigh, with Mr and Mrs William H. Prior, occupied a ring table. Others noted were Mr and Mrs Henry Clay Barnabee, Mr Edward Jones and party and Miss Barnabee.

[illegible] this past week [illegible] there been [illegible] "pop concert" weather, but Music hall has been filled nevertheless. Among [illegible] noticed on Wednesday night were Mr and Mrs Harry Burnham, Mr Arthur Burnham, Mr Edward Gray, Mr and Mrs W. F. Apthorp, Miss Charlotte Houston, Mr Frank Seabury, Mr Herbert M. Sears, Mr Matthew Luce, Mr Clayton Johns, Mr W. P. Blake and Mr and Mrs Eben Stanwood and party. Thursday night there were present among others Mr Herman Duryea and party, Mr Philip Saltonstall, Mr and Mrs Robert Hooper, Mr and Mrs Frank Lee, Mrs H. L. Higginson, Mr Alex. H. Higginson, Mr C. P. Curtis, Mr and Mrs Franz Zerrahn, Mr Bryce J. Allan and party, Mr Harry Wainwright and Mr Isidore Braggiotti. Mr John Duff, Mr S. Gannett Wells, Mr George Nelson, Mr J. R. Kendrick, Mr Richard D. Ware, Mr Harry S. Chapman, all with friends, were noticed Friday night. The "pops" are more popular than ever. Tomorrow night is the 574th concert.

—Hon. [illegible]

Music Hall Promenades.

The season of promenade concerts at Music hall has already become a notable one, inasmuch as the spacious hall is not only filled every evening, including seats at the tables, but novelties are constantly being produced by the well trained orchestra and its accomplished leader, Mr Max Zach. The audiences the past week have included the elite of the city, the bright summer costumes of the ladies adding considerable brilliancy to the scene. Those who have neglected visiting these popular entertainments should improve the first opportunity, as the season by far is all too short and one visit usually makes one want to repeat it.

The program tomorrow evening will be as follows:

Swedish Wedding March ....Soedermann
Overture, Mignon ....A. Thomas
Waltz, Fesche Geister ....Strauss
Selection, Gondoliers ....Sullivan
Scherzo, Notturno and Wedding March
Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from Naila ....Delibes
Entree Triomphale Des Bayards .Joh. Halvorsen
Mazourka from Halka ....Moniuszko
Overture, Le Brasseur de Preston ....Adam
Waltz, O Schoner Mai from Prince Methusalem ....Strauss
Jockey Galop ....Bayer
March, Under the Double Eagle ....Wagner

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 140.

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The season of the "Pop" concerts at Music Hall is fairly under way, and the attendance is steadily large. Last night there was another fine audience to listen to the admirable music prepared for the occasion by Mr. Max Zach, who is showing a special gift in that direction, and is giving some of the most attractive and well-arranged programmes that have ever been heard at these concerts. The selections for tonight are:

March, "Queen of Sheba"..............Gounod
Overture, "Fra Diavolo"..................Auber
Waltz, "Cagliostro"......................Strauss
Finale to act I., "Lohengrin"..........Wagner
Suite No. 1...................E. A. MacDowell
The Deluge......................Saint-Saens
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
Pizzicati.................................Gillet
Two Hungarian dances...................Brahms
Overture, "Zampa"......................Herold
Waltz, "Pomone"....................Waldteufel
Mazourka, "Le Coeur des Femmes".Joh. Strauss
Radetzky March..............Joh. Strauss, Sr.

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

Music Hall Promenades.

The second week of the promenade concerts began in Music hall last evening with an attendance that plainly indicated a warm temperature out of doors, for the audience was one of the largest of the season. Conductor Zach has arranged the following program for this evening:

March, Queen of Sheba................ Gounod
Overture, Fra Diavolo.................... Auber
Waltz, Cagliostro.................... Strauss
Finale to Act I, Lohengrin............Wagner
Suite No. 1.................... E A MacDowell
The Deluge ....Saint-Saens
Solo violin, Mr Schnitzler.
Pizzicati.................................. Gillet
Two Hungarian Dances.................. Brahms
Overture, Zampa......................... Herold
Waltz, Pomone...................... Waldteufel
Mazourka, Le Cœur des Femmes ...Joh Strauss
Radetzky March.................. Joh Strauss Sr

Boston Transcript

WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

The programme for the promenade concert in Music Hall, this evening, has been arranged as follows:

Polonaise..................................Chopin
Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse".....Offenbach
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"........................Strauss
Selection, "La Fille de Mme. Angot".....Lecocq
L'Arlesienne, No. 1............................Bizet
Trauemerei..............................Schumann
Perpetuum Mobile..........................Strauss
(a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust".....Berlioz
Overture, "Beautiful Galatea"...............Suppé
Waltz, "Obispah"...........................Knight
Polka, "The Mill"............................Strauss
Flag March.................................Ziehrer

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

* * *

The eleventh season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall opened the 11th. Mr. Max Zach then made his début here as a conductor. The program included a march and two waltzes, overtures by Nicolai and Adam, Liszt's polonaise in E, Massenet's Scènes pittoresques, pot-pourris, &c. Mr. Zach conducted with firmness and taste.

Have you ever seen Boston unbending at a Pop. concert? To the earnest student of sociology it is a pathetic sight. Some in the audience glare because there is the sound of talking and laughter while the band plays. I fear these lovers of music miss sadly the analytical programs of Brother Apthorp, and they listen intently, as though they expected an examination before departure. There are some who drink beer furtively, as though they were snatching a horrid joy. The trouble with these concerts is that the audiences are not educated down to them. There should be preparatory lectures on the Art of Listening to Light Music. I should not be surprised if some of the frequenters petitioned for a "symphony night" each week. Lord, Lord, this dreary cant about the educational power of music, and how even at a promenade concert the mind may be corrupted by immoral overtures and dissipated dances!

There are some who look skew-eyed at the drinkers of beer. At such concerts, however a good musician can get along without music, but he must have beer. Or, as a friend said the other night as he saw pretty women smiling—whose names by the way are not in the Blue Book—and honest fellows drinking beer and blowing tobacco smoke, "This would be very pleasant, if it were not for the music." It appears that music irritates him, dags him, to use his own expression. I confess I do not share his opinion. To me amiable or jolly music with beer recalls the maxim of William Maginn: "As to the beautiful mutual adaptation of cold rum and cold water, that is beyond all praise, and indeed forms a theme of never ceasing admiration, being one of Nature's most exquisite achievements."

"This Country, with its institutions, Belongs to the People who Inhabit it."

BOSTON EVENING RECORD.

"POPS" TONIGHT.

An attractive programme will be given by Mr. Max Zach and his excellent orchestra at the "Pops" this evening. The bright costumes of the ladies are a very potent factor in the brilliant ensemble. The programme:—

Polonaise, Chopin; Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse," Offenbach; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot," Lecocq; L'Aarlesienne, No. 1, Bizet; Traeumerei, Schumann; Perpetuum Mobile, Strauss; (a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz; overture, "Beautiful Galatea," Suppe; waltz, "Obispah," Knight; polka, "The Mill," Strauss; Flag March, Zichrer.

BOSTON POST,

......

Tonight and Saturday evening will be the only opportunity to listen to the fine music of the Promenade Orchestra at Music Hall for nearly a week, as there will be no concerts next week on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, owing to annual engagement of the hall. They will continue without interruption commencing Friday, May 29. A very attractive programme has been arranged for this evening.

......

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

Established 1813.

The Official Paper of the State.

The Official Paper of the City.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 22, 1896.

THE PROMENADES.

This season the promenade concerts at Music Hall promise to surpass all others in attendance and popularity, judging from the enthusiasm shown each evening. There will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, owing to the annual engagements of Music Hall.

The programme for this evening is: Boccaccio march, Suppe; overture, "Stradella," Flotow; waltz, "Thousand and One Nights," Strauss; selection, "Fencing-master," De Koven; Marcia Alla Turca, Beethoven; a. scherzo waltz, b. malaguena, from "Boabdil," Moszkowski; La Colombe, Gounod; invitation to dance, Weber-Berlioz; overture, "Light Cavalry," Suppe; waltz, "Avec Lui," Mackay; polka from "Puppenfee," (first time), Bayer; march, "Tzigane," Lacome.

Boston Daily Globe.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

Special notice is given to the patrons of the Music hall "pops" that there will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. They will resume Friday evening and continue without interruption. The program for this evening is as follows: March, "Excelsior Jr," Tracey; Overture, "Sphinx," Thompson; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel; selection, "Beggar Student," Millocker; introduction to act 3, "Lohengrin," Wagner; "Love's Dream After the Ball," Czibulka; two Hungarian dances, Brahms; overture, "William Tell," Rossini; selection, "Robin Hood," de Koven; waltz, "Grubenlichter," Zeller; Tyrolean polka, Zeller; march, "Poor Jonathan," Millocker.

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1896.

SUMMER MUSIC.

Patrons of the Music Hall "pops" are reminded that commencing next week there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuseday, Wednesday and Thursday, owing to annual engagements of Music Hall in anniversary week. The concerts will resume on Friday evening, May 29, and continue each evening until close of season. The following attractive program will be given this evening:

Boccaccio March.............................Suppe
Overture, "Stradella"......................Flotow
Waltz, "Thousand and One Nights" Strauss
Selection, "Fencing Master"........De Koven
Marcia Alla Turca.....................Beethoven
a, Scherzo Waltz; b, Malaguena, from "Boabdil" ....Moszkowski
La Colombe...............................Gounod
Invitation to Dance.............Weber-Berlioz
Overture, "Light Cavalry"..............Suppe
Waltz, "Avec Lui".......................Mackay
Polka from "Puppenfee"................Bayer
(First time.)
March, "Tzigane"......................Lacome

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The first week of the 11th season of these popular entertainments began last Monday evening as natural as ever. Democracy of enthusiasm and smoke pervaded the scenes. The orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Max Zach, never played better. The programs have had an unusual attractiveness, including a number of novelties, and Mr. Zach promises many more, together with the most popular selections of past seasons. The program for tomorrow night is as follows:

Swedish wedding march...........Soedermann
Overture—"Mignon"................A. Thomas
Waltz—"Fesche Geister"...............Strauss
Selection—"Gondoliers" ....Sullivan
Scherzo, notturno and wedding march.. .... Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from "Naila".............Delibes
Entree Triomphale des Bayards......... ....Joh. Halvorsen
(First time.)
Mazourka from "Halka"...........Moniuszko
(First time.)
Overture—"Le Brasseur de Preston"..Adam
Waltz—"O Schoner Mai," from "Prince Methusalem" ....Strauss
Jockey galop...........................Bayer
(First time.)
March—"Under the Double Eagle"....Wagner

The Worst on [illegible]!!

THE CORRECT THING.

"The airs are very correctly played at the 'Pops' at Music Hall by the orchestra."

"Yes, they've got 'em Max Zach-ly right every time."

Boston Courier
Sunday May 17

[165]

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

FORTY-FOUR PAGES.

TABLE GOSSIP.

—Quietly and somewhat decorously the first "pop" concert opened in Music hall on Monday. Not until near the final number did the audience bestir itself with any degree of enthusiasm, when it suddenly awoke to the consciousness of having a really clever leader in Mr Max Zach, whose efforts were warmly approved by the Mrs Gardner set and the fringe of college boys on the inner edge of the outer circle—of tables. It was distinctively a representative gathering from various walks in life and with many new faces. Not until 9 o'clock was the fashionable element in evidence. A little before 9 Mrs Gardner entered, accompanied by Miss Olga Gardner and friends. She was met by Mr Charles Sampson, who had preceded her with a large party of jolly folks, who occupied two tables close by. Mrs Gardner was gowned in a white silk, with fine black stripes, the upper bodice covered with a valenciennes lace collarette. She wore a broad toque of black, with a mass of foliage and bright flowers, a black lace veil and white dressed kid gloves. Miss Gardner wore a bodice of pompadour silk, with old rose satin shoulder knots, and large hat. Mrs William P. Fay chaperoned a large party occupying two tables, and which included Miss Eleanor Shattuck, Miss Emery and Miss Kittie Fay. Mrs Fay was attended by her brother, Mr Holker Abbott, who was one of several well-known society men who sat at the Gardner table for awhile. Elsewhere in the ring were noted Mr Lawrence Haughton, Mrs Curtis Guild Jr, her sister, Miss Johnson, and party, Dr Wolff, Miss Aagot Lunde, Mr Filene, Mr and Mrs H. Staples Potter, Mr Harry Potter and his fiance, Mrs Phinehas Adams, Mr Karl Brenemen, Mr and Mrs Henry Benjamin Temby, Miss Anna S. Robbins, Mr L. A. Hayden, Mr Walter De Land Came, Mr Mahlon C. Spaulding, Mr John B. Abbott, Mr Gordon Dexter, Prof George Santayana, Mr William F. Rotch, Dr and Mrs Charles Inches and Mr Jack Tilden. A large and pleasnat party occupied two tables on the outskirts chaperoned by Mrs Alfred Hudson of New York, consisting of Miss Louise and Miss Bessie Hart Mackintosh, Miss Lotta Britton, Messrs Alfred and Harry Mackintosh of Brookline, Mr Thomas Stead Nelson, Mr Joseph Heilbrun, Mr G. Ernest Fales and Mr Lewis Proctor of Harvard and Tufts colleges. In the balcony nearly over the clock was the Hooper table, with Mrs William Hooper, a striking figure in her maize and black-striped silk and small bonnet, with one ripe, red rose set coquettishly on the side. Facing her sat Mrs Robert Hooper, in a very smart gown, with glittering steel and jet, and a Parisian toque of eminence purple velvet and jet. Messrs Robert and William Hooper added much to the dignity of that section of the balcony. At nearly corresponding tables to the Hoopers, at the other side of the hall, were Mr and Mrs William H. Sherman of Commonwealth av, with Mr and Mrs Jere Williams. Others noted were Mrs Frederick Galloupe, Mrs Charles H. Stevens, Mrs Fred R. Comee, Mr Carl Sobeski, Miss Frances Crowe, Mrs Alice E. Cram, Mr Alexander Higginson and Mr and Mrs Arthur Richmond.

—Tuesday night more warmth was shown at the Music hall "pops," the attendance being quite as large as on the opening night, and the same fashionable tardiness displayed. Mr Bryce Allan won the distinction of appearing in the only white vest and white tie of any one in attendance. With the utmost nonchalance Mr Allan sat throughout the evening, quite unconscious of the many remarks of the boys on his faultless attire and on the stylish appearance of his fiancee, Miss Anna Palfrey, who was by all odds the most fetching in appearance of any of the ladies. Miss Palfrey wore a black thin crepon made over burnt orange silk, the bodice yoke of rich white embroidery, with "Vs" extending to waist line, the effect reproduced on the modish skirt. Her hat was of soft cream white material, relieved by touches of green velvet, while directly in front, resting on the flat crown, was a white winged bird. In the party were Hon George von L. Meyer and Mr and Mrs Herbert M. Sears, the latter in a dark blue white-spotted foulard silk, relieved by a yoke of white embroidery over white. Her hat was medium sized, composed of black jetted lace and a cluster of black ostrich tips .Nearer the stage Mrs M. A. Friend chaperoned her daughter and her fiance, Mr Leo Meilzinger. Mr and Mrs A. A. Wadleigh, with Mr and Mrs William H. Prior, occupied a ring table. Others noted were Mr and Mrs Henry Clay Barnabee, Mr Edward Jones and party and Miss Barnabee.

[illegible] this past week has there been real "pop concert" weather, but Music hall has been filled nevertheless. Among those noticed on Wednesday night were Mr and Mrs Harry Burnham, Mr Arthur Burnham, Mr Edward Gray, Mr and Mrs W. F. Apthorp, Miss Charlotte Houston, Mr Frank Seabury, Mr Herbert M. Sears, Mr Matthew Luce, Mr Clayton Johns, Mr W. P. Blake and Mr and Mrs Eben Stanwood and party. Thursday night there were present among others Mr Herman Duryea and party, Mr Philip Saltonstall, Mr and Mrs Robert Hooper, Mr and Mrs Frank Lee, Mrs H. L. Higginson, Mr Alex. H. Higginson, Mr C. P. Curtis, Mr and Mrs Franz Zerrahn, Mr Bryce J. Allan and party, Mr Harry Wainwright and Mr Isidore Braggiotti. Mr John Duff, Mr S. Gannett Wells, Mr George Nelson, Mr J. R. Kendrick, Mr Richard D. Ware, Mr Harry S. Chapman, all with friends, were noticed Friday night. The "pops" are more popular than ever. Tomorrow night is the 574th concert.

——Hon. [illegible]

Music Hall Promenades.

The season of promenade concerts at Music hall has already become a notable one, inasmuch as the spacious hall is not only filled every evening, including seats at the tables, but novelties are constantly being produced by the well trained orchestra and its accomplished leader, Mr Max Zach. The audiences the past week have included the elite of the city, the bright summer costumes of the ladies adding considerable brilliancy to the scene. Those who have neglected visiting these popular entertainments should improve the first opportunity, as the season by far is all too short and one visit usually makes one want to repeat it.

The program tomorrow evening will be as follows:

Swedish Wedding March	Soedermann
Overture, Mignon	A. Thomas
Waltz, Fesche Geister	Strauss
Selection, Gondoliers	Sullivan
Scherzo, Notturno and Wedding March	Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from Naila	Delibes
Entree Triomphale Des Bayards	Joh. Halvorsen
Mazourka from Halka	Moniuszko
Overture, Le Brasseur de Preston	Adam
Waltz, O Schoner Mai from Prince Methusalem	Strauss
Jockey Galop	Bayer
March, Under the Double Eagle	Wagner

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 140.

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The season of the "Pop" concerts at Music Hall is fairly under way, and the attendance is steadily large. Last night there was another fine audience to listen to the admirable music prepared for the occasion by Mr. Max Zach, who is showing a special gift in that direction, and is giving some of the most attractive and well-arranged programmes that have ever been heard at these concerts. The selections for tonight are:

March, "Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
Overture, "Fra Diavolo"	Auber
Waltz, "Cagliostro"	Strauss
Finale to act I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
Suite No. 1	E. A. MacDowell
The Deluge	Saint-Saens
Solo violin, Mr. Schnitzler.
Pizzicati	Gillet
Two Hungarian dances	Brahms
Overture, "Zampa"	Herold
Waltz, "Pomone"	Waldteufel
Mazourka, "Le Coeur des Femmes"	Joh. Strauss
Radetzky March	Joh. Strauss, Sr.

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1896.

Music Hall Promenades.

The second week of the promenade concerts began in Music hall last evening with an attendance that plainly indicated a warm temperature out of doors, for the audience was one of the largest of the season. Conductor Zach has arranged the following program for this evening:

March, Queen of Sheba	Gounod
Overture, Fra Diavolo	Auber
Waltz, Cagliostro	Strauss
Finale to Act I, Lohengrin	Wagner
Suite No. 1	E A MacDowell
The Deluge	Saint-Saens
Solo violin, Mr Schnitzler.
Pizzicati	Gillet
Two Hungarian Dances	Brahms
Overture, Zampa	Herold
Waltz, Pomone	Waldteufel
Mazourka, Le Cœur des Femmes	Joh Strauss
Radetzky March	Joh Strauss Sr

Boston Transcript

WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

The programme for the promenade concert in Music Hall, this evening, has been arranged as follows:

Polonaise	Chopin
Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse"	Offenbach
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Selection, "La Fille de Mme. Angot"	Lecocq
L'Arlesienne, No. 1	Bizet
Trauemerei	Schumann
Perpetuum Mobile	Strauss
(a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust"	Berlioz
Overture, "Beautiful Galatea"	Suppe
Waltz, "Obispah"	Knight
Polka, "The Mill"	Strauss
Flag March	Ziehrer

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

* * *

The eleventh season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall opened the 11th. Mr. Max Zach then made his début here as a conductor. The program included a march and two waltzes, overtures by Nicolai and Adam, Liszt's polonaise in E, Massenet's Scènes pittoresques, pot-pourris, &c. Mr. Zach conducted with firmness and taste.

Have you ever seen Boston unbending at a Pop. concert? To the earnest student of sociology it is a pathetic sight. Some in the audience glare because there is the sound of talking and laughter while the band plays. I fear these lovers of music miss sadly the analytical programs of Brother Apthorp, and they listen intently, as though they expected an examination before departure. There are some who drink beer furtively, as though they were snatching a horrid joy. The trouble with these concerts is that the audiences are not educated down to them. There should be preparatory lectures on the Art of Listening to Light Music. I should not be surprised if some of the frequenters petitioned for a "symphony night" each week. Lord, Lord, this dreary cant about the educational power of music, and how even at a promenade concert the mind may be corrupted by immoral overtures and dissipated dances!

There are some who look skew-eyed at the drinkers of beer. At such concerts, however a good musician can get along without music, but he must have beer. Or, as a friend said the other night as he saw pretty women smiling—whose names by the way are not in the Blue Book—and honest fellows drinking beer and blowing tobacco smoke, "This would be very pleasant, if it were not for the music." It appears that music irritates him, dags him, to use his own expression I confess I do not share his opinion. To me amiable or jolly music with beer recalls the maxim of William Maginn: "As to the beautiful mutual adaptation of cold rum and cold water, that is beyond all praise, and indeed forms a theme of never ceasing admiration, being one of Nature's most exquisite achievements."

"This Country, with its institutions, Belongs to the People who Inhabit it."

BOSTON EVENING RECORD.

"POPS" TONIGHT.

An attractive programme will be given by Mr. Max Zach and his excellent orchestra at the "Pops" this evening. The bright costumes of the ladies are a very potent factor in the brilliant ensemble. The programme:—

Polonaise, Chopin; Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse," Offenbach; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot," Lecocq; L'Aarlesienne, No. 1, Bizet; Traeumerei, Schumann; Perpetuum Mobile, Strauss; (a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz; overture, "Beautiful Galatea," Suppe; waltz, "Obispah," Knight; polka, "The Mill," Strauss; Flag March, Zichrer.

BOSTON POST,

......

Tonight and Saturday evening will be the only opportunity to listen to the fine music of the Promenade Orchestra at Music Hall for nearly a week, as there will be no concerts next week on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, owing to annual engagement of the hall. They will continue without interruption commencing Friday, May 29. A very attractive programme has been arranged for this evening.

......

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

Established 1813.

The Official Paper of the State.

The Official Paper of the City.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 22, 1896.

THE PROMENADES.

This season the promenade concerts at Music Hall promise to surpass all others in attendance and popularity, judging from the enthusiasm shown each evening. There will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, owing to the annual engagements of Music Hall.

The programme for this evening is: Boccaccio march, Suppe; overture, "Stradella," Flotow; waltz, "Thousand and One Nights," Strauss; selection, "Fencing-master," De Koven; Marcia Alla Turca, Beethoven; a. scherzo waltz, b. malaguena, from "Boabdil," Moszkowski; La Colombe, Gounod; invitation to dance, Weber-Berlioz; overture, "Light Cavalry," Suppe; waltz, "Avec Lui," Mackay; polka from "Puppenfee," (first time), Bayer; march, "Tzigane," Lacome.

Boston Daily Globe.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

Special notice is given to the patrons of the Music hall "pops" that there will be no concerts on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. They will resume Friday evening and continue without interruption. The program for this evening is as follows: March, "Excelsior Jr," Tracey; Overture, "Sphinx," Thompson; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel; selection, "Beggar Student," Millocker; introduction to act 3, "Lohengrin," Wagner; "Love's Dream After the Ball," Czibulka; two Hungarian dances, Brahms; overture, "William Tell," Rossini; selection, "Robin Hood," de Koven; waltz, "Grubenlichter," Zeller; Tyrolean polka, Zeller; march, "Poor Jonathan," Millocker.

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1896.

SUMMER MUSIC.

Patrons of the Music Hall "pops" are reminded that commencing next week there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuseday, Wednesday and Thursday, owing to annual engagements of Music Hall in anniversary week. The concerts will resume on Friday evening, May 29, and continue each evening until close of season. The following attractive program will be given this evening:

Boccaccio March	Suppe
Overture, "Stradella"	Flotow
Waltz, "Thousand and One Nights"	Strauss
Selection, "Fencing Master"	De Koven
Marcia Alla Turca	Beethoven
a, Scherzo Waltz; b, Malaguena, from "Boabdil"	Moszkowski
La Colombe	Gounod
Invitation to Dance	Weber-Berlioz
Overture, "Light Cavalry"	Suppe
Waltz, "Avec Lui"	Mackay
Polka from "Puppenfee" (First time.)	Bayer
March, "Tzigane"	Lacome

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The first week of the 11th season of these popular entertainments began last Monday evening as natural as ever. Democracy of enthusiasm and smoke pervaded the scenes. The orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Max Zach, never played better. The programs have had an unusual attractiveness, including a number of novelties, and Mr. Zach promises many more, together with the most popular selections of past seasons. The program for tomorrow night is as follows:

Swedish wedding march	Soedermann
Overture—"Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz—"Fesche Geister"	Strauss
Selection—"Gondoliers"	Sullivan
Scherzo, notturno and wedding march	Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from "Nalla"	Delibes
Entree Triomphale des Bayards (First time.)	Joh. Halvorsen
Mazourka from "Halka" (First time.)	Moniuszko
Overture—"Le Brasseur de Preston"	Adam
Waltz—"O Schoner Mai," from "Prince Methusalem"	Strauss
Jockey galop (First time.)	Bayer
March—"Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

The Worst on record!!

THE CORRECT THING.

"The airs are very correctly played at the 'Pops' at Music Hall by the orchestra."

"Yes, they've got 'em Max Zach-ly right every time."

Boston Courier
Sunday May 17

POPS.

Visit Paid by Som of the Ancients.

It Was a Delight for Lorenzo, of the Medicis.

But What of Socrates, Confucius and of Boadicea?

"Now there's something I never noticed before," said Lorenzo di Medici, stopping in front of Park Street Church the other night. "Did you, Conny?"

"Just a minute, Lorenzo," Confucius answered; "my foot's caught in a pedal. Perdition seize these shoes Antony sent me! I haven't had a good scorch for a week. Have you tried any of his wares?"

"No. Bother you and your scorching, anyway!" remarked Lorenzo. "I thought you said you'd quit talking about your wheels and your golf suits and the thousand and one other silly crotchets of yours."

"Now, now, Lorenzo," said Confucius, soothingly; "don't be hard on your old tandem partner. Have you forgotten thus quickly the recent day on which we licked the sandals off Nero and his friend Sue—Sue—oh, what's his name?"

"Confucius," said Lorenzo, determinedly and solemnly, ignoring the question, "if you'll hush this whirligig prattle of yours I'll let you talk your confounded philosophy at me all tomorrow evening. Now that's a fair condition, isn't it? I never saw (addressing himself) in my born days a man made so loquacious by a couple of glasses of that Rhenish stuff and seltzer. But tell me, Conny," he pursued, looking up and down Tremont Street, "where are Socrates and Boadicea? I thought they were going to follow us in a Cross Town car."

"Well, I counseled them not to be so dilatory. It's a sign of pure luxury and indolence to ride in one of those cars."

As he spoke thus Confucius released his foot from the clamping pedal, and, looking down Hamilton Place, in which direction di Medici had called attention, opened his mouth in astonishment. Then he put on his spectacles, and, fastening a bold stare upon the sight, blinked not for five minutes. At the end of the five minutes he withdrew his stare, took off his spectacles, shut his mouth, pulled up his stockings and stammered to his companion (who was still watching for the missing):

"Lorenzo, th-this is wha-wha-what the moderns call a 'find.'"

"A what?"

"A 'find.' You recall the expression, don't you? If I mistake not, Cleopatra, receiving the attentions of certain estimable gentlemen of Rome, first used it. It was current among the royal families in your day. Now it is in common use."

"I'll accept your word, Con, though I'm ignorant of the facts which you relate. I suppose the expression's philosophical."

This gravity was too much for Confucius, who, doffing his fore-'n-aft, laughed into it secretly for the space of a dozen original Chinese thoughts.

"Weary with wisdom and wheeling as I know you to be," continued di Medici, "I am selfish enough in my pursuit of jollity to propose spending an hour or so beyond that blazing portico."

"But how about the others?"

"You must submit to the hare-and-hounds process again, that's all. Scatter another trail of your phosphorescent thoughts."

"It's positively municipal extravagance to diffuse thoughts for the benefit of those luxurists, Lorenzo; but I'll [illegible] circumstances as these."

And Confucius, trundling his bike and emitting the pyrotechnic thoughts which are common to most mad and abused men, walked slowly down the middle of the court. Di Medici met him under the sign, which, spelling with letters of Northern Lights' glory the words, "Promenade Concerts," had impelled the gay Italian to arrest his meandering. There, under these Aladdin lamps, the distinguished visitors were welcomed with the extension of all the spare glad hands of the concerts' acting manager.

The hall was filled with mirth-makers. Echoes of laughter and bright converse shot diagonally from floor to balcony, and from balcony to floor. Joyous music—the food of happiness—swelled from the platform. When it was hushed there rose the pop, pop, pop of bulging stoppers and the inspiriting clink of friendly glasses.

"Ah," sighed di Medici, "this is the next thing to the life of my youth." He shut his eyes, the better to imbibe new-found delight. "As I sit thus, Confucius," he mused, "I fancy myself once again in the hills of my native land. There are the same soft strains—so soft they seem the same—that whiled away my dreaming days; the same careless laughter, the same ever-familiar rattle of the drinking-bouts. Ah, those days, when I learned the songs and the dances of the rustics! Would that they—that even this—were a reality! But pardon me, Confucius. I burden you with my rambling talk. We're here to be gay, not sad; for, as I've always said,

> " 'Chi siamo lieto, sia.
> Di domari non c'e certezza.' "

"You're right, you're right, Lorenzo. The idea, your asking my pardon for thinking such thoughts! Oh, if I had dared to write as candidly as you, there would be fewer sour faces on the rice-banked Yank-tse Kiang, and less cretinous monarchs in the seats of their barbaric ancestors. Oh, between you and me, my queue wasn't always the plaything of bookworms," and he nudged his table-mate in the vicinage of the seventh rib.

"I'd never have suspected it, Con," said di Medici. "But then, it's better all around to know than to suspect. Here's the Queen."

The people seated within the aristocratic reservation were eyeing the passage through the main aisle of a masculine woman, a sort of (in the literal sense of the term) hermaphrodite. With an unconcern born of royal disregard for society's rules and regulations she went straight to the table at which Confucius and Di Medici were sitting, and (making her second successive slip) sat down without making the prescribed number of bows and scrapes. Thereafter no one but her companions and the sybarites who sat near the doors gave her even a passing look.

"And what does the fair lady of the Iceni think of this?" asked Confucius blandly.

"Seems to me it's pretty slow. If that fellow up there is hired to beat the drums, why doesn't he do it? I know what I'd do if he was a member of any procession of mine."

She looked daggers and scythes, and divers other implements at the whole band.

"Mercy, noble Queen," observed di Medici. "You mustn't think that this is a minstrel show. But where's Socrates?"

"Oh, he's out there in a doorway."

She pointed a prodigious forefinger toward Hamilton Place.

"He got a thought all of a sudden. He's as much of a nuisance as you are."

"I?" exclaimed Confucius, to whom she had very blankly addressed the comment. "I? Why I?" he persisted, turning to di Medici.

"Dunno," ejaculated Lorenzo.

"Oh," Boadicea snapped, "you have whee——"

"I thought I saw Socrates," said Di Medici, interrupting a promising bout of words. He knew that he didn't see Socrates; but, as fortune would have it, the inveterate philosopher, looking sheep-faced, just then happened through a doorway.

"You must excuse me, friends," he said, as he put his check in his pocket and seated himself. "It all started during a rapid transit blockade. I haven't had such spare thinking time for many an eon. This is not so much unlike the ancient times, is it? I mean, the spirit is not. I have seen this same hilarity at the houses of men like Agatho. But there is no flute girl; and the faces of serious-minded companions are wanting."

Neither di Medici nor Boadicea heeded what he said, though both looked him in the eye. The Orientalist was trying to enumerate the glasses of beer consuming at a table occupied by members of Harvard's advanced course in music. Weary, he gave up, and, addressing Socrates, said:

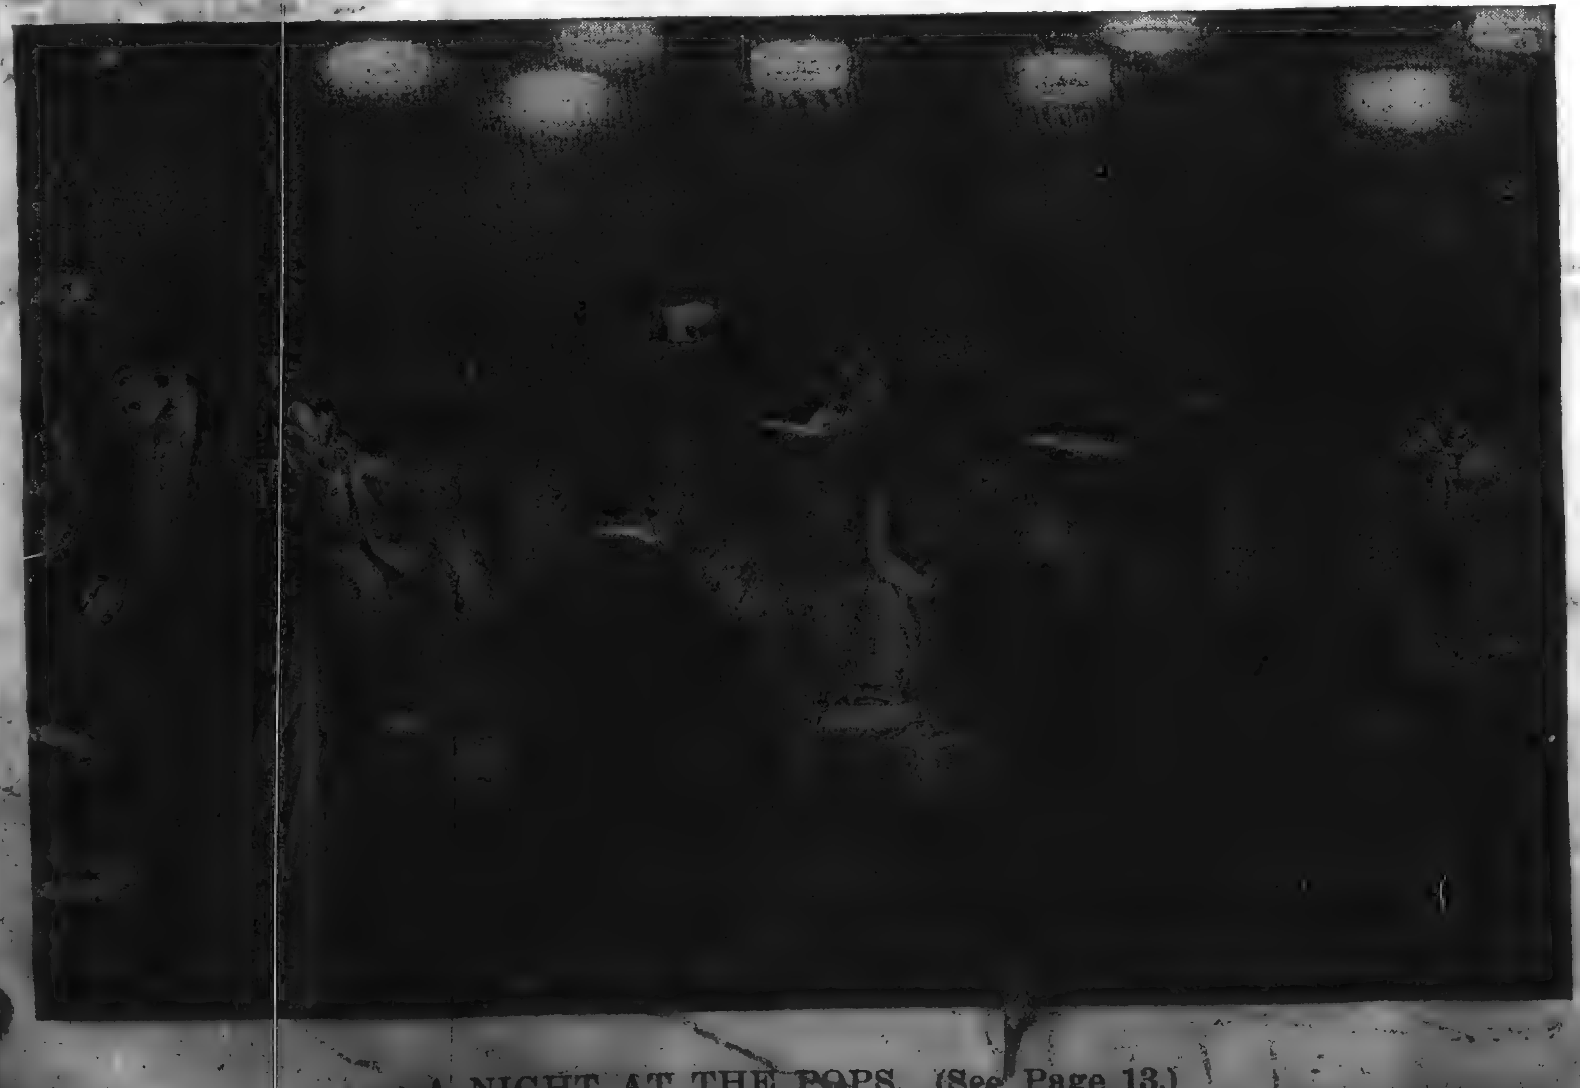
"My wise brother, I take it that you've been saying something. Take my advice; don't be guilty of such unseemly conduct again. Say nothing, but talk as much as you please. Behold the wisdom of the moderns (pointing to the thirsty students)! They work not; neither do they grind; and yet not even you, Lorenzo, are as gay as one of them."

"True, there is no Dean on Stygian Avenue to stare at me arcticly," responded the Florentine noble. "But (sotto voce to Con and Soc) we're slighting the Queen. Fair lady (you would say that he was accosting a vineyard beauty, so sweet was his voice's tone), did your eye ever see or your ear hear so much that is delightful?"

"Well, I should say so!" replied the Queen. "You evidently forget the picnic I had in London one night about eighteen and a half centuries ago! Perhaps we didn't have a circus with those centurions of Suetonius—us—us, or whatever his name was! Perhaps! Well—oh, this isn't in it. My friend, the Borgia woman, never dreamed of the swiftness of that night. Never, the hussy!"

"You're not in the muse, methinks, fair lady," said Lorenzo. "I didn't intend you to recall any of those pleasant butcheries in London town. But, Socrates, did you hear that celestial adagio? No? Still thinking? I wonder that you—And you, too, Confucius. Dreaming of your prosy old problems? Ah, woe is me! What company I have chosen. This place is the delight of delights! I would have the musicians crowned with ivy! A bottomless flagon would I give to each!

> "Happy be let him who may;
> There's nothing sure but of today!"



A NIGHT AT THE POPS. (See Page 13.)

(From Harper's Bazar. Copyright by Harper & Bros. Used by special permission.)

[106]

SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

A large and fashionable audience was present at the opening of the "Pops" on Monday evening under the direction of Max Zach. The new conductor was warmly greeted by his friends, and the excellent program which was presented was received with much enthusiasm. Society was well represented throughout the entire week, and among those present were Mrs. John L. Gardner and party, Mis Olga Gardner, Mr. Gordon Dexter, Mr. Lawrence Haughton, Prof. George Santayana of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mrs. and Miss Fay and Miss Emery, Miss Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper and party, Mr. Jack Tilden, Mr. William Bennett, Mr. William R. Rotch, Mrs. W. F. Apthorp, Mr. Alexander Higginson and party, Mr. James Kidder, Mr. Charles Sampson, Dr. and Mrs. Inches and Mr. and Mrs. Franz Kneisel.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.
Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.
WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 20, 1896.

POPULAR "POPS."

An attractive programme will be given by Mr. Max Zach and his excellent orchestra at the "Pops" this evening. The bright costumes of the ladies are a very potent factor in the brilliant ensemble. The programme:—

Polonaise, Chopin; Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse," Offenbach; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot," Lecocq; L'Aarlesienne, No. 1, Bizet; Traeumerei, Schumann; Perpetuum Mobile, Strauss; (a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz; overture, "Beauti[illegible]alatea," Suppe; waltz, "Obispah," [illegible]; polka, "The Mill," Strauss; Flag [illegible] Zichrer.

Boston Courier.
SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17, 1896.

MUSIC

THE "POPS" AGAIN.

The mercury may indulge in all the acrobatic climbings and "Niagara leaps" that it chooses; we may burn in one hour and freeze in the next; we may start out in the morning all well ulster-clad and go home to tea in our shirt sleeves; the stupids who supervise the West End car services may pack us into box-cars at noon because they have a bit of a chill, and then when they go home to get warm in bed make us brave grippe, pneumonia and all the rest of it by allowing only open cars until midnight;—all these things may puzzle even that well adjusted mind which is further fortified by a Farmer's Almanac. But there is one sign which tells us infallibly what season it is actually and ought to be in evidence. And that is the recommencement of the nightly "Pops"—which even the intelligent and Harvard-College-trained management still persists in calling Promenade Concerts, although nobody promenades except the waiters and, in the intermissions, the band. When these begin, then we know that early spring should have passed and the approach of summer is at hand; for long before midsummer is upon us their delightful epoch ends and the Music Hall is silent.

The eleventh season began prosperously on Monday evening, the hall being crowded and the general interest being proved by the fact that very few people left their places until late in the evening. Within the enclosed precinct sat many of the fashionable folk, some of whom have engaged places for the whole season, while every other table ground had been pre-empted almost from the opening of the hall. In point of fact, the one element of security in finding a chair and a corner at a table is the only advantage which that small central space can offer. You sit as snugly to your unknown neighbors, you absorb as much smoke and you yield as often to the close passage of the deft and civil waiters as if you sat outside; but you are sure of your place, and that is worth something.

The music is of course first rate and worth all the attention which many pay it unbroken. The repertory is large and new things are frequently added. The players being Symphony men, the effect of their discipline under Mr. Paur shows in the unity of their work in the simpler and lighter things here put before them. The conductor comes as a new man to the stand, although as a musician he has long been known and esteemed—Mr. Zach, the viola player. He is doing his work well—quietly, easily and authoritatively, and many numbers have made as great a popular effect under his undemonstrative baton as under the obviously wrought up direction of some of his predecessors.

HOWARD MALCOM TICKNOR.

——Last Monday evening is certainly to be counted among the "banner nights" of the season, for on that occasion, society was out in full force to listen to the first of the promenade concerts, sip refreshing iced drinks, and breathe the mingled aroma of cigars and cigarettes. Music Hall was prettily decorated with wreaths of laurel, branches of pine, and a huge mound of cut flowers at either end of the platform Among the audience was Mrs. John L. Gardner, in a white bodice and large hat trimmed with hunter's green, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Apthorp, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., with Mrs. Guild's sister, Miss Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. H. Staples Potter, Mrs. Wm. P. Fay and Miss Catherine Fay, Mr. and Mrs. Hooper (Elsie Perkins) Miss Gertrude Edmands, Mr. Charles Sampson, Miss Eleanor Shattuck, Miss Olga Gardner, Mrs. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Temby, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sherman, Mr. Holker Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Wolff, Dr. and Mrs. Inches, Miss Aagot Lunde, Mr. Lawrence Houghton, Miss Marian H. Brazier, Mrs. Fred Galloupe, Mr. Carl Sobeski, Mrs. C. H. Washburn, Mrs. Josiah Holden, Mr. Clarence Hollander, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. H. M. Ticknor, Mrs. Phineas Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Waite, Mrs. C. J. Stevens, Mr. Hollin Spaulding and Mr. Alfred Hudson who chaperoned a merry party consisting of Miss Bessie Hart Mackintosh, Miss Lotta Britton, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Joseph Heilbrun, Mr. Ernest Faies, Mr. Lewis Proctor, Mr. Alfred E. Mackintosh and Mr. Harry D. Mackintosh.

——[illegible]

Boston Journal.
TEN PAGES.
WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

THE "POPS."

The threatening weather of last night did not affect the attendance at the "Pops." Every seat at the reserved tables was sold, and many were obliged to sit in [illegible] balconies and see their friends partake of the light refreshments served from the tables. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Zach, played selections from Gounod, Auber, Strauss, Wagner, Massenet, Saint-Saens, Gillet, Brahms, Herold and Waldteufel. The program for this evening is:

Polonaise	Chopin
Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse"	Offenbac
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"	Straus
Selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot"	Leco
L'Arlesienne, No. 1	[illegible]
Traeumerei	Schu
Perpetuum Mobile	[illegible]
(a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hon- groise, from "Damnation of Faust"	[illegible]
Overture, "Beautiful Galatea"	[illegible]
Waltz, "Obispah"	[illegible]
Polka, "The Mill"	[illegible]
Flag March	[illegible]

"POPS."

Visit Paid by Son of the Ancients.

It Was a Delight for Lorenzo, of the Medicis.

But What of Socrates, Confucius and of Boadicea?

"Now there's something I never noticed before," said Lorenzo di Medici, stopping in front of Park Street Church the other night. "Did you, Conny?"

"Just a minute, Lorenzo," Confucius answered; "my foot's caught in a pedal. Perdition seize these shoes Antony sent me! I haven't had a good scorch for a week. Have you tried any of his wares?"

"No. Bother you and your scorching, anyway!" remarked Lorenzo. I thought you said you'd quit talking about your wheels and your golf suits and the thousand and one other silly crotchets of yours."

"Now, now, Lorenzo," said Confucius, soothingly; "don't be hard on your old tandem partner. Have you forgotten thus quickly the recent day on which we licked the sandals off Nero and his friend Sue—Sue—oh, what's his name?"

"Confucius," said Lorenzo, determinedly and solemnly, ignoring the question, "if you'll hush this whirligig prattle of yours I'll let you talk your confounded philosophy at me all tomorrow evening. Now that's a fair condition, isn't it? I never saw (addressing himself) in my born days a man made so loquacious by a couple of glasses of that Rhenish stuff and seltzer. But tell me, Conny," he pursued, looking up and down Tremont Street, "where are Socrates and Boadicea? I thought they were going to follow us in a Cross Town car."

"Well, I counseled them not to be so dilatory. It's a sign of pure luxury and indolence to ride in one of those cars."

As he spoke thus Confucius released his foot from the clamping pedal, and, looking down Hamilton Place, in which direction di Medici had called attention, opened his mouth in astonishment. Then he put on his spectacles, and, fastening a bold stare upon the sight, blinked not for five minutes. At the end of the five minutes he withdrew his stare, took off his spectacles, shut his mouth, pulled up his stockings and stammered to his companion (who was still watching for the missing):

"Lorenzo, th-this is wha-wha-what the moderns call a 'find.'"

"A what?"

"A 'find.' You recall the expression, don't you? If I mistake not, Cleopatra, receiving the attentions of certain estimable gentlemen of Rome, first used it. It was current among the royal families in your day. Now it is in common use."

"I'll accept your word, Con, though I'm ignorant of the facts which you relate. I suppose the expression's philosophical."

This gravity was too much for Confucius, who, doffing his fore-'n-aft, laughed into it secretly for the space of a dozen original Chinese thoughts.

"Weary with wisdom and wheeling as I know you to be," continued di Medici, "I am selfish enough in my pursuit of jollity to propose spending an hour or so beyond that blazing portico."

"But how about the others?"

"You must submit to the hare-and-hounds process again, that's all. Scatter another trail of your phosphorescent thoughts."

"It's positively municipal extravagance to diffuse thoughts for the benefit of those luxurists, Lorenzo; but I'll submit. It's the last time, though, in such circumstances as these."

And Confucius, trundling his bike and emitting the pyrotechnic thoughts which are common to most mad and abused men, walked slowly down the middle of the court. Di Medici met him under the sign, which, spelling with letters of Northern Lights' glory the words, "Promenade Concerts," had impelled the gay Italian to arrest his meandering. There, under these Aladdin lamps, the distinguished visitors were welcomed with the extension of all the spare glad hands of the concerts' acting manager.

The hall was filled with mirth-makers. Echoes of laughter and bright converse shot diagonally from floor to balcony, and from balcony to floor. Joyous music—the food of happiness—swelled from the platform. When it was hushed there rose the pop, pop, pop of bulging stoppers and the inspiriting clink of friendly glasses.

"Ah," sighed di Medici, "this is the next thing to the life of my youth." He shut his eyes, the better to imbibe new-found delight. "As I sit thus, Confucius," he mused, "I fancy myself once again in the hills of my native land. There are the same soft strains—so soft they seem the same—that whiled away my dreaming days; the same careless laughter, the same ever-familiar rattle of the drinking-bouts. Ah, those days, when I learned the songs and the dances of the rustics! Would that they—that even this—were a reality! But pardon me, Confucius. I burden you with my rambling talk. We're here to be gay, not sad; for, as I've always said,

> "'Chi siamo lieto, sia.
> Di domari non c'e certezza.'"

"You're right, you're right, Lorenzo. The idea, your asking my pardon for thinking such thoughts! Oh, if I had dared to write as candidly as you, there would be fewer sour faces on the rice-banked Yank-tse Kiang, and less cretinous monarchs in the seats of their barbaric ancestors. Oh, between you and me, my queue wasn't always the plaything of bookworms," and he nudged his table-mate in the vicinage of the seventh rib.

"I'd never have suspected it, Con," said di Medici. "But then, it's better all around to know than to suspect. Here's the Queen."

The people seated within the aristocratic reservation were eyeing the passage through the main aisle of a masculine woman, a sort of (in the literal sense of the term) hermaphrodite. With an unconcern born of royal disregard for society's rules and regulations she went straight to the table at which Confucius and Di Medici were sitting, and (making her second successive slip) sat down without making the prescribed number of bows and scrapes. Thereafter no one but her companions and the sybarites who sat near the doors gave her even a passing look.

"And what does the fair lady of the Iceni think of this?" asked Confucius blandly.

"Seems to me it's pretty slow. If that fellow up there is hired to beat the drums, why doesn't he do it? I know what I'd do if he was a member of any procession of mine."

She looked daggers and scythes, and divers other implements at the whole band.

"Mercy, noble Queen," observed di Medici. "You mustn't think that this is a minstrel show. But where's Socrates?"

"Oh, he's out there in a doorway."

She pointed a prodigious forefinger toward Hamilton Place.

"He got a thought all of a sudden. He's as much of a nuisance as you are."

"I?" exclaimed Confucius, to whom she had very blankly addressed her comment. "I? Why I?" he persisted, turning to di Medici.

"Dunno," ejaculated Lorenzo.

"Oh," Boadicea snapped, "you have whee——"

"I thought I saw Socrates," said Di Medici, interrupting a promising bout of words. He knew that he didn't see Socrates; but, as fortune would have it, the inveterate philosopher, looking sheep-faced, just then happened through a doorway.

"You must excuse me, friends," he said, as he put his check in his pocket and seated himself. "It all started during a rapid transit blockade. I haven't had such spare thinking time for many an eon. This is not so much unlike the ancient times, is it? I mean, the spirit is not. I have seen this same hilarity at the houses of men like Agatho. But there is no flute girl; and the faces of serious-minded companions are wanting."

Neither di Medici nor Boadicea heeded what he said, though both looked him in the eye. The Orientalist was trying to enumerate the glasses of beer consuming at a table occupied by members of Harvard's advanced course in music. Weary, he gave up, and, addressing Socrates, said:

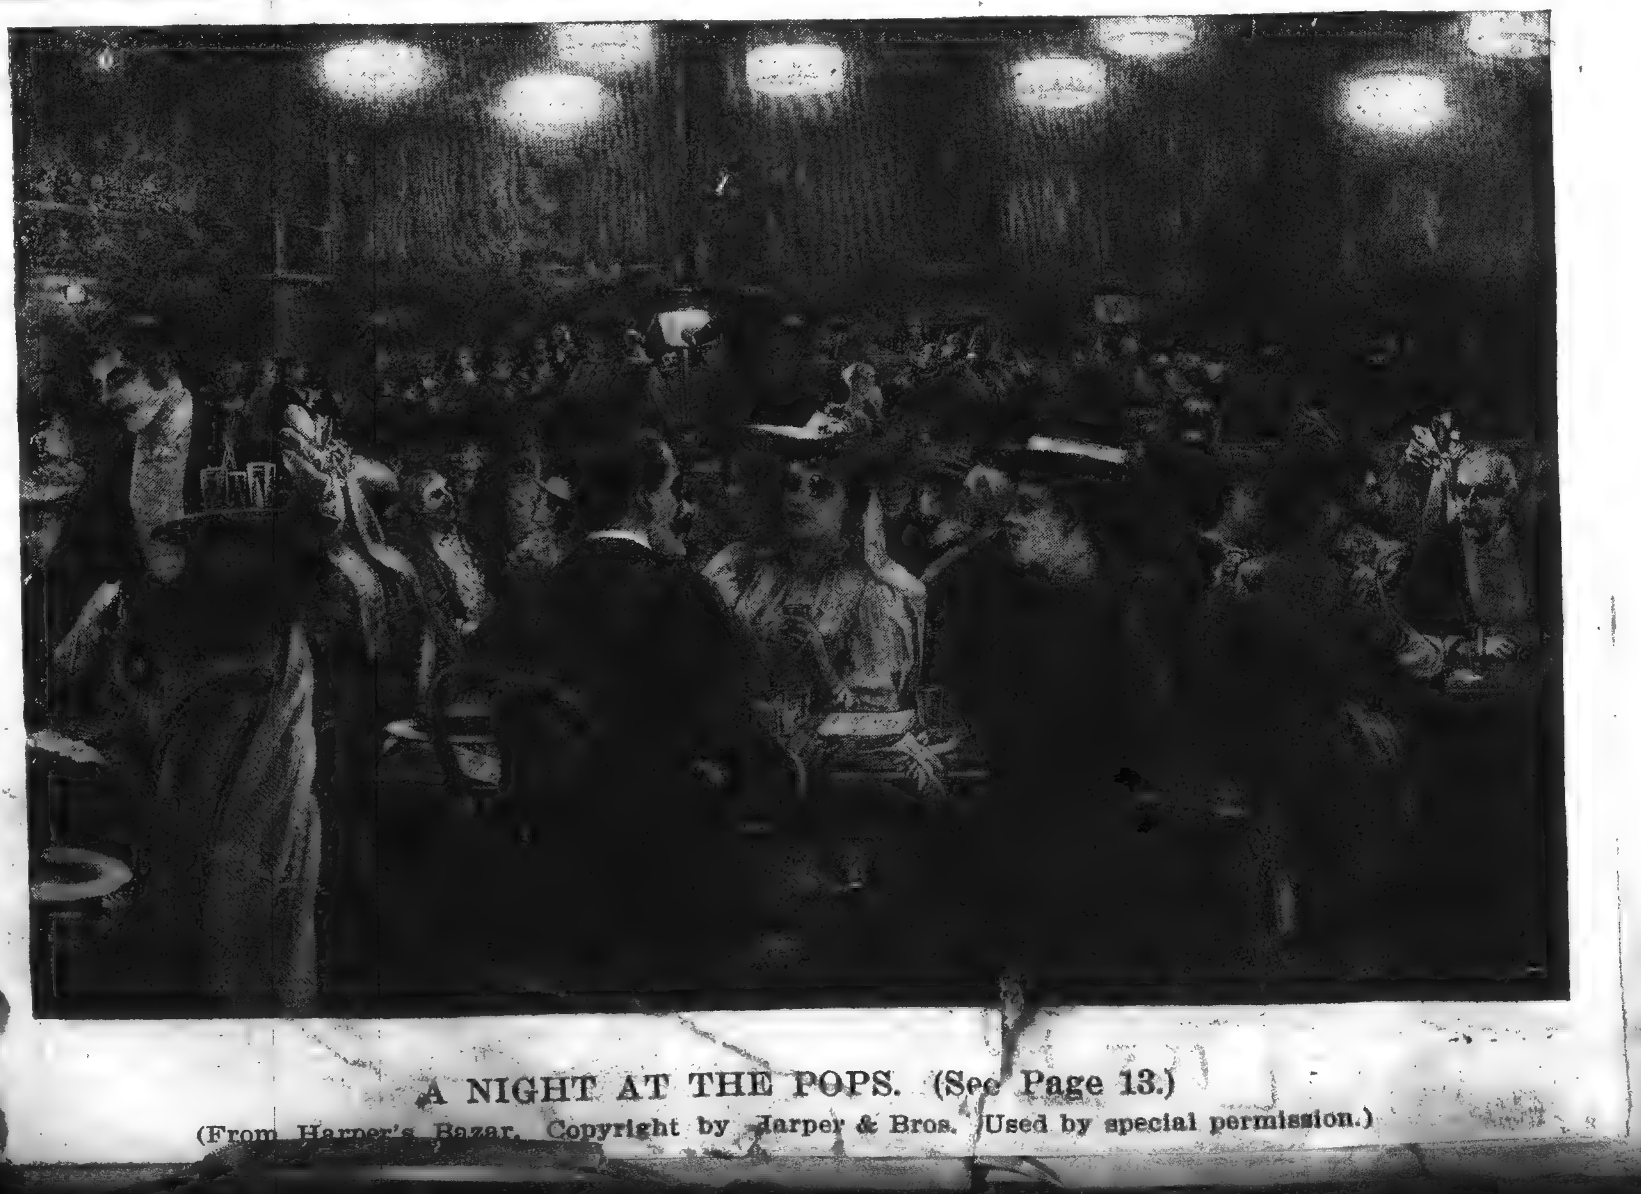
"My wise brother, I take it that you've been saying something. Take my advice; don't be guilty of such unseemly conduct again. Say nothing, but talk as much as you please. Behold the wisdom of the moderns (pointing to the thirsty students)! They work not; neither do they grind; and yet not even you, Lorenzo, are as gay as one of them."

"True, there is no Dean on Stygian Avenue to stare at me arcticly," responded the Florentine noble. "But (sotto voce to Con and Soc) were slighting the Queen. Fair lady (you would say that he was accosting a vineyard beauty, so sweet was his voice's tone), did your eye ever see or your ear hear so much that is delightful?"

"Well, I should say so!" replied the Queen. "You evidently forget the picnic I had in London one night about eighteen and a half centuries ago! Perhaps we didn't have a circus with those centurions of Suetonius—us—us, or whatever his name was! Perhaps! Well—oh, this isn't in it. My friend, the Borgia woman, never dreamed of the swiftness of that night. Never, the hussy!"

"You're not in the muse, methinks, fair lady," said Lorenzo. "I didn't intend you to recall any of those pleasant butcheries in London town. But, Socrates, did you hear that celestial adagio? No? Still thinking? I wonder that you—And you, too, Confucius. Dreaming of your prosy old problems? Ah, woe is me! What company I have chosen. This place is the delight of delights! I would have the musicians crowned with ivy! A bottomless flagon would I give to each!

> "Happy be let him who may;
> There's nothing sure but of today!"



A NIGHT AT THE POPS. (See Page 13.)

(From Harper's Bazar. Copyright by Harper & Bros. Used by special permission.)

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

A large and fashionable audience was present at the opening of the "Pops" on Monday evening under the direction of Max Zach. The new conductor was warmly greeted by his friends, and the excellent program which was presented was received with much enthusiasm. Society was well represented throughout the entire week, and among those present were Mrs. John L. Gardner and party, Mis Olga Gardner, Mr. Gordon Dexter, Mr. Lawrence Haughton, Prof. George Santayana of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mrs. and Miss Fay and Miss Emery, Miss Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper and party, Mr. Jack Tilden, Mr. William Bennett, Mr. William R. Rotch, Mrs. W. F. Apthorp, Mr. Alexander Higginson and party, Mr. James Kidder, Mr. Charles Sampson, Dr. and Mrs. Inches and Mr. and Mrs. Franz Kneisel.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.
Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 20, 1896.

POPULAR "POPS."

An attractive programme will be given by Mr. Max Zach and his excellent orchestra at the "Pops" this evening. The bright costumes of the ladies are a very potent factor in the brilliant ensemble. The programme:—

Polonaise, Chopin; Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse," Offenbach; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot," Lecocq; L'Aarlesienne, No. 1, Bizet; Traeumerei, Schumann; Perpetuum Mobile, Strauss; (a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz; overture, "Beautif[illegible] Galatea," Suppe; waltz, "Obispah," [illegible]; polka, "The Mill," Strauss; Flag [illegible] Zichrer.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17, 1896.

MUSIC

THE "POPS" AGAIN.

The mercury may indulge in all the acrobatic climbings and "Niagara leaps" that it chooses; we may burn in one hour and freeze in the next; we may start out in the morning all well ulster-clad and go home to tea in our shirt sleeves; the stupids who supervise the West End car services may pack us into box-cars at noon because they have a bit of a chill, and then when they go home to get warm in bed make us brave grippe, pneumonia and all the rest of it by allowing only open cars until midnight;—all these things may puzzle even that well adjusted mind which is further fortified by a Farmer's Almanac. But there is one sign which tells us infallibly what season it is actually and ought to be in evidence. And that is the recommencement of the nightly "Pops"—which even the intelligent and Harvard-College-trained management still persists in calling Promenade Concerts, although nobody promenades except the waiters and, in the intermissions, the band. When these begin, then we know that early spring should have passed and the approach of summer is at hand; for long before midsummer is upon us their delightful epoch ends and the Music Hall is silent.

The eleventh season began prosperously on Monday evening, the hall being crowded and the general interest being proved by the fact that very few people left their places until late in the evening. Within the enclosed precinct sat many of the fashionable folk, some of whom have engaged places for the whole season, while every other table ground had been pre-empted almost from the opening of the hall. In point of fact, the one element of security in finding a chair and a corner at a table is the only advantage which that small central space can offer. You sit as snugly to your unknown neighbors, you absorb as much smoke and you yield as often to the close passage of the deft and civil waiters as if you sat outside; but you are sure of your place, and that is worth something.

The music is of course first rate and worth all the attention which many pay it unbroken. The repertory is large and new things are frequently added. The players being Symphony men, the effect of their discipline under Mr. Paur shows in the unity of their work in the simpler and lighter things here put before them. The conductor comes as a new man to the stand, although as a musician he has long been known and esteemed—Mr. Zach, the viola player. He is doing his work well—quietly, easily and authoritatively, and many numbers have made as great a popular effect under his undemonstrative baton as under the obviously wrought up direction of some of his predecessors.

HOWARD MALCOM TICKNOR.

——Last Monday evening is certainly to be counted among the "banner nights" of the season, for on that occasion, society was out in full force to listen to the first of the promenade concerts, sip refreshing iced drinks, and breathe the mingled aroma of cigars and cigarettes. Music Hall was prettily decorated with wreaths of laurel, branches of pine, and a huge mound of cut flowers at either end of the platform Among the audience was Mrs. John L. Gardner, in a white bodice and large hat trimmed with hunter's green, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Apthorp, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., with Mrs. Guild's sister, Miss Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. H. Staples Potter, Mrs. Wm. P. Fay and Miss Catherine Fay, Mr. and Mrs. Hooper (Elsie Perkins) Miss Gertrude Edmands, Mr. Charles Sampson, Miss Eleanor Shattuck, Miss Olga Gardner, Mrs. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Temby, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sherman, Mr. Holker Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Wolff, Dr. and Mrs. Inches, Miss Aagot Lunde, Mr. Lawrence Houghton, Miss Marian H. Brazier, Mrs. Fred Galloupe, Mr. Carl Sobeski, Mrs. C. H. Washburn, Mrs. Josiah Holden, Mr. Clarence Hollander, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. H. M. Ticknor, Mrs. Phineas Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Waite, Mrs. C. J. Stevens, Mr. Hollin Spaulding and Mr. Alfred Hudson who chaperoned a merry party consisting of Miss Bessie Hart Mackintosh, Miss Lotta Britton, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Joseph Heilbrun, Mr. Ernest Faies, Mr. Lewis Proctor, Mr. Alfred E. Mackintosh and Mr. Harry D. Mackintosh.

—— [illegible]

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

THE "POPS."

The threatening weather of last night did not affect the attendance at the "Pops." Every seat at the reserved tables was sold, and many were obliged to sit in the balconies and see their friends partake of the light refreshments served from the tables. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Zach, played selections from Gounod, Auber, Strauss, Wagner, Massenet, Saint-Saens, Gillet, Brahms, Herold and Waldteufel. The program for this evening is:

Polonaise	Chopin
Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse"	Offenbach
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot"	Lecocq
L'Arlesienne, No. 1	Bizet
Traeumerei	Schumann
Perpetuum Mobile	Strauss
(a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust"	Berlioz
Overture, "Beautiful Galatea"	Suppe
Waltz, "Obispah"	Knight
Polka, "The Mill"	Strauss
Flag March	Ziehrer

"POPS."

Visit Paid by Son. of the Ancients.

It Was a Delight for Lorenzo, of the Medicis.

But What of Socrates, Confucius and of Boadicea?

"Now there's something I never noticed before," said Lorenzo di Medici, stopping in front of Park Street Church the other night. "Did you, Conny?"

"Just a minute, Lorenzo," Confucius answered; "my foot's caught in a pedal. Perdition seize these shoes Antony sent me! I haven't had a good scorch for a week. Have you tried any of his wares?"

"No. Bother you and your scorching, anyway!" remarked Lorenzo. I thought you said you'd quit talking about your wheels and your golf suits and the thousand and one other silly crotchets of yours."

"Now, now, Lorenzo," said Confucius, soothingly; "don't be hard on your old tandem partner. Have you forgotten thus quickly the recent day on which we licked the sandals off Nero and his friend Sue—Sue—oh, what's his name?"

"Confucius," said Lorenzo, determinedly and solemnly, ignoring the question, "if you'll hush this whirligig prattle of yours I'll let you talk your confounded philosophy at me all tomorrow evening. Now that's a fair condition, isn't it? I never saw (addressing himself) in my born days a man made so loquacious by a couple of glasses of that Rhenish stuff and seltzer. But tell me, Conny," he pursued, looking up and down Tremont Street, "where are Socrates and Boadicea? I thought they were going to follow us in a Cross Town car."

"Well, I counseled them not to be so dilatory. It's a sign of pure luxury and indolence to ride in one of those cars."

As he spoke thus Confucius released his foot from the clamping pedal, and, looking down Hamilton Place, in which direction di Medici had called attention, opened his mouth in astonishment. Then he put on his spectacles, and, fastening a bold stare upon the sight, blinked not for five minutes. At the end of the five minutes he withdrew his stare, took off his spectacles, shut his mouth, pulled up his stockings and stammered to his companion (who was still watching for the missing):

"Lorenzo, th-this is wha-wha-what the moderns call a 'find' "

"A what?"

"A 'find.' You recall the expression, don't you? If I mistake not, Cleopatra, receiving the attentions of certain estimable gentlemen of Rome, first used it. It was current among the royal families in your day. Now it is in common use."

"I'll accept your word, Con, though I'm ignorant of the facts which you relate. I suppose the expression's philosophical."

This gravity was too much for Confucius, who, doffing his fore-'n-aft, laughed into it secretly for the space of a dozen original Chinese thoughts.

"Weary with wisdom and wheeling as I know you to be," continued di Medici, "I am selfish enough in my pursuit of jollity to propose spending an hour or so beyond that blazing portico."

"But how about the others?"

"You must submit to the hare-and-hounds process again, that's all. Scatter another trail of your phosphorescent thoughts."

"It's positively municipal extravagance to diffuse thoughts for the benefit of those luxurists, Lorenzo; but I'll submit. It's the last time, though, in such circumstances as these."

And Confucius, trundling his bike and emitting the pyrotechnic thoughts which are common to most mad and abused men, walked slowly down the middle of the court. Di Medici met him under the sign, which, spelling with letters of Northern Lights' glory the words, "Promenade Concerts," had impelled the gay Italian to arrest his meandering. There, under these Aladdin lamps, the distinguished visitors were welcomed with the extension of all the spare glad hands of the concerts' acting manager.

The hall was filled with mirth-makers. Echoes of laughter and bright converse shot diagonally from floor to balcony, and from balcony to floor. Joyous music—the food of happiness—swelled from the platform. When it was hushed there rose the pop, pop, pop of bulging stoppers and the inspiriting clink of friendly glasses.

"Ah," sighed di Medici, "this is the next thing to the life of my youth." He shut his eyes, the better to imbibe new-found delight. "As I sit thus, Confucius," he mused, "I fancy myself once again in the hills of my native land. There are the same soft strains—so soft they seem the same—that whiled away my dreaming days; the same careless laughter, the same ever-familiar rattle of the drinking-bouts. Ah, those days, when I learned the songs and the dances of the rustics! Would that they—that even this—were a reality! But pardon me, Confucius. I burden you with my rambling talk. We're here to be gay, not sad; for, as I've always said,

" 'Chi siamo lieto, sia.
Di domari non c'e certezza.' "

"You're right, you're right, Lorenzo. The idea, your asking my pardon for thinking such thoughts! Oh, if I had dared to write as candidly as you, there would be fewer sour faces on the rice-banked Yank-tse Kiang, and less cretinous monarchs in the seats of their barbaric ancestors. Oh, between you and me, my queue wasn't always the plaything of bookworms," and he nudged his table-mate in the vicinage of the seventh rib.

"I'd never have suspected it, Con," said di Medici. "But then, it's better all around to know than to suspect. Here's the Queen."

The people seated within the aristocratic reservation were eyeing the passage through the main aisle of a masculine woman, a sort of (in the literal sense of the term) hermaphrodite. With an unconcern born of royal disregard for society's rules and regulations she went straight to the table at which Confucius and Di Medici were sitting, and (making her second successive slip) sat down without making the prescribed number of bows and scrapes. Thereafter no one but her companions and the sybarites who sat near the doors gave her even a passing look.

"And what does the fair lady of the Iceni think of this?" asked Confucius blandly.

"Seems to me it's pretty slow. If that fellow up there is hired to beat the drums, why doesn't he do it? I know what I'd do if he was a member of any procession of mine."

She looked daggers and scythes, and divers other implements at the whole band.

"Mercy, noble Queen," observed di Medici. "You mustn't think that this is a minstrel show. But where's Socrates?"

"Oh, he's out there in a doorway."

She pointed a prodigious forefinger toward Hamilton Place.

"He got a thought all of a sudden. He's as much of a nuisance as you are."

"I?" exclaimed Confucius, to whom she had very blankly addressed her comment. "I? Why I?" he persisted, turning to di Medici.

"Dunno," ejaculated Lorenzo.

"Oh," Boadicea snapped, "you have whee——"

"I thought I saw Socrates," said Di Medici, interrupting a promising bout of words. He knew that he didn't see Socrates; but, as fortune would have it, the inveterate philosopher, looking sheep-faced, just then happened through a doorway.

"You must excuse me, friends," he said, as he put his check in his pocket and seated himself. "It all started during a rapid transit blockade. I haven't had such spare thinking time for many an eon. This is not so much unlike the ancient times, is it? I mean, the spirit is not. I have seen this same hilarity at the houses of men like Agatho. But there is no flute girl; and the faces of serious-minded companions are wanting."

Neither di Medici nor Boadicea heeded what he said, though both looked him in the eye. The Orientalist was trying to enumerate the glasses of beer consuming at a table occupied by members of Harvard's advanced course in music. Weary, he gave up, and, addressing Socrates, said:

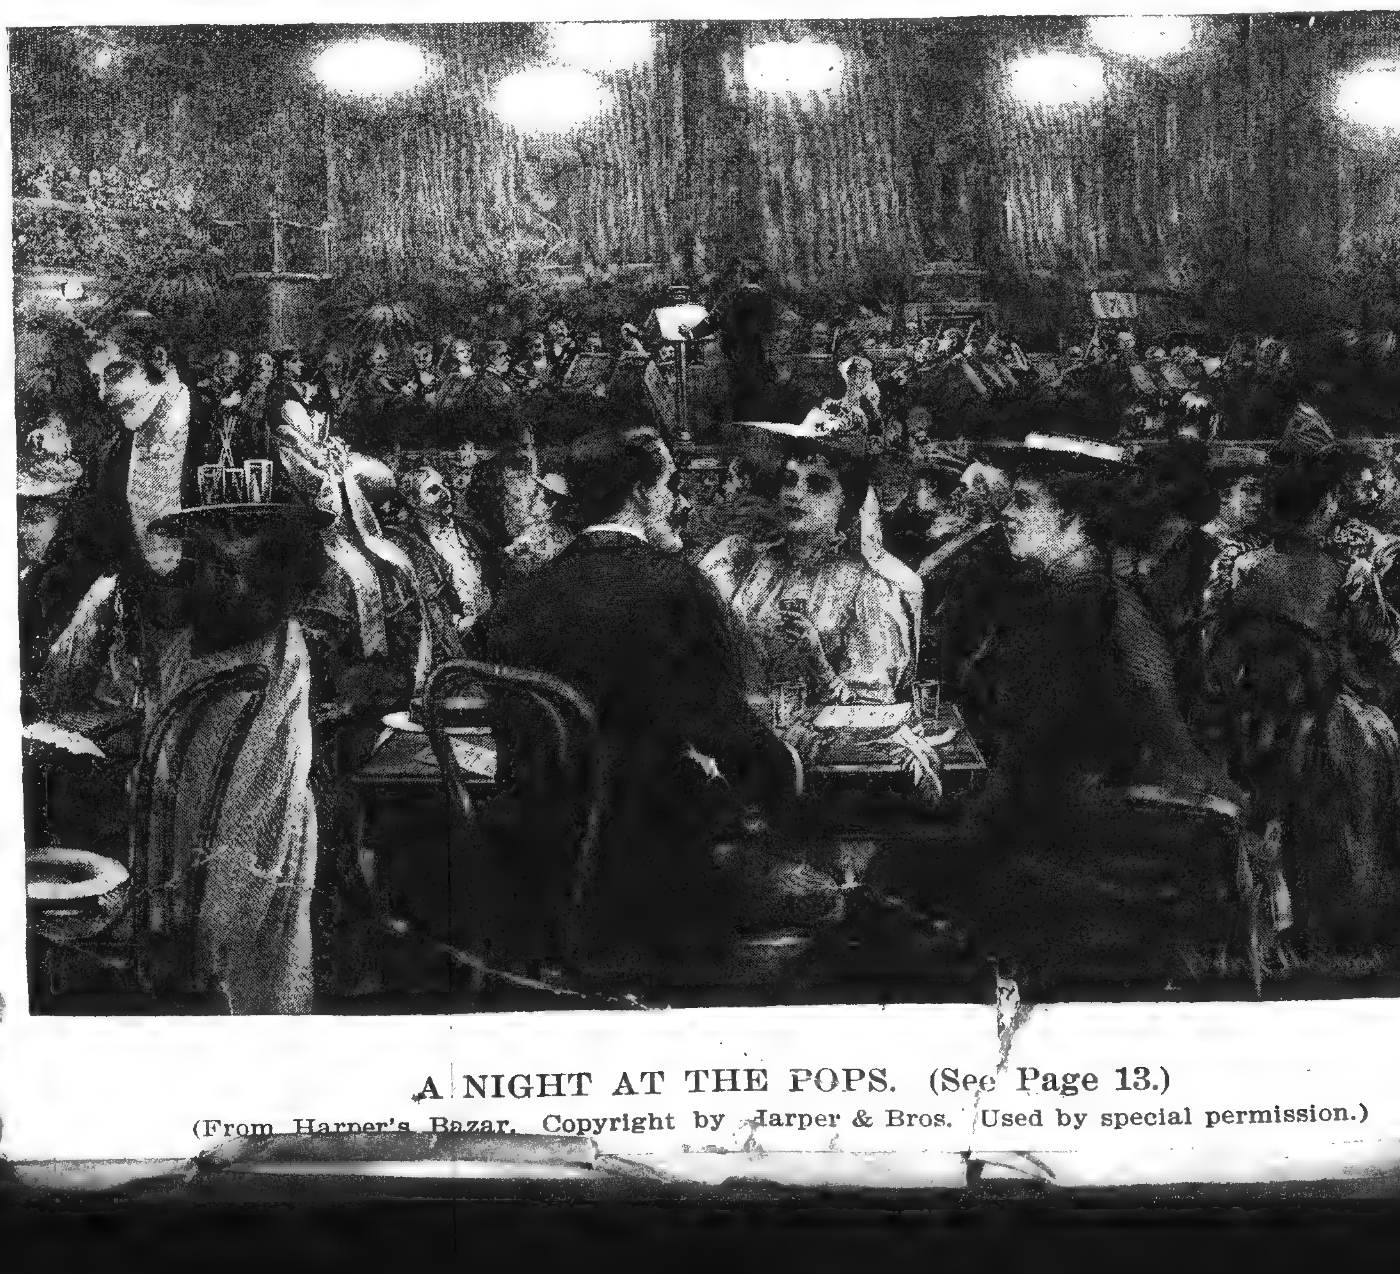
"My wise brother, I take it that you've been saying something. Take my advice; don't be guilty of such unseemly conduct again. Say nothing, but talk as much as you please. Behold the wisdom of the moderns (pointing to the thirsty students)! They work not; neither do they grind; and yet not even you, Lorenzo, are as gay as one of them."

"True, there is no Dean on Stygian Avenue to stare at me arcticly," responded the Florentine noble. "But (sotto voce to Con and Soc) were slighting the Queen. Fair lady (you would say that he was accosting a vineyard beauty, so sweet was his voice's tone), did your eye ever see or your ear hear so much that is delightful?"

"Well, I should say so!" replied the Queen. "You evidently forget the picnic I had in London one night about eighteen and a half centuries ago! Perhaps we didn't have a circus with those centurions of Suetonius—us—us, or whatever his name was! Perhaps! Well—oh, this isn't in it. My friend, the Borgia woman, never dreamed of the swiftness of that night. Never, the hussy!"

"You're not in the muse, methinks, fair lady," said Lorenzo. "I didn't intend you to recall any of those pleasant butcheries in London town. But, Socrates, did you hear that celestial adagio? No? Still thinking? I wonder that you—And you, too, Confucius. Dreaming of your prosy old problems? Ah, woe is me! What company I have chosen. This place is the delight of delights! I would have the musicians crowned with ivy! A bottomless flagon would I give to each!

"Happy be let him who may:
There's nothing sure but of today!"



A NIGHT AT THE POPS. (See Page 13.)
(From Harper's Bazar, Copyright by Harper & Bros. Used by special permission.)

Boston Journal.
SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

A large and fashionable audience was present at the opening of the "Pops" on Monday evening under the direction of Max Zach. The new conductor was warmly greeted by his friends, and the excellent program which was presented was received with much enthusiasm. Society was well represented throughout the entire week, and among those present were Mrs. John L. Gardner and party, Mis Olga Gardner, Mr. Gordon Dexter, Mr. Lawrence Haughton, Prof. George Santayana of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mrs. and Miss Fay and Miss Emery, Miss Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper and party, Mr. Jack Tilden, Mr. William Bennett, Mr. William R. Retch, Mrs. W. F. Apthorp, Mr. Alexander Higginson and party, Mr. James Kidder, Mr. Charles Sampson, Dr. and Mrs. Inches and Mr. and Mrs. Franz Kneisel.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.
Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.
WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 20, 1896.

POPULAR "POPS."

An attractive programme will be given by Mr. Max Zach and his excellent orchestra at the "Pops" this evening. The bright costumes of the ladies are a very potent factor in the brilliant ensemble. The programme:—

Polonaise, Chopin; Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse," Offenbach; waltz, "Gross-Wien," Strauss; selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot," Lecocq; L'Aarlesienne, No. 1, Bizet; Traeumerei, Schumann; Perpetuum Mobile, Strauss; (a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz; overture, "Beautiful Galatea," Suppe; waltz, "Obispah," [illegible]t; polka, "The Mill," Strauss; Flag [illegible] Ziehrer.

Boston Courier.
SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17, 1896.

MUSIC

THE "POPS" AGAIN.

The mercury may indulge in all the acrobatic climbings and "Niagara leaps" that it chooses; we may burn in one hour and freeze in the next; we may start out in the morning all well ulster-clad and go home to tea in our shirt sleeves; the stupids who supervise the West End car services may pack us into box-cars at noon because they have a bit of a chill, and then when they go home to get warm in bed make us brave grippe, pneumonia and all the rest of it by allowing only open cars until midnight;—all these things may puzzle even that well adjusted mind which is further fortified by a Farmer's Almanac. But there is one sign which tells us infallibly what season it is actually and ought to be in evidence. And that is the recommencement of the nightly "Pops"—which even the intelligent and Harvard-College-trained management still persists in calling Promenade Concerts, although nobody promenades except the waiters and, in the intermissions, the band. When these begin, then we know that early spring should have passed and the approach of summer is at hand; for long before midsummer is upon us their delightful epoch ends and the Music Hall is silent.

The eleventh season began prosperously on Monday evening, the hall being crowded and the general interest being proved by the fact that very few people left their places until late in the evening. Within the enclosed precinct sat many of the fashionable folk, some of whom have engaged places for the whole season, while every other table ground had been pre-empted almost from the opening of the hall. In point of fact, the one element of security in finding a chair and a corner at a table is the only advantage which that small central space can offer. You sit as snugly to your unknown neighbors, you absorb as much smoke and you yield as often to the close passage of the deft and civil waiters as if you sat outside; but you are sure of your place, and that is worth something.

The music is of course first rate and worth all the attention which many pay it unbroken. The repertory is large and new things are frequently added. The players being Symphony men, the effect of their discipline under Mr. Paur shows in the unity of their work in the simpler and lighter things here put before them. The conductor comes as a new man to the stand, although as a musician he has long been known and esteemed—Mr. Zach, the viola player. He is doing his work well—quietly, easily and authoritatively, and many numbers have made as great a popular effect under his undemonstrative baton as under the obviously wrought up direction of some of his predecessors.

HOWARD MALCOM TICKNOR.

——Last Monday evening is certainly to be counted among the "banner nights" of the season, for on that occasion, society was out in full force to listen to the first of the promenade concerts, sip refreshing iced drinks, and breathe the mingled aroma of cigars and cigarettes. Music Hall was prettily decorated with wreaths of laurel, branches of pine, and a huge mound of cut flowers at either end of the platform. Among the audience was Mrs. John L. Gardner, in a white bodice and large hat trimmed with hunter's green, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Apthorp, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., with Mrs. Guild's sister, Miss Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. H. Staples Potter, Mrs. Wm. P. Fay and Miss Catherine Fay, Mr. and Mrs. Hooper (Elsie Perkins) Miss Gertrude Edmands, Mr. Charles Sampson, Miss Eleanor Shattuck, Miss Olga Gardner, Mrs. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Temby, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sherman, Mr. Holker Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Wolff, Dr. and Mrs. Inches, Miss Aagot Lunde, Mr. Lawrence Houghton, Miss Marian H. Brazier, Mrs Fred Galloupe, Mr. Carl Sobeski, Mrs. C. H. Washburn, Mrs. Josiah Holden, Mr. Clarence Hollander, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. H. M. Ticknor, Mrs. Phineas Adams, Mr. and Mrs Alfred Waite, Mrs. C. J. Stevens, Mr. Hollin Spaulding and Mr. Alfred Hudson who chaperoned a merry party consisting of Miss Bessie Hart Mackintosh, Miss Lotta Britton, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Joseph Heilbrun, Mr. Ernest Faies, Mr. Lewis Proctor, Mr. Alfred E. Mackintosh and Mr. Harry D. Mackintosh.

[illegible]

Boston Journal.
TEN PAGES.
WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1896.

THE "POPS."

The threatening weather of last night did not affect the attendance at the "Pops." Every seat at the reserved tables was sold, and many were obliged to sit in the balconies and see their friends partake of the light refreshments served from the tables. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Zach, played selections from Gounod, Auber, Strauss, Wagner, Massenet, Saint-Saens, Gillet, Brahms, Herold and Waldteufel. The program for this evening is:

Polonaise	Chopin
Overture, "La Jolie Parfumeuse"	Offenbach
Waltz, "Gross-Wien"	Strauss
Selection, "La Fille de Madame Angot"	Lecocq
L'Arlesienne, No. 1	Bizet
Traeumerei	Schumann
Perpetuum Mobile	Strauss
(a) Danse des Sylphes, (b) Marche Hongroise, from "Damnation of Faust"	Berlioz
Overture, "Beautiful Galatea"	Suppe
Waltz, "Obispah"	Knight
Polka, "The Mill"	Strauss
Flag March	Ziehr

INCOMPLETE

SUNDAY HERALD — BOSTON, MAY 17, 1896

DRESS AT THE "POPS."

A Conspicuous Feature of the Brilliant Opening Nights.

Comment of a Stranger—A Suggestion as to Mechanics' Hall—The Millinery in Evidence as Seen from the Balcony—Notable Gowns—Next Step in Sleeves Foreshadowed.

Dress at the "Pops" on the opening night and during this first fashionable week has been a conspicuous feature of their brilliancy. The men in the smart inclosure are a fine looking set. Indeed, Boston men invariably present a much more distinguished appearance than do the women, taken as a whole. Especially noticeable in a smart gathering, like that of the horse show or opera, are the numbers of well-set-up men at the interesting age of 50, with fine gray heads and manners neither condescendingly flippant or benignantly familiar.

The jeunesse doree of Boston, too, is a composite of elegance and stalwartness, unlike the butterfly dandies of New York. The students' row of tables at the "Pops" looks correct in varying shades of mufti and negligee morning dress. Inside the rail dress clothes were en evidence almost to a man, and on the warm nights Tuxedos and straws looked appropriate.

But the straws and silk hats were not visible, to the surprise of a stranger to Boston and Boston's ways. His mouth curled with fine scorn at the ranks of onlookers in balcony chairs, who prefer their smoke a trifle stale, and their wine blue in the horizon; at the idea of charging admission and yet no return checks; at a dozen other ideas that were equally Bostonese. But you must know this isn't really a music—a beer hall, not even a really promenade concert. But it is as near as Boston will probably ever get to the classic union of a pipe, a mug, a band and repartee. The pipe is a cigar or a nasty little cigarette, the mug is a decorous glass, the band is a symphony orchestra, and there is no repartee at all. Dear, dear! this is a development of the 11th season, that you are expected to refrain from talking during the music. You are expected to take off your hat, literally and metaphorically, to this dingy old building, saturated with symphonies and operas, and the fame of virtuosos. Of course, the solemnity of the place demands it, just as we all cheerfully scramble for our tables days beforehand, and imagine only that we are "dropping in after dinner for a while." It's the only thing we have, and we will continue to go, even if it is fashionable and serious, and make an evening of it.

WITH A SWISH OF SILKEN RUFFLES.

You are not telling us anything new, you stranger from cosmopolis. We are good Bostonians, we know our London, our Paris and our New York. We know we do things in our own little way, but that's the way we like them—in Boston.

Someone said the morning after the opening that it was the "prettiest bit of Bohemia Boston will ever see." It probably is, this scraggy, unyielding New England soil yet needs generations of cultivation, of planting, transplanting and uprooting before these weeds of worldliness can find nourishment.

Would not Mechanics' Hall transform into a better beer—no, promenade concert (if you will have it so, though we fail to see where the promenade comes in)? With the orchestra in a bower of green in the centre of the hall there would be plenty of tables for impromptu parties, there would still be a balcony for the fearful ones, and the smoke would dissipate among the lofty rafters. The ventilation there would add much to the comfort of the evening, and the whole mise en scene would be more in keeping with the unconventional spirit of such occasions.

Mrs. F. Gordon Dexter is one of the votees of the Pop concerts. She usua prefers a table in the balcony, where is q ite the thing for the smart set [illegible]

[illegible] discovered a use for the Music Hall balcony seats for a half-hour or so the other evening. It is a splendid vantage ground, from which to study the eccentricities of the modish millinery on the floor, and even the smoky haze was welcome to shield my eyes from the glare of unskilful color combinations. There are plenty of them that are horrible blotches, for the fashionable melange of colors and shades is a dangerous one for novices or inartistic modistes to handle.

A WHITE AND GOLD JACKET.

The brims of the hats are very inconspicuous, of the sailor shape usually, and serve simply to support the trimming. But the crowns! Of gorgeous colored straws, they are rough and startling, and big, and look as though they had been banged into shape with a club.

The inevitable mixture of mondaines, overdressed women, and dainty young things that look as though they had run away from school, needs no discrimination to sort out, for they are as distinct as the layers of a strawberry shortcake—the simple, plain, sweet cake, the luscious, ripe, well-formed berries, the froth, pretty and artificial, that leaves nothing in the mouth and evanesces at a touch.

The most noticeable gowns were those small-sleeved ones—they are a bit more conspicuous than at fashion's last public gathering in Boston. Some of them were charming, and gave their wearers' slender shoulders such a hugable look.

FROCK WORN BY A MYOPIA BELLE.

One of the pretty ones was of canary colored broadcloth, the skirt rather clinging to the limbs in front and gathered into large folds behind. A quilling of black satin ribbon finished the hem. The bebe bodice was encircled by a high sash of white satin, that knotted with long ends behind. The sleeves were of white satin a la mousquetaire from shoulder to elbow, where there was a white satin puff and a long flounce of accordion-plaited white tulle. An epaulette, with square tab ends in front, covered the shoulders and bust. This was of white satin covered with jet and pearl paillettes and Strass emeralds, and edged with a quilling of black satin ribbon. A thick ruche of canary and black satin and tulle encircled the throat. A burnt straw round hat had a pure white crown, garnished with black tips, white ribbon bows and a mass of cowslips and purple and green mignonette.

A pale gray crepe de chine frock had a soft drapery drawn up to the top of the shoulder over a very long, tight sleeve of white velvet. Steel belted the waist, and an immense white silk ruche finished the throat. The hat was a pure white manilla, with a coarse big crown of vivid petunia satin straw. Black wings and green foliage, with petunia massed on the cache peigne made a stunning effect.

These two gowns hint at the probable next step as regards the sleeve. As it grows smaller and its chance for lavish adornment less, effects will doubtless be got by building it of a different material or of a different color from the bodice and skirt. It has been a long time since the skirt and sleeves were first made to match each other, letting the bodice wander at its will from the original scheme.

SUCH SLENDER AND HUGABLE SHOULDERS.

A hasty mental survey of the week's audiences calls up a black brocade satin gown, worn by a soon to be wedded Myopia belle. It was belted and banded at the throat with black, and trimmed about the hips and bust with long points of cream lace. The long sleeves had full tops, shirred in two vertical lines, to define the contour of the arm to the shoulder.

A gray-green poplin, worn one night by the graceful wife of a well known musician, had an over-jacket of white broadcloth, with flat, short-tabbed hip pieces, and empiecements down the front embroidered with gold braid and Strass. Black tulle swathed the throat and bloused between the fronts of the jacket, long tulle ends hanging from the waist. The sleeves were of the poplin, with small puffs pushed up to the shoulders, and puffs and frills finishing them at the elbow.

The very daintiest maid of the younger smart set in attendance wore one of the very tight Eton jackets of pretty colored broadcloth—the fashionable shade of green-gray that has taken the place of tans for jackets on coaching capes. These particular jackets are all the rage in Paris, and are not worn over any bodice. This one was buttoned with black velvet—a welcome change from gaudy paste ornaments—and a black velvet choker tied behind, below a lace frill that stood high about the girl's little round head. A white mulle chemisette and lace jabot, a skirt all a-flutter with crisp ruffles of taffeta silk of rose, with black polka dots, and a white straw hat, with pink tulle ruches, black tips and white tulle cache peigne, were the details of a perfect little work of art.

A week of rational and lovely spring weather following the unseasonable heat and chilling east winds of the one preceding, made the seven days which closed last night pass swiftly and most agreeably for all concerned. Golf, coaching and the wheel have been the diversion of the daylight hours and will continue to be a delight as long as the temperature remains at this happy medium. Parties of society folk on the wheel, on horseback, on coach or in carriage have been arriving at the Country Club every one of these beautiful afternoons to watch the golf or polo games and later to have high tea on the lawn or piazzas of the clubhouse, many remaining for dinner or else returning to town for a late one. In which latter case they have been pretty sure to appear around the cosy pine tables at the "Pops," where, indeed, every night since the opening one on Monday smart society has been more in evidence even than it was the corresponding week last year. Music Hall is really a most welcome rendezvous and will serve to fill in the evenings very satisfactorily, with an occasional theatre, until the time for the Country Club races, which, as far as the fashionable set is concerned, will pretty effectually mark the end of the supplementary season in town. Every week more and more familiar facs are missed, however, as the transatlantic fever seems to have taken complete possession of society folk who have begun to regard it almost as a matter of course [illegible] two or three months in every ye[illegible] all be passed in Great Britain and o[illegible] continent. Indeed, Paris and Lo[illegible]n seem [illegible] looked up[illegible] as our [illegible] watering [illegible] and her brother, by the way, w[illegible] Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., the latter's sister Mrs. John Lavalle, and Mr. T. D. Barroll made a table party at the opening night of the "Pops" Monday. Mrs. Guild and her sister in light [illegible] bodices over silk, and flower bonnets, were among the most attractively dressed women of their set there.

Others there of the society coterie on that night which opened the season so brilliantly were Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper and Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper, who had a table in the balcony over the clock. Mrs. William Hooper, in pale pink and white bodices, with a bonnet mostly of white with pink roses, was conspicuous for her elegant appearance, as usual. Mrs. Gardner had with her at her table, which she has engaged for the season nearly opposite and near the platform, her niece Miss Olga Gardner, Mr. Charles Sampson and Mr. Lawrence Haughton. Mrs. Gardner was very simply gowned in a summer silk of fine black and white stripe, without ornamentation, and a flower hat of moderate size. Near by was perhaps the smartest tableful there, made up of Mrs. W. P. Fay, Miss Kitty Fay, Mr. Holker Abbott and Mr. Gordon Dexter. Mrs. Fay wore a gown of a dark purple shade, and her velvet and tulle toque was of petunia coloring with more or less pink. Miss Fay wore her usual black hat, beplumed heavily, and a light bodice. On the other side of the hall were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Iasigi, who had Mrs. Apthorp with them. Mrs. Apthorp's hat, with a good deal of green foliage, was distinctly becoming. Mrs. Iasigi was in black and white with pink bonnet. Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Dixey had a party with them in the first row of one of the side balconies, and Mrs. George Shattuck, with her daughter Mrs. Arthur Richmond, and Mr. Richmond, was in the same row farther down.

Beside these there were Dr. Sturgis Bigelow, Mr. W. P. Blake, Mr. Frederic Beebe, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Inches, Dr. George Tilden, Mr. William Rotch, Col. and Mrs. A. M. Benson who, with the later's niece, Miss Margaret Mattocks of Portland, a distinctly pretty, stylish girl, and Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsey, Jr., of Dorchester, made a table party; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Ticknor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lauriat, Mr. Alexander Higginson and party, Miss Fairchild, Mr. Frank Chase, John Linfield Damon, Jr., who had a table party in the balcony; Mr. Roth of the Symphony orchestra, Mr. Walter Deland Cane, who had a stag party; Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor, Mr. Clarence Hollander and table party, and Mr. James Kidder.

Tuesday night brought another fine and crowded company to the "Pops." There were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Sears and party, Mr. Bryce Allan, with Miss Palfrey and party; the George von L. Meyers, Mr. Edward Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. Holker Abbott, Mr. Alexander Higginson, and Lieut. Winder of the Wabash, at the Charlestown navy yard.

Wednesday night Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Burnham brought a party. Mr. Arthur Burnham was there, and Mr. Frank Seabury, the Herbert Searses and Mr. Edward Gray again, Mr. Matthew Luce, Mr. W. P. Blake, Mrs. Apthorp, Miss Charlotte Houston, Mr. and Mrs. Eben Stanwood, who had a party, and Mr. Clayton Johns.

Thursday night, however, was the distinctly smart one of the week, and the music, too, seemed specially attractive. There was, somehow, an unusual go to the whole evening. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Duryea, just back from their California winter and their visit en route to New York, brought a party, and so did Mr. Bryce Allan, the Henry L. Higginsons, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hooper and Mr. and Mrs. Franz Zerrahn. Mr. Henry Wainwright was also there visiting the various smart table parties, and so was Mr. Philip Saltonstall, Mr. Isidore Braggiotti, Mr. Alexander Higginson, Mr. C. P. Curtis, Jr., and party, and Col. Hastings and Col. Thomas of the Governor's staff.

In the absence of Mr. C. A. Ellis, who has gone to Europe to look after Melba's interests, the concerts are under Mr. Comee's management, and if things continue as they have begun, he will certainly show himself a most competent successor to Mr. Ellis.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The Music Hall promenade concerts are again proving a great popular success, as the large audiences of the past week have clearly demonstrated. They are conducted on the same plan that found so much favor in past seasons, and they afford a delightful evening's entertainment. From a musical standpoint they promise to be superior to any previous series. The orchestra is composed of the best material, and is directed in an admirable manner by Mr. Zach, who has shown a skill and tact in arranging programmes which may be accepted as models for popular concerts. The selections for tomorrow evening are:

Swedish wedding march	Soedermann
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Fesche [illegible]"	Strauss
Selection, "Gondoliers"	Sulli
Scherzo, [illegible]turno and wedding march	[illegible]
Intermezzo from "Naila"	[illegible]
Entree Triomphale des Boyards	[illegible]
Mazourka from "Halka"	[illegible]
Overture, "Le Brasseur de Preston"	Adam
Waltz, "O Schöner Mai"	Strauss
Jockey galop	Bayer
March, [illegible]	Wagner

107

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17.

The Promenade Concerts.

The eleventh season of the promenade concerts was inaugurated in MUSIC HALL, on Monday evening, and a large and sociable audience was present to do honor to the occasion. Mr. Max Zach is the conductor, and the orchestra under his control is composed of members of the Symphony Orchestra. Under the circumstances it is almost needless to record that the music was interpreted in a most artistic manner, and stirred the listeners into unwonted enthusiasm. The waltzes were the most popular items on the programme, although it is only justice to record that the audience atoned for applauding Strauss by redemanding a Bach gavotte.

The concerts are thoroughly pleasant affairs; they allow one to take music at one's ease, to drink beer, smoke cigars and to chat with one's friends. Sometimes the music was played so loudly that it temporarily interrupted conversation, sometimes it was played so softly that flirtation ceased to be a confidence between two people, but these trifles did not mar the pleasure of the occasion. The only people who had the right to complain were those who came to hear the music. and it is to be regretted that their rights were not respected. The hubbub of conversation was so continuous that the fine work of the orchestra could not be always heard, but one must not expect classic gravity at a promenade concert, and, for a time at least, the majority of people will take advantage of the fact that they are not compelled to listen to the music.

The programmes of the week were admirable in selection, as well as in interpretation; there were variety and contrast, and while the music, as a rule, was popular in character it was never trivial; the music was always good music. Lovers of music speedily discovered this fact, and the size of the audience steadily increased during the week, an audience distinguished for its quality as well as its quantity. Judging from the earlier evenings it would seem that these promenade concerts are more popular than ever, and it is certain that they remain at the high art level that has always distinguished them. It is no ordinary pleasure to hear Mr. Zach and his orchestra play the Strauss waltzes, and the more serious pieces were interpreted with a style and finish that were worthy of the reputation of the orchestra. The promenade concerts started with unusual brilliancy, and there is no sign of a wane in their hospitality.

—— The initial Promenade Concerts of the season, at Music Hall, on Monday evening, was a brilliant affair under Mr. Max Zach's able baton and the excellent management of Mr. F. R. Comee. Among the large audience were noticed Mrs. John L. Gardner and her niece, Miss Olga Gardner, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Inches, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., and the latter's sister, Miss Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. F. Gordon Dexter, Mrs. W. P. Fay, Miss Katharine Fay, Mrs. Henry L. Higginson, Mr. Alexander Higginson, Mr. Lawrence Haughton, Mr. Charles Sampson, Mrs. William Baty Blake, Miss Charlotte Houston, Mr. T. C. Hollander and a party of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Apthorp, Mr. Edward Gray, Mr. J. Bryce Allen with his fiancée, Miss Palfrey, and a party, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Sears and party, Mr. and Mrs. Franz E. Zerrahn, Mr. William Rotch, Mr. Isidore Bragiotti, Mr. and Mrs. Herman P. Duryea and party, Lieut. Winder, U. S. N., Mr. Harry Wainwright, Col. H. A. Thomas and Mr. Jack Tilden.

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

THE "POPS."

The "Pop" concerts at Music Hall are attracting large audiences every evening. The orchestra of 50 under the direction of Mr. Zach have never been heard to better advantage. The programs contain some novelty each evening. For this evening's concert the following numbers will be played:

March, "Austria," Zach; overture, "Tannhauser," Wagner; waltz, "Barcarole," Waldteufel; selection, "Fatinitza," Suppe; two movements from "Bal Costume," Rubinstein; Cavatina, Raff; "Clair de Lune," Gillet; overture, "Oberon," Weber; selection, "The Brigands," Offenbach; serenade, "A toi," Czibulka; Pizzicato polka, Strauss; march "Fra Bombarda," Czibulka.

—— At the Promenade concert on Tuesday evening. Mr. J. Bryce Allen and his fianceé, Miss Anna Palfrey occupied a table. Miss Palfrey was in a black grenadine over burnt orange silk with a large white hat with green velvet trimmings for which a bird with outstretched wings formed an effective front. Her cousin, Mrs. Herbert M. Sears was with her, wearing a navy blue silk with white figures and a jetted toque. Mr. Sears and Mr. George Von L. Meyer completed the party. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Barnabee, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Wadleigh, and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Prior.

—— The Promenade Concert on Friday night drew out a brilliant gathering. Mr. and Mrs. George A. Nickerson had a party at one table. At another were Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Gookin and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bigelow Williams, Dr. and Mrs. George Hills Francis and Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Jenkins were among the other people present.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

A specially fine programme will be played at the Pop concert tonight, including [illegible] "Polonaise," Schumann's "Tr[illegible] two pieces from "The Dan[illegible] and Suppe's "Beau[illegible] has proved a

---

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The Pops have come again and society has again stamped them with its seal of approval by lending a most generous attendance all the week. They are the same old pops. Max Zach, the new conductor, has wisely accorded with the ways in past seasons, in the making up of his programmes; a few of the heavy classical selections are found on each, but the ruling element is of the light, frothy order. The most noticeable difference from past years greets the eye as one turns into Hamilton place, before entering Music hall. It is the incandescent sign "Promedade Concerts," which lights up the whole place, and in a way prepares one for the life and light within. In the absence of Mr. Ellis, the responsibility of the management this year rests on Mr. Fred Comee's shoulders, and right able are they to assure their complete success. The opening night last Monday was the most brilliant of the week. Representatives of Boston's smartest society were there in goodly numbers and jostled in entering, and sat beside those who could not aspire to their exclusive circle. We can not think of any other place where such a general commingling of sets is allowable, but at the Pops no one minds; a delicious Bohemian atmosphere pervades everything and the enticing music, with the popping of beer stoppers for an undertone accompaniment, makes everyone happy. The grim old walls have been relieved by festoons of laurels, and there is a background of pine trees for the musicians. At first it seemed that the audience had forgotten that a welcome was due Max Zach in his new position as conductor, but before the programme was half finished they remembered their duty, and the heartiness of the applause made up for its tardiness. Among those noticed were Mrs. John L. Gardner, Miss Olga Gardner, Miss Elsie Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Apthorp, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper, Mr. Alexander H. Higginson, Mrs. Caroline Hall Washburne and party, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Holden, Mr. Gordon Dexter, Mr. William R. Rotch, Mr. James Kidder, Mr. and Mrs. Franz Kneisel, Mr. Lawrence Houghton, Mr. Walter S. Hawkins, Mr. Clarence Hollander, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Shepard, Mr. A. R. Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. Walter Deland Came, Miss Fay, Miss Sally Fairchild, Miss Gertrude Edmands, Miss Salome Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Grilley, Mrs. Jack Tilden, Mr. William Roach, Mr. Walter Dugan, Mr. Frank Locke, Miss Ethel Hornick, Mrs. F. R. Comee, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Lauriat, Miss Lauriat, Mr. Frank E. Chase, Mrs. L. H. Mudgett, Mr. and and Mrs. John J. Taylor, Mr. Ernest B. McKim, Miss Lottie Mann, Mr. W. F. Fitzgerald, Mr. Alwin Schroeder, Mr. Otto Roth, Mr. Holker Abbott.

THE POPS.

An Excellent Programme for Monday Evening, May 18.

The programme for Monday evening will be:

Swedish Wedding March	Soedermann
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Fesche Geister"	Strauss
Selection, "Gondoliers"	Sullivan
Scherzo, Notturno, and Wedding March	Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from "Naila"	Delibes
Entree Triomphale des Boyards (First Time).	Joh. Halvorsen
Mazourka from "Hälka" (First Time.)	Moniuszko
Overture, "Le Brasseur de Preston"	Adam
Waltz, "O Schöner Mai" from "Prince Methusalem"	Strauss
Jockey Galop (First Time).	Bayer
March, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

BOSTON HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 137.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

THE POPS.

The programme for this evening's "Pop" concert in Music Hall is:

March, "Austria"	Zach
Overture, "Tannhauser"	Wagner
Waltz, "Barcarole"	Waldteufel
Selection, "Fatinitza"	Suppe
Two movements from "Bal Costume"	Rubinstein
Cavatina	Raff
Serenade, "A toi"	Czibulka
Overture, "Oberon"	Weber
Selection, "The Brigands"	Offenbach
"Clair de Lune"	Gillet
Pizzicato polka	Strauss
Galop, "Indian Mail"	Lamothe

RECORD

THUMBNAIL SKETCHES

"Mr. Zach is better looking by [illegible] than his predecessors. Some of them have been freaks!"

This was the amusingly frank criticism I overheard fall from the lips of a pretty girl at the promenade concelt last night.

The criticism was true, so far as it went. It might also have been said that Mr. Zach is a better conductor than some of his predecessors. A member of the symphony orchestra for the last ten years, and a composer of so high an order that he has often acted as kapelmeister while the orchestra played his compositions. Max Zach is assuredly a young man with a future, and all the regular symphony-goers are very glad to have him exchange his seat at the first desk of the viola with Svecenski for the conductor's platform.

THE WOMEN TURNED TO WATCH HER FIGURED BLACK SILK.

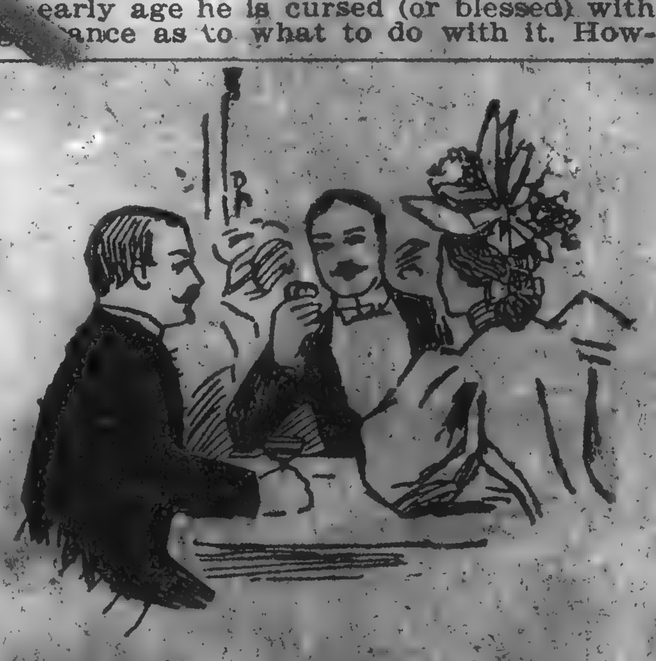
I notice the Apthorps, Frank Seabury, at least one of the Sears twins, Clayton Johns, the Burnhams and Ned Gray, W. P. Blake, Matthew Luce, Miss Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Eben Stanwood, and the beautiful Miss Houston (with the Apthorps) Lieut. Winder, U. S. N., was also noted.

"Society" may be generally seen at the tables, where the majority are served with beer. I was surprised to see that not a few of the ladies like to taste the sweets of Bohemianism; still, the greater number of the fair sex take lemonade with or without claret.

About in the centre of the sacred enclosed space below me, there sat a youthful part yof four. The host of the evening was a young man who bears the same name as the famous Princeton athlete who has just distngiushed himself at Athens.

The young man was languidly chewing a pretzel when my attention was first attracted to him.

He is a character concerning whom the first chapter of an entertaining biography might be written. Inheriting a fortune at an early age he is cursed (or blessed) with ignorance as to what to do with it. However, as a sort of tentative undertaking he has opened a bicycle store, having always made bicycles his hobby.



THE YOUNG MAN WITH A PRETZEL.

He manifests a most laudable desire to do business, too, and in hsi anxiety to do actual work himself he has sternly resolved to undertake what might be regarded by some aristocrats as menial manual labor. He has resolved to deliver the bicycles sold with his own hands. And to this end he has caused to be built a very stylish trap just large enough to carry a bicycle, besides [illegible] and white figured silk, with straps of chiffon forming a great Maltese cross [illegible] each sleeve, and the chiffon insertion relieving also the yoke. Stock and [illegible] and cuffs were of hunter's green velvet. The hat was a Manila sailor, with a big oriflamme of black and write sriped ribbon, and purple white violets and green leaves.

At the same table sat another young woman gowned in black satin with bodice of white covered lace, and wearing a black straw hat trimmed with black chiffon, violets and turquoise blue ribbon.

At the next table were two more butterflies.. One appeared in a gorgeous Persian silk, with purple toque trimmed with roses; and the other wore a lovely Dresden flowered silk the coloring being of the most delicate tints of pink, and her hat was a dark green straw sailor shape adorned with purple flowers and green flags.

Not far from the stage was a woman who wore one of those startling "bandana" waists with black crepon sleeves, the waist itself being one of those which were made up during the winter by the drygoods houses of from four to six bandana handkerchiefs, which retail at from $1 to $1.50—the finished waist being sold at something like $25.

One woman in a party of three ladies with one man (and that man hal left his wife at home for I know him, horrid thing), wore a costume of greencloth with melon sleeves and trimmed with mink, the sleeves having straps of the mink, and a boa of mink encircling the neck.

One striking costume showed sleeves of dotted yellow silk, the jacket front of Persian silk, the bodice of pale blue and two mink tails pendant; and the hot of black straw with two big black plumes rising from the centre of the crown and the brim bordered with a white lace frill, the hat set at a zipping angle!

At the same table with this young lady sat another, who was gowned soberly in black, but whose hat was a marvel—of black straw, with a wreath of pink roses full-blown and buds, green leaves, and a big white satin bow set just between two gigantic Mercury wings.

'LEMONADE IS THE NEW WOMAN'S TIPPLE.'

Acostume which might be termed severe (?) in contrast to some of the gayer ones was ow brown tweed, tailor made, with coat having purple revers and belt, and bodice of black and white striped silk, the striped running horizontally, white satin stock, and the hat of light fancy straw, the bread brim flaring strangely in front, the crown encircled with a band of black velvet, and bunches of magenta flowers grouped heterogenously.

A simple costume of a young girl was a black and white check silk with Tam-o'-Shanter cap of brown ooze leather.

The men who sat withni the sacred precincts of the rail were many of them in full dress, but only one white waistcoat as noticed. Outside the rail just one solitary man in evening clothes as observed.

A young man in company with a pretty girl fell asleep during the playing of the "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner's most tempestuous passages.

The Harvard boys too, seem laterly to be restraining their natural desire to run things, and their natural propensity to make a noise. Of course, it may be because they do not nowadays have anything to make a noise over. But that is a rather cruel suggestion.

The placing, in series of placards upon the stage bearing either the number according to the programme of the selection or else the word "extra" (for an encore) which is being played by the orchestra, informs late comers just exactly "where they are at."

Special accommodations for checking bicycles in Bumstead Hall are being greatly appreciated.

Music Hall Promenades.

The program for the promenade concert at Music hall tonight will be as follows:

Manhattan beach march	Sousa
Overture, Merry Wives of Windsor	Nicolai
Waltz, Treasure	Strauss
Selection, Carmen	Bizet
Two Hungarian dances	Brahms
Aubade Aux Maries	Lacombe
Loin du Bal	Gillet
Entree Triomphale des Boyards	Halvorsen
Overture, [illegible]	Auber
Waltz, [illegible]	Corbin
[illegible]	Strauss
[illegible]	Strauss

—— The Friday evening Popular Concert drew a fashionable audience. Among those present were: Mrs. John L. Gardner and party, Mrs Franz Zerrahn, Mr. Clayton Johns, Mrs. Arthur Rotch, Mr. Percival Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sheafe, Mr. Matthew Luce, Mr. Wadsworth Longfellow and party, Mrs. Gordon Abbot, Mr. Paul Butler and party, Col. Harry Hastings and party, Mrs. Ronald Stuart and party, Mr. Alex Higginson, Lieut. Winder, Mr. Charles Francis Adams and party, Mr. Randolph Coolidge and Mrs. Fisk Warren.

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17.

The Promenade Concerts.

The eleventh season of the promenade concerts was inaugurated in MUSIC HALL, on Monday evening, and a large and sociable audience was present to do honor to the occasion. Mr. Max Zach is the conductor, and the orchestra under his control is composed of members of the Symphony Orchestra. Under the circumstances it is almost needless to record that the music was interpreted in a most artistic manner, and stirred the listeners into unwonted enthusiasm. The waltzes were the most popular items on the programme, although it is only justice to record that the audience atoned for applauding Strauss by redemanding a Bach gavotte.

The concerts are thoroughly pleasant affairs; they allow one to take music at one's ease, to drink beer, smoke cigars and to chat with one's friends. Sometimes the music was played so loudly that it temporarily interrupted conversation, sometimes it was played so softly that flirtation ceased to be a confidence between two people, but these trifles did not mar the pleasure of the occasion. The only people who had the right to complain were those who came to hear the music. and it is to be regretted that their rights were not respected. The hubbub of conversation was so continuous that the fine work of the orchestra could not be always heard, but one must not expect classic gravity at a promenade concert, and, for a time at least, the majority of people will take advantage of the fact that they are not compelled to listen to the music.

The programmes of the week were admirable in selection, as well as in interpretation; there were variety and contrast, and while the music, as a rule, was popular in character it was never trivial; the music was always good music. Lovers of music speedily discovered this fact, and the size of the audience steadily increased during the week, an audience distinguished for its quality as well as its quantity. Judging from the earlier evenings it would seem that these promenade concerts are more popular than ever, and it is certain that they remain at the high art level that has always distinguished them. It is no ordinary pleasure to hear Mr. Zach and his orchestra play the Strauss waltzes, and the more serious pieces were interpreted with a style and finish that were worthy of the reputation of the orchestra. The promenade concerts started with unusual brilliancy, and there is no sign of a wane in their hospitality.

— The initial Promenade Concerts of the season, at Music Hall, on Monday evening, was a brilliant affair under Mr. Max Zach's able baton and the excellent management of Mr. F. R. Comee. Among the large audience were noticed Mrs. John L. Gardner and her niece, Miss Olga Gardner, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Inches, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., and the latter's sister, Miss Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. F. Gordon Dexter, Mrs. W. P. Fay, Miss Katharine Fay, Mrs. Henry L. Higginson, Mr. Alexander Higginson, Mr. Lawrence Haughton, Mr. Charles Sampson, Mrs. William Baty Blake, Miss Charlotte Houston, Mr. T. C. Hollander and a party of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Apthorp, Mr. Edward Gray, Mr. J. Bryce Allen with his fiancée, Miss Palfrey, and a party, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Sears and party, Mr. and Mrs. Franz E. Zerrahn, Mr. William Rotch, Mr. Isidore Bragiotti, Mr. and Mrs. Herman P. Duryea and party, Lieut. Winder, U. S. N., Mr. Harry Wainwright, Col. H. A. Thomas and Mr. Jack Tilden.

Boston Journal.

TEN PAGES.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

THE "POPS."

The "Pop" concerts at Music Hall are attracting large audiences every evening. The orchestra of 50 under the direction of Mr. Zach have never been heard to better advantage. The programs contain some novelty each evening. For this evening's concert the following numbers will be played:

March, "Austria," Zach; overture, "Tannhauser," Wagner; waltz, "Barcarole," Waldteufel; selection, "Fatinitza," Suppe; two movements from "Bal Costume," Rubinstein; Cavatina, Raff; "Clair de Lune," Gillet; overture, "Oberon," Weber; selection, "The Brigands," Offenbach; serenade, "A toi," Czibulka; Pizzicato polka, Strauss; march "Fra Bombarda," Czibulka.

— At the Promenade concert on Tuesday evening. Mr. J. Bryce Allen and his fiancée, Miss Anna Palfrey occupied a table. Miss Palfrey was in a black grenadine over burntorange silk with a large white hat with green velvet trimmings for which a bird with outstretched wings formed an effective front. Her cousin, Mrs. Herbert M. Sears was with her, wearing a navy blue silk with white figures and a jetted toque. Mr. Sears and Mr. George Von L. Meyer completed the party. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Barnabee, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Wadleigh, and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Prior.

— The Promenade Concert on Friday night drew out a brilliant gathering. Mr. and Mrs. George A. Nickerson had a party at one table. At another were Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Gookin and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bigelow Williams, Dr. and Mrs. George Hills Francis and Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Jenkins were among the other people present.

BOSTON POST,

The Representative Democratic Paper OF NEW ENGLAND.

A specially fine programme will be played at the Pop concert tonight, including Chopin's "Polonaise," Schumann's "Traenmeree," two pieces from "The Damnation of Faust" and Suppe's "Beautiful Galatea." Max Zach has proved a very popular leader.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1896.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The Pops have come again and society has again stamped them with its seal of approval by lending a most generous attendance all the week. They are the same old pops. Max Zach, the new conductor, has wisely accorded with the ways in past seasons, in the making up of his programmes; a few of the heavy classical selections are found on each, but the ruling element is of the light, frothy order. The most noticeable difference from past years greets the eye as one turns into Hamilton place, before entering Music hall. It is the incandescent sign "Promedade Concerts," which lights up the whole place, and in a way prepares one for the life and light within. In the absence of Mr. Ellis, the responsibility of the management this year rests on Mr. Fred Comee's shoulders, and right able are they to assure their complete success. The opening night last Monday was the most brilliant of the week. Representatives of Boston's smartest society were there in goodly numbers and jostled in entering, and sat beside those who could not aspire to their exclusive circle. We can not think of any other place where such a general commingling of sets is allowable, but at the Pops no one minds; a delicious Bohemian atmosphere pervades everything and the enticing music, with the popping of beer stoppers for an undertone accompaniment, makes everyone happy. The grim old walls have been relieved by festoons of laurels, and there is a background of pine trees for the musicians. At first it seemed that the audience had forgotten that a welcome was due Max Zach in his new position as conductor, but before the programme was half finished they remembered their duty, and the heartiness of the applause made up for its tardiness. Among those noticed were Mrs. John L. Gardner, Miss Olga Gardner, Miss Elsie Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Apthorp, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper, Mr. Alexander H. Higginson, Mrs. Caroline Hall Washburne and party, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Holden, Mr. Gordon Dexter, Mr. William R. Rotch, Mr. James Kidder, Mr. and Mrs. Franz Kneisel, Mr. Lawrence Houghton, Mr. Walter S. Hawkins, Mr. Clarence Hollander, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Shepard, Mr. A. R. Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. Walter Deland Came, Miss Fay, Miss Sally Fairchild, Miss Gertrude Edmands, Miss Salome Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Grilley, Mrs. Jack Tilden, Mr. William Roach, Mr. Walter Dugan, Mr. Frank Locke, Miss Ethel Hornick, Mrs. F. R. Comee, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Lauriat, Miss Lauriat, Mr. Frank E. Chase, Mrs. L. H. Mudgett, Mr. and and Mrs. John J. Taylor, Mr. Ernest B. McKim, Miss Lottie Mann, Mr. W. F. Fitzgerald, Mr. Alwin Schroeder, Mr. Otto Roth, Mr. Holker Abbott.

THE POPS.

An Excellent Programme for Monday Evening, May 18.

The programme for Monday evening will be:

Swedish Wedding March..........Soedermann
Overture, "Mignon"...................A. Thomas
Waltz, "Fesche Geister"..................Strauss
Selection, "Gondoliers"..................Sullivan
Scherzo, Notturno, and Wedding March..
..................................Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from "Naila"..................Delibes
Entree Triomphale des Boyards..........
..................................Joh. Halvorsen
(First Time).
Mazourka from "Hälka"............Moniuszko
(First Time.)
Overture, "Le Brasseur de Preston"......Adam
Waltz, "O Schöner Mai" from "Prince
Methusalem"........................Strauss
Jockey Galop..............................Bayer
(First Time).
March, "Under the Double Eagle".....Wagner

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 137.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

THE POPS.

The programme for this evening's "Pop" concert in Music Hall is:

March, "Austria"............................Zach
Overture, "Tannhauser"..................Wagner
Waltz, "Barcarole"....................Waldteufel
Selection, "Fatinitza"......................Suppe
Two movements from "Bal Costume"....
Rubinstein
Cavatina....................................Raff
Serenade, "A toi"......................Czibulka
Overture, "Oberon"........................Weber
Selection, "The Brigands"............Offenbach
"Clair de Lune".............................Gillet
Pizzicato polka..........................Strauss
Galop, "Indian Mail"...................Lamothe

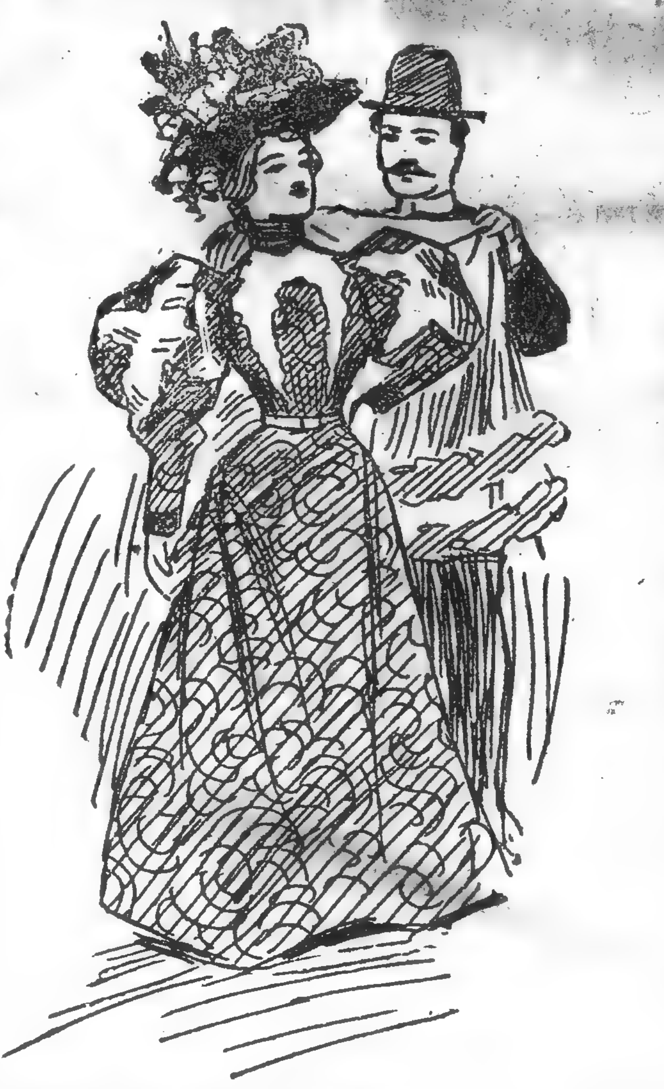
NG RECORD FRIDA[illegible] 1896.

THUMBNAIL SKETCHES AT A "POP."

"Mr. Zach is better looking by far than his predecessors. Some of them have been freaks!"

This was the amusingly frank criticism I overheard fall from the lips of a pretty girl at the promenade concelt last night.

The criticism was true, so far as it went. It might also have been said that Mr. Zach is a better conductor than some of his predecessors. A member of the symphony orchestra for the last ten years, and a composer of so high an order that he has often acted as kapelmeister while the orchestra played his compositions. Max Zach is assuredly a young man with a future, and all the regular symphony-goers are very glad to have him exchange his seat at the first desk of the viola with Svecenski for the conductor's platform.



THE WOMEN TURNED TO WATCH HER FIGURED BLACK SILK.

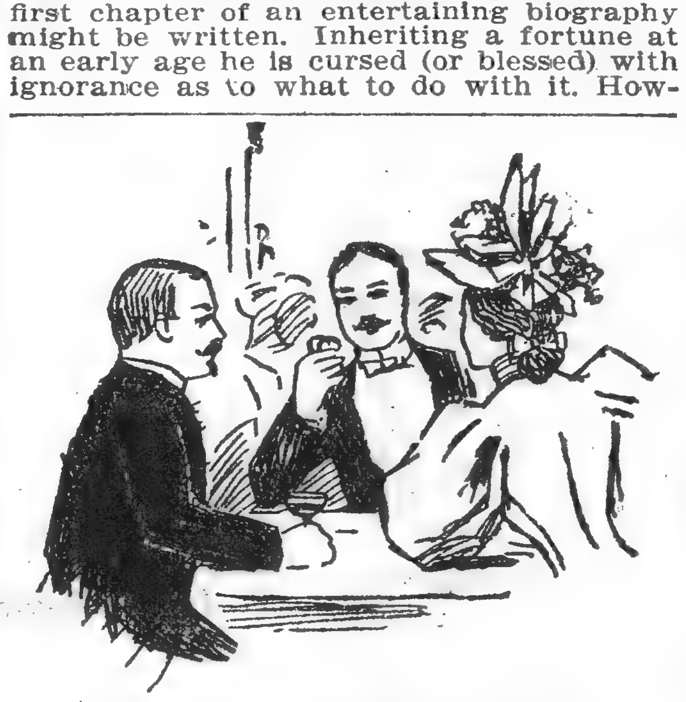
I notice the Apthorps, Frank Seabury, at least one of the Sears twins, Clayton Johns, the Burnhams and Ned Gray, W. P. Blake, Matthew Luce, Miss Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Eben Stanwood, and the beautiful Miss Houston (with the Apthorps) Lieut. Winder, U. S. N., was also noted.

"Society" may be generally seen at the tables, where the majority are served with beer. I was surprised to see that not a few of the ladies like to taste the sweets of Bohemianism; still, the greater number of the fair sex take lemonade with or without claret.

About in the centre of the sacred enclosed space below me, there sat a youthful part yof four. The host of the evening was a young man who bears the same name as the famous Princeton athlete who has just distngiushed himself at Athens.

The young man was languidly chewing a pretzel when my attention was first attracted to him.

He is a character concerning whom the first chapter of an entertaining biography might be written. Inheriting a fortune at an early age he is cursed (or blessed) with ignorance as to what to do with it. However, as a sort of tentative undertaking he has opened a bicycle store, having always made bicycles his hobby.



THE YOUNG MAN WITH A PRETZEL.

He manifests a most laudable desire to do business, too, and in hsi anxiety to do actual work himself he has sternly resolved to undertake what might be regarded by some aristocrats as menial manual labor. He has resolved to deliver the bicycles sold with his own hands. And to this end he has caused to be built a very stylish trap just large enough to carry a bicycle, besides the colored driver, and this very enterprising young man.

The costumes were some of them beautiful. A very striking one was of black and white figured silk, with straps of white chiffon forming a great Maltese cross on each sleeve, and the chiffon insertion relieving also the yoke. Stock and girdle and cuffs were of hunter's green velvet. The hat was a Manila sailor, with a big oriflamme of black and write sriped ribbon, and purple white violets and green leaves.

At the same table sat another young woman gowned in black satin with bodice of white covered lace, and wearing a black straw hat trimmed with black chiffon, violets and turquoise blue ribbon.

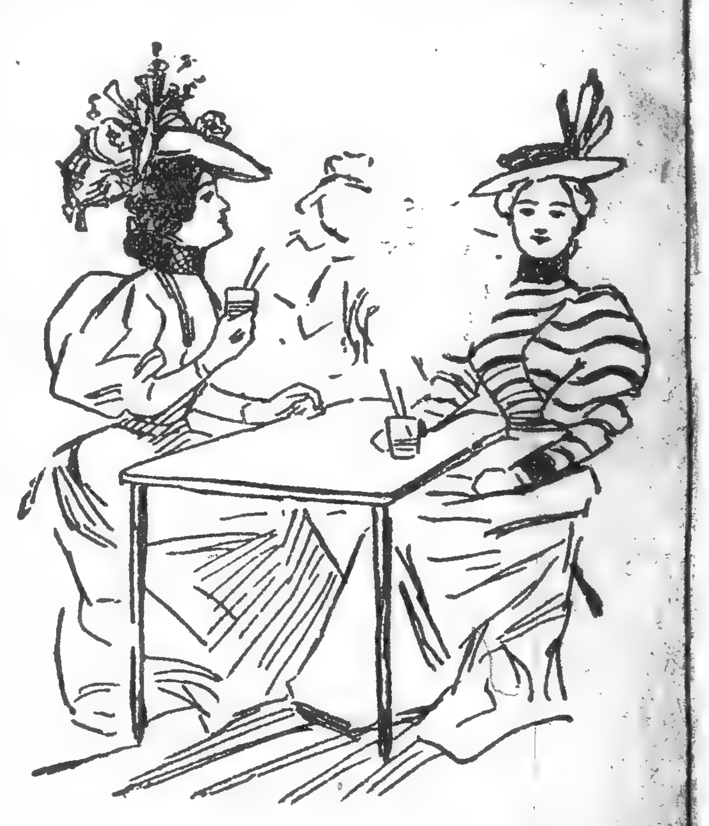
At the next table were two more butterflies.. One appeared in a gorgeous Persian silk, with purple toque trimmed with roses; and the other wore a lovely Dresden flowered silk the coloring being of the most delicate tints of pink, and her hat was a dark green straw sailor shape adorned with purple flowers and green flags.

Not far from the stage was a woman who wore one of those startling "bandana" waists with black crepon sleeves, the waist itself being one of those which were made up during the winter by the drygoods houses of from four to six bandana handkerchiefs, which retail at from $1 to $1.50—the finished waist being sold at something like $25.

One woman in a party of three ladies with one man (and that man hal left his wife at home for I know him, horrid thing), wore a costume of greencloth with melon sleeves and trimmed with mink, the sleeves having straps of the mink, and a boa of mink encircling the neck.

One striking costume showed sleeves of dotted yellow silk, the jacket front of Persian silk, the bodice of pale blue and two mink tails pendant; and the hot of black straw with two big black plumes rising from the centre of the crown and the brim bordered with a white lace frill, the hat set at a zipping angle!

At the same table with this young lady sat another, who was gowned soberly in black, but whose hat was a marvel—of black straw, with a wreath of pink roses full-blown and buds, green leaves, and a big white satin bow set just between two gigantic Mercury wings.



"LEMONADE IS THE NEW WOMAN'S TIPPLE.'

Acostume which might be termed severe (?) in contrast to some of the gayer ones was ow brown tweed, tailor made, with coat having purple revers and belt, and bodice of black and white striped silk, the striped running horizontally, white satin stock, and the hat of light fancy straw, the bread brim flaring strangely in front, the crown encircled with a band of black velvet, and bunches of magenta flowers grouped heterogenously.

A simple costume of a young girl was a black and white check silk with Tam-o'-Shanter cap of brown ooze leather.

The men who sat withni the sacred precincts of the rail were many of them in full dress, but only one white waistcoat as noticed. Outside the rail just one solitary man in evening clothes as observed.

A young man in company with a pretty girl fell asleep during the playing of the "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner's most tempestuous passages.

The Harvard boys too, seem laterly to be restraining their natural desire to run things, and their natural propensity to make a noise. Of course, it may be because they do not nowadays have anything to make a noise over. But that is a rather cruel suggestion.

The placing, in series of placards upon the stage bearing either the number according to the programme of the selection or else the word "extra" (for an encore) which is being played by the orchestra, informs late comers just exactly "where they are at."

Special accommodations for checking bicycles in Bumstead Hall are being greatly appreciated.

Music Hall Promenades.

The program for the promenade concert at Music hall tonight will be as follows:

Manhattan beach march ....Sousa
Overture, Merry Wives of Windsor .....Nicolai
Waltz, Treasure ....Strauss
Selection, Carmen ....Bizet
Two Hungariah dances ....Brahms
Aubade Aux Maries ....Lacombe
Loin du Bal ....Gillet
Entree Triomphale des Boyards .....Halvorsen
Overture, Masaniello.......................Auber
Waltz, Santiago ....Corbin
Polka, Sangerlust ....Strauss
Merry War ....Strauss

— The Friday evening Popular Concert drew a fashionable audience. Among those present were: Mrs. John L. Gardner and party, Mrs Franz Zerrahn, Mr. Clayton Johns, Mrs. Arthur Rotch, Mr. Percival Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sheafe, Mr. Matthew Luce, Mr. Wadsworth Longfellow and party, Mrs. Gordon Abbot, Mr. Paul Butler and party, Col. Harry Hastings and party, Mrs. Ronald Stuart and party, Mr. Alex Higginson, Lieut. Winder, Mr. Charles Francis Adams and party, Mr. Randolph Coolidge and Mrs. Fisk Warren.

The [illegible] of the City.

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 16, 1896.

COSTUMES AT THE "POP."

Some of the costumes worn at the "pop" concert were beautiful.

A very striking one was of black and white figured silk, with straps of white chiffon forming a great Maltese cross on each sleeve, and the chiffon insertion relieving also the yoke. Stock and girdle and cuffs were of hunter's green velvet. The hat was a Manila sailor, with a big oriflamme of black and white striped ribbon, and purple white violets and green leaves.

At the same table sat another young woman gowned in black satin with bodice of white covered lace, and wearing a black straw hat trimmed with black chiffon, violets and turquoise blue ribbon.

At the next table were two more butterflies. One appeared in a gorgeous Persian silk, with purple toque trimmed with roses; and the other wore a lovely Dresden flowered silk the coloring being of the most delicate tints of pink, and her hat was a dark green straw sailor shape adorned with purple flowers and green flags.

Not far from the stage was a woman who wore one of those startling "bandana" waists with black crepon sleeves, the waist itself being one of those which were made up during the winter by the dry goods houses of from four to six bandana handkerchiefs, which retail at from $1 to $1.50—the finished waist being sold at something like $25.

One woman in a party of three ladies with one man (and that man had left his wife at home for I know him, horrid thing), wore a costume of green mloth with melon sleeves and trimmed with mink, the sleeves having straps of the mink, and a boa of mink encircling the neck.

One striking costume showed sleeves of dotted yellow silk, the jacket front of Persian silk, the bodice of pale blue and two mink tails pendant; and the hat of black straw with two big black plumes rising from the centre of the crown and the brim bordered with a white lace frill, the hat set at a zipping angle!

At the same table with this young lady sat another, who was gowned soberly in black, but whose hat was a marvel—of black straw, with a wreath of pink roses full-blown and buds, green leaves, and a big white satin bow set just between two gigantic Mercury wings.

A costume which might be termed severe (?) in contrast to some of the gayer ones was of brown tweed, tailor made, with coat having purple revers and belt, and bodice of black and white striped silk, the striped running horizontally, white satin stock, and the hat of light fancy straw, the broad rim flaring strangely in front, the crown encircled with a band of black velvet, and bunches of magenta flowers grouped heterogenously.

A simple costume of a young girl was a black and white check silk with Tam-o'-Shanter cap of brown ooze leather.

The men who sat within the sacred precincts of the rail were many of them in full dress, but only one white waistcoat was noticed. Outside the rail just one solitary man in evening clothes as observed.

A young man in company with a pretty girl fell asleep during the playing of the "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner's most tempestuous passages.

The Harvard boys too, seem latterly to be restraining their natural desire to run things, and their natural propensity to make a noise. Of course, it may be because they do not nowadays have anything to make a noise over. But that is a rather cruel suggestion.

The placing, in series of placards upon the stage bearing either the number according to the programme of the selection or else the word "extra" (for an encore) which is being played by the orchestra, informs late comers just exactly "where they are at."

The Boston Commercial.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

The Promenade Concerts.

The attendance at the concerts at Music Hall this week has been very large and lovers of music have had much that was admirable placed before them. The programmes of the week have met the popular demand in every respect and the music has been interpreted by the orchestra in a most artistic manner. Mr. Zach, the new leader, has won considerable reputation already and the programmes arranged by him retain the high art level that has always distinguished these thoroughly pleasant affairs. It is very evident that these concerts are to be more popular if anything, than ever, as they have started in upon their eleventh season with unusual brilliancy.

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 134.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1896.

SUMMER MUSIC.

The eleventh season of Promenade concerts, more familiarly called the "Pops," opened with all the proper ceremonies, and proved, as in the past, how magnetic is the lighter music. It is pleasant to compare these full-fledged, easy-going functions with the first "Pop" concert of a decade ago, and to remember how shyly Boston behaved when it was first bidden to smoke and drink to the cheerful strains of a good orchestra. In those days the band was not the ne plus ultra aggregate of musicians that it is now. Music Hall was somewhat fresher, too, and great Symphony concerts had not mellowed Apollo, or set Beethoven on a back seat as it were; there was no sounding board to lend an air of a country meeting house shed to the dear old auditorium, but in the centre of the hall fluttered and frisked a fountain, and pots of tall shrubbery dotted the stage and floor, interspersed with tables and chairs. These latter were few and far between, and it must be confessed the occupants thereof looked somewhat lonesome while trying to adapt themselves to a beer garden style of enjoyment, then so foreign to conservative Boston ideas. It took more than one season to accustom the town to this delightful innovation; the knowing and experienced patrons accepted it at once, but the majority was won by degrees, yet so completely in the end that the fountain and potted shrubbery disappeared to make room for the more decorative and numerous summer girl and her smoky escort. Season after season this patronage increased. Harvard recuperated under the balcony, and all the "floating seaside population" found out what a fascinating thing it is to mix waltzes with smoke and beer. As soon as society took a hand in the game, the "Pops" won their fashionable spurs, and rode to success and glory. Then, too, the choice of conductors has had great weight in keeping interest in these concerts at fever heat. The summer was a reflection of the winter, so that everybody felt the classical, serious music of Mr. Paur's orchestra was, for the nonce, turned to sparkling and blossomy tunes, to be listened to without effort, but with the comfort of knowing all is good. A chapter might be written on this evolution of the "Pop" concerts, but the attainment of their eleventh season is an eloquent argument for lighter music, and a proof positive that Boston is a city second to none in its love of the divine art. Had the orchestra been of an indifferent calibre, or had less care been taken in making the programmes, it is a question if even the attraction of drink and cigars could have sustained the giddy series through so many years. There has always been dash and go to the performances, and, consequently, their novelty has remained unchallenged. But not to go to the "Pops" is to deprive music lovers of a phase of time-killing that cannot be too highly commended. The spectacle of Music Hall, the opening night, bore testimony to the truth that nothing succeeds like success, for the floor was packed with tables and their social groups of representative Bostonians. It was a gay scene viewed through a cloud of smoke. Talk and snappy matches, with the swish of the omnipresent waiters, and the clink of glasses punctured the quieter passages of the playing; but, as this is the principal charm of a promenade concert, people shouldn't be offended by such interruptions. It has been proved again and again that these gatherings would lose all their magnetism for the public if the habitue was obliged to be mute. M. Zach makes the request on his programme for silence during performances of certain numbers, but tactfully refrains from rapping on the conductor's desk, in the pedagogic fashion of some of his predecessors. Beyond this, however anxious enthusiasts may be to hear every note of a favorite piece, it is not wise to go. One listens, or one speaks, and the freedom of a partie carree, in that respect, has given the "Pops" long life and favor among some of the most musical people in the city.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1896.

BOSTON STANDARD.

SECOND "POP" CONCERT.

Wagnerian Music Becoming More Popular with the Frequenters of Music Hall.

The second Music Hall promenade concert was, if possible, more warmly received than the first performance.

Mr. Zach is a great acquisition to the orchestra. His music is chosen from such a variety of composers that every lover of music is delighted.

The growing popular sentiment for Wagner is plainly noticeable. The first years of the popular concerts never saw such an enthusiastic reception of Wagner as was accorded "Rienzi" last night. The public is rapidly falling into an appreciation of better music. There were a few numbers of really light music on the program, but the splendid orchestra was frequently called upon to encore.

Strauss' new waltz, "Frau, Schau, Wein," established itself as firmly in the public esteem as is usual with this Boston favorite's productions; the sweet waltz, which is original, had got to be a bygone hope before Strauss' mazy harmonies became a part of the repertoire of every good orchestra. It is more than worth the admission price alone to hear a Strauss waltz.

"Faust" was somewhat differently orchestrated than it is with the singers. The French horns were beautiful in their execution of the garden scene. The audience was deeply moved by the soothing pathetic movement of this scene of Gounod's great opera.

The "Peer Gynt" suite, by Grieg, was never better rendered. The movement of Anita's dance was improved by a slow rendition. This frequently loses in delicacy by being hurried, Mr. Zach's musicians executed the exquisite strains with an appreciative delicacy that won a storm of applause from the whole of the crowded house.

Without the "pop" concerts, Boston would be lost at this time of the year. There was hardly an available spot that was not occupied.

The program for this evening is as follows: 1

1. March from Suite..........Lachner
2. Overture, "Barber of Seville"..........Rossini
3. Waltz, "Kaiser"..........Joh. Strauss
4. Selection, "Robin Hood"..........De Koven
5. Ballet music, "Feramers"..........Rubinstein
6. Minuet..........Bulzoni
7. Selection, "Cavalleria Rusticana"..Mascagni
8. Ride of the Valkyries..........Wagner
9. Overture, "Poet and Peasant"..........Suppe
10. Waltz, "Les Patineurs"..........Waldteufel
11. Galop, "Kosakenritt"..........Millocker
12. Persian March..........Strauss

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17.
(Copyright 1896, Post Publishing Company.)

SUMMER PROMENADES.

The first week of the regular season of "Pop concerts" ended with the performance at Music Hall last night before a very large audience. The attendance during the past week has been all that the management could desire, and many were turned away every night unable to secure seats at the reserved tables.

Mr. Max Zach is very highly praised for the able way in which he leads the orchestra and in the arrangement of his programmes. For the coming week many novelties are promised.

The programme for tomorrow night is:

Swedish Wedding March..........Soedermann
Overture, "Mignon"..........A. Thomas
Waltz, "Fesche Geister"..........Strauss
Selection, "Gondoliers"..........Sullivan
Scherzo, Notturno and Wedding March....
Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from "Naila"..........Delibes
Entree Triomphale des Bayards...Joh. Halvorsen
(First Time.)
Mazourka from "Halka"..........Moniuszko
(First Time.)
Overture, "Le Brasseur de Preston"......Adam
Waltz, "O Schoner Mai," from "Prince Methusalem"..........Strauss
Jockey Galop..........Bayer
(First Time.)
March, "Under the Double Eagle"..........Wagner

On the opening night of the Music Hall Pops Mrs. John L. Gardner occupied a prominent place on the floor. She was dressed in a dainty costume of white silk. At her table were several invited friends. Mr. Zach was most warmly received in his new role of conductor, and the spirited comments heard on every side showed that a strong appreciation was felt for his excellent choice of programme.

The Official Paper of the City.

TUESDAY MORNING, MAY 12, 1896.

MUSIC HALL "POPS."

They Start on a Somewhat Higher Plane Than Heretofore.

The musical banquet for 1895-96 is ended; symphony, fugue, oratorio, and opera have been served in their various courses and the digestion of the Boston concert-goer can stand no more. But there is still a very agreeable dessert which makes no demands upon the musical analyst, which serves up the coffee and cheese in a manner that gives enjoyment without any suspicion of labor, and rounds out the season with a pleasant joviality that even the severe classicist cannot find any fault with. In short, the "Pops" have begun. To the average Bostonian they have become as indispensable as the Symphony Concerts themselves, and the tremendous and enthusiastic audience of last night proved that their beginning is awaited with something approaching ardor.

Naturally the chief interest centres upon the conductor on these occasions, for there has been a change in the directorship almost every season, giving a certain spice of novelty which is not expected or desired in the symphonic programmes. This year it is Mr. Max Zach who is to lead the orchestra in the lighter season which is so highly prized by the stay-at-homes, and the impression he made in the concert of last night was a distinctly favorable one. His beat is decisive, his control of the musical forces firm, and his musical intelligence marked both in the interpretation of the numbers and in the selection of these numbers, although at times there could be more rapidity in his tempi.

The quality of the orchestra needs no detailed analysis, since the organization is made up almost wholly from the ranks of the regular Symphony Orchestra. There is probably no better summer orchestra giving popular programmes in the world at present.

As in all previous seasons the parts of the programme are divided in a well-defined manner, the first part giving a miscellaneous group of numbers, the second presenting the most ambitious works of the concert, and the third part being of a light and jocund character.

Mr. Zach was received with a cordiality that must have put him at once at his ease, for he immediately set about justifying his welcome.

There was an exception made in the arrangement of the numbers, last night, so that the first work on the programme was a most brilliant one—Liszt's Polonaise in E—and this was performed in such a dashing manner that it won the heartiest of applause. Other noteworthy numbers of last night's programme were Massenet's "Scenes Pittoresques," "Narcissus" (the charming pastorale), by Ethelbert Nevin, a Bach Adagio and Gavotte, arranged for string orchestra, Liszt's long and seldom-played Hungarian Rhapsody in F, and two charming overtures by Adam and Nicolai.

Altogether the concerts have started on a somewhat higher plane than heretofore, yet there is nothing dull or dry in the programmes, and the execution leaves nothing to be desired.

The enthusiasm last night was almost continuous, and Gambrinus was introduced to Apollo with quite as much eclat as on any previous occasion, the summer season of light music bidding fair to rival any of its predecessors.

That the taste of the audience is advancing may be proved by the fact that the Adagio and Gavotte received an encore (the Gavotte only being repeated); fancy John Sebastian Bach receiving an encore at the "pops"!!

Louis C. Elson.

The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896

No "Pops" next week until Friday night, all on account of "anniversary week" and previous engagements of the hall. There is one tonight, just the same.

Nothing like the Pops.

Would it be proper to say the Pops are a howling success;—now would it?

HOME JOURNAL

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

The popular promenade concerts in Music Hall are as notable successes this year as previously, and Mr. Zach is proving a favorite as conductor. The public is asked to take special notice of the fact that owing to long standing engagements of the hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 25 to 28. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 29.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.
Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.
SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 16, 1896.

COSTUMES AT THE "POP."

Some of the costumes worn at the "pop" concert were beautiful.

A very striking one was of black and white figured silk, with straps of white chiffon forming a great Maltese cross on each sleeve, and the chiffon insertion relieving also the yoke. Stock and girdle and cuffs were of hunter's green velvet. The hat was a Manila sailor, with a big oriflamme of black and white striped ribbon, and purple white violets and green leaves.

At the same table sat another young woman gowned in black satin with bodice of white covered lace, and wearing a black straw hat trimmed with black chiffon, violets and turquoise blue ribbon.

At the next table were two more butterflies.. One appeared in a gorgeous Persian silk, with purple toque trimmed with roses; and the other wore a lovely Dresden flowered silk the coloring being of the most delicate tints of pink, and her hat was a dark green straw sailor shape adorned with purple flowers and green flags.

Not far from the stage was a woman who wore one of those startling "bandana" waists with black crepon sleeves, the waist itself being one of those which were made up during the winter by the dry goods houses of from four to six bandana handkerchiefs, which retail at from $1 to $1.50—the finished waist being sold at something like $25.

One woman in a party of three ladies with one man (and that man had left his wife at home for I know him, horrid thing), wore a costume of green mloth with melon sleeves and trimmed with mink, the sleeves having straps of the mink, and a boa of mink encircling the neck.

One striking costume showed sleeves of dotted yellow silk, the jacket front of Persian silk, the bodice of pale blue and two mink tails pendant; and the hat of black straw with two big black plumes rising from the centre of the crown and the brim bordered with a white lace frill, the hat set at a zipping angle!

At the same table with this young lady sat another, who was gowned soberly in black, but whose hat was a marvel—of black straw, with a wreath of pink roses full-blown and buds, green leaves, and a big white satin bow set just between two gigantic Mercury wings.

A costume which might be termed severe (?) in contrast to some of the gayer ones was of brown tweed, tailor made, with coat having purple revers and belt, and bodice of black and white striped silk, the striped running horizontally, white satin stock, and the hat of light fancy straw, the broad rim flaring strangely in front, the crown encircled with a band of black velvet, and bunches of magenta flowers grouped heterogenously.

A simple costume of a young girl was a black and white check silk with Tam-o'-Shanter cap of brown ooze leather.

The men who sat within the sacred precincts of the rail were many of them in full dress, but only one white waistcoat was noticed. Outside the rail just one solitary man in evening clothes as observed.

A young man in company with a pretty girl fell asleep during the playing of the "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner's most tempestuous passages.

The Harvard boys too, seem latterly to be restraining their natural desire to run things, and their natural propensity to make a noise. Of course, it may be because they do not nowadays have anything to make a noise over. But that is a rather cruel suggestion.

The placing, in series of placards upon the stage bearing either the number according to the programme of the selection or else the word "extra" (for an encore) which is being played by the orchestra, informs late comers just exactly "where they are at."

The Boston Commercial.
SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

The Promenade Concerts.

The attendance at the concerts at Music Hall this week has been very large and lovers of music have had much that was admirable placed before them. The programmes of the week have met the popular demand in every respect and the music has been interpreted by the orchestra in a most artistic manner. Mr. Zach, the new leader, has won considerable reputation already and the programmes arranged by him retain the high art level that has always distinguished these thoroughly pleasant affairs. It is very evident that these concerts are to be more popular if anything, than ever, as they have started in upon their eleventh season with unusual brilliancy.

BOSTON HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 134.
WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1896.

SUMMER MUSIC.

The eleventh season of Promenade concerts, more familiarly called the "Pops," opened with all the proper ceremonies, and proved, as in the past, how magnetic is the lighter music. It is pleasant to compare these full-fledged, easy-going functions with the first "Pop" concert of a decade ago, and to remember how shyly Boston behaved when it was first bidden to smoke and drink to the cheerful strains of a good orchestra. In those days the band was not the ne plus ultra aggregate of musicians that it is now. Music Hall was somewhat fresher, too, and great Symphony concerts had not mellowed Apollo, or set Beethoven on a back seat as it were; there was no sounding board to lend an air of a country meeting house shed to the dear old auditorium, but in the centre of the hall fluttered and frisked a fountain, and pots of tall shrubbery dotted the stage and floor, interspersed with tables and chairs. These latter were few and far between, and it must be confessed the occupants thereof looked somewhat lonesome while trying to adapt themselves to a beer garden style of enjoyment, then so foreign to conservative Boston ideas. It took more than one season to accustom the town to this delightful innovation; the knowing and experienced patrons accepted it at once, but the majority was won by degrees, yet so completely in the end that the fountain and potted shrubbery disappeared to make room for the more decorative and numerous summer girl and her smoky escort. Season after season this patronage increased. Harvard recuperated under the balcony, and all the "floating seaside population" found out what a fascinating thing it is to mix waltzes with smoke and beer. As soon as society took a hand in the game, the "Pops" won their fashionable spurs, and rode to success and glory. Then, too, the choice of conductors has had great weight in keeping interest in these concerts at fever heat. The summer was a reflection of the winter, so that everybody felt the classical, serious music of Mr. Paur's orchestra was, for the nonce, turned to sparkling and blossomy tunes, to be listened to without effort, but with the comfort of knowing all is good. A chapter might be written on this evolution of the "Pop" concerts, but the attainment of their eleventh season is an eloquent argument for lighter music, and a proof positive that Boston is a city second to none in its love of the divine art. Had the orchestra been of an indifferent calibre, or had less care been taken in making the programmes, it is a question if even the attraction of drink and cigars could have sustained the giddy series through so many years. There has always been dash and go to the performances, and, consequently, their novelty has remained unchallenged. But not to go to the "Pops" is to deprive music lovers of a phase of time-killing that cannot be too highly commended. The spectacle of Music Hall, the opening night, bore testimony to the truth that nothing succeeds like success, for the floor was packed with tables and their social groups of representative Bostonians. It was a gay scene viewed through a cloud of smoke. Talk and snappy matches, with the swish of the omnipresent waiters, and the clink of glasses punctured the quieter passages of the playing; but, as this is the principal charm of a promenade concert, people shouldn't be offended by such interruptions. It has been proved again and again that these gatherings would lose all their magnetism for the public if the habitue was obliged to be mute. M. Zach makes the request on his programme for silence during performances of certain numbers, but tactfully refrains from rapping on the conductor's desk, in the pedagogic fashion of some of his predecessors. Beyond this, however anxious enthusiasts may be to hear every note of a favorite piece, it is not wise to go. One listens, or one speaks, and the freedom of a partie carree, in that respect, has given the "Pops" long life and favor among some of the most musical people in the city.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1896.
BOSTON STANDARD.

SECOND "POP" CONCERT.

Wagnerian Music Becoming More Popular with the Frequenters of Music Hall.

The second Music Hall promenade concert was, if possible, more warmly received than the first performance.

Mr. Zach is a great acquisition to the orchestra. His music is chosen from such a variety of composers that every lover of music is delighted.

The growing popular sentiment for Wagner is plainly noticeable. The first years of the popular concerts never saw such an enthusiastic reception of Wagner as was accorded "Rienzi" last night. The public is rapidly falling into an appreciation of better music. There were a few numbers of really light music on the program, but the splendid orchestra was frequently called upon to encore.

Strauss' new waltz, "Frau, Schau, Wein," established itself as firmly in the public esteem as is usual with this Boston favorite's productions; the sweet waltz, which is original, had got to be a bygone hope before Strauss' mazy harmonies became a part of the repertoire of every good orchestra. It is more than worth the admission price alone to hear a Strauss waltz.

"Faust" was somewhat differently orchestrated than it is with the singers. The French horns were beautiful in their execution of the garden scene. The audience was deeply moved by the soothing pathetic movement of this scene of Gounod's great opera.

The "Peer Gynt" suite, by Grieg, was never better rendered. The movement of Anita's dance was improved by a slow rendition. This frequently loses in delicacy by being hurried, Mr. Zach's musicians executed the exquisite strains with an appreciative delicacy that won a storm of applause from the whole of the crowded house.

Without the "pop" concerts, Boston would be lost at this time of the year. There was hardly an available spot that was not occupied.

The program for this evening is as follows:

1. March from Suite	Lachner
2. Overture, "Barber of Seville"	Rossini
3. Waltz, "Kaiser"	Joh. Strauss
4. Selection, "Robin Hood"	De Koven
5. Ballet music, "Feramors"	Rubinstein
6. Minuet	Buizoni
7. Selection, "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
8. Ride of the Valkyries	Wagner
9. Overture, "Poet and Peasant"	Suppe
10. Waltz, "Les Patineurs"	Waldteufel
11. Galop, "Kosakenritt"	Millocker
12. Persian March	Strauss

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.
SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17.
(Copyright 1896, Post Publishing Company.)

SUMMER PROMENADES.

The first week of the regular season of "Pop concerts" ended with the performance at Music Hall last night before a very large audience. The attendance during the past week has been all that the management could desire, and many were turned away every night unable to secure seats at the reserved tables.

Mr. Max Zach is very highly praised for the able way in which he leads the orchestra and in the arrangement of his programmes. For the coming week many novelties are promised.

The programme for tomorrow night is:

Swedish Wedding March	Soedermann
Overture, "Mignon"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Fesche Geister"	Strauss
Selection, "Gondoliers"	Sullivan
Scherzo, Notturno and Wedding March	Mendelssohn
Intermezzo from "Nalla"	Delibes
Entree Triomphale des Bayards (First Time.)	Joh. Halvorsen
Mazourka from "Halka" (First Time.)	Moniuszko
Overture, "Le Brasseur de Preston"	Adam
Waltz, "O Schoner Mai," from "Prince Methusalem"	Strauss
Jockey Galop (First Time.)	Bayer
March, "Under the Double Eagle"	Wagner

On the opening night of the Music Hall Pops Mrs. John L. Gardner occupied a prominent place on the floor. She was dressed in a dainty costume of white silk. At her table were several invited friends. Mr. Zach was most warmly received in his new role of conductor, and the spirited comments heard on every side showed that a strong appreciation was felt for his excellent choice of programme.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.
Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.
TUESDAY MORNING, MAY 12, 1896.

MUSIC HALL "POPS."

They Start on a Somewhat Higher Plane Than Heretofore.

The musical banquet for 1895-96 is ended; symphony, fugue, oratorio, and opera have been served in their various courses and the digestion of the Boston concert-goer can stand no more. But there is still a very agreeable dessert which makes no demands upon the musical analyst, which serves up the coffee and cheese in a manner that gives enjoyment without any suspicion of labor, and rounds out the season with a pleasant joviality that even the severe classicist cannot find any fault with. In short, the "Pops" have begun. To the average Bostonian they have become as indispensable as the Symphony Concerts themselves, and the tremendous and enthusiastic audience of last night proved that their beginning is awaited with something approaching ardor.

Naturally the chief interest centres upon the conductor on these occasions, for there has been a change in the directorship almost every season, giving a certain spice of novelty which is not expected or desired in the symphonic programmes. This year it is Mr. Max Zach who is to lead the orchestra in the lighter season which is so highly prized by the stay-at-homes, and the impression he made in the concert of last night was a distinctly favorable one. His beat is decisive, his control of the musical forces firm, and his musical intelligence marked both in the interpretation of the numbers and in the selection of these numbers, although at times there could be more rapidity in his tempi.

The quality of the orchestra needs no detailed analysis, since the organization is made up almost wholly from the ranks of the regular Symphony Orchestra. There is probably no better summer orchestra giving popular programmes in the world at present.

As in all previous seasons the parts of the programme are divided in a well-defined manner, the first part giving a miscellaneous group of numbers, the second presenting the most ambitious works of the concert, and the third part being of a light and jocund character.

Mr. Zach was received with a cordiality that must have put him at once at his ease, for he immediately set about justifying his welcome.

There was an exception made in the arrangement of the numbers, last night, so that the first work on the programme was a most brilliant one—Liszt's Polonaise in E—and this was performed in such a dashing manner that it won the heartiest of applause. Other noteworthy numbers of last night's programme were Massenet's "Scenes Pittoresques," "Narcissus" (the charming pastorale), by Ethelbert Nevin, a Bach Adagio and Gavotte, arranged for string orchestra, Liszt's long and seldom-played Hungarian Rhapsody in F, and two charming overtures by Adam and Nicolai.

Altogether the concerts have started on a somewhat higher plane than heretofore, yet there is nothing dull or dry in the programmes, and the execution leaves nothing to be desired

The enthusiasm last night was almost continuous, and Gambrinus was introduced to Apollo with quite as much eclat as on any previous occasion, the summer season of light music bidding fair to rival any of its predecessors.

That the taste of the audience is advancing may be proved by the fact that the Adagio and Gavotte received an encore (the Gavotte only being repeated); fancy John Sebastian Bach receiving an encore at the "pops"!!

Louis C. Elson.

The Beacon.
BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896

No "Pops" next week until Friday night, all on account of "anniversary week" and previous engagements of the hall. There is one tonight, just the same.

Nothing like the Pops.

Would it be proper to say the Pops are a howling success;—now would it?

HOME JOURNAL
SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1896.

The popular promenade concerts in Music Hall are as notable successes this year as previously, and Mr. Zach is proving a favorite as conductor. The public is asked to take special notice of the fact that owing to long standing engagements of the hall, there will be no concerts on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 25 to 28. The concerts will be continued every evening except Sunday, beginning Friday, May 29.

[illegible] PAGES.
TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1896.

POPS BEGIN.

Promenade Concerts Open at Music Hall.

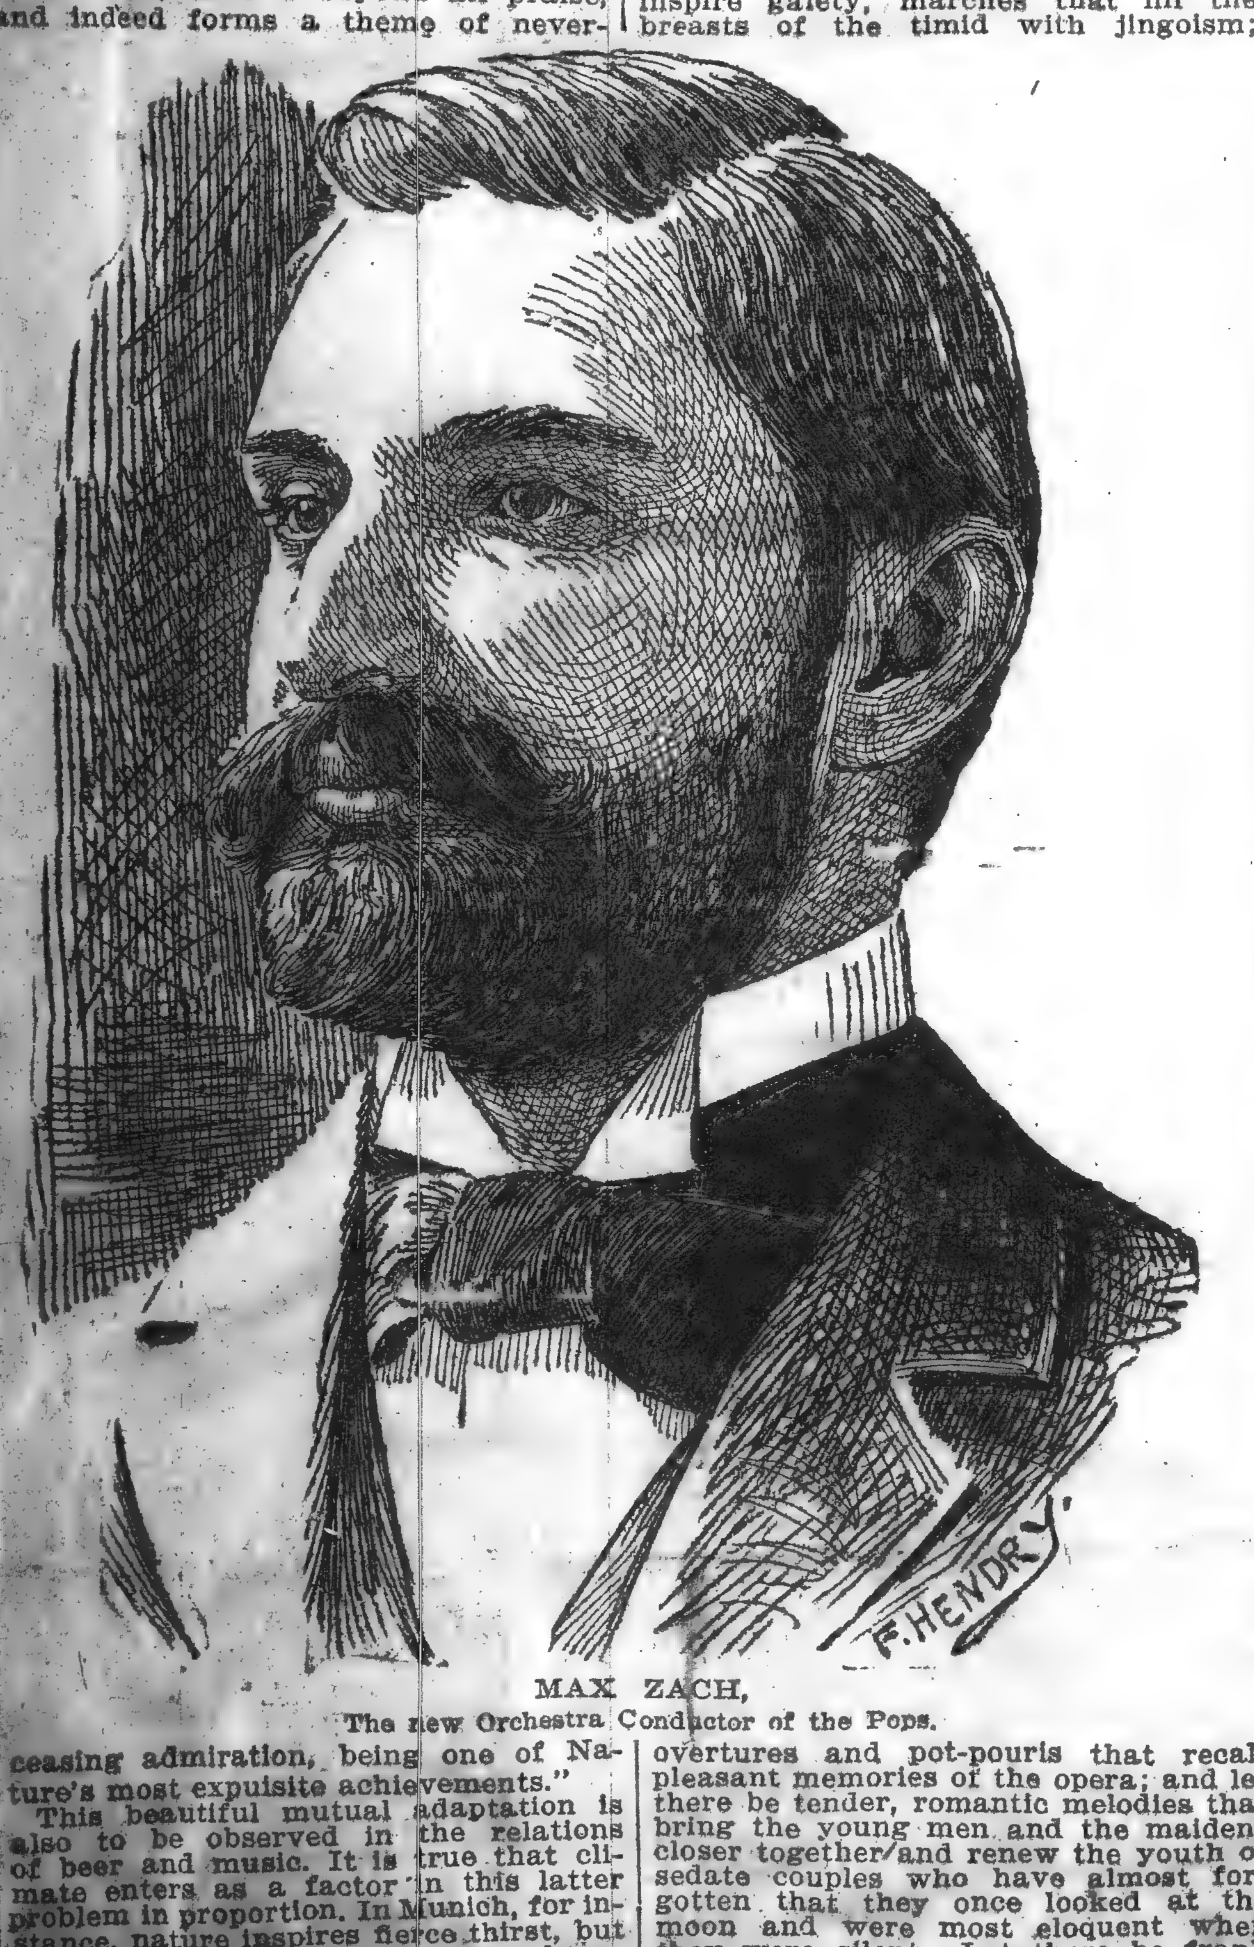
"The Village Postmaster," a New Play at the Park.

"Prince Ananias," "Old Jed Prouty" and "Carmen."

The eleventh season of the Promenade Concerts opened last evening in Music Hall, under the management of Mr. F. R. Comee. Mr. Max Zach of the Symphony Orchestra made his début as a conductor at these concerts. The program was as follows:

Polonaise in E	Liszt
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens,"	Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Aida,"	Verdi
Scenes Pittoresques	Massenet
a. March.
b. Air de Ballet.
c. Angelus.
d. Fete Boheme.
Narcissus	Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte (for string orchestra)	Bach
Hungarian Rhapsody in F	Liszt
Overture, "Si j'etais Roi"	Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Mazourka, "La Mousme"	Gane
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile" (First time.)	Victor Herbert

William Maginn, in one of his maxims, pregnant with thought, which was the result of keen observation and rich personal experience, exclaimed with adamantine conviction, "As to the beautiful mutual adaptation of cold rum and cold water, that is beyond all praise, and indeed forms a theme of never-ceasing admiration, being one of Nature's most expuisite achievements."



MAX ZACH,
The new Orchestra Conductor of the Pops.

This beautiful mutual adaptation is also to be observed in the relations of beer and music. It is true that climate enters as a factor in this latter problem in proportion. In Munich, for instance, nature inspires fierce thirst, but there is no city where thirst may be as easily, nutritiously and cheaply slaked. And everyone knows that Munich is a very musical town.

Articles on the singular relations between eating, drinking and music have already appeared in the Journal, and it is not now necessary to repeat the statements and the list of historical precedents contained therein. It is true that Hoffmann in his advice to composers as to the proper beverage to inspire an anthem, a symphony, or an opera did not mention beer. But Hoffmann was a wine-bibber and fantastical. It is true that Nietzsche deplores the entrance of beer into German thought, including music, but poor Nietzsche is in the mad house. Not without reason does beer enter largely into the pleasure at the Pops. As the evening wears along, even comparatively poor music seems interesting, and no doubt the Dead March in Saul would not depress beyond recovery.

It is to be regretted that the weather did not join heartily in the spirit of last evening. For, although we have known cases where beer and music were enjoyed with snow upon the ground, yet there must be natural atmospheric warmth to induce full, careless glee, which, as the music sounds, forgets the past and recks not of the morrow. Nevertheless, there was honest pleasure, if it was taken a little sedately. Then it must not be forgotten that many present have not yet shaken off the influence of the Symphony concerts. They felt that it would be indecorous to speak or laugh during the performance of a piece. They missed the program books with the learned explanations of the construction; they had no clue as to the appearance of a clarinet cadenza or the conclusion theme. Ingenious young men in Boston give lectures during the winter, preparatory lectures for the comprehension of the symphonies. Might it not be a good thing for someone to give a course of lectures on the "Art of Hearing Light Music?"

I do not propose to criticise the concert. These concerts are not to be criticised, they are to be thoughtlessly enjoyed. The merits of the excellent musicians are well known. The taste and the good sense of Mr. Zach are also known. When he said to a Journal man that he did not propose in his capacity as conductor to "educate the audience," he struck the keynote. Must there always be this cant about education? Must people be expected to listen to music as though they were to pass an examination before leaving the hall? There are some otherwise estimable persons who unconsciously war against music by insisting on its educational advantages. No, Mr. Zach is right; and may he have the courage to stick to his resolution. Let there be at these concerts dance tunes that inspire gaiety, marches that fill the breasts of the timid with jingoism; overtures and pot-pouris that recall pleasant memories of the opera; and let there be tender, romantic melodies that bring the young men and the maidens closer together and renew the youth of sedate couples who have almost forgotten that they once looked at the moon and were most eloquent when they were silent. Let there be frank pleasure instead of the pretence. Let there be love-glances, whether the emotion be like froth or smoke, or as substantial as the sandwiches should be. Let there be jest and laughter without the thought of creditors or harassing domesticity. This is the true education that should follow the waving of the baton held intelligently by Mr. Zach.

PHILIP HALE.

Of the eight conductors who have led the orchestra since the promanade concerts were instituted, all but two—De Novellis and Nenendorf—have been members of the Symphony orchestra.

* * * * * *

It would seem that the proportion of 58 reserved tables on the floor, and 32 in the balcony to 100 unreversed, at Music Hall is about the proper proportion of democracy to aristocracy.

"Sporty" [illegible]

It was a neighborly crowd that attended the opening "Pop" concert last night. But neighborliness—in degree, according to the individual—is not an exceptional quality in a "Pop" crowd; so, what in generalities might be said of those who were there last night may be said quite as appropriately tomorrow, the next day and the next. There is never a sufficiently large representation of society at one of these concerts, not even on an opening night, to fret those who dislike a "fashionable audience;" yet, on the other hand, it would not be fair to the minority to classify the audiences as "sporty" or "Bohemian." The Promenade concerts draw merely a conglomeration of pleasure seekers. To see anything like it one would have to travel far, far away, to some other happy continent—there, ten to one, to fare not nearly so well.

Before 8 o'clock it looked as though, numerically, there would be an Antarctic state of things. The early comers from Harvard, doubtless, mostly students in Prof. Paine's course, plumped into the seats outside the swell rectangle. Many of them were accompanied by thirsts, the range of which showed patient and diligent cultivation. But though the space without the middle section of the floor was jammed to the squeezing point, at the hour of 8 the aforesaid middle reservation and the spectators' seats upstairs were, for the most part, invitingly empty.

Now, if the comers late at a "Pop" concert scheme thereby to excite enviable diversion, they should open their eyes and see themselves as others see them. There is no written or unwritten law, of course, which inhibits individual selection in the matter of coming or going; but it's a radiographic fact that no one, except the few proud possessors of opera glasses, bothers himself about the showy swishing and salaaming that nightly during the "Pop" season vies with the music and the clinking of bottles.

To illustrate this. The only tardy ones who attracted any unusual attention last night were those to whom Mrs. John L. Gardner played hostess. There may have been a subtle purpose in the attraction, though, for this party arrived when every seat other than those at Mrs. Gardner's table supported a comfortable occupant. With Mrs. Gardner, who was dressed with a richness but seldom assumed by her, were Mr. Lawrence Haughton and Miss Olga Gardner.

Elsewhere were Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, Mr. F. Gordon Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. Curtic Guild, Jr., Mr. Clarence P. Hollander and a company of friends, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Inches, Mrs. Fay, Miss Fay, Miss Emery, Mr. Charles Sampson and party, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua B. Holden, Mr. R. C. Waters, Mr. Alexander H. Higginson and party, Mr. William P. Blake, Mr. William Rotch, Mr. N. D. Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Miss Shattuck, Mr. James Kidder, Mr. George W. Cram, Mr. B. S. Hurlburt, Mr. John Tilden, Mr. Frank E. Chase and Mr. B. Leighton Beal.

Conspicuously seated inside the railing was a table's number of Symphony musicians, including Otto Roth and Alwin Schroeder, Franz Kneisel was with Mrs. Kneisel.

Next to the profitable size of the audience, what most frequently caused Acting Manager Comee to chortle with satisfaction was the aurora borealis which overtops the Hamilton Place entrance. Its shadow must be felt, even in the suburbs. And there's a placard in the Hamilton Place vestibule which, in its recognition of all that is aesthetic and athletic and practical, is a monument to someone's astuteness. It runs: "Bicycles checked on the lower floor."

Boston Transcript
FRIDAY, MAY 15, 1896.

The Promenade Concert Tonight.

The programme for the promenade concert, in Music Hall, this evening, has been arranged as follows:

1. Royal Tambour et Vivandière, from "Bal Costumé"	Rubinstein
2. Overture, "Donna Diana"	Reznicek
3. Waltz, "Seid umschlungen Millionen"	Strauss
4. Selection, "Carmen"	Bizet
5. Prelude to act I., "Lohengrin"	Wagner
6. Funeral March of a Marionette	Gounod
7. Le Dernier Sommeil de la Vierge	Massenet
8. Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"	Offenbach
9. Selection, "Erminie"	Jakobowsky
10. Waltz, "Reminiscences of Hütteldorf,"	Hoffmann
11. Polka, from "Gypsy Baron"	Strauss
12. Teufelsmarsch	Suppé

The Boston Commercial.
SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

Music Hall Concerts.

On Monday evening last the eleventh season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall was opened under the most auspicious circumstances. Large and fashionable audiences have been present throughout the week and by their continuous applause have shown that the bright and well arranged programmes have been thoroughly appreciated. The new leader, Mr. Zach, has already made a very favorable impression and that he will fill his new place to the entire satisfaction of every one is at this early date an assured fact. The playing of the orchestra is capital and the hall is, as usual, tastefully decorated. These entertainments are a most welcome addition to the amusements offered the public at this season of the year and they will without doubt be as popular as they have always been in the past.

PUBLISHED [illegible]
VOL. [illegible]
TUESDAY, MAY 12, [illegible]

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Eleventh Season of the "Pops" Opens Brilliantly.

A Large and Fashionable Audience—"Society" Prominently in Evidence—The New Conductor, Mr. Max Zach, a Success—A Bright and Well Arranged Programme Finely Played.

The opening of the 11th season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall last evening brought out the usual large and fashionable audience. The arrangements made for the comfort and convenience of the public were the same as those of last year, and admirable in every essential. Mr. Max Zach, this season's conductor, and who, by the way, was given a very cordial reception on his first appearance at the conductor's stand, had prepared an excellent programme, which was, of course, finely performed, the orchestra being composed of members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, fresh from their discipline of the Symphony concerts. Mr. Zach filled his new place in a wholly satisfying manner, and demonstrated convincingly that these entertainments are to be kept up to the high musical standard that has been established for them. Naturally, much of the more delicate playing was lost in the loud hum of conversation that prevailed through the music, except when there was a request in the programme that silence might be observed during the performance of this or of that selection. It is true that the concerts have something of a sociable aspect, which is emphasized by the serving of refreshments, bibulous and otherwise, and the privilege of smoking cigars and cigarettes of varied qualities of excellence, but it seems that it would be more complimentary to the conductor and his orchestra, and more considerate of those who go to listen to the music for the pleasure it affords them, if the conversation were confined to the waits between the selections and to the intermissions.

There was a new set of student faces at the tables on the floor, but the streamers of laurel on the balconies and the floral and evergreen decorations on the front of the orchestra, the capacious white shirt bosoms, the palm leaf fans on the tables, were all as they were in the past. The two waltzes on the programee, which were played with a delightful swing, won the most respectful attention, and the applause after Strauss' charming "Freut euch des Lebens' was so persistent that a repetition of its finale was granted. Mr. Ethelbert Nevins' daintily tuneful "Narcissus" was similarly honored. But the event of the evening, as far as enthusiasm is concerned, was when Zeller's "Grubenlichter" waltz was played. People on the floor waved their fans and clapped their hands wildly, and others still more demonstrative shouted themselves hoarse. When all was over everybody tried to say something additional in the way of approval to everybody else.

These entertainments are a welcome supplement to the more serious musical season, and that their popularity is undimmed was amply proved by the size and the quality of the audience, and the pleasure with which it hailed the inauguration of the new season. Every reserved seat in the hall was taken, and many stood on the floor and in the balconies. A good number of seats have been sold for all the concerts of this week and next, and several prominent society folk have engaged floor tables for the whole season. A different bill is to be given each evening, and the plan seems to be that every programme shall contain two opera overtures, two waltzes, two operatic potpourris and two marches, in addition to music of a more serious, but still light, order. The selections for tonight are:

Coronation march, from "Le Prophete"	Meyerbeer
Overture, "Raymond"	A. Thomas
Waltz, "Trau, Schau, Wein"	Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Faust"	Gounod
Suite, "Peer Gynt"	Grieg
Morning dawn.
Aase's Death.
Anitra's Dance.
In the Halls of the King.
Prelude from "Gouverneur de Tours"	Reinecke
Two Slavonic dances	Dvorak
Overture, "Rienzi"	Wagner
Selection, "Mikado"	Sullivan
Waltz, "Schonbrunner"	Lanner
Polka, "Tyrolean"	Zeller
March, "Hoch Habsburg"	Kral

Among those who were present were: Mrs. John L. Gardner and party, Miss Olga Gardner, Mr. Gordon Dexter, Mr. Lawrence Haughton, Prof. George Santayana of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mrs. and Miss Fay and Miss Emery, Miss Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper and party, Mr. Jack Tilden, Mr. William Bennett, Mr. William R. Rotch, Mrs. W. F. Apthorp, Mr. Alexander Higginson and party, Mr. James Kidder, Mr. Charles Sampson, Dr. and Mrs. Inches and Mr. and Mrs. Franz Kneisel.

"Ideas"

The eleventh season of the promenade concerts opened Monday evening in Music hall, under the management of Mr. F. R. Comee, Mr. Max Zach of the Symphony orchestra making his début as conductor at these concerts. There was a good attendance of fashionable people as well as others, and the summer season was most auspiciously inaugurated.

Journal

TEN PAGES.

TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1896.

POPS BEGIN.

Promenade Concerts Open at Music Hall.

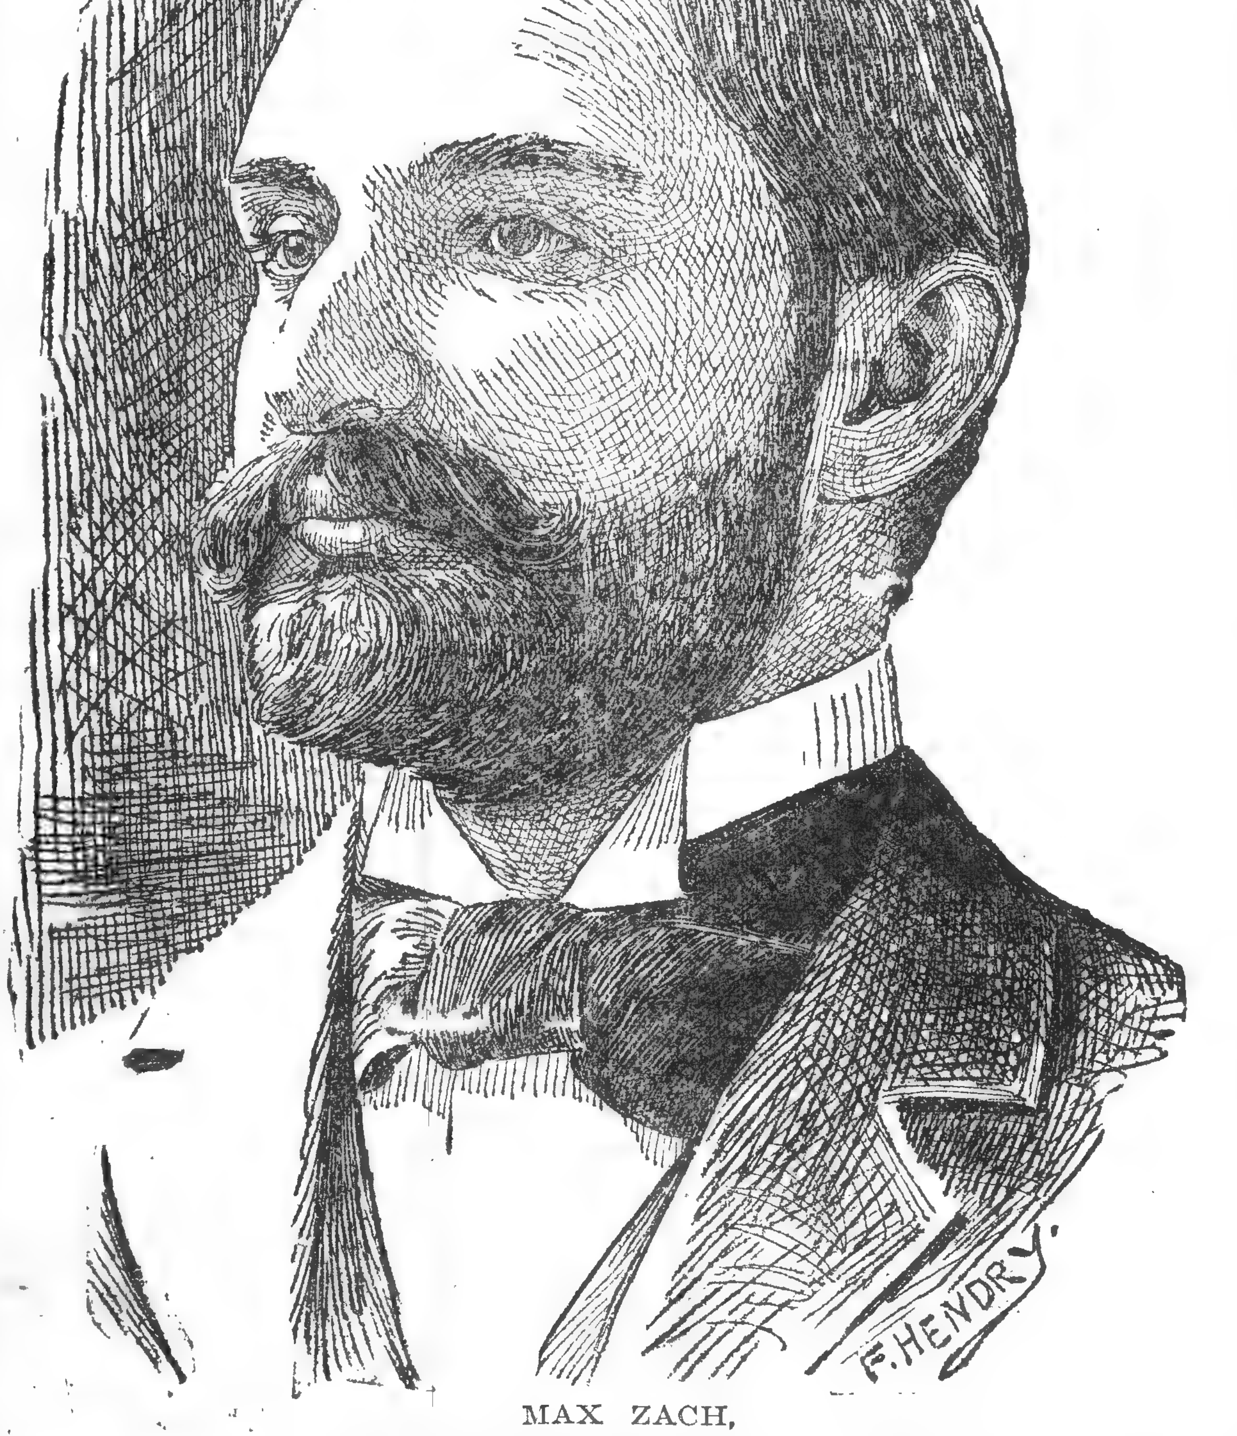
"The Village Postmaster," a New Play at the Park.

"Prince Ananias," "Old Jed Prouty" and "Carmen."

The eleventh season of the Promenade Concerts opened last evening in Music Hall, under the management of Mr. F. R. Comee. Mr. Max Zach of the Symphony Orchestra made his début as a conductor at these concerts. The program was as follows:

Polonaise in E....................Liszt
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor" Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens," Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Aida,"....................Verdi
Scenes Pittoresques ....Massenet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fete Boheme.
Narcissus ....Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte (for string orchestra) ....Bach
Hungarian Rhapsody in F....................Liszt
Overture, "Si j'etais Roi"....................Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"....................Zeller
Mazourka, "La Mousme" ....Gane
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"..........Victor Herbert
(First time.)

William Maginn, in one of his maxims, pregnant with thought, which was the result of keen observation and rich personal experience, exclaimed with adamantine conviction, "As to the beautiful mutual adaptation of cold rum and cold water, that is beyond all praise, and indeed forms a theme of never-ceasing admiration, being one of Nature's most expuisite achievements."



MAX ZACH,
The new Orchestra Conductor of the Pops.

This beautiful mutual adaptation is also to be observed in the relations of beer and music. It is true that climate enters as a factor in this latter problem in proportion. In Munich, for instance, nature inspires fierce thirst, but there is no city where thirst may be as easily, nutritiously and cheaply slaked. And everyone knows that Munich is a very musical town.

Articles on the singular relations between eating, drinking and music have already appeared in the Journal, and it is not now necessary to repeat the statements and the list of historical precedents contained therein. It is true that Hoffmann in his advice to composers as to the proper beverage to inspire an anthem, a symphony, or an opera did not mention beer. But Hoffmann was a wine-bibber and fantastical. It is true that Nietzsche deplores the entrance of beer into German thought, including music, but poor Nietzsche is in the mad house. Not without reason does beer enter largely into the pleasure at the Pops. As the evening wears along, even comparatively poor music seems interesting, and no doubt the Dead March in Saul would not depress beyond recovery.

It is to be regretted that the weather did not join heartily in the spirit of last evening. For, although we have known cases where beer and music were enjoyed with snow upon the ground, yet there must be natural atmospheric warmth to induce full, careless glee, which, as the music sounds, forgets the past and recks not of the morrow. Nevertheless, there was honest pleasure, if it was taken a little sedately. Then it must not be forgotten that many present have not yet shaken off the influence of the Symphony concerts. They felt that it would be indecorous to speak or laugh during the performance of a piece. They missed the program books with the learned explanations of the construction; they had no clue as to the appearance of a clarinet cadenza or the conclusion theme. Ingenious young men in Boston give lectures during the winter, preparatory lectures for the comprehension of the symphonies. Might it not be a good thing for someone to give a course of lectures on the "Art of Hearing Light Music?"

I do not propose to criticise the concert. These concerts are not to be criticised, they are to be thoughtlessly enjoyed. The merits of the excellent musicians are well known. The taste and the good sense of Mr. Zach are also known. When he said to a Journal man that he did not propose in his capacity as conductor to "educate the audience," he struck the keynote. Must there always be this cant about education? Must people be expected to listen to music as though they were to pass an examination before leaving the hall? There are some otherwise estimable persons who unconsciously war against music by insisting on its educational advantages. No, Mr. Zach is right; and may he have the courage to stick to his resolution. Let there be at these concerts dance tunes that inspire gaiety, marches that fill the breasts of the timid with jingoism; overtures and pot-pouris that recall pleasant memories of the opera; and let there be tender, romantic melodies that bring the young men and the maidens closer together and renew the youth of sedate couples who have almost forgotten that they once looked at the moon and were most eloquent when they were silent. Let there be frank pleasure instead of the pretence. Let there be love-glances, whether the emotion be like froth or smoke, or as substantial as the sandwiches should be. Let there be jest and laughter without the thought of creditors or harassing domesticity. This is the true education that should follow the waving of the baton held intelligently by Mr. Zach.

PHILIP HALE.

---

* * * * * *

Of the eight conductors who have led the orchestra since the promanade concerts were instituted, all but two—De Novellis and Nenendorf—have been members of the Symphony orchestra.

* * * * * *

It would seem that the proportion of 58 reserved tables on the floor, and 32 in the balcony to 100 unreversed, at Music Hall is about the proper proportion of democracy to aristocracy.

WITH THE AUDIENCE.

It Was "Fashionable," Yet Not "Sporty" or "Bohemian."

It was a neighborly crowd that attended the opening "Pop" concert last night. But neighborliness—in degree, according to the individual—is not an exceptional quality in a "Pop" crowd; so, what in generalities might be said of those who were there last night may be said quite as appropriately tomorrow, the next day and the next. There is never a sufficiently large representation of society at one of these concerts, not even on an opening night, to fret those who dislike a "fashionable audience;" yet, on the other hand, it would not be fair to the minority to classify the audiences as "sporty" or "Bohemian." The Promenade concerts draw merely a conglomeration of pleasure seekers. To see anything like it one would have to travel far, far away, to some other happy continent—there, ten to one, to fare not nearly so well.

Before 8 o'clock it looked as though, numerically, there would be an Antarctic state of things. The early comers from Harvard, doubtless, mostly students in Prof. Paine's course, plumped into the seats outside the swell rectangle. Many of them were accompanied by thirsts, the range of which showed patient and diligent cultivation. But though the space without the middle section of the floor was jammed to the squeezing point, at the hour of 8 the aforesaid middle reservation and the spectators' seats upstairs were, for the most part, invitingly empty.

Now, if the comers late at a "Pop" concert scheme thereby to excite enviable diversion, they should open their eyes and see themselves as others see them. There is no written or unwritten law, of course, which inhibits individual selection in the matter of coming or going; but it's a radiographic fact that no one, except the few proud possessors of opera glasses, bothers himself about the showy swishing and salaaming that nightly during the "Pop" season vies with the music and the clinking of bottles.

To illustrate this. The only tardy ones who attracted any unusual attention last night were those to whom Mrs. John L. Gardner played hostess. There may have been a subtle purpose in the attraction, though, for this party arrived when every seat other than those at Mrs. Gardner's table supported a comfortable occupant. With Mrs. Gardner, who was dressed with a richness but seldom assumed by her, were Mr. Lawrence Haughton and Miss Olga Gardner.

Elsewhere were Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, Mr. F. Gordon Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. Curtic Guild, Jr., Mr. Clarence P. Hollander and a company of friends, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Inches, Mrs. Fay, Miss Fay, Miss Emery, Mr. Charles Sampson and party, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua B. Holden, Mr. R. C. Waters, Mr. Alexander H. Higginson and party, Mr. William P. Blake, Mr. William Rotch, Mr. N. D. Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Miss Shattuck, Mr. James Kidder, Mr. George W. Cram, Mr. B. S. Hurlburt, Mr. John Tilden, Mr. Frank E. Chase and Mr. B. Leighton Beal.

Conspicuously seated inside the railing was a table's number of Symphony musicians, including Otto Roth and Alwin Schroeder, Franz Kneisel was with Mrs. Kneisel.

Next to the profitable size of the audience, what most frequently caused Acting Manager Comee to chortle with satisfaction was the aurora borealis which overtops the Hamilton Place entrance. Its shadow must be felt, even in the suburbs. And there's a placard in the Hamilton Place vestibule which, in its recognition of all that is aesthetic and athletic and practical, is a monument to someone's astuteness. It runs: "Bicycles checked on the lower floor."

Boston Transcript

FRIDAY, MAY 15, 1896.

The Promenade Concert Tonight.

The programme for the promenade concert, in Music Hall, this evening, has been arranged as follows:

1. Royal Tambour et Vivandière, from "Bal Costumé"....................Rubinstein
2. Overture, "Donna Diana"..........Reznicek
3. Waltz, "Seid umschlungen Millionen".Strauss
4. Selection, "Carmen"....................Bizet
5. Prelude to act i., "Lohengrin".......Wagner
6. Funeral March of a Marionette......Gounod
7. Le Dernier Sommeil de la Vierge..Massenet
8. Overture, "Orpheus aux Enfers"..Offenbach
9. Selection, "Erminie"..............Jakobowsky
10. Waltz, "Reminiscences of Hütteldorf," Hoffmann
11. Polka, from "Gypsy Baron".........Strauss
12. Teufelsmarsch.......................... Suppé

The Boston Commercial.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

Music Hall Concerts.

On Monday evening last the eleventh season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall was opened under the most auspicious circumstances. Large and fashionable audiences have been present throughout the week and by their continuous applause have shown that the bright and well arranged programmes have been thoroughly appreciated. The new leader, Mr. Zach, has already made a very favorable impression and that he will fill his new place to the entire satisfaction of every one is at this early date an assured fact. The playing of the orchestra is capital and the hall is, as usual, tastefully decorated. These entertainments are a most welcome addition to the amusements offered the public at this season of the year and they will without doubt be as popular as they have always been in the past.

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. XCIX., NO. 133.

TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1896.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Eleventh Season of the "Pops" Opens Brilliantly.

A Large and Fashionable Audience—"Society" Prominently in Evidence—The New Conductor, Mr. Max Zach, a Success—A Bright and Well Arranged Programme Finely Played.

The opening of the 11th season of the promenade concerts in Music Hall last evening brought out the usual large and fashionable audience. The arrangements made for the comfort and convenience of the public were the same as those of last year, and admirable in every essential. Mr. Max Zach, this season's conductor, and who, by the way, was given a very cordial reception on his first appearance at the conductor's stand, had prepared an excellent programme, which was, of course, finely performed, the orchestra being composed of members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, fresh from their discipline of the Symphony concerts. Mr. Zach filled his new place in a wholly satisfying manner, and demonstrated convincingly that these entertainments are to be kept up to the high musical standard that has been established for them. Naturally, much of the more delicate playing was lost in the loud hum of conversation that prevailed through the music, except when there was a request in the programme that silence might be observed during the performance of this or of that selection. It is true that the concerts have something of a sociable aspect, which is emphasized by the serving of refreshments, bibulous and otherwise, and the privilege of smoking cigars and cigarettes of varied qualities of excellence, but it seems that it would be more complimentary to the conductor and his orchestra, and more considerate of those who go to listen to the music for the pleasure it affords them, if the conversation were confined to the waits between the selections and to the intermissions.

There was a new set of student faces at the tables on the floor, but the streamers of laurel on the balconies and the floral and evergreen decorations on the front of the orchestra, the capacious white shirt bosoms, the palm leaf fans on the tables, were all as they were in the past. The two waltzes on the programee, which were played with a delightful swing, won the most respectful attention, and the applause after Strauss' charming "Freut euch des Lebens' was so persistent that a repetition of its finale was granted. Mr. Ethelbert Nevins' daintily tuneful "Narcissus" was similarly honored. But the event of the evening, as far as enthusiasm is concerned, was when Zeller's "Grubenlichter" waltz was played. People on the floor waved their fans and clapped their hands wildly, and others still more demonstrative shouted themselves hoarse. When all was over everybody tried to say something additional in the way of approval to everybody else.

These entertainments are a welcome supplement to the more serious musical season, and that their popularity is undimmed was amply proved by the size and the quality of the audience, and the pleasure with which it hailed the inauguration of the new season. Every reserved seat in the hall was taken, and many stood on the floor and in the balconies. A good number of seats have been sold for all the concerts of this week and next, and several prominent society folk have engaged floor tables for the whole season. A different bill is to be given each evening, and the plan seems to be that every programme shall contain two opera overtures, two waltzes, two operatic potpourris and two marches, in addition to music of a more serious, but still light, order. The selections for tonight are:

Coronation march, from "Le Prophete".. Meyerbeer
Overture, "Raymond"..............A. Thomas
Waltz, "Trau, Schau, Wein".....Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Faust"....................Gounod
Suite, "Peer Gynt"....................Grieg
  Morning dawn.
  Aase's Death.
  Anitra's Dance.
  In the Halls of the King.
Prelude from "Gouverneur de Tours"..Reinecke
Two Slavonic dances....................Dvorak
Overture, "Rienzi"....................Wagner
Selection, "Mikado"....................Sullivan
Waltz, "Schonbrunner"....................Lanner
Polka, "Tyrolean"....................Zeller
March, "Hoch Habsburg"....................Kral

Among those who were present were:

Mrs. John L. Gardner and party, Miss Olga Gardner, Mr. Gordon Dexter, Mr. Lawrence Haughton, Prof. George Santayana of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mrs. and Miss Fay and Miss Emery, Miss Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper and party, Mr. Jack Tilden, Mr. William Bennett, Mr. William R. Rotch, Mrs. W. F. Apthorp, Mr. Alexander Higginson and party, Mr. James Kidder, Mr, Charles Sampson, Dr. and Mrs. Inches and Mr. and Mrs. Franz Kneisel.

"Ideas"

The eleventh season of the promenade concerts opened Monday evening in Music hall, under the management of Mr. F. R. Comee, Mr. Max Zach of the Symphony orchestra making his début as conductor at these concerts. There was a good attendance of fashionable people as well as others, and the summer season was most auspiciously inaugurated.

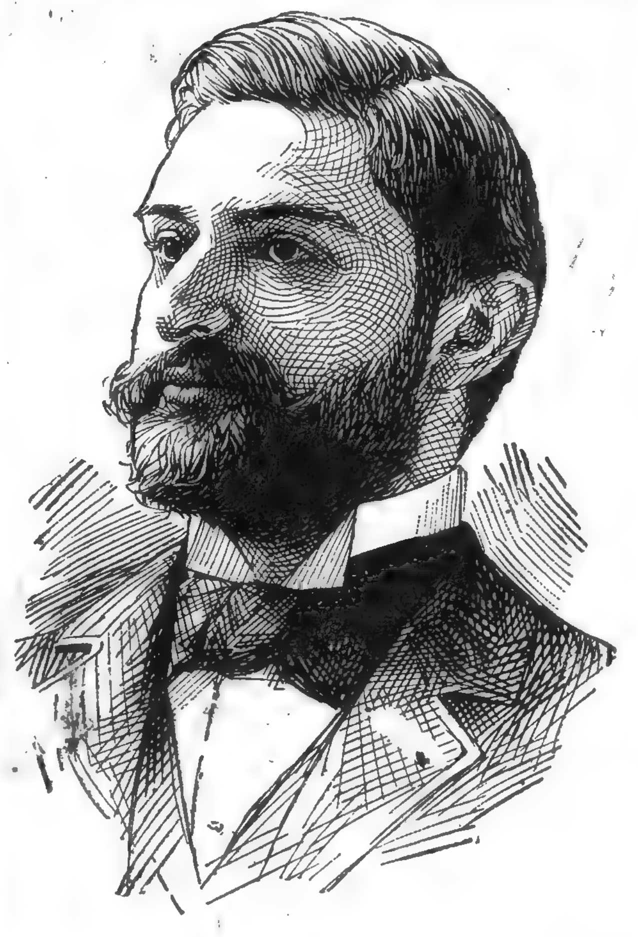
The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1896

"THE POPS."

The pleasure-l[illegible]ublic will be glad to learn that the ev[illegible]ome Promenade Concerts, familiarly known as the "Pops," will open their 11th season, next Monday night, in Music Hall.

The opening night will be the 568th performance since their inception in 1885. The concerts will be conducted upon the same general plan as last year and will include all the attractive features, such as special composers' nights and request programmes. The conductor will be Mr. Max Zach, for 10 years a prominent member of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and the sixth conductor to be chosen from the ranks of this organization. Mr. Zach will be readily and pleasantly remembered as the composer of several taking waltzes and marches, which he has conducted in person the past three seasons. One needs but to attend a "Pop" concert to both understa[illegible] and appreciate their constantly increasing popularity, and it is safe to predict that this year they will prove as attractive as in the past.



MR. MAX ZACH, CONDUCTOR OF THE "POPS."

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1896.

THE POPS.

They Open Tomorrow Evening at Music Hall.

That it was welcome news to the public to hear that the "Pops" were to open next Monday evening (tomorrow), is shown in the statement that not a table was to be had an hour after the box office opened a week before. The opening night will be the 568th performance since the series began in 1885. The conductor is Mr. Max Zach, who for ten years has been a member of the Symphony orchestra. He is popular, and knows just what such a gathering wish for in the way of music, and we shall not be bored with heavy symphonies and educational features. The concerts will be under the business management of Mr. Comee, as in seasons past.

The programme tomorrow evening:

Polonaise in E	Liszt
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Aida"	Verdi
Scenes Pittoresques	Massenet
Narcissus	Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte (for String Orchestra)	Bach
Hungarian Rhapsody in F	Liszt
Overture, "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Mazourka, "La Mousmé"	Gane
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"	Victor Herbert

---

BOSTON COMMERCIAL.

SATURDAY MAY 9 1896.

Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

The eleventh season of promenade concerts at Music Hall will commence next Monday evening, May 11. This year the conductor of the grand orchestra of fifty will be Mr. Max Zach, a thorough musician and one fully competent to lead these popular concerts. The concerts will be given every evening of the week excepting Sunday from 8 to 11. Tickets with reserved seats are 50 cents. Admission 25 cents.

BOSTON STANDARD.

The opening of the "pop" concert season will call together at Music H[illegible] tonight one of those crowds of enthusiasts, such as were the rule during last summer and several other preceding summers. To sit at a table surrounded by a large concourse of sympathizing ones, all engaged in the same delightful occupation, "trying to have a good time," and drink in strains of harmony and drains of hominy simultaneously, is a double feast, obtainable only at this or some similar style of entertainment; hence the favor with which they are held by our discriminating public.

* * *

Boston Transcript

MONDAY, MAY 11, 1896.

A Sign Which Will Attract Attention.

Pedestrians along Tremont street may be startled a bit by the blaze of lights which will each night shine out from Hamilton place. Over the entrance to Music Hall a large sign has been put up, extending way across the inner end of the court. Letters two feet high form the words "Promenade Concert," and use is made of one hundred and ninety electric lights for these letters. While the idea is not new, it it is not a common thing to see signs of this size at so short a distance above the sidewalk. Some slight but important changes in the interior lighting of the hall also have been made. Though the place was today in a state of confusion, it will be in readiness this evening for the large audience which is already assured for the opening concert. The larder and ice vaults under the hall are well stocked with everything which patrons of the concerts may wish. Many of the same waiters who have been in attendance since the promenades were first started will be found on duty again this season.

The eleventh season of promenade concerts will begin this evening, in Music Hall, under the leadership of Max Zach of the Symphony Orchestra. The programme tonight will mark the 568th performance, and has been arranged as follows:

1.	Polonaise in E	Liszt
2.	Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
3.	Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Joh. Strauss
4.	Selection, "Aida"	Verdi
5.	Scenes Pittoresques	Massenet
6.	Narcissus	Ethelbert Nevin
7.	Adagio and Gavotte (for string orchestra)	Bach
8.	Hungarian Rhapsody in F	Liszt
9.	Overture, "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
10.	Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
11.	Mazurka, "La Mousmé"	Gane
12.	March, from "The Wizard of the Nile"	Victor Herbert

Boston Transcript

TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1896.

Music Hall: Promenade Concerts.

The eleventh season of the Pops began last evening, with Mr. Max Zach as conductor. The programme was as follows:

Polonaise in E-major	Liszt
Overture to "Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor"	Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Johann Strauss
Selections from "Aida"	Verdi
Scènes Pittoresques	Massenet
Narcissus	Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte for strings	Bach
Hungarian Rhapsody in F	Liszt
Overture to "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Mazurka, "La Mousmé"	Gane
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"	Victor Herbert

Both tables and gallery seats were crowded. Mr. Zach made a decidedly favorable impression as a conductor, showing both personal force and a sure command over his men. To be sure, with such an orchestra, any conductor who knows his business can have an easy time; but there were some phrases last evening which were played in such a manner as to show plainly that the fine effect was attributable to Mr. Zach, not merely to the orchestra. We believe Mr. Zach has served some apprenticeship in the business as conductor of a prominent military band in Vienna; he certainly handles the baton as one used to it, and used to producing effect with it, too.

The playing of the orchestra was capital throughout the evening. The audience was enthusiastic, as usual, applauding last year's favorite, "Grubenlichter," to the double echo, and—strange to say—giving the Bach gavotte an encore! When old Bach gets encored at a Pop Concert, one may look for strange things indeed.

The hall was tastefully decorated with green and flowers, as usual. Over the bronze Beethoven hung a banner with an inscription to the effect that this was the 568th performance—probably of the orchestra of the Pops.

BOSTON [illegible]

[illegible] Representative Dem[illegible] Paper OF NEW ENGLAND.

"POPS" OPEN.

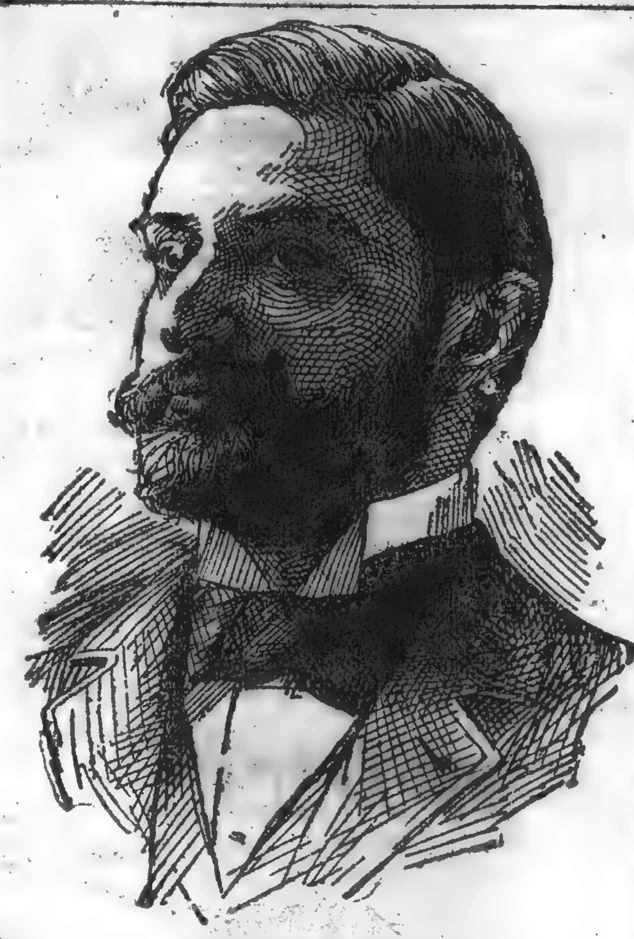
Boston's Ultra Fashionables Turn Out in Large Numbers.

MAX ZACH LED THE MUSIC.

This Makes 568 Performances and the Beginning of the Eleventh Season—Manager C. A. Ellis Still Remains in Europe.

The ultra swagger of Boston's swelldom were out in full force last night to the first "Pop" concert of the season and society has set its imprimatur on these most delightful of musical functions. A stranger, endeavoring to find his way, would have had no difficulty, as the line of carriages, leading from the Hamilton place entrance well around the corner on Tremont street, made it perfectly evident.

Fully 2000 people were in attendance.



MR. MAX ZACH,
Conductor of the promenade concents opened last evening.

Many society people have engaged tables for the whole season. The hall was daintily trimmed with festoons of laurel, while potted ferns abounded.

A most artistic programme was given under the leadership of Max Zach.

There have been now 568 performances and last night began the eleventh season. During all that time there have been six different conductors, all but two of whom, Sig. de Novelles and Herr Neuendorf, were promoted from the ranks of the society. Max Zach, the present conductor, was born in Bemberg in Austria and for ten years has been playing in the viola section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

C. A. Ellis, the manager, is now in Europe, and will remain abroad throughout the season. The management thus falls on the shoulders of F. R. Comee. It was Mr. Comee's idea to place the illuminated sign, now at the Hamilton place entrance, spelling the words "Promenade Concert," in electric incandescence.

Prominent among those present were: Mrs. John L. Gardner, Miss Olga Gardner, Charles Sampson, Lawrence Horton, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Apthorp, William Blake, Miss Elsie Perkins, Tom D. Barroll and party, W. R. Rotch, William Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, F. Gordon Dexter and the Misses Fay, Miss Emery, James Kidder, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper and party, Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper, John Tilden, Clarence Hollander and party, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Holden and party, George W. Cram, B. S. Hurlburt, Mrs. Caroline Hall Washburn and party, Alexander H. Higginson, William Locke, Miss Putnam, Frank Locke, Holker Abbott, Franz Kneisel, Otto Roth and many others well known in society.

It was a clever arrangement of the programme of the Popular Concert, on Friday evening, whereby the request for silence when Mr. Schnitzler played the violin solo from Handel was preceded by the intermezzo that made Mascagni famous from the first time that "Cavalleria" was heard. Before that number the babel of tongues was as lively as the smoke was thick, and at all the tables the flow of effervescing bottles and talk was more audible to most of the people present than the music which the band was playing. Then the strains of the intermezzo came, stridently sentimental and beseeching, soothing the savagest breasts, luring the least musical to silence, and after that, a worthy chance for the violinist and the music that endures. The people in the audiences at the Promenade Concert are more than ever interesting. The Portuguese element is one of the most picturesque features now in Yankeedom, and to see the pleasure of a serious grandson of Portugal and Massachusetts is not less entertaining than to see an Italian taking in German music.

[illegible] Globe.

TU[illegible], MAY 12, 1896.

MUSIC AND MENUS.

The Season of Promenade Concerts Begun.

Cordial Greeting Extended to Mr Max Zach and His Orchestra.

Large and Enthusiastic Audience at the First "Pop" Last Evening.

At last the pops!

Two thousand people crowded Music hall last night, delighted to have some diversion to break the dulness of the past month and entirely satisfied that such diversion was the perennial "pop!"

It was a splendid opening, and all signs augured a successful season. Max Zach, the new conductor, made an instantaneous hit. Artistic Boston, en masse, was on hand, together with a fair showing of the swells.

These concerts seem to grow more democratic. Society can hardly be distinguished from the rest of the world. Alongside Mrs Gardner's table—who, by the way, was in fine spirits, and looked uncommonly well in her famous first night gown—were parties of young people who are way beyond the pale of society—office clerks and young professionals, denizens of the West end and young swains who never wore a dress suit. Yet none of them felt out of their element.

Good will was rampant. Through the haze of cigarette smoke which mingled with the perfume of roses the swells and "the others" surveyed each other indulgently, and under the spell of Strauss waltz and Hungarian rhapsody forgot social differences and in the forgetting made the prettiest bit of Bohemia Boston is every likely to know.

Some really commendable efforts were made at decorating the big barn of a hall. It looked more festive than ever before. Both balconies and the stage were festooned with laurel. Back of the orchestra was a tall hedge of pines, and in front of it were a few scattering palms and the most elaborate feature of all—a huge bunch of red and white roses.

Some new lights have been added over the platform, which is something of an improvement, and the facilities for serving are considerably better than last year.

Of course the critical part of the audience didn't get in until the concert was about an hour old. By 9 there was not a table to be had, nor a balcony seat of any account. The way they all went showed that the public was just in the mood for some such free-and-easy sort of entertainment.

And yet they were not very enthuslastic at first.

The smoke and the crowd kept the temperature well up, so that every table, by the time the orchestra had reached the last waltz, showed an encouraging array of empty glasses.

At the very end everybody waked up to the situation, and there were cheers, shouts and bravos, so that the opening pop ended in a blaze of triumph.

Among those present were: Mr Lawrence Houghton, Mr Alexander H. Higginson, Mrs John L. Gardner, Miss Olga Gardner, Mr Charles Samson, Mr W. P. Blake, Mr Clarence Hollander and party, Mr and Mrs Arthur Richmond, Miss Shattuck, Miss Fay, Miss Sally Fairchild, Mr Jack Tilden, Mr and Mrs Robert C. Hooper, Mr William Bennett, Mr and Mrs Franz Kneisel, Mr William Roach, Dr and Mrs Charles Inches, Mr William Blake, Mr Geo. Ellis, Mr Walter H. Dugan and party, Mrs L. H. Mudgett, Miss Armstrong, Mr and Mrs Charles E. Lauriat, Miss Lauriat, Mr and Mrs Lane, Mr Frank E. Chase.

Conductor Zach's program consisted of 12 numbers, and as about one-third of them were redemanded it was evident that the music was well suited to please the tastes of a miscellaneous audience.

The program this evening is as follows:

Prelude from Gouverneur de Tours	Reinecke
Two Slavonic Dances	Dvorak
Overture, Rienzi	Wagner
Selection, Mikado	Sullivan
Waltz, Schonbrunner	Lanner
Polka, Tyrolean	Zeller
March, Hoch Habsburg	Kral
Coronation March from Le Prophete	Meyerbeer
Overture, Raymond	A Thomas
Waltz, Trau, Schau, Wein	Johann Strauss
Selection, Faust	Gounod
Suite, Peer Gynt	Grieg

THE REPUBLIC.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

The promenade concerts in Music Hall started off last Monday with great success. These entertainments are a welcome supplement to the more serious musical season, and that their popularity is undimmed was amply proved by the size and the quality of the audience, and the pleasure with which it hailed the inauguration of the new season. Every reserved seat in the hall was taken, and many stood on the floor and in the balconies. A good number of seats have been sold for all the concerts of this week and next, and several prominent society folk have engaged floor tables for the whole season. A different bill is to be given each evening, and the plan seems to be that every programme shall contain two opera overtures, two waltzes, two operatic potpourris and two marches, in addition to music of a more serious, but still light, order.

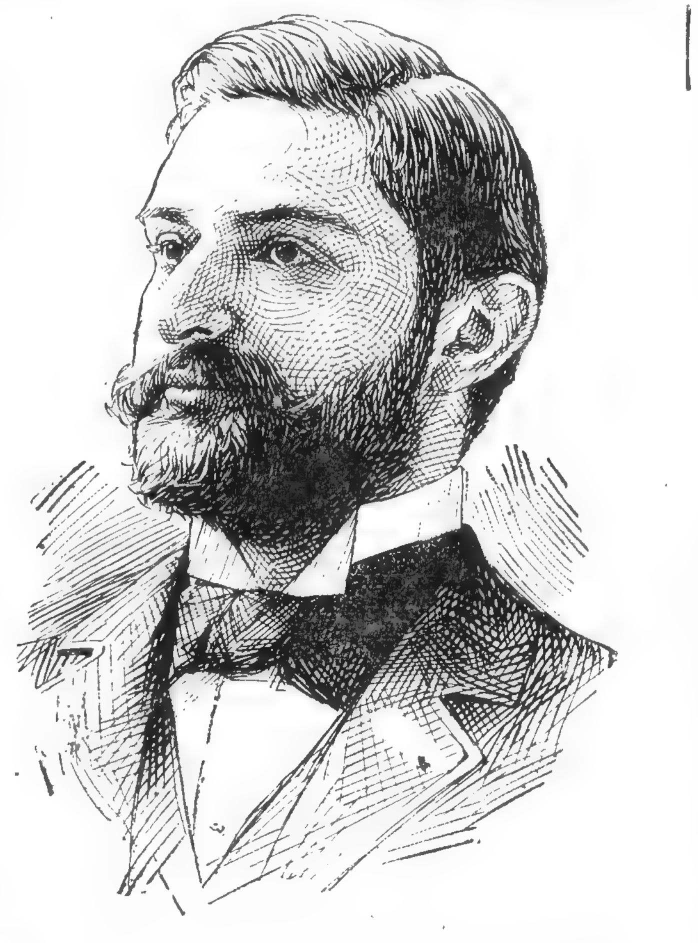
The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1896

TH[illegible]OPS."

The pl[illegible]asure-l[illegible]ublic will be glad to learn that the e[illegible]ome Promenade Concerts, familiarly known as the "Pops," will open their 11th season, next Monday night, in Music Hall.

The opening night will be the 568th performance since their inception in 1885. The concerts will be conducted upon the same general plan as last year and will include all the attractive features, such as special composers' nights and request programmes. The conductor will be Mr. Max Zach, for 10 years a prominent member of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and the sixth conductor to be chosen from the ranks of this organization. Mr. Zach will be readily and pleasantly remembered as the composer of several taking waltzes and marches, which he has conducted in person the past three seasons. One needs but to attend a "Pop" concert to both understa[illegible] and appreciate their constantly increasing popularity, and it is safe to predict that this year they will prove as attractive as in the past.



MR. MAX ZACH, CONDUCTOR OF THE "POPS."

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1896.

THE POPS.

They Open Tomorrow Evening at Music Hall.

That it was welcome news to the public to hear that the "Pops" were to open next Monday evening (tomorrow), is shown in the statement that not a table was to be had an hour after the box office opened a week before. The opening night will be the 568th performance since the series began in 1885. The conductor is Mr. Max Zach, who for ten years has been a member of the Symphony orchestra. He is popular, and knows just what such a gathering wish for in the way of music, and we shall not be bored with heavy symphonies and educational features. The concerts will be under the business management of Mr. Comee, as in seasons past.

The programme tomorrow evening:

Polonaise in E	Liszt
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Aida"	Verdi
Scenes Pittoresques	Massenet
Narcissus	Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte (for String Orchestra)	Bach
Hungarian Rhapsody in F	Liszt
Overture, "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Mazourka, "La Mousmé"	Gane
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"	Victor Herbert

---

BOSTON COMMERCIAL.

SATURDAY MAY 9 1896.

Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

The eleventh season of promenade concerts at Music Hall will commence next Monday evening, May 11. This year the conductor of the grand orchestra of fifty will be Mr. Max Zach, a thorough musician and one fully competent to lead these popular concerts. The concerts will be given every evening of the week excepting Sunday from 8 to 11. Tickets with reserved seats are 50 cents. Admission 25 cents.

MO[illegible] 11, 1896.

BOSTON STANDARD.

The opening of the "pop" concert season will call together at Music H[illegible] tonight one of those crowds of enthusiasts, such as were the rule during last summer and several other preceding summers. To sit at a table surrounded by a large concourse of sympathizing ones, all engaged in the same delightful occupation, "trying to have a good time," and drink in strains of harmony and drains of hominy simultaneously, is a double feast, obtainable only at this or some similar style of entertainment; hence the favor with which they are held by our discriminating public.

* * *

Boston Transcript

MONDAY, MAY 11, 1896.

A Sign Which Will Attract Attention.

Pedestrians along Tremont street may be startled a bit by the blaze of lights which will each night shine out from Hamilton place. Over the entrance to Music Hall a large sign has been put up, extending way across the inner end of the court. Letters two feet high form the words "Promenade Concert," and use is made of one hundred and ninety electric lights for these letters. While the idea is not new, it it is not a common thing to see signs of this size at so short a distance above the sidewalk. Some slight but important changes in the interior lighting of the hall also have been made. Though the place was today in a state of confusion, it will be in readiness this evening for the large audience which is already assured for the opening concert. The larder and ice vaults under the hall are well stocked with everything which patrons of the concerts may wish. Many of the same waiters who have been in attendance since the promenades were first started will be found on duty again this season.

The eleventh season of promenade concerts will begin this evening, in Music Hall, under the leadership of Max Zach of the Symphony Orchestra. The programme tonight will mark the 568th performance, and has been arranged as follows:

1.	Polonaise in E	Liszt
2.	Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
3.	Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"	Joh. Strauss
4.	Selection, "Aïda"	Verdi
5.	Scenes Pittoresques	Massenet
6.	Narcissus	Ethelbert Nevin
7.	Adagio and Gavotte (for string orchestra)	Bach
8.	Hungarian Rhapsody in F	Liszt
9.	Overture, "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
10.	Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
11.	Mazurka, "La Mousmé"	Gane
12.	March, from "The Wizard of the Nile"	Victor Herbert

Boston Transcript

TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1896.

Music Hall: Promenade Concerts.

The eleventh season of the Pops began last evening, with Mr. Max Zach as conductor. The programme was as follows:

Polonaise in E-major	Liszt
Overture to "Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor"	Nicolai
Waltz. "Freut euch des Lebens"	Johann Strauss
Selections from "Aïda"	Verdi
Scènes Pittoresques	Massenet
Narcissus	Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte for strings	Bach
Hungarian Rhapsody in F	Liszt
Overture to "Si j'étais Roi"	Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"	Zeller
Mazurka, "La Mousmé"	Gane
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"	Victor Herbert

Both tables and gallery seats were crowded. Mr. Zach made a decidedly favorable impression as a conductor, showing both personal force and a sure command over his men. To be sure, with such an orchestra, any conductor who knows his business can have an easy time; but there were some phrases last evening which were played in such a manner as to show plainly that the fine effect was attributable to Mr. Zach, not merely to the orchestra. We believe Mr. Zach has served some apprenticeship in the business as conductor of a prominent military band in Vienna; he certainly handles the baton as one used to it, and used to producing effect with it, too.

The playing of the orchestra was capital throughout the evening. The audience was enthusiastic, as usual, applauding last year's favorite, "Grubenlichter," to the double echo, and—strange to say—giving the Bach gavotte an encore! When old Bach gets encored at a Pop Concert, one may look for strange things indeed.

The hall was tastefully decorated with green and flowers, as usual. Over the bronze Beethoven hung a banner with an inscription to the effect that this was the 568th performance—probably of the orchestra of the Pops.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

"POPS" OPEN.

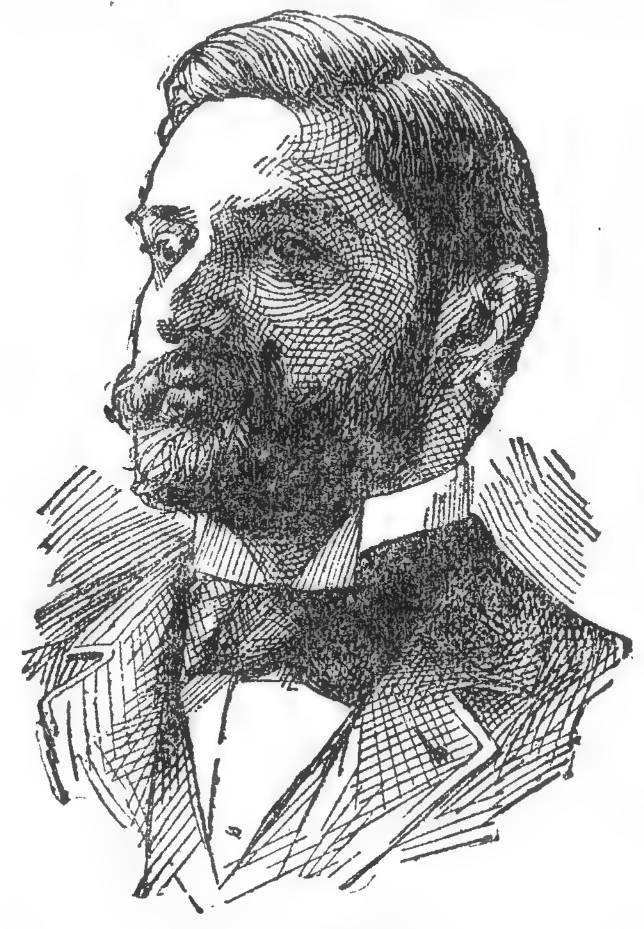
Boston's Ultra Fashionables Turn Out in Large Numbers.

MAX ZACH LED THE MUSIC.

This Makes 568 Performances and the Beginning of the Eleventh Season---Manager C. A. Ellis Still Remains in Europe.

The ultra swagger of Boston's swelldom were out in full force last night to the first "Pop" concert of the season and society has set its imprimatur on these most delightful of musical functions. A stranger, endeavoring to find his way, would have had no difficulty, as the line of carriages, leading from the Hamilton place entrance well around the corner on Tremont street, made it perfectly evident.

Fully 2000 people were in attendance.



MR. MAX ZACH,
Conductor of the promenade concerts opened last evening.

Many society people have engaged tables for the whole season. The hall was daintily trimmed with festoons of laurel, while potted ferns abounded.

A most artistic programme was given under the leadership of Max Zach.

There have been now 568 performances and last night began the eleventh season. During all that time there have been six different conductors, all but two of whom, Sig. de Novelles and Herr Neuendorf, were promoted from the ranks of the society. Max Zach, the present conductor, was born in Bemberg in Austria and for ten years has been playing in the viola section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

C. A. Ellis, the manager, is now in Europe, and will remain abroad throughout the season. The management thus falls on the shoulders of F. R. Comee. It was Mr. Comee's idea to place the illuminated sign, now at the Hamilton place entrance, spelling the words "Promenade Concert," in electric incandescence.

Prominent among those present were: Mrs. John L. Gardner, Miss Olga Gardner, Charles Sampson, Lawrence Horton, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Apthorp, William Blake, Miss Elsie Perkins, Tom D. Barroll and party, W. R. Rotch, William Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Guild, F. Gordon Dexter and the Misses Fay, Miss Emery, James Kidder, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper and party, Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper, John Tilden, Clarence Hollander and party, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Holden and party, George W. Cram, B. S. Hurlburt, Mrs. Caroline Hall Washburn and party, Alexander H. Higginson, William Locke, Miss Putnam, Frank Locke, Holker Abbott, Franz Kneisel, Otto Roth and many others well known in society.

It was a clever arrangement of the programme of the Popular Concert, on Friday evening, whereby the request for silence when Mr. Schnitzler played the violin solo from Handel was preceded by the intermezzo that made Mascagni famous from the first time that "Cavalleria" was heard. Before that number the babel of tongues was as lively as the smoke was thick, and at all the tables the flow of effervescing bottles and talk was more audible to most of the people present than the music which the band was playing. Then the strains of the intermezzo came, stridently sentimental and beseeching, soothing the savagest breasts, luring the least musical to silence, and after that, a worthy chance for the violinist and the music that endures. The people in the audiences at the Promenade Concert are more than ever interesting. The Portuguese element is one of the most picturesque features now in Yankeedom, and to see the pleasure of a serious grandson of Portugal and Massachusetts is not less entertaining than to see an Italian taking in German music.

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1896.

MUSIC AND MENUS.

The Season of Promenade Concerts Begun.

Cordial Greeting Extended to Mr Max Zach and His Orchestra.

Large and Enthusiastic Audience at the First "Pop" Last Evening.

At last the pops!

Two thousand people crowded Music hall last night, delighted to have some diversion to break the dulness of the past month and entirely satisfied that such diversion was the perennial "pop!"

It was a splendid opening, and all signs augured a successful season. Max Zach, the new conductor, made an instantaneous hit. Artistic Boston, en masse, was on hand, together with a fair showing of the swells.

These concerts seem to grow more democratic. Society can hardly be distinguished from the rest of the world. Alongside Mrs Gardner's table—who, by the way, was in fine spirits, and looked uncommonly well in her famous first night gown—were parties of young people who are way beyond the pale of society—office clerks and young professionals, denizens of the West end and young swains who never wore a dress suit. Yet none of them felt out of their element.

Good will was rampant. Through the haze of cigarette smoke which mingled with the perfume of roses the swells and "the others" surveyed each other indulgently, and under the spell of Strauss waltz and Hungarian rhapsody forgot social differences and in the forgetting made the prettiest bit of Bohemia Boston is every likely to know.

Some really commendable efforts were made at decorating the big barn of a hall. It looked more festive than ever before. Both balconies and the stage were festooned with laurel. Back of the orchestra was a tall hedge of pines, and in front of it were a few scattering palms and the most elaborate feature of all—a huge bunch of red and white roses.

Some new lights have been added over the platform, which is something of an improvement, and the facilities for serving are considerably better than last year.

Of course the critical part of the audience didn't get in until the concert was about an hour old. By 9 there was not a table to be had, nor a balcony seat of any account. The way they all went showed that the public was just in the mood for some such free-and-easy sort of entertainment.

And yet they were not very enthusiastic at first.

The smoke and the crowd kept the temperature well up, so that every table, by the time the orchestra had reached the last waltz, showed an encouraging array of empty glasses.

At the very end everybody waked up to the situation, and there were cheers, shouts and bravos, so that the opening pop ended in a blaze of triumph.

Among those present were: Mr Lawrence Houghton, Mr Alexander H. Higginson, Mrs John L. Gardner, Miss Olga Gardner, Mr Charles Samson, Mr W. P. Blake, Mr Clarence Hollander and party, Mr and Mrs Arthur Richmond, Miss Shattuck, Miss Fay, Miss Sally Fairchild, Mr Jack Tilden, Mr and Mrs Robert C. Hooper, Mr William Bennett, Mr and Mrs Franz Kneisel, Mr William Roach, Dr and Mrs Charles Inches, Mr William Blake, Mr Geo. Ellis, Mr Walter H. Dugan and party, Mrs L. H. Mudgett, Miss Armstrong, Mr and Mrs Charles E. Lauriat, Miss Lauriat, Mr and Mrs Lane, Mr Frank E. Chase.

Conductor Zach's program consisted of 12 numbers, and as about one-third of them were redemanded it was evident that the music was well suited to please the tastes of a miscellaneous audience.

The program this evening is as follows:

Prelude from Gouverneur de Tours	Reinecke
Two Slavonic Dances	Dvorak
Overture, Rienzi	Wagner
Selection, Mikado	Sullivan
Waltz, Schonbrunner	Lanner
Polka, Tyrolean	Zeller
March, Hoch Habsburg	Kral
Coronation March from Le Prophete	Meyerbeer
Overture, Raymond	A Thomas
Waltz, Trau, Schau, Wein	Johann Strauss
Selection, Faust	Gounod
Suite, Peer Gynt	Grieg

THE REPUBLIC.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1896.

The promenade concerts in Music Hall started off last Monday with great success. These entertainments are a welcome supplement to the more serious musical season, and that their popularity is undimmed was amply proved by the size and the quality of the audience, and the pleasure with which it hailed the inauguration of the new season. Every reserved seat in the hall was taken, and many stood on the floor and in the balconies. A good number of seats have been sold for all the concerts of this week and next, and several prominent society folk have engaged floor tables for the whole season. A different bill is to be given each evening, and the plan seems to be that every programme shall contain two opera overtures, two waltzes, two operatic potpourris and two marches, in addition to music of a more serious, but still light, order.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 3, 1896.
(Copyright 1896, Post Publishing Company.)

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Just at this season of the year the all-important question with the amusement-seeking public is: "When do the Music Hall promenade concerts begin?" and everybody will be very glad to know that the opening night is fixed for Monday evening, May 11. This will be the eleventh season of these remarkably popular entertainments and the opening night will be the 568th performance. A brief summary of these concerts, showing their duration and the conductors by seasons, may be of interest:

1885, July 11 to Oct. 3—Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, seventy-three performances.

1886, June 5 to Sept. 25—Mr. John C. Mullaly, ninety-seven performances.

1887, June 11 to Sept. 3—Mr. Wilhelm Reitzel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, seventy-three performances.

1888, May 23 to Sept. 22—Mr. Franz Kneisel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 102 performances.

1889, June 1 to July 6—Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, thirty-one performances.

1890—No concerts.

1891, June 1 to July 11—Mr. T. Adamowski and Mr. E. Gruenberg, thirty-six performances.

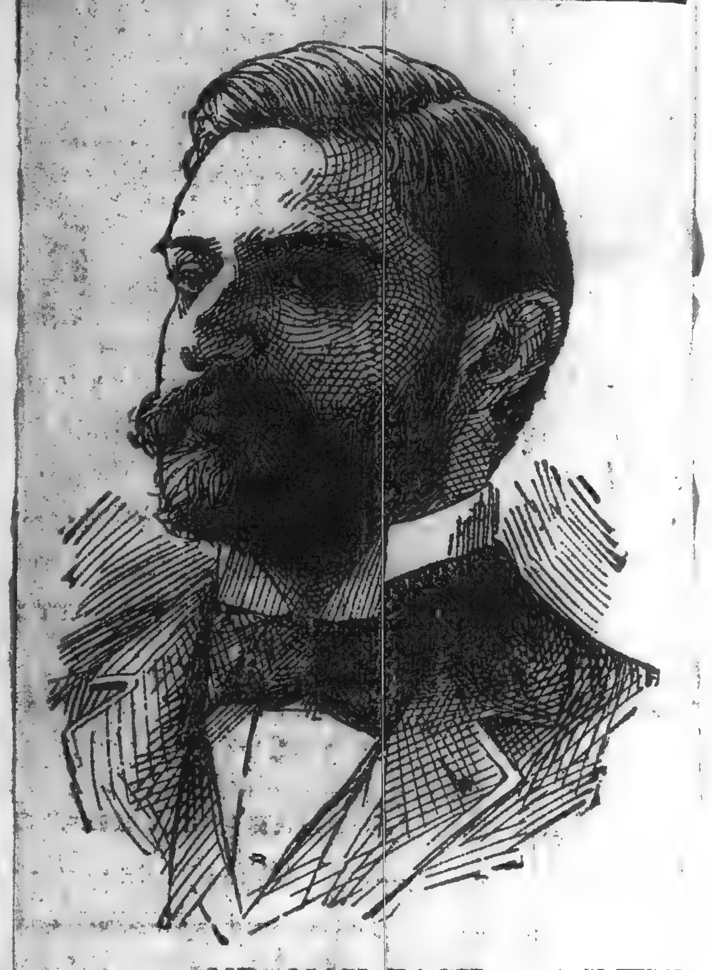
1892, May 31 to July 9—Mr. T. Adamowski, thirty-five performances.

1893, June 3 to July 15—Mr. T. Adamowski, thirty-one performances.

1894, May 12 to July 7—Mr. T. Adamowski, forty-five performances.

1895, May 11 to July 6—Mr. A. De Novellis, forty-four performances.

It is worthy of note that of the above list of conductors, only two, Mr. Neuendorff and Mr. De Novellis, were not members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The precedent established by this fact has been emphasized by the selection as conductor of Mr. Max Zach, for ten years a prominent member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Zach will be very pleasantly and readily remembered as having conducted several of his own compositions during the past three seasons.



MR. MAX ZACH.

"ACRES" AT THE BOSTON.

Mr. Zach was born in 1864, in Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was obtained under the tuition of Czerwinski, teacher of piano, and of Professor Bruckmann, instructor on the violin. While still in school Mr. Zach was a member of the conservatory orchestra, which gave several symphony concerts.

On deciding to become a professional musician, Mr. Zach went to the Vienna Conservatory in 1880, studying the violin first with Bachrich, and afterwards with Professor Grun, and at the same time studying harmony with Professor Robert Fuchs, and counterpoint with Professor Krenn. Mr. Zach all this time was doing military duty, serving in the band of the regiment under A. Czibulka, until 1886, when he became a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In the absence of Manager C. A. Ellis in Europe, the concerts will be under the direction of Assistant Manager F. R. Comee. Tickets for the opening night go on sale tomorrow, Monday, morning, at Music Hall, at 9 o'clock.

ON SUNDAY GLOBE
Y, MAY 3, 1896—FO

Another Season of "Pops" in Music Hall.

Lovers of the best of music who regret the closing of the Boston symphony orchestra season, as well as those who prefer entertainments of a lighter and more popular nature, are equally interested in the announcement of the opening concert in the 11th season of the Music hall promenade concerts, which is fixed for Monday evening, May 11.

The opening night of this season will be the 568th performance, a total which suggests a brief resume of these concerts, showing their duration and the conductors by seasons, as follows:

1885—July 11 to Oct 3, Mr Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.

1886—June 5 to Sept 25, Mr John C. Mullaly, 97 performances.

1887—June 11 to Sept 3, Mr Wilhelm Rietzel and Mr Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.

1888—May 23 to Sept 22, Mr Frank Kneisel and Mr Ad Neuendorff, 102 performances.

1889—June 1 to July 6, Mr Ad Neuendorff, 31 performances.

1890—No concerts.

1891—June 1 to July 11, Mr T. Adamowski and E. Gruenberg, 36 performances.

1892—May 31 to July 9, Mr T. Adamowski, 35 performances.

1893—June 3 to July 15, Mr T. Adamowski, 31 performances.

1894—May 12 to July 7, Mr T. Adamowski, 45 performances.

1895—May 11 to July 6, Mr A. de Novellis, 44 performances.

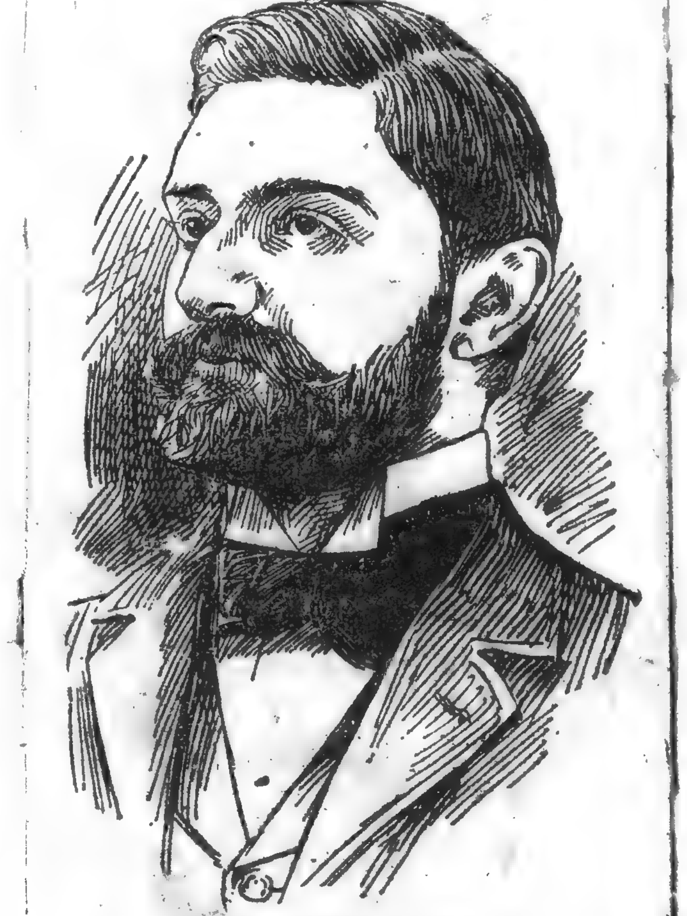
These deservedly popular entertainments appeal to such an extended variety of tastes that it is almost impossible to define their success in brief and precise terms. The admirable orchestra of 50 members, selected from the ranks of the Boston symphony orchestra; the variety and general attractiveness of the programs which are within the reach of all; the opportunity to refresh the inner man, and the all-pervading fondness for a brief sight of Bohemia, will perhaps best explain the favor that has been shown these concerts since their beginning.

Everything will be conducted upon the same general basis as in the past, and request programs and evenings devoted to favorite composers will be attractive features.

The conductor will be Mr Max Zach, for 10 years a member of the Boston symphony orchestra, and who will be pleasantly recalled by patrons as having conducted several popular waltzes, polkas and marches of his own composition in the past three seasons.

Mr Zach was born in 1864 at Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was received at home under the direct tuition of Prof Szerwinski for the piano, and Prof Bruckmann for the violin. Even while Mr Zach was at school he was a member of the local conservatory orchestra, which gave several symphony concerts.

In 1880, upon determining to become a professional musician, Mr Zach went to the Vienna conservatory, where he studied the violin, first under Bachrich and later under Prof Grun. While studying harmony with Prof Robert Fuchs and counterpoint with Prof Krenn, Mr Zach also did military duty, serving in the band of the regiment under A. Czibulka up to the time of his joining the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1886.



MR MAX ZACH.

It is worthy of note that Mr Zach is the sixth conductor selected from the ranks of the Boston Symphony orchestra. In fact, of the above list Mr Neuendorff and Mr de Novellis are the only ones who were not members of this organization.

In the absence of manager C. A. Ellis in Europe, the concerts will be under the direction of assistant manager F. R. Comee.

Reunions of whist clubs at the Music hall Pops will be a popular fad this season. As the first one occurs tomorrow evening, an early application should be made in order to secure "club tables."

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10.

The Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

Tomorrow night is the opening of the 11th season of the Music Hall Promenade concerts. These popular entertainments will be conducted on the same general plan as in past seasons. The conductor, Mr. Max Zach, for several years a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, promises many novelties, and has placed in the programmes for the first four concerts, six selections which will have their first performance at these concerts. The programme for the opening night is appended.

PROGRAMME.

1—Polonaise in E.................Liszt
2—Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"......Nicolai
3—Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"......Joh. Strauss
4—Selection, "Aïda".................Verdi

5—Scenes Pittoresques.................Massanet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fête Bohème.

6—Narcissus.................Ethelbert Nevin
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7—Adagio and Gavotte (For String Orchestra)...Bach
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

8—Hungarian Rhapsody in F.................Liszt

9—Overture, "Si j'étais Roi".................Adam
10—Waltz, "Grubenlichter".................Zeller
11—Mazourka, "La Mousmé".................Ganne
12—March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile".................Victor Herbert
(First Time.)

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1896.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Tomorrow night will be the opening of the Music Hall promenade concerts, and the beginning of the eleventh season of these entertainments which have grown to be a recognized and indispensable feature of the year's amusements. The high standard of these concerts will be maintained in every respect. The conductor will be Mr. Max Zach, for several years a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the sixth conductor to be chosen from the ranks of this now famous organization. In fact, it is worthy of note that every conductor, with the exception of Messrs. De Novellis and Neuendorff, has been chosen from the ranks of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. We give below the program in full for the opening night.

Polonaise in E.................Liszt
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor".Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens..Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Aïda".................Verdi
Scenes Pittoresques.................Massenet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fête Bohème.
Narcissus.................Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and gavotte (for string orchestra)
Bach
Hungarian rhapsody in F.................Liszt
Overture, "Si j'étais Roi".................Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter".................Zeller
Mazourka, "La Mousmé".................Ganne
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"..........Victor Herbert
(First Time.)

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1896.
(Copyright 1896, Post Publishing Company.)

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The eleventh season of the Music Hall promenade concerts, which will open tomorrow night, promises to be quite as successful as its predecessors judging from the very general demand for seats. There will be no radical change in the method of conducting these very popular entertainments. The orchestral leader will be Mr. Max Zach, who has been for several years a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and who will be very pleasantly remembered as having conducted several of his own compositions at these concerts in seasons past. Mr. Zach hopes to introduce several musical novelties, as is indicated by his having placed six selections in the first four programmes which will receive their first presentation at these concerts.

Below is the programme for the opening night in full:

1 Polonaise in E.................Liszt
2 Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"..
Nicolai
3 Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens".......
Johann Strauss
4 Selection, "Aida".................Verdi
5 Scenes Pittoresques.................Massenet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fete Boheme.
6 Narcissus.................Ethelbert Nevin
7 Adagio and Gavotte (for string orchestra).................Bach
8 Hungarian Rhapsody in F.................Liszt
9 Overture, "Si j'etais Roi".................Adam
10 Waltz, "Grubenlichter".................Zeller
11 Mazourka, "La Mouseme".................Ganne
12 March, "Am I Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile".......Victor Herbert

NICKELODEON

---

come an[illegible] hall promen[illegible] Monday eve[illegible] the 11th seas[illegible] ular entert[illegible] night will [illegible] since their [illegible] in 1885. The concerts will be [illegible]ted upon the same general plan as last year and will include all the attractive features, such as special composers' nights and request programs. The conductor will be Mr Max Zach, for 10 years a prominent member of the Boston symphony orchestra, and the sixth conductor to be chosen from the ranks of this organization. Mr Zach will be very pleasantly remembered as having conducted several of his own compositions during the past three seasons, and it is safe to predict that the same success which attended his predecessors will extend to him.

SUNDAY HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR
VOL. XCIX., NO. 131.

SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1896.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Everybody welcomes the announcement of the beginning of the Music Hall promenade concerts, which is appointed for tomorrow night. It will be the 11th season of these popular entertainments, and as everything will be conducted upon the same general plan as in past seasons, it is safe to assume that they will prove as attractive as ever. The conductor will be Mr. Max Zach, for several years a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Mr. Zach will make, as a feature of these concerts, several musical novelties, having already placed six pieces on the first four programmes, which have not been heard here before. The selections for the opening night are:

Polonaise in E.................Liszt
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"..Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"..Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Aida".................Verdi
Scenes pittoresques.................Massenet
Narcissus.................Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte (for string orchestra).................Bach
Hungarian rhapsody in F.................Liszt
Overture, "Si j'etais Roi".................Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter".................Zeller
Mazourka, "La Mousme".................Ganne
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile".........Victor Herbert

NOTES.

The Pops begin this week, and Music Hall becomes the nightly scene of gay and festive throngs, bent on the enjoyment of music, with beer garden accompaniment. It is the sort of a fillip that chimes in with the changing season when it is too late for the full enjoyment of the more substantial programme and too early for al fresco entertainment in the evening. It is a merry interlude, which everybody enjoys.

This being leap year, the Pops ought to be double headers.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1896.

Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

Tomorrow evening the 11th season of the Music hall promenade concerts will begin at Music hall. The same standard of excellence which has crowded the hall every night in the past seasons will be maintained this year. The conductor will not be Mr Max Zach, for many years a member of the Boston symphony orchestra, who will be readily and pleasantly recalled as having conducted several of his own compositions in the last two seasons. It is worthy of note that of the eight different conductors since the beginning of these concerts, all, with the exception of Mr De Novellis and Mr Neuendorff, have been members of the Boston symphony orchestra.

Mr Zach promises several musical novelties, and has placed six new selections in the first four programs. We give below the program in full for the opening night:

Polonaise in E.................Liszt
Overture, Merry Wives of Windsor .....Nicolai
Waltz, Freut euch des Lebens ....Joh. Strauss
Selection, Aida.................Verdi
Scenes Pittoresques.................Massenet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fete Boheme.
Narcissus.................Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte, for string orchestra .Bach
Hungarian Rhapsody in F.................Liszt
Overture, Si j'etais Rio.................Adam
Waltz, Grubenlichter.................Zeller
Mazourka, La Mousme.................Ganne
March from The Wizard of the Nile,
Victor Herbert

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 3, 1896.
(Copyright 1896, Post Publishing Company.)

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Just at this season of the year the all-important question with the amusement-seeking public is: "When do the Music Hall promenade concerts begin?" and everybody will be very glad to know that the opening night is fixed for Monday evening, May 11. This will be the eleventh season of these remarkably popular entertainments and the opening night will be the 568th performance. A brief summary of these concerts, showing their duration and the conductors by seasons, may be of interest:

1885, July 11 to Oct. 3—Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, seventy-three performances.

1886, June 5 to Sept. 25—Mr. John C. Mullaly, ninety-seven performances.

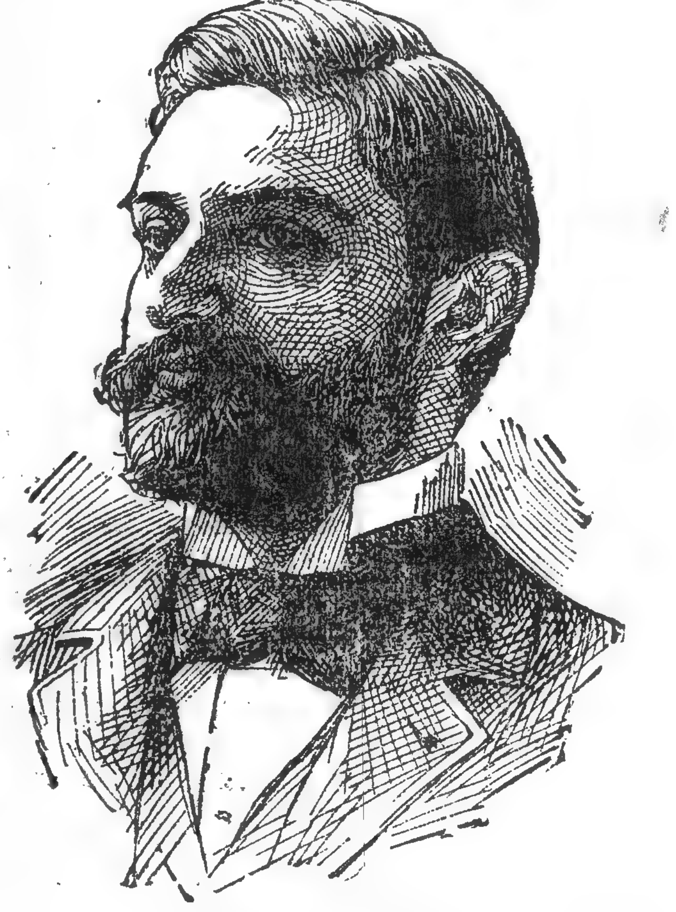
1887, June 11 to Sept. 3—Mr. Wilhelm Reitzel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, seventy-three performances.

1888, May 23 to Sept. 22—Mr. Franz Kneisel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 102 performances.

1889, June 1 to July 6—Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, thirty-one performances.

1890—No concerts.

1891, June 1 to July 11—Mr. T. Adamowski and Mr. E. Gruenberg, thirty-six performances.



MR. MAX ZACH.

1892, May 31 to July 9—Mr. T. Adamowski, thirty-five performances.

1893, June 3 to July 15—Mr. T. Adamowski, thirty-one performances.

1894, May 12 to July 7—Mr. T. Adamowski, forty-five performances.

1895, May 11 to July 6—Mr. A. De Novellis, forty-four performances.

It is worthy of note that of the above list of conductors, only two, Mr. Neuendorff and Mr. De Novellis, were not members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The precedent established by this fact has been emphasized by the selection as conductor of Mr. Max Zach, for ten years a prominent member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Zach will be very pleasantly and readily remembered as having conducted several of his own compositions during the past three seasons.

ACRES" AT THE BOSTON.

Mr. Zach was born in 1864, in Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was obtained under the tuition of Czerwinski, teacher of piano, and of Professor Bruckmann, instructor on the violin. While still in school Mr. Zach was a member of the conservatory orchestra, which gave several symphony concerts.

On deciding to become a professional musician, Mr. Zach went to the Vienna Conservatory in 1880, studying the violin first with Bachrich, and afterwards with Professor Grun, and at the same time studying harmony with Professor Robert Fuchs, and counterpoint with Professor Krenn. Mr. Zach all this time was doing military duty, serving in the band of the regiment under A. Czibulka, until 1886, when he became a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In the absence of Manager C. A. Ellis in Europe, the concerts will be under the direction of Assistant Manager F. R. Comee. Tickets for the opening night go on sale tomorrow, Monday, morning, at Music Hall, at 9 o'clock.

ON SUNDAY GLOBE—
Y, MAY 3, 1896—FO

Another Season of "Pops" in Music Hall.

Lovers of the best of music who regret the closing of the Boston symphony orchestra season, as well as those who prefer entertainments of a lighter and more popular nature, are equally interested in the announcement of the opening concert in the 11th season of the Music hall promenade concerts, which is fixed for Monday evening, May 11.

The opening night of this season will be the 568th performance, a total which suggests a brief resume of these concerts, showing their duration and the conductors by seasons, as follows:

1885—July 11 to Oct 3, Mr Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.

1886—June 5 to Sept 25, Mr John C. Mullaly, 97 performances.

1887—June 11 to Sept 3, Mr Wilhelm Rietzel and Mr Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.

1888—May 23 to Sept 22, Mr Frank Kneisel and Mr Ad Neuendorff, 102 performances.

1889—June 1 to July 6, Mr Ad Neuendorff, 31 performances.

1890—No concerts.

1891—June 1 to July 11, Mr T. Adamowski and E. Gruenberg, 36 performances.

1892—May 31 to July 9, Mr T. Adamowski, 35 performances.

1893—June 3 to July 15, Mr T. Adamowski, 31 performances.

1894—May 12 to July 7, Mr T. Adamowski, 45 performances.

1895—May 11 to July 6, Mr A. de Novellis, 44 performances.

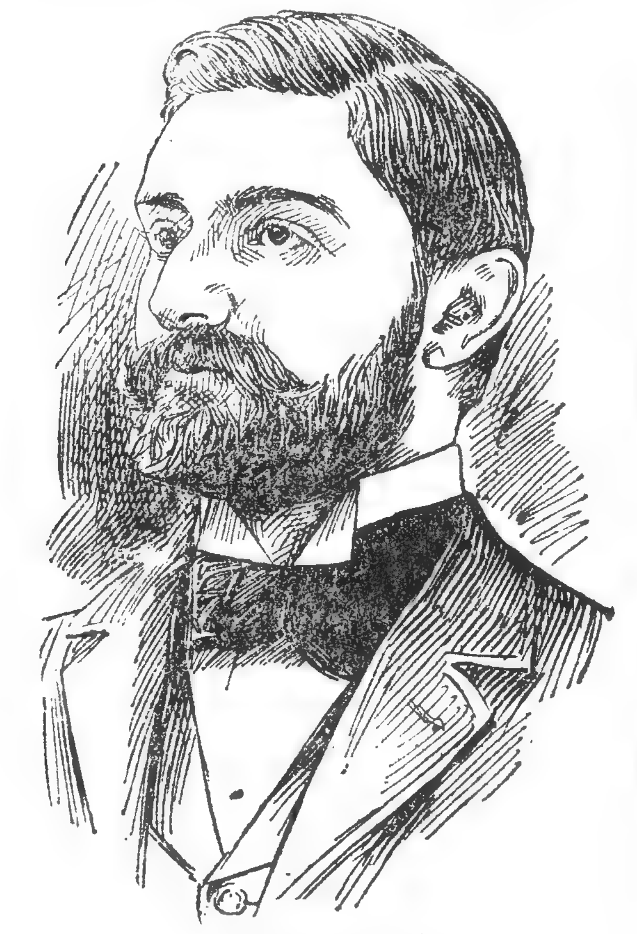
These deservedly popular entertainments appeal to such an extended variety of tastes that it is almost impossible to define their success in brief and precise terms. The admirable orchestra of 50 members, selected from the ranks of the Boston symphony orchestra; the variety and general attractiveness of the programs which are within the reach of all; the opportunity to refresh the inner man, and the all-pervading fondness for a brief sight of Bohemia, will perhaps best explain the favor that has been shown these concerts since their beginning.

Everything will be conducted upon the same general basis as in the past, and request programs and evenings devoted to favorite composers will be attractive features.

The conductor will be Mr Max Zach, for 10 years a member of the Boston symphony orchestra, and who will be pleasantly recalled by patrons as having conducted several popular waltzes, polkas and marches of his own composition in the past three seasons.

Mr Zach was born in 1864 at Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was received at home under the direct tuition of Prof Szerwinski for the piano, and Prof Bruckmann for the violin. Even while Mr Zach was at school he was a member of the local conservatory orchestra, which gave several symphony concerts.

In 1880, upon determining to become a professional musician, Mr Zach went to the Vienna conservatory, where he studied the violin, first under Bachrich and later under Prof Grun. While studying harmony with Prof Robert Fuchs and counterpoint with Prof Krenn, Mr Zach also did military duty, serving in the band of the regiment under A. Czibulka up to the time of his joining the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1886.



MR MAX ZACH.

It is worthy of note that Mr Zach is the sixth conductor selected from the ranks of the Boston Symphony orchestra. In fact, of the above list Mr Neuendorff and Mr de Novellis are the only ones who were not members of this organization.

In the absence of manager C. A. Ellis in Europe, the concerts will be under the direction of assistant manager F. R. Comee

---

Reunions of whist clubs at the Music hall Pops will be a popular fad this season. As the first one occurs tomorrow evening, an early application should be made in order to secure "club tables."

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10.

The Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

Tomorrow night is the opening of the 11th season of the Music Hall Promenade concerts. These popular entertainments will be conducted on the same general plan as in past seasons. The conductor, Mr. Max Zach, for several years a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, promises many novelties, and has placed in the programmes for the first four concerts, six selections which will have their first performance at these concerts. The programme for the opening night is appended.

PROGRAMME.

1—Polonaise in E.......................................Liszt
2—Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor". ....Nicolai
3—Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"......Joh. Strauss
4—Selection, "Aïda"....................................Verdi

5—Scenes Pittoresques.........................Massanet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fête Bohème.

6—Narcissus.................................Ethelbert Nevin
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.
7—Adagio and Gavotte (For String Orchestra)...Bach
The audience is respectfully requested to preserve silence during the performance of this number.

8—Hungarian Rhapsody in F.........................Liszt

9—Overture, "Si j'étais Roi"........................Adam
10—Waltz, "Grubenlichter"..........................Zeller
11—Mazourka, "La Mousme".........................Ganne
12—March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"..........................Victor Herbert
(First Time.)

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1896.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Tomorrow night will be the opening of the Music Hall promenade concerts, and the beginning of the eleventh season of these entertainments which have grown to be a recognized and indispensable feature of the year's amusements. The high standard of these concerts will be maintained in every respect. The conductor will be Mr. Max Zach, for several years a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the sixth conductor to be chosen from the ranks of this now famous organization. In fact, it is worthy of note that every conductor, with the exception of Messrs. De Novellis and Neuendorff, has been chosen from the ranks of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. We give below the program in full for the opening night.

Polonaise in E.......................................Liszt
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor".Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens..Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Aïda"...................................Verdi
Scenes Pittoresques......................Massenet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fête Bohème.
Narcissus............................Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and gavotte (for string orchestra) Bach
Hungarian rhapsody in F..................Liszt
Overture, "Si j'étais Roi"..................Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"......................Zeller
Mazourka, "La Mousmé"..................Ganne
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"..........Victor Herbert
(First Time.)

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1896.
(Copyright 1896, Post Publishing Company.)

THE MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

The eleventh season of the Music Hall promenade concerts, which will open tomorrow night, promises to be quite as successful as its predecessors judging from the very general demand for seats. There will be no radical change in the method of conducting these very popular entertainments. The orchestral leader will be Mr. Max Zach, who has been for several years a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and who will be very pleasantly remembered as having conducted several of his own compositions at these concerts in seasons past. Mr. Zach hopes to introduce several musical novelties, as is indicated by his having placed six selections in the first four programmes which will receive their first presentation at these concerts.

Below is the programme for the opening night in full:

1 Polonaise in E.................................Liszt
2 Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor".. Nicolai
3 Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"...... Johann Strauss
4 Selection, "Aida"..............................Verdi
5 Scenes Pittoresques.................Massenet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fete Boheme.
6 Narcissus ....Ethelbert Nevin
7 Adagio and Gavotte (for string orchestra) ....Bach
8 Hungarian Rhapsody in F.................Liszt
9 Overture, "Si j'etais Roi"...............Adam
10 Waltz, "Grubenlichter"...................Zeller
11 Mazourka, "La Mouseme"................Ganne
12 March, "Am I Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile"........Victor Herbert

NICKELODEON

—A very [illegible]asonable and also [illegible] come announ[illegible]ment is that the Mus[illegible] hall promen[illegible] concerts will begin o[illegible] Monday eve[illegible] May 11. This will b[illegible] the 11th seas[illegible]ese deservedly popular entert[illegible] and the opening night will [illegible]th performance since their [illegible] in 1885. The concerts will be [illegible]cted upon the same general plan as last year and will include all the attractive features, such as special composers' nights and request programs. The conductor will be Mr Max Zach, for 10 years a prominent member of the Boston symphony orchestra, and the sixth conductor to [illegible] chosen from the ranks of this organiz[illegible] tion. Mr Zach will be very pleasar[illegible] remembered as having conducted s[illegible] eral of his own compositions during [illegible] past three seasons, and it is safe to p[illegible] dict that the same success which attended his predecessors will extend to him.

SUNDAY HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR
VOL. XCIX., NO. 131.

SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1896.

MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Everybody welcomes the announcement of the beginning of the Music Hall promenade concerts, which is appointed for tomorrow night. It will be the 11th season of these popular entertainments, and as everything will be conducted upon the same general plan as in past seasons, it is safe to assume that they will prove as attractive as ever. The conductor will be Mr. Max Zach, for several years a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Mr. Zach will make, as a feature of these concerts, several musical novelties, having already placed six pieces on the first four programmes, which have not been heard here before. The selections for the opening night are:

Polonaise in E.......................................Liszt
Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor"..Nicolai
Waltz, "Freut euch des Lebens"..Joh. Strauss
Selection, "Aida"....................................Verdi
Scenes pitt[illegible]esques..................[illegible]assenet
Narcissus ....Ethel[illegible] Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte (for string or[illegible]es- tra) ....Bach
Hungarian rhapsody in F....................Liszt
Overture, "Si j'etais Roi"................Adam
Waltz, "Grubenlichter"....................Zeller
Mazourka, "La Mousme".................Ganne
March, "Am I a Wizard?" from "The Wizard of the Nile".........Victor Herbert

NOTES.

The Pops begin this week, and Music Hall becomes the nightly scene of gay and festive throngs, bent on the enjoyment of music, with beer garden accompaniment. It is the sort of a fillip that chimes in with the changing season when it is too late for the full enjoyment of the more substantial programme and too early for al fresco entertainment in the evening. It is a merry interlude, which everybody enjoys.

This being leap year, the Pops ought to be double headers.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1896.

Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

Tomorrow evening the 11th season of the Music hall promenade concerts will begin at Music hall. The same standard of excellence which has crowded the hall every night in the past seasons will be maintained this year. The conductor will not be Mr Max Zach, for many years a member of the Boston symphony orchestra, who will be readily and pleasantly recalled as having conducted several of his own compositions in the last two seasons. It is worthy of note that of the eight different conductors since the beginning of these concerts, all, with the exception of Mr De Novellis and Mr Neuendorff, have been members of the Boston symphony orchestra.

Mr Zach promises several musical novelties, and has placed six new selections in the first four programs. We give below the program in full for the opening night:

Polonaise in E ....Liszt
Overture, Merry Wives of Windsor .....Nicolai
Waltz, Freut euch des Lebeus ....Joh. Strauss
Selection, Aida ....Verdi
Scenes Pittoresques ....Massenet
  a. March.
  b. Air de Ballet.
  c. Angelus.
  d. Fete Boheme.
Narcissus ....Ethelbert Nevin
Adagio and Gavotte, for string orchestra .Bach
Hungarian Rhapsody in F ....Lisszt
Overture, Si j'etais Rio ....Adam
Waltz, Grubenlichter ....Zeller
Mazourka, La Mousme ....Ganne
March from The Wizard of the Nile,
Victor Herbert

[illegible]TON JOU[illegible]

"POPS" COMING.

Monday Night, May 11, Concerts Will Begin.

The Conductor This Season Will Be Max Zach.

In Interview With Him on Pertinent Subjects.

Max W. Zach, than whom there is no more popular musician in the city, will conduct the "Pop" Concerts at Music Hall this season. His selection by the management of the concerts was finally decided upon in the middle of last week. Mr. Zach forthwith bought a gilt-edged note book, in which to keep tabs on his ideas. The book bulged conspicuously from one of his vest pockets as the other day, in his sunny home on Atherton Street, on the verge of Forest Hills, he conversed with a Journal reporter.

"It's safe to say that you like the task of conducting?" observed the reporter.

"Ah, yes, indeed." Mr. Zach smiled. Those who frequently see him on the concert stage know what a pleasant face this young man has. In contour, rather full, dotted with eyes that reveal humor and an ever-present affection for pleasure (look in the half-tone supplement of today's Journal, and see for yourself). Well, Mr. Zach seems immeasurably pleasanter when he smiles.

"Of course," said the reporter, "Bostonians know that you have had some experience as conductor, but when did you begin?"

"When I was in the army—the Austrian army. That was from 1883 to 1886. While I served I was stationed at Vienna, being connected with the 31st Regiment, or, as it was more commonly known, the Regiment of the Grand Duke Mecklembourg-Strelitz. That was merely an honorary title, of course I was solo violinist most of the time; but, toward the latter part of my service, I began to do some conducting.

"You know how it is with the musicians attached to one of those foreign regiments. In the summer they are a regular band, furnishing all the outdoor music, sometimes at reviews and sometimes at the regimental concerts. Then, in the winter, the band is not seldom transformed into an orchestra, playing a variety of excellent music. Having made a beginning, I conducted a great deal, and, I assure you, with much pleasure.

"Soon after leaving the service I came to Boston, and here I have lived ever since. Here, from time to time, I have led orchestras, occasionally, as you probably know, during the performance of my own compositions at the 'Pop' concerts. Last year there were several occasions of that nature. And then, one night, two years ago, when Mr. Adamowski conducted the 'Pops,' he was taken sick suddenly, and I was obliged to jump in almost at a moment's notice."

"And now, temporarily, your inclinations in that line will be satisfied."

"Yes, as you say, for a while. And I've been aspiring in that direction a long time."

Who is this man who thus aspires? Well, Mr. Zach was born in 1864 at Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was received at home, under the direct tuition of Prof. Czerwinski for the piano, and Prof. Bruckmann for the violin. Even while at school Mr. Zach was a member of the local Conservatory Orchestra, which gave several Symphony concerts.

In 1880, upon determining to become a professional musician, Mr. Zach went to the Vienna Conservatory, where he studied the violin, first under Bachrich and later under Prof. Grün. While studying harmony with Prof. Robert Fuchs, and counterpoint with Prof. Krenn, Mr. Zach also did military duty. The band of the regiment was led by A. Czibulka. Afterwards he joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Several successful waltzes, polkas and marches, composed by Mr. Zach, have been played at Boston concerts, particularly those to which he has referred.

"How much actual difference is there between the concerts which you conducted in Vienna and the 'Pops?'" pursued the reporter.

"Not much. In fact, when I think of both the series, as they might be called, I should say that they are about the [illegible]. Here the quality of the music [illegible]nerally superior. In Vienna, you [illegible] have a great deal of dance [illegible] and polkas and the like [illegible] the programs. That's [illegible] [illegible] the 'Pops' is rather [illegible]

"I take it, then, that you don't intend to introduce any novelty into the plan of the concerts? You seem to find the present plan satisfactory."

"I do. We think that the 'Pop' concerts, as now managed, are, from every point of view, as good as you can possibly find. That's what the people think, too, it's very evident. The programs embrace almost every class of music. But it is not necessary to emphasize that point. The patrons of the concerts know that well enough. The scheme this season, as regards the character of the programs, will be the same as that which has been followed since the beginning of Mr. Adamowski's conductorship. The first part will consist of a good march, a jolly overture, a waltz and some suitable operatic selection. The second part will be a little finer in its arrangement, while the third will be thoroughly light. Such a program has always pleased the audience. I'm sure it's relished."

"Is the educational element going to creep in? Do you take any stock in it?" the reporter ventured.

"Educational? I should say not! There ought not to be any education about a 'Pop' concert. A 'Pop' concert is a combination of cigars, beer and music. The people don't want to be educated all the time, surely. I should say that the 24 Symphony concerts are enough of an education every year."

"You'll stick to your native flavor, then?"

"Surely. Ah, the Viennese understand the art of enjoying life. They like their beer, their restaurants and their music; and that's not half bad, I think. But, for that matter there's a big element in the American public that likes the same things."

"I suppose you're looking for new works?"

"Yes, I'm trying to find some, but it's rather a hard undertaking. Of the very latest European success I can get almost nothing, I know. By the time the orders could be filled the season would be nearly over. The successful works which are not of such recent date, but which, all the same, would be novelties here, I shall get all I want in New York. I have already two new waltzes by Strauss in mind. (At this point the notebook proved useful.) 'Trau, Schau, Wem' is one of them. It was very popular in Vienna not long ago. The other is a waltz from one of Strauss's latest operettas; 'Jabuka' they call it. Then, of course, I shall select from the suitable compositions of Americans. Oh, there [illegible] be enough novelties. I shall try to furnish as much diversity in the programs as is possible. I don't like to repeat anything too much.

"Let me see what else is there? Oh, we shall have 'composers' nights,' as usual; and there will be no soloists, except such as are demanded by the pieces which the orchestra plays. I hardly think a place where people smoke is agreeable to singers, and I am sure it isn't for instrumentalists. No, we'll let the Harvard men furnish the extra music—that is, if they have any occasion to. It's rather doubtful, isn't it? Yes. I fear we won't have a chance to play 'Fair Harvard' this year, though you can't tell. Accidents will happen. In that case a little excitement will be excusable. I don't mind it, that is, if they remember that they don't own the hall."

And the talk ended in a hearty laugh.

The "Pop" concerts will begin on Monday night, May 11. This is their 11th season, and the opening concert will be the 568th since the beginning in '85. To define exactly whereby these concerts have retained their attractiveness for the past 11 years would be a repetition of the personal tastes of their countless patrons; but the best general idea of what constitutes their popularity is found in the following excerpt from, a descriptive article, published some years ago:

"The 'Pops,' like the Symphonies, are absorbing in a way. Boston loves them. They are democratic. Here is the clerk, business man, professional man, student, the various gradations of society, men and women alike. Everybody goes, smokes and drinks a little, and feels agreeably relaxed by observing his neighbors as well as hearing the tuneful music. To the right and left in the balconies are the conservative spectators who have come partly to hear the music and partly to 'Bohemia.'"

A brief resume of these concerts, showing their duration and the conductors by seasons, may prove interesting.

1885—July 11 to Oct. 3, Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.
1886—June 5 to Sept. 25, Mr. John C. Mullaly, 97 performances.
1887—June 11 to Sept. 3, Mr. Wilhelm Rietzel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.
1888—May 23 to Sept. 22, Mr. Franz Kneisel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 102 peformances.
1889—June 1 to July 6, Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 31 performances.
1890—No concerts.
1891—June 1 to July 11, Mr. T. Adamowski [illegible]
[illegible] Mr. T. Adamowski, 35 [illegible]
[illegible] to July 15, Mr. T. Adamowski, 31 performances.
1894—May 1[illegible] to July 7, Mr. T. Adamowski, 45 performances.
1895—May 11 to July 6, Mr. A. de Novellis, 44 performances.

Of those named in the foregoing list only Mr. Neuendorff and Mr. de Novellis have not been members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Zach, the new conductor, consequently makes the sixth leader who has been selected from this incomparable organization.

In the absence of Manager C. A. Ellis in Europe, the concerts will be under the direction of Assistant Manager F. R. Comee.

MAX ZACH.
The new leader of the "Pop" concerts.
(See Page 11.)

Boston Transcript

TUESDAY, MAY 5, 1896.

PROMENADE CONCERTS NEXT WEEK

Max Zach Will Conduct; Many Novelties Are Promised.

With the opening of the series of Promenade concerts at Music Hall next Monday evening the summer musical season will be well started. This is the eleventh year of these popular concerts, and the opening night will be the 568th one since they were first organized. In the absence of Manager C. A. Ellis, who is in Europe, the management will be in the hands of Frederic R. Comee. Mr. Comee has for years been the able assistant manager of the Symphony Orchestra, and no more competent man could be found to promote the interests of the "Pops." Everything possible will be done to make the character of these entertainments such that ladies shall have no hesitancy in attending them without an escort. About the same scheme of decoration will be followed this year as in previous seasons, festoons of laurel being used with good effect on the balcony fronts and elsewhere. On the opening night quite a display of flowers will be seen on the stage.

The orchestra will number fifty men from the Symphony. These will be under the lead of Max Zach, who has, in different seasons, now and then led a single number of his own composition. In past years the conductors have been: Ad. Neuendorff, A. de Novellis, Franz Kneisel, John C. Mullaly, Wilhelm Rietzel, T. Adamowski and E. Gruenberg. Of these, all but the first two have been members of the Symphony Orchestra. It was under Mr. Mullaly's conductorship that such selections as the overtures to "Rienzi" and "Tannhauser" were first played at these concerts. Previous to that, lighter music had held the places on the programmes, and it was a bold move on Mr. Mullaly's part to make the innovation. This, however, met with instant and lasting approval. Regular patrons surely must have noticed that waltzes and light music generally meet with less attention than the heavier selections receive. It is while a waltz is being played that people take the opportunity of striking matches for their cigars, and it is then that one hears the popping of corks. A Wagner overture is welcomed with a quiet settling down to the full enjoyment of the number.

Many novelties are promised by manager Comee. A glance over the numbers to be performed the first week shows a wide range of composers. Among them are Bach, Wagner, Liszt, Meyerbeer, Dvorak, Rubenstein, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Verdi, Rossini and Goldmark. Of the composers of music of a lighter character, the programmes include A. Thomas, Grieg, Reincke, Lachner, Auber, Suppé, Mascagni, Strauss, Waldteufel, Sullivan, DeKoven, Nevin and many others.

On the floor there are to be fifty-eight reserved tables, and more than one hundred which are not reserved. In the first balcony there will be thirty-two reserved tables, and the entire sides of this balcony also will be reserved. The second balcony is to be open to anyone, like the unreserved tables on the floor.

BOSTON. MAY 5.

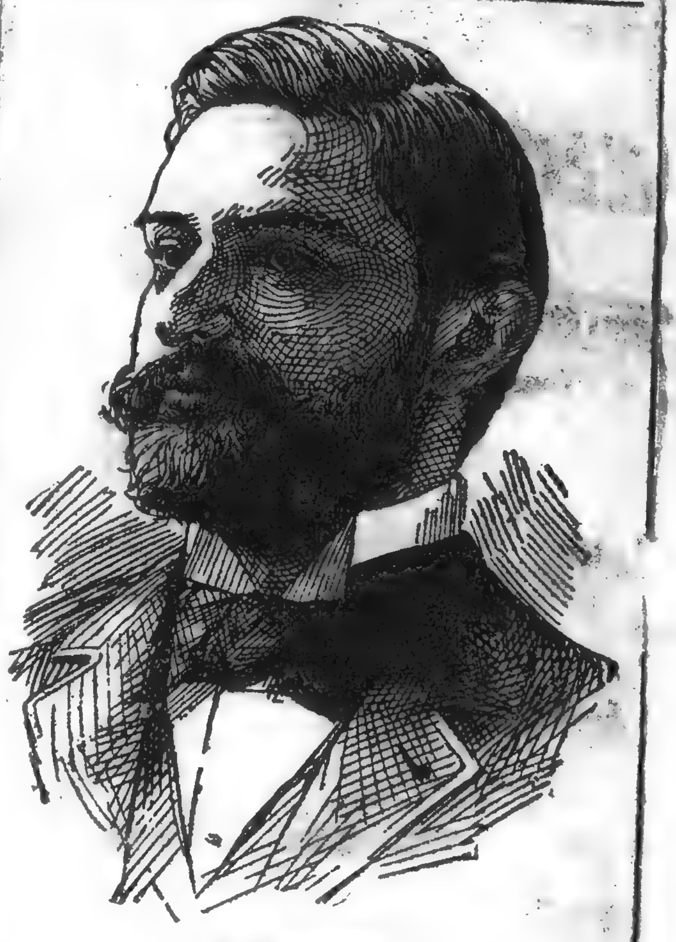
MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Just at this season of the year the question is "When do the Promenade concerts begin?" and there will be general satisfaction at the announcement that Monday evening, May 11, will be the opening night of these popular entertainments.

A brief resume of these concerts, showing their duration and the conductors by seasons may be of interest:

1885, July 11 to Oct. 3, Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.
1886, June 5 to Sept. 25, Mr. John C. Mullaly, 97 performances.
1887, June 11 to Sept. 3, Mr. Wilhelm Rietzel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.
1888, May 23 to Sept. 22, Mr. Franz Kneisel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 102 performances.
1889, June 1 to July 6, Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 31 performances.
1890, no concerts.
1891, June 1 to July 11, Mr. T. Adamowski and Mr. E. Gruenberg, 36 performances.
1892, May 31 to July 9, Mr. T. Adamowski, 35 performances.
1893, June 3 to July 15, Mr. T. Adamowski 31 performances.
1894, May 12 to July 7, Mr. T. Adamowski, 45 performances.
1895, May 11 to July 6, Mr. A. De Novellis, 44 performances.

The above enumeration of performances given shows that the opening night for this season will be the 568th performance. Everything will be conducted upon the same general plan as that of last season, with evenings devoted to favorite composers, request programmes and other equally attractive features. The conductor will be Mr. Max Zach, for 10 years a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the sixth conductor to be selected from the ranks of this famous organization. In fact, Mr. Neuendorff and Mr. De Novellis are the only two conductors who were not members of the organization. Mr. Zach will be readily and pleasantly remembered as the composer of several waltzes, polkas and marches, the performances of which he has himself conducted during the past three seasons. Mr. Zach was born in 1864 at Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was received at home under the direct tuition of Prof. Czerwinski for the piano, and Prof. Bruckmann for the violin. Even while Mr. Zach was at school he was a member of the local Conservatory orchestra, which gave several symphony concerts. In 1880, upon determining to become a professional musician, Mr. Zach went to the Vienna Conservatory, where he studied the violin, first under Bachrich and later under Prof. Grun. While studying harmony with Prof. Robert Fuchs and counterpoint with Prof. Krenn, Mr. Zach also did military duty, serving in the band of the regiment under A. Czibulka up to the time of his joining the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1886. In the absence of Manager C. A. Ellis in Europe, the concerts will be under the direction of Assistant Manager F. R. Comee.



MAX ZACH.
Conductor of the Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

MUSICAL COURIER

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1896.

The promenade concerts will begin May 11. Mr. Max Zach, one of the viola players of the symphony orchestra, will be the conductor. Mr. Zach was born in 1864 at Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was received at home, under Professor Czerwinski for the piano, and Professor Bruckmann for the violin. At school Mr. Zach was a member of the local conservatory orchestra, which gave several symphony concerts. In 1880 Mr. Zach went to the Vienna Conservatory, where he studied the violin, first under Bachrich and later under Professor Grün. While studying harmony with Prof. Robert Fuchs, and counterpoint with Professor Krenn, Mr. Zach also did military duty. The band of the regiment was led by A Czibulka. Afterward he joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Several successful waltzes, polkas and marches, composed by Mr. Zach, have been played at Boston concerts.

* * *

[113]

STON JOURNAL—S

"POPS" COMING.

Monday Night, May 11, Concerts Will Begin.

The Conductor This Season Will Be Max Zach.

An Interview With Him on Pertinent Subjects.

Max W. Zach, than whom there is no more popular musician in the city, will conduct the "Pop" Concerts at Music Hall this season. His selection by the management of the concerts was finally decided upon in the middle of last week. Mr. Zach forthwith bought a gilt-edged note book, in which to keep tabs on his ideas. The book bulged conspicuously from one of his vest pockets as the other day, in his sunny home on Atherton Street, on the verge of Forest Hills, he conversed with a Journal reporter.

"It's safe to say that you like the task of conducting?" observed the reporter.

"Ah, yes, indeed." Mr. Zach smiled. Those who frequently see him on the concert stage know what a pleasant face this young man has. In contour, rather full, dotted with eyes that reveal humor and an ever-present affection for pleasure (look in the half-tone supplement of today's Journal, and see for yourself). Well, Mr. Zach seems immeasurably pleasanter when he smiles.

"Of course," said the reporter, "Bostonians know that you have had some experience as conductor, but when did you begin?"

"When I was in the army—the Austrian army. That was from 1883 to 1886. While I served I was stationed at Vienna, being connected with the 31st Regiment, or, as it was more commonly known, the Regiment of the Grand Duke Mecklembourg-Strelitz. That was merely an honorary title, of course I was solo violinist most of the time; but, toward the latter part of my service, I began to do some conducting.

"You know how it is with the musicians attached to one of those foreign regiments. In the summer they are a regular band, furnishing all the outdoor music, sometimes at reviews and sometimes at the regimental concerts. Then, in the winter, the band is not seldom transformed into an orchestra, playing a variety of excellent music. Having made a beginning, I conducted a great deal, and, I assure you, with much pleasure.

"Soon after leaving the service I came to Boston, and here I have lived ever since. Here, from time to time, I have led orchestras, occasionally, as you probably know, during the performance of my own compositions at the 'Pop' concerts. Last year there were several occasions of that nature. And then, one night, two years ago, when Mr. Adamowski conducted the 'Pops,' he was taken sick suddenly, and I was obliged to jump in almost at a moment's notice."

"And now, temporarily, your inclinations in that line will be satisfied."

"Yes, as you say, for a while. And I've been aspiring in that direction a long time."

Who is this man who thus aspires? Well, Mr. Zach was born in 1864 at Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was received at home, under the direct tuition of Prof. Czerwinski for the piano, and Prof. Bruckmann for the violin. Even while at school Mr. Zach was a member of the local Conservatory Orchestra, which gave several Symphony concerts.

In 1880, upon determining to become a professional musician, Mr. Zach went to the Vienna Conservatory, where he studied the violin, first under Bachrich and later under Prof. Grün. While studying harmony with Prof. Robert Fuchs, and counterpoint with Prof. Krenn, Mr. Zach also did military duty. The band of the regiment was led by A. Czibulka. Afterwards he joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Several successful waltzes, polkas and marches, composed by Mr. Zach, have been played at Boston concerts, particularly those to which he has referred.

"How much actual difference is there between the concerts which you conducted in Vienna and the 'Pops?'" pursued the reporter.

"Not much. In fact, when I think of both the series, as they might be called, I should say that they are about the [illegible]e. Here the quality of the music [illegible]erally superior. In Vienna, you [illegible]hey have a great deal of dance [illegible]ltzes and polkas and the like [illegible]d in the programs. That's [illegible]haracteristic. Here, judg- [illegible] such an orchestra [illegible] superiority of the 'Pops' is plainer still."

"I take it, then, that you don't intend to introduce any novelty into the plan of the concerts? You seem to find the present plan satisfactory."

"I do. We think that the 'Pop' concerts, as now managed, are, from every point of view, as good as you can possibly find. That's what the people think, too, it's very evident. The programs embrace almost every class of music. But it is not necessary to emphasize that point. The patrons of the concerts know that well enough. The scheme this season, as regards the character of the programs, will be the same as that which has been followed since the beginning of Mr. Adamowski's conductorship. The first part will consist of a good march, a jolly overture, a waltz and some suitable operatic selection. The second part will be a little finer in its arrangement, while the third will be thoroughly light. Such a program has always pleased the audience. I'm sure it's relished."

"Is the educational element going to creep in? Do you take any stock in it?" the reporter ventured.

"Educational? I should say not! There ought not to be any education about a 'Pop' concert. A 'Pop' concert is a combination of cigars, beer and music. The people don't want to be educated all the time, surely. I should say that the 24 Symphony concerts are enough of an education every year."

"You'll stick to your native flavor, then?"

"Surely. Ah, the Viennese understand the art of enjoying life. They like their beer, their restaurants and their music; and that's not half bad, I think. But, for that matter there's a big element in the American public that likes the same things."

"I suppose you're looking for new works?"

"Yes, I'm trying to find some, but it's rather a hard undertaking. Of the very latest European success I can get almost nothing, I know. By the time the orders could be filled the season would be nearly over. The successful works which are not of such recent date, but which, all the same, would be novelties here, I shall get all I want in New York. I have already two new waltzes by Strauss in mind. (At this point the notebook proved useful.) 'Trau, Schau, Wem' is one of them. It was very popular in Vienna not long ago. The other is a waltz from one of Strauss's latest operettas; 'Jabuka' they call it. Then, of course, I shall select from the suitable compositions of Americans. Oh, there will be enough novelties. I shall try to furnish as much diversity in the programs as is possible. I don't like to repeat anything too much.

"Let me see what else is there? Oh, we shall have 'composers' nights,' as usual; and there will be no soloists, except such as are demanded by the pieces which the orchestra plays. I hardly think a place where people smoke is agreeable to singers, and I am sure it isn't for instrumentalists. No, we'll let the Harvard men furnish the extra music—that is, if they have any occasion to. It's rather doubtful, isn't it? Yes. I fear we won't have a chance to play 'Fair Harvard' this year, though you can't tell. Accidents will happen. In that case a little excitement will be excusable. I don't mind it, that is, if they remember that they don't own the hall."

And the talk ended in a hearty laugh.

The "Pop" concerts will begin on Monday night, May 11. This is their 11th season, and the opening concert will be the 568th since the beginning in '85. To define exactly whereby these concerts have retained their attractiveness for the past 11 years would be a repetition of the personal tastes of their countless patrons; but the best general idea of what constitutes their popularity is found in the following excerpt from a descriptive article, published some years ago:

"The 'Pops,' like the Symphonies, are absorbing in a way. Boston loves them. They are democratic. Here is the clerk, business man, professional man, student, the various gradations of society, men and women alike. Everybody goes, smokes and drinks a little, and feels agreeably relaxed by observing his neighbors as well as hearing the tuneful music. To the right and left in the balconies are the conservative spectators who have come partly to hear the music and partly to 'Bohemia.'"

A brief resume of these concerts, showing their duration and the conductors by seasons, may prove interesting.

1885—July 11 to Oct. 3, Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.
1886—June 5 to Sept. 25, Mr. John C. Mullaly, 97 performances.
1887—June 11 to Sept. 3, Mr. Wilhelm Rietzel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.
1888—May 23 to Sept. 22, Mr. Franz Kneisel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 102 peformances.
1889—June 1 to July 6, Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 31 performances.
1890—No concerts.
1891—June 1 to July 11, Mr. T. Adamowski and Mr. E. Gruenberg, 36 performances.
[illegible]uly 9, Mr. T. Adamowski, 35 performances.
[illegible]—June 3 to July 15, Mr. T. Adamowski, 31 performances.
1894—May 1. to July 7, Mr. T. Adamowski, 45 performances.
[illegible]—May 11 to July 6, Mr. A. de Novellis, 44 performances.

Of those named in the foregoing list only Mr. Neuendorff and Mr. de Novellis have not been members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Zach, the new conductor, consequently makes the sixth leader who has been selected from this incomparable organization.

In the absence of Manager C. A. Ellis in Europe, the concerts will be under the direction of Assistant Manager F. R. Comee.

MAX ZACH.
The new leader of the "Pop" concerts.
(See Page 11.)

Boston Transcript

TUESDAY, MAY 5, 1896.

PROMENADE CONCERTS NEXT WEEK

Max Zach Will Conduct; Many Novelties Are Promised.

With the opening of the series of Promenade concerts at Music Hall next Monday evening the summer musical season will be well started. This is the eleventh year of these popular concerts, and the opening night will be the 568th one since they were first organized. In the absence of Manager C. A. Ellis, who is in Europe, the management will be in the hands of Frederic R. Comee. Mr. Comee has for years been the able assistant manager of the Symphony Orchestra, and no more competent man could be found to promote the interests of the "Pops." Everything possible will be done to make the character of these entertainments such that ladies shall have no hesitancy in attending them without an escort. About the same scheme of decoration will be followed this year as in previous seasons, festoons of laurel being used with good effect on the balcony fronts and elsewhere. On the opening night quite a display of flowers will be seen on the stage.

The orchestra will number fifty men from the Symphony. These will be under the lead of Max Zach, who has, in different seasons, now and then led a single number of his own composition. In past years the conductors have been: Ad. Neuendorff, A. de Novellis, Franz Kneisel, John C. Mullaly, Wilhelm Rietzel, T. Adamowski and E. Gruenberg. Of these, all but the first two have been members of the Symphony Orchestra. It was under Mr. Mullaly's conductorship that such selections as the overtures to "Rienzi" and "Tannhauser" were first played at these concerts. Previous to that, lighter music had held the places on the programmes, and it was a bold move on Mr. Mullaly's part to make the innovation. This, however, met with instant and lasting approval. Regular patrons surely must have noticed that waltzes and light music generally meet with less attention than the heavier selections receive. It is while a waltz is being played that people take the opportunity of striking matches for their cigars, and it is then that one hears the popping of corks. A Wagner overture is welcomed with a quiet settling down to the full enjoyment of the number.

Many novelties are promised by manager Comee. A glance over the numbers to be performed the first week shows a wide range of composers. Among them are Bach, Wagner, Liszt, Meyerbeer, Dvorak, Rubenstein, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Verdi, Rossini and Goldmark. Of the composers of music of a lighter character, the programmes include A. Thomas, Grieg, Reincke, Lachner, Auber, Suppé, Mascagni, Strauss, Waldteufel, Sullivan, DeKoven, Nevin and many others.

On the floor there are to be fifty-eight reserved tables, and more than one hundred which are not reserved. In the first balcony there will be thirty-two reserved tables, and the entire sides of this balcony also will be reserved. The second balcony is to be open to anyone, like the unreserved tables on the floor.

BOSTON, MAY 3.

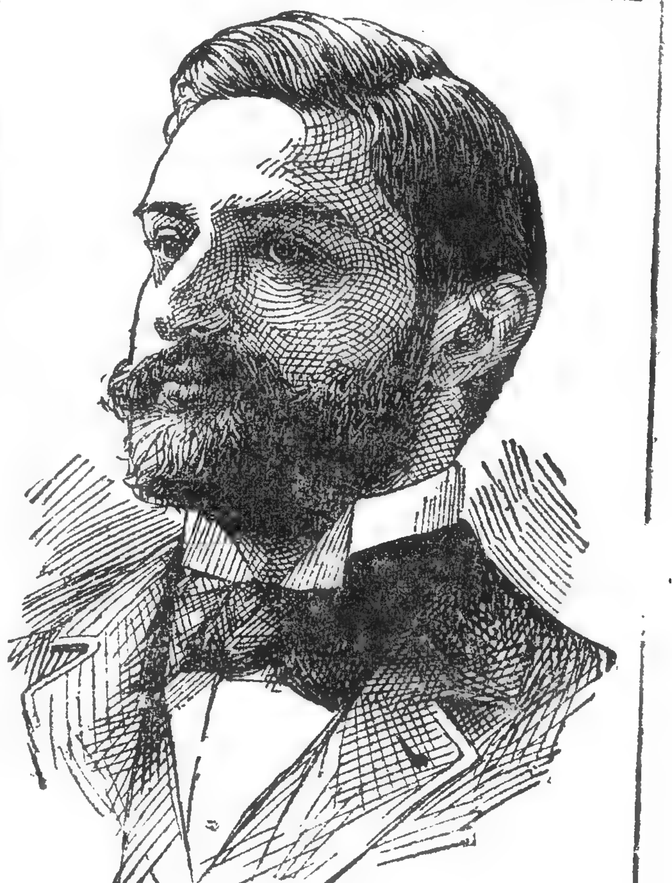
MUSIC HALL PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Just at this season of the year the question is "When do the Promenade concerts begin?" and there will be general satisfaction at the announcement that Monday evening, May 11, will be the opening night of these popular entertainments.

A brief resume of these concerts, showing their duration and the conductors by seasons may be of interest:

1885, July 11 to Oct. 3, Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.
1886, June 5 to Sept. 25, Mr. John C. Mullaly, 97 performances.
1887, June 11 to Sept. 3, Mr. Wilhelm Rietzel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 73 performances.
1888, May 23 to Sept. 22, Mr. Franz Kneisel and Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 102 performances.
1889, June 1 to July 6, Mr. Ad. Neuendorff, 31 performances.
1890, no concerts.
1891, June 1 to July 11, Mr. T. Adamowski and Mr. E. Gruenberg, 36 performances.
1892, May 31 to July 9, Mr. T. Adamowski, 35 performances.
1893, June 3 to July 15, Mr. T. Adamowski 31 performances.
1894, May 12 to July 7, Mr. T. Adamowski, 45 performances.
1895, May 11 to July 6, Mr. A. De Novellis, 44 performances.

The above enumeration of performances given shows that the opening night for this season will be the 568th performance. Everything will be conducted upon the same general plan as that of last season, with evenings devoted to favorite composers, request programmes and other equally attractive features. The conductor will be Mr. Max Zach, for 10 years a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the sixth conductor to be selected from the ranks of this famous organization. In fact, Mr. Neuendorff and Mr. De Novellis are the only two conductors who were not members of the organization. Mr. Zach will be readily and pleasantly remembered as the composer of several waltzes, polkas and marches, the performances of which he has himself conducted during the past three seasons. Mr. Zach was born in 1864 at Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was received at home under the direct tuition of Prof. Czerwinski for the piano, and Prof. Bruckmann for the violin. Even while Mr. Zach was at school he was a member of the local Conservatory orchestra, which gave several symphony concerts. In 1880, upon determining to become a professional musician, Mr. Zach went to the Vienna Conservatory, where he studied the violin, first under Bachrich and later under Prof. Grun. While studying harmony with Prof. Robert Fuchs and counterpoint with Prof. Krenn, Mr. Zach also did military duty, serving in the band of the regiment under A. Czibulka up to the time of his joining the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1886. In the absence of Manager C. A. Ellis in Europe, the concerts will be under the direction of Assistant Manager F. R. Comee.



MAX ZACH.
Conductor of the Music Hall Promenade Concerts.

MUSICAL COURIER

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1896.

The promenade concerts will begin May 11. Mr. Max Zach, one of the viola players of the symphony orchestra, will be the conductor. Mr. Zach was born in 1864 at Lemberg, Austria. His early musical education was received at home, under Professor Czerwinski for the piano, and Professor Bruckmann for the violin. At school Mr. Zach was a member of the local conservatory orchestra, which gave several symphony concerts. In 1880 Mr. Zach went to the Vienna Conservatory, where he studied the violin, first under Bachrich and later under Professor Grün. While studying harmony with Prof. Robert Fuchs, and counterpoint with Professor Krenn, Mr. Zach also did military duty. The band of the regiment was led by A Czibulka. Afterward he joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Several successful waltzes, polkas and marches, composed by Mr. Zach, have been played at Boston concerts.

* * *

END OF VOLUME

VOLUME 10

BSO

1896 - 1897

VOLUME 10

BSO

1896 - 1897

COLORED PAPER

[illegible]

No. ....

Premium, ...

Name, ...

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

SEASON 1896-97. 298

REHEARSALS.

No. ....

Premium, ...

Name, ...

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

SEASON 1896-97. 512

CONCERTS.

No. ....

Premium, ...

Name, ...

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

SEASON 1896-97. [illegible]

CONCERTS.

No. ....

Premium, ...

Name, ...

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Boston, September 24, 1896.

Auction Sale of $12 Season Tickets for the SATURDAY EVENING CONCERTS at Music Hall, this (Thursday) morning, beginning at TEN o'clock.

POSTAL CARD – ONE CENT.

United States of America.

THIS SIDE IS FOR THE ADDRESS ONLY.

M. STEINERT & SONS CO.,
No. 422 Main Street,
Springfield, Mass.

I hereby subscribe to .... Tickets at .... for the Concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at City Hall, Springfield, on Saturday Evening, November 14, 1896.

....

....

STEINERT HALL

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, JANUARY 27, 1897,
AT THREE

Mme. Szumowska-Adamowski

Programme

Thème Varié, ("The Harmonious Blacksmith"),	Händel
Pastorale, Capriccio,	Scarlatti
Fantaisie (C major),	Schumann
Nocturne, Op. 15, No. 1, Mazurka, Op. 41, No. 1, Étude, C-sharp minor, Scherzo, B minor, Op. 20,	Chopin
Menuet (A major), (New. First time.)	Paderewski
Valse,	Stojowski
Polonaise,	Liszt

THE PIANO USED IS A STEINWAY.

[1]

COLORED PAPER

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

SEASON 1896-97. 901

REHEARSALS.

No.

Premium,

Name,

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

SEASON 1896-97.

REHEARSALS.

No.

Premium,

Name,

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

SEASON 1896-97. 512

CONCERTS.

No.

Premium,

Name,

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

SEASON 1896-97. 309

CONCERTS.

No.

Premium,

Name,

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

BOSTON, September 24, 1896.

Auction Sale of $12 Season Tickets for the SATURDAY EVENING CONCERTS at Music Hall, this (Thursday) morning, beginning at TEN o'clock.

POSTAL CARD – ONE CENT.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

THIS SIDE IS FOR THE ADDRESS ONLY.

M. STEINERT & SONS CO.,

No. 422 Main Street,

Springfield, Mass.

I hereby subscribe to Tickets at for the Concert by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, at City Hall, Springfield, on Saturday Evening, November 14, 1896.

STEINERT HALL

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, JANUARY 27, 1897,
AT THREE

Mme. Szumowska-Adamowski

Programme

Thème Varié, ("The Harmonious Blacksmith"),	Händel
Pastorale, Capriccio,	Scarlatti
Fantaisie (C major),	Schumann
Nocturne, Op. 15, No. 1, Mazurka, Op. 41, No. 1, Étude, C-sharp minor, Scherzo, B minor, Op. 20,	Chopin
Menuet (A major), (New. First time.)	Paderewski
Valse,	Stojowski
Polonaise,	Liszt

THE PIANO USED IS A STEINWAY.

MUSIC HALL.

SIXTEENTH SEASON—1896-97.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA,

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR,

WILL GIVE A SERIES OF

24 CONCERTS,

On Consecutive Saturday Evenings, from Oct. 17, 1896, to May 1, 1897, Omitting Nov. 14, Dec. 12, 1896, Jan. 23, Feb. 27 and March 27, 1897, and

24 PUBLIC REHEARSALS,

ON CONSECUTIVE FRIDAY AFTERNOONS, from Oct. 16, 1896, to April 30, 1897, Omitting Nov. 13, Dec. 11, 1896, Jan. 22, Feb. 26 and March 26, 1897.

Soloists: Mme. MELBA, Mme. CARRENO, Miss AUS DER OHE, Messrs. ROSENTHAL, PLANCON, JOSEFFY, HALIR, SIEVEKING, CAMPANARI, KNEISEL, LOEFFLER, SCHROEDER, ADAMOWSKI, SCHULZ and Others.

TICKETS for the Series of Concerts and for the Series of Rehearsals, $12.00 and $7.50 according to location.

The $12 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, Monday, Sept. 21, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M.

The $12 Seats for the Concerts will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, Thursday, Sept. 24, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Concerts will be sold in like manner, at the same place, on Friday, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets Will Be Delivered in the Hall, and Must Be Paid for as Soon as Bought or They Will Be Resold.

Boston Daily Globe.

MONDAY, SEPT. 14, 1896.

MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

16th Season, 1896-97.

24 PUBLIC REHEARSALS

on Friday Afternoons, beginning Oct. 16 (omitting Nov. 13, Dec. 11, 1896; Jan. 22, Feb. 26 and March 26, 1897).

24 CONCERTS

on Saturday Evenings, beginning Oct. 17 (omitting Nov. 14, Dec. 12, 1896; Jan. 23, Feb. 27 and March 27, 1897).

Soloists: Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Messrs. Rosenthal, Plancon, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Campanari, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder, Schulz and others.

Tickets for the series of Concerts and for the series of Rehearsals, $12 and $7.50, according to location.

The $12 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, MONDAY, Sept. 21, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, TUESDAY, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M.

The $12 Seats for the Concerts will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, on THURSDAY, Sept. 24, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Concerts will be sold in like manner, at the same place, on FRIDAY, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

BOSTON Symphony Orchestra

Sixteenth Season.

AUCTION SALE OF $7.50 SEATS FOR THE FRIDAY AFTERNOON PUBLIC REHEARSALS AT MUSIC HALL THIS (TUESDAY) MORNING AT 10 O'CLOCK.

Sale of $12 Seats for Concerts THURSDAY, Sept. 24. Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Concerts FRIDAY, Sept. 25.

BOSTON
MUSIC HALL

SIXTEENTH SEASON
1896–97

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

TWENTY-FOUR CONCERTS

ON CONSECUTIVE SATURDAY EVENINGS, FROM OCT. 17, 1896, TO MAY 1, 1897, OMITTING NOV. 14, DEC. 12, 1896, JAN. 23, FEB. 27, AND MARCH 27, 1897, AND

TWENTY-FOUR PUBLIC REHEARSALS

ON CONSECUTIVE FRIDAY AFTERNOONS, FROM OCT. 16, 1896, TO APRIL 30, 1897, OMITTING NOV. 13, DEC. 11, 1896, JAN. 22, FEB. 26, AND MARCH 26, 1897.

SOLOISTS: Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Mr. Plancon, Mr. Campanari, Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Joseffy, Mr. Sieveking, Mr. Halir, Mr. Kneisel, Mr. Loeffler, Mr. Adamowski, Mr. Schroeder, and Mr. Schulz.

TICKETS for the series of Concerts and for the series of Rehearsals, $12.00 and $7.50 according to location.

The $12 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, MONDAY, September 21, at 10 A.M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, TUESDAY, September 22, at 10 A.M.

The $12 Seats for the Concerts will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, on THURSDAY, September 24, at 10 A.M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Concerts will be sold in like manner at the same place, on FRIDAY, September 25, at 10 A.M.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets will be delivered in the Hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

(OVER.)

A STRIKING SUMMARY.

3,313 Selections in 752 Performances.

15 YEARS' RECORD

OF THE

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IN BOSTON.

COMPILED BY F. R. COMEE.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals"; and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:—

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	104	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	34	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"
Holland	2	"	6	"
Scotland	1	"	4	"

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:—

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saëns	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Délibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Méhul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bülow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicodé, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3, (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bülow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

Nov. 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

WASHINGTON POST,

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 1

COLUMBIA THEATER.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth season, 1896-'97. Tenth season in Washington.

FIVE CONCERTS.

THURSDAY EVENING, NOV. 12.
TUESDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 8.
TUESDAY EVENING, JAN. 19.
TUESDAY EVENING, FEB. 23.
TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 23.
At 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:

Mme. CARRENO,
Mr. MARTINUS SIEVEKING,
Mr. BEN DAVIES,
Mr. CARL HALIR,

and others to be announced.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.00 and $5.00, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Metzerott's Music Store, 1110 F street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.
F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.
SIXTEENTH SEASON—1896-97.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA,

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR,
WILL GIVE A SERIES OF

24 CONCERTS,

On Consecutive Saturday Evenings, from Oct. 17, 1896, to May 1, 1897, Omitting Nov. 14, Dec. 12, 1896, Jan. 23, Feb. 27 and March 27, 1897, and

24 PUBLIC REHEARSALS,

ON CONSECUTIVE FRIDAY AFTERNOONS, from Oct. 16, 1896, to April 30, 1897, Omitting Nov. 13, Dec. 11, 1896, Jan. 22, Feb. 26 and March 26, 1897.

Soloists: Mme. MELBA, Mme. CARRENO, Miss AUS DER OHE, Messrs. ROSENTHAL, PLANCON, JOSEFFY, HALIR, SIEVEKING, CAMPANARI, KNEISEL, LOEFFLER, SCHROEDER, ADAMOWSKI, SCHULZ and Others.

TICKETS for the Series of Concerts and for the Series of Rehearsals, $12.00 and $7.50 according to location.

The $12 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, Monday, Sept. 21, at 10 A. M.
The $7.50 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M.
The $12 Seats for the Concerts will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, Thursday, Sept. 24, at 10 A. M.
The $7.50 Seats for the Concerts will be sold in like manner, at the same place, on Friday, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets Will Be Delivered in the Hall, and Must Be Paid for as Soon as Bought or They Will Be Resold.

Boston Daily Globe.
MONDAY. SEPT. 14, 1896.

MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

16th Season, 1896-97.

24 PUBLIC REHEARSALS
on Friday Afternoons, beginning Oct. 16 (omitting Nov. 13, Dec. 11, 1896; Jan. 22, Feb. 26 and March 26, 1897).

24 CONCERTS
on Saturday Evenings, beginning Oct. 17 (omitting Nov. 14, Dec. 12, 1896; Jan. 23, Feb. 27 and March 27, 1897).

Soloists: Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Messrs. Rosenthal, Plancon, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Campanari, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder, Schulz and others.

Tickets for the series of Concerts and for the series of Rehearsals, $12 and $7.50, according to location.

The $12 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, MONDAY, Sept. 21, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, TUESDAY, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M.

The $12 Seats for the Concerts will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, on THURSDAY, Sept. 24, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Concerts will be sold in like manner, at the same place, on FRIDAY, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

BOSTON Symphony Orchestra

Sixteenth Season.

AUCTION SALE OF $7.50 SEATS FOR THE FRIDAY AFTERNOON PUBLIC REHEARSALS AT MUSIC HALL THIS (TUESDAY) MORNING AT 10 O'CLOCK.

Sale of $12 Seats for Concerts THURSDAY, Sept. 24. Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Concerts FRIDAY, Sept. 25.

BOSTON
MUSIC HALL

SIXTEENTH SEASON
1896–97

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

TWENTY-FOUR CONCERTS

ON CONSECUTIVE SATURDAY EVENINGS, FROM OCT. 17, 1896, TO MAY 1, 1897, OMITTING NOV. 14, DEC. 12, 1896, JAN. 23, FEB. 27, AND MARCH 27, 1897, AND

TWENTY-FOUR PUBLIC REHEARSALS

ON CONSECUTIVE FRIDAY AFTERNOONS, FROM OCT. 16, 1896, TO APRIL 30, 1897, OMITTING NOV. 13, DEC. 11, 1896, JAN. 22, FEB. 26, AND MARCH 26, 1897.

SOLOISTS: Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Mr. Plancon, Mr. Campanari, Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Joseffy, Mr. Sieveking, Mr. Halir, Mr. Kneisel, Mr. Loeffler, Mr. Adamowski, Mr. Schroeder, and Mr. Schulz.

TICKETS for the series of Concerts and for the series of Rehearsals, $12.00 and $7.50 according to location.

The $12 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, MONDAY, September 21, at 10 A.M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, TUESDAY, September 22, at 10 A.M.

The $12 Seats for the Concerts will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, on THURSDAY, September 24, at 10 A.M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Concerts will be sold in like manner at the same place, on FRIDAY, September 25, at 10 A.M.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets will be delivered in the Hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

(OVER.)

A STRIKING SUMMARY.

3,313 Selections in 752 Performances.

15 YEARS' RECORD
OF THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IN BOSTON.

COMPILED BY F. R. COMEE.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals"; and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:—

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	104	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	34	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"
Holland	2	"	6	"
Scotland	1	"	4	"

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:—

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saëns	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Délibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Méhul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bülow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicodé, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3, (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bülow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

Nov. 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

WASHINGTON POST,
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18

COLUMBIA THEATER.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth season, 1896-'97. Tenth season in Washington.

FIVE CONCERTS.

THURSDAY EVENING, NOV. 12.
TUESDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 8.
TUESDAY EVENING, JAN. 19.
TUESDAY EVENING, FEB. 23.
TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 23.
At 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:
Mme. CARRENO,
Mr. MARTINUS SIEVEKING,
Mr. BEN DAVIES,
Mr. CARL HALIR,
and others to be announced.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.00 and $5.00, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Metzerott's Music Store, 1110 F street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.
F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

STRA,

7, Omitting
and

Nov. 13,

ER OHE,
ALIR,
ER,

to

A. M.
0 A. M.
A. M.
5, at 10 A. M.
our seats will old.

Be Resold.

Boston Daily Globe.

MONDAY, SEPT. 14, 1896.

MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

16th Season, 1896-97.

24 PUBLIC REHEARSALS

on Friday Afternoons, beginning Oct. 16 (omitting Nov. 13, Dec. 11, 1896; Jan. 22, Feb. 26 and March 26, 1897).

24 CONCERTS

on Saturday Evenings, beginning Oct. 17 (omitting Nov. 14, Dec. 12, 1896; Jan. 23, Feb. 27 and March 27, 1897).

Soloists: Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Messrs. Rosenthal, Plancon, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Campanari, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder, Schulz and others.

Tickets for the series of Concerts and for the series of Rehearsals, $12 and $7.50, according to location.

The $12 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, MONDAY, Sept. 21, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, TUESDAY, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M.

The $12 Seats for the Concerts will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, on THURSDAY, Sept. 24, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Concerts will be sold in like manner, at the same place, on FRIDAY, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

BOSTON Symphony Orchestra

Sixteenth Season.

AUCTION SALE OF $7.50 SEATS FOR THE FRIDAY AFTERNOON PUBLIC REHEARSALS AT MUSIC HALL THIS (TUESDAY) MORNING AT 10 O'CLOCK.

Sale of $12 Seats for Concerts THURSDAY, Sept. 24. Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Concerts FRIDAY, Sept. 25.

Season
1896-97

B.S.O

A STRIKING SUMMARY.

3,313 Selections in 752 Performances.

15 YEARS' RECORD
OF THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IN BOSTON.

COMPILED BY F. R. COMEE.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals"; and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:—

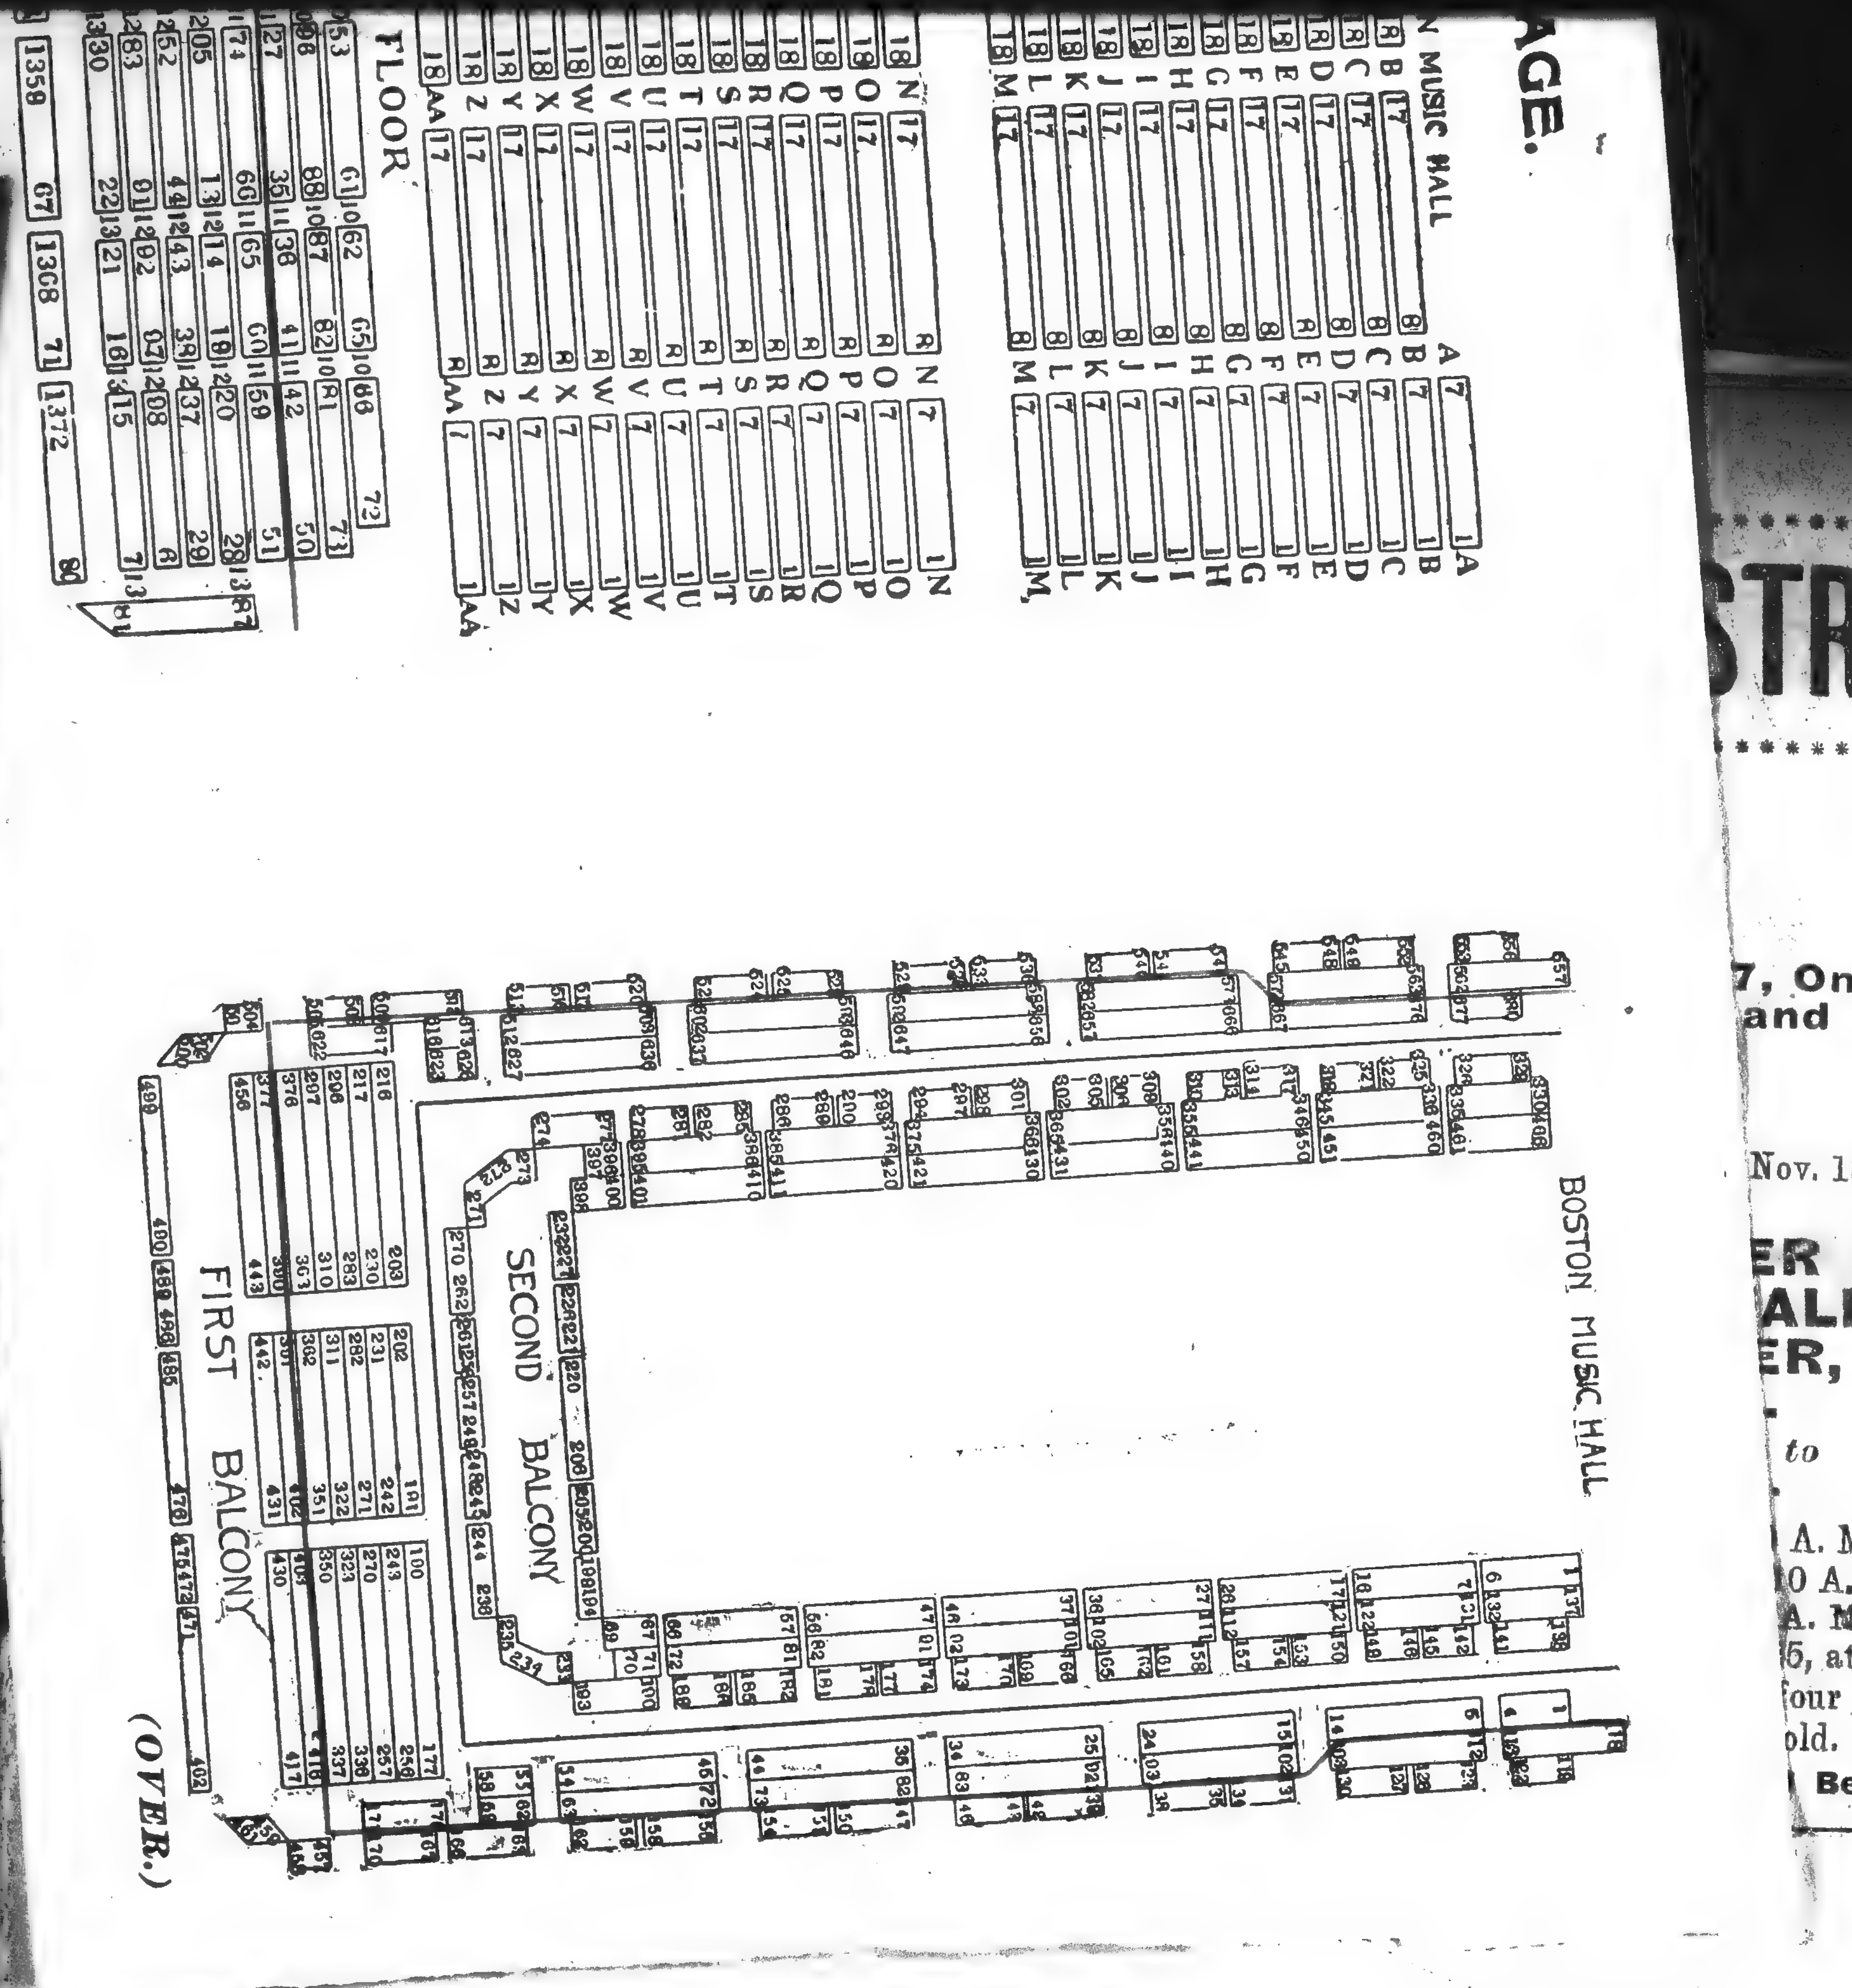
Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	104	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	34	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bülow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicodé, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3, (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bülow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience would better comprehend a second ren-



STRA,

7, Omitting
and

Nov. 13,

ER OHE,
ALIR,
ER,

to

A. M.
0 A. M.
A. M.
5, at 10 A. M.
four seats will old.

Be Resold.

Boston Daily Globe.

MONDAY, SEPT. 14, 1896.

MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

16th Season, 1896-97.

24 PUBLIC REHEARSALS

on Friday Afternoons, beginning Oct. 16 (omitting Nov. 13, Dec. 11, 1896; Jan. 22, Feb. 26 and March 26, 1897).

24 CONCERTS

on Saturday Evenings, beginning Oct. 17 (omitting Nov. 14, Dec. 12, 1896; Jan. 23, Feb. 27 and March 27, 1897).

Soloists: Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Messrs. Rosenthal, Plancon, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Campanari, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder, Schulz and others.

Tickets for the series of Concerts and for the series of Rehearsals, $12 and $7.50, according to location.

The $12 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, MONDAY, Sept. 21, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, TUESDAY, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M.

The $12 Seats for the Concerts will be sold at auction, at Music Hall, on THURSDAY, Sept. 24, at 10 A. M.

The $7.50 Seats for the Concerts will be sold in like manner, at the same place, on FRIDAY, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

BOSTON Symphony Orchestra

Sixteenth Season.

AUCTION SALE OF $7.50 SEATS FOR THE FRIDAY AFTERNOON PUBLIC REHEARSALS AT MUSIC HALL THIS (TUESDAY) MORNING AT 10 O'CLOCK.

Sale of $12 Seats for Concerts THURSDAY, Sept. 24. Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Concerts FRIDAY, Sept. 25.

Season
1896-97

B.S.O

No 8

A STRIKING SUMMARY.

3,313 Selections in 752 Performances.

15 YEARS' RECORD

OF THE

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IN BOSTON.

COMPILED BY F. R. COMEE.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals"; and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:—

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	104	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	34	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"
Holland	2	"	6	"
Scotland	1	"	4	"

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:—

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saëns	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Délibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Méhul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bülow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicodé, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3, (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bülow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

Nov. 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

WASHINGTON POST,

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 1

COLUMBIA THEATER.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth season, 1896-'97. Tenth season in Washington.

FIVE CONCERTS.

THURSDAY EVENING, NOV. 12.
TUESDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 8.
TUESDAY EVENING, JAN. 19.
TUESDAY EVENING, FEB. 23.
TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 23.
At 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:

Mme. CARRENO,
Mr. MARTINUS SIEVEKING,
Mr. BEN DAVIES,
Mr. CARL HALIR,

and others to be announced.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.00 and $5.00, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Metzerott's Music Store, 1110 F street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.
F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

E BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE—SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 18

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

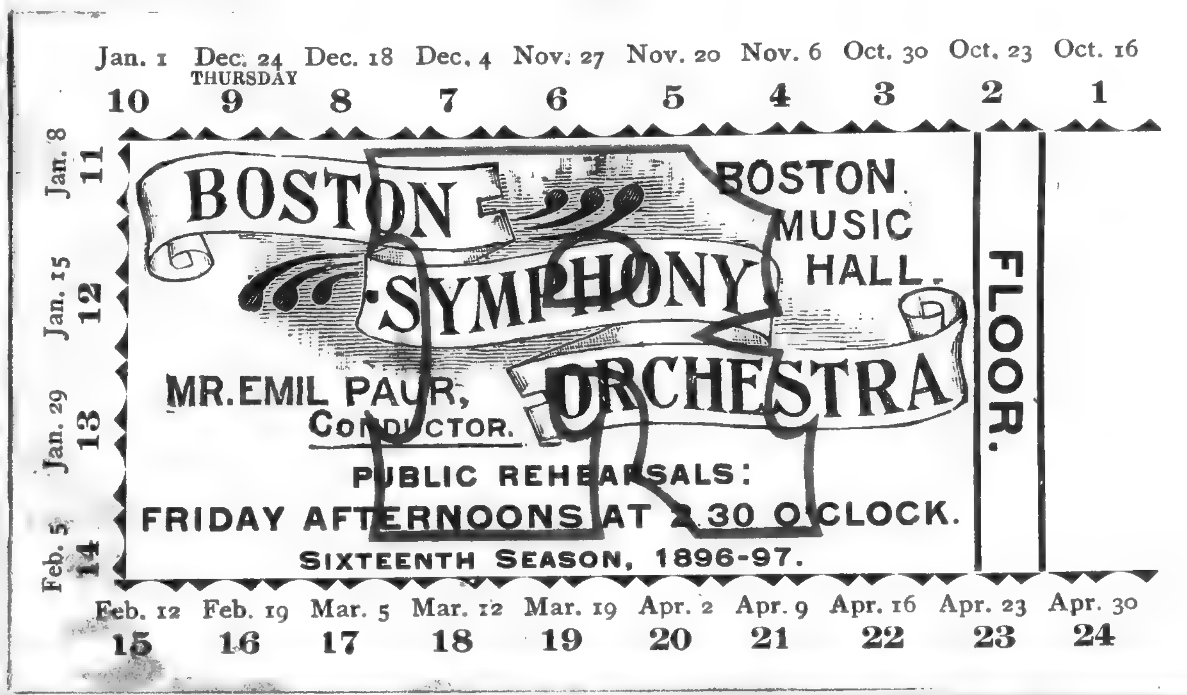
Auction Sale of $12 Seats for the Friday Afternoon Public Rehearsals at Music Hall Tomorrow (Monday), Beginning at 10 O'Clock.

Auction	Sale	of	$7.50	Seats	for	Rehearsals,	Tuesday,	Sept.	22,	at	10	A. M.
Auction	Sale	of	12.00	Seats	for	Concerts,	Thursday,	Sept.	24,	at	10	A. M.
Auction	Sale	of	7.50	Seats	for	Concerts,	Friday,	Sept.	25,	at	10	A. M.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Auction Sale of $12 Seats for the Saturday Evening Concerts at Music Hall This (Thursday) Morning, Beginning at 10 O'Clock.

Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Concerts Tomorrow (Friday) at 10 A. M.



Jan. 1 Dec. 24 THURSDAY Dec. 18 Dec. 4 Nov. 27 Nov. 20 Nov. 6 Oct. 30 Oct. 23 Oct. 16
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Jan. 8 11
Jan. 15 12
Jan. 29 13
Feb. 5 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

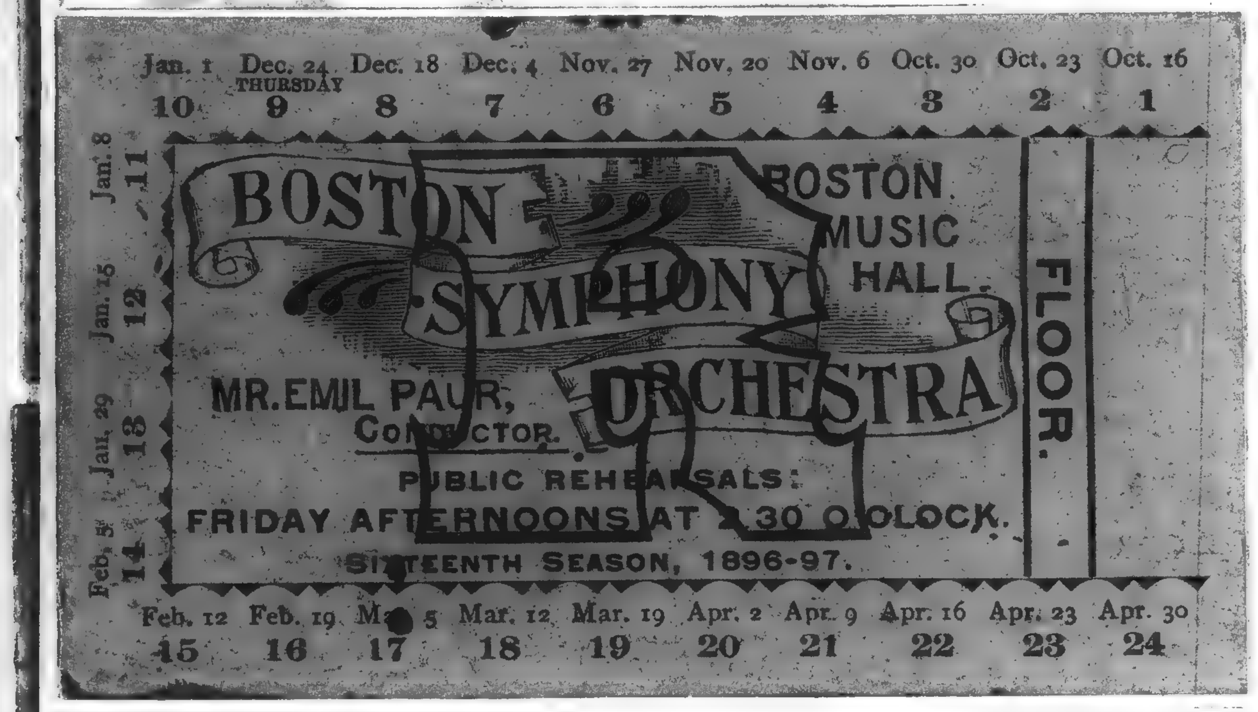
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

PUBLIC REHEARSALS:
FRIDAY AFTERNOONS AT 2.30 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FLOOR.

Feb. 12 Feb. 19 Mar. 5 Mar. 12 Mar. 19 Apr. 2 Apr. 9 Apr. 16 Apr. 23 Apr. 30
15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24



Jan. 1 Dec. 24 THURSDAY Dec. 18 Dec. 4 Nov. 27 Nov. 20 Nov. 6 Oct. 30 Oct. 23 Oct. 16
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Jan. 8 11
Jan. 15 12
Jan. 29 13
Feb. 5 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

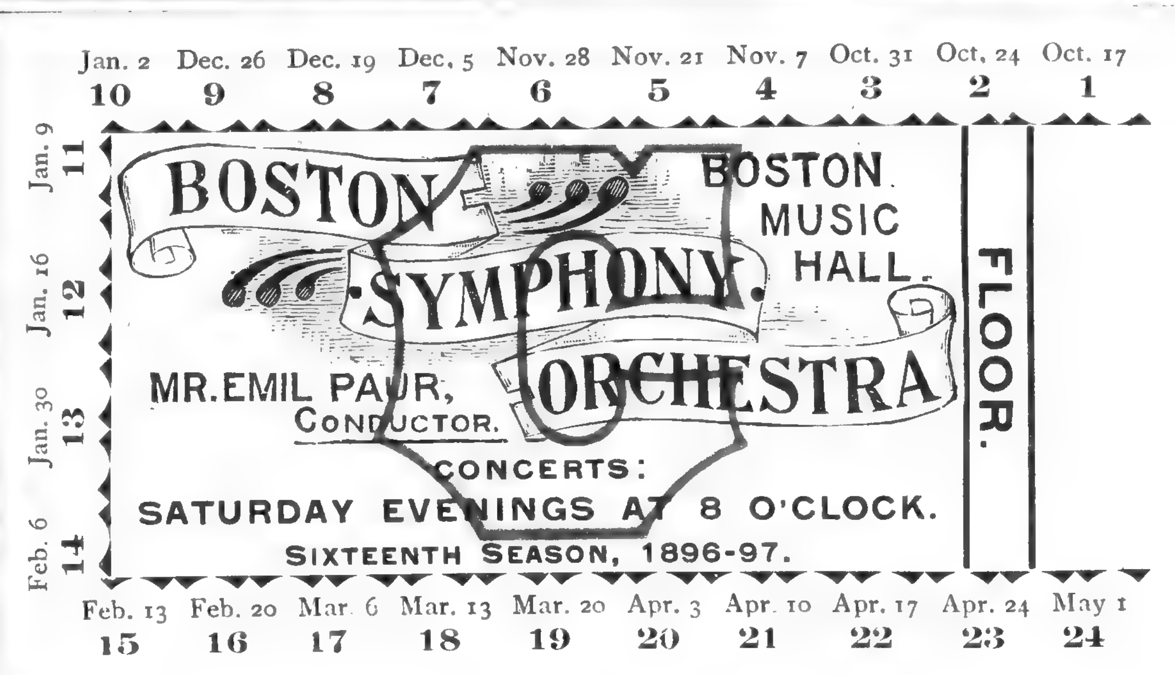
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

PUBLIC REHEARSALS:
FRIDAY AFTERNOONS AT 2.30 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FLOOR.

Feb. 12 Feb. 19 Mar. 5 Mar. 12 Mar. 19 Apr. 2 Apr. 9 Apr. 16 Apr. 23 Apr. 30
15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24



Jan. 2 Dec. 26 Dec. 19 Dec. 5 Nov. 28 Nov. 21 Nov. 7 Oct. 31 Oct. 24 Oct. 17
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Jan. 9 11
Jan. 16 12
Jan. 30 13
Feb. 6 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

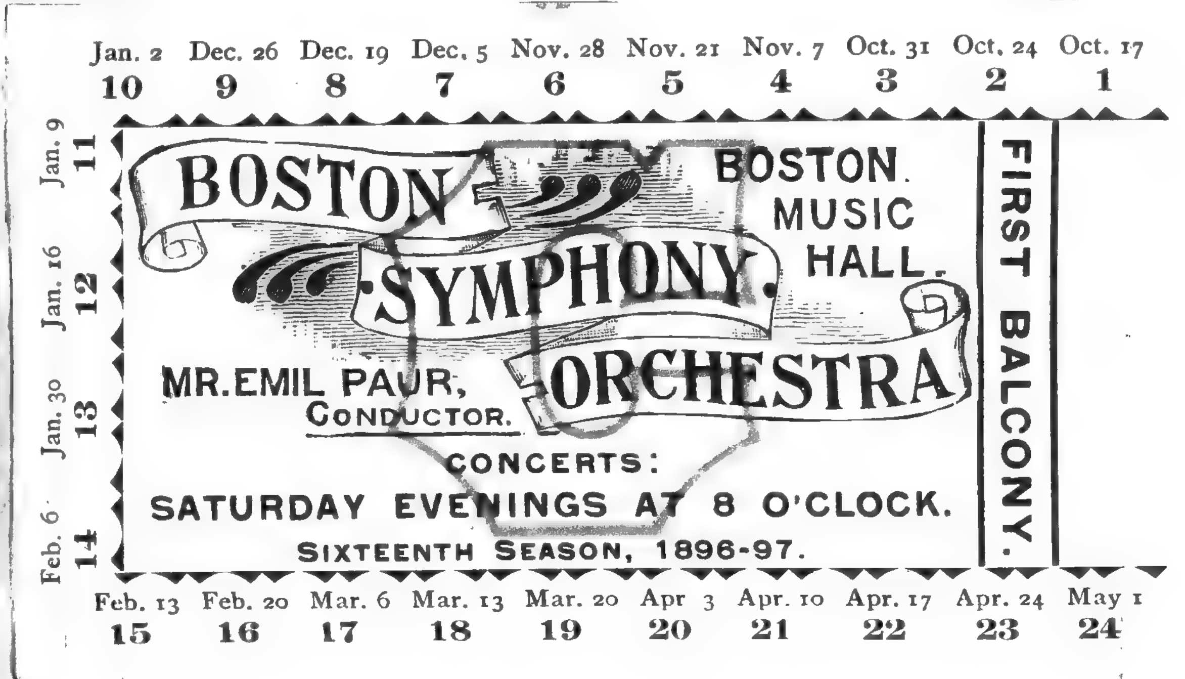
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

CONCERTS:
SATURDAY EVENINGS AT 8 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FLOOR.

Feb. 13 Feb. 20 Mar. 6 Mar. 13 Mar. 20 Apr. 3 Apr. 10 Apr. 17 Apr. 24 May 1
15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24



Jan. 2 Dec. 26 Dec. 19 Dec. 5 Nov. 28 Nov. 21 Nov. 7 Oct. 31 Oct. 24 Oct. 17
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Jan. 9 11
Jan. 16 12
Jan. 30 13
Feb. 6 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

CONCERTS:
SATURDAY EVENINGS AT 8 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FIRST BALCONY.

Feb. 13 Feb. 20 Mar. 6 Mar. 13 Mar. 20 Apr 3 Apr. 10 Apr. 17 Apr. 24 May 1
15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24

THE PROVIDENCE SUNDAY JOURNAL, OCTOBER 4, 1896.

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra,

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIX CONCERTS IN INFANTRY HALL

PROVIDENCE,

Wednesday Evenings October 21, November 25, January 6, February 10, March 10, April 21.

AT 8 O'CLOCK PRECISELY.

SOLO ARTISTS.

Mme. TERESA CARRENO
Mme. GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY
Mr. CARL HALIR
Mr. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.
Mr. T. ADAMOWSKI
AND OTHERS - - - - - - - TO BE ANNOUNCED.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, $5.00. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets. The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager, C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SUNDAY TELEGRAM, PROVIDENCE, OCTOBER 4, 1896

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIX—CONCERTS—SIX

—IN—

INFANTRY HALL, Providence Wednesday Evenings, Oct. 21, Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, March 10, April 21, at 8 O'clock precisely. - - -

SOLO ARTISTS

Mme. Teresa Carreno.
Mme. Georgine von Januschowsky.
Mr. Carl Halir.
Mr. Martinus Sieveking.
Mr. T. Adamowski.
AND OTHERS TO BE ANNOUNCED.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, $5. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

[3]

COLORED PAPER

E BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE—SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 18

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

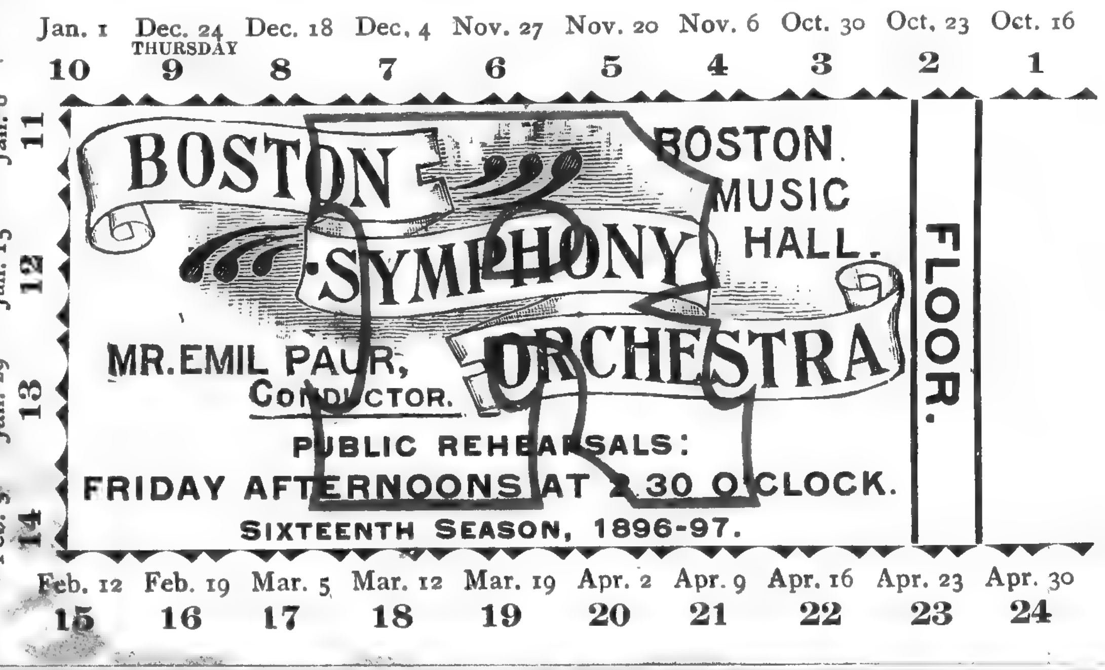
Auction Sale of $12 Seats for the Friday Afternoon Public Rehearsals at Music Hall Tomorrow (Monday), Beginning at 10 O'Clock.

Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Rehearsals, Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M.
Auction Sale of 12.00 Seats for Concerts, Thursday, Sept. 24, at 10 A. M.
Auction Sale of 7.50 Seats for Concerts, Friday, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Auction Sale of $12 Seats for the Saturday Evening Concerts at Music Hall This (Thursday) Morning, Beginning at 10 O'Clock.

Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Concerts Tomorrow (Friday) at 10 A. M.



Jan. 1 Dec. 24 THURSDAY Dec. 18 Dec. 4 Nov. 27 Nov. 20 Nov. 6 Oct. 30 Oct. 23 Oct. 16
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Jan. 8 11
Jan. 15 12
Jan. 29 13
Feb. 5 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

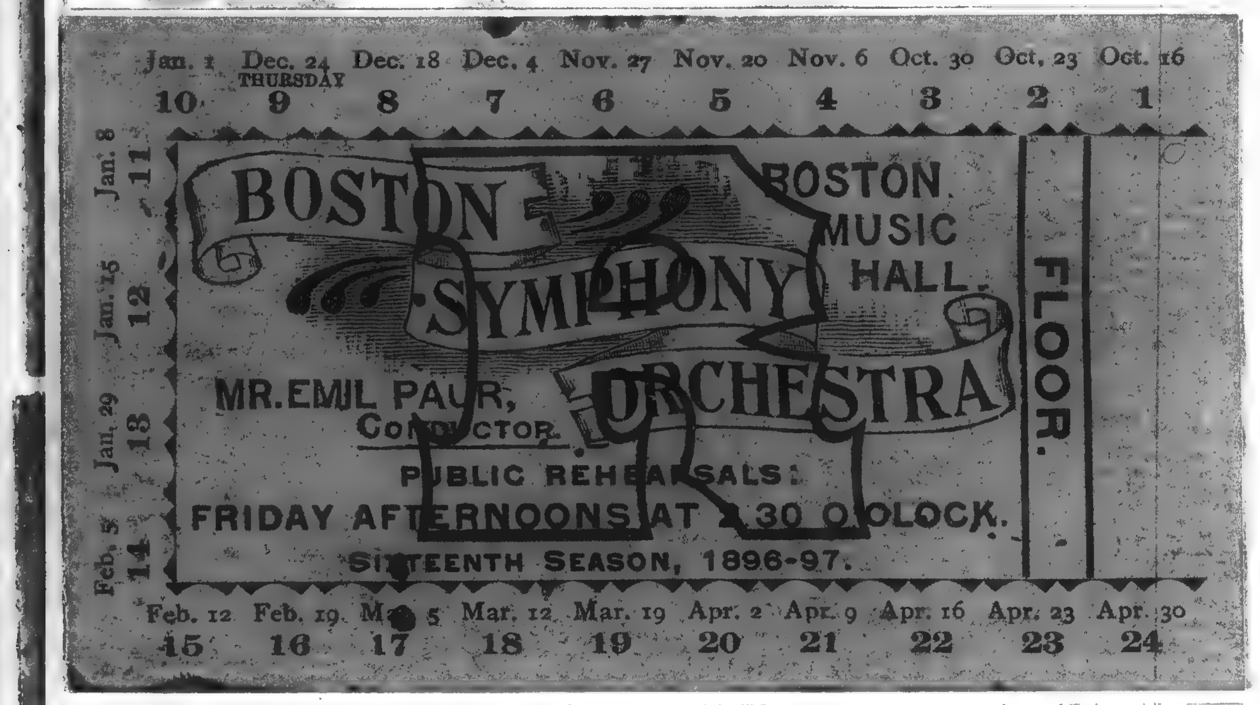
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

PUBLIC REHEARSALS:
FRIDAY AFTERNOONS AT 2.30 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FLOOR.

Feb. 12 Feb. 19 Mar. 5 Mar. 12 Mar. 19 Apr. 2 Apr. 9 Apr. 16 Apr. 23 Apr. 30
15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24



Jan. 1 Dec. 24 THURSDAY Dec. 18 Dec. 4 Nov. 27 Nov. 20 Nov. 6 Oct. 30 Oct. 23 Oct. 16
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Jan. 8 11
Jan. 15 12
Jan. 29 13
Feb. 5 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

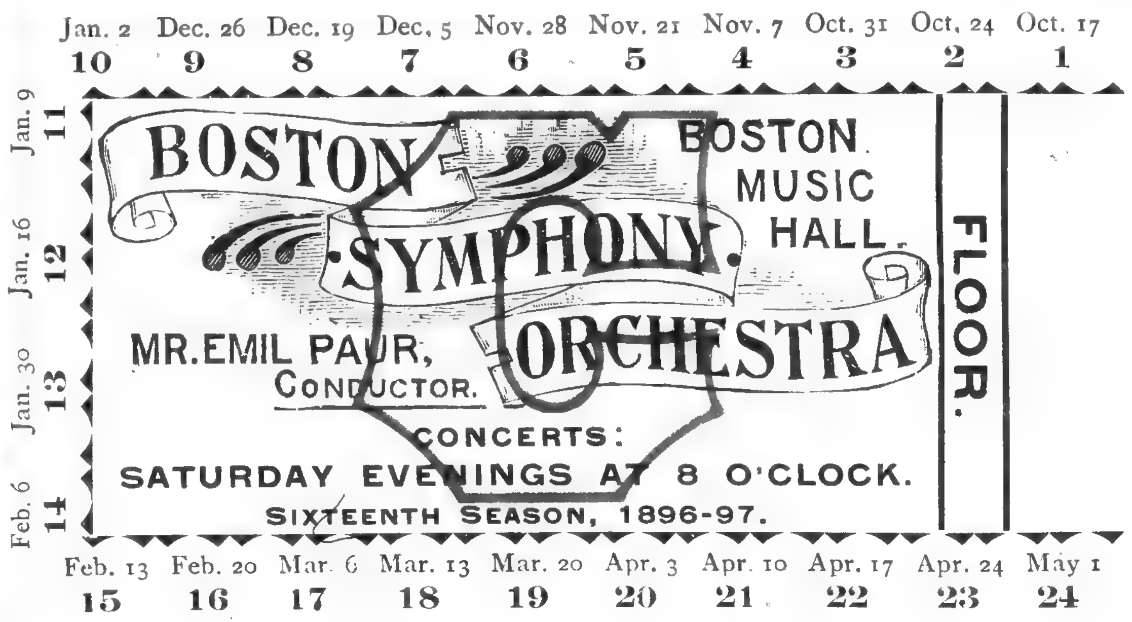
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

PUBLIC REHEARSALS:
FRIDAY AFTERNOONS AT 2.30 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FLOOR.

Feb. 12 Feb. 19 Mar. 5 Mar. 12 Mar. 19 Apr. 2 Apr. 9 Apr. 16 Apr. 23 Apr. 30
15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24



Jan. 2 Dec. 26 Dec. 19 Dec. 5 Nov. 28 Nov. 21 Nov. 7 Oct. 31 Oct. 24 Oct. 17
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Jan. 9 11
Jan. 16 12
Jan. 30 13
Feb. 6 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

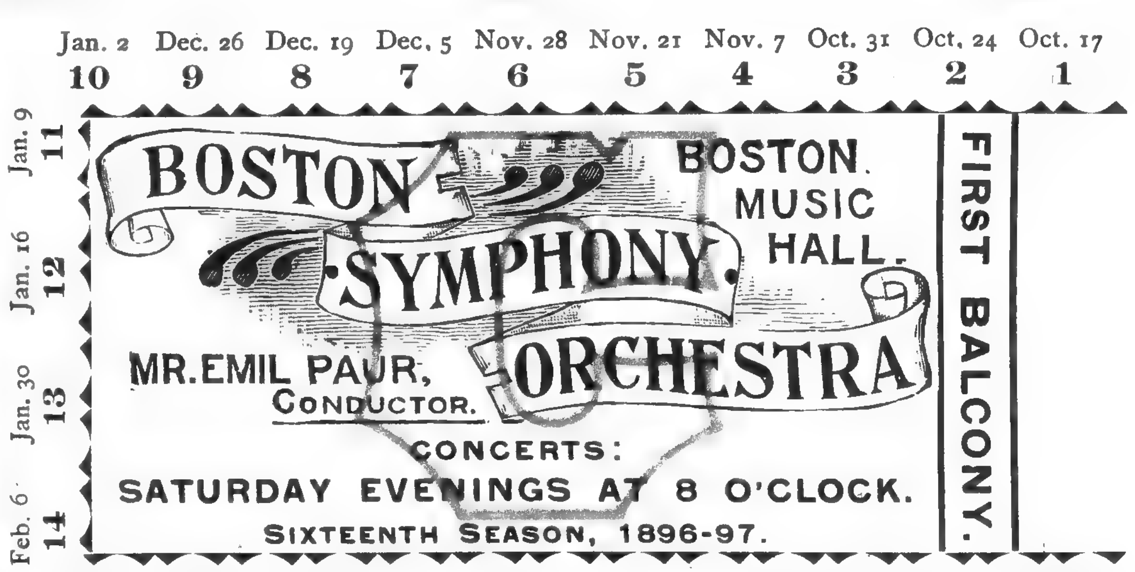
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

CONCERTS:
SATURDAY EVENINGS AT 8 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FLOOR.

Feb. 13 Feb. 20 Mar. 6 Mar. 13 Mar. 20 Apr. 3 Apr. 10 Apr. 17 Apr. 24 May 1
15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24



Jan. 2 Dec. 26 Dec. 19 Dec. 5 Nov. 28 Nov. 21 Nov. 7 Oct. 31 Oct. 24 Oct. 17
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Jan. 9 11
Jan. 16 12
Jan. 30 13
Feb. 6 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

CONCERTS:
SATURDAY EVENINGS AT 8 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FIRST BALCONY.

Feb. 13 Feb. 20 Mar. 6 Mar. 13 Mar. 20 Apr 3 Apr. 10 Apr. 17 Apr. 24 May 1
15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24

[3]

THE PROVIDENCE SUNDAY JOURNAL, OCTOBER 4, 1896.

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra,

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIX CONCERTS IN INFANTRY HALL

PROVIDENCE,

Wednesday Evenings October 21, November 25, January 6, February 10, March 10, April 21.

AT 8 O'CLOCK PRECISELY.

SOLO ARTISTS.

Mme. TERESA CARRENO — Mme. GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY
Mr. CARL HALIR — Mr. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.
Mr. T. ADAMOWSKI
AND OTHERS - - - - - - TO BE ANNOUNCED.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, $5.00. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets. The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SUNDAY TELEGRAM, PROVIDENCE, OCTOBER 4, 1896

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIX—CONCERTS—SIX

—IN—

INFANTRY HALL, Providence Wednesday Evenings, Oct. 21, Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, March 10, April 21, at 8 O'clock precisely. - - -

SOLO ARTISTS

Mme. Teresa Carreno. — Mme. Georgine von Januschowsky.
Mr. Carl Halir. — Mr. Martinus Sieveking.
Mr. T. Adamowski.
AND OTHERS TO BE ANNOUNCED.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, $5. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

COLORED PAPER

E BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE—SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 18

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

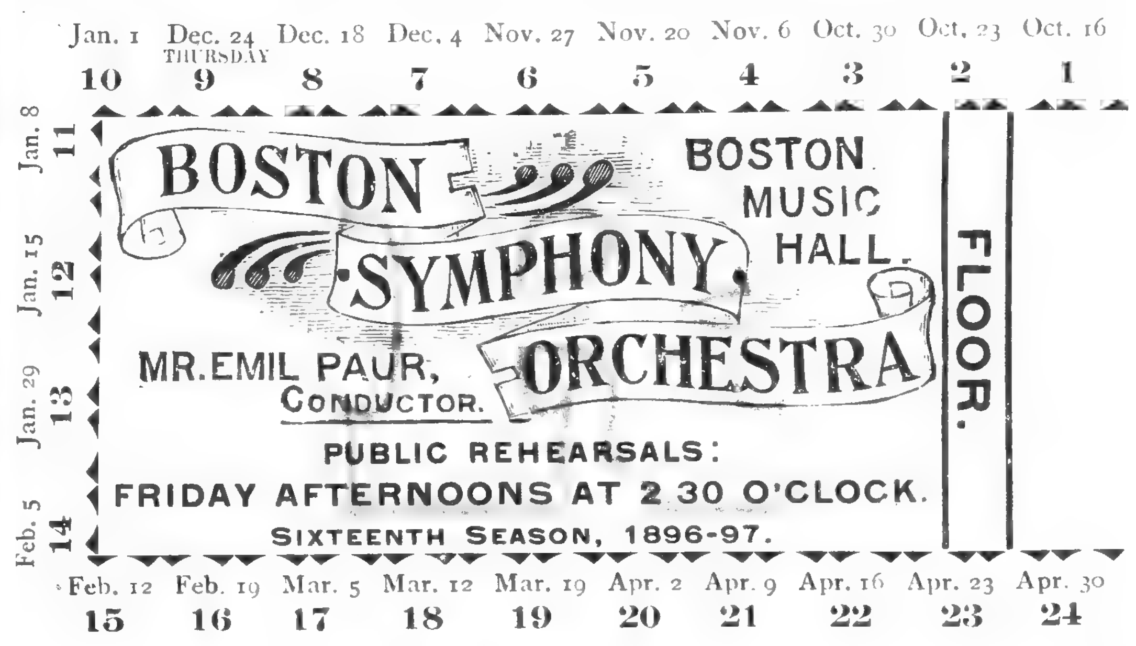
Auction Sale of $12 Seats for the Friday Afternoon Public Rehearsals at Music Hall Tomorrow (Monday), Beginning at 10 O'Clock.

Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Rehearsals, Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M.
Auction Sale of 12.00 Seats for Concerts, Thursday, Sept. 24, at 10 A. M.
Auction Sale of 7.50 Seats for Concerts, Friday, Sept. 25, at 10 A. M.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Auction Sale of $12 Seats for the Saturday Evening Concerts at Music Hall This (Thursday) Morning, Beginning at 10 O'Clock.

Auction Sale of $7.50 Seats for Concerts Tomorrow (Friday) at 10 A. M.

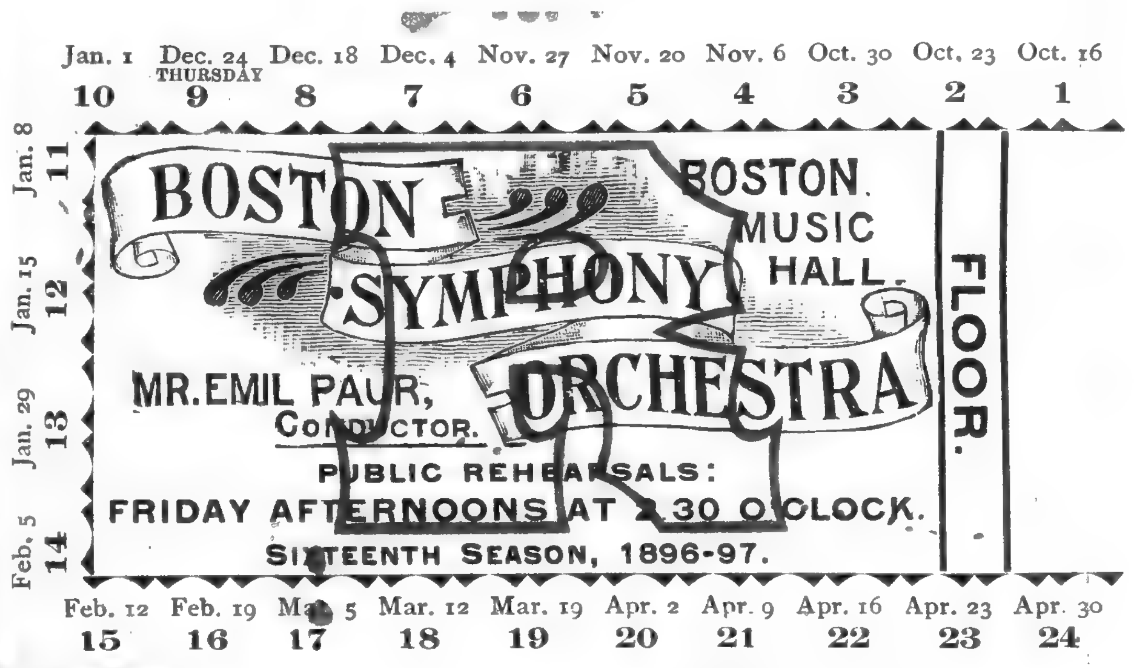


Jan. 1	Dec. 24 THURSDAY	Dec. 18	Dec. 4	Nov. 27	Nov. 20	Nov. 6	Oct. 30	Oct. 23	Oct. 16
10	9	8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1

Jan. 8 11
Jan. 15 12
Jan. 29 13
Feb. 5 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
PUBLIC REHEARSALS:
FRIDAY AFTERNOONS AT 2 30 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.
FLOOR.

Feb. 12	Feb. 19	Mar. 5	Mar. 12	Mar. 19	Apr. 2	Apr. 9	Apr. 16	Apr. 23	Apr. 30
15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24

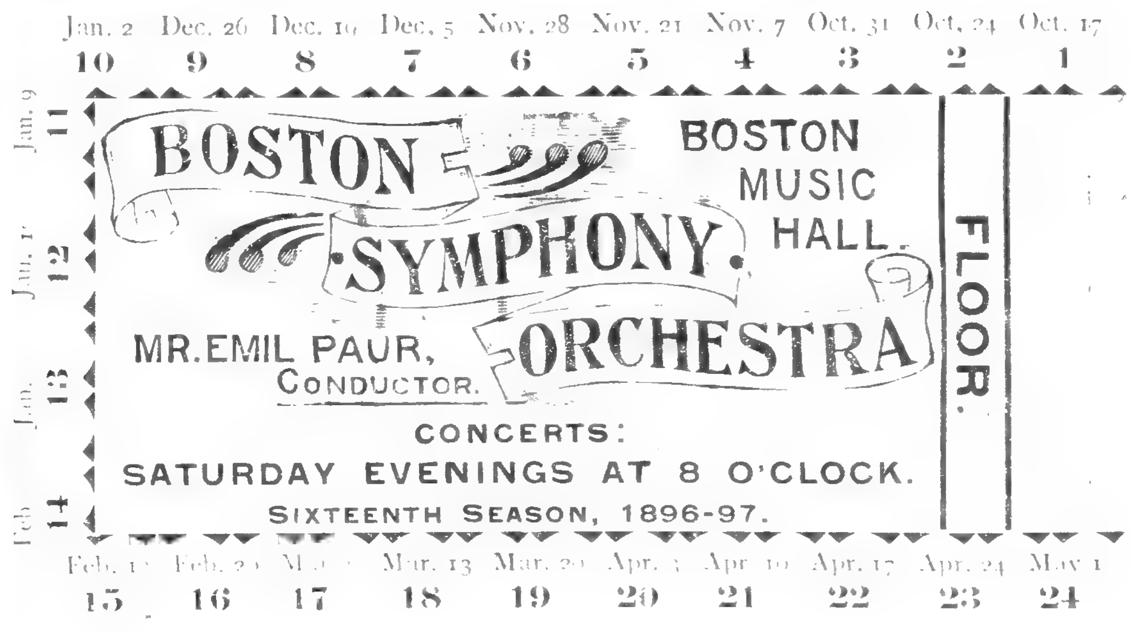


Jan. 1	Dec. 24 THURSDAY	Dec. 18	Dec. 4	Nov. 27	Nov. 20	Nov. 6	Oct. 30	Oct. 23	Oct. 16
10	9	8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1

Jan. 8 11
Jan. 15 12
Jan. 29 13
Feb. 5 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
PUBLIC REHEARSALS:
FRIDAY AFTERNOONS AT 2 30 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.
FLOOR.

Feb. 12	Feb. 19	Mar. 5	Mar. 12	Mar. 19	Apr. 2	Apr. 9	Apr. 16	Apr. 23	Apr. 30
15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24

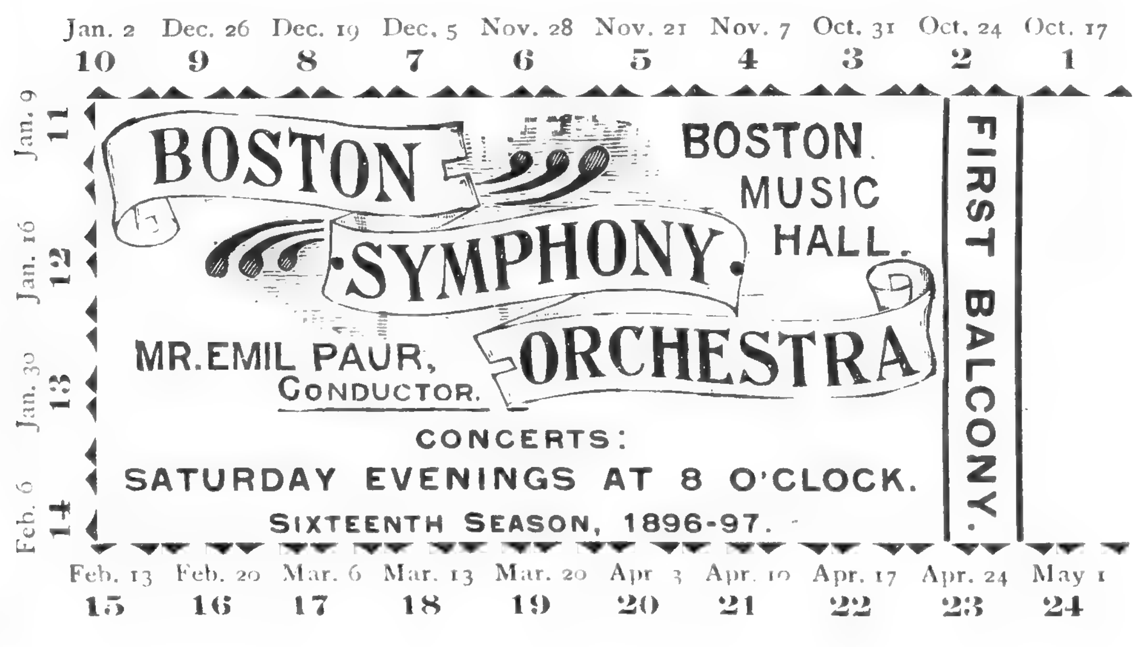


Jan. 2	Dec. 26	Dec. 19	Dec. 5	Nov. 28	Nov. 21	Nov. 7	Oct. 31	Oct. 24	Oct. 17
10	9	8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1

Jan. 9 11
Jan. 1[illegible] 12
Jan. [illegible] 13
Feb. [illegible] 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
CONCERTS:
SATURDAY EVENINGS AT 8 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.
FLOOR.

Feb. 1[illegible]	Feb. 2[illegible]	Mar. [illegible]	Mar. 13	Mar. 20	Apr. 3	Apr. 10	Apr. 17	Apr. 24	May 1
15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24



Jan. 2	Dec. 26	Dec. 19	Dec. 5	Nov. 28	Nov. 21	Nov. 7	Oct. 31	Oct. 24	Oct. 17
10	9	8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1

Jan. 9 11
Jan. 16 12
Jan. 30 13
Feb. 6 14

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
BOSTON MUSIC HALL.
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
CONCERTS:
SATURDAY EVENINGS AT 8 O'CLOCK.
SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.
FIRST BALCONY.

Feb. 13	Feb. 20	Mar. 6	Mar. 13	Mar. 20	Apr. 3	Apr. 10	Apr. 17	Apr. 24	May 1
15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24

THE PROVIDENCE SUNDAY JOURNAL, OCTOBER 4, 1896.

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra,

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIX CONCERTS IN INFANTRY HALL

PROVIDENCE,

Wednesday Evenings October 21, November 25, January 6, February 10, March 10, April 21.

AT 8 O'CLOCK PRECISELY.

SOLO ARTISTS.

Mme. TERESA CARRENO
Mme. GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY
Mr. CARL HALIR
Mr. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.
Mr. T. ADAMOWSKI
AND OTHERS - - - - - - TO BE ANNOUNCED.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, $5.00. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets. The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SUNDAY TELEGRAM, PROVIDENCE, OCTOBER 4, 1896

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIX—CONCERTS—SIX

—IN—

INFANTRY HALL, Providence Wednesday Evenings, Oct. 21, Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, March 10, April 21, at 8 O'clock precisely. - - -

SOLO ARTISTS

Mme. Teresa Carreno.
Mme. Georgine von Januschowsky.
Mr. Carl Halir.
Mr. Martinus Sieveking.
Mr. T. Adamowski.
AND OTHERS TO BE ANNOUNCED.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, $5. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FIFTEENTH SEASON IN PROVIDENCE.

BEGINNING OCT. 21, 1896, THE 52D PERFORMANCE IN PROVIDENCE.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIX CONCERTS IN INFANTRY HALL, PROVIDENCE.

Wednesday Evening, October 21.
Wednesday Evening, November 25.
Wednesday Evening, January 6.
Wednesday Evening, February 10.
Wednesday Evening, March 10.
Wednesday Evening, April 21.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK, PRECISELY.

SOLO ARTISTS:

MME. TERESA CARRENO.

MME. GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY,
Soprano of the Imperial Opera Company, Vienna, and last season with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.

MR. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

MR. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.

MR. T. ADAMOWSKI.

AND OTHERS TO BE ANNOUNCED.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, $5.00. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

TWELFTH SEASON IN PHILADELPHIA.

BEGINNING TUESDAY, NOV. 10, 1896,
THE 57TH PERFORMANCE IN PHILADELPHIA.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

90 PERFORMERS.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS IN ACADEMY OF MUSIC, PHILADELPHIA.

Tuesday Evening, November 10.
Monday Evening, December 7.
Monday Evening, January 18.
Monday Evening, February 22.
Monday Evening, March 22.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.

SOLO ARTISTS:

Mme. MELBA.
Mr. BEN DAVIES.
Mme. TERESA CARRENO.
Mr. POL PLANCON.

Mr. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Proscenium boxes seating eight, and the new boxes seating six and four, will be sold at $75, $63, and $42, respectively, for the series of five concerts.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7, $5, and $3.50, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut Street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

TWELFTH SEASON IN WASHINGTON.

BEGINNING THURSDAY, NOV. 12,
THE 48TH PERFORMANCE IN WASHINGTON.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

70 PERFORMERS.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS IN THE COLUMBIA THEATRE.

Thursday Evening, November 12.
Tuesday Afternoon, December 8.
Tuesday Evening, January 19.
Tuesday Evening, February 23.
Tuesday Evening, March 23.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.

SOLO ARTISTS:

Mme. TERESA CARRENO.

Mr. BEN DAVIES.
Mr. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.

Mr. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7 and $5, according to location. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at Metzerott's Music Store, 1110 F Street, Monday morning, October 19, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

ELEVENTH SEASON IN NEW YORK.

BEGINNING FRIDAY, NOV. 13, THE 48TH PERFORMANCE IN NEW YORK.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

87 PERFORMERS.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS IN THE METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

Friday Evening, November 13.
Thursday Evening, December 10.
Thursday Evening, January 21.
Thursday Evening, February 25.
Thursday Evening, March 25.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.

SOLO ARTISTS:

Mme. TERESA CARRENO.

Mr. MORITZ ROSENTHAL.
Mr. BEN DAVIES.

Mr. CARL HALIR.

And others to be announced.

Subscription tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.50, $6, $5, and $3, and boxes, $50, $40, and $30, according to location, on sale at Schubert's, 23 Union Square, and at the Box Office, Metropolitan Opera House, on and after Monday, October 12.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FIFTEENTH SEASON IN PROVIDENCE.

BEGINNING OCT. 21, 1896, THE 52D PERFORMANCE IN PROVIDENCE.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

SIX CONCERTS IN INFANTRY HALL, PROVIDENCE.

Wednesday Evening, October 21.
Wednesday Evening, November 25.
Wednesday Evening, January 6.
Wednesday Evening, February 10.
Wednesday Evening, March 10.
Wednesday Evening, April 21.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK, PRECISELY.

SOLO ARTISTS:

MME. TERESA CARRENO.

MME. GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY,
Soprano of the Imperial Opera Company, Vienna, and last season with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.

MR. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

MR. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.

MR. T. ADAMOWSKI.

AND OTHERS TO BE ANNOUNCED.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, $5.00. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

TWELFTH SEASON IN PHILADELPHIA.

BEGINNING TUESDAY, NOV. 10, 1896,
THE 57TH PERFORMANCE IN PHILADELPHIA.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

90 PERFORMERS.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS IN ACADEMY OF MUSIC, PHILADELPHIA.

Tuesday Evening, November 10.
Monday Evening, December 7.
Monday Evening, January 18.
Monday Evening, February 22.
Monday Evening, March 22.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.

SOLO ARTISTS:

Mme. MELBA.
Mme. TERESA CARRENO.
Mr. BEN DAVIES.
Mr. POL PLANCON.
Mr. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Proscenium boxes seating eight, and the new boxes seating six and four, will be sold at $75, $63, and $42, respectively, for the series of five concerts.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7, $5, and $3.50, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut Street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

TWELFTH SEASON IN WASHINGTON.

BEGINNING THURSDAY, NOV. 12,
THE 48TH PERFORMANCE IN WASHINGTON.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

70 PERFORMERS.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS IN THE COLUMBIA THEATRE.

Thursday Evening, November 12.
Tuesday Afternoon, December 8.
Tuesday Evening, January 19.
Tuesday Evening, February 23.
Tuesday Evening, March 23.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.

SOLO ARTISTS:

Mme. TERESA CARRENO.
Mr. BEN DAVIES.
Mr. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.
Mr. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7 and $5, according to location. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at Metzerott's Music Store, 1110 F Street, Monday morning, October 19, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

ELEVENTH SEASON IN NEW YORK.

BEGINNING FRIDAY, NOV. 13, THE 48TH PERFORMANCE IN NEW YORK.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

87 PERFORMERS.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS IN THE METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

Friday Evening, November 13.
Thursday Evening, December 10.
Thursday Evening, January 21.
Thursday Evening, February 25.
Thursday Evening, March 25.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.

SOLO ARTISTS:

Mme. TERESA CARRENO.
Mr. MORITZ ROSENTHAL.
Mr. BEN DAVIES.
Mr. CARL HALIR.
And others to be announced.

Subscription tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.50, $6, $5, and $3, and boxes, $50, $40, and $30, according to location, on sale at Schubert's, 23 Union Square, and at the Box Office, Metropolitan Opera House, on and after Monday, October 12.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

Comments of the New York Press on the concert given in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on Thursday evening, March 26, 1896.

THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Boston orchestra is ever the same, from conductor unto conductor, and, under whatever conditions of leadership, still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country. By years of association these Boston men have attained not only a precision and unanimity of purpose not surpassed in the world perhaps, but there shines through all this work the light of individual enthusiasm and pure devotion to high ideals, so that they compel, invariably, admiration and respect.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening.

A bientot, ye Boston Symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like mastersingers, all of you.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Last night's concert was far and away the most brilliant orchestral affair that New York has enjoyed this season.

THE NEW YORK RECORDER.

The orchestra is still the finest body of its kind on this side of the water.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The entire performance of the orchestral part of this comprehensive programme was as near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be.

Such a concert as that of last night must give a thrill of genuine enjoyment to the most blase concert-goer, and leave to the commentator nothing but a fruitless search after adjectives that will not sound rhapsodic.

THE NEW YORK MAIL AND EXPRESS.

In quality and tone, in unanimity and precision, and in delicacy of effect and fineness of shading the Boston orchestra easily leads here.

THE NEW YORK STAATS-ZEITUNG.

There seems to be nothing left for us New Yorkers to do but to imitate the Bostonians. It is impossible to imagine a higher standard; and, if the Boston Symphony could be heard to-day in Paris, Vienna, or Berlin, there is hardly a doubt but what the critics there would surpass anything that has been said in praise of the orchestra in this country. To make it short, let the reader think of every conceivable superlative of praise, and use them in connection with last night's concert of the Boston Symphony, and he will have done all that we could do.

THE NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.

The "greatest" orchestra in virtuosity that the musical world knows.

LIST OF WORKS TO BE PERFORMED.

BEETHOVEN	Symphony No. 2
BEETHOVEN	Symphony No. 8
SCHUMANN	Symphony No. 4, in D minor
MOZART	Symphony in G minor
TSCHAIKOWSKY	Symphony No. 4
MENDELSSOHN	"Midsummer-night's Dream" Music
BEETHOVEN	Overture, "Coriolanus"
BIZET (FIRST TIME.)	Entr'acte, "Carmen"
GOLDMARK	Overture, "Sakuntala"
GOLDMARK (FIRST TIME.)	Entr'acte, "Heinrichen am Heerd"
ROSSINI	Overture, "William Tell"
WEBER	"Invitation to Dance"
WEBER (FIRST TIME.)	Overture, "Abu Hassan"
BOURGAULT DECOUDRAY (FIRST TIME.)	"Enterrement d'Ophélie"
CHABRIER (FIRST TIME.)	Overture, "Gwendoline"
LISZT	Mephisto Waltz

SIXTEENTH SE TWELFTH SE

TH

Sym

FIVE CO

Tuesday Ev
Mond

Mme. MELBA
Mr. BEN DAV

Proscenium four, will be so
five concerts.
Season tick
$7, $5, and $3.5
The sale of
Fischer's Music
Programme
formed, will be season tickets.
F. R. COMEE,

Comments of the New York Press on the concert given in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on Thursday evening, March 26, 1896.

THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Boston orchestra is ever the same, from conductor unto conductor, and, under whatever conditions of leadership, still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country. By years of association these Boston men have attained not only a precision and unanimity of purpose not surpassed in the world perhaps, but there shines through all this work the light of individual enthusiasm and pure devotion to high ideals, so that they compel, invariably, admiration and respect.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening.

A bientot, ye Boston Symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like mastersingers, all of you.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Last night's concert was far and away the most brilliant orchestral affair that New York has enjoyed this season.

THE NEW YORK RECORDER.

The orchestra is still the finest body of its kind on this side of the water.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The entire performance of the orchestral part of this comprehensive programme was as near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be.

Such a concert as that of last night must give a thrill of genuine enjoyment to the most blase concert-goer, and leave to the commentator nothing but a fruitless search after adjectives that will not sound rhapsodic.

THE NEW YORK MAIL AND EXPRESS.

In quality and tone, in unanimity and precision, and in delicacy of effect and fineness of shading the Boston orchestra easily leads here.

THE NEW YORK STAATS-ZEITUNG.

There seems to be nothing left for us New Yorkers to do but to imitate the Bostonians. It is impossible to imagine a higher standard; and, if the Boston Symphony could be heard to-day in Paris, Vienna, or Berlin, there is hardly a doubt but what the critics there would surpass anything that has been said in praise of the orchestra in this country. To make it short, let the reader think of every conceivable superlative of praise, and use them in connection with last night's concert of the Boston Symphony, and he will have done all that we could do.

THE NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.

The "greatest" orchestra in virtuosity that the musical world knows.

LIST OF WORKS TO BE PERFORMED.

BEETHOVEN	Symphony No. 2
SCHUBERT	Symphony No. 9, in C major
MENDELSSOHN	Symphony No. 2, in A major, "Italian"
MOZART	Symphony in G minor
MOZART	Overture, "Don Giovanni"
BACH	Passacaglia
WEBER	Overture, "Oberon"
WEBER	"Invitation to Dance"
MENDELSSOHN	Overture, "Melusine"
LISZT	"Mephisto Waltz"
BRAHMS	Academic Overture
BIZET	Entr'acte, "Carmen"
GOLDMARK	Overture, "Sakuntala"
BERLIOZ	Overture, "Carnaval Romain"

And an entire programme of Wagner selections.

SIXTEENTH SEA
LEVENTH S
BEGINNING FRI

Symp

FIVE CO

Friday Eveni
Thurs

Mr. MORITZ R

Subscriptio
certs, $7.50, $6,
location, on sale
Metropolitan Op
Programme
formed, will be season tickets.
F. R. COMEE, A

[4]

Comments of the New York Press on the concert given in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on Thursday evening, March 26, 1896.

THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Boston orchestra is ever the same, from conductor unto conductor, and, under whatever conditions of leadership, still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country. By years of association these Boston men have attained not only a precision and unanimity of purpose not surpassed in the world perhaps, but there shines through all this work the light of individual enthusiasm and pure devotion to high ideals, so that they compel, invariably, admiration and respect.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening.

A bientot, ye Boston Symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like mastersingers, all of you.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Last night's concert was far and away the most brilliant orchestral affair that New York has enjoyed this season.

THE NEW YORK RECORDER.

The orchestra is still the finest body of its kind on this side of the water.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The entire performance of the orchestral part of this comprehensive programme was as near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be.

Such a concert as that of last night must give a thrill of genuine enjoyment to the most blase concert-goer, and leave to the commentator nothing but a fruitless search after adjectives that will not sound rhapsodic.

THE NEW YORK MAIL AND EXPRESS.

In quality and tone, in unanimity and precision, and in delicacy of effect and fineness of shading the Boston orchestra easily leads here.

THE NEW YORK STAATS-ZEITUNG.

There seems to be nothing left for us New Yorkers to do but to imitate the Bostonians. It is impossible to imagine a higher standard; and, if the Boston Symphony could be heard to-day in Paris, Vienna, or Berlin, there is hardly a doubt but what the critics there would surpass anything that has been said in praise of the orchestra in this country. To make it short, let the reader think of every conceivable superlative of praise, and use them in connection with last night's concert of the Boston Symphony, and he will have done all that we could do.

THE NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.

The "greatest" orchestra in virtuosity that the musical world knows.

LIST OF WORKS TO BE PERFORMED.

BEETHOVEN	Symphony No. 2
SCHUBERT	Symphony No. 9
MENDELSSOHN	Symphony No. 3, "Scotch"
MOZART	Symphony in G minor
GOLDMARK	Overture, "Sakuntala"
SMETANA	Symphonic Poem, "Wallenstein" (FIRST TIME.)
SCHUMANN	Overture, "Manfred"
SCHUMANN	Overture, "Genoveva"
BERLIOZ	Overture, "Carnaval Romain"
LISZT	"Mephisto Waltz"
WEBER	Overture, "Abu Hassan" (FIRST TIME.)
WEBER	"Invitation to Dance"
BEETHOVEN	Overture, "Coriolanus"

And an entire Wagner programme.

Comments of the New York Press on the concert given in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on Thursday evening, March 26, 1896.

THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Boston orchestra is ever the same, from conductor unto conductor, and, under whatever conditions of leadership, still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country. By years of association these Boston men have attained not only a precision and unanimity of purpose not surpassed in the world perhaps, but there shines through all this work the light of individual enthusiasm and pure devotion to high ideals, so that they compel, invariably, admiration and respect.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening.

A bientot, ye Boston Symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like mastersingers, all of you.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Last night's concert was far and away the most brilliant orchestral affair that New York has enjoyed this season.

THE NEW YORK RECORDER.

The orchestra is still the finest body of its kind on this side of the water.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The entire performance of the orchestral part of this comprehensive programme was as near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be.

Such a concert as that of last night must give a thrill of genuine enjoyment to the most blase concert-goer, and leave to the commentator nothing but a fruitless search after adjectives that will not sound rhapsodic.

THE NEW YORK MAIL AND EXPRESS.

In quality and tone, in unanimity and precision, and in delicacy of effect and fineness of shading the Boston orchestra easily leads here.

THE NEW YORK STAATS-ZEITUNG.

There seems to be nothing left for us New Yorkers to do but to imitate the Bostonians. It is impossible to imagine a higher standard; and, if the Boston Symphony could be heard to-day in Paris, Vienna, or Berlin, there is hardly a doubt but what the critics there would surpass anything that has been said in praise of the orchestra in this country. To make it short, let the reader think of every conceivable superlative of praise, and use them in connection with last night's concert of the Boston Symphony, and he will have done all that we could do.

THE NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.

The "greatest" orchestra in virtuosity that the musical world knows.

LIST OF WORKS TO BE PERFORMED.

BEETHOVEN	Symphony No. 4
SCHUMANN	Symphony No. 2, in C major
SCHUBERT	Symphony No. 9, in C major
TSCHAIKOWSKY	Symphony No. 4
GOLDMARK	Overture, "Sakuntala"
WEBER-BERLIOZ	"Invitation to Dance"
BIZET	Entr'acte, "Carmen"
MENDELSSOHN	Overture, "Fingal's Cave"
SMETANA	Symphonic Poem, "Wallenstein" (FIRST TIME.)
WEBER	Overture, "Oberon"
SCHILLING	Entr'acte, "Ingwalde" (FIRST TIME.)
BERLIOZ	Overture, "Carnaval Romain"
BEETHOVEN	Overture, "Coriolanus"

And an entire programme of Wagner selections.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

12th [redacted]H SEASON IN BALTIMORE.

BEGINNING NOVEMBER 11, THE 39TH PERFORMANCE IN BALTIMORE.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

87 PERFORMERS.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS IN MUSIC HALL.

Wednesday Evening, November 11.
Wednesday Evening, December 9.
Wednesday Evening, January 20.
Wednesday Evening, February 24.
Wednesday Evening, March 24.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.

SOLO ARTISTS:

Mme. MELBA.
Mme. TERESA CARRENO.
Mr. BEN DAVIES.
Mr. POL PLANCON.
Mr. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7 and $5, according to location. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at Albert's Ticket Office, 13 North Charles Street, Monday morning, October 19, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

Beginning Oct. 29, 1896, the 105th Performance in Cambridge.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

TEN CONCERTS IN SANDERS THEATRE, CAMBRIDGE.

Thursday Evening, October 29.
Thursday Evening, November 19.
Thursday Evening, December 17.
Thursday Evening, December 31.
Thursday Evening, January 14.
Thursday Evening, February 4.
Thursday Evening, March 4.
Thursday Evening, March 18.
Thursday Evening, April 8.
Thursday Evening, April 29.

At 7.45 o'clock precisely.

SOLO ARTISTS:

MR. BEN DAVIES.
MME. GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY,
Soprano of the Imperial Opera Company, Vienna, and last season with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.
MR. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.
MR. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.
MISS LENA LITTLE.
MR. FRANZ KNEISEL.

And others to be announced.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of ten concerts, $7.50, on sale at the University Book Store, Saturday morning, October 24, at 8 o'clock. A limited number of seats have been reserved for college officers and invited guests.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers of last season may secure their subscription tickets for the five concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House in advance of the public sale, by applying at Schuberth's, 23 Union Square, from Wednesday, October 14, to Saturday, October 17, inclusive.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

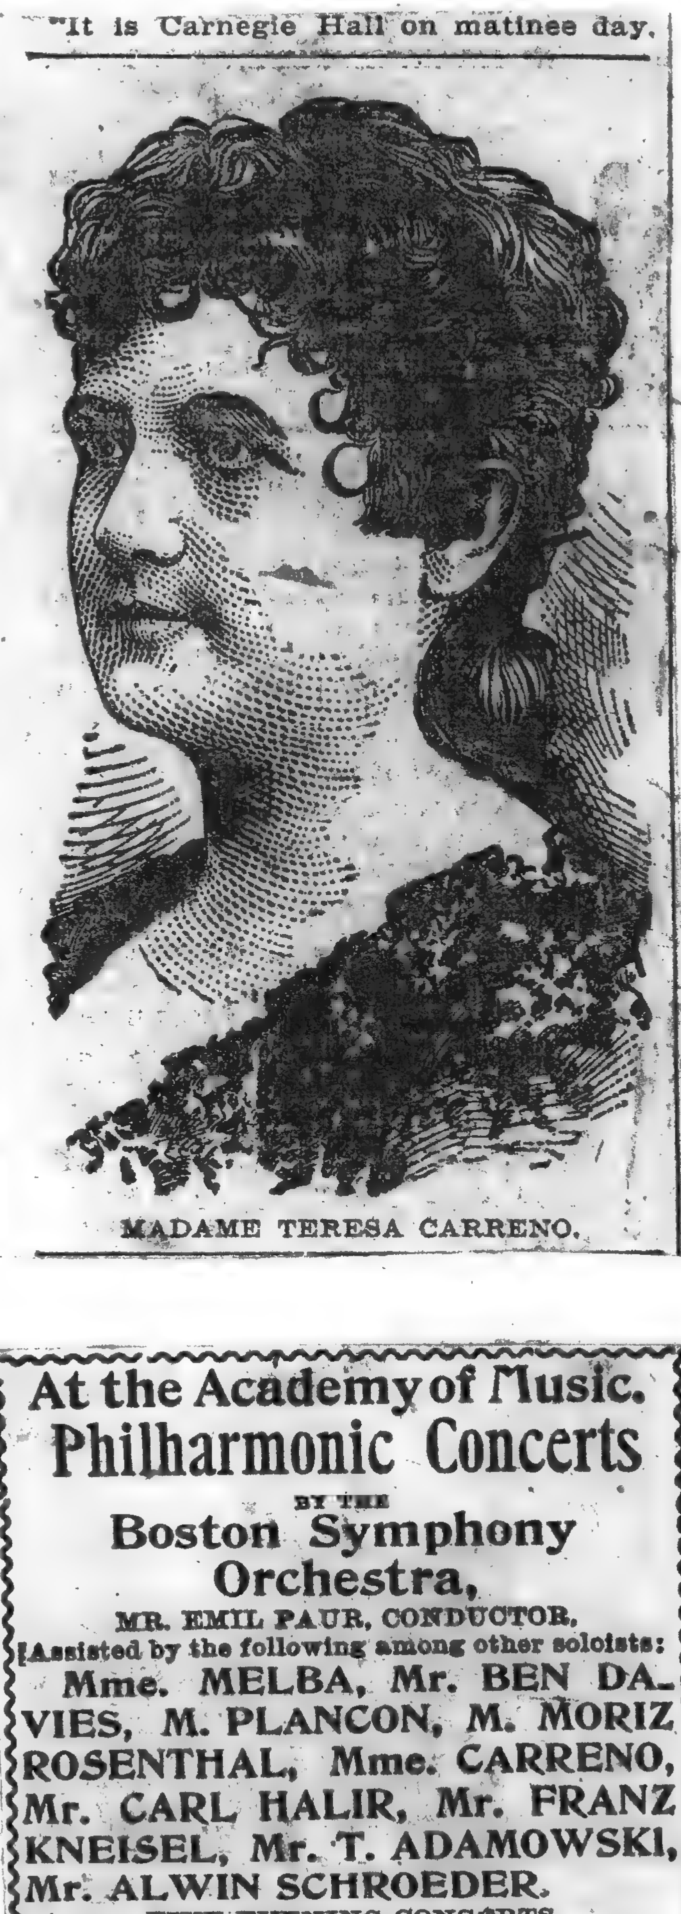
"It is Carnegie Hall on matinee day.



MADAME TERESA CARRENO.

MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS—WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, November 11, December 9, January 20, Febuary 24, March 24, at 8 o'clock.

SOLO ARTISTS—MME. MELBA, MME. CARRENO, MR. POL PLANCON, MR. BEN DAVIES, MR. CARL HALIR, the famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7,00 and $5 00, according to location, now on sale at Albert's, 13 North Charles street.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager
F R COMEE, As'st Manager

At the Academy of Music.

Philharmonic Concerts

BY THE

Boston Symphony Orchestra,

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR,

Assisted by the following among other soloists:

Mme. MELBA, Mr. BEN DAVIES, M. PLANCON, M. MORIZ ROSENTHAL, Mme. CARRENO, Mr. CARL HALIR, Mr. FRANZ KNEISEL, Mr. T. ADAMOWSKI, Mr. ALWIN SCHROEDER.

FIVE EVENING CONCERTS,
Nov. 9, Dec. 11, Jan. 22, Feb. 26, Mar. 26.
FOUR MATINEE CONCERTS
(Saturdays), Dec. 12, Jan. 23, Feb. 27, Mar. 27.

Course Tickets, to the Five Evening Concerts, for sale at 502 Fulton st., and at 300 Fulton st. (CHANDLER'S).

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

12th ~~[illegible]~~ SEASON IN BALTIMORE.

BEGINNING NOVEMBER 11, THE 39TH PERFORMANCE IN BALTIMORE.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

87 PERFORMERS.

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS IN MUSIC HALL.

Wednesday Evening, November 11.
Wednesday Evening, December 9.
Wednesday Evening, January 20.
Wednesday Evening, February 24.
Wednesday Evening, March 24.

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.

SOLO ARTISTS:

Mme. MELBA.
Mme. TERESA CARRENO.
Mr. BEN DAVIES.
Mr. POL PLANCON.
Mr. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7 and $5, according to location. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The sale of season tickets will open at Albert's Ticket Office, 13 North Charles Street, Monday morning, October 19, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats, no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

Beginning Oct. 29, 1896, the 105th Performance in Cambridge.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

TEN CONCERTS IN SANDERS THEATRE, CAMBRIDGE.

Thursday Evening, October 29.
Thursday Evening, November 19.
Thursday Evening, December 17.
Thursday Evening, December 31.
Thursday Evening, January 14.
Thursday Evening, February 4.
Thursday Evening, March 4.
Thursday Evening, March 18.
Thursday Evening, April 8.
Thursday Evening, April 29.

At 7.45 o'clock precisely.

SOLO ARTISTS:

MR. BEN DAVIES.
MME. GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY,
Soprano of the Imperial Opera Company, Vienna, and last season with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.
MR. CARL HALIR,
The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.
MR. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.
MISS LENA LITTLE.
MR. FRANZ KNEISEL.

And others to be announced.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of ten concerts, $7.50, on sale at the University Book Store, Saturday morning, October 24, at 8 o'clock. A limited number of seats have been reserved for college officers and invited guests.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers of last season may secure their subscription tickets for the five concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House in advance of the public sale, by applying at Schuberth's, 23 Union Square, from Wednesday, October 14, to Saturday, October 17, inclusive.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

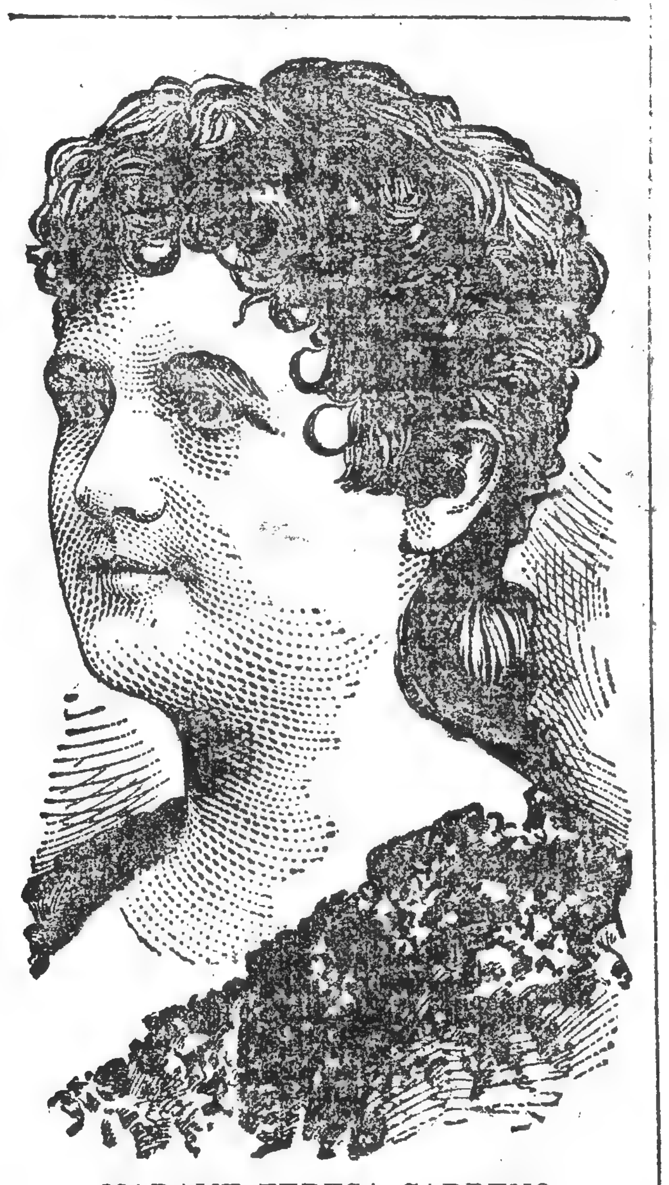
"It is Carnegie Hall on matinee day.



MADAME TERESA CARRENO.

MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS—WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, November 11, December 9, January 20, Febuary 24, March 24, at 8 o'clock.

SOLO ARTISTS—MME. MELBA, MME. CARRENO, MR. POL PLANCON, MR. BEN DAVIES, MR. CARL HALIR, the famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7,00 and $5 00, according to location, now on sale at Albert's, 13 North Charles street.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager
F R COMEE, As'st Manager

At the Academy of Music.

Philharmonic Concerts

BY THE

Boston Symphony Orchestra,

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.

Assisted by the following among other soloists:

Mme. MELBA, Mr. BEN DAVIES, M. PLANCON, M. MORIZ ROSENTHAL, Mme. CARRENO, Mr. CARL HALIR, Mr. FRANZ KNEISEL, Mr. T. ADAMOWSKI, Mr. ALWIN SCHROEDER.

FIVE EVENING CONCERTS,
Nov. 9, Dec. 11, Jan. 22, Feb. 26, Mar. 26.
FOUR MATINEE CONCERTS
(Saturdays), Dec. 12, Jan. 23, Feb. 27, Mar. 27.

Course Tickets, to the Five Evening Concerts, for sale at 502 Fulton st., and at 300 Fulton st, (CHANDLER'S).

Comments of the New York Press on the concert given in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on Thursday evening, March 26, 1896.

THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Boston orchestra is ever the same, from conductor unto conductor, and, under whatever conditions of leadership, still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country. By years of association these Boston men have attained not only a precision and unanimity of purpose not surpassed in the world perhaps, but there shines through all this work the light of individual enthusiasm and pure devotion to high ideals, so that they compel, invariably, admiration and respect.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening.

A bientot, ye Boston Symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like mastersingers, all of you.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Last night's concert was far and away the most brilliant orchestral affair that New York has enjoyed this season.

THE NEW YORK RECORDER.

The orchestra is still the finest body of its kind on this side of the water.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The entire performance of the orchestral part of this comprehensive programme was as near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be.

Such a concert as that of last night must give a thrill of genuine enjoyment to the most blase concert-goer, and leave to the commentator nothing but a fruitless search after adjectives that will not sound rhapsodic.

THE NEW YORK MAIL AND EXPRESS.

In quality and tone, in unanimity and precision, and in delicacy of effect and fineness of shading the Boston orchestra easily leads here.

THE NEW YORK STAATS-ZEITUNG.

There seems to be nothing left for us New Yorkers to do but to imitate the Bostonians. It is impossible to imagine a higher standard; and, if the Boston Symphony could be heard to-day in Paris, Vienna, or Berlin, there is hardly a doubt but what the critics there would surpass anything that has been said in praise of the orchestra in this country. To make it short, let the reader think of every conceivable superlative of praise, and use them in connection with last night's concert of the Boston Symphony, and he will have done all that we could do.

THE NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.

The "greatest" orchestra in virtuosity that the musical world knows.

LIST OF WORKS TO BE PERFORMED.

BEETHOVEN	Symphony No. 2
SCHUMANN	Symphony No. 2, in C major
SCHUBERT	Symphony No. 9, in C major
TSCHAIKOWSKY	Symphony No. 4
WEBER	Overture, "Freischütz"
BIZET	Entr'acte, "Carmen" (FIRST TIME.)
SCHUMANN	Overture, "Genoveva"
LISZT	"Mephisto Waltz"
BERLIOZ	Overture, "Carnaval Romain"
BURMEISTER	Symphonic Poem, "Jagd" (FIRST TIME.)
MENDELSSOHN	Overture, "Fingal's Cave"
WEBER-BERLIOZ	"Invitation to Dance"

And an entire programme of Wagner selections.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

Beginning Oct. 29, 1896, the 105th Perfor

The Bosto

Symphony O

Mr. EMIL PAUR, C

TEN CONCERTS IN SAND

CAMBRIDG

Thursday Evening, October 29.

Thursday E

Thursday Evening, December 17.

Thursday E

Thursday Evening, January 14.

Thursday

Thursday Evening, March 4.

Thursda

Thursday Evening, April 8.

Thursd

At 7.45 o'clock preci

SOLO ARTIST

MR. BEN DAVIES.

MME. GEORGI

Soprano of the

and last seaso

pany of New

MR. CARL HALIR,

The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

MR. MARTINU

MISS LENA LITTLE.

MR. FR

And others to be annou

Season tickets, with reserved seats for t
$7.50, on sale at the University Book Store, S ber 24, at 8 o'clock. A limited number of for college officers and invited guests.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers of last season may secure their subscription tickets for the five concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House in advance of the public sale, by applying at Schuberth's, 23 Union Square, from Wednesday, October 14, to Saturday, October 17, inclusive.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

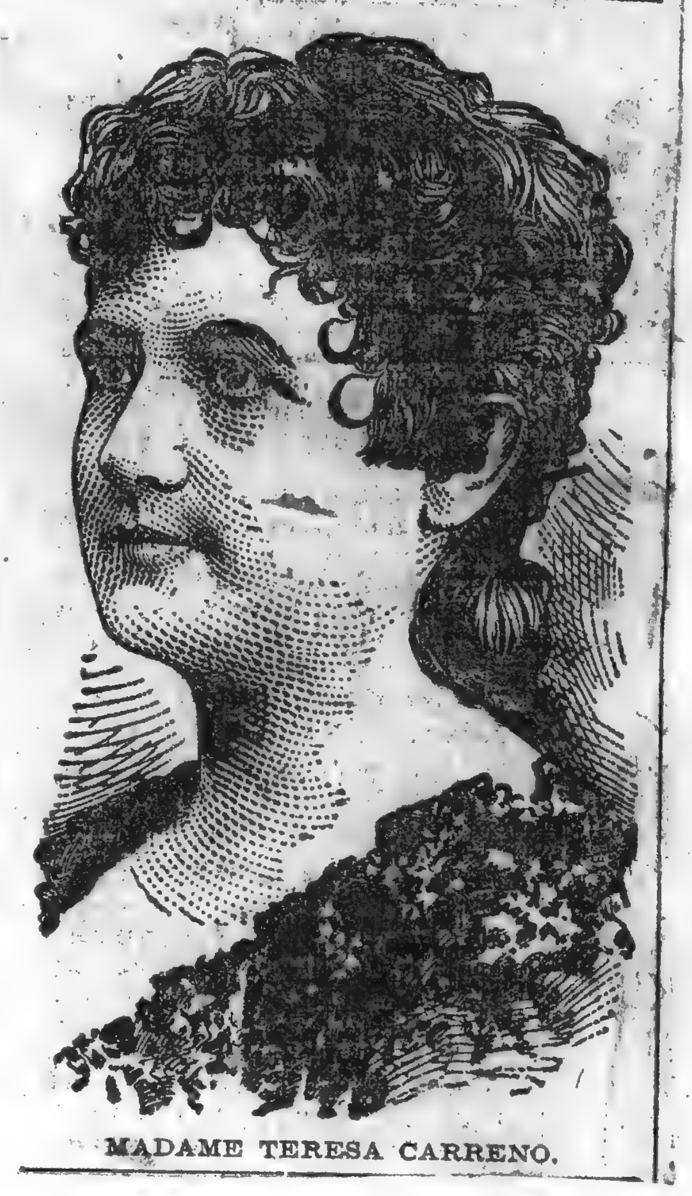
"It is Carnegie Hall on matinee day.



MADAME TERESA CARRENO.

MUSIC

BOSTON

ORCH

MR. EMIL P

FIVE CONCERTS—
INGS, November 11,
Febuary 24, March 24,

SOLO ARTISTS—
CARRENO, MR. POL
DAVIES, MR. CAR
Violin Virtuoso from

Season tickets, with series of five concerts, ing to location, now
North Charles str et.

C. A. E

F R COMEE,

At the Academy of Music.

Philharmonic Concerts

BY THE

Boston Symphony Orchestra,

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR,

[Assisted by the following among other soloists:

Mme. MELBA, Mr. BEN DAVIES, M. PLANCON, M. MORIZ ROSENTHAL, Mme. CARRENO, Mr. CARL HALIR, Mr. FRANZ KNEISEL, Mr. T. ADAMOWSKI, Mr. ALWIN SCHROEDER.

FIVE EVENING CONCERTS,
Nov. 9, Dec. 11, Jan. 22, Feb. 26, Mar. 26.

FOUR MATINEE CONCERTS
(Saturdays), Dec. 12, Jan. 23, Feb. 27, Mar. 27.

Course Tickets, to the Five Evening Concerts, for sale at 502 Fulton st., and at 300 Fulton st, (CHANDLER'S).

Comments of the New York Press on the concert given in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on Thursday evening, March 26, 1896.

THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Boston orchestra is ever the same, from conductor unto conductor, and, under whatever conditions of leadership, still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country. By years of association these Boston men have attained not only a precision and unanimity of purpose not surpassed in the world perhaps, but there shines through all this work the light of individual enthusiasm and pure devotion to high ideals, so that they compel, invariably, admiration and respect.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening.

A bientot, ye Boston Symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like mastersingers, all of you.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Last night's concert was far and away the most brilliant orchestral affair that New York has enjoyed this season.

THE NEW YORK RECORDER.

The orchestra is still the finest body of its kind on this side of the water.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The entire performance of the orchestral part of this comprehensive programme was as near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be.

Such a concert as that of last night must give a thrill of genuine enjoyment to the most blase concert-goer, and leave to the commentator nothing but a fruitless search after adjectives that will not sound rhapsodic.

THE NEW YORK MAIL AND EXPRESS.

In quality and tone, in unanimity and precision, and in delicacy of effect and fineness of shading the Boston orchestra easily leads here.

THE NEW YORK STAATS-ZEITUNG.

There seems to be nothing left for us New Yorkers to do but to imitate the Bostonians. It is impossible to imagine a higher standard; and, if the Boston Symphony could be heard to-day in Paris, Vienna, or Berlin, there is hardly a doubt but what the critics there would surpass anything that has been said in praise of the orchestra in this country. To make it short, let the reader think of every conceivable superlative of praise, and use them in connection with last night's concert of the Boston Symphony, and he will have done all that we could do.

THE NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.

The "greatest" orchestra in virtuosity that the musical world knows.

LIST OF WORKS TO BE PERFORMED.

BEETHOVEN	Symphony No. 2
BEETHOVEN	Symphony No. 8
SCHUMANN	Symphony in C major
SCHUBERT	Symphony in B-flat minor
MOZART	Symphony in G minor
TSCHAIKOWSKY	Symphony No. 4
MENDELSSOHN	Symphony No. 3, "Scotch"
MENDELSSOHN	"Midsummer-night's Dream" Music
BEETHOVEN	Overture, "Coriolanus"
BERLIOZ	Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini"
BIZET	Entr'acte, "Carmen" (FIRST TIME.)
GOLDMARK	Overture, "Sakuntala"
GOLDMARK	Entr'acte, "Heinrichen am Heerd" (FIRST TIME.)
ROSSINI	Overture, "William Tell"
WEBER	"Invitation to Dance"
WEBER	Overture, "Abu Hassan" (FIRST TIME.)
PAINE	To be announced
BOURGAULT DECOUDRAY	"Enterrement d'Ophélie" (FIRST TIME.)
SCHUMANN	Overture, "Genoveva"
DVORAK	Rhapsody No. 3
CHABRIER	Overture, "Gwendoline" (FIRST TIME.)
LISZT	Mephisto Waltz
WEBER	Overture, "Freischütz"

And an entire programme of Wagner selections.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers of last season may secure their subscription tickets for the five concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House in advance of the public sale, by applying at Schuberth's, 23 Union Square, from Wednesday, October 14, to Saturday, October 17, inclusive.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

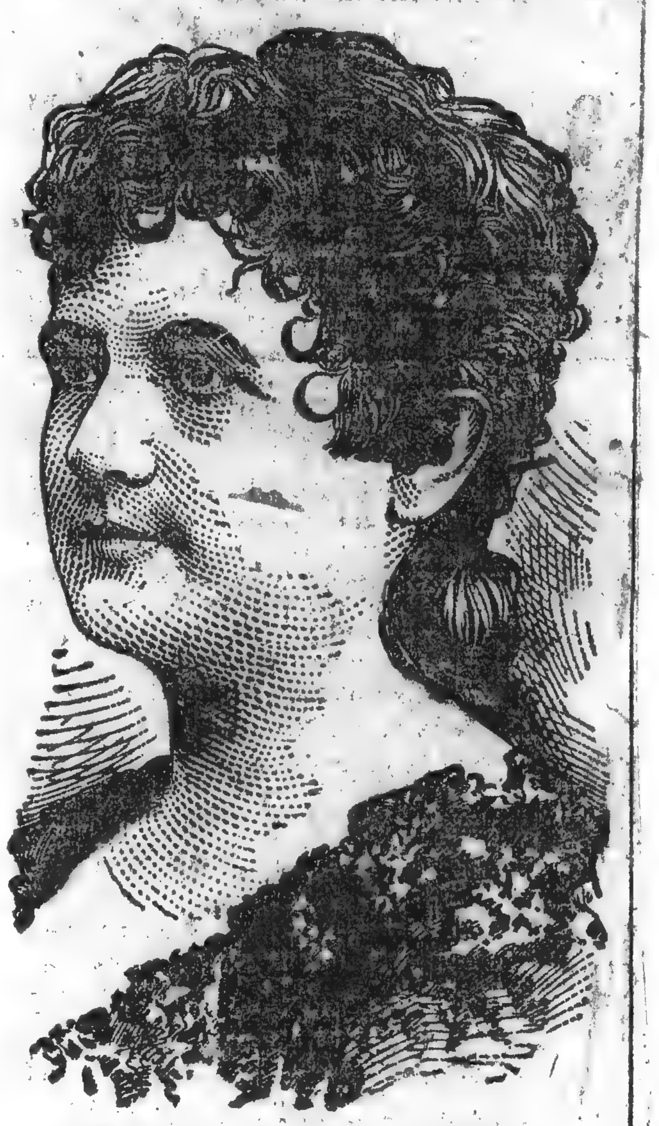
"It is Carnegie Hall on matinee day.



MADAME TERESA CARRENO.

MUSIC HALL.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

FIVE CONCERTS—WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, November 11, December 9, January 20, Febuary 24, March 24, at 8 o'clock.

SOLO ARTISTS—MME. MELBA, MME. CARRENO, MR. POL PLANCON, MR. BEN DAVIES, MR. CARL HALIR, the famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7,00 and $5 00, according to location, now on sale at Albert's, 13 North Charles street.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager

F R COMEE, As'st Manager

At the Academy of Music.

Philharmonic Concerts

BY THE

Boston Symphony Orchestra,

MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR,

[Assisted by the following among other soloists:

Mme. MELBA, Mr. BEN DAVIES, M. PLANCON, M. MORIZ ROSENTHAL, Mme. CARRENO, Mr. CARL HALIR, Mr. FRANZ KNEISEL, Mr. T. ADAMOWSKI, Mr. ALWIN SCHROEDER.

FIVE EVENING CONCERTS,
Nov. 9, Dec. 11, Jan. 22, Feb. 26, Mar. 26.
FOUR MATINEE CONCERTS
(Saturdays), Dec. 12, Jan. 23, Feb. 27, Mar. 27.

Course Tickets, to the Five Evening Concerts, for sale at 502 Fulton st., and at 300 Fulton st, (CHANDLER'S).

COLORED PAPER

1

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 163
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, OCT. 16, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

2

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 425
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, OCT. 23, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

3

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 95
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, OCT. 30, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

[illegible]

6

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 399
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 27, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

7

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 572
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 4, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

8

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 742
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 18, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

9

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 528
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
THURSDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 24, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

[illegible]

[illegible]

12

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 432
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 15, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

13

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 620
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 29, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

14

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 84
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, FEB. 5, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

15

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 697
Boston
Symphony
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
Orchestra
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, FEB. 12, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

[illegible]

[illegible]

[6]

COLORED PAPER

1

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 163
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, OCT. 16, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

2

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 425
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, OCT. 23, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

3

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 95
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, OCT. 30, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

4

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 271
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 6, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

5

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 257
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 20, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

6

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 399
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 27, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

7

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 572
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 4, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

8

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 742
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 18, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

9

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 528
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
THURSDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 24, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

10

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 272
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 1, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

11

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 152
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 8, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

12

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 432
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 15, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

13

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 620
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 29, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

14

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 84
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, FEB. 5, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

15

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 697
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, FEB. 12, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

16

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 211
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, FEB. 19, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

17

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 51
Boston
Symphony
Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor
PUBLIC REHEARSAL
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 5, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK
ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

L6

COLORED PAPER

[illegible] Tickets

18

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 676

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 12, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

19

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 639

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MAR. 19, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

20

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 468

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 2, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

21

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 514

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 9, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

22

BOSTON MUSIC HALL [illegible]

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 16, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

24

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 643

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 30, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

COLORED PAPER

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 676

18

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 12, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 639

19

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MAR. 19, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 468

20

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 2, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 514

21

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 9, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 566

22

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 16, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 385

23

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 23, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 643

24

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 30, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

COLORED PAPER

18

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 676

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 12, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

19

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 639

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MAR. 19, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

20

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 468

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 2, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

21

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 514

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 9, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

22

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 566

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 16, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

23

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 385

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 23, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

24

BOSTON MUSIC HALL 643

Boston Symphony Orchestra

MR. EMIL PAUR
Conductor

PUBLIC REHEARSAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 30, AT 2.30 O'CLOCK

ADMIT ONE C. A. Ellis Manager

COLORED PAPER

21
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 213
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, NOV. 21, 1896.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

28
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 155
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, NOV. 28, 1896.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

5
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 17
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, DEC. 5, 1896.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

19
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 8
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, DEC. 19, 1896.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

26
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 136
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, DEC. 26, 1896.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

2
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 51
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, JAN. 2, 1896.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

9
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 32
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, JAN. 9, 1896.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

16
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 71
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, JAN. 16, 1896.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

30
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 251
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, JAN. 30, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY C. A. Ellis Manager

6
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 133
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, FEB. 6, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

13
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 46
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, FEB. 13, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

20
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 87
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, FEB. 20, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

6
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 51
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, MAR. 6, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

13
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 23
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, MAR. 13, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager

20
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 12
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, MAR. 20, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

3
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 76
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, APR. 3, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

10
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 104
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, APR. 10, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

17
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 12
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, APR. 17, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

24
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 201
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, APR. 24, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

1
BOSTON MUSIC HALL. 211
Boston Symphony Orchestra
MR. EMIL PAUR, CONDUCTOR.
ADMISSION
TO FLOOR ONLY.
SATURDAY EVENING, MAY 1, 1897.
GOOD THIS DATE ONLY. C. A. Ellis Manager.

BLANK PAGE

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

NOVEMBER ITINERARY.

Leave Boston Sunday, November 8, at 12, midnight. Providence Depot.

Arrive New York, Grand Central Depot, Monday, November 9, at 7, A.M.

1415th Concert at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, at 8.15 P.M.

Hotel baggage will be sent to Academy of Music, Brooklyn, and change of dress must be made there to allow quick movement after the concert to Philadelphia.

Leave New York Tuesday, November 10, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Ferry foot of Liberty Street, 10 A.M.

Arrive Philadelphia, Reading Terminal, Twelfth and Market Sts., at 12.15, P.M.

CONTINENTAL HOTEL.

1416th Concert at Academy of Music at 8.15, P.M.

Leave Philadelphia, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Twenty-fourth and Chestnut Sts., Wednesday, November 11, at 10.30, A.M.

Arrive Baltimore, Camden St. Station, 12.47 P.M.

CARROLLTON HOTEL.

1417th Concert at Music Hall at 8.15, P.M.

Leave Baltimore, Camden Street Station B. & O. R. R., Thursday, November 12, at 4.10, P.M.

Hotel baggage must go on the train, and change of dress must be made at Columbia Theatre, to allow quick movement to New York after the concert.

Arrive Washington at 5.15 P.M

1418th Concert at Columbia Theatre (formerly Metzerott's Hall) at 8.15 P.M.

Leave Washington, B. & O. R. R., at 12, midnight.

Sleeping cars to be ready for occupancy at 10.30 P.M.

Arrive New York Friday, November 13, at 7, A.M.

Rehearsal at Metropolitan Opera House at 12 o'clock, noon.

1419th Concert at Metropolitan Opera House, at 8.15 P.M.

Hotel baggage must be ready directly after the concert.

Leave New York, Grand Central Depot, Saturday, November 14, at 9 A.M.

Arrive Springfield at 12.45, P.M.

MASSASOIT HOTEL.

1420th Concert at City Hall at 8, P.M.

Sleeping Cars ready directly after the concert.

Arrive Boston at 7 A.M. Sunday, November 15. (Boston & Albany Depot.)

C. A. ELLIS, MANAGER.
F. R. COMEE, ASS'T MANAGER.

SATURDAY, November 7, 1896.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

DECEMBER ITINERARY.

Leave Boston Sunday, December 6, at 7, P. M. Providence Depot.

Arrive Philadelphia, Broad St. Station Penna. R. R, Monday, December 7, at 7 A.M.

CONTINENTAL HOTEL.

Concert at Academy of Music at 8, P.M.

Hotel baggage not ready directly after the concert will be moved at owner's expense.

Leave Philadelphia, Tuesday, December 8, Baltimore & Ohio Depot, Twenty-fourth and Chestnut Sts., at 10.20, A.M.

Arrive Washington at 1.40 P.M.

Concert (Matinee) at Columbia Theatre, at 4.15, P.M.

Leave Washington, B. & O. R. R., at 6.20, P.M.

Arrive Baltimore, 7.10, P.M.

CARROLLTON HOTEL.

Concert at Music Hall, Mount Royal Avenue and Cathedral St., Wednesday, December 9, at 8, P.M.

Hotel baggage not ready directly after the concert will be moved at owner's expense.

Leave Baltimore, Camden Street Station, B. & O. R. R., Wednesday. December 9, at midnight. Sleeping cars ready at 10, P.M.

Arrive New York, Depot Central R. R. of N. J., Thursday, December 10, at 7, A.M.

NEW YORK ADDRESS, SCHUBERTH'S MUSIC STORE, 23 UNION SQUARE.

Concert at Metropolitan Opera House, at 8, P.M.

Concert at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Friday, December 11, at 8, P.M.

Concert (Matinee) at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Saturday December 12, at 3 P.M.

Leave New York, Grand Central Depot, Saturday, December 12, at midnight. Sleeping Cars ready at 10.30, P.M.

Arrive Boston Sunday, December 13, at 7 A.M. Providence Depot.

Instruments must be ready and marked to-night, (Saturday), after the Concert.

C. A. ELLIS, MANAGER.
F. R. COMEE, ASS'T MANAGER.

SATURDAY, December 5, 1896.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

JANUARY ITINERARY.

Leave Boston Sunday, January 17, at 7, P. M. Providence Depot.

Arrive Philadelphia, Broad St. Station Penna. R. R., Monday, January 18, at 7 A.M.

CONTINENTAL HOTEL.

Rehearsal at Academy of Music, at 5 P.M.

Concert at Academy of Music at 8, P.M.

Hotel baggage not ready directly after the concert will be moved at owner's expense.

Leave Philadelphia, Tuesday, January 19, Baltimore & Ohio Depot, Twenty-fourth and Chestnut Sts., at 10.20, A.M.

Arrive Baltimore, Camden Street Station B. & O. R. R., at 12.40, P.M.

CARROLLTON HOTEL.

Leave Baltimore, Camden Street Station, B. & O. R. R., at 5.50 P.M.

Arrive Washington at 7.05 P.M.

Concert at Columbia Theatre, at 8, P.M.

Leave Washington, B. & O. R. R., at 10.40, P.M.

Arrive Baltimore, at 11.30 P. M.

Concert at Music Hall, Mount Royal Avenue and Cathedral St., Wednesday, January 20, at 8, P.M.

Hotel baggage not ready directly after the concert will be moved at owner's expense.

Leave Baltimore, Camden Street Station, B. & O. R. R., Wednesday, January 20, at midnight. Sleeping cars ready at 10, P.M.

Arrive New York, Depot Central R. R. of N. J., Thursday, January 21, at 7, A.M.

NEW YORK ADDRESS, SCHUBERTH'S MUSIC STORE, 23 UNION SQUARE.

Concert at Metropolitan Opera House, at 8, P.M.

Concert at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Friday, January 22, at 8, P.M.

Concert (Matinee) at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Saturday January 23, at 3 P.M.

Leave New York, Grand Central Depot, Saturday, January 23, at midnight. Sleeping Cars ready at 10.30, P.M.

Arrive Boston Sunday, January 24, at 7 A.M. Providence Depot.

Instruments must be ready and marked to-night, (Saturday), after the Concert.

C. A. ELLIS, MANAGER.
F. R. COMEE, ASS'T MANAGER.

SATURDAY, January 16, 1897.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

FEBRUARY ITINERARY.

Leave Boston Sunday, February 21, at 7, P. M. Providence Depot.

Arrive Philadelphia, Broad St. Station Penna. R. R., Monday, February 22, at 7 A.M.

CONTINENTAL HOTEL.

Concert at Academy of Music at 8, P.M.

Hotel baggage not ready directly after the concert will be moved at owner's expense.

Leave Philadelphia, Tuesday, February 23, Baltimore & Ohio Depot, Twenty-fourth and Chestnut Sts., at 10.20, A.M.

Arrive Baltimore, Camden Street Station B. & O. R. R., at 12.40, P.M.

CARROLLTON HOTEL.

Leave Baltimore, Camden Street Station, B. & O. R. R., at 5.50 P.M.

Arrive Washington at 7.05 P.M

Concert at Columbia Theatre, at 8, P.M.

Leave Washington, B. & O. R. R., at 10.40, P.M.

Arrive Baltimore, at 11.30 P. M.

Concert at Music Hall, Mount Royal Avenue and Cathedral St., Wednesday, February 24, at 8, P.M.

Hotel baggage not ready directly after the concert will be moved at owner's expense

Leave Baltimore, Camden Street Station, B. & O. R. R., Wednesday, February 24, at midnight. Sleeping cars ready at 10, P.M.

Arrive New York, Depot Central R. R. of N. J., Thursday, February 25, at 7, A.M.

NEW YORK ADDRESS, SCHUBERTH'S MUSIC STORE, 23 UNION SQUARE.

Concert at Metropolitan Opera House, at 8, P.M.

Concert at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Friday, February 26, at 8, P.M.

Concert (Matinee) at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Saturday February 27, at 3 P.M.

Leave New York, Grand Central Depot, Saturday, February 27, at midnight. Sleeping Cars ready at 10.30, P.M.

Arrive Boston Sunday, February 28, at 7 A.M. Providence Depot.

Instruments must be ready and marked to-night, (Saturday), after the Concert.

C. A. ELLIS, MANAGER.
F. R. COMEE, ASS'T MANAGER.

SATURDAY, February 20, 1897.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

SIXTEENTH SEASON, 1896-97.

MARCH ITINERARY.

Leave Boston Sunday, March 21, at 7, P. M. Providence Depot.

Arrive Philadelphia, Broad Street Station Penna. R. R, Monday, March 22, at 7 A.M.

CONTINENTAL HOTEL.

Concert at Academy of Music at 8, P.M.

Hotel baggage not ready directly after the concert will be moved at owner's expense.

Leave Philadelphia. Tuesday, March 23, Baltimore & Ohio Depot, Twenty-fourth and Chestnut Sts., at 10.20, A.M.

Arrive Baltimore, Camden Street Station B. & O. R. R., at 12.40, P.M.

CARROLLTON HOTEL.

Leave Baltimore, Camden Street Station, B. & O. R. R., at 5.50 P.M.

Arrive Washington at 7.05 P.M

Concert at Columbia Theatre. at 8, P.M.

Leave Washington, B. & O. R. R., at 10.40, P.M.

Arrive Baltimore, at 11.30 P. M.

Concert at Music Hall, Mount Royal Avenue and Cathedral St., Wednesday, March 24, at 8. P.M.

Hotel baggage not ready directly after the concert will be moved at owner's expense

Leave Baltimore, Camden Street Station, B. & O. R. R., Wednesday, March 24, at midnight. Sleeping cars ready at 10, P.M.

Arrive New York. Depot Central R. R. of N. J., Thursday, March 25, at 7, A.M.

NEW YORK ADDRESS, SCHUBERTH'S MUSIC STORE, 23 UNION SQUARE.

Concert at Metropolitan Opera House, at 8, P.M.

Concert at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Friday, March 26, at 8, P.M.

Concert (Matinee) at Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Saturday, March 27, at 3 P.M.

Leave New York. Grand Central Depot, Saturday, March 27, at midnight. Sleeping Cars ready at 10.30, P.M.

Arrive Boston Sunday, March 28, at 7 A.M. Providence Depot.

Instruments must be ready and marked to-night, (Saturday), after the Concert.

C. A. ELLIS, MANAGER.
F. R. COMEE, ASS'T MANAGER.

SATURDAY, March 20, 1897.

SUNDAY HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 68.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 6, 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The sixteenth annual series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Music Hall will begin on Oct. 17, and continue weekly until May 1, with occasional omissions to permit of the usual visits of the organization to other cities. This course of concerts will again offer a wealth of attractions to the musical public. The orchestra has reached a degree of perfection in its performances probably unequalled by any like organization in the world, and the programmes will be diversified enough to suit all tastes in classical music. Subscribers will incidentally have an opportunity to hear nearly all the important solo artists who are to be in America during the season. Announcements in detail are to be made next week, and will be awaited with interest. The auction sales of season tickets for the Friday afternoon and Saturday evening concerts will be held in Music Hall on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 21, 22, 24 and 25.

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The arrangements for the coming season make it certain that the Boston Symphony concerts will lack none of the features which have given them their great popularity in the past. The orchestra in its present form is the result of many years of selection and organization and a vast outlay of money. Some of the greatest vocalists and instrumentalists now before the public have been engaged to appear as soloists, and a series of brilliant performances may confidently be expected. Twenty-four matinees will be given on Fridays and 24 evening concerts on Saturdays at Music Hall, beginning Oct. 16 and 17. Announcements in detail will be made next week. The auction sales of season tickets for the public rehearsals and concerts will be held in Music Hall Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 21, 22, 24 and 25.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 6, 1896.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Boston symphony orchestra, whose performances give unalloyed pleasure and command the respect and admiration of the musical community, will give its 16th annual series of concerts at Music hall during the season of 1896-97. Twenty-four matinees will be given on Fridays, and 24 evening concerts on Saturdays, beginning Oct 16 and 17. Subscribers to these concerts will hear orchestral music of all schools performed with a degree of perfection not reached by any other organization, and incidentally will have an opportunity of listening to nearly all the prominent solo artists who are to be in America the coming season.

Later announcements will give details of the arrangements, which are well calculated to give exceptional attractiveness to the season. The auction sales of season tickets for the public rehearsals and concerts will be held at Music hall Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept 21, 22, 24 and 25.

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1896.

The first concert of the sixteenth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra takes place Saturday evening, October 17. The auction sale of seats will begin on Monday, September 21, and continue through the week.

Some Boston Symphony Notes.—Among dates arranged by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are the following: New York, February 19 and 20; Philadelphia, February 22; Washington, February 23; Baltimore, February 24; New York, February 25; Brooklyn, February 26, and Providence, March 10.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, SEPT. 13, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The annual series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the leading feature of Boston's musical season, is announced in another column to-day. The 16th season of this famous organization will begin October 17th, and will be of exceptional interest.

The orchestra will be the same in size and membership as last season. Mr. Paur has devoted much time during the summer to the arrangement of programmes which will include many interesting novelties, in addition to a great variety of standard works.

The list of soloists already engaged is very attractive. It includes the names of some of the most eminent artists.

Twenty-four concerts will be given at Music Hall on Saturday evenings, and twenty-four public rehearsals on Friday afternoons. The auction sales of season tickets will be held in Music Hall on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, September 21, 22, 24 and 25, commencing at 10 A. M. each day.

THE BOSTON BUDGET

Aug 30 1896

....A list of the soloists who have appeared in the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since its founding in 1881, compiled by Mr. F. R. Comee, is given in the last Musical Courier. The figures indicate the number of appearances of each artist, Mr. Franz Kneisel heading the list with a total of fifteen, closely followed by Mr. Loeffler and Mr. Baermann with thirteen each. Mr. T. Adamowski appeared ten times, and Miss Gertrude Franklin nine times. Eight concerts each are credited to Miss Emma Juch, Mrs. Georg Henschel and Miss Mary How. Mr. William J. Winch and Mr. Fritz Giese each had seven appearances, and Mme. Fursch-Madi, Miss Emily Winant, Mr. Theodore Toedt, Mr. Georg Henschel, Mr. Max Heinrich, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Mr. B. J. Lang, Mr. Otto Roth and Mr. Alvin Schroeder each appeared five times. Annie Louise Carey was the soloist at the first concert. Soprano—Mrs. E. Humphrey Allen, three; Miss Louise Baldwin; Miss Henrietta Beebe; Miss Lillian Blauvelt; Mme. Gabriella Boema; Miss Caroline Gardner Clarke, two; Mme. Emma Eames, two; Mrs. Elene B. Eaton; Miss Gertrude Franklin, nine; Mme. Fursch-Madi, five; Miss Marguerite Hall, two; Mrs. Georg Henschel, eight; Miss Medora Henson; Miss Clara Hunt; Miss Marie Jahn; Mme. Steinbach Jahns; Miss Emma Juch, eight; Miss Felicia Kaschoska; Miss Fanny Kellogg; Mrs. H. F. Knowles; Mme. Lilli Lehmann, three; Mme. Amalie Materna; Mme. Melba, two; Mme. Antonia Mielke; Mrs. Arthur Nikisch, three; Mme. Lillian Nordica, four; Miss Rosa Olitzka; Miss Kate Rolla; Mme. De Vere Sapio; Miss Hattie Louise Simms; Mrs. Marie Barnard Smith, two; Miss Rose Stewart; Mme. Basta Tavary; Miss Emma Thursby; Miss Antoinette Trebelli; Miss Katharine Van Arnheim, two; Miss Priscilla White; Miss Harriet S. Whittier. Alto—Miss Annie Louise Cary; Miss Anna Drasdil; Miss Gertrude Edmands, three; Miss Hope Glenn; Miss Mary H. How, eight; Miss Agnes Huntington; Mme. Amalie Joachim; Miss Louise Leimer, two; Miss Lena Little; Miss Annie Mitchell; Miss Sara Peakes; Miss Mathilde Phillips; Miss Louise Rollwagen, three; Miss Lillian Carl Smith; Miss Ita Welsh; Miss Abbie Whinnery; Miss Emily Winant, five; Mrs. Julie M. Wyman, four; Tenor—Mr. Charles R. Adams, four; Mr. Ben. Davies; Mr. Andreas Dippel; Mr. Wilhelm Heinrich; Mr. Jules Jordan; Mr. Paul Kalisch, two; Mr. George J. Parker, two; Mr. Anton Schott; Mr. Theodore Toedt, five; Mr. Charles F. Webber; Mr. William J. Winch, seven. Bass—Mr. D. M. Babcock, two; Mr. Jacob Benzing; Mr. V. Cirillo, two; Mr. Emil Fischer, four; Mr. A. F. Harlow; Mr. C. E. Hay, three; Mr. Max Heinrich, five; Mr. Georg Henschel, five; Mr. Eliot Hubbard, two; Mr. Gardner S. Lamson; Mr. J.A. Libby; Mr. Carl E. Martin; Mr. Heinrich Meyn, four; Mr. Theodor Reichmann; Mr. Franz Remmertz; Mr. Sullivan A. Sargent. Piano—Mr. Eugen d'Albert; Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, four; Mr. Carl Baermann, thirteen; Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, five; Mr. Otto Bendix; Mr. Richard Burmeister; Mr. Ferruccio B. Busoni, three; Mrs. Anna Steiniger Clark, two; Teresa Carreño; Miss Eugenia Castellano; Mr. Carl Faelten, four; Mr. Arthur Foote; Mr. Arthur Friedheim; Miss Mary E. Garlichs; Mr. Alfred Grunfeld; Miss Marie Heimlicher; Mr. Georg Henschel; Mr. Alfred Hollins; Mme. Helen Hopekirk, two; Mr. Henry Holden Huss, two; Mr. Rafael Joseffy, four; Mme. Julia Rive King, two; Mr. B. J. Lang, five; Mrs. Ernest Lent; Mr. Louis Maas, two; Mr. E. A. MacDowell, three; Mr. George Magrath; Miss Adele Margulies, three; Mr. George Nowell, two; Miss Mary E Obrion, three; Mr. Vladimir De Pachmann; Mr. Ignace J. Paderewski, two; Mrs. Emil Paur; Mr. Ernst Perabo; Mr. John A. Preston; Miss Olga von Radecki, three; Mr. Xaver Scharwenka; Mme. Madeline Schiller, three; Mr. William H. Sherwood, three; Mr. Martinus Sieveking; Mr. Carl Stasny; Mr. George W. Sumner; Miss Antoinette Szumowska, two; Mr. H. G. Tucker, three; Miss Etelka Utassi; Mr. Arthur Whiting; Mrs. Fanny Bloomfield Zeisler, four; Violin—Mr. T. Adamowski, ten; Mr. Adolph Brodsky; Mr. Leandro Campanari, three; Mr. Alfred De Seve, two; Mr. Franz Kneisel, fifteen; Mr. Leopold Lichtenberg, Mme. Terese Liebe, Mr. Bernhard Listemann, four; Mr. C. M. Loeffler, thirteen; Mr. Emil Mahr, Mr. Henri Marteau, Mr. M. Marsick, two; Mr. Willis Nowell; Mr. Franz Ondricek; Miss Maud Powell; Mr. Otto Roth, five; Mr. Emil Sauret; Mr. Louis Schmidt, two; Mr. Isidor Schnitzler, two; Mr. César Thomson; Mme. Camilla Urso; Mr. Eugene Ysaye. Violoncello—Mr. Carl Bayrhoffer; Mr. Fritz Giese, seven; Mr. Anton Hekking, two; Mr. Theodore Liebbe; Mr. Wilhelm Muller, two; Mr. Alwin Schroeder, five; Mr. Leo Schultz, four. Flute—Mr. E. M. Heindl, two; Mr Charles Molé, two. Oboe—Mr. A. Sautet. Clarinet—Mr. E. Strasser. Horn—Mr. Xaver Reiter. Harp—Mr. A. Freygang; Mr. Heinrich Schuecker. Readers—Mr. George Riddle, three; Mr. Howard Malcolm Ticknor, two.

....The "rainbow trout," which Maine's fish commissioners imported from California, evidently have been appropriately named. The commissioners have been hatching them for several years now, and placed them in a number of streams and lakes, but the first instance of one being taken by rod and line has yet to be recorded. More than that, their eggs hatch very poorly, and they are not so good a table fish as the native square tails (salmo fontinalis) or even the brown trout. They are a very handsome fish, however, and attain a weight of eight or ten pounds. The brown trout are much more easily propagated; in fact, they have proved a very hardy fish, very gamey and of excellent flavor. They have been placed in several ponds, including Sabatis, Wayne and the one at Poland Springs. Several of these trout have been taken by rod and line. When the native square tails can be propagated so successfully in our waters, and are so satisfactory in every respect, of what use is it to go to chasing rainbows because they have fins on them?

The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPT. 12, 1896.

THE SYMPHONIES.

Boston without her Symphony concerts and rehearsals would be worse than "Hamlet" with Hamlet left out; in fact, it would not be Boston at all. We may have to do without opera, but we have 24 of the best concerts in the world, and an equal number of rehearsals quite as fine. Indeed, it is a musical education in itself to attend the course of our Symphony concerts. The orchestra this year will number as fine players as are to be found in the world, and will be led by that most distinguished of conductors, Emil Paur.

The sale of seats will open September 21 and 22, at Music Hall, when the tickets for rehearsals will be offered at auction; and on September 24 and 25, when concert seats will be sold on the same plan.

The rehearsals will begin October 17, and the Saturday evening concerts on October 18. But the sale of seats opens at Music Hall week after next.

THE BOSTON TIMES.

BOSTON, SUNDAY, SEPT. 13, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The goings and comings of Boston's best social and musical clans are gauged by the symphony concerts more than by any other one factor of amusement which the season offers. Every one goes to the symphonies. Her attendance at the Friday afternoon rehearsals is a telling passport for the young débutante into the social world, and older maidens and matrons who know the requirements of popularity in the best sets always have season tickets for the symphonies. But if it is the social butterflies who make the audience always so brilliant, and, be it whispered, the series of concerts the financial success that they are, there is no lack of true music lovers among the patrons, people who understand and appreciate the best in music, and who feel an indebtedness to Manager Ellis for this series of concerts, which easily take rank with the best in the world.

The sixteenth season of 1896, and '97 will consist of twenty-four public rehearsals on Friday afternoons, beginning Oct. 16, and twenty-four concerts on Saturday evenings, beginning Oct. 17. The regular price of tickets for the series of concerts and for the series of rehearsals is $12 and $7.50, according to location.

The $12 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music hall, Monday, Sept. 21, at 10 a. m.

The $7.50 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music hall, Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 10 a. m.

The $12 seats for the concerts will be sold at auction, at Music hall, Thursday, Sept. 24, at 10 a. m.

The $7.50 seats for the concerts will be sold in like manner, at the same place, Friday, Sept. 25, at 10 a. m.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.

MONDAY MORNING, SEPT. 14, 1896.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PLANS

The annual series of performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Music Hall will begin on Oct. 16, and continue weekly until May 1, with occasional omissions to permit of the usual visits of the orchestra to other cities.

The list of soloists is particularly attractive. Among the vocalists will be Melba, Plancon, Campanari and probably Eames. The pianists will be Teresa Carreno, who has not played in America for seven years, Aus der Ohe, Joseffy, Sieveking and Rosenthal, who comes after his recent sensational successes in Germany and England.

Halir, the great German violinist, has been secured, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz from the ranks of the orchestra will be equally welcome. The orchestral numbers of the earlier programmes are as follows:—

FIRST CONCERT.

Overture, Benvenuto Cellini	Berlioz
Selection from Ophelie (First time.)	Bourgault-Ducoudray
Suite op 49	Saint-Saens
Symphony No. 8	Beethoven
Overture, Euryanthe	Weber

SECOND CONCERT.

Overture, Gwendoline (First time.)	Chabrier
Solo number
Rhapsodie No. 3	Dvorak
Symphony	Mozart

THIRD CONCERT.

Symphony (First time.)	Mrs. Beach
Solo number
Variations	Brahms
Overture, Freischuetz	Weber

FOURTH CONCERT.

Overture, Richard III	Volkmann
Solo number
Entr' Acte, Ingwelde (First time.)	Schilling
Solo number
Symphony No. 9	Schubert

The Telegram

MONDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1896.

Sale Opened Finely.

The sale of seats for the Boston Symphoney orchestra concerts open at the Infantry hall box office this forenoon in a manner which shows that the attendance this season is to be the largest in the history of the orchestra's visits to Providence. Assistant Manager Comee was present at the opening, and he was surprised at the handsome fashion in which the public responded to the announcements. The number of tickets sold was far beyond anything he anticipated. Considerable competition was manifested by purchasers, and it was but a short time before hundreds of choice seats had been taken. The concerts this fall and winter are to be the finest ever given by the orchestra in Rhode Island.

BOSTON [illegible]

[illegible] OF NEW ENGLAND.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The announcement of the series of public rehearsals and concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Music Hall for the coming season, promises that these entertainments will excel any in the history of this organization. The orchestra has now reached that efficiency in its performances which satisfies the most exacting critics. The New York Herald made the following criticism after the concert in New York on March 26:

"It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening. Such tonal beauty—Klangschonheit, as the Germans have it—has not been listened to in a long while. The strings sounded simply intoxicating and the brass and wood winds were hardly less fine.

"A bientot, ye Boston symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like mastersingers, all of you."

Among the soloists already engaged are Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Miss Aus der Ohe, M. Plancon, M. Rosenthal, M. Campanari, M. Halir, M. Sieveking, M. Kneisel, M. Adamowski and others who will be announced later.

The annual sale of season tickets by auction takes place in Music Hall the coming week. On Monday the $12 seats for the rehearsals will be sold, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning. Tuesday the $7.50 seats and Thursday and Friday the tickets for the concerts.

"MUSICAL ECHOES."

The auction sale of tickets of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Emil Paur conductor, which opens its sixteenth season Saturday evening, Oct. 17, and continues to May 1, giving in all twenty-four concerts, and the same number of public rehearsals, which are held every Friday afternoon, will take place at Music Hall, beginning Monday, Sept. 21, and continuing Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, the sale beginning at 10 a. m. each day.

The management has been very fortunate this year, and at this early date is able to announce an attractive list of artists. The vocalists engaged are Melba, Plancon and Campanari, and an acceptance is expected from Eames within a few days. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal, who is said to have developed into a veritable wizard of the piano since his appearance in Boston some ten years ago, and Teresa Carreno, always a favorite, who has not been heard here for seven years. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir of Berlin, the greatest of Germany's violinists, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz, from the ranks of the orchestra, will be no less welcome.

* * *

MUSICAL MATTERS.

"The Gondoliers" at the Castle Square Theatre.

Approaching Series of Symphony Concerts—The Sales of Seats—A Record for Fifteen Years—The Kneisel Quartet's Twelfth Season—Note and Comment.

The approaching series of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra, seconded by an imposing array of soloists, promises to eclipse any in the history of the organization. The announcements made last week have aroused widespread interest and numberless inquiries received indicate that there will be a lively demand for seats at the auction sales which begin tomorrow at Music Hall. These sales create a wide range of prices, and while some particularly desirable locations command high figures many hundreds of good seats are sold each year at merely nominal premiums. For this reason purchasers will find personal attendance advantageous. The $12 season tickets for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals will be sold at Music Hall tomorrow (Monday); the $7.50 rehearsal seats will be sold on Tuesday and the $12 and $7.50 tickets for the Saturday evening concerts on Thursday and Friday respectively. The sales will begin each day at 10 A. M. The concerts will begin Oct. 16. Among the soloists will be Mesdames Melba, Carreno, Aus der Ohe, Messrs. Plancon, Campanari, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Sieveking, Burmeister, Halir, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schnitzler, Schroeder and Schulz. Others will be announced later.

SUNDAY HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 68.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 6, 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The sixteenth annual series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Music Hall will begin on Oct. 17, and continue weekly until May 1, with occasional omissions to permit of the usual visits of the organization to other cities. This course of concerts will again offer a wealth of attractions to the musical public. The orchestra has reached a degree of perfection in its performances probably unequalled by any like organization in the world, and the programmes will be diversified enough to suit all tastes in classical music. Subscribers will incidentally have an opportunity to hear nearly all the important solo artists who are to be in America during the season. Announcements in detail are to be made next week, and will be awaited with interest. The auction sales of season tickets for the Friday afternoon and Saturday evening concerts will be held in Music Hall on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 21, 22, 24 and 25.

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The arrangements for the coming season make it certain that the Boston Symphony concerts will lack none of the features which have given them their great popularity in the past. The orchestra in its present form is the result of many years of selection and organization and a vast outlay of money. Some of the greatest vocalists and instrumentalists now before the public have been engaged to appear as soloists, and a series of brilliant performances may confidently be expected. Twenty-four matinees will be given on Fridays and 24 evening concerts on Saturdays at Music Hall, beginning Oct. 16 and 17. Announcements in detail will be made next week. The auction sales of season tickets for the public rehearsals and concerts will be held in Music Hall Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 21, 22, 24 and 25.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 6, 1896.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Boston symphony orchestra, whose performances give unalloyed pleasure and command the respect and admiration of the musical community, will give its 16th annual series of concerts at Music hall during the season of 1896-97. Twenty-four matinees will be given on Fridays, and 24 evening concerts on Saturdays, beginning Oct 16 and 17. Subscribers to these concerts will hear orchestral music of all schools performed with a degree of perfection not reached by any other organization, and incidentally will have an opportunity of listening to nearly all the prominent solo artists who are to be in America the coming season.

Later announcements will give details of the arrangements, which are well calculated to give exceptional attractiveness to the season. The auction sales of season tickets for the public rehearsals and concerts will be held at Music hall Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept 21, 22, 24 and 25.

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1896.

The first concert of the sixteenth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra takes place Saturday evening, October 17. The auction sale of seats will begin on Monday, September 21, and continue through the week.

Some Boston Symphony Notes.—Among dates arranged by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are the following: New York, February 19 and 20; Philadelphia, February 22; Washington, February 23; Baltimore, February 24; New York, February 25; Brooklyn, February 26, and Providence, March 10.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, SEPT. 13, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The annual series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the leading feature of Boston's musical season, is announced in another column to-day. The 16th season of this famous organization will begin October 17th, and will be of exceptional interest.

The orchestra will be the same in size and membership as last season. Mr. Paur has devoted much time during the summer to the arrangement of programmes which will include many interesting novelties, in addition to a great variety of standard works.

The list of soloists already engaged is very attractive. It includes the names of some of the most eminent artists.

Twenty-four concerts will be given at Music Hall on Saturday evenings, and twenty-four public rehearsals on Friday afternoons. The auction sales of season tickets will be held in Music Hall on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, September 21, 22, 24 and 25, commencing at 10 A. M. each day.

THE BOSTON BUDGET

Aug 30 1896

....A list of the soloists who have appeared in the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since its founding in 1881, compiled by Mr. F. R. Comee, is given in the last Musical Courier. The figures indicate the number of appearances of each artist, Mr. Franz Kneisel heading the list with a total of fifteen, closely followed by Mr. Loeffler and Mr. Baermann with thirteen each. Mr. T. Adamowski appeared ten times, and Miss Gertrude Franklin nine times. Eight concerts each are credited to Miss Emma Juch, Mrs. Georg Henschel and Miss Mary How. Mr. William J. Winch and Mr. Fritz Giese each had seven appearances, and Mme. Fursch-Madi, Miss Emily Winant, Mr. Theodore Toedt, Mr. Georg Henschel, Mr. Max Heinrich, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Mr. B. J. Lang, Mr. Otto Roth and Mr. Alvin Schroeder each appeared five times. Annie Louise Carey was the soloist at the first concert. Soprano—Mrs. E. Humphrey Allen, three; Miss Louise Baldwin; Miss Henrietta Beebe; Miss Lillian Blauvelt; Mme. Gabriella Boema; Miss Caroline Gardner Clarke, two; Mme. Emma Eames, two; Mrs. Elene B. Eaton; Miss Gertrude Franklin, nine; Mme. Fursch-Madi, five; Miss Marguerite Hall, two; Mrs. Georg Henschel, eight; Miss Medora Henson; Miss Clara Hunt; Miss Marie Jahn; Mme. Steinbach Jahns; Miss Emma Juch, eight; Miss Felicia Kaschoska; Miss Fanny Kellogg; Mrs. H. F. Knowles; Mme. Lilli Lehmann, three; Mme. Amalie Materna; Mme. Melba, two; Mme. Antonia Mielke; Mrs. Arthur Nikisch, three; Mme. Lillian Nordica, four; Miss Rosa Olitzka; Miss Kate Rolla; Mme. De Vere Sapio; Miss Hattie Louise Simms; Mrs. Marie Barnard Smith, two; Miss Rose Stewart; Mme. Basta Tavary; Miss Emma Thursby; Miss Antoinette Trebelli; Miss Katharine Van Arnheim, two; Miss Priscilla White; Miss Harriet S. Whittier. Alto—Miss Annie Louise Cary; Miss Anna Drasdil; Miss Gertrude Edmands, three; Miss Hope Glenn; Miss Mary H. How, eight; Miss Agnes Huntington; Mme. Amalie Joachim; Miss Louise Leimer, two; Miss Lena Little; Miss Annie Mitchell; Miss Sara Peakes; Miss Mathilde Phillips; Miss Louise Rollwagen, three; Miss Lillian Carl Smith; Miss Ita Welsh; Miss Abbie Whinnery; Miss Emily Winant, five; Mrs. Julie M. Wyman, four; Tenor—Mr. Charles R. Adams, four; Mr. Ben. Davies; Mr. Andreas Dippel; Mr. Wilhelm Heinrich; Mr. Jules Jordan; Mr. Paul Kalisch, two; Mr. George J. Parker, two; Mr. Anton Schott; Mr. Theodore Toedt, five; Mr. Charles F. Webber; Mr. William J. Winch, seven. Bass—Mr. D. M. Babcoock, two; Mr. Jacob Benzing; Mr. V. Cirillo, two; Mr. Emil Fischer, four; Mr. A. F. Harlow; Mr. C. E. Hay, three; Mr. Max Heinrich, five; Mr. Georg Henschel, five; Mr. Eliot Hubbard, two; Mr. Gardner S. Lamson; Mr. J. A. Libby; Mr. Carl E. Martin; Mr. Heinrich Meyn, four; Mr. Theodor Reichmann; Mr. Franz Remmertz; Mr. Sullivan A. Sargent. Piano—Mr. Eugen d'Albert; Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, four; Mr. Carl Baermann, thirteen; Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, five; Mr. Otto Bendix; Mr. Richard Burmeister; Mr. Ferruccio B. Busoni, three; Mrs. Anna Steiniger Clark, two; Teresa Carreño; Miss Eugenia Castellano; Mr. Carl Faelten, four; Mr. Arthur Foote; Mr. Arthur Friedheim; Miss Mary E. Garlichs; Mr. Alfred Grunfeld; Miss Marie Heimlicher; Mr. Georg Henschel; Mr. Alfred Hollins; Mme. Helen Hopekirk, two; Mr. Henry Holden Huss, two; Mr. Rafael Joseffy, four; Mme. Julia Rive King, two; Mr. B. J. Lang, five; Mrs. Ernest Lent; Mr. Louis Maas, two; Mr. E. A. MacDowell, three; Mr. George Magrath; Miss Adele Margulies, three; Mr. George Nowell, two; Miss Mary E Obrion, three; Mr. Vladimir De Pachmann; Mr. Ignace J. Paderewski, two; Mrs. Emil Paur; Mr. Ernst Perabo; Mr. John A. Preston; Miss Olga von Radecki, three; Mr. Xaver Scharwenka; Mme. Madeline Schiller, three; Mr. William H. Sherwood, three; Mr. Martinus Sieveking; Mr. Carl Stasny; Mr. George W. Sumner; Miss Antoinette Szumowska, two; Mr. H. G. Tucker, three; Miss Etelka Utassi; Mr. Arthur Whiting; Mrs. Fanny Bloomfield Zeisler, four; Violin—Mr. T. Adamowski, ten; Mr. Adolph Brodsky; Mr. Leandro Campanari, three; Mr. Alfred De Seve, two; Mr. Franz Kneisel, fifteen; Mr. Leopold Lichtenberg, Mme. Terese Liebe, Mr. Bernhard Listemann, four; Mr. C. M. Loeffler, thirteen; Mr. Emil Mahr, Mr. Henri Marteau, Mr. M. Marsick, two; Mr. Willis Nowell; Mr. Franz Ondricek; Miss Maud Powell; Mr. Otto Roth, five; Mr. Emil Sauret; Mr. Louis Schmidt, two; Mr. Isidor Schnitzler, two; Mr. César Thomson; Mme. Camilla Urso; Mr. Eugene Ysaye. Violoncello—Mr. Carl Bayrhoffer; Mr. Fritz Giese, seven; Mr. Anton Hekking, two; Mr. Theodore Liebbe; Mr. Wilhelm Muller, two; Mr. Alwin Schroeder, five; Mr. Leo Schultz, four. Flute—Mr. E. M. Heindl, two; Mr Charles Molé, two. Oboe—Mr. A. Sautet. Clarinet—Mr. E. Strasser. Horn—Mr. Xaver Reiter. Harp—Mr. A. Freygang; Mr. Heinrich Schuecker. Readers—Mr. George Riddle, three; Mr. Howard Malcolm Ticknor, two.

....The "rainbow trout," which Maine's fish commissioners imported from California, evidently have been appropriately named. The commissioners have been hatching them for several years now, and placed them in a number of streams and lakes, but the first instance of one being taken by rod and line has yet to be recorded. More than that, their eggs hatch very poorly, and they are not so good a table fish as the native square tails (salmo fontinalis) or even the brown trout. They are a very handsome fish, however, and attain a weight of eight or ten pounds. The brown trout are much more easily propagated; in fact, they have proved a very hardy fish, very gamey and of excellent flavor. They have been placed in several ponds, including Sabatis, Wayne and the one at Poland Springs. Several of these trout have been taken by rod and line. When the native square tails can be propagated so successfully in our waters, and are so satisfactory in every respect, of what use is it to go to chasing rainbows because they have fins on them?

The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPT. 12, 1896.

THE SYMPHONIES.

Boston without her Symphony concerts and rehearsals would be worse than "Hamlet" with Hamlet left out; in fact, it would not be Boston at all. We may have to do without opera, but we have 24 of the best concerts in the world, and an equal number of rehearsals quite as fine. Indeed, it is a musical education in itself to attend the course of our Symphony concerts. The orchestra this year will number as fine players as are to be found in the world, and will be led by that most distinguished of conductors, Emil Paur.

The sale of seats will open September 21 and 22, at Music Hall, when the tickets for rehearsals will be offered at auction; and on September 24 and 25, when concert seats will be sold on the same plan.

The rehearsals will begin October 17, and the Saturday evening concerts on October 18. But the sale of seats opens at Music Hall week after next.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, SEPT. 13, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The goings and comings of Boston's best social and musical clans are gauged by the symphony concerts more than by any other one factor of amusement which the season offers. Every one goes to the symphonies. Her attendance at the Friday afternoon rehearsals is a telling passport for the young débutante into the social world, and older maidens and matrons who know the requirements of popularity in the best sets, always have season tickets for the symphonies. But if it is the social butterflies who make the audience always so brilliant, and, be it whispered, the series of concerts the financial success that they are, there is no lack of true music lovers among the patrons, people who understand and appreciate the best in music, and who feel an indebtedness to Manager Ellis for this series of concerts, which easily take rank with the best in the world.

The sixteenth season of 1896, and '97 will consist of twenty-four public rehearsals on Friday afternoons, beginning Oct. 16, and twenty-four concerts on Saturday evenings, beginning Oct. 17. The regular price of tickets for the series of concerts and for the series of rehearsals is $12 and $7.50, according to location.

The $12 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music hall, Monday, Sept. 21, at 10 a. m.

The $7.50 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction, at Music hall, Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 10 a. m.

The $12 seats for the concerts will be sold at auction, at Music hall, Thursday, Sept. 24, at 10 a. m.

The $7.50 seats for the concerts will be sold in like manner, at the same place, Friday, Sept. 25, at 10 a. m.

Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

Established 1813.

The Official Paper of the State.

The Official Paper of the City.

MONDAY MORNING, SEPT. 14, 1896.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PLANS

The annual series of performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Music Hall will begin on Oct. 16, and continue weekly until May 1, with occasional omissions to permit of the usual visits of the orchestra to other cities.

The list of soloists is particularly attractive. Among the vocalists will be Melba, Plancon, Campanari and probably Eames. The pianists will be Teresa Carreno, who has not played in America for seven years, Aus der Ohe, Joseffy, Sieveking and Rosenthal, who comes after his recent sensational successes in Germany and England.

Halir, the great German violinist, has been secured, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz from the ranks of the orchestra will be equally welcome. The orchestral numbers of the earlier programmes are as follows:—

FIRST CONCERT.

Overture, Benvenuto Cellini	Berlioz
Selection from Ophelie (First time.)	Bourgault-Ducoudray
Suite op 49	Saint-Saens
Symphony No. 8	Beethoven
Overture, Euryanthe	Weber

SECOND CONCERT.

Overture, Gwendoline (First time.)	Chabrier
Solo number
Rhapsodie No. 3	Dvorak
Symphony	Mozart

THIRD CONCERT.

Symphony (First time.)	Mrs. Beach
Solo number
Variations	Brahms
Overture, Freischuetz	Weber

FOURTH CONCERT.

Overture, Richard III	Volkmann
Solo number
Entr' Acte Ingwelde (First time.)	Schilling
Solo number
Symphony No. 9	Schubert

The Telegram

MONDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1896.

Sale Opened Finely.

The sale of seats for the Boston Symphoney orchestra concerts open at the Infantry hall box office this forenoon in a manner which shows that the attendance this season is to be the largest in the history of the orchestra's visits to Providence. Assistant Manager Comee was present at the opening, and he was surprised at the handsome fashion in which the public responded to the announcements. The number of tickets sold was far beyond anything he anticipated. Considerable competition was manifested by purchasers, and it was but a short time before hundreds of choice seats had been taken. The concerts this fall and winter are to be the finest ever given by the orchestra in Rhode Island.

BOSTON POST,

The Representative Democratic Paper OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 20, 1896.
(Copyright, 1896, Post Publishing Company.)

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The announcement of the series of public rehearsals and concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Music Hall for the coming season, promises that these entertainments will excel any in the history of this organization. The orchestra has now reached that efficiency in its performances which satisfies the most exacting critics. The New York Herald made the following criticism after the concert in New York on March 26:

"It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening. Such tonal beauty—Klangschonheit, as the Germans have it—has not been listened to in a long while. The strings sounded simply intoxicating and the brass and wood winds were hardly less fine.

"A bientot, ye Boston symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like mastersingers, all of you."

Among the soloists already engaged are Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Miss Aus der Ohe, M. Plancon, M. Rosenthal, M. Campanari, M. Halir, M. Sieveking, M. Kneisel, M. Adamowski and others who will be announced later.

The annual sale of season tickets by auction takes place in Music Hall the coming week. On Monday the $12 seats for the rehearsals will be sold, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning. Tuesday the $7.50 seats and Thursday and Friday the tickets for the concerts.

"MUSICAL ECHOES."

The auction sale of tickets of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Emil Paur conductor, which opens its sixteenth season Saturday evening, Oct. 17, and continues to May 1, giving in all twenty-four concerts, and the same number of public rehearsals, which are held every Friday afternoon, will take place at Music Hall, beginning Monday, Sept. 21, and continuing Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, the sale beginning at 10 a. m. each day.

The management has been very fortunate this year, and at this early date is able to announce an attractive list of artists. The vocalists engaged are Melba Plancon and Campanari, and an acceptance is expected from Eames within a few days. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal, who is said to have developed into a veritable wizard of the piano since his appearance in Boston some ten years ago, and Teresa Carreno, always a favorite, who has not been heard here for seven years. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir of Berlin, the greatest of Germany's violinists, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz, from the ranks of the orchestra, will be no less welcome.

* * * * * * * * *

MUSICAL MATTERS.

"The Gondoliers" at the Castle Square Theatre.

Approaching Series of Symphony Concerts—The Sales of Seats—A Record for Fifteen Years—The Kneisel Quartet's Twelfth Season—Note and Comment.

The approaching series of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra, seconded by an imposing array of soloists, promises to eclipse any in the history of the organization. The announcements made last week have aroused widespread interest and numberless inquiries received indicate that there will be a lively demand for seats at the auction sales which begin tomorrow at Music Hall. These sales create a wide range of prices, and while some particularly desirable locations command high figures many hundreds of good seats are sold each year at merely nominal premiums. For this reason purchasers will find personal attendance advantageous. The $12 season tickets for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals will be sold at Music Hall tomorrow (Monday); the $7.50 rehearsal seats will be sold on Tuesday and the $12 and $7.50 tickets for the Saturday evening concerts on Thursday and Friday respectively. The sales will begin each day at 10 A. M. The concerts will begin Oct. 16. Among the soloists will be Mesdames Melba, Carreno, Aus der Ohe, Messrs. Plancon, Campanari, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Sieveking, Burmeister, Halir, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schnitzler, Schroeder and Schulz. Others will be announced later.

SUNDAY HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C, NO. 75.

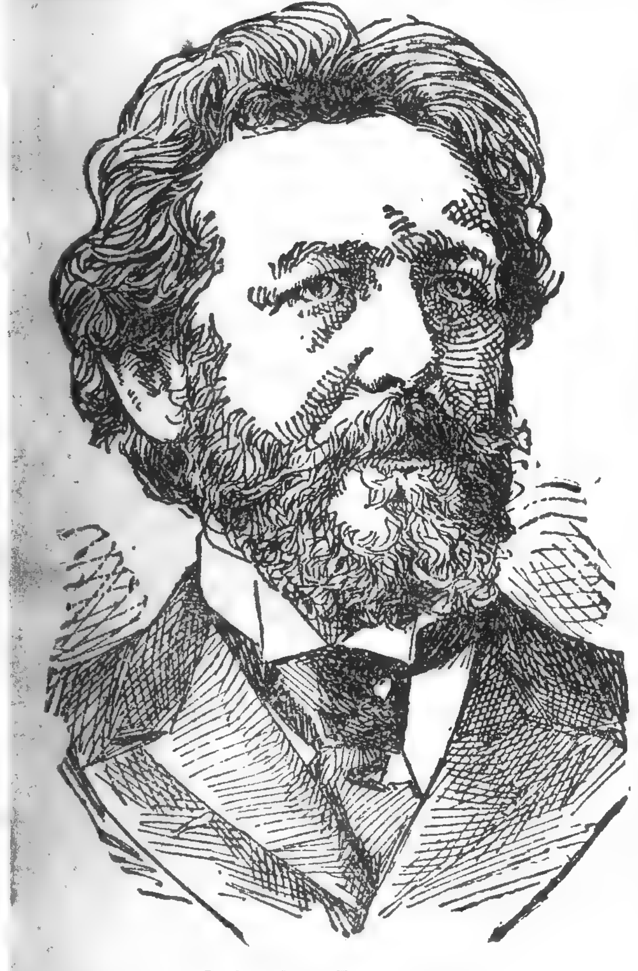
SUNDAY, SEPT. 13, 1896.

ATTRACTIVE LIST OF ARTISTS

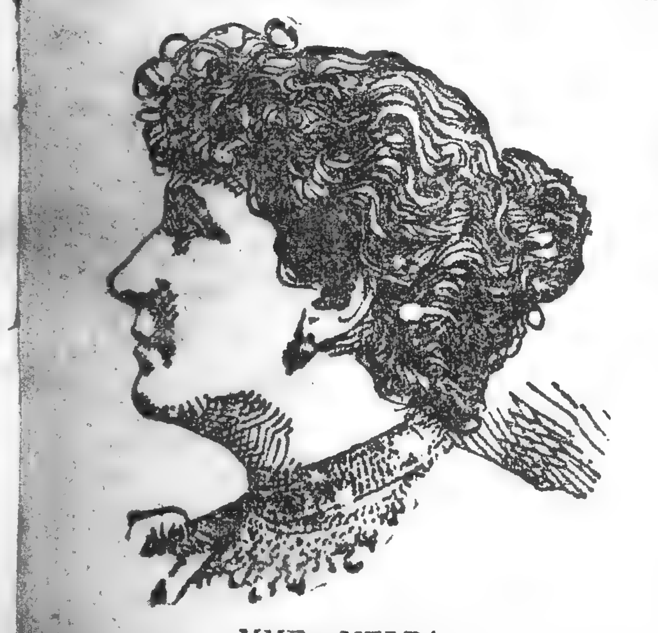
Secured for Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts.

Fine Outlook for the Sixteenth Season of This Excellent Organization—List of Orchestral Numbers of Some of the Earlier Programmes—The Auction Sales of Tickets.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will enter upon its 16th season this autumn, and will again offer the musical public an extended series of grand concerts, in which no element will be lacking that can add to their musical value or to their attractiveness. The musicianship, skill and devotion of the members of this organization, and the thoroughness with which all its performances are prepared have given it pre-eminence among the orchestras of the world, and it is now recognized abroad as well as at home as the foremost orchestral organization of the day. It will begin its next season with its membership practically intact, only a few necessary changes having been made since last year. M. Jacquet succeeds M. Mole as first flute, and M. Bour has been engaged as second oboe. Both these artists come with a fine reputation, won in the Thomas and Damrosch orchestras. The orchestra will number 90 players, and will again be under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur. All the members will have returned to Boston by the end of this month, and private rehearsals will be begun at an early date. During the summer the banner of the organization has been upheld in Europe by some of its principal players, who have appeared with credit in the concert halls of London, Paris and Berlin.

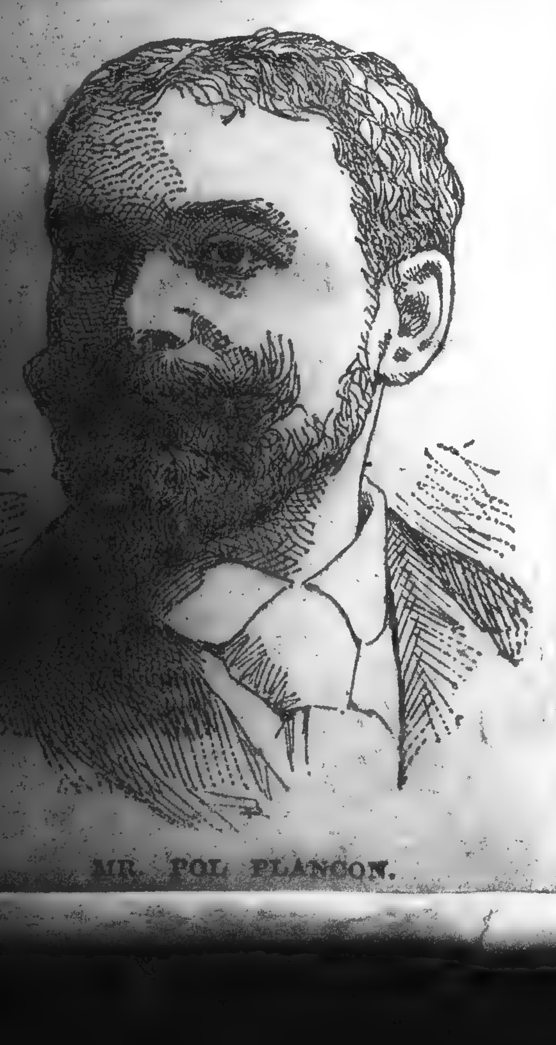


MR. EMIL PAUR,
Conductor.

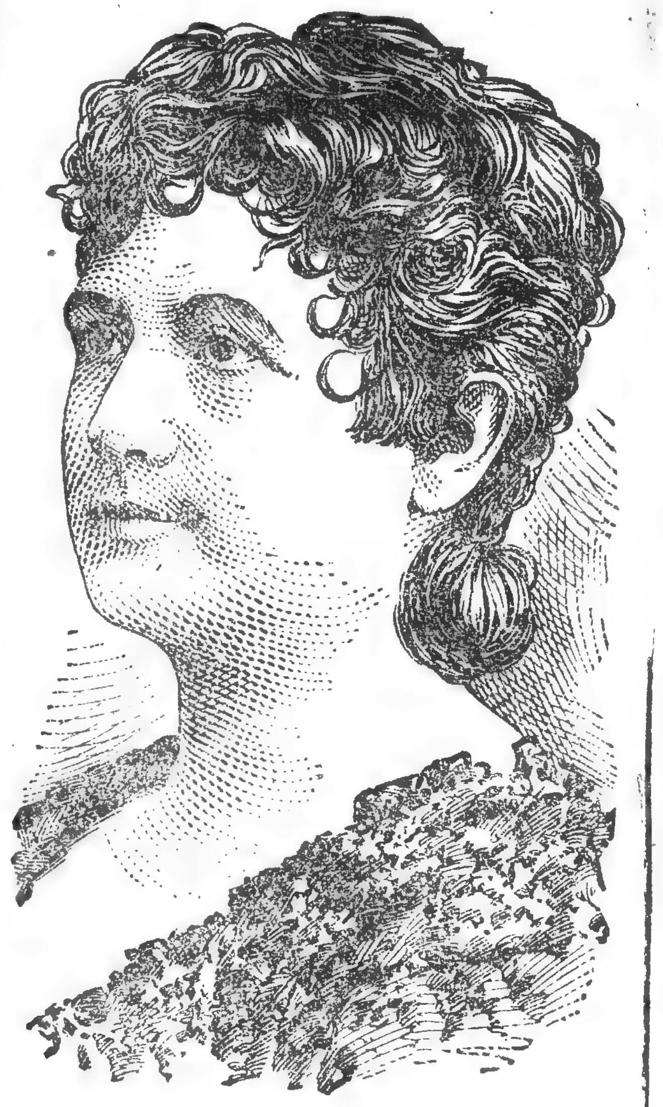


MME. MELBA.

The Boston season will comprise, as usual, 24 matinees on Fridays and 24 evening concerts on Saturdays at Music Hall, beginning Oct. 16 and 17. In the engagement of soloists the management has been especially fortunate this year, and never before has it been possible, at so early a date, to announce so attractive a list of artists. The vocalists engaged are Melba, Plancon and Campanari, and an acceptance is expected from Eames within a few days. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal, who is said to have developed into a veritable wizard of the piano since his appearance in Boston some 10 years ago, and Teresa Carreno, always a favorite, who has not been heard here for seven years. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir of Berlin, perhaps the greatest of Germany's violinists, has been secured, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz, from the ranks of the orchestra, will be no less welcome.



MR. POL PLANCON.



MME. TERESA CARRENO.

Conductor Paur has devoted himself during the summer to the preparation of the programmes and the examination of the latest important orchestral compositions. The orchestral numbers of some of the earlier programmes are as follows:

FIRST PROGRAMME.

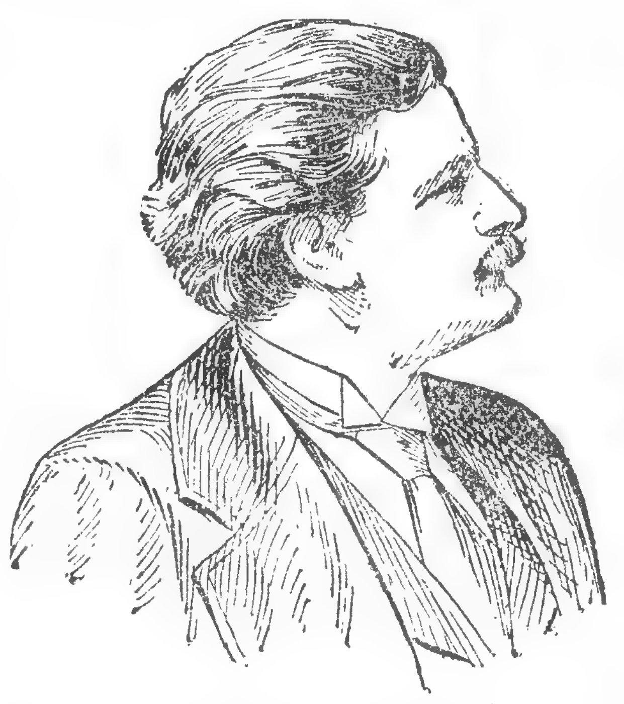
Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini"	Berlioz
Entrement d'Ophelie (first time)	Bourgault-Ducoudray
Suite op. 49	Saint-Saens
Symphony No. 8	Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe"	Weber

SECOND CONCERT.

Overture, "Gwendoline" (first time)	Chabrier
Solo number.
Rhapsodie No. 3	Dvorak
Symphony	Mozart

THIRD CONCERT.

Symphony (first time)	Mrs. Beach
Solo number.
Variations	Brahms
Overture, "Freischuetz"	Weber



MR. MORITZ ROSENTHAL.

FOURTH CONCERT.

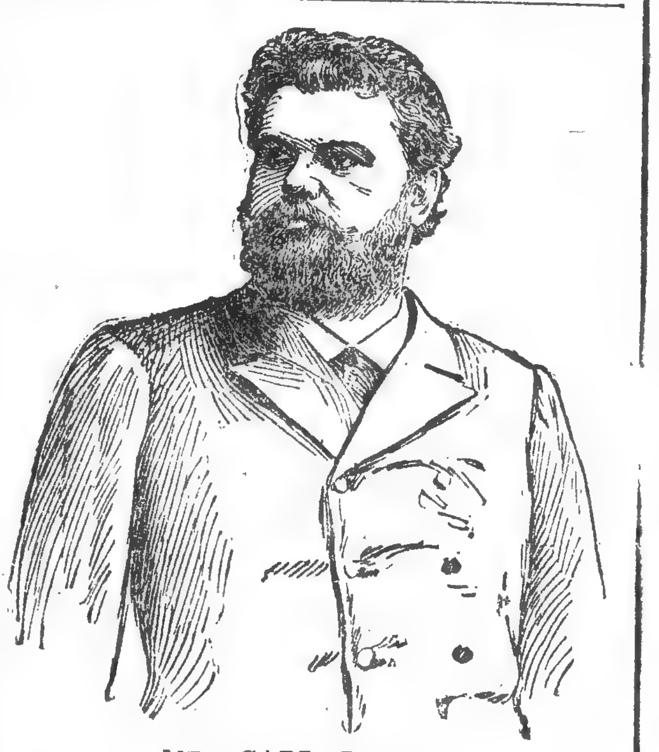
Overture, "Richard III"	Volkmann
Solo number.
Entr' Acte, "Ingwelde" (first time)	Schilling
Solo number.
Symphony No. 9	Schubert

FIFTH CONCERT.

Overture, "Barber of Bagdad"	Cornelius
Solo number.
Scherzo	Goldmark
Symphony, "From the New World"	Dvorak

SIXTH CONCERT.

Overture, "Manfred"	Schumann
Solo number.
Two entr' actes from "Carmen"	Bizet
Solo number.
Symphony No. 4	Tschaikowsky

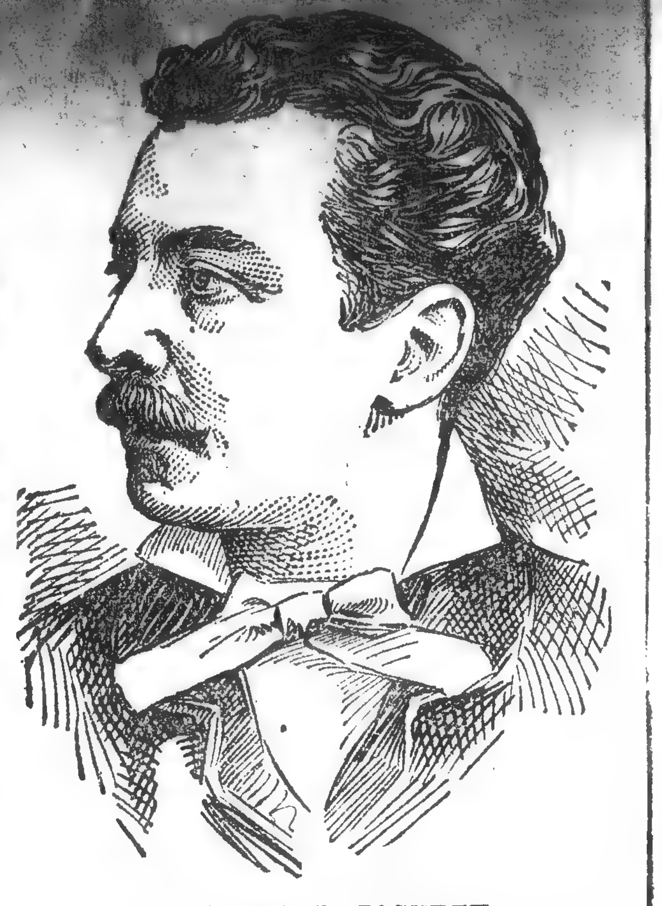


MR. CARL HALIR.

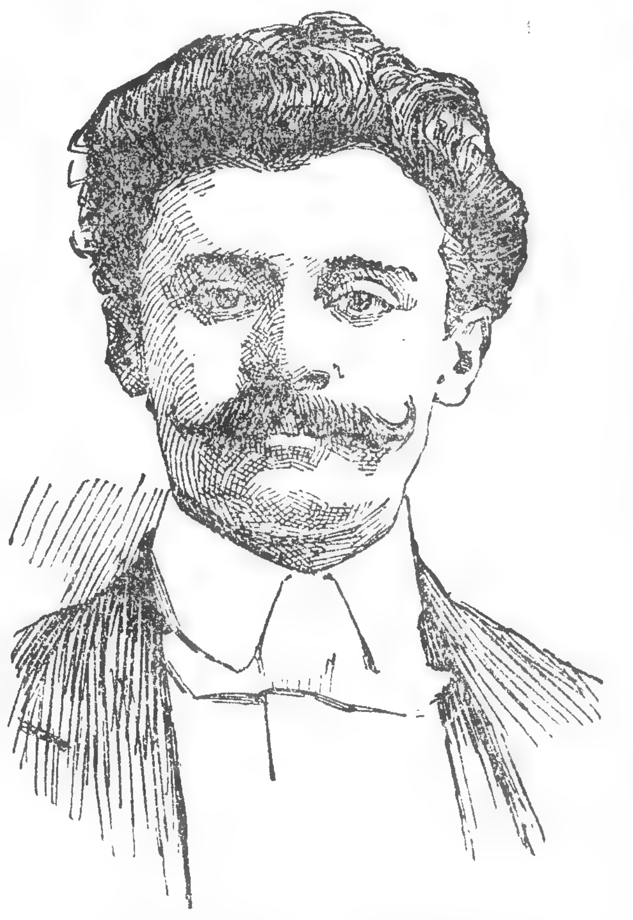
Some works which will have first performances in these concerts during the season are the overture "Hansel and Gretel," Humperdinck; a symphony by Dittersdorf; overture, "Lenore," Duparc; selection from "Anthar," Rmysky Korsakow; symphony, E major, Borodine; "Harka," Smetana.

It will be seen from these announcements that the season will be one of great interest.

The sales of season tickets will be by auction, and will be held at Music Hall during the week beginning Sept. 21. Although the expenses of the concerts have materially increased since the orchestra was organized, the prices of tickets have never been raised, and they will be as before, $12 and $7.50 for the series of public rehearsals, and for the series of concerts according to the location of seats. The $12 season tickets for the public rehearsals will be sold at auction in Music Hall on Monday, Sept. 21; the $7.50 tickets for the rehearsals on Tuesday, Sept. 22; the 12 tickets for the Saturday evening concerts on Thursday, Sept. 24, and the $7.50 tickets for the concerts on Friday Sept. 25. The sales will begin each day at 10 A. M., and will be conducted by Auctioneer Jackson. Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. Tickets will be delivered in the Hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be resold. The seats open to competition will be shown on a large diagram, and will be marked off as soon as sold.



MR. RAFAEL JOSEFFY.



MR. MARTINUS SIEVEKING.

In addition to the Boston concerts the orchestra will give its usual series of performances in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Brooklyn, Cambridge and Providence during the season.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 13, 1896.

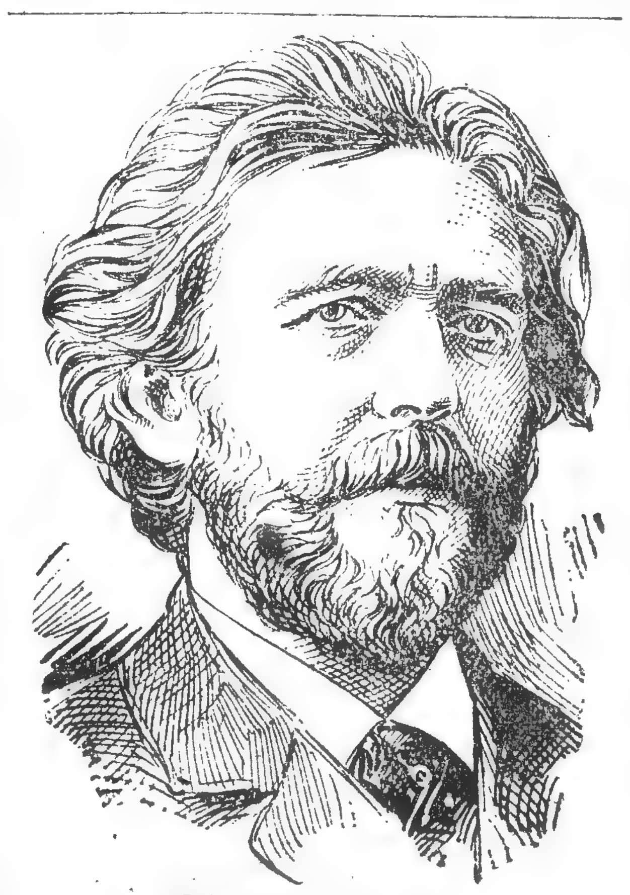
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

16th Season of Boston's Famous Band.

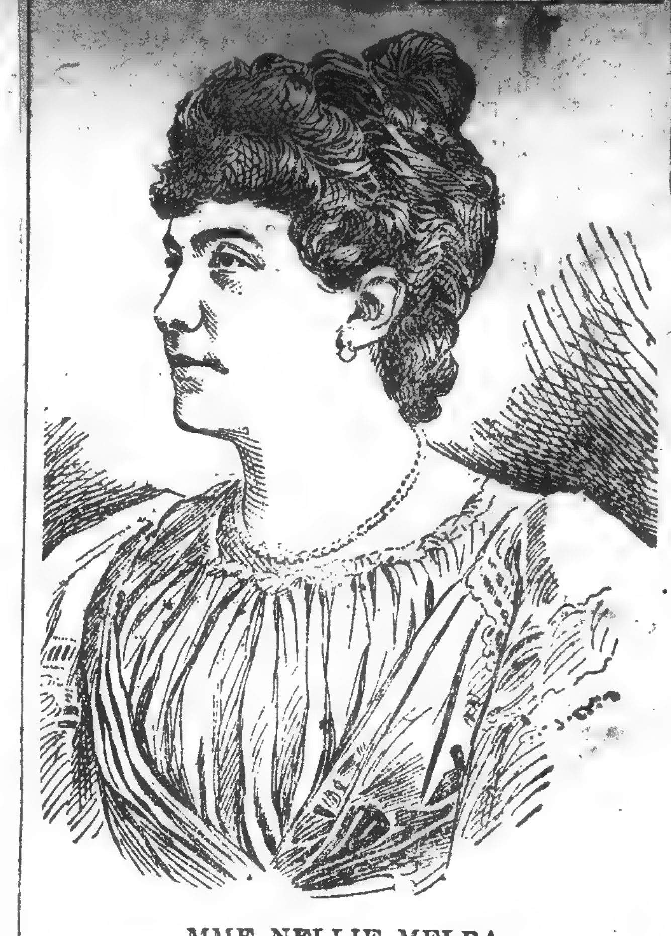
Series of Brilliant Concerts Promised Under Mr Paur's Direction.

Unusually Attractive List of Vocal and Instrumental Soloists.

The annual series of performances by the Boston symphony orchestra at Music hall will begin on Oct 16, and continue weekly until May 1, with occasional omissions to permit of the usual visits of the orchestra to other cities. Twenty-four public rehearsals will be given on Friday afternoons, and 24 concerts on Saturday evenings.

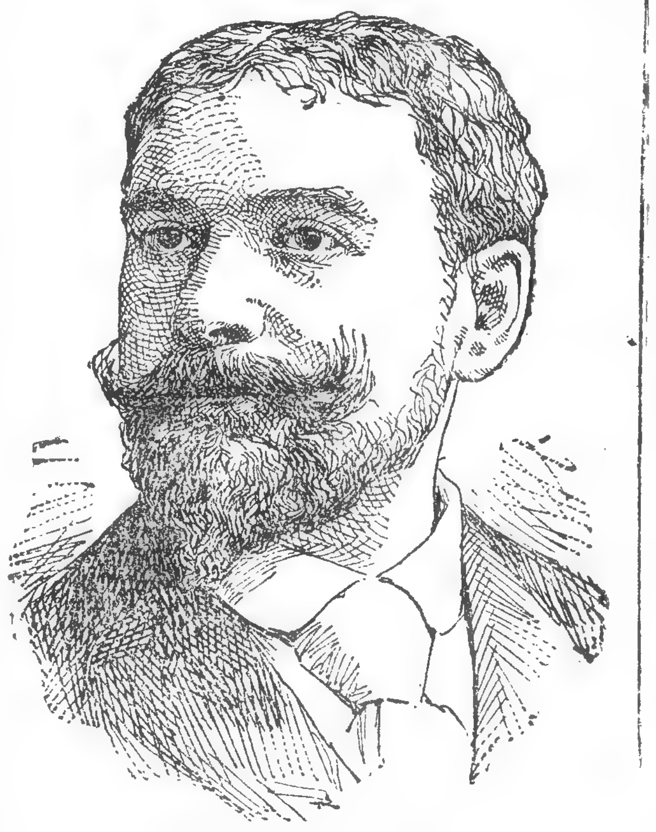


MR EMIL PAUR,
The Director.



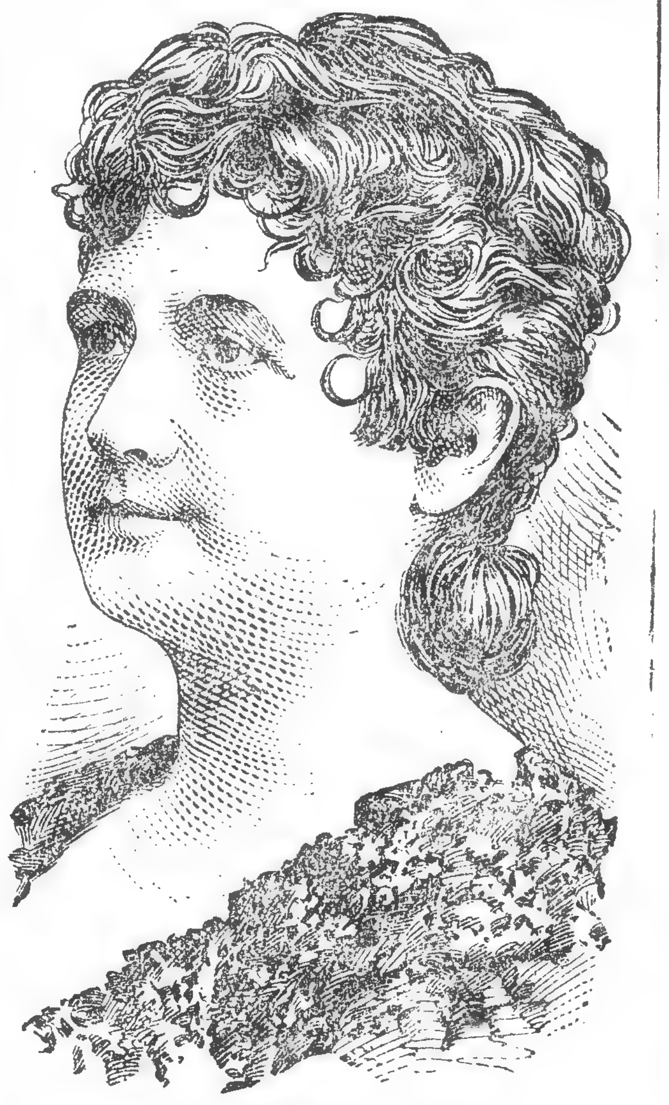
MME NELLIE MELBA,
Soprano.

This organization, by its brilliant record of the past 15 years, has won the highest place in the esteem of the musical public. The standard of excellence established for its performances will be fully maintained and the concerts of the coming season will lack none of the features which have given them their great popularity in the past.



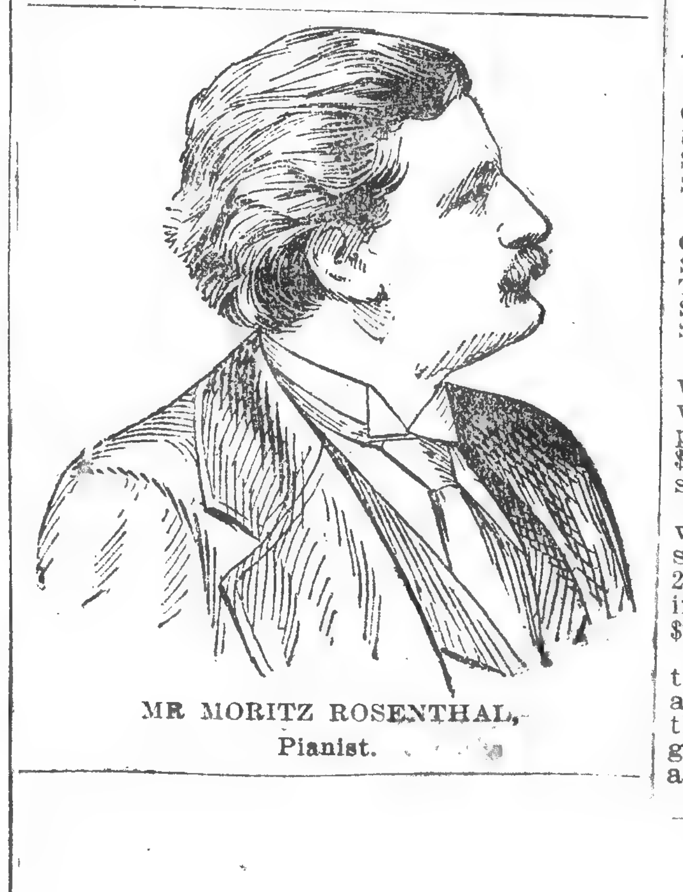
MR POL PLANCON,
Bass.

Only such changes as were absolutely necessary have been made in the membership since last season. Mons Jacquet has been engaged as first flute and Mons Bour as oboist. Both are artists of high rank, formerly connected with the Thomas and Damrosch orchestras. The orchestra will number 90 players and will be again under the direction of Mr Emil Paur.



MME TERESA CARRENO,
Pianist.

The list of soloists is particularly attractive. Among the vocalists will be Melba, Plancon, Campanari and probably Eames. The pianists will be Teresa Carreno, who has not played in America for seven years, Aus der Ohe, Josefy, Sieveking and Rosenthal, who comes after his recent sensational successes in Germany and England.

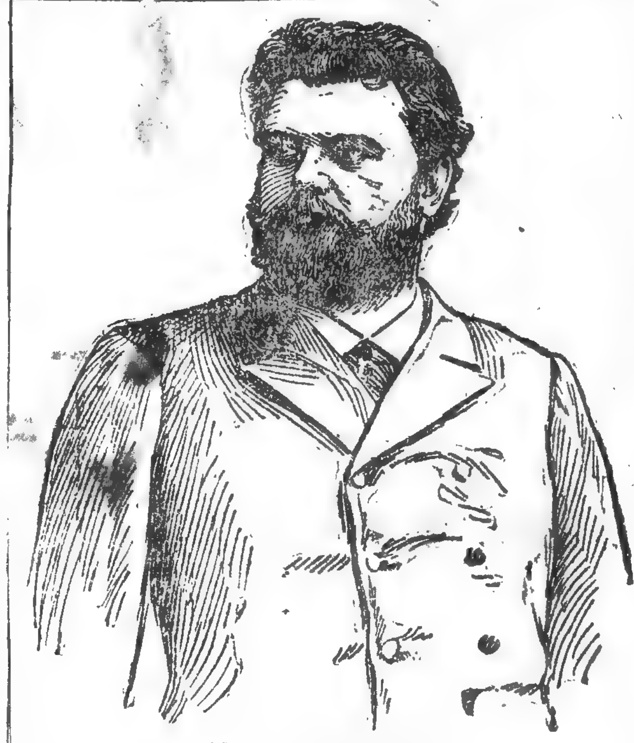


MR MORITZ ROSENTHAL,
Pianist.

Halir, the great German violinist, has been secured, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schrceder and Schulz from the ranks of the orchestra will be equally welcome. The orchestral numbers of the earlier programs are as follows:

FIRST CONCERT

Overture, Benvenuto Cellini	Berlioz
Selection from Ophelie (First time)	Bourgault-Ducoudray
Suite op 49	Saint-Saens
Symphony No 8	Beethoven
Overture, Euryanthe	Weber



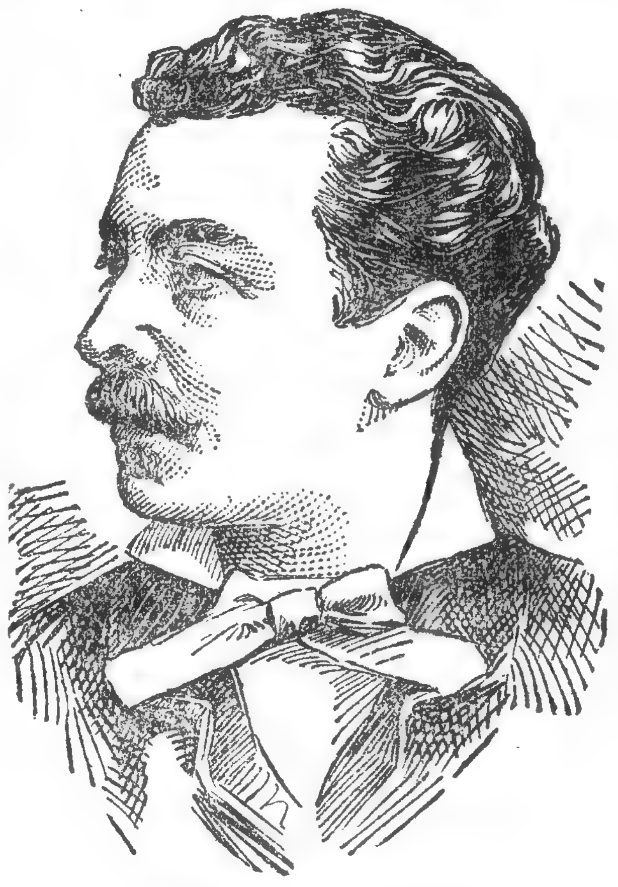
MR CARL HALIR,
Violinist.

SECOND CONCERT

Overture, Gwendoline (First time)	Chabrier
Solo number
Rhapsodie No 3	Dvorak
Symphony	Mozart

THIRD CONCERT

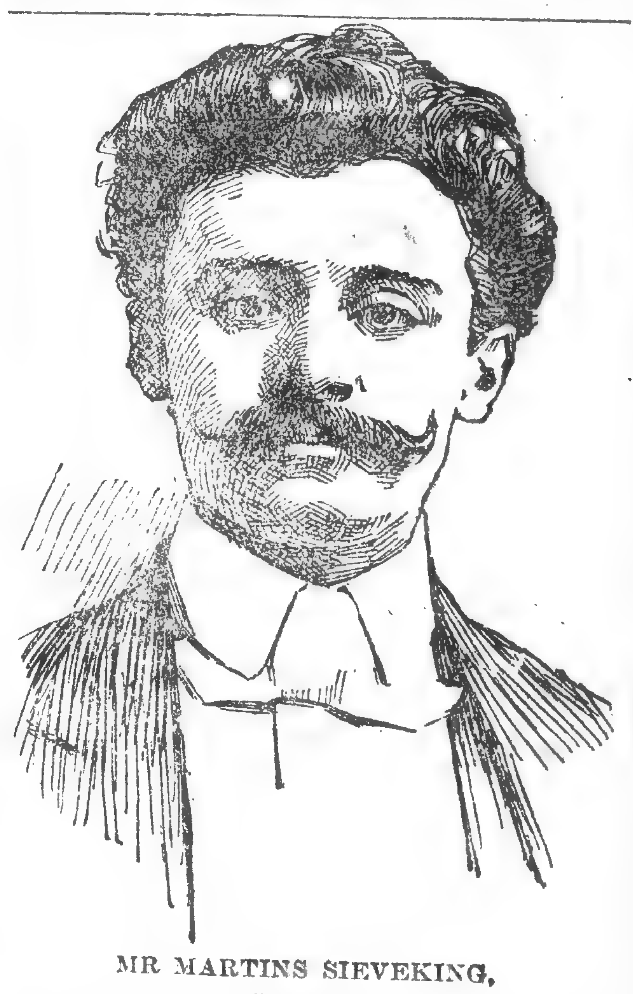
Symphony (First time)	Mrs Beach
Solo number
Variations	Brahms
Overture, Freischuetz	Weber



MR RAFAEL JOSEFFY,
Pianist.

FOURTH CONCERT

Overture, Richard III	Volkmann
Solo number
Entr' Acte Ingwelde (First time)	Schilling
Solo number
Symphony No 9	Schubert



MR MARTINS SIEVEKING,
Pianist.

FIFTH CONCERT

Overture, Barber of Bagdad	Cornelius
Solo number
Scherzo	Goldmark
Symphony from the New World	Dvorak

SIXTH CONCERT

Overture, Manfred	Schumann
Solo number
Two Entr' Actes from Carmen	Bizet
Solo number
Symphony No 4	Tschaikowsky

The auction sales of season tickets will be held at Music hall during the week beginning Sept 21. The scale of prices will be the same as heretofore, $12 and $7.50, according to location of seats.

The $12 seats for the public rehearsals will be sold Monday, Sept 21; the $7.50 seats for the rehearsals Tuesday, Sept 22; the $12 seats for the Saturday evening concerts Thursday, Sept 24, and the $7.50 concert seats Friday, Sept 25.

The sales will be conducted by auctioneer Jackson and will begin each day at 10 a m. They will be governed by the same rules as last year. Circulars giving full information may be had on application at Music hall.

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1896.

Soloists of Coming Symphony Season,

With Sundry Digressions, Gossip and Side Remarks.

Programs of the First Six Symphony Concerts.

The Journal publishes today the portraits of the most distinguished soloists who will appear at the Symphony concerts during the season of '96-'97.

There are purists who believe that at a Symphony concert there should be no soloist to distract by personality the attention of the hearer from absolute music. There are purists who object to the word "soloist." It is in truth a miserable word, but what a labored circumlocution is necessary to arrive at the desired result: the including in one word the singers, male and female, after their kind, the fiddlers, 'cellists, harpers, flute players, or any one that makes an individual display of proficiency or incompetence?

There is distracting personality even where there is no soloist, for conductor and players are exposed to view. Mr. Paur is fortunately not a man who, taking a score in hand, says, "What can I make out of this work?" He asks, "What did the composer intend to say?" Nevertheless, any conductor, however modestly graceful and unobtrusively authoritative he may be, is necessarily in a measure between the music and the audience in Music Hall.

And there sit the players. The audience sees them, is conscious of the fact that they are clad irreparably in approved evening dress, with hair arranged or disarranged, according to individual caprice.

Would you really like to hear 24 symphony concerts without a soloist, without the apparition of a flamboyant or a timorous woman, adorned like a bride for her husband? Go to!

⁂

You smiled perhaps when the remarkable Earl Li put to any new acquaintance the question springing from Chinese courtesy, "How old are you?"

Yet that is one of the first questions you ask about any female singer or pianist, and it is followed usually by "Is she married?" "Has she been divorced?"

And the thought arises, "Has she hope in either case?"

Singers have no age until they break down or die.

⁂

Do you insist on conventional biographical sketches?

Melba, Eames, Aus der Ohe, Plancon, Joseffy, Sieveking are not strangers to the music lovers of this town. They are no older in a large sense than when they last gave delight here in different degrees.

As for Melba, she won fresh and glorious triumphs at Paris and at London after her departure from America last spring. Repeated quotations from the admirable articles of the music critic of the Pall Mall Gazette must have assured Journal readers of his righteous fastidiousness and discrimination. And this is what he wrote in part of Melba's rentrée at Covent Garden, June 18, 1896:

"To say that she was in her best voice is to assert that the greatest of living soprano singers was bent upon giving London an example of consummate and supreme art. You may say of her, at first, that it is her facility in the face of extraordinary difficulty which makes so great an impression. And so it is; but you quickly recognize that this facility is the result of a world of trouble and care, guided by a fine musical temperament and aided by the most exquisite natural gifts. But apart from her facility she triumphs, and carries her audience upon wings of enthusiasm by reason also of her golden purity of tone, which is never tainted by alloy, and by reason of the rich, thrilling, deeply emotional value of her full, clear, divinely proportionate note. To possess the note of power and the tone of purity is—how rare a gift! But to possess both of these great qualities in perfection surely signifies that you are face to face with a singer, such as arises, perhaps, once only in a generation, perhaps only one in half a century. These are big words, but let anyone who carefully hears Melba compare her to her greatest contemporaries, and these words will not be found excessive."

Mr. Ellis expects a letter from Emma Eames within a few days in which she will accept the offer of an engagement at the Symphony concerts. The best judges abroad speak of her steady progress in her art. Her most important engagement during her absence was the creation of the part of Ghiselle in César Franck's posthumous opera of the same name at Monte Carlo, April 6, '96.

⁂

Miss Adele Aus der Ohe has played four times at Symphony concerts in Music Hall. Her first appearance was at the 24th concert, 1886-'87; her last at the 11th concert, '89-'90.

Miss Aus der Ohe was praised by Eduard Hanslick for her "wonderful strength and endurance," when she played Tschaikowsky's B flat minor concerto in Vienna in 1892.

[illegible] strength and endurance are, in[illegible] wonderful, but Sophie Menter and [illegible] formidable female pianists have [illegible] same qualities. There is more [illegible] said in praise of Miss Aus der [illegible] the pupil of Theodor Kullak and [illegible]

[illegible] and virginal, she is never [illegible] in the chase. [illegible] shoots the musical darts with [illegible] precision; nor is her bow- [illegible] strength has the elegance of polished steel.

She does not envy Jupiter his bravura and his boasts. Far from her are the sensuous wiles of Venus. She smiles serenely at the pedagogic Minerva.

She is the Diana of pianists.

⁂

Her antipodes is Theresa Carreno, who is first of all a woman of the tropics.

She numbers 43 chronological years. In emotions and passionate vicissitudes her life has been a century.

The books tell us that she was born at Caracas, Venezuela. She was a pupil of Moritz Gottschalk. In 1865 and 1866 she gave concerts in Europe. She afterward did many things in America. She gave piano concerts, she taught, she sang in opera. Did you see her as Zerlina in "Don Giovanni"?

She composed the National Hymn of Venezuela. And once, when she was managing an Italian opera company, she took the stick and led the orchestra.

From three men, husbands in turn, she learned much of art and life.

Sauret, the violinist, was her first husband. She married him when they both were young. Then there was Tagliapietra, the baritone.

And then, in 1892, she was married to d'Albert, the gnome-like pianist. Beauty and ——. It is only about a year ago that they were divorced. D'Albert promptly married a singer. I believe she is his third wife.

When Theresa Carreno appeared at a Symphony concert during the season of '87-'88 her distinguishing characteristics as a pianist were sumptuous beauty and torrid temperament.

Mr. Huneker remembers her in 1876, the "brilliant and unapproachable woman."

"She wore a ruby colored gown and gouts of hot blood seemed to drip from her passionate fingers and stain scarlet the ivory rocks of the keyboard. Yet she played only Handel's rococo variations in E. I am told by men and critics whose opinions are worth treasuring that Carreno has made enormous progress since her stay in Europe. Don't imagine that Carreno is a women advanced in years. She has been before the public since she was a child. Yet in her life has been crowded enough incident, sorrow, triumph and excitement as would furnish forth twenty novels. Like all great artists, she has worn the crown of thorns, and worn it nobly."

⁂

Pol Plancon will make his first appearance at a Symphony concert. I hope he will be persuaded to sing the Drum Major's song from the opera of "Le Caïd," by Ambroise Thomas. As he sings it, 'twould be worth a wilderness of Pogner's addresses.

Plancon as a singer, pure and simple, as a master of bel canto and also colorature, is the finest bass that has visited this country in several years. As a singer he is superior to Edouard de Reszke in natural beauty and nobility of voice, and in vocal skill.

⁂

Rafael Joseffy's first appearance at a Symphony concert was during the season of '85-'86. His fourth appearance was last season, when he gave one of the very greatest exhibitions of piano playing that has been heard in Boston for many years.

⁂

Mr. Sieveking's first appearance at a Symphony concert was last season. His performance of Saint-Saëns's G minor concerto was brilliant. Then he disappeared mysteriously, as one who leaves between trains, as though he donned rubber overshoes on quitting Music Hall as soon as the applause was hushed.

I am told that he felt the need of a repertory, and therefore went to a small town near Paris, where he might practise diligently and in quiet.

⁂

Moritz Rosenthal, who is now regarded as in certain respects the greatest pianist living, has been heard in Boston, but not in a Symphony concert. He visited us when he was in his storm-and-bang period, for not till 1890 was he recognized abroad as a remarkable pianist.

He was born in 1862 at Lemberg. He studied under Karl Mikuli, Rafael Joseffy and Liszt. He began to give concerts in 1876. He played in the United States during the season of '88-'89. Only within the last few years has he excited the wonder of European capitals by his stupendous acquirements. No longer is the reproach brought against him that he is essentially materialistic.

⁂

It is a great pleasure to see the names of Rosenthal, Joseffy, Carreno, Aus der Ohe and Sieveking announced as soloists.

It is a good thing for audiences to learn that Paderewski, "a selfish monopolist," is not the only pianist. There are others.

As an editorial article in the Musical Courier puts it, "We are tired of the domination of one pianist."

⁂

Karl Halir is a distinguished violinist. He was born at Hohenelbe, Bohemia, Feb. 1, 1859. He studied under Bennewitz at the Conservatory at Prague, and under Joachim, 1874-'76. He then was concert master of Bilse's Orchestra, from which position he was called to be Court concert master at Weimar. In 1888 he married Therese Zerbst (born Nov. 6, 1859), a concert soprano of enviable reputation.

⁂

Among the other soloists will be Messrs. Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schnitzler, Schroeder and Schulz of the orchestra.

⁂

It is not necessary at this late day to sound the praises of the orchestra under Mr. Emil Paur, who now enters on the fourth season of his usefulness. The fame of the orchestra is now international. The orchestra founded by Mr. H. L. Higginson is not only an honor to Boston; it is an honor to the United States [illegible]

Mr. Jacquet, formerly first flute under Mr. Damrosch, will succeed Mr. Charles Molé as the first flute of the orchestra. Mr. Bour, formerly under Thomas, will take here the position of second oboe.

⁂

The programs of the first six concerts will be as follows:

FIRST CONCERT.

Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini" .... Berlioz
Ophelie .... Bourgault-Ducoudray
(First time.)
Suite op. 49 .... Saint-Saens
Symphony No. 8 .... Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe" .... Weber

SECOND CONCERT.

Overture, "Gwendoline" .... Chabrier
(First time.)
Rhapsodie, No. 3 .... Dvorak
Solo number.
Symphony .... Mozart

THIRD CONCERT.

Symphony .... Beach
(First time.)
Variations .... Brahms
Overture, "Freischuetz" .... Weber

FOURTH CONCERT.

Overture, "Richard III." .... Volkmann
Solo number.
Entr'acte "Ingwelde" .... Schilling
(First time.)
Solo number.
Symphony No. 9 .... Schubert

FIFTH CONCERT.

Overture, "Barber of Bagdad" ...... Cornelius
Solo number.
Scherzo .... Goldmark
Symphony "From the New World" ... Dvorak

SIXTH CONCERT.

Overture, "Manfred" .... Schumann
Solo number.
Two entr'actes from "Carmen" .... Bizet
Solo number.
Symphony No. 4 .... Tschaikowsky

⁂

Among the pieces to be played during the season are Humperdinck's overture to "Hänsel and Gretel;" Bizet's Suite "Jeu d'Enfants;" Smetana's "Wallenstein's Lager;" a symphony by Dittersdorf; Duparc's "Lenore;" a movement from Rimski-Korsakoff's "Antar"—why not the whole of this celebrated program-symphony, Mr. Paur? Mehul's Overture to "L'Irato;" Berlioz's Overture, "Les Franc Juges;" and three movements of the ninth symphony.

Some will shudder when they learn that a symphony by Bruckner will be played.

There will be the usual number of old, familiar stand-bys, compositions that no gentleman's library should be without.

Philip Hale

SYMPHONY TICKETS.

The auction sales of season tickets will be held at Music Hall the week of Sept. 21, each sale to begin at 10 A. M., and arranged as follows: The $12 seats for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals will be sold on Monday, Sept. 21; the $7 50 seats for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals on Tuesday, Sept. 22; for the Saturday evening concerts the $12 seats will be sold on Thursday, Sept. 24: the $7 50 seats on Friday, Sept. 25. Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice, and not more than four tickets will be sold on one bid. The bid will be a premium on each seat. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The first of the Symphony concerts is the New Year's day of the musician. And lo, and behold, the annual preliminary excitement concerning soloists of the season and sale of tickets is at hand. To some the concerts are a mixture of education and pleasure, and there are persons who find pleasure only in alleged education. To some the concerts are a species of genteel dissipation, and Saturday nights when the orchestra is out of town, these subscribers are ill at ease, like dram-drinkers on a legal holiday, who find no place open to them. And to some the Symphony concert is merely a social function, to be endured, for the sake of standing well in the eyes of the community.

We do not now speak of these concerts from the standpoint of a musician; to so speak is the task of specialists. We may be permitted, however, to view it from a sociological height. Boston supports an orchestra which, according to excellent judges, is surely without a superior in the world, even if it is not—as some say—without an equal. There are established orchestras in Chicago, Cincinnati and in New York, although the concerts in the last named city are not as many; but the institution in Chicago, although that city boasts of the most accomplished leader, Theodore Thomas, and the institution in Cincinnati, conducted by the talented and enthusiastic Van der Stucken, do not enjoy such universal fame, nor are they apparently on as sure a foundation.

There are those who say that the arts do not prosper under a republic; that the patronage of princes is necessary to their encouragement and life. Although the Boston orchestra exists in a commonwealth, it must be remembered that it was founded by an individual, and that the patronage of certain society leaders has influenced mightily the snobs of high and low degree who will gladly assist in supporting that which receives the sanction of what has been described as the untitled aristocracy. Just as in Italy or Germany of the 18th century each Prince had his chapelmaster and his orchestra, so a citizen of Boston by a stroke of his pen called the Symphony Orchestra into existence. The Prince of Terra Incognita or the Graf von Zweikraut used his musicians for his pleasure. Mr. Higginson not only honored himself; he has given enjoyment to thousands; he has enabled the city to boast justly of a brilliant ornament.

Now Mr. Gradgrind may say, "Yes, this is all very pretty; but is the musical public any the more thoroughly educated?" We might answer by asking, "Is the purpose of art to educate? Has the Venus of Milo turned the corset to a thing of torture, as barbarous as any machine in the Nuremberg collection? Have the terribly realistic battle pictures of the Russian, with the equally terrible name, led the Tsar and his people to give up the army?" If Mr. Gradgrind wishes to know whether there is a higher standard of taste today on account of the performances of the Symphony Orchestra, we should be inclined to answer "Yes;" and not even the applause that is bestowed occasionally on unrighteous singers at those same concerts disturbs this conviction. We believe that the orchestra has made much for musical progress in other cities, as in Worcester, where the programs of the Festival have shown an orchestral gain since the players were first called to assist. Whether the community at large has been influenced, whether manners have been polished and the soul uplifted are other questions, and to answer them would entail a discussion as old as the days of Plato, as to whether music should be allowed in a commonwealth.

One agreeable feature of the concerts of the last three years is the absence of heated controversy in public concerning the merits or faults—say even crimes of the conductor. It argues ill for the healthy condition of an orchestra when all the interest is centred in the conductor, who, after all, men and brethren, is a mortal, while some of the works conducted by him are immortal. The music is more than the interpreter. Of course if a conductor is grossly incompetent, that is another matter; but when the criticism is confined to matters of detail about which there may be honest differences of opinion, the conductor should not be hoisted into a position of absurd and distracting prominence. We may therefore congratulate Mr. Paur as well as the orchestra and the city in that the inevitable criticism which follows each concert is inspired by musical interest and not by personal feeling. No one doubts the musical sincerity of Mr. Paur, who has shown himself a man of honesty, courage, independence, strength and intelligence in a most trying position. Dignity of orchestra, conductor, audience, program, criticism, is now harmonious and symphonic.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 13, 1896.

(Copyright, 1896. Post Publishing Company.)

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its sixteenth annual series of concerts at Music Hall, Oct. 17, and continue until May 1, with the usual number of omissions to permit the visit of the orchestra to various other cities.

The following great and distinguished artists have been engaged to appear during the season: Pianists—Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, Teresa Carrreno, Mr. Moritz Rosenthal, Martinus Sieveking and Rafael Joseffy; soprano soloists — Mme. Melba and Emma Eames; basso, Pol Plancon; violin soloist, Mr. Carl Halir, and several others. Mr. Emil Paur will conduct, as usual.

* * * * * * * *

Boston T[illegible]

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1896.

Sixteenth Symphony Season.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra this fall enters its sixteenth season with its membership practically intact, only a few necessary changes having been made since last year. M. Jacquet succeeds M. Molé as first flute, and M. Bour has been engaged as second oboe. Both these artists come with a fine reputation, won in the Thomas and Damrosch orchestras. The orchestra will number ninety players, and will again be under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur.

The Boston season will comprise, as usual, twenty-four matinées on Fridays and twenty-four evening concerts on Saturdays at Music Hall, beginning Oct. 16 and 17. The vocalists engaged are Melba, Plançon and Campanari, and an acceptance is expected from Eames within a few days. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal and Teresa Carreno, who has not been heard here for seven years. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir of Berlin, the great German violinist, has been secured, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz remain in the orchestra.

Some works which will have first performances in these concerts during the season are the overture "Hansel and Gretel," Humperdinck; a symphony by Dittersdorf; overture, "Lenore," Duparc; selection from "Anthar," Rmysky Korsakow; symphony E major, Borodine; "Harka," Smetana.

The sales of season tickets will be by auction, and will be held at Music Hall during the week beginning Sept. 21. The prices of tickets will be as before, $12 and $7.50 for the series of public rehearsals, and for the series of concerts according to the location of seats. The $12 season tickets for the public rehearsals will be sold by auction in Music Hall on Monday, Sept. 21; the $7.50 tickets for the rehearsals on Tuesday, Sept. 22; the $12 tickets for the Saturday evening concerts on Thursday, Sept. 24, and the $7.50 tickets for the concerts on Friday, Sept. 25. The sales will begin each day at 10 A. M., and will be conducted by auctioneer Jackson. Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be resold. The seats open to competition will be shown on a large diagram, and will be marked off as soon as sold.

In addition to the Boston concerts the orchestra will give its usual series of performances in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Brooklyn, Cambridge and Providence during the season.

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
Under the Joint Auspices of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences
. . . AND . . .
The Brooklyn Philharmonic Society,
Will be given during the Season of 1896-7, the

PHILHARMONIC CONCERTS
BY THE
BOSTON
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor,
ASSISTED BY THE FOLLOWING AMONG OTHER SOLOISTS:

Mme. MELBA, Soprano,
Mr. BEN DAVIES, Tenor.
M. PLANCON, Barytone.
Mr. MORITZ ROSENTHAL, Piano.
Mme. CARRENO, Piano,
Mr. CARL HALIR, Violin.
Mr. FRANZ KNEISEL, Violin.
Mr. TIMOTHEE ADAMOWSKI, Violin.
Mr. ALWIN SCHROEDER, 'Cello.

FIVE EVENING CONCERTS,
NOV. 9TH, DEC. 11TH, JAN. 22D, FEB. 26TH, MAR. 26TH,
FOUR MATINEE CONCERTS,
(SATURDAYS) DEC. 12TH, JAN. 23D, FEB. 27TH, MAR. 27TH.

The Sale of Course Tickets to the Five Evening Concerts will begin on TUESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 20TH, at 8 o'clock, at the Art Building, 174 Montague Street.

The Sale will continue at 502 Fulton Street, on and after October 21st, from 8:30 A. M. to 6 P. M., and from 7:30 to 10 evenings, and at 300 Fulton Street, (CHANDLER'S), from 8:30 A. M. to 6 P. M. Course Tickets, $7, $5, $4.

Music Hall.

BOSTON

SYMPHONY

ORCHESTRA.

(90 Performers.)
MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.

Sixteenth Season, 1896-'97. Twelfth Season in Baltimore.

FIVE CONCERTS.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOV. 11,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, DEC. 9,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JAN. 20,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, FEB. 24,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 24.

At 8 o'Clock.

Solo Artists:

MME. MELBA,
MME. CARRENO,
MR. POL PLANCON,
MR. BEN DAVIES.

MR. CARL HALIR,

(The Famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.)

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7 00 and $5 00, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Albert's, 13 North Charles street.

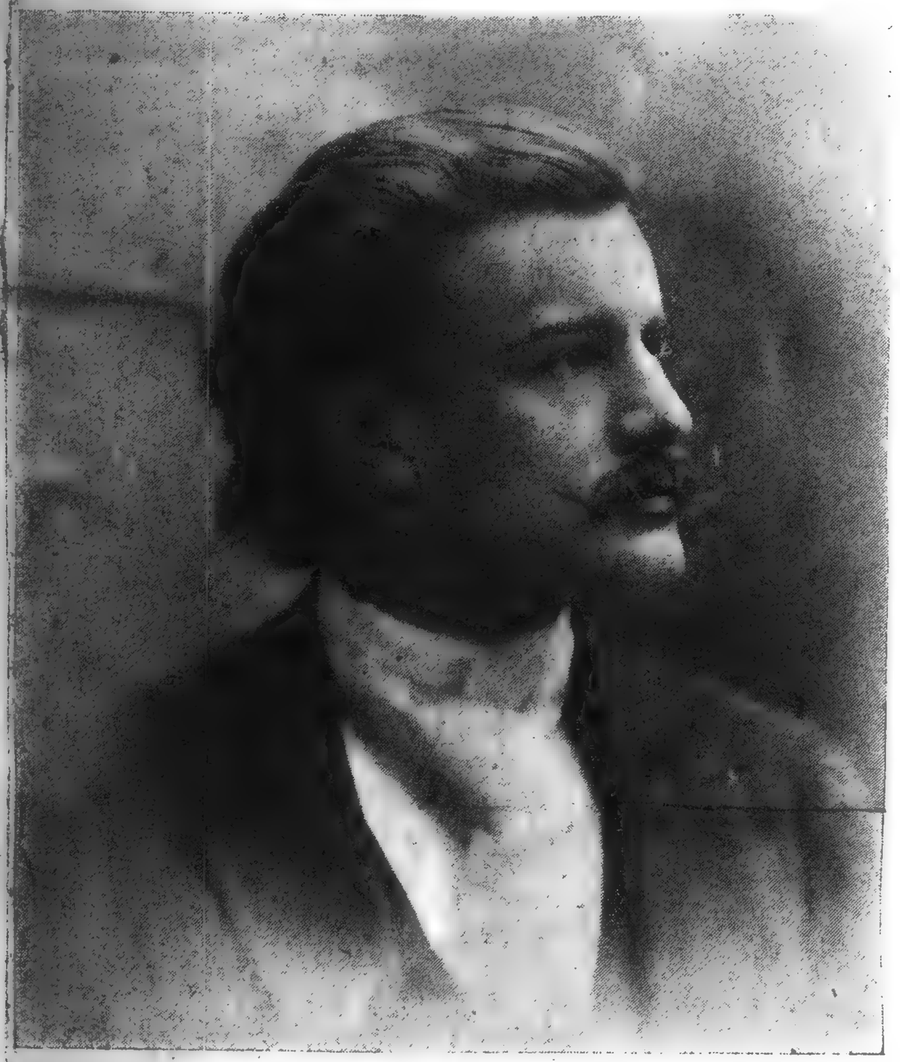
Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.
F. R. COMEE, Asst. Mgr.

MISS ADELE AUS-DE-OHE,
Pianist.
(From a photograph by Falk.)

CARL HALIR,
Violinist.

TERESA CARRENO,
Pianist.



MORITZ ROSENTHAL,
Pianist.
(From a photograph by Falk.)

EMIL PAUR,
Conductor.
(From a photograph by Notman.)

RAFAEL JOSEFFY,
Pianist.

MME. EMMA EAMES,
Soprano.
(From a copyrighted photograph by Falk.)

POL PLANCON,
Basso.
(From a copyrighted photograph by A. Dupont.)

MARTINUS SIEVEKING,
Pianist.

MME. MELBA,
Soprano.

THE SEASON'S ARTISTS.

THE SOLOISTS WHO WILL APPEAR IN THE BOSTON CONCERTS OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA DURING THE SEASON OF 1896 AND 1897.
(See "About Music" in the Feature Section.)

MISS ADELE AUS-DE-OHE,
Pianist.
(From a photograph by Falk.)

CARL HALIR,
Violinist.

TERESA CARRENO,
Pianist.

MORITZ ROSENTHAL,
Pianist.
(From a photograph by Falk.)

EMIL PAUR,
Conductor.
(From a photograph by Notman.)

RAFAEL JOSEFFY,
Pianist.

POL PLANCON,
Basso.
(From a copyrighted photograph by A. Dupont.)

MME. EMMA EAMES,
Soprano.
(From a copyrighted photograph by Falk.)

MARTINUS SIEVEKING,
Planist.

MME. MELBA,
Soprano.

THE SEASON'S ARTISTS.

THE SOLOISTS WHO WILL APPEAR IN THE BOSTON CONCERTS OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA DURING THE SEASON OF 1896 AND 1897.
(See "About Music" in the Feature Section.)

TIGHT BINDING

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1896.

WHY PAUR IS A BETTER CONDUCTOR.

WHY Emil Paur is a better conductor than he was when he made his first bow here several seasons ago.

There is a pretty and apposite text to be preached upon at the beginning of the season, and we are of the humble opinion that no one is better qualified to preach from this text than THE MUSICAL COURIER, for have we not been Mr. Paur's keenest critic from the beginning, and have we not always praised with discrimination and found fault with justice?

Possibly some of our Boston contemporaries, whose half baked zeal for Mr. Paur has led them into the mistake of praising his errors, may answer in the negative; but of what value is such so-called criticism to the public, and of what value is eternal praise to Mr. Paur?

Even his warmest admirers admit his limitations, yet a small, select chorus, "up Boston way," told him weekly, daily and bimonthly what a great man he was, and if he had continued believing this silly talk we would not to-day be discussing the whys and wherefores of Mr. Paur's very patent improvement.

Mr. Paur has improved as conductor because he has been at the head of the greatest orchestra in the world, because he has benefited by the more cosmopolitan life of America, and because he has taken seriously the many criticisms of his work which have appeared in this journal. In a word he is a progressive man who has seized his opportunity—a magnificent one—and has profited by it.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has been trained by two such men as Wilhelm Gericke and Arthur Nikisch—the one an ideal disciplinarian, the other the most poetic conductor alive. Composed originally of first-class material, it by dint of incessant rehearsing reached a pitch of perfection certainly never excelled even by Von Bülow and his famous Meiningen Orchestra. Not alone homogeneity and elasticity in tone, not alone unsurpassed virtuosity, but in musical feeling and spirit this band from Boston is unrivaled. Mr. Paur consequently stepped before an almost perfect instrument, an instrument too well trained and tuned to deteriorate even in the hands of mediocrity. Mr. Paur has worked, has studied, has grown. He doubtless felt his responsibility from the outset, and his awkwardness, his gaucherie, his lack of polish are being outgrown in the most satisfactory fashion. Of his genuine musicianship we never doubted. He was always the musician; sometimes the musician at the expense of the conductor. In his endeavor to be faithfully objective he was often colorless, yet his angularities, so annoying in the beginning, have almost vanished.

All this is as it should be. Mr. Paur could not be an artist and refuse to feel the refining influences of his entourage, his environment. Rehearsing continually with such an orchestra, and rehearsing without the pressure of being compelled to play a certain composition on a certain date, was bound to work wonders. Mr. Paur has just the leisure so much envied by Anton Seidl. Just fancy the delight of a conscientious conductor in being able to rehearse Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday a composition, and then shelve it because it was not quite fine enough for the Friday matinée!

No wonder then that Mr. Paur, with such opportunities for self-culture, self-criticism, has improved, has mellowed, has rounded as a conductor; and no wonder, attempt what he may, Mr. Seidl is precisely where he was when he first undertook the conductorship of the Philharmonic Society.

It is simply not his fault, thanks to the beggarly system adopted by the Philharmonic Society. Not only is our local band ridden by too many Old Men of the Mountain, as was Sinbad, but there is also a plentiful lack of rehearsing, not to speak of the woeful want of public spirit. Any slipshod way, so it is easy, is adopted by the Philharmonic Society, which needs not only new by-laws but new blood. You can well imagine what Mr. Seidl, with his enormous gifts as a conductor, could do if he had such magnificent material to work with as the Boston Symphony Orchestra. We wish to emphasize a fact not at first blush apparent to all, but one nevertheless incontrovertible:

Anton Seidl has never had an opportunity of showing himself at his best in America.

And simply because he has never stood before a first-class orchestra. Perhaps when he can put into practice his notions as to the proper amount of rehearsing, the elimination of dead and decaying material in the society, then—we say again perhaps—the Philharmonic may accomplish something.

We must not forget a word of praise for the limitless energy and tact of Mr. C. A. Ellis, the manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He has all the fire and ambition of the young American, complemented by a gracious personality and no little culture. He is the right man pre-eminently in the right place.

And Mr. Paur has improved, is improving as a conductor, as we think we have just amply proved. Boston papers, please copy.

THE BEACON: BOSTON, MASS., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1896.

MME MELBA.

One of the Soloists who will appear in the Boston Concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the season.

THE BEACON: BOSTON, MASS., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1896.

Mr. Rudolf Aronson announces the completion of a contract with the Boston Symphony orchestra for the appearances of the famous pianiste, Mme. Teresa Carreno, at Music Hall, February 19 and 20; also in New York, Brooklyn, Washington and Baltimore with the Boston Symphony orchestra.

TERESA CARRENO.

One of the Soloists who will appear in the Boston Concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the season.

MUSIC HALL.

Boston Symphony Orchestra

(90 Performers.)
Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth Season, 1896-97. Twelfth Season in Baltimore.

FIVE CONCERTS.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOV. 11.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, DEC. 9.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, JAN. 20.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, FEB. 24.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 24.
At 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:

Mme. MELBA,
Mme. CARRENO,
Mr. POL PLANCON,
Mr. BEN DAVIES,
Mr. CARL HALIR,
(The Famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.)

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.00 and $5.00, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Albert's, 13 North Charles street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPT. 19, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

Next week will be of special interest to several thousand music lovers in Boston—because it marks the auction sale of the season Symphony tickets. There will be as usual twenty-four concerts, beginning October 17, and twenty-four rehearsals, beginning Friday afternoon, October 16; and the sale of seats will open Monday morning at Music Hall. The $12 rehearsal seats will be sold at auction Monday at 10; the $7.50 rehearsal seats will be sold there on Tuesday at the same hour; the $12 seats for the Saturday evening concerts will be sold in the same way next Thursday morning, and the $7.50 concert seats on Friday at the same hour. The bidding promises to be sharp and lively, as the Symphony concert has come to be as necessary to Bostonians as their baked beans.

Mr. Paur will conduct again, and the list of soloists was never finer, including Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Mlle. Aus Der Ohe, Messrs. Plancon, Campanari, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schultz, with others to be heard from in the future.

Boston Transcript

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1896.

SALE OF SYMPHONY REHEARSAL SEATS

Large Attendance but Slow Bidding at Prices in Advance of Previous Years.

About half of the floor-seats in Music Hall were filled this forenoon with people attracted there by the sale of seats for the series of Friday afternoon rehearsals of the Symphony Orchestra. Only the $12 seats were offered today, and the auction sale was conducted as in past years by Henry W. Jackson. It was announced that all bids were for premiums, which must be added to the regular box-office price in the purchasing of seats.

The sale opened with the disposal of seat number one in section A, on the floor, at a premium of $18, which was reached by easy stages of fifty-cent bids. The next two seats sold at $10.50 each, and $11 was paid for three others in order. Then a rise to $18.50 was made. A drop to different amounts as low as $11 quickly followed, and then a range of from $14 to $22.50 ran through the sale of many seats, in pairs and singly. A sudden jump to $32 and $35 next came about.

At this point the auctioneer urged that "bids should be started at $30, about where they belong." The bidders evidently did not agree with him on this point, for the next bid was begun at $16, and by a slow process crept up to $25, with following sales at $20, $30 and $32 premiums, even up to a fraction above $40.

Four excellent seats in the centre of the hall, and about six rows from the stage, sold at $21, while the next two brought $36. Not till section G was reached was there any spirited bidding. For this row dollar bids came thick and fast, seat number 18, in the middle aisle and on the end, being run up to $75 premium. The same purchaser then took the next seat, for which $52 was paid, and also numbers 20 and 21, paying $54 each for those. Numbers 22 and 23 sold immediately after at $38, while $39 was obtained for others in that row. In row H, seats 16 and 17, end seats in the centre, were knocked down at $87 apiece and the pair across the aisle from them went for $66. In section J, $44 was paid for seat number 17, as against $80 for the same seat last year. As the austioneer began to offer seats in the middle of the hall it was noticed that a gradual drop from highest prices was brought about. In rows L, M, N and thereabout, prices appeared to average from $20 to $25, though many pairs, here and there, sold at from $40 to $45. From these figures up to about $60 were the amounts paid for a selection in this part of the hall. Seats in the rear part of the hall, under the balcony, sold at an average premium of from $5 to $7. It was noticeable that in most sections the seats on the Hamilton place side of the hall sold at lower general prices than those paid for the middle and extreme left seats in the same rows. All in all, better prices throughout the hall ruled today, as compared with the sale last year, which may be owing to the fact that last season's sale took place on an extremely hot day, and with a smaller attendance than that of today.

TIGHT BINDING

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1896.

WHY PAUR IS A BETTER CONDUCTOR.

WHY Emil Paur is a better conductor than he was when he made his first bow here several seasons ago.

There is a pretty and apposite text to be preached upon at the beginning of the season, and we are of the humble opinion that no one is better qualified to preach from this text than THE MUSICAL COURIER, for have we not been Mr. Paur's keenest critic from the beginning, and have we not always praised with discrimination and found fault with justice?

Possibly some of our Boston contemporaries, whose half baked zeal for Mr. Paur has led them into the mistake of praising his errors, may answer in the negative; but of what value is such so-called criticism to the public, and of what value is eternal praise to Mr. Paur?

Even his warmest admirers admit his limitations, yet a small, select chorus, "up Boston way," told him weekly, daily and bimonthly what a great man he was, and if he had continued believing this silly talk we would not to-day be discussing the whys and wherefores of Mr. Paur's very patent improvement.

Mr. Paur has improved as conductor because he has been at the head of the greatest orchestra in the world, because he has benefited by the more cosmopolitan life of America, and because he has taken seriously the many criticisms of his work which have appeared in this journal. In a word he is a progressive man who has seized his opportunity—a magnificent one—and has profited by it.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has been trained by two such men as Wilhelm Gericke and Arthur Nikisch—the one an ideal disciplinarian, the other the most poetic conductor alive. Composed originally of first-class material, it by dint of incessant rehearsing reached a pitch of perfection certainly never excelled even by Von Bülow and his famous Meiningen Orchestra. Not alone homogeneity and elasticity in tone, not alone unsurpassed virtuosity, but in musical feeling and spirit this band from Boston is unrivaled. Mr. Paur consequently stepped before an almost perfect instrument, an instrument too well trained and tuned to deteriorate even in the hands of mediocrity. Mr. Paur has worked, has studied, has grown. He doubtless felt his responsibility from the outset, and his awkwardness, his gaucherie, his lack of polish are being outgrown in the most satisfactory fashion. Of his genuine musicianship we never doubted. He was always the musician; sometimes the musician at the expense of the conductor. In his endeavor to be faithfully objective he was often colorless, yet his angularities, so annoying in the beginning, have almost vanished.

All this is as it should be. Mr. Paur could not be an artist and refuse to feel the refining influences of his entourage, his environment. Rehearsing continually with such an orchestra, and rehearsing without the pressure of being compelled to play a certain composition on a certain date, was bound to work wonders. Mr. Paur has just the leisure so much envied by Anton Seidl. Just fancy the delight of a conscientious conductor in being able to rehearse Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday a composition, and then shelve it because it was not quite fine enough for the Friday matinée!

No wonder then that Mr. Paur, with such opportunities for self-culture, self-criticism, has improved, has mellowed, has rounded as a conductor; and no wonder, attempt what he may, Mr. Seidl is precisely where he was when he first undertook the conductorship of the Philharmonic Society.

It is simply not his fault, thanks to the beggarly system adopted by the Philharmonic Society. Not only is our local band ridden by too many Old Men of the Mountain, as was Sinbad, but there is also a plentiful lack of rehearsing, not to speak of the woeful want of public spirit. Any slipshod way, so it is easy, is adopted by the Philharmonic Society, which needs not only new by-laws but new blood. You can well imagine what Mr. Seidl, with his enormous gifts as a conductor, could do if he had such magnificent material to work with as the Boston Symphony Orchestra. We wish to emphasize a fact not at first blush apparent to all, but one nevertheless incontrovertible:

Anton Seidl has never had an opportunity of showing himself at his best in America.

And simply because he has never stood before a first-class orchestra. Perhaps when he can put into practice his notions as to the proper amount of rehearsing, the elimination of dead and decaying material in the society, then—we say again perhaps—the Philharmonic may accomplish something.

We must not forget a word of praise for the limitless energy and tact of Mr. C. A. Ellis, the manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He has all the fire and ambition of the young American, complemented by a gracious personality and no little culture. He is the right man pre-eminently in the right place.

And Mr. Paur has improved, is improving as a conductor, as we think we have just amply proved. Boston papers, please copy.

THE BEACON: BOSTON, MASS., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1896.

MME MELBA.

One of the Soloists who will appear in the Boston Concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the season.

THE BEACON: BOSTON, MASS., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1896.

—Mr. Rudolf Aronson announces the completion of a contract with the Boston Symphony orchestra for the appearances of the famous pianiste, Mme. Teresa Carreño, at Music Hall, February 19 and 20; also in New York, Brooklyn, Washington and Baltimore with the Boston Symphony orchestra.

TERESA CARRENO.

One of the Soloists who will appear in the Boston Concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the season.

MUSIC HALL.

Boston Symphony Orchestra

(90 Performers.)
Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth Season, 1896-97. Twelfth Season in Baltimore.

FIVE CONCERTS.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOV. 11.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, DEC. 9.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, JAN. 20.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, FEB. 24.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 24.
At 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:

Mme. MELBA,
Mme. CARRENO,
Mr. POL PLANCON,
Mr. BEN DAVIES,
Mr. CARL HALIR,
(The Famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.)

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.00 and $5.00, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Albert's, 13 North Charles street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.
C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPT. 19, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

Next week will be of special interest to several thousand music lovers in Boston—because it marks the auction sale of the season Symphony tickets. There will be as usual twenty-four concerts, beginning October 17, and twenty-four rehearsals, beginning Friday afternoon, October 16; and the sale of seats will open Monday morning at Music Hall. The $12 rehearsal seats will be sold at auction Monday at 10; the $7.50 rehearsal seats will be sold there on Tuesday at the same hour; the $12 seats for the Saturday evening concerts will be sold in the same way next Thursday morning, and the $7.50 concert seats on Friday at the same hour. The bidding promises to be sharp and lively, as the Symphony concert has come to be as necessary to Bostonians as their baked beans.

Mr. Paur will conduct again, and the list of soloists was never finer, including Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Mlle. Aus Der Ohe, Messrs. Plancon, Campanari, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schultz, with others to be heard from in the future.

Boston Transcript

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1896.

SALE OF SYMPHONY REHEARSAL SEATS

Large Attendance but Slow Bidding at Prices in Advance of Previous Years.

About half of the floor-seats in Music Hall were filled this forenoon with people attracted there by the sale of seats for the series of Friday afternoon rehearsals of the Symphony Orchestra. Only the $12 seats were offered today, and the auction sale was conducted as in past years by Henry W. Jackson. It was announced that all bids were for premiums, which must be added to the regular box-office price in the purchasing of seats.

The sale opened with the disposal of seat number one in section A, on the floor, at a premium of $13, which was reached by easy stages of fifty-cent bids. The next two seats sold at $10.50 each, and $11 was paid for three others in order. Then a rise to $18.50 was made. A drop to different amounts as low as $11 quickly followed, and then a range of from $14 to $22.50 ran through the sale of many seats, in pairs and singly. A sudden jump to $32 and $35 next came about.

At this point the auctioneer urged that "bids should be started at $30, about where they belong." The bidders evidently did not agree with him on this point, for the next bid was begun at $16, and by a slow process crept up to $25, with following sales at $20, $30 and $32 premiums, even up to a fraction above $40.

Four excellent seats in the centre of the hall, and about six rows from the stage, sold at $21, while the next two brought $36. Not till section G was reached was there any spirited bidding. For this row dollar bids came thick and fast, seat number 18, in the middle aisle and on the end, being run up to $75 premium. The same purchaser then took the next seat, for which $52 was paid, and also numbers 20 and 21, paying $54 each for those. Numbers 22 and 23 sold immediately after at $38, while $39 was obtained for others in that row. In row H, seats 16 and 17, end seats in the centre, were knocked down at $87 apiece and the pair across the aisle from them went for $66. In section J, $44 was paid for seat number 17, as against $80 for the same seat last year. As the austioneer began to offer seats in the middle of the hall it was noticed that a gradual drop from highest prices was brought about. In rows L, M, N and thereabout, prices appeared to average from $20 to $25, though many pairs, here and there, sold at from $40 to $45. From these figures up to about $60 were the amounts paid for a selection in this part of the hall. Seats in the rear part of the hall, under the balcony, sold at an average premium of from $5 to $7. It was noticeable that in most sections the seats on the Hamilton place side of the hall sold at lower general prices than those paid for the middle and extreme left seats in the same rows. All in all, better prices throughout the hall ruled today, as compared with the sale last year, which may be owing to the fact that last season's sale took place on an extremely hot day, and with a smaller attendance than that of today.

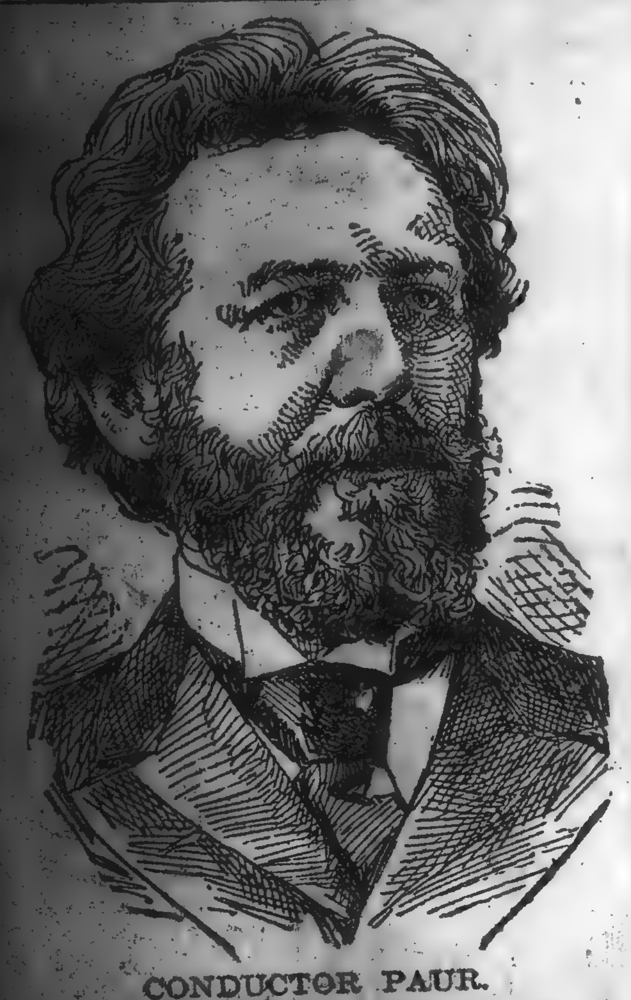
TEMBER 19, 1896.

out the Coming Symphony Season.

UR'S NEW YORK VICTORY.

The Courier at Last Admits His Ability—Lasalle Is to Return. The Kneisel Quartette. Other Gossip.

On Monday next begins the preliminary to the musical feast of the Boston season—the auction sale of seats for the Symphony concerts and rehearsals. So distinctively are these weekly events a part of the life of the city that it is scarcely necessary now to speak of their enormous influence upon musical education and their ability to give pleasure to the best and truest lovers of the art. It is customary to declare that people go to the Symphony because it is "en regle," something expected of society, just as a carriage is or an exodus from Beason street in May. Such a motive impels some, certainly, but a constant experience with Symphony audiences, close observance of the attention always paid and the genuine enthusiasm aroused proves clearly enough that the vast majority are there because they are fond of the music, and proud of the magnificent band that so nobly interprets it.



CONDUCTOR PAUR.

Nor has society a monopoly on the seats at Music Hall by any means. There is a very large contingent of people in moderate circumstances, and they can well afford to go, considering how very reasonable are the prices per concert. Even at an average premium of $15, the $7.50 seats allow one the 24 concerts at an expense of less than $1 a concert. Nowhere in the world is such a banquet furnished for the like money.

As to the auction plan of disposing of the seats, it is the best yet devised. With the present demand for seats, the old "standing-in-line" process would be simply intolerable. No one would get the seats he wanted, and the expense of hiring holders of places would be considerable. And those who complain that Mr. Higginson is by this plan the recipient of a large additional sum should remember that the same Mr. Higginson, for five or six years, went into his own individual pocket and pulled out thousands of dollars each season that the people of Boston might have as good as any. The public can never repay its debt to him.

Excellent things are promised for the coming season. Judging from the programmes of the first four concerts, Mr. Paur has decided to have a novelty each week. The younger romantic composers are to be well represented, and due attention will of course be paid to the classicists. The list of soloists is enough to raise delightful anticipations. Melba will sing, and Plancon will make his first appearance with our orchestra here. The meteoric Rosenthal will be heard, and the great Joseffy will visit us. Teresa Carreno, that handsome woman and brilliant pianist, is to return after a seven-years' absence, and Aus de Ohe will also be included, as well as Sieveking, who made a real triumph last year. An absolutely new man will be Halir, the great German violinist. Our own Symphony soloists will appear as usual, including Mr. Adamowski, who has come back to the fold. All in all, the outlook is for the finest season thus far given by the splendid organization.

The world do move! The New York Musical Courier, formerly the relentless enemy of Conductor Paur, has renounced its position as gracefully as it is able, and, with the final appeal "Boston papers please copy," it now admits that we have a great conductor at the head of the Symphony Orchestra. It arrives at its change of base in an amusing way, but the result is the same. It says:

"Mr. Paur has improved as conductor because he has been at the head of the greatest orchestra in the world, because he has benefited by the more cosmopolitan life of America, and because he has taken seriously the many criticisms of his work which have appeared in this journal. In a word, he is a progressive man who has seized his opportunity—a magnificent one—and has profited by it.

"All this is as it should be. Mr. Paur could not be an artist and refuse to feel the refining influences of his entourage, his environment. Rehearsing continually with such an orchestra, and rehearsing without the pressure of being compelled to play a certain composition on a certain date, was bound to work wonders."

[illegible] the orchestra has made Mr. [illegible] for several years, and know that it is doing better work now than at any time under Mr. Nikisch. However, the Courier uses the word "artist" as descriptive of Mr. Paur, a term which it used to fiercely deny him, so we must let it go at that.

Boston Daily Globe.

MONDAY, SEPT. 21, 1896.

SYMPHONY TICKETS HIGH.

Large Gathering of Society People at the Auction of the Rehearsal Seats—Highest Premium Was $87.

Society turned out in goodly numbers this morning, and swept into Music hall to bid on seats for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony orchestra. The $12 seats were put up, and knocked down to the highest bidders. The plan of the seats was tacked on to a huge board, which was set toward the front of the stage.

Auctioneer Jackson paraded up and down the stage in front of the board, with his black baton, and sold the seats. Prices were better this year than a year ago, so said several of the regular attendants at the Symphony sales.

There seemed to be a great many men in the audience—many more than at the first sale a year ago.

Mrs "Jack" Gardner was there, of course. No sale of Symphony concert seats would be quite complete without the presence of this acknowledged leader of Boston society. She always has the same two seats in the right balcony, and secured them, as usual, today.

Speculators were very much in evidence. The names of half a dozen, well known to the Boston amusement going public, were heard to fall with great frequency from Mr Jackson's lips. The auctioneer, made the customary announcement shortly after 10 o'clock. This was in effect that the sale was of the $12 seats, the bids being a premium on $12, no more than four seats to be sold to one bidder.

The first seat, A 1, brought $13; 2 and 3 were sold for $10.50 each and 33 and 34 brought $12.50. In B, 8 and 9 sold for $16.50, and 22, 23, 24 sold for the same amount. The prices in C ran from $12 to $20 premium. Prices began to jump in D, the highest paid being $35 for 20, 21 and 22, and quite a number of the seats sold for $30 and over.

In E $40.50 was the biggest premium paid. The prices ranged about $36, $38 and $40. In F, 17 and 18, two end seats, brought $59. The other seats in this row brought from $15 to $40. In F, 1, 2, 3 and 4 sold for $17.50, and the next four seats each brought a premium of $34, over twice as much.

In G No. 18 brought $75, the highest price paid up to that time, but this was eclipsed in H, when 16 and 17 were knocked down to a speculator for $87, the highest price of the morning. Seats in G and H averaged better than in any of the other rows. No. 17 in G sold for $53, and 18 and 19 in H brought $66. The other seats sold for premiums ranging from $20 to $45.

Toward 1 o'clock the crowd began to thin out, but Mr Jackson had then only reached O, and had still a large number of seats on the floor, beside those in the gallery, to dispose of.

The opinion generally seemed to be that while the premiums averaged higher than a year ago, the bidding was much slower.

BOSTON EVENING RECORD.

SEPTEMBER 21 1896.

SYMPHONY SEATS.

Society People Bid For Them—Good Prices Secured.

Once more the great autumn auction event of fashion has come around. Before 10 a. m. about 300 representatives of Boston fashion, all music lovers, had gathered in Music Hall. It was the sale by auction of the $12 rehearsal seats for the coming season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In an hour there were about 500 present.

At 10:15 Mr. Jackson, the auctioneer, mounted the platform, announced the seats to be sold this morning, and the great sale began without the least formality.

The seats sold were all those on the floor, 30 rows of 34 seats each. The bidding did not take on very large proportions till rows E and F were reached. The prices of the first five rows, however, were higher than had been expected and those in rows E, F, G and H were surprising.

Up to noon, high water mark was reached in the sale of seats 16 and 17, in row H, 17 being a central aisle seat. These seats were sold for $87.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, attired in a plain brown dress with a vest of white lace and a simple sailor hat, came in about 10:30, remained a short time and left. She had made no purchase up to noon.

Among others who were present were representatives of the Fay, Barnard, Amory, Lee, Lyman, and Endicott families. Harry Wainwright, Mrs. Dr. Hall Curtis, Mrs. Heaton and Franz Zerrahn were also there.

Other high prices paid were $75 for G, 18, an aisle seat; $53 for G, 17, directly across the central aisle; $59 for F, 17 and 18; $66 for H, 18 and 19. From row I back, the prices for the best seats fell away, I 17 and 18 only selling for $41, and J 17 for only $44.

The competition seemed to be entirely confined to rows E and H inclusive. Back of that prices were generally low as compared with the forward rows.

Prices generally, however, were exceptionally good though the bidding was slow.

DAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1896.

HIGH PREMIUMS.

First Sale of Symphony Seats Brings Out an Unusual Crowd.

The crowd in attendance at the Symphony sale today was unusually large, the bidding brisk, and the prices in the main uncommonly high.

The first seat sold, No. 1 in row A, the seat nearest the Hamilton Place door, brought a premium of $13. This was $4 higher than the same seat sold for last year. Seats 29, 30, 31, in the same row, brought the unprecedentedly high premium for this location of $18 50.

The superbly beautiful morning was a temptation to every one to come outdoors today, and this was no doubt in a measure the reason why the crowd in attendance at the Symphony ticket auction sale was a good deal larger than usual. The atmosphere in Music Hall was certainly an improvement, for when at the first day's sale last year thin shirt waists and constantly wavying fans could not keep one cool, this year wraps were not uncomfortable.

As usual there were 10 women to every man, and that many of them were old-timers was shown from the calmness with which they settled down to read until the migrations of the checker-off with his blue crayon across the diagram, approached the neighborhood of their favorite seats.

And, speaking of the checker-off, it is a satisfaction to see that the lofty step-ladder on which that faithful man performs his work has been braced up since last year, and that the bidders do not need to have their attention quite so frequently distracted by wondering when he is going to pitch over into the audience.

The sale today was of the $12 seats for the Friday afternoon rehearsals, and the prices bid were for the premium above this price.

By the time the centre seats in Row C had been reached, the bids were up to over $20.

The high prices began to be bid when row "F" was reached. Seventeen and 18 in this row brought $59. No. 18 in "G" brought $75 and 16 and 17 in "H" $87 each. This was $7 above the highest price paid last year. The two highest-priced seats last year were 16 and 17 in "J". This year these seats brought only $49 each.

Henry W. Jackson of Francis Henshaw & Co. was the auctioneer.

Mrs. Jack Gardner was at the sale dressed in a brown suit with white vest, and a sailor hat trimmed with lace and violets. She seemed to be taking a good deal of interest in the sale, but up to a late hour was not a purchaser.

There was an unusually large number of society people present, the fine weather having apparently brought in from Manchester, Beverly, Pride's and the other summer towns many who are not yet back in the city permanently.

The sale went very slowly. More people than usual bought only one seat, but the prices paid were high, and the sum total will probably be considerably ahead of last year. Proof of this is seen in the fact that as far back as in row "P" $60 was bid, while in the two succeeding rows prices kept well above $40.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, SEPT. 20, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SEASON.

The Boston Symphony orchestra will enter upon its sixteenth season by again offering the musical public an extended series of grand concerts, in which no element will be lacking that can add to their musical value or to their attractiveness. The musicianship, skill and devotion of the members of this organization, and the thoroughness with which all its performances are prepared, have given it preeminence among the orchestras of the world, and it is now recognized abroad as well as at home as the foremost orchestral organization of the day.

It will begin this season with its membership practically intact, only a few necessary changes having been made since last year. M. Jacquet succeeds M. Mole as first flute, and M. Bour has been engaged as second oboe. Both these artists come with a fine reputation, won in the Thomas and Damrosch orchestras. The orchestra will number ninety players, and will again be under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur.

The Boston season will comprise, as usual, twenty-four matinees on Fridays and twenty-four evening concerts on Saturdays at Music hall, beginning Oct. 16 and 17.

Full particulars in regard to sale of seats, etc., will be found in an advertisement which appears in another part of this paper. The list of soloists there mentioned will be found to be of a standard never excelled, and the source of even greater interest than before in the season's performances.

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPT. 20.

The sale of seats for the rehearsal of the Symphony Orchestra will take place in Music Hall on the morning of September 21 and September 22, and the sale of seats for the concerts September 24. The first public rehearsal is given on the afternoon of October 17. A large number of distinguished soloists will appear at the concerts, and many novelties in the way of new music are promised. Thanks to the knowledge and skill of Mr. Emil Paur, the Symphony Orchestra has reached the highest art level it ever before attained; and it is not only without an equal in this country, but will bear comparison with the most famous orchestras in Europe. In connection with the sale of tickets, it is well to remember that bids for seats will be accepted in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and that no more than four seats will be sold on one bid.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 22, 1896.

SYMPHONY TICKETS HIGH.

Large Gathering of Society People at the Auction of the Rehearsal Seats—Highest Premium Was $87.

Society turned out in goodly numbers yesterday morning, and swept into Music hall to bid on seats for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony orchestra. The $12 seats were put up, and knocked down to the highest bidders. The plan of the seats was tacked on to a huge board, which was set toward the front of the stage.

Prices were better this year than a year ago, so said several of the regular attendants at the Symphony sales.

There seemed to be a great many men in the audience—many more than at the first sale a year ago.

Mrs "Jack" Gardner was there, of course. No sale of symphony concerts seats would be quite complete without the presence of this acknowledged leader of Boston society. She always has the same two seats in the right balcony, and secured them as usual, yesterday.

Speculators were very much in evidence. The names of half dozen, well known to the Boston amusement going public, were heard to fall with great frequency from Mr Jackson's lips. The auctioneer, made the customary announcement shortly after 10 o'clock. This was in effect that the sale was of the $12 seats, the bids being a premium on $12, no more than four seats to be sold to one bidder.

The first seat, A 1, brought $13; 2 and 3 were sold for $10.50 each and 33 and 34 brought $12.50. In B, 8 and 9 sold for $16.50, and 22, 23, 24 sold for the same amount. The prices in C ran from $12 to $20 premium. Prices began to jump in D, the highest paid being $35 for 20, 21 and 22, and quite a number of the seats sold for $30 and over.

In E $40.50 was the biggest premium paid. The prices ranged about $36, $38 and $40. In F, 17 and 18, two end seats, brought $59. The other seats in this row brought from $15 to $40. In F, 1, 2, 3 and 4 sold for $17.50, and the next four seats each brought a premium of $34, over twice as much.

In G No. 18 brought $75, the highest price paid up to that time, but this was eclipsed in H, when 16 and 17 were knocked down to a speculator for $87, the highest price of the morning. Seats in G and H averaged better than in any of the other rows. No. 17 in G sold for $53, and 18 and 19 in H brought $66. The other seats sold for premiums ranging from $20 to $45.

Toward 1 o'clock the crowd began to thin out, but Mr Jackson had then only reached O, and had still a large number of seats on the floor, besides those in the gallery, to dispose of.

The opinion generally seemed to be that while the premiums averaged higher than a year ago, the bidding was much slower.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, SEPT. 20, 1896.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

There is no part of all the year that is looked forward to so longingly by music-loving Boston as that special week that marks the auction sale of the season Symphony tickets. This is really the fete week of the year, when it is known, too, that Mr. Emil Paur is again to conduct. Listen to these names of the soloists, too: Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Mlle. Aus Der Ohe, Messrs. Plancon, Campanari, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schultz, with others to be heard from later on.

The 16th season begins on Friday afternoon, October 16, from which time on there will be 24 public rehearsels; and from Saturday evening, October 17, there will be 24 concerts as of old. The $12 rehearsel seats will be sold at auction Monday at 10; the $7.50 rehearsel seats will be sold there on Tuesday at the same hour; the $12 seats for the Saturday evening concerts will be sold in the same way next Thursday morning, and the $7.50 concert seats on Friday at the same hour. The bidding promises to be sharp and lively, as the Symphony concert has come to be as necessary to Bostonians as their baked beans.

To miss these series is to forego the best the Hub has ever afforded in the line of high-class musicals, where the Terpsichorean devotee is in his element, and a person with merely "an ear for music" is enthralled by the symphony of sweet sounds.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

TUESDAY MORNING, SEPT. 22, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY AUCTION.

Once more the great autumn auction event of fashion has come around. Before 10 A.M. yesterday about 300 representatives of Boston fashion, all music lovers, had gathered in Music Hall. It was the sale by auction of the $12 rehearsal seats for the coming season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In an hour there were about 500 present.

At 10:15 Mr. Jackson, the auctioneer, mounted the platform, announced the seats to be sold this morning, and the great sale began without the least formality.

The seats sold were all those on the floor, 30 rows of 34 seats each. The bidding did not take on very large proportions till rows E and F were reached. The prices of the first five rows, however, were higher than had been expected and those in rows E, F, G and H were surprising.

Up to noon, high water mark was reached in the sale of seats 16 and 17, in row H, 17 being a central aisle seat. These seats were sold for $87.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, attired in a plain brown dress with a vest of white lace and a simple sailor hat, came in about 10:30, remained a short time and left. She had made no purchase up to noon.

Among others who were present were representatives of the Fay, Barnard, Amory, Lee, Lyman, and Endicott families. Harry Wainwright, Mrs. Dr. Hall Curtis, Mrs. Heaton and Franz Zerrahn were also there.

Other high prices paid were $75 for G, 18, an aisle seat; $53 for G, 17, directly across the central aisle; $59 for F, 17 and 18; $66 for H, 18 and 19. From row I back, the prices for the best seats fell away, I 17 and 18 only selling for [illegible] and J 17 for only [illegible]

The competition [illegible] confined to rows E and H [illegible]

Boston Traveler

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1896.

Chat About the Coming Symphony Season.

PAUR'S NEW YORK VICTORY.

The Courier at Last Admits His Ability—Lasalle Is to Return. The Kneisel Quartette. Other Gossip.

On Monday next begins the preliminary to the musical feast of the Boston season—the auction sale of seats for the Symphony concerts and rehearsals. So distinctively are these weekly events a part of the life of the city that it is scarcely necessary now to speak of their enormous influence upon musical education and their ability to give pleasure to the best and truest lovers of the art. It is customary to declare that people go to the Symphony because it is "en regle," something expected of society, just as a carriage is or an exodus from Beason street in May. Such a motive impels some, certainly, but a constant experience with Symphony audiences, close observance of the attention always paid and the genuine enthusiasm aroused proves clearly enough that the vast majority are there because they are fond of the music, and proud of the magnificent band that so nobly interprets it.

CONDUCTOR PAUR.

Nor has society a monopoly on the seats at Music Hall by any means. There is a very large contingent of people in moderate circumstances, and they can well afford to go, considering how very reasonable are the prices per concert. Even at an average premium of $15, the $7.50 seats allow one the 24 concerts at an expense of less than $1 a concert. Nowhere in the world is such a banquet furnished for the like money.

As to the auction plan of disposing of the seats, it is the best yet devised. With the present demand for seats, the old "standing-in-line" process would be simply intolerable. No one would get the seats he wanted, and the expense of hiring holders of places would be considerable. And those who complain that Mr. Higginson is by this plan the recipient of a large additional sum should remember that the same Mr. Higginson, for five or six years, went into his own individual pocket and pulled out thousands of dollars each season that the people of Boston might have as good as any. The public can never repay its debt to him.

Excellent things are promised for the coming season. Judging from the programmes of the first four concerts, Mr. Paur has decided to have a novelty each week. The younger romantic composers are to be well represented, and due attention will of course be paid to the classicists. The list of soloists is enough to raise delightful anticipations. Melba will sing, and Plancon will make his first appearance with our orchestra here. The meteoric Rosenthal will be heard, and the great Joseffy will visit us. Teresa Carreno, that handsome woman and brilliant pianist, is to return after a seven-years' absence, and Aus de Ohe will also be included, as well as Sieveking, who made a real triumph last year. An absolutely new man will be Halir, the great German violinist. Our own Symphony soloists will appear as usual, including Mr. Adamowski, who has come back to the fold. All in all, the outlook is for the finest season thus far given by the splendid organization.

The world do move! The New York Musical Courier, formerly the relentless enemy of Conductor Paur, has renounced its position as gracefully as it is able, and, with the final appeal "Boston papers please copy," it now admits that we have a great conductor at the head of the Symphony Orchestra. It arrives at its change of base in an amusing way, but the result is the same. It says:

"Mr. Paur has improved as conductor because he has been at the head of the greatest orchestra in the world, because he has benefited by the more cosmopolitan life of America, and because he has taken seriously the many criticisms of his work which have appeared in this journal. In a word, he is a progressive man who has seized his opportunity—a magnificent one—and has profited by it.

"All this is as it should be. Mr. Paur could not be an artist and refuse to feel the refining influences of his entourage, his environment. Rehearsing continually with such an orchestra, and rehearsing without the pressure of being compelled to play a certain composition on a certain date, was bound to work wonders."

So, then, the orchestra has made Mr. [illegible] A very pretty theory. [illegible] to those of us who have watched the orchestra week by week for several years, and know that it is doing better work now than at any time under Mr. Nikisch. However, the Courier uses the word "artist" as descriptive of Mr. Paur, a term which it used to fiercely deny him, so we must let it go at that.

***

Boston Daily Globe.

MONDAY, SEPT. 21, 1896.

SYMPHONY TICKETS HIGH.

Large Gathering of Society People at the Auction of the Rehearsal Seats—Highest Premium Was $87.

Society turned out in goodly numbers this morning, and swept into Music hall to bid on seats for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony orchestra. The $12 seats were put up, and knocked down to the highest bidders. The plan of the seats was tacked on to a huge board, which was set toward the front of the stage.

Auctioneer Jackson paraded up and down the stage in front of the board, with his black baton, and sold the seats. Prices were better this year than a year ago, so said several of the regular attendants at the Symphony sales.

There seemed to be a great many men in the audience—many more than at the first sale a year ago.

Mrs "Jack" Gardner was there, of course. No sale of Symphony concert seats would be quite complete without the presence of this acknowledged leader of Boston society. She always has the same two seats in the right balcony, and secured them, as usual, today.

Speculators were very much in evidence. The names of half a dozen, well known to the Boston amusement going public, were heard to fall with great frequency from Mr Jackson's lips. The auctioneer, made the customary announcement shortly after 10 o'clock. This was in effect that the sale was of the $12 seats, the bids being a premium on $12, no more than four seats to be sold to one bidder.

The first seat, A 1, brought $13; 2 and 3 were sold for $10.50 each and 33 and 34 brought $12.50. In B, 8 and 9 sold for $16.50, and 22, 23, 24 sold for the same amount. The prices in C ran from $12 to $20 premium. Prices began to jump in D, the highest paid being $35 for 20, 21 and 22, and quite a number of the seats sold for $30 and over.

In E $40.50 was the biggest premium paid. The prices ranged about $36, $38 and $40. In F, 17 and 18, two end seats, brought $59. The other seats in this row brought from $15 to $40. In F, 1, 2, 3 and 4 sold for $17.50, and the next four seats each brought a premium of $34, over twice as much.

In G No. 18 brought $75, the highest price paid up to that time, but this was eclipsed in H, when 16 and 17 were knocked down to a speculator for $87, the highest price of the morning. Seats in G and H averaged better than in any of the other rows. No. 17 in G sold for $53, and 18 and 19 in H brought $66. The other seats sold for premiums ranging from $20 to $45.

Toward 1 o'clock the crowd began to thin out, but Mr Jackson had then only reached O, and had still a large number of seats on the floor, beside those in the gallery, to dispose of.

The opinion generally seemed to be that while the premiums averaged higher than a year ago, the bidding was much slower.

BOSTON EVENING RECORD.

SEPTEMBER 21 1896.

SYMPHONY SEATS.

Society People Bid For Them—Good Prices Secured.

Once more the great autumn auction event of fashion has come around. Before 10 a. m. about 300 representatives of Boston fashion, all music lovers, had gathered in Music Hall. It was the sale by auction of the $12 rehearsal seats for the coming season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In an hour there were about 500 present.

At 10:15 Mr. Jackson, the auctioneer, mounted the platform, announced the seats to be sold this morning, and the great sale began without the least formality.

The seats sold were all those on the floor, 30 rows of 34 seats each. The bidding did not take on very large proportions till rows E and F were reached. The prices of the first five rows, however, were higher than had been expected and those in rows E, F, G and H were surprising.

Up to noon, high water mark was reached in the sale of seats 16 and 17, in row H, 17 being a central aisle seat. These seats were sold for $87.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, attired in a plain brown dress with a vest of white lace and a simple sailor hat, came in about 10:30, remained a short time and left. She had made no purchase up to noon.

Among others who were present were representatives of the Fay, Barnard, Amory, Lee, Lyman, and Endicott families. Harry Wainwright, Mrs. Dr. Hall Curtis, Mrs. Heaton and Franz Zenahn were also there.

Other high prices paid were $75 for G, 18, an aisle seat; $53 for G, 17, directly across the central aisle; $59 for F, 17 and 18; $66 for H, 18 and 19. From row I back, the prices for the best seats fell away, I 17 and 18 only selling for $41, and J 17 for only $44.

The competition seemed to be entirely confined to rows E and H inclusive. Back of that prices were generally low as compared with the forward rows.

Prices generally, however, were exceptionally good though the bidding was slow.

Boston Journal.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1896.

HIGH PREMIUMS.

First Sale of Symphony Seats Brings Out an Unusual Crowd.

The crowd in attendance at the Symphony sale today was unusually large, the bidding brisk, and the prices in the main uncommonly high.

The first seat sold, No. 1 in row A, the seat nearest the Hamilton Place door, brought a premium of $13. This was $4 higher than the same seat sold for last year Seats 29, 30, 31, in the same row, brought the unprecedentedly high premium for this location of $18 50.

The superbly beautiful morning was a temptation to every one to come outdoors today, and this was no doubt in a measure the reason why the crowd in attendance at the Symphony ticket auction sale was a good deal larger than usual. The atmosphere in Music Hall was certainly an improvement, for when at the first day's sale last year thin shirt waists and constantly wavying fans could not keep one cool, this year wraps were not uncomfortable.

As usual there were 10 women to every man, and that many of them were oldtimers was shown from the calmness with which they settled down to read until the migrations of the checker-off with his blue crayon across the diagram, approached the neighborhood of their favorite seats.

And, speaking of the checker-off, it is a satisfaction to see that the lofty step-ladder on which that faithful man performs his work has been braced up since last year, and that the bidders do not need to have their attention quite so frequently distracted by wondering when he is going to pitch over into the audience.

The sale today was of the $12 seats for the Friday afternoon rehearsals, and the prices bid were for the premium above this price.

By the time the centre seats in Row C had been reached, the bids were up to over $20.

The high prices began to be bid when row "F" was reached. Seventeen and 18 in this row brought $59. No. 18 in "G" brought $75 and 16 and 17 in "H" $87 each. This was $7 above the highest price paid last year. The two highest-priced seats last year were 16 and 17 in "J". This year these seats brought only $49 each.

Henry W. Jackson of Francis Henshaw & Co. was the auctioneer.

Mrs. Jack Gardner was at the sale dressed in a brown suit with white vest, and a sailor hat trimmed with lace and violets. She seemed to be taking a good deal of interest in the sale, but up to a late hour was not a purchaser.

There was an unusually large number of society people present, the fine weather having apparently brought in from Manchester, Beverly, Pride's and the other summer towns many who are not yet back in the city permanently.

The sale went very slowly. More people than usual bought only one seat, but the prices paid were high, and the sum total will probably be considerably ahead of last year. Proof of this is seen in the fact that as far back as in row "P" $60 was bid, while in the two succeeding rows prices kept well above $40.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, SEPT. 20, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SEASON.

The Boston Symphony orchestra will enter upon its sixteenth season by again offering the musical public an extended series of grand concerts, in which no element will be lacking that can add to their musical value or to their attractiveness. The musicianship, skill and devotion of the members of this organization, and the thoroughness with which all its performances are prepared, have given it preeminence among the orchestras of the world, and it is now recognized abroad as well as at home as the foremost orchestral organization of the day.

It will begin this season with its membership practically intact, only a few necessary changes having been made since last year. M. Jacquet succeeds M. Mole as first flute, and M. Bour has been engaged as second oboe. Both these artists come with a fine reputation, won in the Thomas and Damrosch orchestras. The orchestra will number ninety players, and will again be under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur.

The Boston season will comprise, as usual, twenty-four matinees on Fridays and twenty-four evening concerts on Saturdays at Music hall, beginning Oct. 16 and 17.

Full particulars in regard to sale of seats, etc., will be found in an advertisement which appears in another part of this paper. The list of soloists there mentioned will be found to be of a standard never excelled, and the source of even greater interest than before in the season's performances.

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPT. 20.

The sale of seats for the rehearsal of the Symphony Orchestra will take place in Music Hall on the morning of September 21 and September 22, and the sale of seats for the concerts September 24. The first public rehearsal is given on the afternoon of October 17. A large number of distinguished soloists will appear at the concerts, and many novelties in the way of new music are promised. Thanks to the knowledge and skill of Mr. Emil Paur, the Symphony Orchestra has reached the highest art level it ever before attained; and it is not only without an equal in this country, but will bear comparison with the most famous orchestras in Europe. In connection with the sale of tickets, it is well to remember that bids for seats will be accepted in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and that no more than four seats will be sold on one bid.

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 22, 1896.

SYMPHONY TICKETS HIGH.

Large Gathering of Society People at the Auction of the Rehearsal Seats—Highest Premium Was $87.

Society turned out in goodly numbers yesterday morning, and swept into Music hall to bid on seats for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony orchestra. The $12 seats were put up, and knocked down to the highest bidders. The plan of the seats was tacked on to a huge board, which was set toward the front of the stage.

Prices were better this year than a year ago, so said several of the regular attendants at the Symphony sales.

There seemed to be a great many men in the audience—many more than at the first sale a year ago.

Mrs "Jack" Gardner was there, of course. No sale of symphony concerts seats would be quite complete without the presence of this acknowledged leader of Boston society. She always has the same two seats in the right balcony, and secured them as usual, yesterday.

Speculators were very much in evidence. The names of half dozen, well known to the Boston amusement going public, were heard to fall with great frequency from Mr Jackson's lips. The auctioneer, made the customary announcement shortly after 10 o'clock. This was in effect that the sale was of the $12 seats, the bids being a premium on $12, no more than four seats to be sold to one bidder.

The first seat, A 1, brought $13; 2 and 3 were sold for $10.50 each and 33 and 34 brought $12.50. In B, 8 and 9 sold for $16.50, and 22, 23, 24 sold for the same amount. The prices in C ran from $12 to $20 premium. Prices began to jump in D, the highest paid being $35 for 20, 21 and 22, and quite a number of the seats sold for $30 and over.

In E $40.50 was the biggest premium paid. The prices ranged about $36, $38 and $40. In F, 17 and 18, two end seats, brought $59. The other seats in this row brought from $15 to $40. In F, 1, 2, 3 and 4 sold for $17.50, and the next four seats each brought a premium of $34, over twice as much.

In G No. 18 brought $75, the highest price paid up to that time, but this was eclipsed in H, when 16 and 17 were knocked down to a speculator for $87, the highest price of the morning. Seats in G and H averaged better than in any of the other rows. No. 17 in G sold for $53, and 18 and 19 in H brought $66. The other seats sold for premiums ranging from $20 to $45.

Toward 1 o'clock the crowd began to thin out, but Mr Jackson had then only reached O, and had still a large number of seats on the floor, besides those in the gallery, to dispose of.

The opinion generally seemed to be that while the premiums averaged higher than a year ago, the bidding was much slower.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, SEPT. 20, 1896.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

There is no part of all the year that is looked forward to so longingly by music-loving Boston as that special week that marks the auction sale of the season Symphony tickets. This is really the fete week of the year, when it is known, too, that Mr. Emil Paur is again to conduct. Listen to these names of the soloists, too: Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, Mlle. Aus Der Ohe, Messrs. Plancon, Campanari, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schultz, with others to be heard from later on.

The 16th season begins on Friday afternoon, October 16, from which time on there will be 24 public rehearsels; and from Saturday evening, October 17, there will be 24 concerts as of old. The $12 rehearsel seats will be sold at auction Monday at 10; the $7.50 rehearsel seats will be sold there on Tuesday at the same hour; the $12 seats for the Saturday evening concerts will be sold in the same way next Thursday morning, and the $7.50 concert seats on Friday at the same hour. The bidding promises to be sharp and lively, as the Symphony concert has come to be as necessary to Bostonians as their baked beans.

To miss these series is to forego the best the Hub has ever afforded in the line of high-class musicals, where the Terpsichorean devotee is in his element, and a person with merely "an ear for music" is enthralled by the symphony of sweet sounds.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

TUESDAY MORNING, SEPT. 22, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY AUCTION.

Once more the great autumn auction event of fashion has come around. Before 10 A.M. yesterday about 300 representatives of Boston fashion, all music lovers, had gathered in Music Hall. It was the sale by auction of the $12 rehearsal seats for the coming season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In an hour there were about 500 present.

At 10:15 Mr. Jackson, the auctioneer, mounted the platform, announced the seats to be sold this morning, and the great sale began without the least formality.

The seats sold were all those on the floor, 30 rows of 34 seats each. The bidding did not take on very large proportions till rows E and F were reached. The prices of the first five rows, however, were higher than had been expected and those in rows E, F, G and H were surprising.

Up to noon, high water mark was reached in the sale of seats 16 and 17, in row H, 17 being a central aisle seat. These seats were sold for $87.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, attired in a plain brown dress with a vest of white lace and a simple sailor hat, came in about 10:30, remained a short time and left. She had made no purchase up to noon.

Among others who were present were representatives of the Fay, Barnard, Amory, Lee, Lyman, and Endicott families. Harry Wainwright, Mrs. Dr. Hall Curtis, Mrs. Heaton and Franz Zerrahn were also there.

Other high prices paid were $75 for G, 18, an aisle seat; $53 for G, 17, directly across the central aisle; $59 for F, 17 and 18; $66 for H, 18 and 19. From row I back, the prices for the best seats fell away, I 17 and 18 only selling for $41, and J 17 for only $44.

The competition seemed to be entirely confined to rows E and H inclusive. Back of that prices were generally low as compared with the forward rows.

Prices generally, however, were exceptionally good though the bidding was slow.

N HERALD — TUES[illegible]BER 22, 1896.

CROWD OF EAGER PURCHASERS

Sale of Seats for Symphony Orchestra Rehearsals.

Auctioneer Jackson Succeeded in Securing Better Prices Than Those of Last Year—First Seat Sold Brought a Premium of $13—Two Coveted Chairs at Premium of $87 Each.

Music Hall held an animated and representative gathering yesterday morning. In the throng which gathered there were members of the fashionable Back Bay colony, artists, litterateurs and musicians, and people from the more humble walks of life. Many were out-and-out lovers and connoisseurs of high-class music, some were patrons of musical affairs from a social standpoint only, others came out of curiosity, and a few were there whose interest in the sale was a purely speculative one. The attraction was the annual auction sale of seats for the series of Friday afternoon public rehearsals of the Symphony orchestra.

Long before the time for beginning the sale nearly all the seats on the lower floor of the hall were occupied by an eager and expectant crowd. They were ready for the fray when Auctioneer Henry W. Jackson announced that the sale was on.

On the stage a huge plan of the seats was displayed. Nearby was a large step ladder for the checker-off. This individual had his hands full soon after the sale began, for the bidding was quite brisk. The auctioneer, with his black baton firmly gripped in his hand, walked up and down the platform leisurely, with a coolness that was perfectly teasing to the impatient crowd. His auditors were nerved up to a feverish pitch of anxiety during his calm preparations for the sale. These preparations consisted in acting out a little prologue of his own in the way of tipping off excellent seats, answering numerous questions, and now and then making a brief announcement. Everything was ready. The preliminaries had been duly arranged. Nothing remained but a few words of advice and explanation. This came in the shape of a short statement that the sale would be for the $12 seats only, and that they would be sold on premium bids. That is, the bids would be for premiums to be added to the box office price of tickets. Then the fun began.

It was shortly after 10 o'clock when the first seats were put up at auction. In the audience were a number of old-timers, regular yearly patrons of the Symphony concerts. They were the ones who took matters easily. It was amusing to listen to the bids and note the changes and sounds in the different voices when the bids went too high for the applicants, or when the coveted seats were knocked down to them.

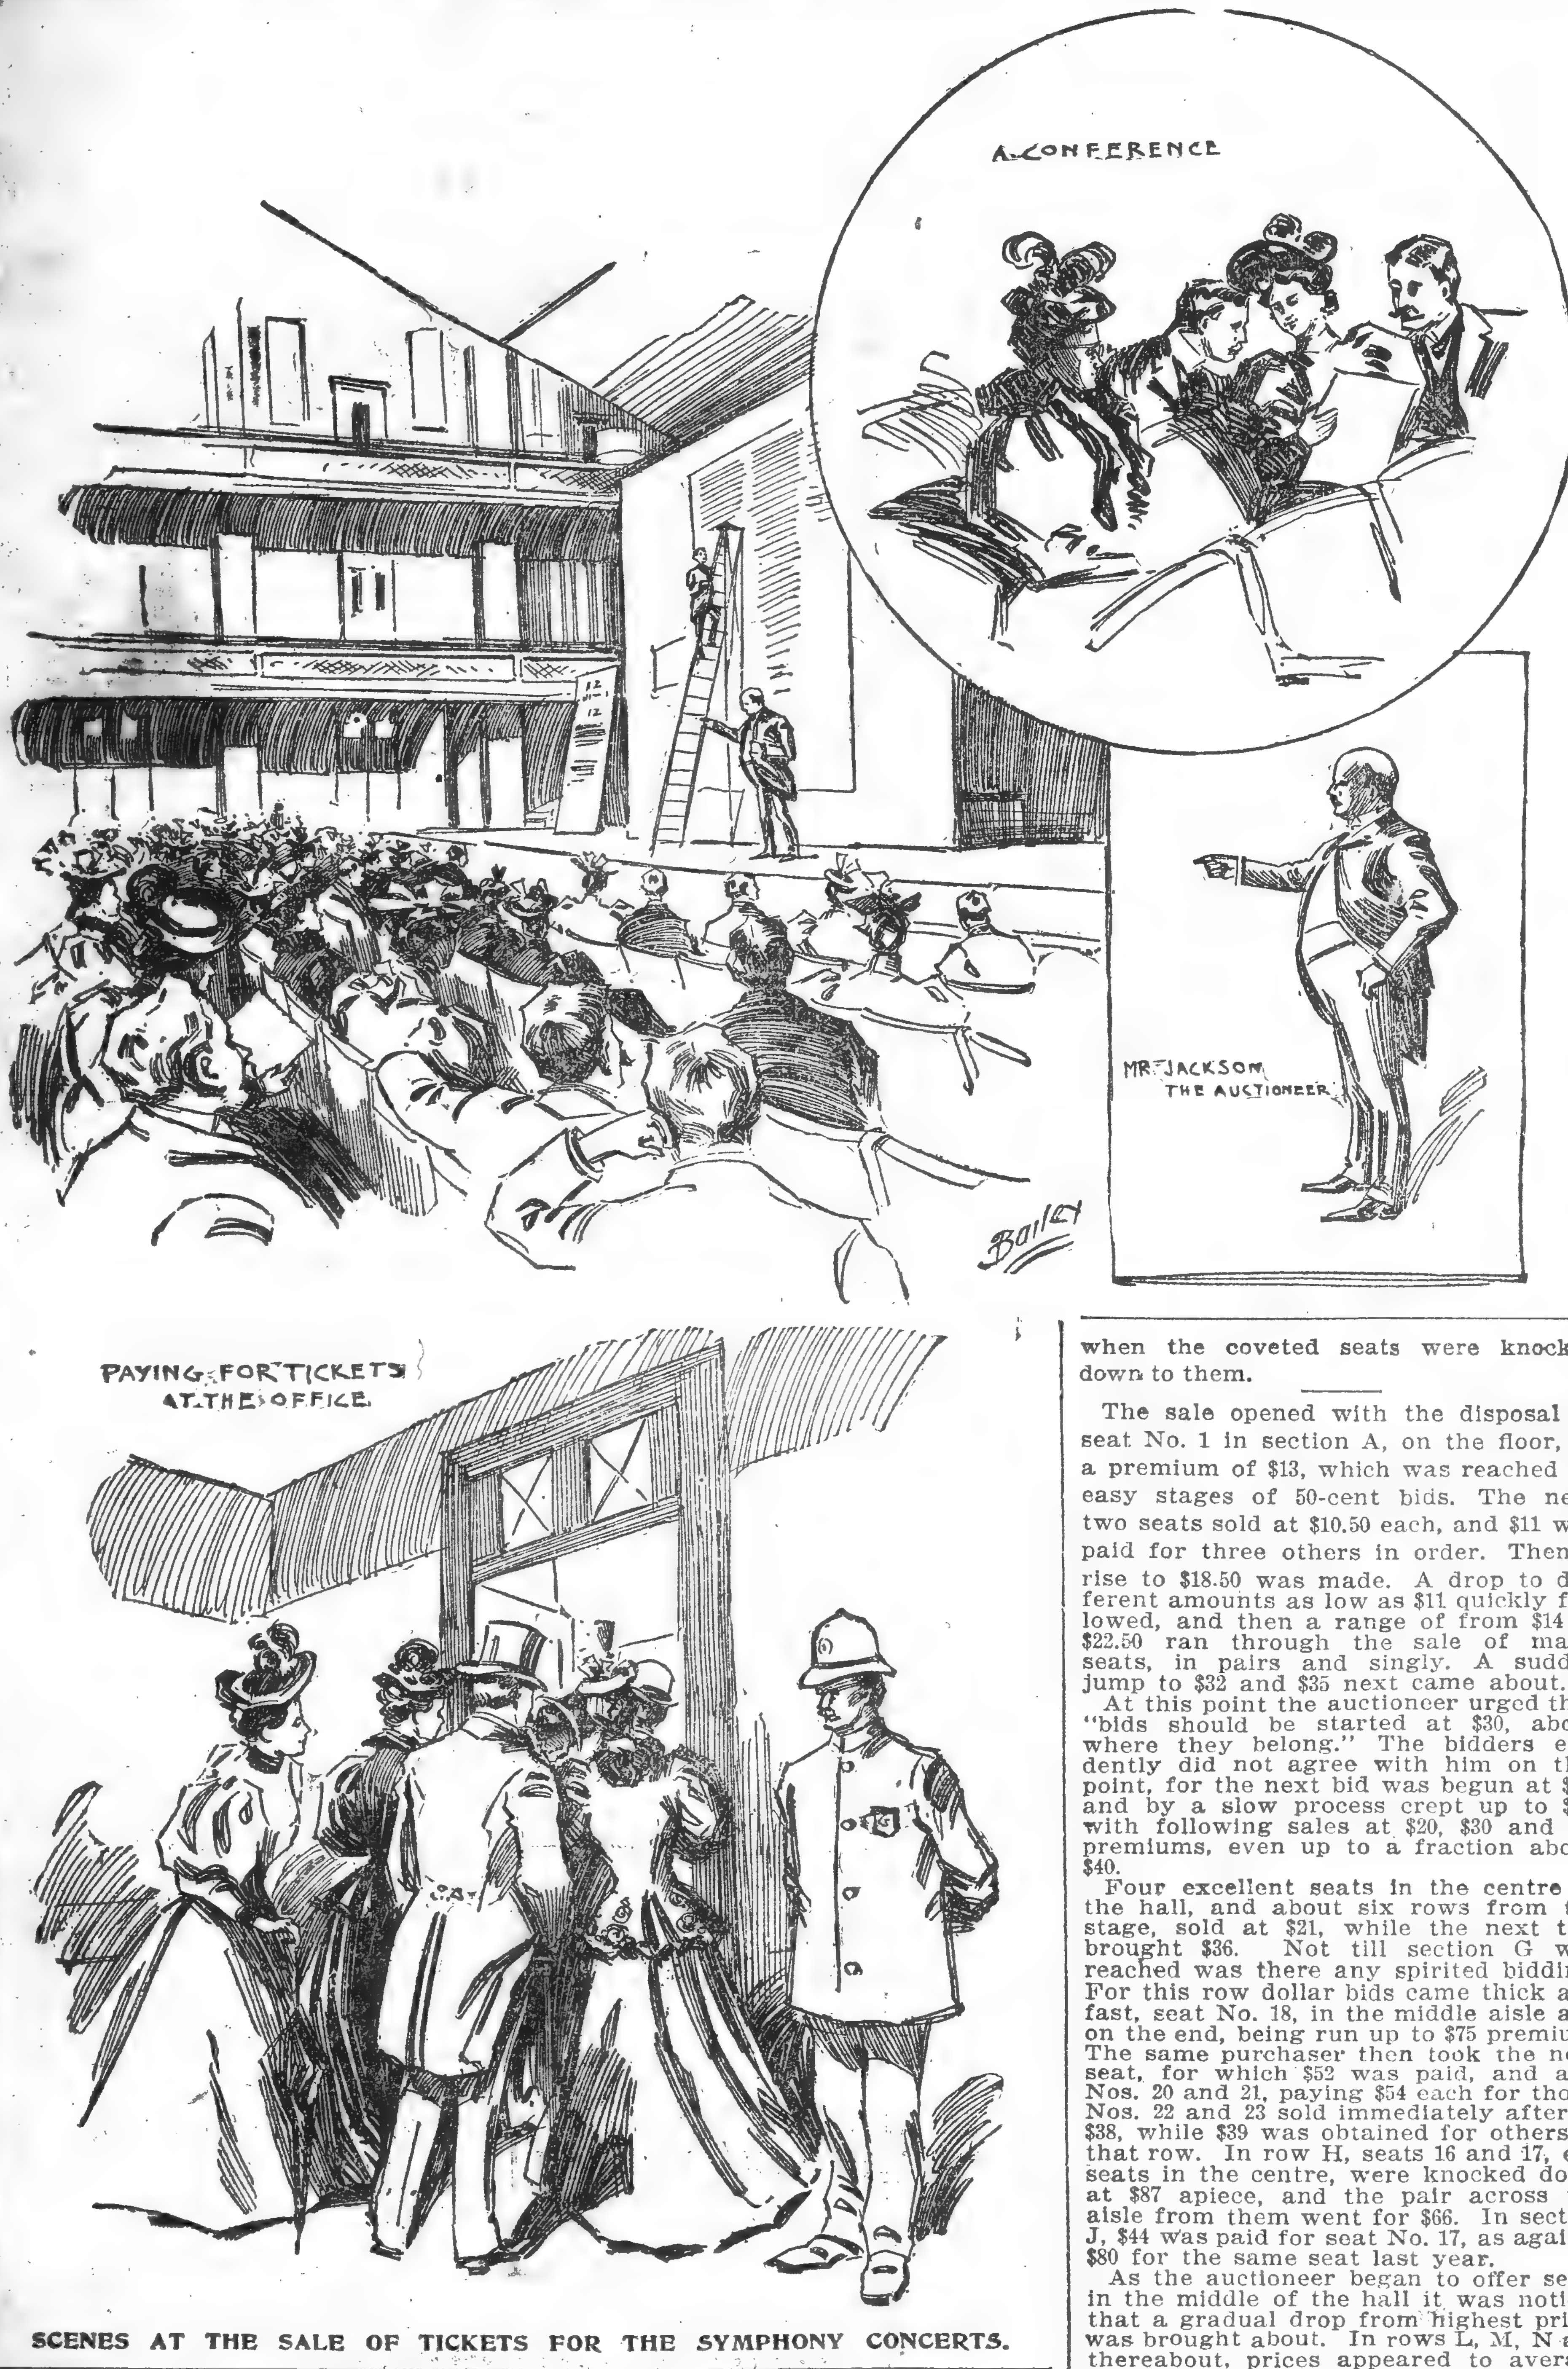
The sale opened with the disposal of seat No. 1 in section A, on the floor, at a premium of $13, which was reached by easy stages of 50-cent bids. The next two seats sold at $10.50 each, and $11 was paid for three others in order. Then a rise to $18.50 was made. A drop to different amounts as low as $11 quickly followed, and then a range of from $14 to $22.50 ran through the sale of many seats, in pairs and singly. A sudden jump to $32 and $35 next came about.

At this point the auctioneer urged that "bids should be started at $30, about where they belong." The bidders evidently did not agree with him on this point, for the next bid was begun at $16, and by a slow process crept up to $25, with following sales at $20, $30 and $32 premiums, even up to a fraction above $40.

Four excellent seats in the centre of the hall, and about six rows from the stage, sold at $21, while the next two brought $36. Not till section G was reached was there any spirited bidding. For this row dollar bids came thick and fast, seat No. 18, in the middle aisle and on the end, being run up to $75 premium. The same purchaser then took the next seat, for which $52 was paid, and also Nos. 20 and 21, paying $54 each for those. Nos. 22 and 23 sold immediately after at $38, while $39 was obtained for others in that row. In row H, seats 16 and 17, end seats in the centre, were knocked down at $87 apiece, and the pair across the aisle from them went for $66. In section J, $44 was paid for seat No. 17, as against $80 for the same seat last year.

As the auctioneer began to offer seats in the middle of the hall it was noticed that a gradual drop from highest prices was brought about. In rows L, M, N and thereabout, prices appeared to average from $20 to $25, though many pairs, here and there, sold at from $40 to $45. From these figures up to about $60 were the amounts paid for a selection in this part of the hall. Seats in the rear part of the hall, under the balcony, sold at an average premium of from $5 to $7.

It was noticeable that in most sections the seats on the Hamilton place side of the hall sold at lower general prices than those paid for the middle and extreme left seats in the same rows. All in all, better prices throughout the hall ruled yesterday, as compared with the sale last year.



SCENES AT THE SALE OF TICKETS FOR THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

Boston Transcript

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1896.

SALE OF SYMPHONY SEATS CONTINUED

Good Bidding Today for the Rehearsal Tickets.

Not quite so many people attended the continued sale of Symphony concert tickets at Music Hall today as were present yesterday. There were fewer seats offered, the lot comprising only the less desirable seats for the Friday rehearsals. A wide range of premiums prevailed above the regular box office price of $7.50 a ticket. The seats offered were those on the floor, under the rear balcony, and wall seats around the first balcony. Two rows across the rear part of the balcony were included in the seats offered. The first sale was at $8.50 premium, followed by $9, $10 and up to $13, this being the highest price paid for any seat on the floor. From these figures came a drop, and it was hard for the auctioneer to get a bid started at $10. Five dollars appeared to be a favorite figure for a starting point, though frequently calls as low as $2 or $3 would be heard. On these bids the average sales seemed to be at from $6 to $8.50. The lowest premium paid on some of these floor seats was twenty-five cents, and the seats at that price seemed fully as desirable as some near by which sold at a higher price.

The few seats in the first balcony brought better prices. The bidding was more spirited; prices began at about $11 and went as high as $23, the top price of the day. Many seats sold at from $5 to $7 premium.

As at yesterday's sale, ticket brokers were on hand to execute orders and to pick up chance pairs of seats here and there. The prices paid by them in most cases were on a line with those paid by other buyers. Patrons desiring special seats, which they may have occupied for many seasons, rely on the brokers to bid for their choice. C. J. Connelly of the Adams House, for instance, received orders from as far away as Ceylon, India, from people who will be back in Boston in time to enjoy the series of concerts. Mr. Connelly also has many customers who are in Europe when the sales take place, and they depend upon him to look after their interests. His orders last year brought his purchases up to $16,000, and his check for this season's purchases will be even more. Other brokers also had special commissions to execute. As in past seasons, the entire second balcony is left for the accommodation of such fortunate people as may get a seat by rushing for it after gaining an entrance by means of the ordinary admission tickets which are sold from week to week.

Boston Transcript

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1896.

SALE OF SYMPHONY CONCERT TICKETS

Seats for the Evening Performances Sell at Lower Prices than Those for the Rehearsals.

Interest in the performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra appears to have a stronger hold on patrons of the Friday-afternoon rehearsals than is the case with the Saturday-evening concerts. At the sale at Music Hall today of tickets for the evening series, not as large a number of buyers was present at any one time as was the case with the sales on Monday and Tuesday. Today's crowd of purchasers was a more constantly shifting one, and many were dropping in all through the forenoon to take the places of those who left after making purchases. Prices at today's sale were far lower, on the average, than the premiums paid for corresponding seats for the rehearsals. Mr. Jackson, the auctioneer, could obtain no bid at all on the first few seats in section A, on the right-hand side of the hall. The first sale made was at $5.50 premium, while seats in the row behind soon sold at from $6 to $12 premium. After this a number went at prices ranging from $10 to $16. Excellent seats in row E sold at $6 and $7 in advance of the box-office price, while the next seats in order brought $12.50 each. In sections E, F, G and thereabout, prices today ran from $11 up to $25, as against from $6 to $24 last year for about the same situation of seats. When these rows were reached, bidding began usually at $10. Back of the broad aisle seats sold at prices which appeared to average lower than the same seats brought last year.

One excellent pair of seats in row P, on the left of the hall and but two seats removed from the aisle, sold today at $8.50, while the holder of them last year paid $18 premium for them. The same buyer feared that these seats would sell for more than last year's price, and so a purchase was made of no better seats, though several rows nearer the stage, for which about $20 premium was paid. It was noticed that buyers desiring single seats could get an odd one, at the left end of most of the rows, at a most moderate advance, $4 and a little above that being a frequent price paid for such single seats. The purchaser had the privilege of taking any part of four seats at the price at which the end seat was knocked down to him, and thus could have taken three seats in the row behind, but beginning at the other side of the hall, near Hamilton place. This advantage was not seized, however, by even brokers, and after the left end seat was disposed of, those in the beginning of the next row usually sold at four or five times as much as the odd seat had brought. A top price was reached in the payment of $59 for a choice of end seats in the centre of row J. Bidding today was more spirited and there was not the same hesitation that was shown at the sales of rehearsal tickets. The lower-priced seats for the evening concerts are to be sold tomorrow.

[illegible] the Coming [illegible]

[illegible] has just returned from [illegible] an interview at his home in [illegible] with our representative, Mr. [illegible]

[illegible] of the Boston Symphony will [illegible] the 17th of October, but as [illegible] there will be a public rehearsal on the [illegible] just previous. I have been busy [illegible] summer compiling programmes, and [illegible] thus far only the first six have been [illegible] arranged, quite a number of nov- [illegible] have already been selected, which I [illegible] will be gladly welcomed by our [illegible]

[illegible] this time, perhaps more so than at [illegible] other time during the past fifteen years, [illegible] is a growing tendency to go back to [illegible] simplicity and naturalness of the old [illegible] and to make ourselves better ac- [illegible] with the old works, and as a re- [illegible] Mozart, Haydn and others appear on [illegible] programmes with more frequency than [illegible] This reaction is a natural one, and [illegible] not limited itself to the concert hall, [illegible] has made itself felt also in operatic per- [illegible] The result of this has been [illegible] of Goldmark's 'Heimchen am [illegible]' and Humperdinck's 'Hansel and [illegible],' which are charming in their very simplicity. The overture of the latter and [illegible] entr'acte of the former are included in [illegible] programmes. I especially anticipate [illegible] performance of a symphony by Ditters- [illegible], which, I think, will charm everybody, [illegible] to its joyful mood and natural sim- [illegible] A very interesting feature will also [illegible] the selection of fragments from Gluck's [illegible] music to 'Don Juan,' which is the [illegible] of Mozart's 'Don Juan,' and [illegible] related to the same in musical dis- [illegible] and characterization. We will also [illegible] the overture to Gwendoline by Cha- [illegible], of which we performed an entr'acte [illegible] year, which met with such favor as to [illegible] me think that the overture will be a [illegible] novelty.

[illegible] overture to Ingwelde, by Schilling, [illegible] also be heard in Boston for the first [illegible] the coming season. This opera, which [illegible] now a great favorite in Germany, was [illegible] introduced by Mottl in Carlsruhe, and [illegible] myself in Leipsic, where it met with in- [illegible] recognition, and it was later [illegible] performed in Paris. Tschaikowsky [illegible] has met with so signal public favor [illegible] also not be forgotten, and his second [illegible] fourth symphonies which are included [illegible] the programmes are new here. Bruck- [illegible] is a renowned Vienna composer, who [illegible] to the extreme modern direction, [illegible] it appears to me as a duty to bring one [illegible] his works, as hardly anything is known [illegible] him in America. His works are hard [illegible] understand by the general public, but I [illegible] no doubt that in spite of this Bruck- [illegible] will meet with appreciation and will not [illegible] to awaken the interest to which he is [illegible] (We remember having heard it [illegible] that Wagner wrote to Bruckner as follows: 'What I am in the "Musik-Drama" [illegible] you are in the symphony,' and greater [illegible] Wagner could certainly not bestow.) L'Enterrement d'Ophélie by Bourgault- [illegible] is another novelty which un- [illegible] will quickly win public favor, [illegible] the same I hope will prove to be the [illegible] with Smetana, who will be represented [illegible] programmes by two or three works.

[illegible] far as I can tell now, works of the [illegible] composers will be played in the [illegible] of the season by the Boston Sym- [illegible] Orchestra:

[illegible] composers—
[illegible], Chabrier, Saint-Saëns, Berlioz, Bizet, [illegible]
[illegible] and Slavic composers—
[illegible], Rimsky-Korsakoff, Borodin, Smetana.
[illegible] composers—
[illegible], Weber, Brahms, Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, [illegible], Schubert, Schumann, Volkmann, Corne- [illegible], Mendelssohn, Rubinstein, Humperdinck, [illegible], Haydn, Richard Strauss and Bruckner.

[illegible] Cowen will represent the English [illegible]

[illegible] is my good fortune to welcome to this [illegible] this season a great many of my [illegible] friends as soloists of the Boston Symphony, as Rosenthal, Halir, Siloti, [illegible], Carreno and others. Halir is ac- [illegible] in Germany to be the first vio- [illegible] after Joachim, as whose successor he [illegible] looked upon in Berlin. Carreno has not [illegible] heard here for the past seven years, [illegible] which time she has made enormous [illegible], so that her appearances may be anticipated to be a great success. Then Sieveking will be with us again this year, [illegible] as his success last year was nothing [illegible] of sensational, he may well expect a [illegible] reception, as may also Plançon and [illegible] Of the favorite American stars [illegible] and Eames will surely be welcomed [illegible] enthusiasm. Mr. Whiting, who until [illegible] a resident of Boston and who [illegible] with us last year, will make his début with the symphony before a Boston audience, playing his own concerto. I have had the rare pleasure this summer of meeting a young man of very great promise. He is a pupil of Faelten [illegible] of my friend Leschetizky, and has just [illegible] his studies. He intends to settle in [illegible], and it is very probable that the [illegible] will have an opportunity to hear him [illegible] us, and he will no doubt prove a suc- [illegible]

[illegible] I have received so many requests [illegible] all sides asking for a repetition of the [illegible] Wagner programme, I cannot [illegible] these demands, and the same [illegible] this season, not only in [illegible] but also in the other cities on the [illegible]

[illegible] far as the changes in the make-up of [illegible] are concerned, nothing can be [illegible] not already public property."

[illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra and the [illegible] solo artists who will assist [illegible] of the coming season form [illegible] to arouse anticipations of the [illegible] in the minds of the mu- [illegible] magnificent orchestra perfected [illegible] of experience and asociation was [illegible] The New York Sun [illegible] of it: "The Boston orchestra [illegible] the same, from conductor unto con- [illegible], under whatever conditions of [illegible] still remains the standard by [illegible] like musical bodies must be [illegible] in this country. By years of as- [illegible] Boston men have attained [illegible] precision and unanimity of pur- [illegible] in the world, perhaps, [illegible] all this work the [illegible] and pure de- [illegible]

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 81.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 19, 1896.

The musical campaign will be inaugurated next Monday in ward 7, when a preliminary caucus will be held at Music Hall for the (s)election of Symphony seats for 1896-97. Mr. H. W. Jackson will be the temporary chairman, and will address the meeting on the "Tariff." One-minute speeches will be made by representative men and women of the Republican, Democratic, Populist, Prohibitionist, Woman Suffrage, Wagner and anti-Wagner parties. A large attendance and a spirited meeting are expected.

Boston Journal.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1896.

$7 50 SEATS.

Symphony Auction Continued—Good Attendance and Prices Average Well.

The floor of Music Hall was comfortably well filled Tuesday morning by purchasers of Symphony rehearsal tickets. The seats sold Tuesday were the $7 50 seats for Friday afternoons.

These seats include the back seats on the floor and the back rows in the first balcony. The prices for the floor seats did not run quite as high as last year, nor did the highest in the balcony, but it is probable that the total sum realized will be as much as last year, as the average price, especially in the balcony, kept well up.

The highest price which any floor seat brought this year was $13. Last year the two best floor seats brought $15. In the balcony prices went up this year to $22 against $27 last year.

The personnel of the company gathered by the sale Tuesday was very different from that of Monday. Then society people—or perhaps, more correctly, people of leisure—were in the majority. Tuesday their places were taken very generally by earnest-looking young men and women, a very great many of them students of music or teachers, who look upon these concerts each year as not only the most delightful recreation of their winters, but also a means of education which cannot be dispensed with, no matter how great is the sacrifice necessary to obtain it.

The sale on Monday proved very long, and was not over until nearly 6 P. M.

GLOBE—SUNDAY.

—The management of the Boston symphony orchestra announce 24 concerts on consecutive Saturday evenings, from Oct 17 to May 1, omitting Nov 14, Dec 12, Jan 23, Feb 27 and March 27, and 24 public rehearsals on consecutive Friday afternoons, from Oct 16 to April 30, omitting Nov 13, Dec 11, Jan 22, Feb 26 and March 26. The soloists will be Mme Melba, Mme Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Mr Plancon, Mr Campanari, Mr Rosenthal, Mr Joseffy, Mr Sieveking, Mr Halir, Mr Kneisel, Mr Loeffler, Mr Adamowski, Mr Schroeder, Mr Schulz and others. The $12 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction at Music hall tomorrow at 10 a m. The $7.50 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction at Music hall, Tuesday, at 10 a m. The $12 seats for the concerts will be sold at auction at Music hall on Thursday, at 10 a m. The $7.50 seats for the concerts will be sold in like manner at the same place on Friday at 10 a m. Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold. Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for, as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1896.

MR. PAUR IS INTERVIEWED.

THE following interview with Mr. Paur appeared in the Boston Transcript September 19:

Mr. Paur has just returned from his vacation. In an interview at his home in Jamaica Plain with our representative Mr. Paur said:

"The season of the Boston Symphony will open Saturday, October 17, but as usual there will be a public rehearsal on the Friday just previous. I have been busy this summer compiling programs, and while thus far only the first six have been definitely arranged, quite a number of novelties have already been selected, which I anticipate will be gladly welcomed by our audiences.

"At this time, perhaps more so than at any other time during the past fifteen years, there is a growing tendency to go back to the simplicity and naturalness of the old masters and to make ourselves better acquainted with the old works, and as a result Mozart, Haydn and others appear on our programs with more frequency than before. This reaction is a natural one, and has not limited itself to the concert hall, but has made itself felt also in operatic performances. The result of this has been the creation of Goldmark's Heimchen am Herd and Humperdinck's Hänsel and Gretel, which are charming in their very simplicity. The overture of the latter and an entr'acte of the former are included in our programs. I especially anticipate the performance of a symphony by Dittersdorf, which, I think, will charm everybody, owing to its joyful mood and natural simplicity. A very interesting feature will also be the selection of fragments from Gluck's ballet music to Don Juan, which is the forerunner of Mozart's Don Juan, and closely related to the same in musical disposition and characterization. We will also play the overture to Gwendoline by Chabrier, of which we performed an entr'acte last year, which met with such favor as to make me think that the overture will be a welcome novelty.

"The overture to Ingwelde, by Schilling, will also be heard in Boston for the first time the coming season. This opera, which is now a great favorite in Germany, was first introduced by Mottl in Carlsruhe, and by myself in Leipsic, where it met with instantaneous recognition, and it was later also performed in Paris. Tschaikowsky, who has met with so signal public favor, will also not be forgotten, and his second and fourth symphonies, which are included in the programs, are new here. Bruckner is a renowned Vienna composer, who belongs to the extreme modern direction, and it appears to me as a duty to bring ou tone of his works, as hardly anything is known of him in America. His works are hard to understand by the general public, but I have no doubt that in spite of this Bruckner will meet with appreciation and will not fail to awaken the interest to which he is entitled. (We remember having heard it stated that Wagner wrote to Bruckner as follows: 'What I am in the "Musik-Drama" that you are in the symphony,' and greater praise Wagner could certainly not bestow.) L'Enterrement d'Ophélie, by Bourgault-Ducoudray, is another novelty which undoubtedly will quickly win public favor, and the same, I hope, will prove to be the case with Smetana, who will be represented in the programs by two or three works.

"So far as I can tell now works of the following composers will be played in the course of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

French composers—
Cherubini, Chabrier, Saint-Saëns, Berlioz, Bizet, Duparc.
Russian and Slavic composers—
Dvorák, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Borodin, Smetana.
German composers—
Wagner, Weber, Brahms, Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Scihilling, Schubert, Schumann, Volkman, Cornelius, Liszt, Mendelssohn, Rubinstein, Humperdinck, Händel, Haydn, Richard Strauss and Bruckner.

While Cowen will represent the English school.

"It is my good fortune to welcome to this country this season a great many of my personal friends as soloists of the Boston Symphony, as Rosenthal, Halir, Siloti, Joseffy, Carreño and others. Halir is acknowledged in Germany to be the first violinist after Joachim, as whose successor he is looked upon in Berlin. Carreño has not been heard here for the past seven years, during which time she has made enormous progress, so that her appearances may be anticipated to be a great success. Then Sieveking will be with us again this year, and as his success last year was nothing short of sensational he may well expect a warm reception, as may also Plançon and Joseffy. Of the favorite American stars Melba and Eames will surely be welcomed with enthusiasm. Mr. Whiting, who until recently was a resident of Boston and who played in Cambridge with us last year, will make his dêbut with the Symphony before a Boston audience, playing his own concerto. I have had the rare pleasure this summer of meeting a young man of very great promise. He is a pupil of Faelten and of my friend Leschetizky, and has just finished his studies. He intends to settle in Boston, and it is very probable that the public will have an opportunity to hear him with us, and he will no doubt prove a success.

"As I have received so many requests from all sides asking for a repetition of the special Wagner program I cannot but accede to these demands, and the same will be repeated this season, not only in Boston, but also in the other cities on the circuit.

"As far as the changes in the make-up of the orchestra are concerned nothing can be said that is not already public property."

It will be seen by the above that Mr. Paur means to give Boston a musical scheme of extreme catholicism. The Bruckner symphonies deserve a hearing. They are great works, and we owe it to Mr. Seidl that we heard the seventh some years ago. Mr. Paur, while he intends to sticks to his classical guns, is evidently determined that novelties will not be demanded in vain by his audiences. Considering the tremendous amount of fine orchestral music is it not a wonder that most conductors offer us so little that is new or unfamiliar? The same round of Beethoven, Mozart and Haydn is of course imperative—we cannot dispense with the great trinity—but surely there are other composers worthy of a hearing. Mr. Paur proposes to give them this hearing and we are duly grateful. His trump card will be, however, Anton Bruckner's symphonies.

The soloists of the Boston Symphony concerts will be Melba, Carreño, Aus der Ohe, Rosenthal, Plançon, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Campanari, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder, Schulz and others to be announced later.

[19]

Boston Transcript

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1896.

Mr. Paur on the Coming Season.

Mr. Paur has just returned from his vacation. In an interview at his home in Jamaica Plain with our representative, Mr. Paur said:

"The season of the Boston Symphony will open Saturday, the 17th of October, but as usual there will be a public rehearsal on the Friday just previous. I have been busy this summer compiling programmes, and while thus far only the first six have been definitely arranged, quite a number of novelties have already been selected, which I anticipate will be gladly welcomed by our audiences.

"At this time, perhaps more so than at any other time during the past fifteen years, there is a growing tendency to go back to the simplicity and naturalness of the old masters and to make ourselves better acquainted with the old works, and as a result Mozart, Haydn and others appear on our programmes with more frequency than before. This reaction is a natural one, and has not limited itself to the concert hall, but has made itself felt also in operatic performances. The result of this has been the creation of Goldmark's 'Heimchen am Herd' and Humperdinck's 'Hansel and Gretel,' which are charming in their very simplicity. The overture of the latter and an entr'acte of the former are included in our programmes. I especially anticipate the performance of a symphony by Dittersdorf, which, I think, will charm everybody, owing to its joyful mood and natural simplicity. A very interesting feature will also be the selection of fragments from Gluck's ballet music to 'Don Juan,' which is the forerunner of Mozart's 'Don Juan,' and closely related to the same in musical disposition and characterization. We will also play the overture to Gwendoline by Chabrier, of which we performed an entr'acte last year, which met with such favor as to make me think that the overture will be a welcome novelty.

"The overture to Ingwelde, by Schilling, will also be heard in Boston for the first time the coming season. This opera, which is now a great favorite in Germany, was first introduced by Mottl in Carlsruhe, and by myself in Leipsic, where it met with instantaneous recognition, and it was later also performed in Paris. Tschaikowsky who has met with so signal public favor will also not be forgotten, and his second and fourth symphonies which are included in the programmes are new here. Bruckner is a renowned Vienna composer, who belongs to the extreme modern direction, and it appears to me as a duty to bring one of his works, as hardly anything is known of him in America. His works are hard to understand by the general public, but I have no doubt that in spite of this Bruckner will meet with appreciation and will not fail to awaken the interest to which he is entitled. (We remember having heard it stated that Wagner wrote to Bruckner as follows: 'What I am in the "Musik-Drama" that you are in the symphony,' and greater praise Wagner could certainly not bestow.) L'Enterrement d'Ophélie by Bourgault-Ducondray is another novelty which undoubtedly will quickly win public favor, and the same I hope will prove to be the case with Smetana, who will be represented in the programmes by two or three works.

"So far as I can tell now, works of the following composers will be played in the course of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

French composers—
  Cherubini, Chabrier, Saint-Saëns, Berlioz, Bizet, Duparc.
Russian and Slavic composers—
  Dvorak, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Borodin, Smetana.
German composers—
  Wagner, Weber, Brahms, Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Schilling, Schubert, Schumann, Volkmann, Cornelius, Liszt; Mendelssohn, Rubinstein, Humperdinck, Händel, Haydn, Richard Strauss and Bruckner.

while Cowen will represent the English school.

"It is my good fortune to welcome to this country this season a great many of my personal friends as soloists of the Boston Symphony, as Rosenthal, Halir, Siloti, Joseffy, Carreno and others. Halir is acknowledged in Germany to be the first violinist after Joachim, as whose successor he is looked upon in Berlin. Carreno has not been heard here for the past seven years, during which time she has made enormous progress, so that her appearances may be anticipated to be a great success. Then Sieveking will be with us again this year, and as his success last year was nothing short of sensational, he may well expect a warm reception, as may also Plançon and Joseffy. Of the favorite American stars Melba and Eames will surely be welcomed with enthusiasm. Mr. Whiting, who until recently was a resident of Boston and who played in Cambridge with us last year, will make his début with the symphony before a Boston audience, playing his own concerto. I have had the rare pleasure this summer of meeting a young man of very great promise. He is a pupil of Faelten and of my friend Leschetizky, and has just finished his studies. He intends to settle in Boston, and it is very probable that the public will have an opportunity to hear him with us, and he will no doubt prove a success.

"As I have received so many requests from all sides asking for a repetition of the special Wagner programme, I cannot but accede to these demands, and the same will be repeated this season, not only in Boston, but also in the other cities on the circuit.

"As far as the changes in the make-up of the orchestra are concerned, nothing can be said that is not already public property."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and the distinguished solo artists who will assist in its concerts of the coming season form a combination to arouse anticipations of the liveliest pleasure in the minds of the musical. The magnificent orchestra perfected by years of experience and asociation was never in better form. The New York Sun recently said of it: "The Boston orchestra is ever the same, from conductor unto conductor, and, under whatever conditions of leadership, still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country. By years of association these Boston men have attained not only a precision and unanimity of purpose not surpassed in the world, perhaps, but there shines through all this work the light of individual enthusiasm and pure devotion to high ideals, so that they compel, [illegible], admiration and respect."

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 81.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 19, 1896.

The musical campaign will be inaugurated next Monday in ward 7, when a preliminary caucus will be held at Music Hall for the (s)election of Symphony seats for 1896-97. Mr. H. W. Jackson will be the temporary chairman, and will address the meeting on the "Tariff." One-minute speeches will be made by representative men and women of the Republican, Democratic, Populist, Prohibitionist, Woman Suffrage, Wagner and anti-Wagner parties. A large attendance and a spirited meeting are expected.

Boston Journal.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1896.

$7 50 SEATS.

Symphony Auction Continued—Good Attendance and Prices Average Well.

The floor of Music Hall was comfortably well filled Tuesday morning by purchasers of Symphony rehearsal tickets. The seats sold Tuesday were the $7 50 seats for Friday afternoons.

These seats include the back seats on the floor and the back rows in the first balcony. The prices for the floor seats did not run quite as high as last year, nor did the highest in the balcony, but it is probable that the total sum realized will be as much as last year, as the average price, especially in the balcony, kept well up.

The highest price which any floor seat brought this year was $13. Last year the two best floor seats brought $15. In the balcony prices went up this year to $22 against $27 last year.

The personnel of the company gathered by the sale Tuesday was very different from that of Monday. Then society people—or perhaps, more correctly, people of leisure—were in the majority. Tuesday their places were taken very generally by earnest-looking young men and women, a very great many of them students of music or teachers, who look upon these concerts each year as not only the most delightful recreation of their winters, but also a means of education which cannot be dispensed with, no matter how great is the sacrifice necessary to obtain it.

The sale on Monday proved very long, and was not over until nearly 6 P. M.

GLOBE—SUNDAY.

—The management of the Boston symphony orchestra announce 24 concerts on consecutive Saturday evenings, from Oct 17 to May 1, omitting Nov 14, Dec 12, Jan 23, Feb 27 and March 27, and 24 public rehearsals on consecutive Friday afternoons, from Oct 16 to April 30, omitting Nov 13, Dec 11, Jan 22, Feb 26 and March 26. The soloists will be Mme Melba, Mme Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Mr Plancon, Mr Campanari, Mr Rosenthal, Mr Joseffy, Mr Sieveking, Mr Halir, Mr Kneisel, Mr Loeffler, Mr Adamowski, Mr Schroeder, Mr Schulz and others. The $12 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction at Music hall tomorrow at 10 a m. The $7.50 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction at Music hall, Tuesday, at 10 a m. The $12 seats for the concerts will be sold at auction at Music hall on Thursday, at 10 a m. The $7.50 seats for the concerts will be sold in like manner at the same place on Friday at 10 a m. Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold. Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1896.

MR. PAUR IS INTERVIEWED.

THE following interview with Mr. Paur appeared in the Boston Transcript September 19:

Mr. Paur has just returned from his vacation. In an interview at his home in Jamaica Plain with our representative Mr. Paur said:

"The season of the Boston Symphony will open Saturday, October 17, but as usual there will be a public rehearsal on the Friday just previous. I have been busy this summer compiling programs, and while thus far only the first six have been definitely arranged, quite a number of novelties have already been selected, which I anticipate will be gladly welcomed by our audiences.

"At this time, perhaps more so than at any other time during the past fifteen years, there is a growing tendency to go back to the simplicity and naturalness of the old masters and to make ourselves better acquainted with the old works, and as a result Mozart, Haydn and others appear on our programs with more frequency than before. This reaction is a natural one, and has not limited itself to the concert hall, but has made itself felt also in operatic performances. The result of this has been the creation of Goldmark's Heimchen am Herd and Humperdinck's Hänsel and Gretel, which are charming in their very simplicity. The overture of the latter and an entr'acte of the former are included in our programs. I especially anticipate the performance of a symphony by Dittersdorf, which, I think, will charm everybody, owing to its joyful mood and natural simplicity. A very interesting feature will also be the selection of fragments from Gluck's ballet music to Don Juan, which is the forerunner of Mozart's Don Juan, and closely related to the same in musical disposition and characterization. We will also play the overture to Gwendoline by Chabrier, of which we performed an entr'acte last year, which met with such favor as to make me think that the overture will be a welcome novelty.

"The overture to Ingwelde, by Schilling, will also be heard in Boston for the first time the coming season. This opera, which is now a great favorite in Germany, was first introduced by Mottl in Carlsruhe, and by myself in Leipsic, where it met with instantaneous recognition, and it was later also performed in Paris. Tschaikowsky, who has met with so signal public favor, will also not be forgotten, and his second and fourth symphonies, which are included in the programs, are new here. Bruckner is a renowned Vienna composer, who belongs to the extreme modern direction, and it appears to me as a duty to bring ou tone of his works, as hardly anything is known of him in America. His works are hard to understand by the general public, but I have no doubt that in spite of this Bruckner will meet with appreciation and will not fail to awaken the interest to which he is entitled. (We remember having heard it stated that Wagner wrote to Bruckner as follows: 'What I am in the "Musik-Drama" that you are in the symphony,' and greater praise Wagner could certainly not bestow.) L'Enterrement d'Ophélie, by Bourgcault-Ducoudray, is another novelty which undoubtedly will quickly win public favor, and the same, I hope, will prove to be the case with Smetana, who will be represented in the programs by two or three works.

"So far as I can tell now works of the following composers will be played in the course of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

French composers
  Cherubini, Chabrier, Saint-Saëns, Berlioz, Bizet, Duparc.
Russian and Slavic composers—
  Dvorák, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Borodin, Smetana.
German composers—
  Wagner, Weber, Brahms, Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Scihilling, Schubert, Schumann, Volkman, Cornelius, Liszt, Mendelssohn. Rubinstein, Humperdinck, Händel, Haydn, Richard Strauss and Bruckner.

While Cowen will represent the English school.

"It is my good fortune to welcome to this country this season a great many of my personal friends as soloists of the Boston Symphony, as Rosenthal, Halir, Siloti, Joseffy, Carreño and others. Halir is acknowledged in Germany to be the first violinist after Joachim, as whose successor he is looked upon in Berlin. Carreño has not been heard here for the past seven years, during which time she has made enormous progress, so that her appearances may be anticipated to be a great success. Then Sieveking will be with us again this year, and as his success last year was nothing short of sensational he may well expect a warm reception, as may also Plançon and Joseffy. Of the favorite American stars Melba and Eames will surely be welcomed with enthusiasm. Mr. Whiting, who until recently was a resident of Boston and who played in Cambridge with us last year, will make his dêbut with the Symphony before a Boston audience, playing his own concerto. I have had the rare pleasure this summer of meeting a young man of very great promise. He is a pupil of Faelten and of my friend Leschetizky, and has just finished his studies. He intends to settle in Boston, and it is very probable that the public will have an opportunity to hear him with us, and he will no doubt prove a success.

"As I have received so many requests from all sides asking for a repetition of the special Wagner program I cannot but accede to these demands, and the same will be repeated this season, not only in Boston, but also in the other cities on the circuit.

"As far as the changes in the make-up of the orchestra are concerned nothing can be said that is not already public property."

It will be seen by the above that Mr. Paur means to give Boston a musical scheme of extreme catholicism. The Bruckner symphonies deserve a hearing. They are great works, and we owe it to Mr. Seidl that we heard the seventh some years ago. Mr. Paur, while he intends to sticks to his classical guns, is evidently determined that novelties will not be demanded in vain by his audiences. Considering the tremendous amount of fine orchestral music is it not a wonder that most conductors offer us so little that is new or unfamiliar? The same round of Beethoven, Mozart and Haydn is of course imperative—we cannot dispense with the great trinity—but surely there are other composers worthy of a hearing. Mr. Paur proposes to give them this hearing and we are duly grateful. His trump card will be, however, Anton Bruckner's symphonies.

The soloists of the Boston Symphony concerts will be Melba, Carreño, Aus der Ohe, Rosenthal, Plançon, Joseffy, Halir, Sieveking, Campanari, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder, Schulz and others to be announced later.

BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE

SYMPHONY SUMMARY.

Record of the Orchestra for 15 Years.

Interesting Index of Concerts, Selections and Composers.

An Exhaustive and Valuable Work Compiled by F. R. Comee.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony orchestra in Music hall, Boston, during each season, for the 15 years since the founding of this organization by Mr Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same program is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals," and although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances.

Mr F. R. Comee has recently completed an index of all the selections played at these performances, a work of great magnitude and one which will prove of lasting value. A condensed summary of that exhaustive index is given below:

Performances	752
Total numbers of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79 composers,	2,245 selections
France	17 "	296 "
Hungary	3 "	164 "
Russia	6 "	132 "
Bohemia	3 "	104 "
America	12 "	88 "
Poland	7 "	80 "
Italy	18 "	74 "
Norway	2 "	36 "
England	7 "	34 "
Denmark	2 "	28 "
Belgium	4 "	22 "
Holland	2 "	6 "
Scotland	1 "	4 "

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	194	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph E	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boildieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang, (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolia, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim. Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V), Luther (M), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X), Scharwenka (Ph), Strauss (Joh), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed 26 times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral), and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Mr Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

Nov 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, and in the program of the concert on that day Mr Henschel placed Luther's choral, "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the program the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

JOURNAL—SUNDAY.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA STATISTICS.

Compiled by F. R. Comee.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the 15 years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show striking totals. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same program is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset, "public rehearsals;" and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

	Composers.	Selections.
Germany	79	2,245
France	17	296
Hungary	3	164
Russia	6	132
Bohemia	3	104
America	12	88
Poland	7	80
Italy	18	74
Norway	2	36
England	7	34
Denmark	2	28
Belgium	4	22
Holland	2	6
Scotland	1	4

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bülow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicodé, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.). Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed 26 times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bülow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second performance of it.

Nov. 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the program of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein feste Burg," printing on the back of the program the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the aurience should join in singing the same This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 20, 1896.

—Mr Fred R. Comee, assistant manager of the Symphony orchestra, has just completed a summary of all the compositions performed by the orchestra since its formation, with the names of the composers, their nationality, etc. It will prove most interesting to symphony concert attendants and is printed today in another column of The Globe.

SUNDAY HERALD

The following statistics, compiled by Mr. F. R. Comee from the 15 years' record of the Boston Symphony orchestra, are abundant in curious interest to the musical public. They have been collected and arranged with manifest care, and afford a valuable insight into the work done by the organization since its founding by Mr. Henry L. Higginson. The only omission of importance is a list of the conductors and the length of time they remained at the head of the orchestra, and this may be supplied by stating that Mr. Georg Henschel, the first conductor, served for three years, and was succeeded by Mr. Gericke, who had control of the orchestra for five years, and was, in turn, followed by Mr. Arthur Nikisch, who was engaged for five years, but severed his connection at the end of his third year, and was replaced by Mr. Emil Paur, who will begin his fourth year with the opening of the forthcoming season. Mr. Comee's summary, admirably condensed, shows the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79	composers,	2,245 selections.
France	17	"	296 "
Hungary	3	"	164 "
Russia	6	"	132 "
Bohemia	3	"	104 "
America	12	"	88 "
Poland	7	"	80 "
Italy	18	"	74 "
Norway	2	"	36 "
England	7	"	34 "
Denmark	2	"	28 "
Belgium	4	"	22 "
Holland	2	"	6 "
Scotland	1	"	4 "

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring). Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed 26 times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow. Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

Nov. 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral, "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

Although Schubert stands fifth in the list of composers whose works have been performed by the society, his "Unfinished Symphony" has been played twenty-six times, and this, with the overture in "Die Meistersinger," is the most popular number. The "Meistersinger" overture was also played twenty-six times. The next selections in popularity were Beethoven's Third (Eroica), Fifth, Sixth (Pastoral), and Seventh symphonies, and these were each played twenty-four times. In the first three years of the orchestra's existence Mr. Henschel was the conductor, and he gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies every season. This has not been done since. On Nov. 10, 1883, the four hundredth anniversary of Martin Luther's birth, Mr. Henschel played Luther's carol, "Ein' feste Burg," with a facsimile of the manuscript of the choral, with the date 1530 printed on the back of the programme. Alongside of this was the request that the audience join in singing the hymn. Never before or since in the history of the society has this happened.

NEW-YORK DAILY TRIBUNE

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1896

Mr. F. R. Comee, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been engaged for some time in tabulating the work done by that organization during the fifteen years of its existence. He has indexed all the compositions played, and computed the number of performances. From his summary the following information is gleaned:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

	Composers.	Selections.
Germany	79	2,245
France	17	296
Hungary	3	164
Russia	6	132
Bohemia	3	104
America	12	88
Poland	7	80
Italy	18	74
Norway	2	36
England	7	34
Denmark	2	28
Belgium	4	22
Holland	2	6
Scotland	1	4

As an index of the comparative popularity of the composers represented, at least in the opinion of the conductors, the following list may serve. It includes all who have had ten representations or more:

Beethoven	384	Henschel	28
Wagner	266	Massenet	26
Schumann	175	Gade	26
Mozart	174	Grieg	24
Brahms	159	Gounod	22
Schubert	150	Paine	18
Mendelssohn	140	Chadwick	18
Liszt	118	Lalo	16
Weber	104	Reinecke	16
Dvorak	88	Auber	14
Berlioz	84	Smetana	14
Bach	74	MacDowell	14
Rubinstein	74	Fotte	14
Saint-Saëns	72	Vieuxtemps	14
Handel	60	Bizet	12
Chopin	52	Moszkowski	12
Goldmark	44	Svendsen	12
Volkmann	44	Fuchs	12
Raff	42	Bargiel	12
Bruch	41	Goetz	12
Tschaikowsky	40	Gericke	12
Gluck	38	Godard	12
Spohr	34	Meyerbeer	10
Cherubini	30	Richard Strauss	10

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Master-singers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral), and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each. Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since.

The Sun.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1896.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY.

An Analysis of Its Work During Its Fifteen Years of Existence.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra finished its fifteenth season last spring, and the work of the society since the outset of its career has been put into interesting statistical form. The oldest orchestra in this country is the Philharmonic of this city, and it was fifty-four years ago when that orchestra was founded. But the Boston Symphony Orchestra has given more than twice as many concerts as the older New York association. In its fifteen years of existence the orchestra has given in Boston 752 concerts, which included a total number of 3,313 selections. One hundred and sixty-three composers were represented. Of the selections given 2,245 were the works of German composers, and 79 of the 163 composers were of that nationality. It France stood second, represented by 17 composers and 296 selections. From Hungary 164 pieces were chosen, and these were the works of 3 composers. Russia was represented by 6 composers, who supplied 132 pieces to the repertoire of the orchestra. Three Bohemian composers provided 104 selections, and the 88 American works performed were the works of 12 composers. From Poland there were 80 selections by 7 composers; from Italy, 74 selections by 18 composers; from Norway, 36 selections by 2 composers; from England, 34 works by 7 composers; from Denmark, 28 selections by 2 composers; from Belgium, 22 selections by 4 composers; from Holland, 6 selections from 2 composers, and from Scotland 1 composer supplied 4 selections. At the Boston concerts there were 1,043 solo selections. Of these 543 were instrumental and 500 vocal.

Among the composers Beethoven leads with a record of 384 numbers; Wagner comes second, with 266, and Schumann, with 175, is third. The other composers ranked as follows:

Mozart	174	Foote	14
Brahms	159	Vieuxtemps	14
Schubert	150	Bizet	12
Mendelssohn	140	Moszkowski	12
Liszt	118	Svendsen	12
Weber	104	Fuchs	12
Dvorak	88	Bargiel	12
Berlioz	84	Goetz	12
Bach	74	Gericke	12
Rubinstein	74	Godard	12
Saint-Saëns	72	Meyerbeer	10
Handel	60	Richard Strauss	10
Haydn	60	Cowen	8
Chopin	52	Délibes	8
Goldmark	44	Bennett	8
Volkmann	44	Glinka	8
Raff	42	Hiller	8
Bruch	41	Franz Lachner	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Méhul	8
Gluck	38	Reinhold	8
Spohr	34	Sullivan	8
Cherubini	30	Floersheim	8
Henschel	28	D'Albert	6
Massenet	26	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Gade	26	Borodin	6
Grieg	24	Ernst	6
Gounod	22	Henselt	6
Paine	18	Paganini	6
Chadwick	18	Pergolesi	6
Lalo	16	Paderewski	6
Reinecke	16	Loeffler	6
Auber	14	Rheinberger	6
Smetana	14	Boieldieu	6
MacDowell	14

Those composers whose works were played four times or under were:

Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bülow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicodé, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry.

THE WORLD: SUNDAY

SEPTEMBER 20, 1896.

[illegible] review of the work of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since its organization, in 1881, has been published. It is interesting in its exhibition of the important part taken by this remarkable body of musicians in the musical education of this country. A condensed summary shows:

Performances given		752
Total number of composers represented		163
Total number of selections played		3,313
Total number of orchestral selections		2,270
Works by German composers	(79)	2,245
Works by French composers	(17)	296
Works by Hungarian composers	(3)	164
Works by Russian composers	(6)	132
Works by Bohemian composers	(3)	104
Works by American composers	(12)	88
Works by Polish composers	(7)	80
Works by Italian composers	(18)	74
Works by Norwegian composers	(2)	36
Works by English composers	(7)	34
Works by Danish composers	(2)	28
Works by Belgian composers	(4)	22
Works by Dutch composers	(2)	6
Works by Scotch composers	(1)	4

The review gives many more important details in the career and activity of the orchestra, which to-day, by unanimous consent, is one of the three master organizations of the world. It shows that under its four leaders—Henschel, Gericke, Nikisch and Paur—the aim has been of the highest, broad, catholic and purely artistic.

* * *

Brooklyn Daily Eagle

SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 20, 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Record of Work Done Since Its Organization in 1881.

F. R. Comee, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has compiled some data regarding the work of the organization since its formation in 1881. He shows that there have been 752 performances given at which 3,313 selections were played. This summary of the orchestra's work is taken from the index:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

	Composers.	Selections.
Germany	79	2,245
France	17	296
Hungary	3	164
Russia	6	132
Bohemia	3	104
America	12	88
Poland	7	80
Italy	18	74
Norway	2	36
England	7	34
Denmark	2	28
Belgium	4	22
Holland	2	6
Scotland	1	4

The question of nationality is a vexed one, but the table given above is as accurate as can be compiled. The list of composers in the numerical order of their works performed by the orchestra is as follows:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gardener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isonard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner. Each work was performed twenty-six times.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's Prelude to "Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in his programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac simile of the manuscript of his choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

The North American

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1896.

SOME MUSICAL STATISTICS

Work of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Fifteen Years.

It Gives Seven Hundred and Fifty-two Concerts, at Which Over Three Thousand Selections Are Performed.

(Compiled by F. K. Comee.)

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals;" and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently-completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	164	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	31	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"
Holland	2	"	6	"
Scotland	1	"	4	"

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is plainly realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svensden	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massanet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E), Brumeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Meistersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3, (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

PROVIDENCE JOURNAL.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1896.

A Striking Summary.

PROVIDENCE people musically inclined will not think an apology necessary for the publication here of a review of the performances during 15 years of so excellent a musical organization as the Boston Symphony Orchestra, withal so constant a contributor to their pleasure by its yearly course of concerts in this city. The peculiar significance of this review will be evident at a glance and will be sufficient excuse for the publication of this review—which, by the way, is the work of Frederick R. Comee, assistant manager of the organization, and may be relied upon as absolutely correct. The statistics are, of course, based upon the original Boston productions, other concerts being repetitions.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the 15 years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals;" and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3313
Orchestral selections	2270
Solo selections	1043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

	Composers.	Selections.
Germany	79	2245
France	17	296
Hungary	3	164
Russia	6	132
Bohemia	3	104
America	12	88
Poland	7	80
Italy	18	74
Norway	2	36
England	7	34
Denmark	2	28
Belgium	4	22
Holland	2	6
Scotland	1	4

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned, and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Boieldieu	6
Auber	14	Rheinberger	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Bocherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossa, Rossini, Reznicek, Reimenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed 26 times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

Nov. 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the facsimile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

Brooklyn Eagle.
Sunday. Sept. 20 '96

Bklyn Eagle. Sept. 20th 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Record of Work Done Since Its Organization in 1881.

F. R. Comee, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has compiled some data regarding the work of the organization since its formation in 1881. He shows that there have been 752 performances given at which 3,313 selections were played. This summary of the orchestra's work is taken from the index:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

	Composers.	Selections.
Germany	79	2,245
France	17	296
Hungary	3	164
Russia	6	132
Bohemia	3	104
America	12	88
Poland	7	80
Italy	18	74
Norway	2	36
England	7	34
Denmark	2	28
Belgium	4	22
Holland	2	6
Scotland	1	4

The question of nationality is a vexed one, but the table given above is as accurate as can be compiled. The list of composers in the numerical order of their works performed by the orchestra is as follows:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gardener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isonard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner. Each work was performed twenty-six times.

ING STAR,

EPTEMBER 19, 1896—

N MUSICAL CIRCLES

Great Work Done by the Boston Symphony Orchestra During Its Career.

Interesting Compilation Made by Mr. Fred. R. Comee—What Some Local Musicians Are Doing.

Mr. Fred. R. Comee has made a very interesting compilation of the work done in Boston by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the fifteen years of its existence, which will be read with interest by the large number of admirers of that splendid body of musicians in this District. Mr. Comee says that reckoning two performances a week, for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals have come to be ranked as separate performances, there have been given 752 performances. The total number of composers interpreted is 163; total number of selections, 3,313; orchestral selections, 2,270; solo selections, 1,043; instrumental solos, 543, and vocal solos, 500. As to nations, Germany is represented by 79 composers and 2,245 selections; France, 17 composers and 296 selections; Hungary, 3 composers and 164 selections; Russia, 6 composers and 132 selections; Bohemia, 3 composers, 104 selections; America, 12 composers, 88 selections; Poland, 7 composers, 80 selections; Italy, 18 composers, 24 selections; Norway, 2 composers, 36 selections; England, 7 composers, 34 selections; Denmark, 3 composers, 28 selections; Belgium, 4 composers, 22 selections; Holland, 2 composers, 6 selections, and Scotland, 1 composer and 4 selections. Mr. Comee continues:

"That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

"Beethoven, 384; Wagner, 266; Schumann, 175; Mozart, 174; Brahms, 159; Schubert, 150; Mendelssohn, 140; Liszt, 118; Weber, 104; Dvorak, 88; Berlioz, 84; Bach, 74; Rubinstein, 74; Saint-Saens, 72; Handel, 60; Haydn, 60; Chopin, 52; Goldmark, 44; Volkmann, 44; Raff, 42; Bruch, 41; Tschaikowsky, 40; Gluck, 38; Spohr, 34; Cherubini, 30; Henschel, 28; Massenet, 26; Gade, 26; Grieg, 24; Gounod, 22; Paine, 18; Chadwick, 18; Lalo, 16; Reinecke, 16; Auber, 14; Smetana, 14; MacDowell, 14; Foote, 14; Vieuxtemps, 14; Bizet, 12; Moszkowski, 12; Svendsen, 12; Fuchs, 12; Bargiel, 12; Goetz, 12; Gericke, 12; Godard, 12; Meyerbeer, 10; Richard Strauss, 10; Cowen, 8; Delibes, 8; Bennett, 8; Glinka, 8; Hiller, 8; Franz Lachner, 8; Mehul, 8; Reinhold, 8; Sullivan, 8; Floersheim, 8; D'Albert, 6; Bach, Ph. E., 6; Borodin, 6; Ernst, 6; Henselt, 6; Paganini, 6; Pergolesi, 6; Paderewski, 6; Loeffler, 6; Rheinberger, 6; Boieldieu.

"Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski, and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Buhmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

"The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the 'Unfinished Symphony' of Schubert and the 'Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg' of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral), and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gouned, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smeana and Borodin."

"Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's 'Prelude to Parsifal,' reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

"November 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the program of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral, 'Ein' feste Burg,' printing on the back of the program the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made."

Mr. Fred R. Comee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra management is preparing an interesting account of the work performed by this organization since its first formation. It will give the total number of selections performed, the number of instrumental selections, with a subdivision into orchestral and solo selections; the number of vocal selections, the composers represented and the different works of each, and it will also show the gradual increase in the demand for the works of Wagner, and the modern composers. When [illegible] finished the paper will be extremely [illegible] to musicians and also to those [illegible] who keep in touch with the pro[illegible] musical art.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

No element of attractiveness seems to be lacking in the scheme of concerts by the Boston symphony orchestra for the coming season, which promises to be notably brilliant even in the annals of this famous organization. Nothing new need be said of the superlative merits of this orchestra; the programs as far as announced are all that could be desired, and the distinguished solo artists are in all cases worthy the high standard of these concerts. The announcements made last week have evidently aroused general interest.

The concerts will begin Oct 16. Among the solo artists will be Mmes Melba, Carreno, Aus der Ohe, Messrs Plancon, Campanari, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Sieveking, Burmeister, Halir, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schnitzler, Schroeder and Schulz. Others will be from time to time announced.

The sales of season tickets will be by auction and will be held at Music hall, beginning tomorrow, when the $12 tickets for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals will be sold. The $7.50 rehearsal seats will be sold Tuesday, and the $12 and $7.50 tickets for the Saturday evening concerts will be offered Thursday and Friday respectively. The sales will begin each day at 10 a m. The method adopted for selling the tickets creates a wide range of prices, and, although there is often sharp competition for certain locations, many hundred seats are disposed of each year at merely nominal premiums. For this reason personal attendance at the auctions is desirable.

—The management of the Boston symphony orchestra announce 24 concerts on consecutive Saturday evenings, from Oct 17 to May 1, omitting Nov 14, Dec 12, Jan 23, Feb 27 and March 27, and 24 public rehearsals on consecutive Friday afternoons, from Oct 16 to April 30, omitting Nov 13, Dec 11, Jan 22, Feb 26 and March 26. The soloists will be Mme Melba, Mme Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Mr Plancon, Mr Campanari, Mr Rosenthal, Mr Joseffy, Mr Sieveking, Mr Halir, Mr Kneisel, Mr Loeffler, Mr Adamowski, Mr Schroeder, Mr Schulz and others. The $12 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction at Music hall tomorrow at 10 a m. The $7.50 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction at Music hall, Tuesday, at 10 a m. The $12 seats for the concerts will be sold at auction at Music hall on Thursday, at 10 a m. The $7.50 seats for the concerts will be sold in like manner at the same place on Friday at 10 a m. Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold. Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

—Mr Fred R. Comee, assistant manager of the Symphony orchestra, has just completed a summary of all the compositions performed by the orchestra since its formation, with the names of the composers, their nationality, etc. It will prove most interesting to symphony concert attendants and is printed today in another column of The Globe.

—Mr E. Frank Baker of Walnut st, Brookline, gave a charming reception on Sunday evening last. His guests included Mrs and Miss Perry, Miss [illegible]

THE MAIL AND EXPRESS

Broadway and Fulton St., New York.

SATURDAY EVENING, SEPT. 19, 1896.

IN THE WORLD OF MUSIC.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Fifteen Years of Existence and Its Future Work—Local Notes.

Although the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been in existence only since 1881, its aggregate of work done has been so much greater than that of any other orchestra in America, not excepting that of the Philharmonic Society, of this city, with its fifty-four years of history, that it may be fairly considered as the most representative and effective body of musicians on this side of the water. Maintained as it is by Mr. Henry L. Higginson, of Boston, who makes good an annual deficit which amounts to a considerable sum, the Boston Symphony Orchestra makes itself a powerful musical influence, not only in its home city and Cambridge, but in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Providence. In Boston the season of grand opera is confined to the visits of New York companies, and musical support is largely concentrated in favor of the annual series of twenty-four afternoon and twenty-four evening concerts by the Symphony Orchestra.

The sixteenth season will open in Boston Music Hall on October 16 and 17, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, each evening programme being the same as that of the previous matinee. Mr. Emil Paur will continue as conductor and the orchestra will number 90 players. Few changes have been made in the personnel, the principal ones being the substitution of M. Jacquet for M. Mole as first flute, and the engagement of M. Bour as second oboe. These artists have already made good reputations in the Thomas and Damrosch orchestras. Messrs. Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz remain in the orchestra, and they will doubtless be drawn upon for solo work.

The vocalists engaged for the Boston season are Melba, Plancon and Campanari, and an acceptance is expected from Eames within a few days. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal and Teresa Carreno, who has not been heard there for seven years. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir, of Berlin, the great German violinist, has also been secured.

[illegible] has not yet heard the beautiful [illegible]

Beach audiences is already familiar, but it is on the list for performance there during the coming season. Other works that will be new here as well as in Boston are a symphony by Dittersdorf; overture, "Lenore," Duparc; selection from "Anthar," Rymsky Korsakow; symphony, E major, Borodin; "Harka," Smetana.

Mr. F. R. Comee, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has compiled from the records of the regular concerts at Boston during the past fifteen years a number of interesting statistics of the work done. The following figures tell an eloquent story:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

The overwhelming majority of compositions played were of German origin, as the table shows:

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	104	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	34	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"
Holland	2	"	6	"
Scotland	1	"	4	"

The number of times each of the following composerse has been represented on the programme is indited below, the supremacy of Beethoven, followed at some distance by Wagner, being a noteworthy feature:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski, and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharweuka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry.

Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each.

A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral, "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts [illegible]

22

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1896.

A Striking Summary.

3,313 Selections in 752 Performances.

FIFTEEN YEARS' RECORD OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IN BOSTON.

COMPILED BY F. R. COMEE.

TWO performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same program is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals;" and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	104	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	34	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"
Holland	2	"	6	"
Scotland	1	"	4	"

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorák	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saëns	72	Richard Strauss	10
Händel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Délibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Méhul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	d'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski, and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bülow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.) Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicodé, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the Unfinished Symphony, of Schubert, and the Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg, of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bülow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's Prelude to Parsifal, reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the program of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral Ein' feste Burg, printing on the back of the program the facsimile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
THE EVENING STAR,
SEPTEMBER 19, 1896—

IN MUSICAL CIRCLES

Great Work Done by the Boston Symphony Orchestra During Its Career.

Interesting Compilation Made by Mr. Fred. R. Comee—What Some Local Musicians Are Doing.

Mr. Fred, R. Comee has made a very interesting compilation of the work done in Boston by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the fifteen years of its existence, which will be read with interest by the large number of admirers of that splendid body of musicians in this District. Mr. Comee says that reckoning two performances a week, for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals have come to be ranked as separate performances, there have been given 752 performances. The total number of composers interpreted is 163; total number of selections, 3,313; orchestral selections, 2,270; solo selections, 1,043; instrumental solos, 543, and vocal solos, 500. As to nations, Germany is represented by 79 composers and 2,245 selections; France, 17 composers and 296 selections; Hungary, 3 composers and 164 selections; Russia, 6 composers and 132 selections; Bohemia, 3 composers, 104 selections; America, 12 composers, 88 selections; Poland, 7 composers, 80 selections; Italy, 18 composers, 24 selections; Norway, 2 composers, 36 selections; England, 7 composers, 34 selections; Denmark, 3 composers, 28 selections; Belgium, 4 composers, 22 selections; Holland, 2 composers, 6 selections, and Scotland, 1 composer and 4 selections. Mr. Comee continues:

"That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

"Beethoven, 384; Wagner, 266; Schumann, 175; Mozart, 174; Brahms, 159; Schubert, 150; Mendelssohn, 140; Liszt, 118; Weber, 104; Dvorak, 88; Berlioz, 84; Bach, 74; Rubinstein, 74; Saint-Saens, 72; Handel, 60; Haydn, 60; Chopin, 52; Goldmark, 44; Volkmann, 44; Raff, 42; Bruch, 41; Tschaikowsky, 40; Gluck, 38; Spohr, 34; Cherubini, 30; Henschel, 28; Massenet, 26; Gade, 26; Grieg, 24; Gounod, 22; Paine, 18; Chadwick, 18; Lalo, 16; Reinecke, 16; Auber, 14; Smetana, 14; MacDowell, 14; Foote, 14; Vieuxtemps, 14; Bizet, 12; Moszkowski, 12; Svendsen, 12; Fuchs, 12; Bargiel, 12; Goetz, 12; Gericke, 12; Godard, 12; Meyerbeer, 10; Richard Strauss, 10; Cowen, 8; Delibes, 8; Bennett, 8; Glinka, 8; Hiller, 8; Franz Lachner, 8; Mehul, 8; Reinhold, 8; Sullivan, 8; Floersheim, 8; D'Albert, 6; Bach, Ph. E., 6; Borodin, 6; Ernst, 6; Henselt, 6; Paganini, 6; Pergolesi, 6; Paderewski, 6; Loeffler, 6; Rheinberger, 6; Boieldieu.

"Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski, and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Buhmeister, Bird, Buck, Boecherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

"The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the 'Unfinished Symphony' of Schubert and the 'Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg' of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral), and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smeana and Borodin."

"Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's 'Prelude to Parsifal,' reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

"November 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the program of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral, 'Ein' feste Burg,' printing on the back of the program the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made."

Mr. Fred R. Comee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra management is preparing an interesting account of the work performed by this organization since its first formation. It will give the total number of selections performed, the number of instrumental selections, with a subdivision into orchestral and solo selections; the number of vocal selections, the composers represented and the different works of each, and it will also show the gradual increase in the demand for the works of Wagner, and the modern composers. When this is finished the paper will be extremely valuable to musicians and also to those amateurs who keep in touch with the progress of musical art.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

No element of attractiveness seems to be lacking in the scheme of concerts by the Boston symphony orchestra for the coming season, which promises to be notably brilliant even in the annals of this famous organization. Nothing new need be said of the superlative merits of this orchestra: the programs as far as announced are all that could be desired, and the distinguished solo artists are in all cases worthy the high standard of these concerts. The announcements made last week have evidently aroused general interest.

The concerts will begin Oct 16. Among the solo artists will be Mmes Melba, Carreno, Aus der Ohe, Messrs Plancon, Campanari, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Sieveking, Burmeister, Halir, Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schnitzler, Schroeder and Schulz. Others will be from time to time announced.

The sales of season tickets will be by auction and will be held at Music hall, beginning tomorrow, when the $12 tickets for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals will be sold. The $7.50 rehearsal seats will be sold Tuesday, and the $12 and $7.50 tickets for the Saturday evening concerts will be offered Thursday and Friday respectively. The sales will begin each day at 10 a. m. The method adopted for selling the tickets creates a wide range of prices, and, although there is often sharp competition for certain locations, many hundred seats are disposed of each year at merely nominal premiums. For this reason personal attendance at the auctions is desirable.

——The management of the Boston symphony orchestra announce 24 concerts on consecutive Saturday evenings, from Oct 17 to May 1, omitting Nov 14, Dec 12, Jan 23, Feb 27 and March 27, and 24 public rehearsals on consecutive Friday afternoons, from Oct 16 to April 30, omitting Nov 13, Dec 11, Jan 22, Feb 26 and March 26. The soloists will be Mme Melba, Mme Carreno, Miss Aus Der Ohe, Mr Plancon, Mr Campanari, Mr Rosenthal, Mr Joseffy, Mr Sieveking, Mr Halir, Mr Kneisel, Mr Loeffler, Mr Adamowski, Mr Schroeder, Mr Schulz and others. The $12 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction at Music hall tomorrow at 10 a m. The $7.50 seats for the rehearsals will be sold at auction at Music hall, Tuesday, at 10 a m. The $12 seats for the concerts will be sold at auction at Music hall on Thursday, at 10 a m. The $7.50 seats for the concerts will be sold in like manner at the same place on Friday at 10 a m. Bids will be accepted for seats in their regular order only, and not for the choice; and no more than four seats will be sold on one bid. The seats open to competition will be shown on a diagram, and will be marked off as sold. Tickets will be delivered in the hall, and must be paid for as soon as bought, or they will be immediately resold.

——Mr Fred R. Comee, assistant manager of the Symphony orchestra, has just completed a summary of all the compositions performed by the orchestra since its formation, with the names of the composers, their nationality, etc. It will prove most interesting to symphony concert attendants and is printed today in another column of The Globe.

——Mr E. Frank Baker of Walnut st, Brookline, gave a charming reception on Sunday evening last. His guests included Mrs and Miss Perry, Miss

---

THE MAIL AND EXPRESS
Broadway and Fulton St., New York.
SATURDAY EVENING, SEPT. 19, 1896.

IN THE WORLD OF MUSIC.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Fifteen Years of Existence and Its Future Work—Local Notes.

Although the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been in existence only since 1881, its aggregate of work done has been so much greater than that of any other orchestra in America, not excepting that of the Philharmonic Society, of this city, with its fifty-four years of history, that it may be fairly considered as the most representative and effective body of musicians on this side of the water. Maintained as it is by Mr. Henry L. Higginson, of Boston, who makes good an annual deficit which amounts to a considerable sum, the Boston Symphony Orchestra makes itself a powerful musical influence, not only in its home city and Cambridge, but in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Providence. In Boston the season of grand opera is confined to the visits of New York companies, and musical support is largely concentrated in favor of the annual series of twenty-four afternoon and twenty-four evening concerts by the Symphony Orchestra.

The sixteenth season will open in Boston Music Hall on October 16 and 17, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, each evening programme being the same as that of the previous matinee. Mr. Emil Paur will continue as conductor and the orchestra will number 90 players. Few changes have been made in the personnel, the principal ones being the substitution of M. Jacquet for M. Mole as first flute, and the engagement of M. Bour as second oboe. These artists have already made good reputations in the Thomas and Damrosch orchestras. Messrs. Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz remain in the orchestra, and they will doubtless be drawn upon for solo work.

The vocalists engaged for the Boston season are Melba, Plancon and Campanari, and an acceptance is expected from Eames within a few days. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal and Teresa Carreno, who has not been heard there for seven years. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir, of Berlin, the great German violinist, has also been secured.

Boston has not yet heard the beautiful prelude to "Hans und Gretel," of Hum-

Beach audiences is already familiar, but it is on the list for performance there during the coming season. Other works that will be new here as well as in Boston are a symphony by Dittersdorf; overture, "Lenore," Duparc; selection from "Anthar," Rymsky Korsakow; symphony, E major, Borodin; "Harka," Smetana.

Mr. F. R. Comee, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has compiled from the records of the regular concerts at Boston during the past fifteen years a number of interesting statistics of the work done. The following figures tell an eloquent story:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

The overwhelming majority of compositions played were of German origin, as the table shows:

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections
France	17	“	296	“
Hungary	3	“	164	“
Russia	6	“	132	“
Bohemia	3	“	104	“
America	12	“	88	“
Poland	7	“	80	“
Italy	18	“	74	“
Norway	2	“	36	“
England	7	“	34	“
Denmark	2	“	28	“
Belgium	4	“	22	“
Holland	2	“	6	“
Scotland	1	“	4	“

The number of times each of the following composerse has been represented on the programme is indited below, the supremacy of Beethoven, followed at some distance by Wagner, being a noteworthy feature:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski, and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry.

Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each.

A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral, "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

[22]

The Musical Courier.
NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1896.

A Striking Summary.

3,313 Selections in 752 Performances.

FIFTEEN YEARS' RECORD OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IN BOSTON.

COMPILED BY F. R. COMEE.

TWO performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same program is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals;" and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances				752
Total number of composers				163
Total number of selections				3,313
Orchestral selections				2,270
Solo selections				1,043
Instrumental solos				543
Vocal solos				500
Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	“	296	“
Hungary	3	“	164	“
Russia	6	“	132	“
Bohemia	3	“	104	“
America	12	“	88	“
Poland	7	“	80	“
Italy	18	“	74	“
Norway	2	“	36	“
England	7	“	34	“
Denmark	2	“	28	“
Belgium	4	“	22	“
Holland	2	“	6	“
Scotland	1	“	4	“

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorák	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saëns	72	Richard Strauss	10
Händel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Délibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Méhul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	d'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski, and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bülow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.) Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicodé, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the Unfinished Symphony, of Schubert, and the Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg, of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bülow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's Prelude to Parsifal, reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the program of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral Ein' feste Burg, printing on the back of the program the facsimile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

The Telegram

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1896.

MUSICAL DRIFT

Stray Items Concerning the Singer's World.

The fact that the Boston Symphony orchestra management counts Providence as one of the most important cities on the circuit around which that famous organization moves in a season, and that Providence in turn reckons a concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra one of the choicest pleasures in superior musical entertainments makes a story of what the orchestra has done in its fifteen years of existence peculiarly interesting. Mr. F. R. Comee, the assistant manager of the orchestra, has prepared a sort of resume of its work in that period which has been issued for publication. It discloses the following information:

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony orchestra in Music hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same program is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals;" and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

	Composers.	Selections.
Germany	79	2,245
France	17	296
Hungary	3	164
Russia	6	132
Bohemia	3	104
America	12	88
Poland	7	80
Italy	18	74
Norway	2	36
England	7	34
Denmark	2	28
Belgium	4	22
Holland	2	6
Scotland	1	4

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended.

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	256	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernshiem, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klenge, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moschelles, Muller-Berghaus, Martuci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenscheider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka, (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3, (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Mr. George Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this election the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

Nov. 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, and in the program of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the program the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

The Republican.

SPRINGFIELD, SUNDAY, SEPT. 20, 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

ITS RECORD FOR FIFTEEN YEARS.

A History From the Beginning—3313 Selections in 752 Performances.

F. R. Comee, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has compiled an interesting summary of the works performed by the orchestra in the 15 years of its history. The different ways in which his results are grouped show some rather remarkable facts. Those who have complained that Germany has had the lion's share under Henschel, Gericke, Nikisch and Paur will point in justification to the fact that 2245 selections by German composers were played, as against 1068 by the composers of all other countries taken together. Here are Mr Comee's summaries:—

Performances,	752
Total number of composers,	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections,	2,270
Solo selections,	1,043
Instrumental solos,	543
Vocal solos,	500

Germany, 79 composers, 2245 selections; France, 17, 296; Hungary, 3, 164; Russia, 6, 132; Bohemia, 3, 104; America, 12, 88; Poland, 7, 80; Italy, 18, 74; Norway, 2, 36; England, 7, 34; Denmark, 2, 28; Belgium, 4, 22; Holland, 2, 6; Scotland, 1, 4.

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:—

Beethoven, 384; Wagner, 266; Schumann, 175; Mozart, 174; Brahms, 159; Schubert, 150; Mendelssohn, 140; Liszt, 118; Weber, 104; Dvorak, 88; Berlioz, 84; Bach, 74; Rubinstein, 74; Saint-Saens, 72; Handel, 60; Haydn, 60; Chopin, 52.

Goldmark, 44; Volkmann, 44; Raff, 42; Bruch, 41; Tschaikowsky, 40; Gluck, 38; Spohr, 34; Cherubini, 30; Henschel, 28; Massenet, 26; Gade, 26; Grieg, 24; Gounod, 22; Paine, 18; Chadwick, 18; Lalo, 16; Reinecke, 16; Auber, 14.

Auber, Smetana, MacDowell, Foote, Vieuxtemps, 14 each; Bizet, Moskowski, Svendsen, Fuchs, Bargiel, Goetz, Gericke, Godard, 12 each; Meyerbeer, Richard Strauss, 10 each.

Cowen, Delibes, Bennett, Glinka, Hiller, Franz Lachner, Mehul, Reinhold, Sullivan, Floersheim, 8 each; D'Albert, Bach. (Ph. E.), Borodin, Ernst, Henselt, Paganini, Pergolesi, Paderewski, Loeffler, Rheinberger, Boieldieu, 6 each.

Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski, 4 each.

Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry, 2 each.

Two of the composers in the list, Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed 26 times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the program of the concert on that day Mr Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the program the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

THE SUN.

BALTIMORE, FRIDAY, SEPT. 18, 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

An Interesting Statistical Summary Prepared by Mr. F. R. Comee Showing Its Work.

A summary which has been compiled by Mr. F. R. Comee shows that in the fifteen years existence of the Boston Symphony Orchestra the orchestra has given in Boston 752 performances, in which 3,313 selections were played.

One hundred and sixty-three composers were represented in these selections. There were 2,270 orchestral selections, 1,043 solo selections, 543 instrumental solos and 500 vocal solos.

Beethoven leads the list of composers in the numerical number of their works performed, he having contributed 384 numbers. Germany heads the list of composers, with 79; Italy is second, with 18; France third, with 17, and America fourth, with 12.

THE SUNDAY HERALD.

BALTIMORE, SEPTEMBER [illegible]

IN HARMONY'S REALM.

Proud Record Made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

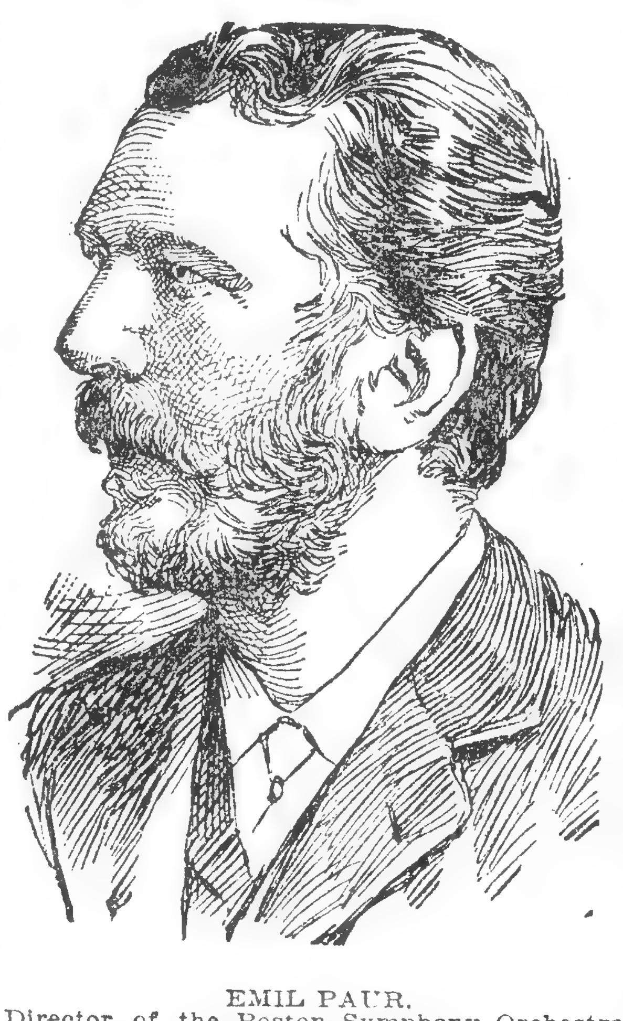
SOME INTERESTING STATISTICS.

Carefully Compiled Table of the Work Done by This Famous Organization Since Its Establishment—Preparations for the Coming Season—Miss Louise Orndorff's Success in Washington—Other Matters Musical.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will enter upon its 16th season this autumn, and will again offer the musical public an extended series of grand concerts, in which no element will be lacking that can add to their musical value or to their attractiveness.

It will begin its next season with its membership practically intact, only a few necessary changes having been made since last year. M. Jacquet succeeds M. Mole as first flute, and M. Bour has been engaged as second oboe. Both these artists come with a fine reputation, won in the Thomas and Damrosch Orchestras. The orchestra will number 90 players, and will again be under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur.

All the members will have returned to Boston by the end of this month, and private rehearsals will be begun at an early date. During the summer the banner of the organization has been upheld in Europe by some of its principal players, who have appeared with credit in the concert halls of London, Paris and Berlin.



EMIL PAUR.
Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The vocalists engaged are Melba, Plancon and Campanari, and an acceptance is expected from Eames within a few days. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal, who is said to have developed into a veritable wizard of the piano since his appearance in Boston some 10 years ago, and Teresa Carreno, always a favorite, who has not been heard here for seven years. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir, of Berlin, perhaps the greatest of Germany's violinists, has been secured, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz, from the ranks of the orchestra, will be no less welcome.

* * *

Conductor Paur has devoted himself during the summer to the preparation of the programmes and the examination of the latest important orchestra compositions. The orchestral numbers of some of the earlier programmes are as follows:

FIRST PROGRAMME.

Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini"........Berlioz
Entrement d'Ophelie (first time) Bourgault-Ducoudray
Suite op. 49........................Saint-Saens
Symphony No. 8......................Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe"...................Weber

SECOND CONCERT.

Overture, "Gwendoline" (first time....Chabriel
Solo number.
Rhapsodie No. 3........................Dvorak
Symphony ....Mozart

THIRD CONCERT.

Symphony (first time)............Mrs. Beach
Solo number.
Variations ....Brahms
Overture, "Freischuetz"..................Weber

FOURTH CONCERT.

Overture, "Richard III."...........Volkmann
Solo number.
Entr'acte, "Ingwelde" (first time)..Schilling
Solo number.
Symphony No. 9.......................Schubert

FIFTH CONCERT.

Overture, "Barber of Bagdad"......Cornelius
Solo number.
Scherzo ....Goldmark
Symphony, "From the New World"....Dvorak

SIXTH CONCERT.

Overture, "Manfred"................Schumann
Solo number.
Two entr'actes from "Carmen"........Bizet
Solo number.
Symphony No. 4...................Tschaikowsky

Some works which will have first performances in these concerts during the season are the overture "Hansel and Gretel," Humperdinck; a symphony by Dittersdorf; overture, "Lenore," Duparc; selection from "Anthar," Rmysky Korsakow; symphony, E major, Borodine; "Harka," Smetana.

It will be seen from these announcements that the season will be one of great interest.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the 15 years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson, in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals;" and, although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500
Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	104	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	34	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"
Holland	2	"	6	"
Scotland	1	"	4	"

* * *

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Moszkowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	23	Bach, Ph. E.	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

* * *

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Reitz, Sgambau, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski, and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

* * *

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a Ctie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed 26 times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3, (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godrad, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Mr. George Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, and in the programme of the concert that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral, "Ein feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

* * *

THE

The Independent, N. Y. C.
OCT 1 1896

Music.

An Orchestra's Biography.

BY E. IRENÆUS STEVENSON.

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra is among the finest concert bands of the world. It is a band of virtuosi, from the concert-master to the tympanist. It belongs in the list of such exceptional organizations of the kind as those in Paris, led byMr. Colonne or Mr. Lamoureux, with those in the very pick of German and Austrian centers, (the annual Bayreuth selection of men included,) and with the Chicago Orchestra. New York has not its equal, unfortunately; tho; unfortunately, New York is apt to think that it has.

The orchestra was founded in 1881, by an endowment from a private citizen of Boston, Mr. Henry L. Higginson. Mr. Higginson's direct support of it is to-day much of its stay, heartily as the Boston public co-operate with him. It is necessary that it should be so helped. Its expense is great, and the resolution that the public must have the good and the pleasure of it cheaply has never been forsaken. It has had our conductors, each of them a leader of high distinction—Mr. George Henschel, Mr. Wilhelm Gericke, Mr. Arthur Nikisch and Mr. Emil Paur. Of these, two are virtuosi in directing, so that the combination ought to have brought what it did—performances of a technical finish unsurpassable. As to practical routine, the system on which this remarkable Boston band is managed is thorough enough, in its essential details, to be a model. The material in its ranks, its rehearsals, its concerts, its aims, in its field of work, its very program-books—are all in touch by honest and superior intelligences in musical art, and in making good art gain local headway and hold it.

The biography of the Orchestra has lately been set forth to the close of last season, by Mr. Comee, of its staff, in a concise and systematic form. So much is suggested to intelligent musical readers in the summary—so much beyond local interest—that it merits the limited extracts possible to this column. Beginning with 1881, and the first concerts—two concerts are given in each week between October and May—the performances number 752. Of compositions, 3,313 have been played; 2,270 of them have been orchestral only; 500 have included vocal solos; 543 called for instrumental soloists—with a total of 1,043 selections needing solo artists. This list has been drawn from 163 composers. As a matter of nationality, Germany, Italy, France and America have furnished the largest group of names—Germany 79, Italy 18, France 17, America 12. Russia has yielded only six writers to the repertory, or less than Poland or England, with seven each. Of the other nations the numbers are but by twos and threes, showing how only the best is universal in musical taste. In regard to the number of times that a given composer is played, more than another, Beethoven stands firm as heart could wish with 384; the Wagnerites have their divus a close second, with the figure 266; Schumann has been heard 175 times; Mozart, 174; Brahms, 159; Schubert, 150; Mendelssohn, 140; Lizst, 118; Weber, 104; Dvorak, 88; Berlioz, 84; Bach, 74; Rubinstein, 74; Saint-Saëns, 72; Handel, 60; Chopin, 52; Goldmark, 44; Volkmann, 44; Raff, 42; Bruch, 41; Tschaikovsky, 40; Gluck, 38; Spohr, 34; Cherubini, 40, and so on through a long list from Palestrina to the orchestra's own men some of them composers and occasionally contributors to its programs. Evidently the whole-gods are not forsaken for the half-gods in Boston. The public is not allowed to forget the past and good through an entertaining of the new-hatched and the unfledged comrades in music—while at the same time no worthy current or development of real mark is unrepresented in the orchestra's record. The whole tabulation is a striking one. In one passage Mr. Comee notes:

"The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the 'Unfinished Symphony' of Schubert and the 'Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremburg' of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6. (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each."

It is also recorded, in connection with Mr. Henschel's conductorship that—following Dr. Hans von Bülow's famous precedent—he once began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal;" reasoning that by twice hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend it. Another Henschel incident came in November, 1883, with the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther. In the program of the concert on that day, Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the program the facsimile of the manuscript of this hymn of 1530, with a request that the audience should "join in singing" the same. They did so; the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made, and rare anywhere in this country. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bülow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikovsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz, Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

The Musical Courier.
NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1896.

Program Advertising.

MR. FREDERIC R. COMEE, who attends to the publication of the program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is sending out the appended letter to the piano trade.

We have been asked by two parties thus solicited to give an opinion as to the advantages of advertising in this manner:

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PROGRAM.

PUBLISHED BY C. A. ELLIS, MANAGER.

	BOSTON ISSUE.	Circulation.
48 Performances	24 Friday Afternoon Public Rehearsals, 24 Saturday Evening Concerts	144,000

CIRCUIT ISSUE.

New York. Brooklyn. Philadelphia. Washington.
Baltimore. Providence.

In addition to the two series of concerts in Boston the Boston Symphony Orchestra makes each month a trip to New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore and Providence. The large number of copies of our program distributed in advance, together with the regular issue of house programs at each concert, results in the following enormous guaranteed circulation:

5 New York concerts	50,000
10 Brooklyn concerts (five evenings and five matinées)	100,000
5 Philadelphia concerts	50,000
5 Washington concerts	35,000
5 Baltimore concerts	35,000
6 Providence concerts	40,000
36 performances	310,000
Grand total circulation, 84 performances	454,000

For advertising space address F. R. Comee, Music Hall, Boston, Mass.

SEPTEMBER 3, 1896.

Your attention is respectfully called to our program for the coming season as the best piano advertisement in this country. Direct comparison with newspaper advertising is invited for the reason that only a certain percentage of newspaper readers are piano purchasers, which percentage are precisely the people found in our audiences. In other words, our program places your goods directly before those who, having both the means and the inclination to buy pianos, are most likely to become your customers. The strong and unique feature of our publication is our one-third page advertising space directly under reading matter, compelling our patrons to read your advertisement. It is similar to the programs of the famous Crystal Palace concerts in London, the chief distinction being that the latter are sold at 25 cents each, while our issue of nearly half a million copies is distributed free, as explained in the above heading. The analytical and historical notes constituting the literary feature of our program are prepared by W. F. Apthorp, musical editor of the Boston Transcript. Our season is thirty weeks, from October to May. I mail you sample copy under separate cover. I should be glad to quote rates if you are interested, and waiting your reply, I am, cordially yours,

FREDERIC R. COMEE.

We want to advertise in that program right away, but how is Mr. Comee or anyone else going to prove that he circulates 454,000 of 'em? Where, to whom, how does he send out, circulate or distribute 10,000 programs for each concert in New York? Fifty thousand program books is an enormous lot, especially when we consider that the house in which they are used seats only a little over 3,000 at its fullest capacity. Where do the other 7,000 go? Of course we know that Mr. Comee mails a great many to people musically inclined, but then a list of 7,000 of this particular class in New York city is difficult to realize, for it must be remembered that the same claim is made for Brooklyn, where it is stated that 10,000 programs are circulated, where the house does not seat more than 3,000; that is three-tenths of the issue.

If the same ratio be applied to the grand total circulation it would mean the circulation of only about 136,000 to the actual audiences, and would leave the enormous number of 317,800 books to be distributed to outside sources.

As said before, we want to advertise in this program if Mr. Comee can substantiate his claims.

Boston Music Notes.

BOSTON, Mass., September 26, 1896.

There was an unusually large audience assembled at the auction of Symphony rehearsal tickets last Monday in Music Hall. Good prices were the rule, and as usual the premiums paid were higher for the rehearsals than for the concerts on Saturday evening. Many persons who have attended the Symphony concerts for years have always occupied the same seats, and the premiums on such seats are always large. The hall has been freshly painted and looks as bright as a new pin. Everyone in the musical world is looking forward with pleasant anticipations to an enjoyable season of music.

The Leader
SEPTEMBER, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

MR. R. F. COMEE has compiled a very interesting series of statistics from the fifteen years' records of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Some of the details are curious and interesting. Here are some of the items:

Performances,	752
Total Number of Composers,	163
Total Number of Selections,	3,313
Orchestral Selections,	2,270
Solo Selections,	1,043
Instrumental Solos,	543
Vocal Solos,	500

Germany heads the list with 79 composers and 2,245 selections; France comes second with 17 composers and 296 selections; America comes sixth on the list, with 12 composers and 88 selections; and England comes tenth on the list, with 7 composers and 34 selections.

In a list of composers, in the numerical order of their works performed, Beethoven stands at the head; his works were given 384 times. Wagner comes second, Schumann third, Mozart fourth, Brahms fifth.

In the record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection, there is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Meistersinger" of Wagner, each work having been performed 26 times. Beethoven's symphonies, Nos. 3, 5, 6, and 7 were each performed 24 times. When Mr. Georg Henschel was conductor he gave all the nine symphonies of Beethoven each season, an example that has not since heen imitated.

November 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral, "Ein' Feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of the choral, dated 1530, with the request that the audience should join in the singing of it. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request has been made.

The statistics are very interesting to read, and prove as much as they disprove. They demonstrate a catholicity of taste that has been denied to the conductors of the Symphony Orchestra, and they give a promise that this taste will be further developed in the future.

THE RICHMOND DISPATCH.
SUNDAY.......SEPTEMBER 20, 1896.

A STRIKING SUMMARY

3,313 SELECTIONS IN 752 PERFORMANCES.

Fifteen Years' Record of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston—Recently Completed Index of the Selections Played.

(Compiled by F. R. Comee.)

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon, and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals"; and although this appellation still remains, it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany	79	composers,	2,245	selections.
France	17	"	296	"
Hungary	3	"	164	"
Russia	6	"	132	"
Bohemia	3	"	104	"
America	12	"	88	"
Poland	7	"	80	"
Italy	18	"	74	"
Norway	2	"	36	"
England	7	"	34	"
Denmark	2	"	28	"
Belgium	4	"	22	"
Holland	2	"	6	"
Scotland	1	"	4	"

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384
Wagner	266
Schumann	175
Mozart	174
Brahms	159
Schubert	150
Mendelssohn	140
Liszt	118
Weber	104
Dvorak	88
Berlioz	84
Bach	74
Rubinstein	74
Saint-Saens	72
Handel	60
Haydn	60
Chopin	52
Goldmark	44
Volkman	44
Raff	42
Bruch	41
Tschaikowsky	40
Gluck	38
Spohr	34
Cherubini	30
Henschel	28
Massenet	26
Gade	26
Grieg	24
Gounod	22
Paine	18
Chadwick	18
Lalo	16
Reinecke	16
Auber	14
Smetana	14
MacDowell	14
Foote	14
Vieuxtemps	14
Bizet	12
Moszkowski	12
Svendsen	12
Fuchs	12
Bargiel	12
Goetz	12
Gericke	12
Godard	12
Meyerbeer	10
Richard Strauss	10
Cowen	8
Delibes	8
Bennett	8
Glinka	8
Hiller	8
Franz Lachner	8
Mehul	8
Reinhold	8
Sullivan	8
Floersheim	8
D'Albert	6
Bach, Ph. E.	6
Borodin	6
Ernst	6
Henselt	6
Paganini	6
Pergelesi	6
Paderewski	6
Loeffler	6
Rheinberger	6
Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsiny, Nicolai, Popper, Rieutz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E). Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), and Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Master-singers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven Symphonies, Nos. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral), and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

Mr. George Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac-simile of the manuscript of the choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

SUNDAY INTER OCEAN
SEPTEMBER 20, 1896.

A STRIKING SUMMARY

3,313 Selections in 752 Performances.

FIFTEEN YEARS' RESULTS

The Modern and Classical Repertoire.

Record of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston Music Hall.

Two performances a week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the fifteen years since the founding of this organization by Mr. Henry L. Higginson in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. At these two performances each week, the first on Friday afternoon and the second on Saturday evening, precisely the same programme is presented. The Friday afternoon performances were called at the outset "public rehearsals," and although this appellation still remains it is to a certain extent a misnomer, as these "public rehearsals" have an audience entirely distinct from the Saturday evening concerts, and are entitled to rank as separate performances. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestral selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

	Composers.	Selections.
Germany	79	2,245
France	17	296
Hungary	3	164
Russia	6	132
Bohemia	3	104
America	12	88
Poland	7	80
Italy	18	74
Norway	2	36
England	7	34
Denmark	2	28
Belgium	4	22
Holland	2	6
Scotland	1	4

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Smetana	14
Wagner	266	MacDowell	14
Schumann	175	Foote	14
Mozart	174	Vieuxtemps	14
Brahms	159	Bizet	12
Schubert	150	Mozskowski	12
Mendelssohn	140	Svendsen	12
Liszt	118	Fuchs	12
Weber	104	Bargiel	12
Dvorak	88	Goetz	12
Berlioz	84	Gericke	12
Bach	74	Godard	12
Rubinstein	74	Meyerbeer	10
Saint-Saens	72	Richard Strauss	10
Handel	60	Cowen	8
Haydn	60	Delibes	8
Chopin	52	Bennett	8
Goldmark	44	Glinka	8
Volkmann	44	Hiller	8
Raff	42	Franz Lachner	8
Bruch	41	Mehul	8
Tschaikowsky	40	Reinhold	8
Gluck	38	Sullivan	8
Spohr	34	Floersheim	8
Cherubini	30	D'Albert	6
Henschel	28	Ph. E. Bach	6
Massenet	26	Borodin	6
Gade	26	Ernst	6
Grieg	24	Henselt	6
Gounod	22	Paganini	6
Paine	18	Pergolesi	6
Chadwick	18	Paderewski	6
Lalo	16	Loeffler	6
Reinecke	16	Rheinberger	6
Auber	14	Boieldieu	6

Four selections were played of each of the following composers: Busoni, Graun, Gradener, Grammann, Heuberger, Huss, Humperdinck, Jensen, Joachim, Krug, Litolff, Lassen, Lang (Margaret), Mackenzie, Maas, Molique, Monsigny, Nicolai, Popper, Rietz, Sgambati, Strube, Thomas (Ambroise), Thomas (A. Goring), Wieniawski; and two each of the following: Bernard (E.), Burmeister, Bird, Buck, Boccherini, Bulow, Bruckner, Benoit, Cornelius, Chabrier, Davidoff, De Swert, Dupont, Esser, Eckert, Ferrari, Franz, Giordani, Goltermann, Gernsheim, Grimm, Gilson, Hauptmann, Herbeck, Hoffman, Herold, Hartmann, Hummel, Isouard, Johns, Korbay, Klughard, Klengel, Kahn, Knorr, Lindner, Lachner (V.), Luther (M.), Langer, Mascagni, Moscheles, Muller-Berghaus, Martucci, Marschner, Nicode, Purcell, Ponchielli, Rubinstein (Nic.), Rossi, Rossini, Reznicek, Riemenschneider, Singer, Scharwenka (X.), Scharwenka (Ph.), Strauss (Joh.), Secchi, Stradella, Stanford, Spontini, Thieriot, Viotti, Vogrich, Weld, Zollner, Parker (H.), Parry. Two of the composers in the list, Messrs. Loeffler and Strube, are first violinists in the orchestra, the former having written two compositions for violin and orchestra and one for 'cello and orchestra, and the latter a symphony and overture.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Mastersingers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed twenty-six times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6, (Pastoral), and 7, with a total of twenty-four performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana, and Borodin.

Mr. Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

Nov. 10, 1893, was the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, and in the programme of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the programme the fac simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

F. R. COMEE.

The Sentinel
ENTERED AT MILWAUKEE P. O. AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.
In Milwaukee, Daily only, delivered by carrier, 15 cents per week, 65 cents per month, $8.00 per
SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 27.

BOSTON'S GREAT BAND.

Account of Its Concerts for the Past Fifteen Years.

The Boston Symphony orchestra this fall enters its sixteenth season with its membership practically intact, only a few necessary changes having been made since last year. M. Jacquet succeeds M. Mole as first flute, and M. Bour has been engaged as second oboe. The orchestra will number ninety players, and will again be under the direction of Mr. Paur. The Boston season will comprise twenty-four matinees on Fridays and twenty-four evening concerts on Saturdays at Music Hall, beginning Oct. 16 and 17. The vocalists engaged are Melba, Plançon and Campanari, and an acceptance is expected from Eames. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal and Teresa Carreno. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir of Berlin, the Bohemian violinist, has been secured, and Kneisel, Loeffler, Adamowski, Schroeder and Schulz remain in the orchestra.

Some works which will have first performances in these concerts during the season are the overture "Hansel and Gretel," Humperdinck; a symphony by Dittersdorf; overture, "Lenore," Duparc; selection from "Anthar," Rimsky Korsakow; symphony E major, Borodine; "Harka," Smetana. In addition to the Boston concerts the orchestra will give its usual series of performances in New York, and other cities during the season.

F. R. Comee, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has compiled an intersting summary of the works performed by the orchestra in the 15 years of its history. The different ways in which his results are grouped show some rather remarkable facts. Those who have complained that Germany has had the lion's share under Henschel, Gericke, Nikisch and Paur will point in justification to the fact that 2245 selections by German composers were played, as against 1068 by the composers of all other countries taken together. Here are Mr. Comee's summaries:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3,313
Orchestra selections	2,270
Solo selections	1,043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

Germany, 79 composers, 2245 selections; France, 177, 296; Hungary, 3, 164; Russia, 6, 132; Bohemia, 3, 104; America, 12, 88; Poland, 7, 80; Italy, 18, 74; Norway, 2, 36; England, 7, 34; Denmark, 2, 28; Belgium, 4, 22; Holland, 2, 6; Scotland, 1, 4.

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Master-singers of Nuremberg" of Wagner, each work having been performed 26 times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubenstein, Von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin.

Georg Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that directly after hearing this selection the audience could better comprehend a second rendition of it.

November 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther; and in the program of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the program the fac-simile of the manuscript of this choral of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

[25]

THE BROOKLYN EAGLE—SUNDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1896.

Native Talent.

In the fifteen years during which the public has been hearing the Boston Symphony orchestra no record had been kept of its work, but Mr. Comee, its assistant manager, has been fishing up from old bins and papers a list of its selections and he finds, as we might easily suppose, that the German musicians led in popularity. They deserve to. In a total of 3,813 selections Beethoven had 384; Wagner, 266; Schumann—a man who is not played often enough, either—175; Mozart, 174, and so on, through Schubert, Mendelssohn, Weber, Bach, Handel, Haydn and Goldmark, naming Austrians with the Germans, because they are alike in school and style. Next in popularity come the French, after them the Hungarians, Russians, Bohemians, and sixth on the list, Americans. This is a little surprising, when we consider that this orchestra is composed largely of foreigners and has always been led by a foreign conductor; also that it is conservative in its management and comes from a town where the taste is high in matters of art; so high that they fine brass bands for giving concerts on Sunday and only admit sculpture in pantalettes to the public halls. There were 88 American pieces in these concerts, while the once popular Italy was represented in only 74. It cannot be charged that favoritism existed in the case of the dozen native composers who wrote those 88 selections. The meaning of their presence on the programme is that we are beginning to have a national music—not strong or wide spread as yet, but taking form and full of promise. In the work of composers like Buck, MacDowell, Lang, Parker, Thallon, Walther, Brewer, Paine, Chadwick, Foote, Floersheim, Loeffler, Herbert, Kelly and dozens of others who might be named, there are grace, melodic ingenuity, harmonic propriety and often a scholarly finish. The fierce originality that we call genius will be developed in time. But that our native talent should be recognized and rewarded by so authoritative a body as the Boston Symphony orchestra is encouraging. Let our young Beethovens and Wagners keep on.

MORNING SPY

THE SPY SHOULD HAVE THE EYE OF ARGUS: HE IS HONORABLE IF HE DO BUT LOOK TO THE WELFARE OF THE COMMONWEALTH

WORCESTER.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1896.

Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Mastersinger's Prelude Most Often Given.

The following facts compiled by Frederic R. Comee, assistant of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be of interest to musical people:

Two performances a week by the Boston Orchestra in Music Hall, Boston, during each season, for the 15 years since the founding of this organization, in 1881, show some striking totals, interesting to the general public from a statistical standpoint, and to the musical public for obvious reasons. From a recently completed index of all the selections played at these performances, a condensed summary has been made, with the following results:

Performances, 752; total number of composers, 163; total number of selections, 3313; orchestral selections, 2270; solo selections, 10'3; instrumental solos, 543; vocal solos, 500.

A list of composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven, 384; Wagner, 266; Schumann, 175; Mozart, 174; Brahms, 159; Schubert, 150; Mendelssohn, 140; Liszt, 118; Weber, 104; Dvorak, 88; Berlioz, 84; Bach, 74; Rubinstein, 74; Saint-Saens, 72; Handel, 60; Haydn, 60; Chopin, 52; Goldmark, 44; Volkmann, 44; Raff, 42; Bruch, 41; Tschaikowsky, 40; Gluck, 38; Spohr, 34; Cherubini, 30; Henschel, 28; Massenet, 26; Gade, 26; Greig, 24; Gounod, 22; Paine, 18; Chadwick, 18; Lalo, 16; Reinecke, 16; Auber, 14; Smetana, 14; MacDowell, 14; Foote, 14; Vieuxtemps, 14; Bizet, 12; Moszkowski, 12; Svendsen, 12; Fuchs, 12; Bargiel, 12; Goetz, 12; Gericke, 12; Godard, 12; Meyerbeer, 10; Richard Strauss, 10; Cowen, 8; Delibes, 8; Bennett, 8; Glinka, 8; Hiller, 8; Franz Lachner, 8; Mehul, 8; Reinbold, 8; Sullivan, 8; Floerheim, 8; D'Albert, 6; Bach, Ph. E., 6; Borodin, 6; Ernst, 6; Henselt, 6; Paganini, 6; Pergolesi, 6; Paderewski, 6; Loeffler, 6; Rheinberger, 6; Boieldieu, 6.

The record for the greatest number of performances of any one selection is a tie between the "Unfinished symphony" of Schubert and the "Prelude to the Meistersingers of Nuremburg" of Wagner, each work having been perfomed 26 times. As a very close second to these two numbers are the Beethoven symphonies, No. 3 (Eroica), 5, 6 (Pastoral) and 7, with a total of 24 performances each. A list of composers who have died since these concerts began includes such famous names as Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein, von Bulow, Raff, Gounod, Tschaikowsky, Volkmann, Ambroise Thomas, Godard, Chabrier, Franz Lachner, Smetana and Borodin. George Henschel, conductor for the first three years, gave all the nine Beethoven symphonies each season, which has not been done since. Mr. Henschel also began and ended the same concert with Wagner's "Prelude to Parsifal," reasoning that, directly after hearing this selection, the audience could better comprehend a second rendering of it.

Nov. 10, 1883, was the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, and in the program of the concert on that day Mr. Henschel placed Luther's choral, "Ein' feste Burg," printing on the back of the program the facsimile of the manuscript of this choral, of date 1530, with a request that the audience should join in singing the same. This is the only time in the history of these concerts that such a request was made.

THE SAINT PAUL GLOBE: SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1896.

IN FIFTEEN YEARS

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA HAS MOUNTED TO A HIGH PLANE.

IN THOUSANDS OF CONCERTS

IT HAS DELIGHTED THE HEARTS OF A HOST OF PEOPLE.

BROAD AND VERSATILE BAND

As It Is, Its Programmes Have Been Cosmopolitan in the Highest Degree.

There is a disposition in this country to regard Europe as possessing the only true merit from a musical standpoint and consequently everything in America is criticised as lacking in true artistic conception, and musicianal rendition. There is, of course, good reason for this, although not so much now as in times past. It is characteristic with Americans when they do take hold of a thing with the determination of making something out of it they invariably succeed, and this is most strikingly illustrated in the splendid sussess of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Some fifteen years or more ago a wealthy banker in the city of Boston conceived the idea of taking hold of a then existing orchestra and making it, what it should be, a thoroughly first-class orchestra. His money, influence and rare good taste and judgment combined enabled him to gather together a company of musicians whom he kept regardless of the fact that it was an expensive luxury, for, like many other things, there was a time when the Boston Symphony orchestra was, practically speaking, a white elephant, but their devotion to art, their splendid music and a generous appreciation of their efforts by the people of New England in time brought them to such a plane of success that, from a financial standpoint, the Boston Symphony orchestra is a valuable piece of property. But far above its financial standpoint is its superior excellence as a musical body. For it is now regarded as one of the three great orchestras of the world, and it is very doubtful whether with these three it is not in the first place. When the orchestra was first established the idea of rotation in musical directors was inaugurated. As a result some of the greatest orchestra leaders in the world have been identified with the orchestra and have brought it to the splendid success which it now enjoys. Prominent among these leaders have been George Henschel, the great London leader, and Arthur Nikisch, who has recently become the director of the famous Gwendlehaus orchestra at Leipsic, which is justly regarded as the most excellent orchestra of Europe. Later the orchestra has had, and is now under, the artistic direction of Emil Pauer, who is rightly regarded as one of the great leaders of the decade. It is, therefore, not strange with such a brilliancy of leadership that the orchestra should have come to the splendid artistic recognition which it has received throughout the world. Very much of the success of the orchestra is likewise due to the efficient management which it has enjoyed in the personal direction of C. A. Ellis, who will be pleasantly remembered by the citizens of St. Paul as affording them the opportunity of hearing Madam Melba and her company here last season. Mr. Ellis is a man of keen judgment and of fine business ability, and, devoting himself entirely to the business side of artistic matters, as he has for many years past, he brings to the orchestra and to whatever attraction he may interest himself, a wide and varied experience.

In handling the orchestra Mr. Ellis also has the assistance of two men who are doing valuable service for artistic interests in this country, Wm. F. Apthorp and Frederick R. Comme. The work of Mr. Apthorp is a purely literary one and consists of the descriptive comment of the programme. Few men in this country are better qualified for this task than Mr. Apthorp, for aside from being a thorough musician himself, he is rightly regarded as one of the ablest critics and writers upon musical matters and in a literary way he has done a vast amount toward the cultivation of the very high artistic taste in music which is now happily characteristic of much of New England. Mr. Apthorp in his programme each time takes occasion to contribute under the topic of "Entre Acte," a most interesting essay upon some phase of musical mention making the programmes doubly valuable to a musical student. The work of Mr. Comme is in a measure lessening the responsibility of Mr. Ellis for in the great orchestra of so many pieces as this one there are a thousand and one little details which would require the attention of one man almost wholly, and it is to these matters that Mr. Comme's attention is directed, and the smooth, easy manner in which things are conducted and the regularity with which everything comes into its place at the right time is in no small degree owing to his care. Mr. Comme has also taken charge of press work and the newspaper men of the country are under obligation to him for the many favors which he extended them during the season. The orchestra is now entering upon its sixteenth season, having rendered in fifteen years 754 performances in Boston and 1,406 outside, a record which would be a credit to any musical organization. Without for an instant discouraging the persistent, conscientious efforts of such men as Theodore Thomas in Chicago, and Frank Danz Jr. in the Northwest to give their hearers fine music, it would unmistakably be beneficial to the musical taste of the country if the Boston Symphony orchestra would sometime yield to the many invitations which are made for them to come west and lay out a tour which would give the country generally a chance to hear them. In view of the fact that their concerts for this season have already begun, it may be of interest to note what has been accomplished in the past fifteen years.

A recently completed index of all selections played at these performances present a condensed summary with the following results:

Performances	752
Total number of composers	163
Total number of selections	3.313
Orchestral selections	2.270
Solo selections	1.043
Instrumental solos	543
Vocal solos	500

	Composers.	Selections.		Composers.	Selections.
Germany	79	2,245	Italy	18	74
France	17	296	Norway	2	36
Hungary	3	164	England	7	34
Russia	6	132	Denmark	2	28
Bohemia	3	104	Belgium	4	22
America	12	88	Holland	2	6
Poland	7	80	Scotland	1	4

That the question of nationality is a vexed one is painfully realized by all who make this subject a study, but the above table is as accurate as can be made from the leading authorities. In a few instances the claims of the individual concerned and the customary rules of establishing nationality are so at variance that absolute accuracy is impossible. A list of the composers in the numerical order of their works performed is appended:

Beethoven	384	Saint-Sens	72
Wagner	266	Handel	60
Schumann	175	Haydn	60
Mozart	174	Bargiel	12
Brahms	159	Goetz	12
Schubert	150	Gericke	12
Mendelssohn	140	Godard	12
Lizst	118	Meyerbeer	10
Chopin	52	Richard Strauss	10
Goldmark	44	Cowen	8
Volkmann	44	Delibes	8
Raff	42	Cherubini	30
Bruch	41	Henschel	28
Tschaikowski	40	Massenet	26
Gluck	38	Gade	26
Spohr	31	Grieg	24
Weber	104	Bennett	8
Dvorak	88	Glinka	8
Berlioz	84	Hiller	8
Bach	74	Franz Lachner	8
Rubinstein	74	Mehul	8

In addition to these there were a large number of composers whose selections were used from one to six times each.

oston Journal.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1896.

SHE WANTED THAT SEAT,

And to Get It She Bid Against Herself — One Incident at the Symphony Sale — Less Profit This Year Than Last.

One woman who attended the sale Thursday at Music Hall of the $12 seats for the Saturday night performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, exhibited a fine specimen of perplexed impetuosity. She wished with all her heart and strength to buy a couple of seats. So, evidently, did many other women, for that matter, but this woman was the van-leader of them all.

The bidding had gone along by hops, skips and jumps to the row lettered H. Only a few seats were left in the row, and the bids, spurred by Mr. Jackson, the auctioneer, bounded along eagerly.

Now the seats on the ends of the rows, though sought for by many, never bring high premiums; so when this woman raised some one who had bid $12 half a dollar better, the others who had been bidding just gritted their teeth, released their eyes from the auctioneer's fascinating glances, and sat stone still.

"Twelve and a half—twelve and a half, I'm bid. Who'll make it thirteen?"

Nine of the 10 who had bid continued to sit stone still. The tenth shook her diagram violently. The tenth was the woman who had raised the bid to twelve-fifty.

"Twelve-fifty's your bid, madam," said the auctioneer, firmly. He may have thought that she was trying to fluster him. And then, again, he may not have thought any such thing, for auctioneers know the paradoxical, well-nigh incomprehensible ways of some of womankind.

But the bidder persisted. Competitor or no competitor, she was bound to offer more than $12 50.

"Twelve-fifty—twelve-fifty! Thirteen, now, thirteen (Increased turbulence of the diagram.) Twelve-fifty's your bid, madam" (sotto voce).

She may not have taken any stock in what the auctioneer was saying, or she may have heard (though no one else did) a multitude of voices crying "Thirteen! thirteen!!" Anyway, she was not to be baffled, deceived, trifled with, defeated. The diagram fluttered back and forth in a white, continuous streak.

"Who will—— Twelve-fifty's your bid, madam; your bid." There was a tinge of despair in the auctioneer's voice.

"Twelve-fifty——twelve——well, madam, if you will have it, thirteen. Thirteen I'm bid, thirteen; thirteen and a half? Thirteen and a half? Sold to you, madam, for thirteen."

He might have gone on accepting the bids of the only bidder, but, gentlemanly, he stopped. But not until he said, "How many seats will you take, madam?" did the bidding of the lone bidder, excited, almost truculent, defying all men, cease.

Then everyone but the bidder and the auctioneer laughed, and the laughter seemed to stimulate the sale afterward.

About 300 buyers were present. The bidding, on the whole, was profitable but not brisk. The only excitement was furnished by two ticket agents, or speculators, who allowed Mr. Jackson to excite them over a seat bordering on the middle aisle in J. When one agent had bid $59, the other, seemingly satisfied, regained his composure and bid no more. Then the next two seats were sold to the one who had quit for $46.

When the sale closed, late in the afternoon, a number of seats, both on the floor and in the balcony, remained unbid on. These seats will be reserved by the management for sale at each concert. That they are unsold is not, as a matter of fact, because they were undesirably situated, but because the sale was slow and bidding had to be pricked and whipped, so to speak.

The result of the sale, compared with last year's, shows obvious signs of "hard times." And that the audiences which attend the rehearsals are more enthusiastic than the Saturday night audiences is perceptible in both the higher premiums paid and the much more vigorous sale last Monday. However, the management, taking everything into consideration, is consoled by the figures that prove that this year's sale thus far is more profitable than the sale in '94. Mr. Charles E. Ellis, the manager of the Symphony concerts, said to a Journal reporter last night that he was quite satisfied with the result of the auctions up to date.

Today, beginning at 10 o'clock, the $7 50 seats for the Saturday night concerts will be offered for sale.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

Established 1813.

The Official Paper of the State.

The Official Paper of the City.

THURSDAY MORNING, SEPT. 24, 1896.

SYMPHONY TICKET SALES.

The auction sale of $12 season tickets for the Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held at Music Hall today, beginning at 10 o'clock. All seats have been sold for the Friday rehearsals.

In the coming concerts the orchestra will have the co-operation of Mmes. Melba, Carreno, Aus der Ohe, Messrs. Plancon, Rosenthal, Joseffy, Sieveking, Halir and other great solo artists, ensuring a series of magnificent performances.

---

4 Sept 24 TH

BOSTON POST,

The Representative Democratic Paper OF NEW ENGLAND.

SYMPHONY TICKET SALES.

The auction sales of season tickets for the performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be resumed at Music Hall this morning, beginning at 10 o'clock, when the $12 seats for the Saturday evening concerts will be sold. The sales on Monday and Tuesday for the Friday afternoon public rehearsals demonstrated the high appreciation of these concerts by lovers of music. The same programmes are given Friday afternoons and Saturday evenings, and there is little doubt that the sale for the concerts will equal that for the rehearsals.

[illegible]

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1896.

FINAL SALE OF SYMPHONY SEATS.

Large Attendance of Buyers of Tickets for the Evening Concerts.

More people were present at Music Hall, this morning, for the sale of low-price tickets for the Saturday evening concerts than was the case at the other sales this week. Only the $7.50 seats were offered; seats on the floor under the first balcony, wall seats around the balcony, and the entire second balcony. The bidding of premiums was lifeless at the start, the first sale being at $3.50, with later sales as high as $7 and as low as twenty-five cents for some seats. In some instances no bid at all was forthcoming, and the seats were passed without sale. In the balcony the prices were higher, the first sale being seat No. 103, second row on the Hamilton-place side. This seat sold for $24 premium. The next two in order went at $7.75, followed by lower figures to the wall end of the row, which sold at $4. In the wall row, which is raised above the second tier of seats, a seat directly behind 103 sold at $8.50. By many people this is considered as a better seat, from the fact that it is raised. All along the Hamilton-place wall seats sold at a wide range, from $16 to $18 being about the top prices. Corresponding seats on the left side of the hall went at from $5.50 to about $8. In the left balcony, the seat corresponding to that on the other side of the hall, which had sold for $24 premium, was knocked off at $7.50. Back rows in the balcony sold from $1.50 up to about $5 premium. One man, who last season paid $10 advance for a pair of seats in this part of the hall, secured today two seats almost equally good at $1.50 premium.

With the beginning of the sale of seats in the second balcony, seats which for the rehearsals are left free for occupancy by admission-ticket holders, much eagerness was shown, and it was at this point that many women began to bid, for the most part by modest quarters and halves, but occasionally offering an even dollar. The first sales were at a dollar advance. This was followed quickly by a rise to about $15 for seats in the front row, on the right side of the hall. Second-row seats sold at lower rates, about $3 to $5 being a fair average.

All the sales have met with much success, and people of limited means seem to have had good opportunities for securing at least some kind of a seat, often an excellent one at a moderate advance over regular box-office prices. The high prices paid were for seats which are the favorite choice of people who may have occupied them in other seasons. Their anxiety to possess the same places again brings about more or less competition and causes the premium to run to a high point.

The Evening Times

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1896.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The Wonderful Musical Organization to Give Concerts Soon.

There is no finer musical organization in the world to-day than the Boston Symphony Orchestra. under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur. In speaking of this remarkable body of musicians the New York Herald says: "It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening. Such tonal beauty—Klangschonheit, as the Germans have it—has not been listened to in a long while. The strings sounded simply intoxicating, and the brass and wood-winds were hardly less fine. A bientot, ye Boston Symphonists! You will not be readily forgotten; for last night you played like master singers, all of you."

It will be pleasing to Pawtucket lovers of music to learn that this great orchestra is to commence its regular series of six concerts in Infantry Hall, Providence, on Wednesday evening, October 21, with such solo artists as Mme. Teresa Carreno, Mme. Georgine von Januschowsky, Mr. Carl Halir, Mr. Martinus Sieveking, Mr. T. Adamowski, and others to be announced. Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of six concerts, are $5. Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets. The sale of season tickets will open at the box office, Infantry Hall, Providence, Monday morning, October 12, at 9 o'clock. To secure a fair distribution of seats no more than ten tickets will be sold to one person.

New-York Daily Tribune.

FOUNDED BY HORACE GREELEY.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1896.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give five concerts this season in the Metropolitan Opera House, under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur. The dates are November 13, December 10, January 21, February 25 and March 25. Among the solo performers who will take part are Teresa Carreño, Moritz Rosenthal, Ben Davies and Carl Halvi. An entire programme of Wagner's music and two novelties—Smetana's "Wallenstein" and an entr'acte from Schilling's "Ingwelde"—are promised.

PROVIDENCE SUNDAY JOURNAL, OCTOBER 11

Symphony Concerts.

TO-MORROW morning at 9 o'clock at Infantry Hall, the sale opens for the season tickets to the six concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday evening, Oct. 21, Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, March 10, and April 21. These concerts easily rank as the leading musical events of the seaison, and the music loving public show a genuine appreciation of the fact that the same high standard of performance has been maintained by the now famous organization in all the years it has visited the city. No unfavorable comparisons have ever been made between different seasons, no comment that the orchestra does not play as well one season as another, but always the same uniform level of almost matchless ensemble work. No one who cares to hear the best in orchestral performance can afford to miss these concerts. The soloist at the first concert will be Mr. Martinus Siereking, the brilliant young Dutch pianist, who created a veritable furore by his fiery and masterly performance of the Saint-Saens concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra last December in Boston. No greater enthusiasm was ever seen in Music Hall than was aroused at this concert, and a great treat is promised to the patrons of the Providence series. Mme. Jannschowsky, whose picture appears in this column, has won signal trriumphs as a dramatic soprano at the Imperial Opera in Vienna, and just now is attracting much attention as the probable successor to the unfortunate Frau Klafsky, whose recent untimely death caused such a shock to the patrons of German opera.

GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY,
Soprano with Boston Symphony Orchestra.

E SUNDAY RECORDER.
OCTOBER 11, 1896.

* * *

The flattering comments by practically the entire press of New York upon the closing concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its series in this city last season should cause more than usual interest in the announcement of this organization for the coming season.

Friday evening, Nov. 13, will be the opening concert, at the Metropolitan Opera House, of the eleventh season by this now-famous organization. and the forty-eighth performance in this city.

The remaining four concerts will be given on Thursday evening, as usual, on the following dates: Dec. 10, Jan. 21, Feb. 25 and March 25.

Of the thirty-seven cities visited by the orchestra, New York ranks fourth in the number of concerts given, Cambridge, Mass., taking the first place, with its 104 concerts given under the auspices of Harvard University, in its famous Memorial Hall.

The list of soloists includes Moriz Rosenthal, who will play the Chopin E minor Concerto at the first concert; Carl Halir, Mme. Teresa Carrene, Ben Davies and others.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven Symphony No. 4, the Schubert Symphony in C major No. 9, the Schumann C major Symphony No. 2, and the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4.

The list of overtures includes the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, the "Oberon" of Weber, the "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, and the "Coriolanus" of Beethoven.

Other selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, entr'acte from "Ingwelde," by Schilling, and the Symphonic Poem, "Wallenstein," by Smetana. One entire programme will be devoted to Wagner selections.

Conductor Paur has decided to divide each programme into two pars by a ten-minute intermission, an innovation which will undoubtedly prove acceptable.

* * *

The Sun.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1896.

NOTES OF MUSICAL EVENTS.

The appearances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in New York this season will mark the eleventh year of this organization's activity here, and the first concert this winter will be given at the Metropolitan Opera House on Nov. 13. The remainder of its usual five New York concerts will be given at the same place on Dec. 10, Jan. 21, Feb. 25, and March 25. As in the past they will take place on Thursday evenings. The orchestra played here first at Steinway Hall, where four seasons were given, then for three seasons at Chickering Hall. The following season it appeared at Carnegie Hall, and for the past two seasons the concerts have been given at the Metropolitan Opera House. New York ranks fourth in the number of concerts given in the various cities visited by the organization. Cambridge, with a record of 104 concerts, played under the auspices of Harvard University in Memorial Hall, ranks first in the number of performances given outside of Boston. Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven Symphony No. 4, the Schubert Symphony in C major No. 9, the Schumann C major Symphony No. 2, and theTschaikowsky Symphony No. 4. The list of overtures includes the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Carneval Romain" of Berlioz, the "Oberon" of Weber, the "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssonn, and the "Coriolanus" of Beethoven. Other selections are the entr'acte music from "Carmen" by Bizet and from "Ingwelde" by Schilling, and the symphonic poem "Wallenstein" by Smetana. One entire programme will be devoted to Wagner selections. The list of soloists includes Moritz Rosenthal, who will play the Chopin E minor Concerto; Carl Halir, Teresa Carreno, Ben Davies, and others. The programmes will be divided by an intermission of ten minutes.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will enter upon its sixteenth season this autumn. The orchestra will contain ninety players, and will again be under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur. The vocalists engaged for the coming season are Melba, Plancon and Campanari, and undoubtedly Eames will also be among the number. Among the pianists will be Rosenthal and Teresa Carreno. Joseffy, Sieveking and Aus der Ohe will also be heard. Halir, of Berlin, perhaps the greatest of German violinists, has been secured.

Bost. American
Sept 20

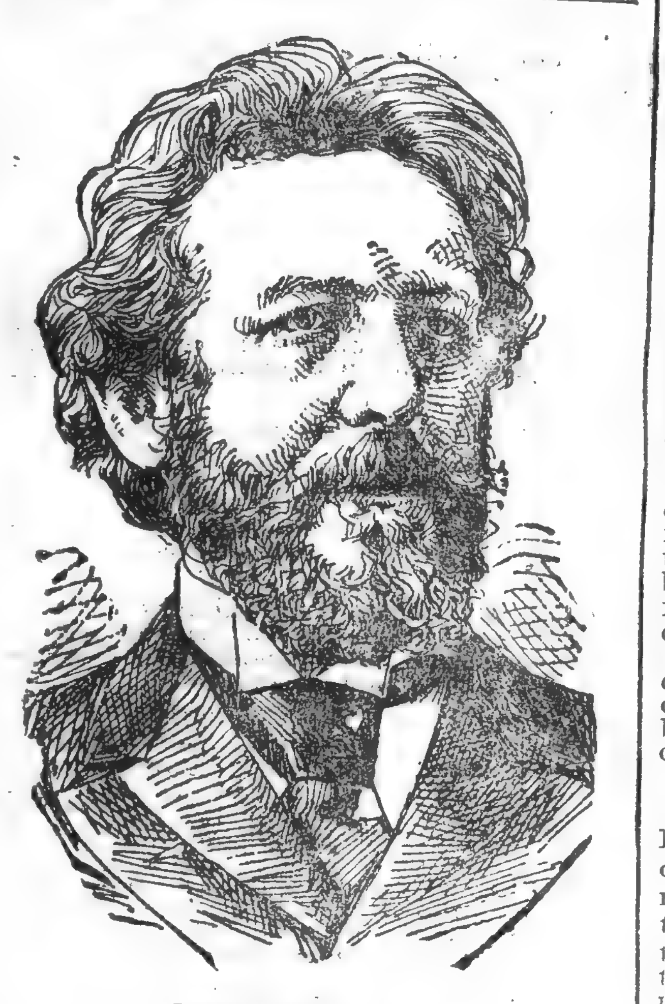
[27]

PROVIDENCE JOURNAL.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1896.

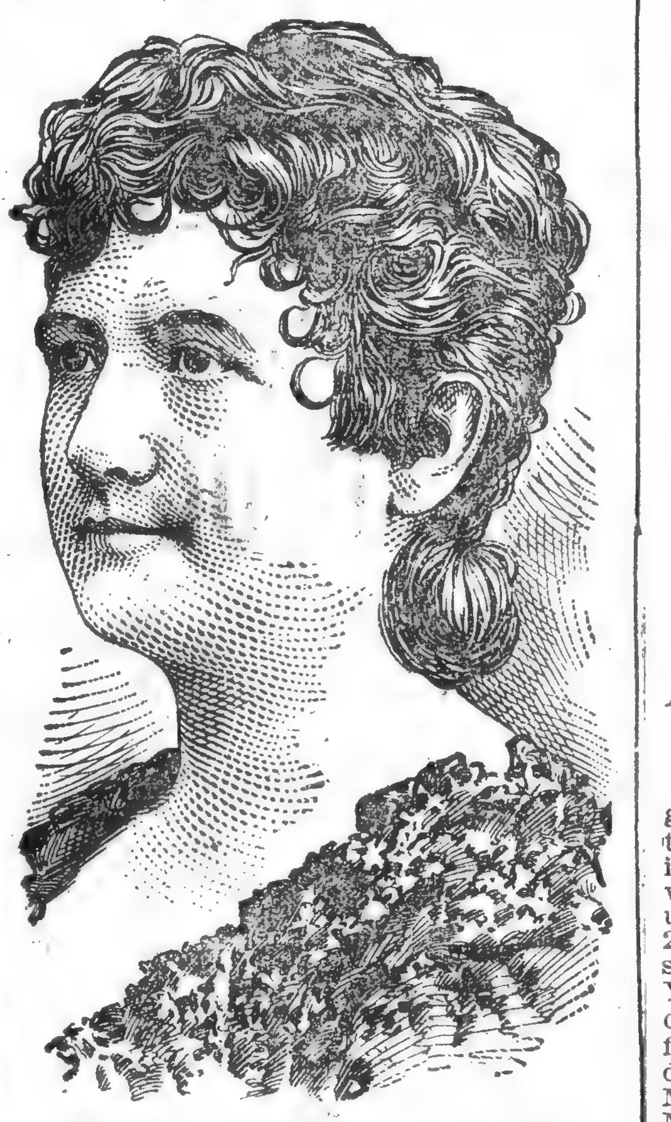
Symphony Concerts.

THE musical season in Providence practically begins with the announcement of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the coming year. This organization, now acknowledged all over the country to be the leading orchestra of America, enters upon its 16th season in Boston and its 15th season in Providence with the 52d performance in this city on Wednesday evening, Oct. 21.



HERR EMIL PAUR,
Conductor Boston Symphony Orchestra.

When, in referring to the closing concert of this orchestra in its New York series last season, the New York Sun characterized the Boston Symphony Orchestra as "the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country;" the New York Herald acknowledged that "It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening," and the New York Times characterized the performance as "As near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be," the very climax of musical criticism may fairly be said to have been reached.

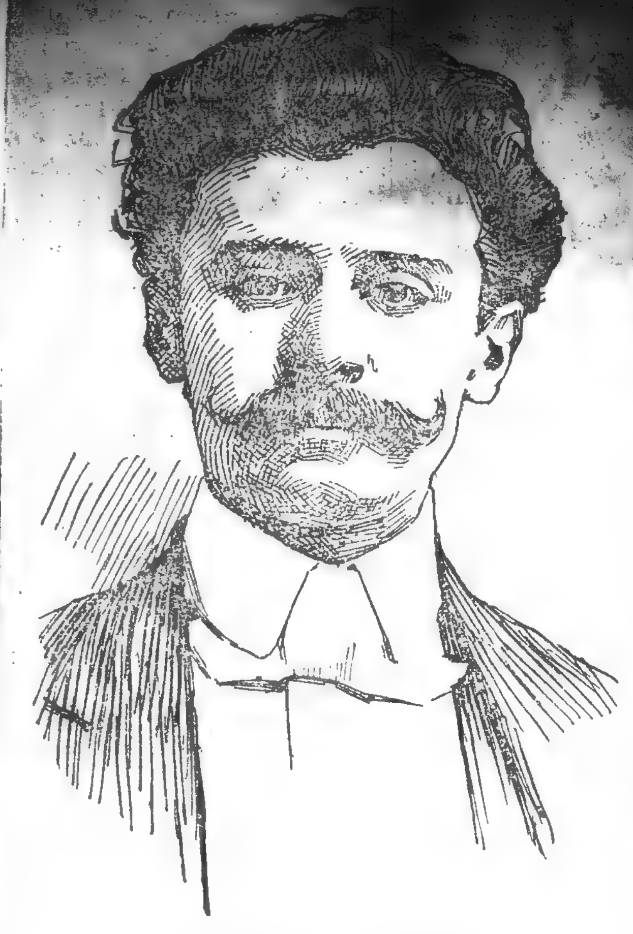


MME. TERESA CARRENO, PIANIST.

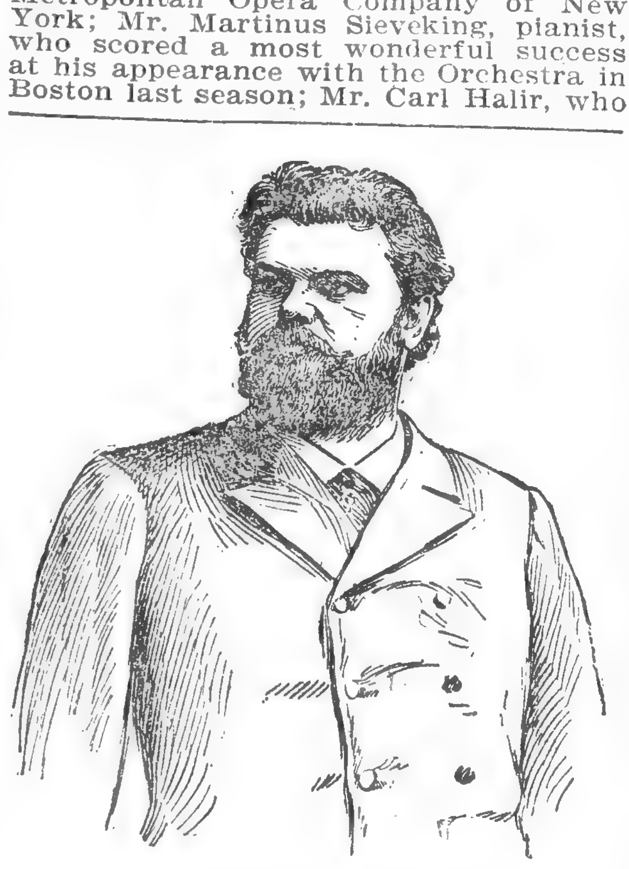
It is very gratifying to record that last season was the most successful known in Providence for several years, and a distinctive as well as flattering feature of these concerts is that one recognizes familiar faces in the same seats as in seasons past, with each year an increasing number of newcomers. The Providence musical public should at least appreciate the fact that precisely the same quality of performance is given in this city as in Boston, New York and other cities visited, and it should also be borne in mind that Providence ranks as third on the list of 37 cities visited, with a total of 51 performances.

The dates for the concerts, on Wednesday evenings as usual, are as follows: Oct. 21, Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, March 10, April 21. Among the prominent works to be performed during the coming season are the Beethoven Symphonies, Nos. 2 and 8, The Mozart Symphony in G minor, the Schumann Symphony, No. 4, and the Tschaikowsky Symphony, No. 4. The overtures include Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Goldmark's "Sakuntala," Rossi's "William Tell," Chabrier's "Gwendoline" and Weber's "Abu Hassan." Among other selections which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the programmes are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet; the Mendelssohn "Midsummer Night's Dream" music; Liszt's "Mephisto Waltz;" Weber's "Invitation to the Dance" and Goldmark's entr'acte to "Heinrichen am Heerd," which is the musical adaptation of Dickens's "Cricket on the Hearth."

The soloists include Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns after a seven years absence in Europe. Mme. Carreno will be pleasantly remembered for the brilliancy and warmth of her playing, and she is said to have wonderfully improved during her sojourn abroad, so that to-day she stands as one of the leading pianists of the world and it is predicted with the greatest confidence that she will create a furore in this country. Mme. Georgine Von Januschowsky, soprano, recently of the Imperial Opera in Vienna and last season one of the leading artists of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York; Mr. Martinus Sieveking, pianist, who scored a most wonderful success at his appearance with the Orchestra in Boston last season; Mr. Carl Halir, who ranks as one of the leading classical violinists in Berlin, and Mr. T. Adamowski of the Orchestra, who needs no introduction to the Providence public, are also among the soloists engaged.



SIEVEKING, PIANIST.



CARL HALIR, VIOLINIST.

Season tickets for the six concerts will be $5, and the sale will open at Infantry Hall on Monday, Oct. 12, at 9 o'clock. As has been the custom in past seasons, analytical programmes with descriptive notes of the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

Telegram

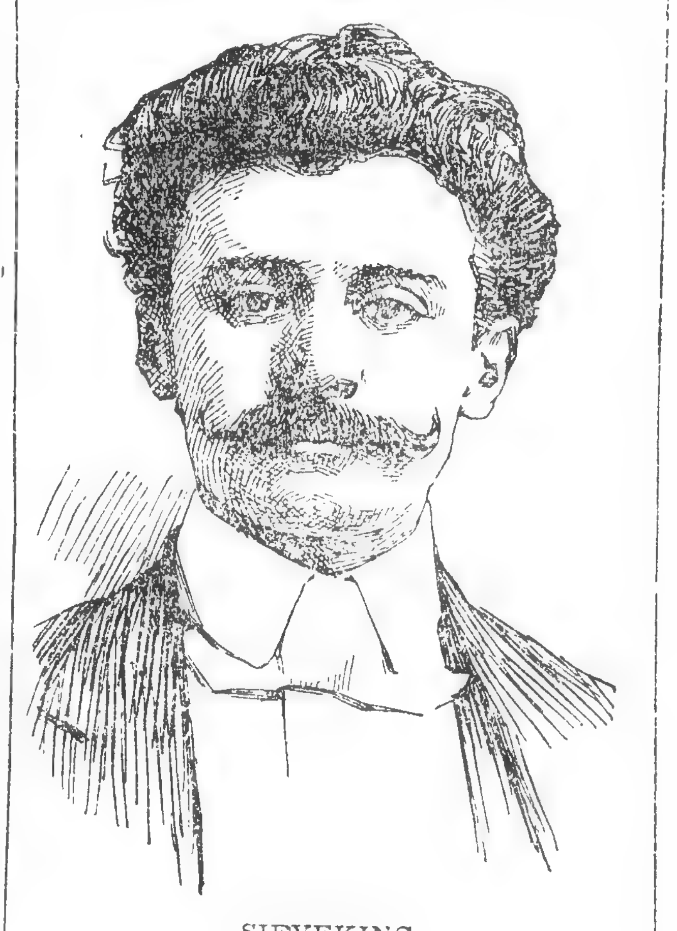
SUN OCTOBER 4, 1896.

MUSICAL DRIFT

Stray Items Concerning the Singer's World.

The Boston symphony orchestra enters upon its sixteenth season in Boston Oct. 16, and on the following Wednesday, Oct. 21, its fifteenth season in Providence opens with the fifty-second performance of this organization in this city. All the concerts will, as usual, be on Wednesday evenings, as follows: Oct. 21, Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, March 10 and April 21.

Among the prominent works to be performed during the coming season are the Beethoven symphonies Nos. 2 and 8, the Mozart symphony in G minor, the Schumann symphony No. 4, and the Tschaikowsky symphony No. 4. The overtures include Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Goldmark's "Sakuntala," Rossini's "William Tell," Chabrier's "Gwendoline," and Weber's "Abu Hassan." Among other selections which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the program are the entr'acte from "Carmen" by Bizet; the Mendelssohn "Midsummer Night's Dream," music; Liszt's "Mephisto Waltz"; Weber's "Invitation to the Dance"; and Goldmark's entr'acte to "Heinrichen an Heerd," which is the musical adaptation of Dicken's "Cricket on the Hearth."



SIEVEKING.
Pianist.

Among the soloists announced is Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns after seven years' absence in Europe. Mme. Carreno will be pleasantly remembered for the brilliancy and warmth of her playing, and she is said to have wonderfully improved during her sojourn abroad. Today she stands as one of the leading pianists of the world and it is predicted with the greatest confidence that she will create a furore in this country. Mme. Georgine Von Januschowsky, soprano, recently of the Imperial opera in Vienna, and last season one of the leading artists of the Metropolitan opera company of New York; Mr. Martinus Sieveking, pianist, who scored a most wonderful success at his appearance with the orchestra in Boston last season; Mr. Carl Halir, who ranks as one of the leading classical violinists in Berlin, and Mr. T. Adamowski of the orchestra, who needs no introduction to the Providence public, are also among the soloists engaged.

Season tickets for the six concerts will be $5, and the sale will open at Infantry hall Monday morning, Oct. 12, at 9 o'clock. As has been the custom in past seasons, analytical programs, with descriptive notes of the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The New-York Times

NEW-YORK, SUNDAY, OCT. 11, 1896.

NOTES OF THE MUSICAL SEASON.

Announcements of Coming Concerts—Boston Symphony Orchestra.

—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give its forty-eighth concert in this city at the Metropolitan Opera House Friday evening, Nov. 13. The remaining four concerts will be given on Thursday evenings, as usual, on the following dates: Dec. 10, Jan. 21, Feb. 25, and March 25. Of the thirty-seven cities visited by the orchestra, New-York ranks fourth in the number of concerts given, Cambridge, Mass., taking the first place, with its 104 concerts given under the auspices of Harvard University in Memorial Hall. The list of soloists includes Moritz Rosenthal, who will play the Chopin E minor concerto; Carl Halir, Teresa Carreno, Ben Davies, and others. Conductor Paur announces among the works to be proformed the Beethoven Symphony No. 4, the Schubert Symphony in C major, No. 9; the Schumann C major Symphony No. 2, and the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4. The list of overtures includes the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Carneval Romain" of Berlioz, the "Oberon" of Weber, the "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, and the "Coriolanus" of Beethoven. Other selections are the entr'acte from Carmen," by Bizet, entr'acte from "Ingwelde," by Schilling, and the symphonic poem, "Wallenstein," by Smetana. One entire programme will be devoted to Wagner selections. Conductor Paur has decided to divide each programme into two parts by a ten-minute intermission, an innovation which will undoubtedly prove acceptable.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, OCT. 11, 1896.

Symphony Concerts Begin This Week.

The 16th season of concerts given by the Boston symphony orchestra in this city will begin in Music hall this week, the first public rehearsal occurring Friday afternoon, Oct 16, to be followed, according to the established custom, by a repetition of the program Saturday evening. The magnificent organization, by its brilliant record of the past 15 years, has won the highest honors in the esteem of the musical world, and the plane of excellence established by the orchestra will be fully maintained this year.

The membership of Mr Paur's band will remain about the same as last year. Among the soloists who will appear are mentioned Melba, Pancon, Campanari, Teresa Carreno, Aus der Ohe, Joseffy, Rosenthal, Sieveking, Halir and artists from the ranks of the orchestra.

Tomorrow morning the few remaining seats and admission tickets to the rehearsal will be placed on sale.

The Telegram

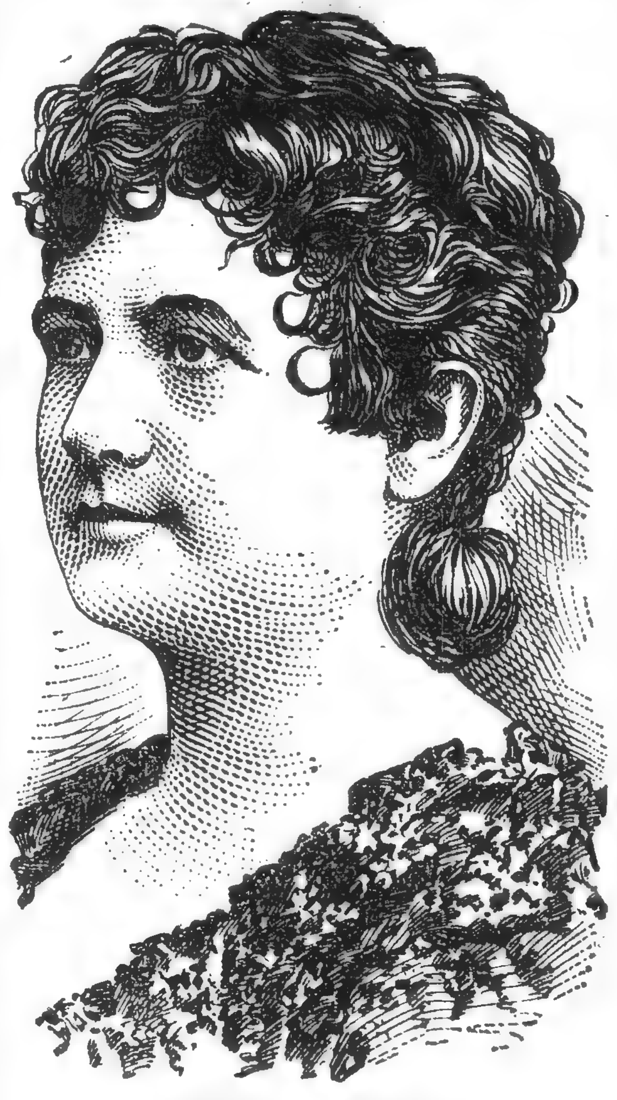
EVENING AND SUNDAY.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1896.

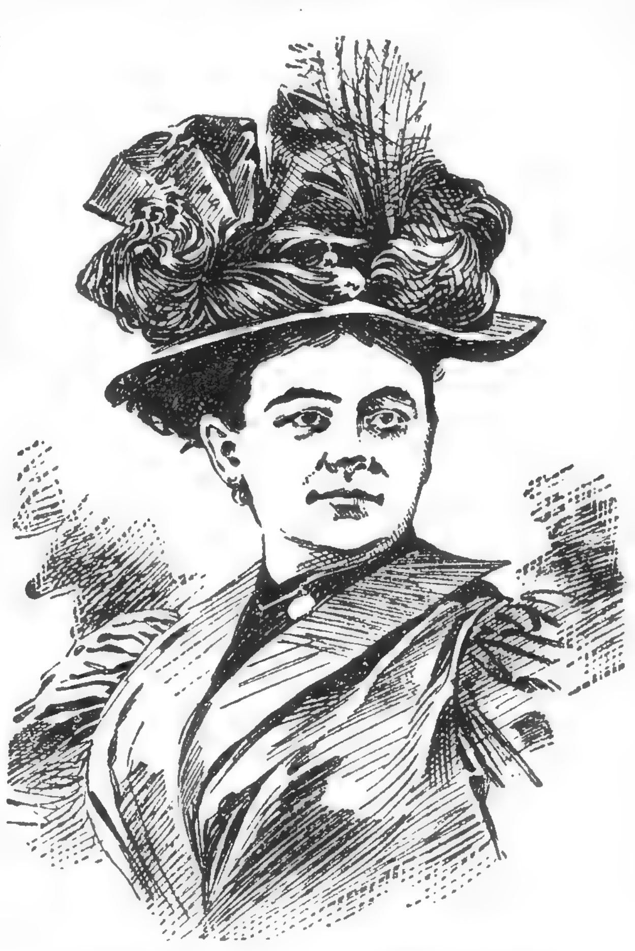
MUSICAL DRIFT

Stray Items Concerning the Singer's World.

People who go early to Infantry hall tomorrow morning will have the first chances at the seats which are to go on sale for the Boston Symphony orchestra concerts. In past years the ticket sales in connection with this orchestra's visit have been busy occassions, and great competition has been seen in the efforts of those anxious for good positions in the hall to secure the most advantageous places. To insure satisfaction and fair treatment no more than ten tickets will be sold to any one person. The rule will be strictly enforced.



TERESA CARRENO,
Pianist.



GEORGINE VON JANUSCHOWSKY,
Soprano.

The concerts of the orchestra this season will be six in number as usual. They will take place on Wednesday evenings during the different months, December omitted on account of the Christmas season. At these concerts some of the most famous artists in the world will be heard.

Such names as Carreno, Halir, Januschowsky, Sieveking and Adamowski suggest a richness of entertainment that strains the impatience to the last point. The orchestra, of course, needs no eulogizing. It stands without an equal in this or any other country. It is the pride of all Americans, and the support that is given it in this and other leading cities shows that the spirit of patriotism enters in the patronage conferred. A season of the orchestra's performances is an education in music of a most valuable and important character. All musicians attend them and none who are interested in musical affairs can afford to miss them. The conductor this year is Emile Paur, the distinguished gentleman who for a few seasons past has demonstrated the great wisdom of his selection for the eminent post. He has arranged a series of the most brilliant programs the orchestra ever offered in Providence.

Of the soloists Mme. Carreno comes back to this country after a long absence in Europe. That she will repeat her old successes can not be doubted. Mme. Januschowsky was last season one of the leading artists of the Metropolitan Opera company in New York. Mr. Sieveking has already won splendid laurels on account of his wonderful ability as a pianist. Mr. Halir is one of the most noted of violinists. Mr. Adamowski is a great favorite here, and a warm welcome will certainly be extended him on his appearance in a solo role.

The orchestra contains some new faces this year. It is stronger in membership than ever before. The price of course tickets will be $5. Programs giving a full description of the music to be played will be mailed in advance of each concert to the purchasers of season seats.

The [illegible] Press

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1896.

THE WORLD OF MUSIC.

Outlook for the Season—Orchestral and Operatic Notes.

As things look now we shall not lack for orchestral or band music this season. The Boston Symphony will, as usual, be the backbone of entertainment in this direction, and then there will be the Germania Orchestra's orchestral afternoons at Musical Fund Hall, orchestral concerts at Horticultural Hall, and, of course, the Academy of the Fine Arts Thursday afternoons. It is to be hoped that another season will see a permanent Philadelphia orchestra as the outgrowth of this unusual local orchestral development. All Summer the bands have been blaring away to delighted crowds all about the city, and, aside from the visiting bands that will come, a Saturday evening band concert, under the direction of Carl Mindt, will be a feature of the season in Odd Fellows' Hall. So with those steady features in the instrumental line and with nine weeks of opera all told, the musical season of '96-'97 is a very promising one.

The most interesting announcement concerning the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts this year is that Conductor Paur has decided to divide the programme into two parts by a ten minutes intermission. It has always been a mystery to many good folks, who do not like to bolt their music any more than they like to bolt their food, why Paur, and other leaders, for that matter, did not do this long ago. It is time the programme book had a conspicuous "INTERMISSION" marked in it, but the intermission never came. An orchestral programme should be treated after the fashion of a high class banquet, in which the service has its intervals that allow of appreciation. Too often the Boston Symphony concerts have suggested the quick lunch—that is, so far as the reading of the programme was concerned—and an indigestible quick lunch at that. The sixteenth season for the orchestra is opened this week in Boston. Of the thirty-seven cities visited by the orchestra Philadelphia ranks second in the number of concerts given, Cambridge, Mass., taking the first place with its 104 concerts given under the auspices of Harvard University in its beautiful Memorial Hall. The twelfth season in Philadelphia will begin on Tuesday evening, November 10, which will be the fifty-seventh performance in this city. The remaining four concerts will be given on Monday evenings as usual: December 7, January 18, February 22 and March 22.

Conductor Paur announces among other works to be performed at the Philadelphia concerts, the Beethoven Symphony No. 2, Mozart Symphony in G minor, Schubert Symphony No. 9 and the Mendelssohn Scotch Symphony No. 3. For overtures there are the "Carneval Romain" of Berliez; the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark; the "Manfred" and "Genoveva" of Schumann; the "Euryanthe" of Weber, and the "Coriolanus" of Beethoven. The novelties are the entr' acte from Bizet's "Carmen," the overture, "Abu Hassan" of Weber and the symphonic poem, "Wallenstein" of Smetana. The "Invitation to Dance" by Weber and the o Waltz" by Liszt will also be given. One concert devoted entirely to the works of Wagner will be a welcome feature, judging from the enormous success of a similar concert last year.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

Boston Symphony Orchestra

(90 Performers.)
Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth Season, 1896-97. Twelfth Season in Phila.

FIVE CONCERTS
TUESDAY EVENING, NOV. 10.
MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 7.
MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 18.
MONDAY EVENING, FEB. 22.
MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 22.
At 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:
Mme. MELBA
Mme. CARRENO
Mr. POL PLANCON
Mr. BEN DAVIES
Mr. CARL HALIR
(The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.)

Proscenium boxes seating eight, and the new boxes seating six and four, will be sold at $75, $63, and $42, respectively, for the series of five concerts.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7, $5, and $3.50, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut Street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Ass't Mgr. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

PUBLIC LEDGER

Philadelphia, Saturday, Oct. 10, 1896.

The management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces a series of five concerts to be given under the direction of Mr. Emil Paur, at the Academy of Music, beginning on Tuesday evening, November 10, and continuing monthly on Monday evenings thereafter. The prospectus is an especially attractive one. Symphonies by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Schubert and Mozart will be performed and overtures by Berlioz, Goldmark, Beethoven, Schumann and Weber, while the list of soloists includes the names of Melba, Pol Plancon, Carl Halir, the violinist; Ben Davies, the tenor, and that distinguished pianist, Mme. Teresa Carreno. An agreeable innovation will be the division of the programme into two parts, with a ten-minute intermission.

The Times

PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 11, 1896

The Boston Symphony.

The twelfth season of performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this city is announced to take place at the Academy of Music. The first concert will be given on Tuesday evening, November 10, and four others on the respective Monday evenings of December 7, January 18, February 22 and March 22. The solo artists who will appear in conjunction with the orchestra are Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, M. Pol Plancon, Mr. Ben Davis and Mr. Carl Halir, violin virtuoso from Berlin.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

(90 Performers.)
Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth Season, 1896-97. Twelfth Season in Phila.

FIVE CONCERTS
TUESDAY EVENING, NOV. 10.
MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 7.
MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 18.
MONDAY EVENING, FEB. 22.
MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 22.
At 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:
Mme. MELBA
Mme. CARRENO
Mr. POL PLANCON
Mr. BEN DAVIES
Mr. CARL HALIR
(The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.)

Proscenium boxes seating eight, and the new boxes seating six and four, will be sold at $75, $63 and $42, respectively, for the series of five concerts.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7, $5 and $3.50, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut Street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Ass't Mgr. C. A. ELLIS, Manager.

THE RECORD

Nos. 917 and 919 Chestnut Street.

Philadelphia, October 11, 1896.

The Boston Symphony Concert Season.

The twelfth Philadelphia season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open at the Academy of Music on the evening of Tuesday, November 10. It will, as usual, include five concerts, which will take place monthly, and, with the exception of the first, on Monday evenings. It is not the intention to repeat last season's experiment of giving a series of Saturday matinees. Herr Emil Paur retains the directorship, with Mr. Franz Kneisel as concert master. The programme promises to be more strictly classical and less experimental than last season. The symphonies to be played are by Beethoven, Mozart, Schubert and Mendelssohn, and the overtures by Berlioz, Goldmark, Weber and Schumann. The list of soloists includes Melba, Carl Halir, the famous violinist from Berlin; Pol Plancon, Mr. Ben Davies and Teresa Carreno, who has not been heard in Philadelphia for several years. Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, at $7, $5 and $3.50, will be on sale at Fischer's Music Store, No. 1221 Chestnut street, on Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to the purchasers of season tickets.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.
(90 Performers.)

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth Season, 1896-97. 12th Season in Phila.

FIVE CONCERTS.
TUESDAY EVENING, NOV. 10.
MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 7.
MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 18.
MONDAY EVENING, FEB. 22.
MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 22.
At 8 O'clock.

Solo Artists:
Mme. MELBA
Mme. CARRÉNO
Mr. POL PLANCON
Mr. BEN DAVIES
Mr. CARL HALIR
(The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.)

Proscenium boxes seating eight, and the new boxes seating six and four, will be sold at $75, $63 and $42 respectively, for the series of five concerts.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7, $5 and $3.50, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut street.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Ass't Mgr. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

Philadelphia Inquirer

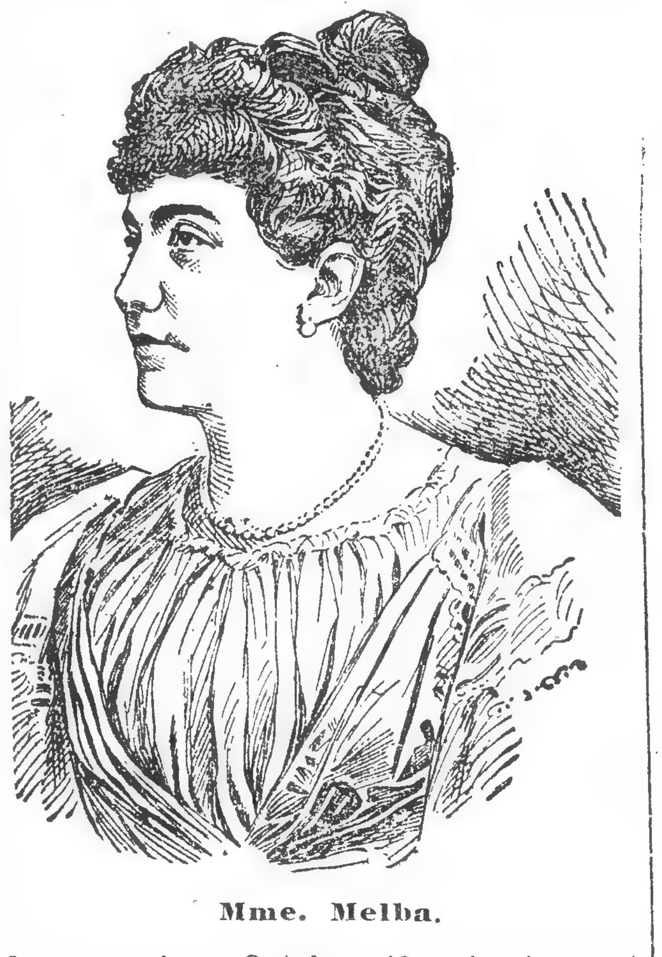
SUNDAY - - - - - OCTOBER 11, 1896

FORTY PAGES

THE INQUIRER IS A MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The twelfth Philadelphia season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open at the Academy of Music on the evening of Tuesday, November 10. It will, as usual, include five concerts, which will take place monthly, and, with the exception of the first, on Monday evenings. It is not the intention to repeat last season's experiment of giving a series of Saturday matinees. There has been no substantial change in the personnel of the orchestra since last season. Mr. Emil Paur retains the directorship, with Mr. Franz Kneisel as concert master, and the other members of the orchestra will for the most part appear in their old places. The programs promise to be more strictly classical and less experimental than last season. The symphonies to be played are by Beethoven, Mozart, Schubert and Mendelssohn, and the overtures by Berlioz, Goldmark, Weber and Schumann. The list of soloists is a brilliant one. It includes Melba, fresh from her London and Paris triumphs; Carl Halir, the famous violinist from Berlin; Pol Plancon, the great basso; Mr. Ben Davies, the tenor, and Teresa Carreno, the distinguished pianist, who has not been heard in Philadelphia for several years. Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, at $7, $5 and $3.50, will be on sale at 1221 Chestnut street, on Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, program books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to the purchasers of season tickets.



Mme. Melba.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

(90 Performers.)
Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth Season, 1896-97. Twelfth Season in Philadelphia.

FIVE CONCERTS.
TUESDAY EVENING, NOV. 10.
MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 7.
MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 18.
MONDAY EVENING, FEB. 22.
MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 22.
At 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:
Mme. MELBA
Mme. CARRENO
Mr. POL PLANCON
Mr. BEN DAVIES
Mr. CARL HALIR
(The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.)

Proscenium boxes seating eight, and the new boxes seating six and four, will be sold at $75, $63 and $42, respectively, for the series of five concerts.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7, $5 and $3.50, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, October 19, at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut street.

Program books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Ass't Mgr. C. A. ELLIS, Mgr.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH
704 CHESTNUT Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1896.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Emil Paur, will give its first season of five concerts at the Academy of Music, beginning on Tuesday, November 10. The soloists announced are Melba, Carl Halu, the latest violinist; M. Pol Plancon, Mr. Ben Davies, the tenor; and Mme. Terisa Careno, the eminent pianiste.

Mme. Carreno, the distinguished pianiste, will appear here with the Boston Symphony Orchestra this winter.

The North American
Daily Advertiser and United States Gazette

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1896.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

(90 Performers.)
Mr. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
Sixteenth Season, 1896-97. Twelfth Season in Phila

FIVE CONCERTS.
TUESDAY EVENING, NOV. 10.
MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 7.
MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 18.
MONDAY EVENING, FEB. 22.
MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 22.
at 8 o'clock.

Solo Artists:
Mme. MELBRA
Mme. CARRENO
Mr. POL. PLANCON
Mr. BEN DAVIES
Mr. CARL HALIR
(The famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.)

Proscenium boxes, seating eight, and the new boxes, seating six and four. will be sold at $75, $63 and $42. respectively, for the series of five concerts.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7, $5, and $3.50, according to location.

The sale of tickets will open Monday morning, Oct. 19, at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut St.

Programme books, with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

F. R. COMEE, Ass't Mgr. C. A ELLIS, Mgr.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Melba and Plancon to Be Among This Season's Soloists.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra begins its 12th season in Baltimore on Wednesday evening, November 11, at Music Hall, which will be its 39th performance in this city. The remaining four concerts will be on Wednesday evenings, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24. Of the 37 cities visited by the orchestra, Baltimore ranks seventh in the number of concerts given, Cambridge (Mass.) taking the first place, with its 104 concerts given under the auspices of the Harvard University in the famous Memorial Hall.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven symphony No. 2, the Schubert C major symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky symphony No. 4 and the Schumann C major symphony. The overtures are the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann. Other selections of interest are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance," and the new symphonic poem by Mr. Richard Burmeister of this city.

The list of soloists includes Mme. Melba, Mr. Carl Halir, a famous violinist of Berlin; Mr. Pol Plancon and Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season, and Mme. Teresa Carreno, who reappears in this country after an absence of some years in Europe. Mme. Carreno has met with marked successes in the European capitals, and it is now asserted that she is one of the leading artists in the world.

Conductor Paur has decided to divide each programme into two parts by a 10-minute intermission, an innovation which will probably prove acceptable to the majority of the patrons. The sale of season tickets will open Monday morning, October 19.

Symphony Concerts.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give five concerts, as usual, at Music Hall the coming season. The first concert will be on Wednesday evening, November 11, and the remaining four on December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed this season the Beethoven Symphony No. 2, the Schubert C Major Symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4, and the Schumann C Major Symphony. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlisz, "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssonn, the "Freischutz" of Weber, and the "Genoveva" of Schumann. Other selections of interest are the entre-acte from "Carmen," by Bizet; the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance," and a new symphonic poem by Mr. Richard Burmeister, of this city.

The list of soloists includes Mme. Melba, the simple announcement of whose name is sufficient; Mr. Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Mr. Pol Plancon, basso, from the Metropolitan Opera Company, and, beyond a doubt, one of the most finished artists on the musical stage today; and Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season. Especial importance is attached to the announcement of the reappearance in this country, after an absence of seven years in Europe, of Mme. Teresa Carreno, whose playing in its extreme brilliancy and warmth makes her today one of the leading artists of the world.

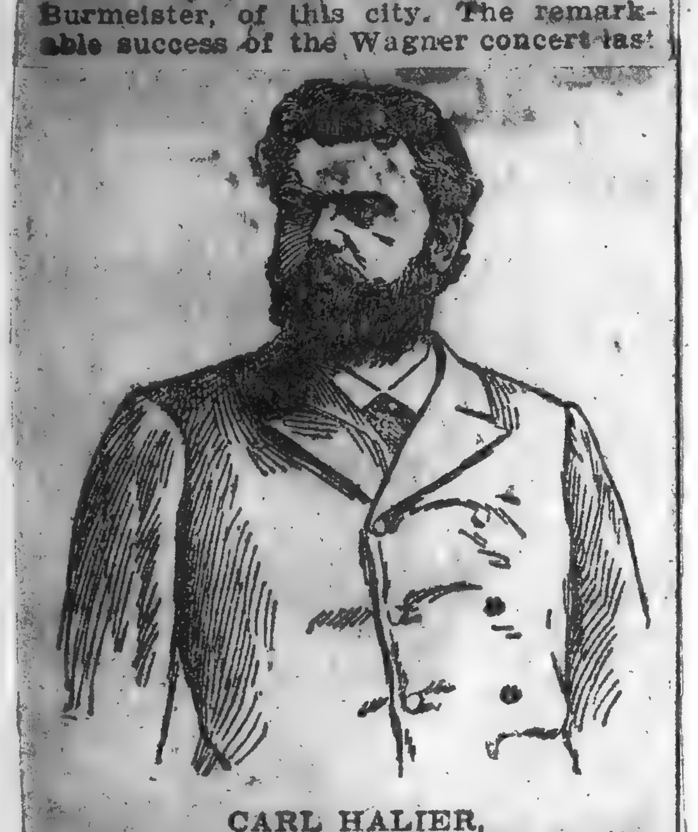
Conductor Paur has decided to divide each program into two parts by a ten-minute intermission.

The sale of season tickets opens at Albert's, 13 North Charles street, Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, program books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra commences this month in Boston its 16th season, with the remarkable record of 1,444 concerts in the 15 years of its existence. Its 12th season in Baltimore will open on Wednesday evening, November 11, at the Music Hall, which will be its 39th performance in this city. The remaining four concerts will be given on Wednesday evenings, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24.

Of the 27 cities visited by the orchestra Baltimore ranks seventh in the number of concerts given, Cambridge, Mass, taking the first place with its 104 concerts given under the auspices of Harvard University in its beautiful Memorial Hall.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed this season the Beethoven Symphony No. 2, the Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4, and the Schumann C major Symphony. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann. Other selections of interest are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet; the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance" and a new symphonic poem by Prof. Richard Burmeister, of this city. The remarkable success of the Wagner concert last season justifies the announcement of a repetition of this most popular form of a programme this year.



CARL HALIER,
The Celebrated Violin Virtuoso.

A list of soloists includes Mme. Melba the simple announcement of whose name is sufficient; Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Pol Plancon, basso, from the Metropolitan Opera Company, and, beyond a doubt, one of the most finished artists on the musical stage today; and Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season.

Especial importance is attached to the announcement of the reappearance in this city, after a seven-year absence in Europe, of Mme. Teresa Carreno. Mme. Carreno's playing will be readily recalled for its extreme brilliancy and warmth, and her recent marked successes in the European capitals is ample proof of the truth of the assertion that her undoubted talents have matured to such an extent that today she is one of the leading artists of the world.

Conductor Paur has decided to divide each programme into two parts by a 10-minute intermission, an innovation which will undoubtedly prove acceptable to the patrons.

The sale of season tickets opens at Albert's, 13 North Charles street, Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, programme books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, OCT. 17, 1896.

THE SANDER'S THEATRE SYMPHONIES.

Since prices and premiums have run so high for the Music Hall symphony concerts, wise and economical Bostonions have a way of getting course tickets for the ten symphony concerts in Sander's Theatre, Cambridge. The first of these for the present season will be given Thursday evening, October 29, and the others occur on the following Thursday evenings, November 19, December 17 and 31, January 14, February 4, March 4 and 18 and April 8 and 29.

These season tickets, for ten lectures, are but $7 50, and the sale opens next Saturday morning at the University book store, Cambridge.

Mr. Charles A. Ellis has gone to Europe, sailing from New York Wednesday. Mr. Ellis makes but a short trip, returning with Mme Melba.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, OCT. 18, 1896.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

First Symphony Concert of the Season.

Another season of Symphony concerts has begun, and this, the 14th year of the organization's prosperous career, promises to be as brilliantly successful as any that have passed. To expect better results than have been attained during the last few years would be almost unreasonable, for the organization is now on a plane of artistic excellence beyond the approach of other orchestras in America, if not of those in all other countries.

Boston may well be proud of its Symphony band, for so long as the present standard is maintained no other city can dispute its claim to consideration as the musical center of the country. It is gratifying that Bostonians are willing to show their appreciation by giving such financial support as will justify the management of the orchestra in continuing the liberal policy which has resulted in bringing together the foremost musicians of the day. The receipts this year may not quite equal those of last year, but they will be sufficient to defray the enormous expenses and leave a satisfactory margin of profit. Last year every seat in Music hall was sold for the season at auction weeks before the first concert. This year a few seats for single concerts remain unsold, but they will undoubtedly all be bought by people who were unable to purchase season tickets.

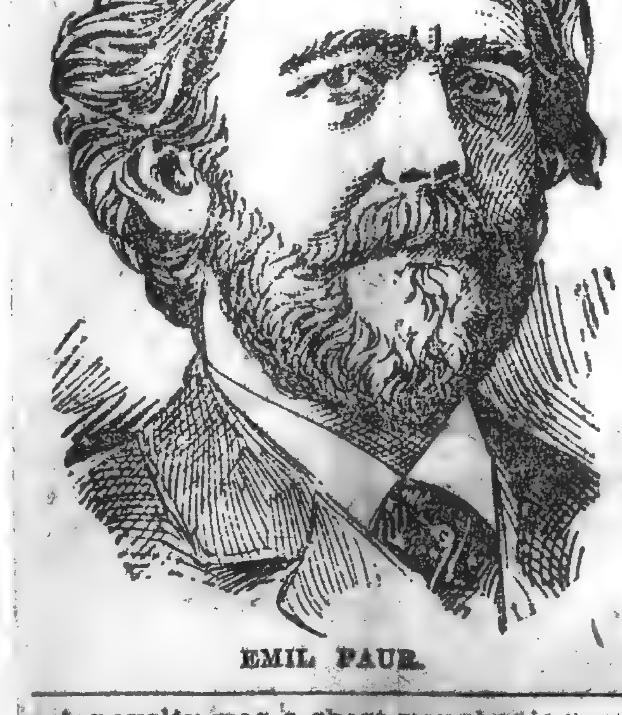
There were certainly very few vacant seats in the hall Friday afternoon or last evening, and on both occasions all the standing room was taken. To a very large extent the audience was composed of the same people who have attended these concerts for several years. Symphonies are, perhaps, an acquired taste, but when once acquired, the fondness is lasting, and is given preference over all other forms of entertainment.

Very few changes have been made in the personnel of the orchestra. Mr Emil Paur remains as conductor, much to the ratification of the men under his control and the patrons of the concerts. During the three years that he has been in charge of the orchestra he has not only maintained its former standard, but has strengthened it materially in certain departments. The honesty of the man, his thoroughness as a musician and his earnestness of purpose have won for him the respect and good will of everyone.

The program of the first concert was thoroughly enjoyable and sufficiently varied to gratify the tastes of all. It was as follows:

Overture to Benvenuto Cellini, op 23..Berlioz
L'Enterrement d'Ophelie..Bourgault Ducoudray
(First time in Boston.)
Suite in D major, op 49 ....Saint-Saens
Symphony No. 8, in F major, op 93 ..Beethoven
Overture to Euryanthe ....Weber

The "Benvenuto Cellini" overture is not generally considered as entitled to rang among Berlioz's ablest works, but it is nevertheless a brilliant and characteristic composition, rich in varied tone color and contrasted orchestral effects. It was admirably played under Mr Paur's direction with fine expression and splendid finish. That the audience thoroughly enjoyed the performance was shown by the hearty outburst of applause at its conclusion.



EMIL PAUR.

A novelty was a short symphonic poem by Louis-Albert Bourgalt-Ducoudray entitled "The Burial of Ophelia." It is a charmingly written work, expressive of poetic and melancholy sentiment rather than suggestive of the incidents attending the burial of Shakespeare's heroine. The movement begins pianissimo, gradually swells to the full force of the orchestra and ends as softly as it began. The scoring is very elaborate but always in good taste. A more sympathetic interpretation could not be imagined than was given by the orchestra last evening.

Saint-Saens' suite for orchestra in D major was played for the first time here and was heard with evident satisfaction by the audience. There are five short movements. The prelude consists of a series of complicated and cleverly devised canonical imitations on a simple theme. The stately sarabande is not remarkable for originality of either theme or treatment. The gavotte is rather the most enjoyable feature of the composition. It is dainty and graceful and deliciously melodious. The orchestra's new flute soloist, Mons Jacquet, was heard to advantage in this movement.

The romance is elaborately developed and agreeable tuneful. The final is a lively and showy rondo.

The warmest praise must be given Mr Paur for his reading of Beethoven's eighth symphony. It was an earnest, scholarly and faithful interpretation and gave further evidence of his intelligent appreciation of this composer's works. The four movements were played in irreproachable style and won enthusiastic expressions of approval from the audience. Weber's magnificent overture to "Euryanthe," superbly given, was the concluding number of an exceedingly enjoyable program.

Mr Martinus Sieveking, pianist, will be the soloist at this week's concert, when the program will be as follows: Overture, "Gwendoline," Chabrier; concerto for pianoforte, No. 1, in B flat minor, Tschaikowsky; rhapsody, No. 3, Dvorak; symphony in C major ("Jupiter"), Mozart.

Established 1813.

The Official Paper of the State.

The Official Paper of the City.

MONDAY MORNING, OCT. 19, 1896.

First Symphony Concert of the Season is a Success.

"Again to the battle, Achaians!" and judging by the manner in which our musical Achaians have begun their 16th campaign, there need be little fear of the result. It is quite unnecessary to begin with the customary apologies and allowances—"the long, summer vacation," "the few rehearsals preceding a first concert," etc., etc., do not seem to have caused any marked blemishes in the performance of Saturday night. An indecisive attack once or twice, and a little haziness in the minuet of the symphony was the sum of all defects; our orchestra begins the season almost at its best standard.

The opening programme was chosen with more than usual tact and discretion, containing nothing that was too difficult for the musicians to conquer of for the average auditor to comprehend. There were some novelties, too, which seem to augur that the list will not revolve wholly around the well-remembered classics, but will allow the Bostonian to hear what is being done in the modern musical world. At the concert of Saturday, the new French school had its innings, and very graceful and interesting its specimens were.

After a hearty burst of applause, which seemed like a public handshake with a returned acquaintance, Mr. Paur and his men plunged into Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini" overture, which was a very fitting introduction to the season and the concert, to the season because of its sturdy power and broad orchestration, and to the concert because it led gracefully into the more modern French selections which were to follow. It is one of the best examples of Berlioz's skill in working up a climax, and is impressive from the first mysterious pizzicato effects upon the contrabasses (the best of instruments for a pizzicato) to the powerful outbursts of brasses, drums, etc. in the coda. At the first performance in Paris, while the opera made an entire fiasco, the overture made an overwhelming success, and it has always been a success with the public, although not with the critics. Hanslick says that the first sixteen measures show a melodic poverty and harmonic awkwardness that suggest the beginnings of a not very talented pupil, and adds that the rest of the work is made up alternately of affected simplicity and noisy triviality, but Hanslick has ever denied the right of composers to wander into new paths, only excepting from his interdict his well-beloved Brahms. The work has kept its place upon the standard repertoire in spite of such sweeping condemnation, and was evidently appreciated at this concert. The "Burial of Ophelia" by Louis Albert Bourgault-Ducoudray was by no means as lengthy as its composer's name would indicate. It made no pretence to Shakespearian fidelity; there is no storming Laertes, no combative Hamlet, (unless a single military clash indicate the combat at the grave) no clownish and callous grave-digger, in any part of this music, which might as well serve to bury Tennyson's Elaine, or any lesser person, as the distraught Ophelia. It is elegiac after the suave manner of Ernst or Vieuxtemps, and graceful and attractive even in the midst of its sorrow; if it suggests tears it implies lace handkerchiefs as well. The muted violins present a very attractive theme at the outset, and this was played charmingly. Every detail of shading was well given, and the pretty picture could not fail of winning popular success. It was as well to hear such a work once. If it does not present the earnest treatment that a Tschaikowsky might have given it, at least it is the personification of Gallic grace and delicacy.

Of considerably higher, yet not of highest order, was St. Saens Suite in D major, Op. 49, which followed. It had the advantage of presenting considerable flute work, and therefore enabled the public to judge at once of the new flutists, M. Jacquet and Mr. Brooke, whose tone and blowing seem-slowest and stateliest of triple rhythm on in the octave on a carillon-like theme, a good exhibition of St. Saens contrapuntal skill, in which he stands somewhat above his French contemporaries. This movement was followed by a Sarabande, the slowest and statelist of triple rhymth dances, which the old composers used to reserve for the central movement of their suites. This old Spanish dance is probably of Moorish origin, and one of the straws that show the wind which blew the instrumental forms from the Orient into Europe. The movement was not particularly effective in this Suite, although graceful and fairly contrapuntal. It was followed by a Gavotte that was chiefly remarkable for its Musette Trio. In the old times it was often customary to perform the first movement of any minuet-form upon the strings or with full orchestra, the contrasted movement which followed upon the wood wind; as the clarinette was not employed by the old composers it was the custom to give this part with two oboes and bassoon, or with flute, oboe and bassoon, almost always in three-part harmony, whence this part of the old compositions came to be known as the "trio," a name which it has ever since retained, although no longer rigidly in three parts. The Trio of this Gavotte was in the old-fashioned form, although it distributed its three parts somewhat oddly, allowing the violins to carry on the musette-like drone, and giving the harmonies to two flutes with this quaint organ-point. The Romance which constituted the fourth movement was the best part of the Suite. It seemed especially modern after the rococo style of the Gavotte, but it gained, possibly, by the contrast.

The finale was dashing and jovial, reminding of the rollicking finales (gigues) that the 18th century composers used to give to their suites, and which led Haydn and Mozart to end their symphonies with similar pranks, a proceeding which was not wholly done away with until Beethoven wrote the finale to his "Heroic" symphony.

This general ending was a good transition to further joviality in the shape of Beethoven's eighth symphony, the one which, more than any of the nine, deserves the title of "Humorous." It is worthy of observation that whenever Beethoven had two works on hand at the same time they were sure to be in opposite moods. He wrote the fifth and sixth symphonies together, the one most earnest and powerful, the other full of playfulness and mischief; and while he was composing this humorous 8th symphony he was working upon portions of the romantic seventh symphony. [illegible] to the [illegible] sometimes burst forth in h[illegible] translated themselves into m[illegible] he was in such unbuttoned m[illegible] he was sure to have a good frolic with [illegible] favorite bassoons, and some of the most characteristic bassoon comedy effects are to be found in this symphony. Both in the first and last movements the bassoons did excellent work and especially striking was the little octavo passage in the coda of the finale where bassoons and kettledrums carry on a solo. Not less joking is the sudden leap from flutes to contrabasses (from garret to cellar) in this same finale, which was admirably carried out. The responses between violins and basses in the slow movement, the abrupt and most conventional cadence of this movement, the startling stroke of the entire orchestra which cuts short the prattle of the chief theme of the last movement, the capricious retardings which cause the subordinate theme of the first movement to become so coquettish, all these points were well caught up by the conductor and perfectly rendered by the orchestra, and all of them showed Beethoven in his fullest flow of animal spirits, a man who was never morbid, never unhealthily sentimental.

The eighth is the shortest and least ambitious of Beethoven's symphonies, but it is the most spontaneous of the nine, and very difficult to interpret perfectly because of these bizarrerries and pranks. That so capricious a work should have received so good a performance at the first concert of the season causes one to feel sure that the technique of the orchestra is still at its highest point. If we could only send our orchestra to Europe for a season, the Germans and French would be amazed at finding a model for their concerts in America, for many of the vaunted trans-Atlantic orchestras are not peers of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Weber's "Euryanthe" overture ended the concert. It was sufficiently dramatic, although one could recall more poetic readings. Every portion of the work was as clear as crystal, and the canonic work was perfectly balanced.

Altogether, then, a programme of just the right proportions both in subject matter and quantity, excellently played, sustaining the interest to the very last note, whereby the 16th season of Boston's greatest musical organization is most successfully launched.

Louis C. Elson.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

SYMPHONY NIGHT.

Brilliant Inaugural of the Sixteenth Season in Music Hall.

The musical season in Boston may now be said to be fairly inaugurated, for last evening in Music Hall the Symphony Orchestra began its sixteenth series of concerts. While the auditorium was not densely packed, as on some occasions, all the seats were occupied, and there was quite a fringe of "standees" on both sides of the hall.

All the familiar devotees of the concerts were present, and they gave Mr. Paur a cordial greeting as he stepped forward and took his place at the leader's music rack, which was heavily festooned with white and yellow chrysanthemums.

The arrangement of the musicians is the same as in seasons past, ever since the advent of Mr. Paur, who quickly learned the most advantageous positions for his forces, and has kept them there.

The programme was as follows: Berlioz, overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," op. 23; Bourgault - Deccudray, "L'enterrement d'Ophelie," first time in Boston; Saint-Saens, suite in D major, op. 49, first time; Beethoven, Symphony No. 8, in F major, op. 93; Weber, overture to "Euryanthe."

This programme, while not especially long, embraced five different numbers, two of which were heard here for the first time. There was a pleasing variety, and although one or two may have been a trifle wearisome, there was still sufficient novelty to interest the audience. Berlioz's overture to "Benvenuto Cellini" opened the programme, and gave Mr. Paur an opportunity of demonstrating that he had not lost control of his men during his summer absence. In fact, his leading displayed, if anything, greater confidence and certainty, and the orchestra responded to his slightest motion with military precision.

"L'enterrement d'Ophelie" was played for the first time here. It is an exquisite composition and it was the first time also that any work of Bourgault Ducoudray was ever played by the orchestra. It is written on a single theme of great beauty and developed in a masterly manner that harmonizes with the subject. Mr. Paur's interpretation of it was exceedingly artistic and found with the audience a hearty appreciation.

Saint-Saens's suite in D major was another new number. It was composed many years ago, but for some reason has never before been given in Boston, although after last evening's hearing it will probably be frequently repeated. It is a delightful work replete with musical ideas and skilful development; the fine movements while being attractive in themselves are further enhanced by some marked contrasts. The gavotte and the romance found the highest favor.

Beethoven's familiar Eighth Symphony and Weber's overture to "Euryanthe" completed the programme. For this week's rehearsal and concert the programme will be:

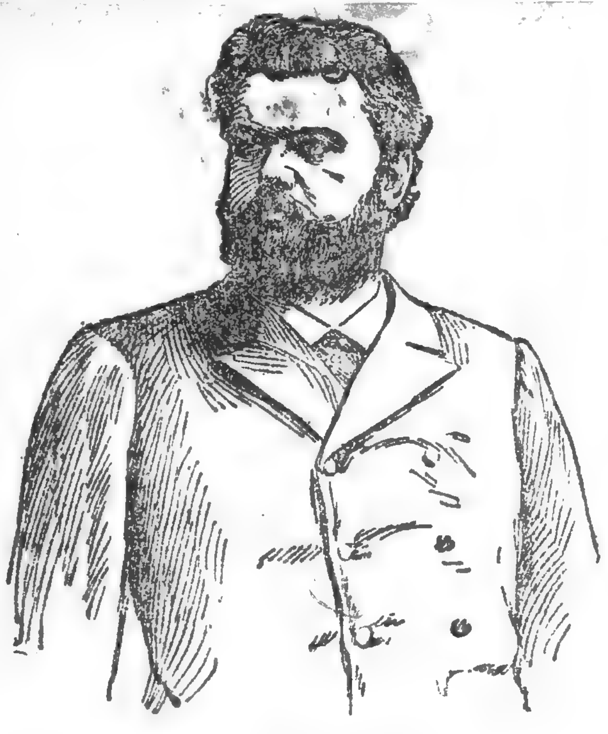
Chabrier, overture, "Gwendoline" first time; Tschaikowsky, concerto for pianoforte No. 1, in B flat minor; Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3 (first time); Mozart, Symphony in C major, "Jupiter"; soloist, Martinus Sieveking.

The Symphony concerts have begun, and Boston's society and musical loving people turned out to welcome the artists who appeared at the opening of the sixteenth annual season in Music Hall last evening. The programme was varied and the numbers well received. Emil Paur led the orchestra, as usual.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra commences this month in Boston its 16th season, with the remarkable record of 1,414 concerts in the 15 years of its existence. Its 12th season in Baltimore will open on Wednesday evening, November 11, at the Music Hall, which will be its 39th performance in this city. The remaining four concerts will be given on Wednesday evenings, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24.

Of the 37 cities visited by the orchestra Baltimore ranks seventh in the number of concerts given, Cambridge, Mass, taking the first place with its 104 concerts, given under the auspices of Harvard University in its beautiful Memorial Hall.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed this season the Beethoven Symphony No. 2, the Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4, and the Schumann C major Symphony. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann. Other selections of interest are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet; the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance" and a new symphonic poem by Prof. Richard Burmeister, of this city. The remarkable success of the Wagner concert last season justifies the announcement of a repetition of this most popular form of a programme this year.



CARL HALIER,
The Celebrated Violin Virtuoso.

A list of soloists includes Mme. Melba the simple announcement of whose name is sufficient; Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Pol Plancon, basso, from the Metropolitan Opera Company, and, beyond a doubt, one of the most finished artists on the musical stage today; and Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season.

Especial importance is attached to the announcement of the reappearance in this city, after a seven-year absence in Europe, of Mme. Teresa Carreno. Mme. Carreno's playing will be readily recalled for its extreme brilliancy and warmth, and her recent marked successes in the European capitals is ample proof of the truth of the assertion that her undoubted talents have matured to such an extent that today she is one of the leading artists of the world.

Conductor Paur has decided to divide each programme into two parts by a 10-minute intermission, an innovation which will undoubtedly prove acceptable to the patrons.

The sale of season tickets opens at Albert's, 13 North Charles street, Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, programme books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

- - -

The Beacon.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, OCT. 17, 1896.

THE SANDER'S THEATRE SYMPHONIES.

Since prices and premiums have run so high for the Music Hall symphony concerts, wise and economical Bostonions have a way of getting course tickets for the ten symphony concerts in Sander's Theatre, Cambridge. The first of these for the present season will be given Thursday evening, October 29, and the others occur on the following Thursday evenings, November 19, December 17 and 31, January 14, February 4, March 4 and 18 and April 8 and 29.

These season tickets, for ten lectures, are but $7 50, and the sale opens next Saturday morning at the University book store, Cambridge.

Mr. Charles A. Ellis has gone to Europe, sailing from New York Wednesday. Mr. Ellis makes but a short trip, returning with Mme Melba.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, OCT. 18, 1896.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

First Symphony Concert of the Season.

Another season of Symphony concerts has begun, and this, the 14th year of the organization's prosperous career, promises to be as brilliantly successful as any that have passed. To expect better results than have been attained during the last few years would be almost unreasonable, for the organization is now on a plane of artistic excellence beyond the approach of other orchestras in America, if not of those in all other countries.

Boston may well be proud of its Symphony band, for so long as the present standard is maintained no other city can dispute its claim to consideration as the musical center of the country. It is gratifying that Bostonians are willing to show their appreciation by giving such financial support as will justify the management of the orchestra in continuing the liberal policy which has resulted in bringing together the foremost musicians of the day. The receipts this year may not quite equal those of last year, but they will be sufficient to defray the enormous expenses and leave a satisfactory margin of profit. Last year every seat in Music hall was sold for the season at auction weeks before the first concert. This year a few seats for single concerts remain unsold, but they will undoubtedly all be bought by people who were unable to purchase season tickets.

There were certainly very few vacant seats in the hall Friday afternoon or last evening, and on both occasions all the standing room was taken. To a very large extent the audience was composed of the same people who have attended these concerts for several years. Symphonies are, perhaps, an acquired taste, but when once acquired, the fondness is lasting, and is given preference over all other forms of entertainment.

Very few changes have been made in the personnel of the orchestra. Mr Emil Paur remains as conductor, much to the ratification of the men under his control and the patrons of the concerts. During the three years that he has been in charge of the orchestra he has not only maintained its former standard, but has strengthened it materially in certain departments. The honesty of the man, his thoroughness as a musician and his earnestness of purpose have won for him the respect and good will of everyone.

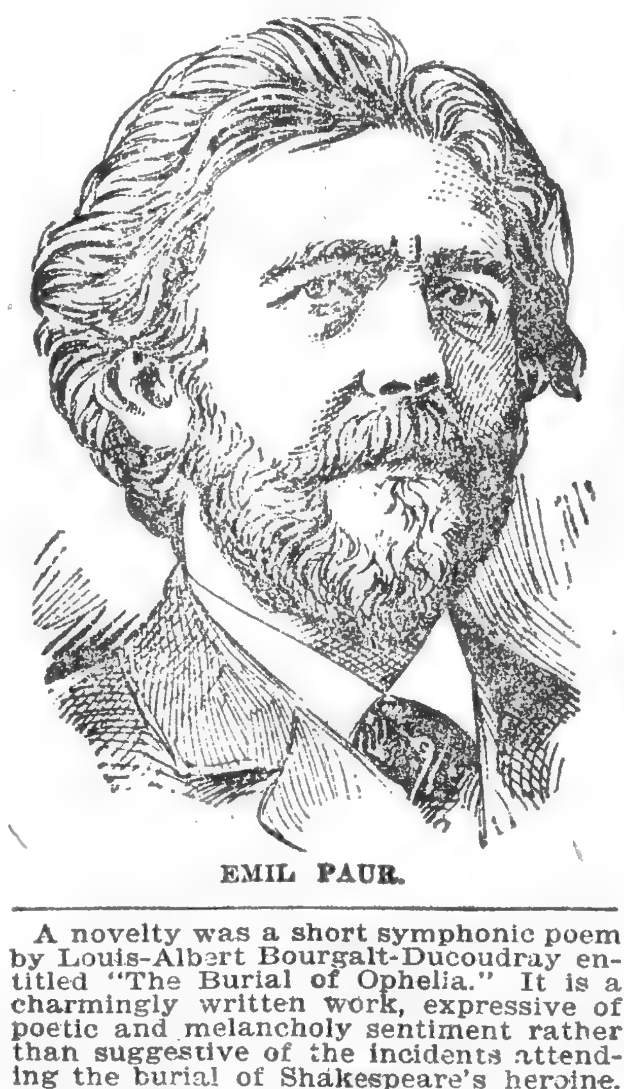
The program of the first concert was thoroughly enjoyable and sufficiently varied to gratify the tastes of all. It was as follows:

Overture to Benvenuto Cellini, op 23..Berlioz
L'Enterrement d'Ophelie..Bourgault Ducoudray
(First time in Boston.)
Suite in D major, op 49 ....Saint-Saens
Symphony No. 8, in F major, op 93 ..Beethoven
Overture to Euryanthe ....Weber

The "Benvenuto Cellini" overture is not generally considered as entitled to rang among Berlioz's ablest works, but it is nevertheless a brilliant and characteristic composition, rich in varied tone color and contrasted orchestral effects. It was admirably played under Mr Paur's direction with fine expression and splendid finish. That the audience thoroughly enjoyed the performance was shown by the hearty outburst of applause at its conclusion.



EMIL PAUR.

A novelty was a short symphonic poem by Louis-Albert Bourgalt-Ducoudray entitled "The Burial of Ophelia." It is a charmingly written work, expressive of poetic and melancholy sentiment rather than suggestive of the incidents attending the burial of Shakespeare's heroine. The movement begins pianissimo, gradually swells to the full force of the orchestra and ends as softly as it began. The scoring is very elaborate but always in good taste. A more sympathetic interpretation could not be imagined than was given by the orchestra last evening.

Saint-Saens' suite for orchestra in D major was played for the first time here and was heard with evident satisfaction by the audience. There are five short movements. The prelude consists of a series of complicated and cleverly devised canonical imitations on a simple theme. The stately sarabande is not remarkable for originality of either theme or treatment. The gavotte is rather the most enjoyable feature of the composition. It is dainty and graceful and deliciously melodious. The orchestra's new flute soloist, Mons Jacquet, was heard to advantage in this movement.

The romance is elaborately developed and agreeable tuneful. The final is a lively and showy rondo.

The warmest praise must be given Mr Paur for his reading of Beethoven's eighth symphony. It was an earnest, scholarly and faithful interpretation and gave further evidence of his intelligent appreciation of this composer's works. The four movements were played in irreproachable style and won enthusiastic expressions of approval from the audience. Weber's magnificent overture to "Euryanthe," superbly given, was the concluding number of an exceedingly enjoyable program.

Mr Martinus Sieveking, pianist, will be the soloist at this week's concert, when the program will be as follows: Overture, "Gwendoline," Chabrier; concerto for pianoforte, No. 1, in B flat minor, Tschaikowsky; rhapsody, No. 3, Dvorak; symphony in C major ("Jupiter"), Mozart.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.
Established 1813.
The Official Paper of the State.
The Official Paper of the City.

MONDAY MORNING, OCT. 19, 1896.

First Symphony Concert of the Season is a Success.

"Again to the battle, Achaians!" and judging by the manner in which our musical Achaians have begun their 16th campaign, there need be little fear of the result. It is quite unnecessary to begin with the customary apologies and allowances—"the long, summer vacation," "the few rehearsals preceding a first concert," etc., etc., do not seem to have caused any marked blemishes in the performance of Saturday night. An indecisive attack once or twice, and a little haziness in the minuet of the symphony was the sum of all defects; our orchestra begins the season almost at its best standard.

The opening programme was chosen with more than usual tact and discretion, containing nothing that was too difficult for the musicians to conquer of for the average auditor to comprehend. There were some novelties, too, which seem to augur that the list will not revolve wholly around the well-remembered classics, but will allow the Bostonian to hear what is being done in the modern musical world. At the concert of Saturday, the new French school had its innings, and very graceful and interesting its specimens were.

After a hearty burst of applause, which seemed like a public handshake with a returned acquaintance, Mr. Paur and his men plunged into Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini" overture, which was a very fitting introduction to the season and the concert, to the season because of its sturdy power and broad orchestration, and to the concert because it led gracefully into the more modern French selections which were to follow. It is one of the best examples of Berlioz's skill in working up a climax, and is impressive from the first mysterious pizzicato effects upon the contrabasses (the best of instruments for a pizzicato) to the powerful outbursts of brasses, drums, etc. in the coda. At the first performance in Paris, while the opera made an entire fiasco, the overture made an overwhelming success, and it has always been a success with the public, although not with the critics. Hanslick says that the first sixteen measures show a melodic poverty and harmonic awkwardness that suggest the beginnings of a not very talented pupil, and adds that the rest of the work is made up alternately of affected simplicity and noisy triviality, but Hanslick has ever denied the right of composers to wander into new paths, only excepting from his interdict his well-beloved Brahms. The work has kept its place upon the standard repertoire in spite of such sweeping condemnation, and was evidently appreciated at this concert. The "Burial of Ophelia" by Louis Albert Bourgault-Ducoudray was by no means as lengthy as its composer's name would indicate. It made no pretence to Shakespearian fidelity; there is no storming Laertes, no combative Hamlet, (unless a single military clash indicate the combat at the grave) no clownish and callous grave-digger, in any part of this music, which might as well serve to bury Tennyson's Elaine, or any lesser person, as the distraught Ophelia. It is elegiac after the suave manner of Ernst or Vieuxtemps, and graceful and attractive even in the midst of its sorrow; if it suggests tears it implies lace handkerchiefs as well. The muted violins present a very attractive theme at the outset, and this was played charmingly. Every detail of shading was well given, and the pretty picture could not fail of winning popular success. It was as well to hear such a work once. If it does not present the earnest treatment that a Tschaikowsky might have given it, at least it is a personification of Gallic grace and delicacy.

Of considerably higher, yet not of highest order, was St. Saens Suite in D major, Op. 49, which followed. It had the advantage of presenting considerable flute work, and therefore enabled the public to judge at once of the new flutists, M. Jacquet and Mr. Brooke, whose tone and blowing seem-slowest and stateliest of triple rhythm on in the octave on a carillon-like theme, a good exhibition of St. Saens contrapuntal skill, in which he stands somewhat above his French contemporaries. This movement was followed by a Sarabande, the slowest and statelist of triple rhymth dances, which the old composers used to reserve for the central movement of their suites. This old Spanish dance is probably of Moorish origin, and one of the straws that show the wind which blew the instrumental forms from the Orient into Europe. The movement was not particularly effective in this Suite, although graceful and fairly contrapuntal. It was followed by a Gavotte that was chiefly remarkable for its Musette Trio. In the old times it was often customary to perform the first movement of any minuet-form upon the strings or with full orchestra, the contrasted movement which followed upon the wood wind; as the clarinette was not employed by the old composers it was the custom to give this part with two oboes and bassoon, or with flute, oboe and bassoon, almost always in three-part harmony, whence this part of the old compositions came to be known as the "trio," a name which it has ever since retained, although no longer rigidly in three parts. The Trio of this Gavotte was in the old-fashioned form, although it distributed its three parts somewhat oddly, allowing the violins to carry on the musette-like drone, and giving the harmonies to two flutes with this quaint organ-point. The Romance which constituted the fourth movement was the best part of the Suite. It seemed especially modern after the rococo style of the Gavotte, but it gained, possibly, by the contrast.

The finale was dashing and jovial, reminding of the rollicking finales (gigues) that the 18th century composers used to give to their suites, and which led Haydn and Mozart to end their symphonies with similar pranks, a proceeding which was not wholly done away with until Beethoven wrote the finale to his "Heroic" symphony.

This general ending was a good transition to further joviality in the shape of Beethoven's eighth symphony, the one which, more than any of the nine, deserves the title of "Humorous." It is worthy of observation that whenever Beethoven had two works on hand at the same time they were sure to be in opposite moods. He wrote the fifth and sixth symphonies together, the one most earnest and powerful, the other full of playfulness and mischief; and while he was composing this humorous 8th symphony he was working upon portions of the romantic seventh symphony.

[illegible] geknoepft" ("unbuttoned" or unconfined) to the free and grotesque moods which sometimes burst forth in his nature and translated themselves into music. When he was in such unbuttoned mood he was sure to have a good frolic with his favorite bassoons, and some of the most characteristic bassoon comedy effects are to be found in this symphony. Both in the first and last movements the bassoons did excellent work and especially striking was the little octavo passage in the coda of the finale where bassoons and kettledrums carry on a solo. Not less joking is the sudden leap from flutes to contrabasses (from garret to cellar) in this same finale, which was admirably carried out. The responses between violins and basses in the slow movement, the abrupt and most conventional cadence of this movement, the startling stroke of the entire orchestra which cuts short the prattle of the chief theme of the last movement, the capricious retardings which cause the subordinate theme of the first movement to become so coquettish, all these points were well caught up by the conductor and perfectly rendered by the orchestra, and all of them showed Beethoven in his fullest flow of animal spirits, a man who was never morbid, never unhealthily sentimental.

The eighth is the shortest and least ambitious of Beethoven's symphonies, but it is the most spontaneous of the nine, and very difficult to interpret perfectly because of these bizarrerries and pranks. That so capricious a work should have received so good a performance at the first concert of the season causes one to feel sure that the technique of the orchestra is still at its highest point. If we could only send our orchestra to Europe for a season, the Germans and French would be amazed at finding a model for their concerts in America, for many of the vaunted trans-Atlantic orchestras are not peers of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Weber's "Euryanthe" overture ended the concert. It was sufficiently dramatic, although one could recall more poetic readings. Every portion of the work was as clear as crystal, and the canonic work was perfectly balanced.

Altogether, then, a programme of just the right proportions both in subject matter and quantity, excellently played, sustaining the interest to the very last note, whereby the 16th season of Boston's greatest musical organization is most successfully launched.

Louis C. Elson.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

SYMPHONY NIGHT.

Brilliant Inaugural of the Sixteenth Season in Music Hall.

The musical season in Boston may now be said to be fairly inaugurated, for last evening in Music Hall the Symphony Orchestra began its sixteenth series of concerts. While the auditorium was not densely packed, as on some occasions, all the seats were occupied, and there was quite a fringe of "standees" on both sides of the hall.

All the familiar devotees of the concerts were present, and they gave Mr. Paur a cordial greeting as he stepped forward and took his place at the leader's music rack, which was heavily festooned with white and yellow chrysanthemums.

The arrangement of the musicians is the same as in seasons past, ever since the advent of Mr. Paur, who quickly learned the most advantageous positions for his forces, and has kept them there.

The programme was as follows: Berlioz, overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," op. 23; Bourgault - Decoudray, "L'enterrement d'Ophelie," first time in Boston; Saint-Saens, suite in D major, op. 49, first time; Beethoven, Symphony No. 8, in F major, op. 93; Weber, overture to "Euryanthe."

This programme, while not especially long, embraced five different numbers, two of which were heard here for the first time. There was a pleasing variety, and although one or two may have been a trifle wearisome, there was still sufficient novelty to interest the audience. Berlioz's overture to "Benvenuto Cellini" opened the programme, and gave Mr. Paur an opportunity of demonstrating that he had not lost control of his men during his summer absence. In fact, his leading displayed, if anything, greater confidence and certainty, and the orchestra responded to his slightest motion with military precision.

"L'enterrement d'Ophelie" was played for the first time here. It is an exquisite composition and it was the first time also that any work of Bourgault Ducoudray was ever played by the orchestra. It is written on a single theme of great beauty and developed in a masterly manner that harmonizes with the subject. Mr. Paur's interpretation of it was exceedingly artistic and found with the audience a hearty appreciation.

Saint-Saens's suite in D major was another new number. It was composed many years ago, but for some reason has never before been given in Boston, although after last evening's hearing it will probably be frequently repeated. It is a delightful work replete with musical ideas and skilful development; the fine movements while being attractive in themselves are further enhanced by some marked contrasts. The gavotte and the romance found the highest favor.

Beethoven's familiar Eighth Symphony and Weber's overture to "Euryanthe" completed the programme. For this week's rehearsal and concert the programme will be:

Chabrier, overture, "Gwendoline" first time; Tschaikowsky, concerto for pianoforte No. 1, in B flat minor; Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3 (first time); Mozart, Symphony in C major, "Jupiter"; soloist, Martinus Sieveking.

The Symphony concerts have begun, and Boston's society and musical loving people turned out to welcome the artists who appeared at the opening of the sixteenth annual season in Music Hall last evening. The programme was varied and the numbers well received. Emil Paur led the orchestra, as usual.

* * * * * * * *

[30]

ston Journal.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

SYMPHONY NIGHT.

Opening Concert of the Sixteenth Season.

Saint-Saens's Suite and "The Burial of Ophelia."

A Glance at Boston's Most Homogeneous Audience.

The sixteenth season of the Boston Symphony Concerts, Mr. Emil Paur, conductor, began last evening in Music Hall. Mr. Paur was welcomed warmly. The program was as follows:

Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini"......Berlioz
"The Burial of Ophelia"................
Bourgault-Ducoudray
(First time in Boston.)
Suite D major, Op. 49............Saint-Saens
(First time at these concerts.)
Symphony No. 8, F major..........Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe"..................Weber

I speak of the career of Bourgault-Ducoudray in another column of today's Journal. Let us here confine our attention to the little piece played last night.

In 1892 four piano pieces of Bourgault-Ducoudray were published by Maquet of Paris. The general title was "Fumées." The first was entitled "L'Appel sous les Eaux"; the second was entitled "Poétique Apparition"; the third "Tendre Emois," and the fourth "L'Enterrement d'Ophélie."

Was the piano piece suggested by the burial of Ophelia, the forerunner of the piece for orchestra? Were the two composed about the same time? Or did the composer say: "I like this idea; I think it would sound well if it were orchestrated"? I do not know, and the Program Book gives no answer.

"The Burial of Ophelia" was played at a concert of the National Society at the Salle d'Harcourt, Paris, Dec. 23, 1894, and I have not been able to find any record of an earlier performance.

⁂

Poor Ophelia was allowed "her virgin rites, her maiden strewments, and the bringing home of bell and burial." There were flowers for her, but the churlish priest forbad the music of her church. I think she would have liked this music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

Ophelia, the daughter of Polonius and the Lady Anne, 18 years old when she was tired of Hamlet's whims and caprices, with blue eyes, thin and too heroic—she always had a perishable air—with a profile that did not recall the profile of any animal from the bull dog to the gazelle—stay, is this the Ophelia of Shakspeare or Lafourge? And, is there any truth in the report that Hamlet placed Yorick's skull on his dressing table between one of Ophelia's gloves and his first tooth? Laforgue has told us some things about Ophelia that were not known to Shakspeare, and to the inquiring mind his information is not wholly satisfactory. Ophelia is a vaporous, misty maiden. Even if Hamlet had behaved in smugger fashion and not been restless-minded, she never would have been happy with him. I think Ophelia would have liked this burial music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

Do you say that the composer's name is longer and more imposing than his piece? But there is in this music ineffable melancholy; there is the thought of weeping virginity, and as Hamlet said, to bring tears to the eyes of a maiden is more irreparable than it is to marry her.

There is funeral music that is aggressive, irritating, inspiring the hearer to envy the dead body in whose honor it was written and is performed. But this music for Ophelia is so tender and sympathetic. Ophelia was not a long and passionate cantilena. She was a broken tune, a fragment of melody, vague, tear-drenched. In her madness she sang songs—the good Lord only knows where she learned them; but there were roisterers about the court, and possibly Polonius hummed when he was in frolicsome and reminiscent mood.

The learned Bourgault-Ducoudray believes that the spirit of ancient modes are perpetuated in the spontaneous music of nearly all nations. In this little burial piece, the professor is a poet of rare imagination and a master of expression. There is not a note that does not weep for the maiden. You say again, "It is such a little piece; it is so meagre." You would prefer, no doubt, something in tragic vein. First let us hear your definition of tragic. To me this "Burial of Ophelia" was the feature of the evening, and I think Ophelia herself—remember she was musical—would have liked this vaporous dirge.

⁂

The Suite of Saint-Saëns was first played here by the orchestra of Theodore Thomas Dec. 15, 1877. It was played the month before under his direction at Cambridge.

It is one of the least interesting of his works. The prelude is a study in Bach, but the form is more than the spirit; there is not the vitality, there is not the elemental force. The Prelude is clever, but music must be something more than clever. In the Sarabande Saint-Saëns shows us how jolly archaic he can be. The Gavotte is more to the purpose; it is charming, skillfully-constructed music. Delightful, thoroughly delightful, was the trio, and [illegible] Mr. Jacquet and [illegible] The Romance is superb [illegible] as a whole monotonous [illegible] and insincere compliments. [illegible] Final scurries along as though [illegible] glad to bring the end. And yet only in this Final and in the Gavotte do I find Saint-Saëns, the truly talented musician.

⁂

The "Cellini" overture is not such a favorite as the "Carneval Romain," and the popular decision is here just. The latter was first played in Boston Jan. 24, 1857. Do you know when the former was first produced here?

If you say that the former is the more thoroughly developed as to its themes, you must admit that the peculiar, inimitable brilliancy of Berlioz is not displayed in its full splendor. Yet is the instrumentation clean, individual, unerring, so that it is a pleasure to hear the piece, even though you long for its companion.

⁂

The day may come when symphonies will not be given in their appalling length. When that day comes, the first movement of the 8th symphony may well be omitted. And would it not be well to put the overtures of Weber on a shelf for a year or so? It is the old saw about familiarity. Beethoven might be more truly appreciated and loved if he were not turned into the musical staff of life. And the overtures of Weber are tolerably—some one says, intolerably familiar.

⁂

The following changes have been made in the orchestra. Mr. L. Jacquet is first flute, and Mr. A. Brooke is second flute. Mr. A. Weiss is second oboe. Mr. P. Litke is second bassoon. Mr. F. Zahn has moved from the second violins to the violas, and Mr. A. Kuntz has been added to the second violins. Mr. A. Blaess has been added to the 'cellos.

⁂

The program of the concert next Saturday will be as follows: Chabrier, overture to "Gwendoline" (first time); Tschaikowsky, concerto for piano No. 1, B flat minor (Mr. Martinus Sieveking, pianist); Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3; Mozart, Symphony, C major ("Jupiter").

PHILIP HALE.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 18, 1896.

THE FIRST SYMPHONY CONCERT.

It was a pretty thorough awakening which Mr. Paur gave his orchestra and his audience by beginning the sixteenth Symphony concert season with the sumptuous, vehement and brilliant "Benvenuto Cellini" overture of Berlioz. This score calls by turns for almost the extreme capacity in volume and array of the modern orchestra and for the delicacy, daintiness and levity of solo instruments. Its ponderous phrases march with the tread of elephants and its airy flights anticipate the palpitating violin notes of Wagner. It requires no end of enthusiasm and strength and it no less needs virtuosity. Its power, its trickery and its spirit always make it a favorite and it has been frequent in the Music Hall programmes. That Mr. Paur's command of his men had lasted over across their long vacation and separation, their playing proved, for they were vigorous, united and of one mind in obedience to his indications. Something of fierceness might have been added advantageously, but for readiness and accuracy we do not recall so good an initial number.

Next came something new—a short orchestral reflection, as it might almost be termed, written by the French composer Bourgault-Ducondray, and entitled "The Burial of Ophelia." It is a sadly sweet, short work, with the rhythm and motion of a funeral march and the temperament of a tender poem. It is built up from a single chief thought, which first appears in a group of solo strings, accompanied by the harp. From them it passes in similar harmonies to the wooden wind, the 'cellos reinforcing the support of the harp. Then gradually, as if the mournful cortege were approaching, the song swells out into the entire orchestra, emphasized by the regal blare of trumpets and the resonant clangor of cymbals. The faint sound of the burial bell is heard now at intervals, and soon all dies away into silence by degrees. The orchestra read this little monody gracefully, softly and sympathetically, making of it a whole so interesting that one would willingly have had it continue longer.

Next came a suite for strings and wooden wind—strengthened in the bass movement by trumpets and kettle-drums—by Saint Saens, which was also new. The prelude is a clear and entertaining allegro cast largely into the form of the canon; the second movement is a broad, grave and simple saraband; the third is a gavotte of standard fashion, containing as its trio a delightful little duet for flutes, in which the new flute-player, Mr. Jacquet, was heard with pleasure; the fourth is a romance of attractive development and gentle, attractive character; the finale is a rondo of a liveliness that gave the violinists something to do to demonstrate that their fingers have lost no dexterity during the summer.

Excellent renderings of Beethoven's Eighth Symphony—no better choice could be made for attuning the public ear again to the greatest manner of orchestral music—and of Weber's "Euryanthe" overture followed and ended the programme.

The programme-book bore testimony to the painstaking of Assistant Manager Comee, who therein printed an interesting and valuable analytic resume of all the fifteen years work of the orchestra. Mr. Comee's detailed collection of the programmes, which he gave out last year, is here reduced into some compact fables which will be of no small value when the relative proportions of these many seasons are under discussion.

This will be the second programme: Chabrier, Overture, "Gwendoline," (first time;) Tschaikowsky, Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor; Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3, (first time); Mozart, Symphony in C major ("Jupiter.")

The solo pianist will be Mr. Martinus Siere King.

HOWARD MALCOM TICKNOR.

[31]

SUNDAY HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 110.

SUNDAY, OCT. 18, 1896.

FIRST SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Opens the Regular Musical Season in Due Form.

An Enthusiastic Audience Gives Mr. Paur and the Orchestra a Hearty Welcome—The Performance Satisfying from Beginning to End—Models of Interpretation.

The first concert of the 16th season of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Music Hall yesterday evening opened the regular musical season in due form, and from this time forth the concert stream will wander on its course, increasing in volume as it goes, until it swells into its annual deluge, and, subsiding at last, leaves the music-loving who have been tossed on its ocean of tone billows music-drenched and exhausted on the shores of Too-Much-of-a-Good-Thing, against which it has beaten.

The company assembled last night was a large one, and it listened to the following programme:

Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini".........Berlioz
"The Burial of Ophelia"..Bourgault-Ducoudray
Orchestral suite, in D, op. 49.......Saint-Saens
Symphony in F, No. 8..............Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe"................Weber

Of these the selections by Ducoudray and Saint-Saens were heard at these concerts for the first time, a fact somewhat unaccountable in regard to the latter, for it is nearly 30 years old, and is of a musical worth that entitled it to earlier honors than it received here.

The entrance of Mr. Paur was the signal for a cordial and prolonged demonstration of hearty welcome. The personnel of the orchestra has undergone but little change, the most important being the two new performers at the flute desk. There is a new second oboe, a new second bassoon, and the 'cellos have been augmented from seven to eight.

The performance of the Berlioz overture showed that the orchestra had not grown rusty during its six months' vacation, but was in as perfect form as when it ceased its labors at the end of last season. The wonderful and perhaps unequalled body of strings gave out the same splendid body of tone, and with the same precision, smoothness and brilliancy. This "Cellini" overture is not as masterly and as strongly original a work as is the "Carnaval Romaine" that the composer wrote as an introduction to the second act of the same opera, but it is, nevertheless, strong in dramatic color, and is interesting for the clearness and the richness of the orchestration. Clearness is the special virtue in Berlioz's scoring, and here, as in all his other orchestral writing, there is never a trace of confusion or of cloudiness even in moments of the greatest noise. Every instrument is heard distinctly and produces its own proper effect, a result that it not always reached in the richer and more massive instrumentation of the Wagner school, where the characteristic tone colors of the different instruments are swallowed up in passages of fortissimo and in one bass tuba burial blent.

The Ducoudray selection is the veriest trifle imaginable and brief as the posy in a ring. Why Ophelia's burial, or why a burial at all, does not appear. It is dainty and pretty and pervaded by an amiable melancholy. The theme is gracefully melodious, even poetic in character, and the orchestration is charming in its delicate tenderness. It lays mostly among the strings, which are divided into many parts, and at times with lovely effect. It is never elaborate, and though the work is strikingly in the modern style, the simplicity of its treatment is notable. It was sympathetically read and delightfully played. Its composer, though nearly 60 years of age, and an enthusiastic musician greatly honored in France, has not produced much original music, his chief works being a "Stabat Mater," a fantasie in C minor for orchestra, a "satiric" drama entitled "La Conjuration des Fleurs," of which he wrote the book as well as the music, and an opera, which did not meet with very great success. He has devoted his time chiefly to producing the works of the old composers and to the popular songs of all countries. It is scarcely to be presumed that the little work performed last night is a fair sample of his best powers, in view of the esteem in which he is held in musical France. It was, however, well worth the hearing for the grace and refinement that are its distinguishing qualities and as an example of what may be done with an airy nothing by a man of talent.

The Saint-Saens Suite is quite in the manner of the older masters. The prelude displays the composer's skill in contrapuntal writing, the development of its theme in canon being both ingenious and masterly. The second movement is a Sarabande, the opening theme of which might have been written by Handel himself. It is a charming bit of writing, and in it the new first flute in a brief solo sent forth a smooth, warm and liquid tone of rare beauty, and in the trio of the gavotte the two flutes were heard with an effect that proved beyond all doubt that they were an acquisition of the first order to the orchestra. The fourth movement is a romance, in which the composer deserts the past and returns to his own individuality of style. It has a graceful and placid theme, and is treated and developed elaborately, orchestrally and otherwise. The finale is a bit of Haydn, frolicking in his familiar vein, but in a modern spirit. It is full of life, and the orchestration is fascinating. It is not often that Saint-Saens is as continuously charming as he is in this work, which, by the way, was read and played with exquisite finish.

The most joyous of all of Beethoven's symphonies was read by M. Paur justly and with impressive virility. He permitted the music to say what it had to say without making any attempt to make it utter something irrelevantly new for the were sake of newness. The tempi were not exaggerated, nor was the color intensified. Both interpretation and performance were models of how the symphony may be best given. A word of passing praise must be given M. Porteau for his playing of the difficult passage in the trio of the minuet. It is seldom played smoothly or in tune, but M. Porteau gave it faultlessly and with a delicacy and an easy, effortless fluency that were almost amazing.

The concert was satisfactory from beginning to end, and there was every evidence that the audience so felt regarding it. The programme for the next concert is: Overture, "Gwendoline," Chabrier, first time; concerto for piano, No. 1, Tschaikowsky; rhapsody, o. 3, Dvorak; symphony, "Jupiter," Mozart. Mr. Martinus Sieveking will apear as soloist.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, OCT. 18, 1896.

The first of the Symphony concerts was given last night. Of course all the seats in old Music hall were occupied: they always are at the symphonies, and one could hardly realize that five months had passed since the last of these concerts, for the people were those who always make up the patrons of these affairs, more than half of the audience being composed of the same persons in the same seats as last year, and they came in and settled down to the feast of music which Conductor Paur had planned for them, as usual, just as if there had been no intermission since the last concert. The programme was: Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," op. 23, Hector Belioz; "The Burial of Ophelia," Louis-Albert Bourgault-Ducoudray, (first time in Boston); Orchestral Suite in D major, op. 49, Camille Saint-Saens (first time); Symphony No. 8, in F major, op. 93, Ludwig van Beethoven; Overture to "Euryanthe," Karl Maria von Weber.

The Boston Symphony orchestra, Mr. Emil Paur, conductor, will give ten concerts in Sanders theatre, Cambridge, Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17 and 31, Jan. 14, March 4 and 18, April 8 and 29. Season tickets, with reserved seats, for the series will be on sale at the University Book store next Saturday morning, Oct. 24, at 8 o'clock. A limited number of seats have been reserved for college officers and invited guests.

SECOND SYMPHONY CONCERT.

At the second rehearsal and concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Mr. Martinus Sieveking will be the soloist and the programme will be:

Overture, "Gwendoline"..............Chabrier
(First time.)
Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1, in B flat minor........................Tschaikowsky
Rhapsody No. 3 ....Dvorak
(First time.)
Symphony in C major ("Jupiter").......Mozart

Boston Transcript

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1896.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its season in New York at the Metropolitan Opera House on Friday evening, Nov. 13—its forty-eighth performance in New York. The remaining four concerts will be given, as usual, on Thursday evenings, on the following dates: Dec. 10, Jan. 21, Feb. 25 and March 25. Of the thirty-seven cities visited by this organization, it is interesting to note that New York ranks fourth, Cambridge, Mass., taking the first place, with its 104 concerts given in Sanders Theatre. Mr. Paur announces among the list of works to be performed, the Beethoven Symphony No. 4, the Schubert Symphony in C major No. 9, the Schumann C major Symphony No. 2 and the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4. The overtures include the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz, the "Oberon" of Weber, the "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn and the "Coriolanus" of Beethoven. Other selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the entr'acte from "Ingwelde," by Schilling, and the symphonic poem, "Wallenstein," by Smetana. One entire programme will be devoted to Wagner selections. The list of soloists includes Moritz Rosenthal, who will play the Chopin E minor concerto at the first concert; Carl Halir, Teresa Carreno, Ben Davies and others.

PUBLIC LEDGER

Philadelphia, Saturday, Oct. 17, 1896.

The sale of season tickets for the Boston Symphony concerts will open, as before announced, next Monday morning.

The Times

PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 18, 1896

cess.

The Boston Symphony Concerts.

The announcement of the sale of season tickets at Fischer's music store to-morrow morning for the five concerts to be given the coming season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Academy of Music will arouse the usual interest among all lovers of the best in music in this city. For eleven years this organization has visited Philadelphia, maintaining from the date of its first concert, April 10, 1886, the highest standard of performance. The dates announced for the coming series are Tuesday evening, November 10, and Monday evenings, December 7, January 18, February 22 and March 22. The soloists are Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist for the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at his appearances with the orchestra last season; M. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the renowned violin virtuoso from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country. The list of composers whose works are to be performed is sufficiently varied to suit all tastes, including Beethoven, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Mozart, Goldmark, Smetana, Schumann, Berlioz, Liszt and Weber. One entire programme will be devoted to selections from the works of Wagner.

Boston Journal.
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

SYMPHONY NIGHT.

Opening Concert of the Sixteenth Season.

Saint-Saens's Suite and "The Burial of Ophelia."

A Glance at Boston's Most Homogeneous Audience.

The sixteenth season of the Boston Symphony Concerts, Mr. Emil Paur, conductor, began last evening in Music Hall. Mr. Paur was welcomed warmly. The program was as follows:

Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini"......Berlioz
"The Burial of Ophelia"................ ..
Bourgault-Ducoudray
(First time in Boston.)
Suite D major, Op. 49...........Sairt-Saens
(First time at these concerts.)
Symphony No. 8, F major..........Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe"..................Weber

I speak of the career of Bourgault-Ducoudray in another column of to-day's Journal. Let us here confine our attention to the little piece played last night.

In 1892 four piano pieces of Bourgault-Ducoudray were published by Maquet of Paris. The general title was "Fumées." The first was entitled "L'Appel sous les Eaux"; the second was entitled "Poëtique Apparition"; the third "Tendre Emois," and the fourth "L'Enterrement d'Ophélie."

Was the piano piece suggested by the burial of Ophelia, the forerunner of the piece for orchestra? Were the two composed about the same time? Or did the composer say: "I like this idea; I think it would sound well if it were orchestrated"? I do not know, and the Program Book gives no answer.

"The Burial of Ophelia" was played at a concert of the National Society at the Salle d'Harcourt, Paris, Dec. 23, 1894, and I have not been able to find any record of an earlier performance.

⁂

Poor Ophelia was allowed "her virgin rites, her maiden strewments, and the bringing home of bell and burial." There were flowers for her, but the churlish priest forbad the music of her church. I think she would have liked this music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

Ophelia, the daughter of Polonius and the Lady Anne, 18 years old when she was tired of Hamlet's whims and caprices, with blue eyes, thin and too heroic—she always had a perishable air—with a profile that did not recall the profile of any animal from the bull dog to the gazelle—stay, is this the Ophelia of Shakspeare or Lafourge? And, is there any truth in the report that Hamlet placed Yorick's skull on his dressing table between one of Ophelia's gloves and his first tooth? Laforgue has told us some things about Ophelia that were not known to Shakspeare, and to the inquiring mind his information is not wholly satisfactory. Ophelia is a vaporous, misty maiden. Even if Hamlet had behaved in smugger fashion and not been restless-minded, she never would have been happy with him. I think Ophelia would have liked this burial music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

Do you say that the composer's name is longer and more imposing than his piece? But there is in this music ineffable melancholy; there is the thought of weeping virginity, and as Hamlet said, to bring tears to the eyes of a maiden is more irreparable than it is to marry her.

There is funeral music that is aggressive, irritating, inspiring the hearer to envy the dead body in whose honor it was written and is performed. But this music for Ophelia is so tender and sympathetic. Ophelia was not a long and passionate cantilena. She was a broken tune, a fragment of melody, vague, tear-drenched. In her madness she sang songs—the good Lord only knows where she learned them; but there were roisterers about the court, and possibly Polonius hummed when he was in frolicsome and reminiscent mood.

The learned Bourgault-Ducoudray believes that the spirit of ancient modes are perpetuated in the spontaneous music of nearly all nations. In this little burial piece, the professor is a poet of rare imagination and a master of expression. There is not a note that does not weep for the maiden. You say again, "It is such a little piece; it is so meagre." You would prefer, no doubt, something in tragic vein. First let us hear your definition of tragic. To me this "Burial of Ophelia" was the feature of the evening, and I think Ophelia herself—remember she was musical—would have liked this vaporous dirge.

⁂

The Suite of Saint-Saëns was first played here by the orchestra of Theodore Thomas Dec. 15, 1877. It was played the month before under his direction at Cambridge.

It is one of the least interesting of his works. The prelude is a study in Bach, but the form is more than the spirit; there is not the vitality, there is not the elemental force. The Prelude is clever, but music must be something more than clever. In the Sarabande Saint-Saëns shows us how jolly archaic he can be. The Gavotte is more to the purpose; it is charming, skillfully-constructed music. Delightful, thoroughly delightful, was the trio, and the flutes were played admirably by Mr. Jacquet and Mr. Brooke. The Romance is superficially pretty, and as a whole monotonous in its genteel and insincere compliments. The Final scurries along as though it were glad to bring the end. And yet only in this Final and in the Gavotte do I find Saint-Saëns, the truly talented musician.

⁂

The "Cellini" overture is not such a favorite as the "Carneval Romain," and the popular decision is here just. The latter was first played in Boston Jan. 24, 1857. Do you know when the former was first produced here?

If you say that the former is the more thoroughly developed as to its themes, you must admit that the peculiar, inimitable brilliancy of Berlioz is not displayed in its full splendor. Yet is the instrumentation clean, individual, unerring, so that it is a pleasure to hear the piece, even though you long for its companion.

⁂

The day may come when symphonies will not be given in their appalling length. When that day comes, the first movement of the 8th symphony may well be omitted. And would it not be well to put the overtures of Weber on a shelf for a year or so? It is the old saw about familiarity. Beethoven might be more truly appreciated and loved if he were not turned into the musical staff of life. And the overtures of Weber are tolerably—some one says, intolerably familiar.

⁂

The following changes have been made in the orchestra. Mr. L. Jacquet is first flute, and Mr. A. Brooke is second flute. Mr. A. Weiss is second oboe. Mr. P. Litke is second bassoon. Mr. F. Zahn has moved from the second violins to the violas, and Mr. A. Kuntz has been added to the second violins. Mr. A. Blaess has been added to the 'cellos.

⁂

The program of the concert next Saturday will be as follows: Chabrier, overture to "Gwendoline" (first time); Tschaikowsky, concerto for piano No. 1, B flat minor (Mr. Martinus Sieveking, pianist); Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3; Mozart, Symphony, C major ("Jupiter").

PHILIP HALE.

Boston Courier.
SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 18, 1896.

THE FIRST SYMPHONY CONCERT.

It was a pretty thorough awakening which Mr. Paur gave his orchestra and his audience by beginning the sixteenth Symphony concert season with the sumptuous, vehement and brilliant "Benvenuto Cellini" overture of Berlioz. This score calls by turns for almost the extreme capacity in volume and array of the modern orchestra and for the delicacy, daintiness and levity of solo instruments. Its ponderous phrases march with the tread of elephants and its airy flights anticipate the palpitating violin notes of Wagner. It requires no end of enthusiasm and strength and it no less needs virtuosity. Its power, its trickery and its spirit always make it a favorite and it has been frequent in the Music Hall programmes. That Mr. Paur's command of his men had lasted over across their long vacation and separation, their playing proved, for they were vigorous, united and of one mind in obedience to his indications. Something of fierceness might have been added advantageously, but for readiness and accuracy we do not recall so good an initial number.

Next came something new—a short orchestral reflection, as it might almost be termed, written by the French composer Bourgault-Ducondray, and entitled "The Burial of Ophelia." It is a sadly sweet, short work, with the rhythm and motion of a funeral march and the temperament of a tender poem. It is built up from a single chief thought, which first appears in a group of solo strings, accompanied by the harp. From them it passes in similar harmonies to the wooden wind, the 'cellos reinforcing the support of the harp. Then gradually, as if the mournful cortege were approaching, the song swells out into the entire orchestra, emphasized by the regal blare of trumpets and the resonant clangor of cymbals. The faint sound of the burial bell is heard now at intervals, and soon all dies away into silence by degrees. The orchestra read this little monody gracefully, softly and sympathetically, making of it a whole so interesting that one would willingly have had it continue longer.

Next came a suite for strings and wooden wind—strengthened in the bass movement by trumpets and kettle-drums—by Saint Saens, which was also new. The prelude is a clear and entertaining allegro cast largely into the form of the canon; the second movement is a broad, grave and simple saraband; the third is a gavotte of standard fashion, containing as its trio a delightful little duet for flutes, in which the new flute-player, Mr. Jacquet, was heard with pleasure; the fourth is a romance of attractive development and gentle, attractive character; the finale is a rondo of a liveliness that gave the violinists something to do to demonstrate that their fingers have lost no dexterity during the summer.

Excellent renderings of Beethoven's Eighth Symphony—no better choice could be made for attuning the public ear again to the greatest manner of orchestral music—and of Weber's "Euryanthe" overture followed and ended the programme.

The programme-book bore testimony to the painstaking of Assistant Manager Comee, who therein printed an interesting and valuable analytic resume of all the fifteen years work of the orchestra. Mr. Comee's detailed collection of the programmes, which he gave out last year, is here reduced into some compact fables which will be of no small value when the relative proportions of these many seasons are under discussion.

This will be the second programme: Chabrier, Overture, "Gwendoline," (first time;) Tschaikowsky, Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor; Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3, (first time); Mozart, Symphony in C major ("Jupiter.")

The solo pianist will be Mr, Martinus Siere King.

HOWARD MALCOM TICKNOR.

SUNDAY HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 110.
SUNDAY, OCT. 18, 1896.

FIRST SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Opens the Regular Musical Season in Due Form.

An Enthusiastic Audience Gives Mr. Paur and the Orchestra a Hearty Welcome—The Performance Satisfying from Beginning to End—Models of Interpretation.

The first concert of the 16th season of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Music Hall yesterday evening opened the regular musical season in due form, and from this time forth the concert stream will wander on its course, increasing in volume as it goes, until it swells into its annual deluge, and, subsiding at last, leaves the music-loving who have been tossed on its ocean of tone billows music-drenched and exhausted on the shores of Too-Much-of-a-Good-Thing, against which it has beaten.

The company assembled last night was a large one, and it listened to the following programme:

Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini".........Berlioz
"The Burial of Ophelia"..Bourgault-Ducoudray
Orchestral suite, in D, op. 49......Saint-Saens
Symphony in F, No. 8...............Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe".................Weber

Of these the selections by Ducoudray and Saint-Saens were heard at these concerts for the first time, a fact somewhat unaccountable in regard to the latter, for it is nearly 30 years old, and is of a musical worth that entitled it to earlier honors than it received here.

The entrance of Mr. Paur was the signal for a cordial and prolonged demonstration of hearty welcome. The personnel of the orchestra has undergone but little change, the most important being the two new performers at the flute desk. There is a new second oboe, a new second bassoon, and the 'cellos have been augmented from seven to eight.

The performance of the Berlioz overture showed that the orchestra had not grown rusty during its six months' vacation, but was in as perfect form as when it ceased its labors at the end of last season. The wonderful and perhaps unequalled body of strings gave out the same splendid body of tone, and with the same precision, smoothness and brilliancy. This "Cellini" overture is not as masterly and as strongly original a work as is the "Carnaval Romaine" that the composer wrote as an introduction to the second act of the same opera, but it is, nevertheless, strong in dramatic color, and is interesting for the clearness and the richness of the orchestration. Clearness is the special virtue in Berlioz's scoring, and here, as in all his other orchestral writing, there is never a trace of confusion or of cloudiness even in moments of the greatest noise. Every instrument is heard distinctly and produces its own proper effect, a result that it not always reached in the richer and more massive instrumentation of the Wagner school, where the characteristic tone colors of the different instruments are swallowed up in passages of fortissimo and in one bass tuba burial blent.

The Ducoudray selection is the veriest trifle imaginable and brief as the posy in a ring Why Ophelia's burial, or why a burial at all, does not appear. It is dainty and pretty and pervaded by an amiable melancholy. The theme is gracefully melodious, even poetic in character, and the orchestration is charming in its delicate tenderness. It lays mostly among the strings, which are divided into many parts, and at times with lovely effect. It is never elaborate, and though the work is strikingly in the modern style, the simplicity of its treatment is notable. It was sympathetically read and delightfully played. Its composer, though nearly 60 years of age, and an enthusiastic musician greatly honored in France, has not produced much original music, his chief works being a "Stabat Mater," a fantasie in C minor for orchestra, a "satiric" drama entitled "La Conjuration des Fleurs," of which he wrote the book as well as the music, and an opera, which did not meet with very great success. He has devoted his time chiefly to producing the works of the old composers and to the popular songs of all countries. It is scarcely to be presumed that the little work performed last night is a fair sample of his best powers, in view of the esteem in which he is held in musical France. It was, however, well worth the hearing for the grace and refinement that are its distinguishing qualities and as an example of what may be done with an airy nothing by a man of talent.

The Saint-Saens Suite is quite in the manner of the older masters. The prelude displays the composer's skill in contrapuntal writing, the development of its theme in canon being both ingenious and masterly. The second movement is a Sarabande, the opening theme of which might have been written by Handel himself. It is a charming bit of writing, and in it the new first flute in a brief solo sent forth a smooth, warm and liquid tone of rare beauty, and in the trio of the gavotte the two flutes were heard with an effect that proved beyond all doubt that they were an acquisition of the first order to the orchestra. The fourth movement is a romance, in which the composer deserts the past and returns to his own individuality of style. It has a graceful and placid theme, and is treated and developed elaborately, orchestrally and otherwise. The finale is a bit of Haydn, frolicking in his familiar vein, but in a modern spirit. It is full of life, and the orchestration is fascinating. It is not often that Saint-Saens is as continuously charming as he is in this work, which, by the way, was read and played with exquisite finish.

The most joyous of all of Beethoven's symphonies was read by M. Paur justly and with impressive virility. He permitted the music to say what it had to say without making any attempt to make it utter something irrelevantly new for the were sake of newness. The tempi were not exaggerated, nor was the color intensified. Both interpretation and performance were models of how the symphony may be best given. A word of passing praise must be given M. Porteau for his playing of the difficult passage in the trio of the minuet. It is seldom played smoothly or in tune, but M. Porteau gave it faultlessly and with a delicacy and an easy, effortless fluency that were almost amazing.

The concert was satisfactory from beginning to end, and there was every evidence that the audience so felt regarding it. The programme for the next concert is: Overture, "Gwendoline," Chabrier, first time; concerto for piano, No. 1, Tschaikowsky; rhapsody, o. 3, Dvorak; symphony, "Jupiter," Mozart. Mr. Martinus Sieveking will apear as soloist.

THE BOSTON TIMES
BOSTON, SUNDAY, OCT. 18, 1896.

The first of the Symphony concerts was given last night. Of course all the seats in old Music hall were occupied; they always are at the symphonies, and one could hardly realize that five months had passed since the last of these concerts, for the people were those who always make up the patrons of these affairs, more than half of the audience being composed of the same persons in the same seats as last year, and they came in and settled down to the feast of music which Conductor Paur had planned for them, as usual, just as if there had been no intermission since the last concert. The programme was: Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," op. 23, Hector Belioz; "The Burial of Ophelia," Louis-Albert Bourgault-Ducoudray, (first time in Boston); Orchestral Suite in D major, op. 49, Camille Saint-Saens (first time); Symphony No. 8, in F major, op. 93, Ludwig van Beethoven; Overture to "Euryanthe," Karl Maria von Weber.

The Boston Symphony orchestra, Mr. Emil Paur, conductor, will give ten concerts in Sanders theatre, Cambridge, Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17 and 31, Jan. 14, March 4 and 18, April 8 and 29. Season tickets, with reserved seats, for the series will be on sale at the University Book store next Saturday morning, Oct. 24, at 8 o'clock. A limited number of seats have been reserved for college officers and invited guests.

SECOND SYMPHONY CONCERT.

At the second rehearsal and concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Mr. Martinus Sieveking will be the soloist and the programme will be:

Overture, "Gwendoline"...............Chabrier
(First time.)
Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1, in B flat minor.......................Tschaikowsky
Rhapsody No. 3 ....Dvorak
(First time.)
Symphony in C major ("Jupiter").......Mozart

Boston Transcript
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1896.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its season in New York at the Metropolitan Opera House on Friday evening, Nov. 13—its forty-eighth performance in New York. The remaining four concerts will be given, as usual, on Thursday evenings, on the following dates: Dec. 10, Jan. 21, Feb. 25 and March 25. Of the thirty-seven cities visited by this organization, it is interesting to note that New York ranks fourth, Cambridge, Mass., taking the first place, with its 104 concerts given in Sanders Theatre. Mr. Paur announces among the list of works to be performed, the Beethoven Symphony No. 4, the Schubert Symphony in C major No. 9, the Schumann C major Symphony No. 2 and the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4. The overtures include the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz, the "Oberon" of Weber, the "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn and the "Coriolanus" of Beethoven. Other selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the entr'acte from "Ingwelde," by Schilling, and the symphonic poem, "Wallenstein," by Smetana. One entire programme will be devoted to Wagner selections. The list of soloists includes Moritz Rosenthal, who will play the Chopin E minor concerto at the first concert; Carl Halir, Teresa Carreno, Ben Davies and others.

PUBLIC LEDGER
Philadelphia, Saturday, Oct. 17, 1896.

The sale of season tickets for the Boston Symphony concerts will open, as before announced, next Monday morning.

The Times
PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 18, 1896

cess.

The Boston Symphony Concerts.

The announcement of the sale of season tickets at Fischer's music store to-morrow morning for the five concerts to be given the coming season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Academy of Music will arouse the usual interest among all lovers of the best in music in this city. For eleven years this organization has visited Philadelphia, maintaining from the date of its first concert, April 10, 1886, the highest standard of performance. The dates announced for the coming series are Tuesday evening, November 10, and Monday evenings, December 7, January 18, February 22 and March 22. The soloists are Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist for the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at his appearances with the orchestra last season; M. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the renowned violin virtuoso from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country. The list of composers whose works are to be performed is sufficiently varied to suit all tastes, including Beethoven, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Mozart, Goldmark, Smetana, Schumann, Berlioz, Liszt and Weber. One entire programme will be devoted to selections from the works of Wagner.

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

SYMPHONY NIGHT.

Opening Concert of the Sixteenth Season.

Saint-Saens's Suite and "The Burial of Ophelia."

A Glance at Boston's Most Homogeneous Audience.

The sixteenth season of the Boston Symphony Concerts, Mr. Emil Paur, conductor, began last evening in Music Hall. Mr. Paur was welcomed warmly. The program was as follows:

Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini"......Berlioz
"The Burial of Ophelia"............. ..
Bourgault-Ducoudray
(First time in Boston.)
Suite D major, Op. 49...........Saint-Saens
(First time at these concerts.)
Symphony No. 8, F major..........Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe"................Weber

I speak of the career of Bourgault-Ducoudray in another column of today's Journal. Let us here confine our attention to the little piece played last night.

In 1892 four piano pieces of Bourgault-Ducoudray were published by Maquet of Paris. The general title was "Fumées." The first was entitled "L'Appel sous les Eaux"; the second was entitled "Poétique Apparition"; the third "Tendre Emois," and the fourth "L'Enterrement d'Ophélie."

Was the piano piece suggested by the burial of Ophelia, the forerunner of the piece for orchestra? Were the two composed about the same time? Or did the composer say: "I like this idea; I think it would sound well if it were orchestrated"? I do not know, and the Program Book gives no answer.

"The Burial of Ophelia" was played at a concert of the National Society at the Salle d'Harcourt, Paris, Dec. 23, 1894, and I have not been able to find any record of an earlier performance.

⁂

Poor Ophelia was allowed "her virgin rites, her maiden strewments, and the bringing home of bell and burial." There were flowers for her, but the churlish priest forbad the music of her church. I think she would have liked this music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

Ophelia, the daughter of Polonius and the Lady Anne, 18 years old when she was tired of Hamlet's whims and caprices, with blue eyes, thin and too heroic—she always had a perishable air—with a profile that did not recall the profile of any animal from the bull dog to the gazelle—stay, is this the Ophelia of Shakspeare or Lafourge? And, is there any truth in the report that Hamlet placed Yorick's skull on his dressing table between one of Ophelia's gloves and his first tooth? Laforgue has told us some things about Ophelia that were not known to Shakspeare, and to the inquiring mind his information is not wholly satisfactory. Ophelia is a vaporous, misty maiden. Even if Hamlet had behaved in smugger fashion and not been restless-minded, she never would have been happy with him. I think Ophelia would have liked this burial music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

Do you say that the composer's name is longer and more imposing than his piece? But there is in this music ineffable melancholy; there is the thought of weeping virginity, and as Hamlet said, to bring tears to the eyes of a maiden is more irreparable than it is to marry her.

There is funeral music that is aggressive, irritating, inspiring the hearer to envy the dead body in whose honor it was written and is performed. But this music for Ophelia is so tender and sympathetic. Ophelia was not a long and passionate cantilena. She was a broken tune, a fragment of melody, vague, tear-drenched. In her madness she sang songs—the good Lord only knows where she learned them; but there were roisterers about the court, and possibly Polonius hummed when he was in frolicsome and reminiscent mood.

The learned Bourgault-Ducoudray believes that the spirit of ancient modes are perpetuated in the spontaneous music of nearly all nations. In this little burial piece, the professor is a poet of rare imagination and a master of expression. There is not a note that does not weep for the maiden. You say again, "It is such a little piece; it is so meagre." You would prefer, no doubt, something in tragic vein. First let us hear your definition of tragic. To me this "Burial of Ophelia" was the feature of the evening, and I think Ophelia herself—remember she was musical—would have liked this vaporous dirge.

⁂

The Suite of Saint-Saëns was first played here by the orchestra of Theodore Thomas Dec. 15, 1877. It was played the month before under his direction at Cambridge.

It is one of the least interesting of his works. The prelude is a study in Bach, but the form is more than the spirit; there is not the vitality, there is not the elemental force. The Prelude is clever, but music must be something more than clever. In the Sarabande Saint-Saëns shows us how jolly archaic he can be. The Gavotte is more to the purpose; it is charming, skillfully-constructed music. Delightful, thoroughly delightful, was the trio, and the flutes were played admirably by Mr. Jacquet and Mr. Brooke. The Romance is superficially pretty, and as a whole monotonous in its genteel and insincere compliments. The Final scurries along as though it were glad to bring the end. And yet only in this Final and in the Gavotte do I find Saint-Saëns, the truly talented musician.

⁂

The "Cellini" overture is not such a favorite as the "Carneval Romain," and the popular decision is here just. The latter was first played in Boston Jan. 24, 1857. Do you know when the former was first produced here?

If you say that the former is the more thoroughly developed as to its themes, you must admit that the peculiar, inimitable brilliancy of Berlioz is not displayed in its full splendor. Yet is the instrumentation clean, individual, unerring, so that it is a pleasure to hear the piece, even though you long for its companion.

⁂

The day may come when symphonies will not be given in their appalling length. When that day comes, the first movement of the 8th symphony may well be omitted. And would it not be well to put the overtures of Weber on a shelf for a year or so? It is the old saw about familiarity. Beethoven might be more truly appreciated and loved if he were not turned into the musical staff of life. And the overtures of Weber are tolerably—some one says, intolerably familiar.

⁂

The following changes have been made in the orchestra. Mr. L. Jacquet is first flute, and Mr. A. Brooke is second flute. Mr. A. Weiss is second oboe. Mr. P. Litke is second bassoon. Mr. F. Zahn has moved from the second violins to the violas, and Mr. A. Kuntz has been added to the second violins. Mr. A. Blaess has been added to the 'cellos.

⁂

The program of the concert next Saturday will be as follows: Chabrier, overture to "Gwendoline" (first time); Tschaikowsky, concerto for piano No. 1, B flat minor (Mr. Martinus Sieveking, pianist); Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3; Mozart, Symphony, C major ("Jupiter").

PHILIP HALE.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 18, 1896.

THE FIRST SYMPHONY CONCERT.

It was a pretty thorough awakening which Mr. Paur gave his orchestra and his audience by beginning the sixteenth Symphony concert season with the sumptuous, vehement and brilliant "Benvenuto Cellini" overture of Berlioz. This score calls by turns for almost the extreme capacity in volume and array of the modern orchestra and for the delicacy, daintiness and levity of solo instruments. Its ponderous phrases march with the tread of elephants and its airy flights anticipate the palpitating violin notes of Wagner. It requires no end of enthusiasm and strength and it no less needs virtuosity. Its power, its trickery and its spirit always make it a favorite and it has been frequent in the Music Hall programmes. That Mr. Paur's command of his men had lasted over across their long vacation and separation, their playing proved, for they were vigorous, united and of one mind in obedience to his indications. Something of fierceness might have been added advantageously, but for readiness and accuracy we do not recall so good an initial number.

Next came something new—a short orchestral reflection, as it might almost be termed, written by the French composer Bourgault-Ducoudray, and entitled "The Burial of Ophelia." It is a sadly sweet, short work, with the rhythm and motion of a funeral march and the temperament of a tender poem. It is built up from a single chief thought, which first appears in a group of solo strings, accompanied by the harp. From them it passes in similar harmonies to the wooden wind, the 'cellos reinforcing the support of the harp. Then gradually, as if the mournful cortege were approaching, the song swells out into the entire orchestra, emphasized by the regal blare of trumpets and the resonant clangor of cymbals. The faint sound of the burial bell is heard now at intervals, and soon all dies away into silence by degrees. The orchestra read this little monody gracefully, softly and sympathetically, making of it a whole so interesting that one would willingly have had it continue longer.

Next came a suite for strings and wooden wind—strengthened in the bass movement by trumpets and kettle-drums—by Saint Saens, which was also new. The prelude is a clear and entertaining allegro cast largely into the form of the canon; the second movement is a broad, grave and simple saraband; the third is a gavotte of standard fashion, containing as its trio a delightful little duet for flutes, in which the new flute-player, Mr. Jacquet, was heard with pleasure; the fourth is a romance of attractive development and gentle, attractive character; the finale is a rondo of a liveliness that gave the violinists something to do to demonstrate that their fingers have lost no dexterity during the summer.

Excellent renderings of Beethoven's Eighth Symphony—no better choice could be made for attuning the public ear again to the greatest manner of orchestral music—and of Weber's "Euryanthe" overture followed and ended the programme.

The programme-book bore testimony to the painstaking of Assistant Manager Comee, who therein printed an interesting and valuable analytic resume of all the fifteen years work of the orchestra. Mr. Comee's detailed collection of the programmes, which he gave out last year, is here reduced into some compact fables which will be of no small value when the relative proportions of these many seasons are under discussion.

This will be the second programme: Chabrier, Overture, "Gwendoline," (first time;) Tschaikowsky, Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor; Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3, (first time); Mozart, Symphony in C major ("Jupiter.")

The solo pianist will be Mr, Martinus Siere King.

HOWARD MALCOM TICKNOR.

SUNDAY HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 110.

SUNDAY, OCT. 18, 1896.

FIRST SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Opens the Regular Musical Season in Due Form.

An Enthusiastic Audience Gives Mr. Paur and the Orchestra a Hearty Welcome—The Performance Satisfying from Beginning to End—Models of Interpretation.

The first concert of the 16th season of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Music Hall yesterday evening opened the regular musical season in due form, and from this time forth the concert stream will wander on its course, increasing in volume as it goes, until it swells into its annual deluge, and, subsiding at last, leaves the music-loving who have been tossed on its ocean of tone billows music-drenched and exhausted on the shores of Too-Much-of-a-Good-Thing, against which it has beaten.

The company assembled last night was a large one, and it listened to the following programme:

Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini".........Berlioz
"The Burial of Ophelia"..Bourgault-Ducoudray
Orchestral suite, in D, op. 49......Saint-Saens
Symphony in F, No. 8..............Beethoven
Overture, "Euryanthe"................Weber

Of these the selections by Ducoudray and Saint-Saens were heard at these concerts for the first time, a fact somewhat unaccountable in regard to the latter, for it is nearly 30 years old, and is of a musical worth that entitled it to earlier honors than it received here.

The entrance of Mr. Paur was the signal for a cordial and prolonged demonstration of hearty welcome. The personnel of the orchestra has undergone but little change, the most important being the two new performers at the flute desk. There is a new second oboe, a new second bassoon, and the 'cellos have been augmented from seven to eight.

The performance of the Berlioz overture showed that the orchestra had not grown rusty during its six months' vacation, but was in as perfect form as when it ceased its labors at the end of last season. The wonderful and perhaps unequalled body of strings gave out the same splendid body of tone, and with the same precision, smoothness and brilliancy. This "Cellini" overture is not as masterly and as strongly original a work as is the "Carnaval Romaine" that the composer wrote as an introduction to the second act of the same opera, but it is, nevertheless, strong in dramatic color, and is interesting for the clearness and the richness of the orchestration. Clearness is the special virtue in Berlioz's scoring, and here, as in all his other orchestral writing, there is never a trace of confusion or of cloudiness even in moments of the greatest noise. Every instrument is heard distinctly and produces its own proper effect, a result that it not always reached in the richer and more massive instrumentation of the Wagner school, where the characteristic tone colors of the different instruments are swallowed up in passages of fortissimo and in one bass tuba burial blent.

The Ducoudray selection is the veriest trifle imaginable and brief as the posy in a ring Why Ophelia's burial, or why a burial at all, does not appear. It is dainty and pretty and pervaded by an amiable melancholy. The theme is gracefully melodious, even poetic in character, and the orchestration is charming in its delicate tenderness. It lays mostly among the strings, which are divided into many parts, and at times with lovely effect. It is never elaborate, and though the work is strikingly in the modern style, the simplicity of its treatment is notable. It was sympathetically read and delightfully played. Its composer, though nearly 60 years of age, and an enthusiastic musician greatly honored in France, has not produced much original music, his chief works being a "Stabat Mater," a fantasie in C minor for orchestra, a "satiric" drama entitled "La Conjuration des Fleurs," of which he wrote the book as well as the music, and an opera, which did not meet with very great success. He has devoted his time chiefly to producing the works of the old composers and to the popular songs of all countries. It is scarcely to be presumed that the little work performed last night is a fair sample of his best powers, in view of the esteem in which he is held in musical France. It was, however, well worth the hearing for the grace and refinement that are its distinguishing qualities and as an example of what may be done with an airy nothing by a man of talent.

The Saint-Saens Suite is quite in the manner of the older masters. The prelude displays the composer's skill in contrapuntal writing, the development of its theme in canon—being both ingenious and masterly. The second movement is a Sarabande, the opening theme of which might have been written by Handel himself. It is a charming bit of writing, and in it the new first flute in a brief solo sent forth a smooth, warm and liquid tone of rare beauty, and in the trio of the gavotte the two flutes were heard with an effect that proved beyond all doubt that they were an acquisition of the first order to the orchestra. The fourth movement is a romance, in which the composer deserts the past and returns to his own individuality of style. It has a graceful and placid theme, and is treated and developed elaborately, orchestrally and otherwise. The finale is a bit of Haydn, frolicking in his familiar vein, but in a modern spirit. It is full of life, and the orchestration is fascinating. It is not often that Saint-Saens is as continuously charming as he is in this work, which, by the way, was read and played with exquisite finish.

The most joyous of all of Beethoven's symphonies was read by M. Paür justly and with impressive virility. He permitted the music to say what it had to say without making any attempt to make it utter something irrelevantly new for the were sake of newness. The tempi were not exaggerated, nor was the color intensified. Both interpretation and performance were models of how the symphony may be best given. A word of passing praise must be given M. Porteau for his playing of the difficult passage in the trio of the minuet. It is seldom played smoothly or in tune, but M. Porteau gave it faultlessly and with a delicacy and an easy, effortless fluency that were almost amazing.

The concert was satisfactory from beginning to end, and there was every evidence that the audience so felt regarding it. The programme for the next concert is: Overture, "Gwendoline," Chabrier, first time; concerto for piano, No. 1, Tschaikowsky; rhapsody, o. 3, Dvorak; symphony, "Jupiter," Mozart. Mr. Martinus Sieveking will apear as soloist.

THE BOSTON TIMES

BOSTON, SUNDAY, OCT. 18, 1896.

The first of the Symphony concerts was given last night. Of course all the seats in old Music hall were occupied: they always are at the symphonies, and one could hardly realize that five months had passed since the last of these concerts, for the people were those who always make up the patrons of these affairs, more than half of the audience being composed of the same persons in the same seats as last year, and they came in and settled down to the feast of music which Conductor Paur had planned for them, as usual, just as if there had been no intermission since the last concert. The programme was: Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," op. 23, Hector Belioz; "The Burial of Ophelia," Louis-Albert Bourgault-Ducoudray, (first time in Boston); Orchestral Suite in D major, op. 49, Camille Saint-Saens (first time); Symphony No. 8, in F major, op. 93, Ludwig van Beethoven; Overture to "Euryanthe," Karl Maria von Weber.

The Boston Symphony orchestra, Mr. Emil Paur, conductor, will give ten concerts in Sanders theatre, Cambridge, Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17 and 31, Jan. 14, March 4 and 18, April 8 and 29. Season tickets, with reserved seats, for the series will be on sale at the University Book store next Saturday morning, Oct. 24, at 8 o'clock. A limited number of seats have been reserved for college officers and invited guests.

SECOND SYMPHONY CONCERT.

At the second rehearsal and concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Mr. Martinus Sieveking will be the soloist and the programme will be:

Overture, "Gwendoline"..............Chabrier
(First time.)
Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1, in B flat minor.......................Tschaikowsky
Rhapsody No. 3 ....Dvorak
(First time.)
Symphony in C major ("Jupiter").......Mozart

Boston Transcript

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1896.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its season in New York at the Metropolitan Opera House on Friday evening, Nov. 13—its forty-eighth performance in New York. The remaining four concerts will be given, as usual, on Thursday evenings, on the following dates: Dec. 10, Jan. 21, Feb. 25 and March 25. Of the thirty-seven cities visited by this organization, it is interesting to note that New York ranks fourth, Cambridge, Mass., taking the first place, with its 104 concerts given in Sanders Theatre. Mr. Paur announces among the list of works to be performed, the Beethoven Symphony No. 4, the Schubert Symphony in C major No. 9, the Schumann C major Symphony No. 2 and the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4. The overtures include the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz, the "Oberon" of Weber, the "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn and the "Coriolanus" of Beethoven. Other selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the entr'acte from "Ingwelde," by Schilling, and the symphonic poem, "Wallenstein," by Smetana. One entire programme will be devoted to Wagner selections. The list of soloists includes Moritz Rosenthal, who will play the Chopin E minor concerto at the first concert; Carl Halir, Teresa Carreno, Ben Davies and others.

PUBLIC LEDGER

Philadelphia, Saturday, Oct. 17, 1896.

The sale of season tickets for the Boston Symphony concerts will open, as before announced, next Monday morning.

[illegible] of the Ger-

The Times

PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 18, 1896

cess.

The Boston Symphony Concerts.

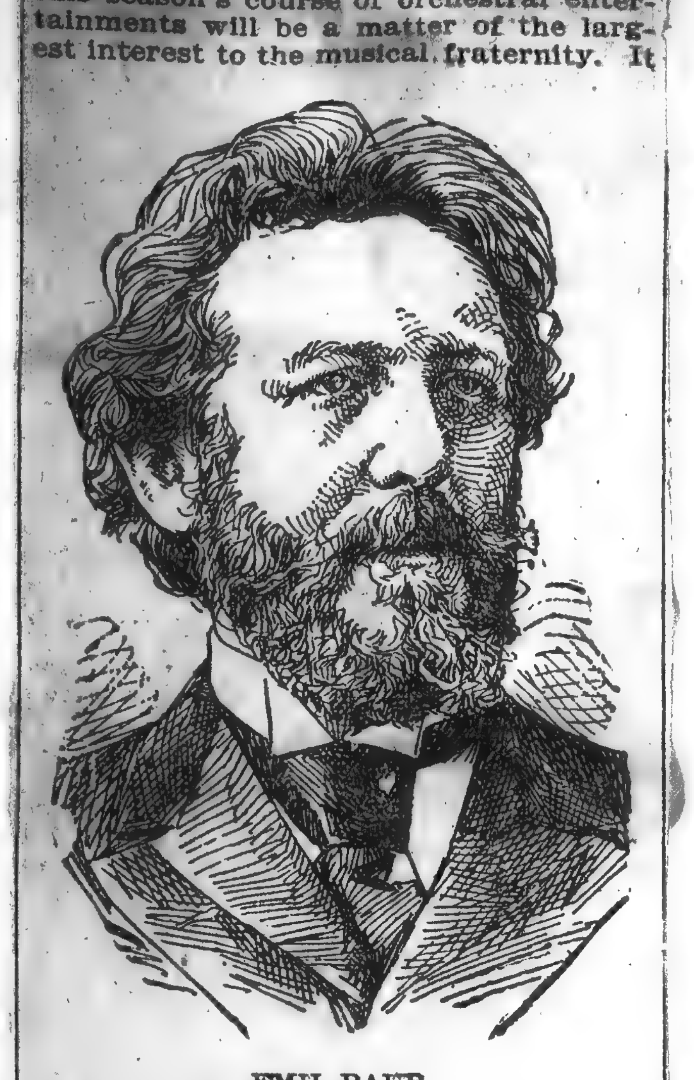
The announcement of the sale of season tickets at Fischer's music store to-morrow morning for the five concerts to be given the coming season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Academy of Music will arouse the usual interest among all lovers of the best in music in this city. For eleven years this organization has visited Philadelphia, maintaining from the date of its first concert, April 10, 1886, the highest standard of performance. The dates announced for the coming series are Tuesday evening, November 10, and Monday evenings, December 7, January 18, February 22 and March 22. The soloists are Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist for the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at his appearances with the orchestra last season; M. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the renowned violin virtuoso from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country. The list of composers whose works are to be performed is sufficiently varied to suit all tastes, including Beethoven, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Mozart, Goldmark, Smetana, Schumann, Berlioz, Liszt and Weber. One entire programme will be devoted to selections from the works of Wagner.

The Telegram

EVENING AND SUNDAY.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

Music lovers will be on the tiptoe of excitement Wednesday evening next when the first concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra series will be given in Infantry hall. The commencement of this season's course of orchestral entertainments will be a matter of the largest interest to the musical fraternity. It is always a delightful treat to be able to listen for an evening to the magnificent playing of this unequalled band of artists, but this year the style and identity of the works to be performed and the artistic character of the soloists who have been announced make the concerts more than usually attractive. The fact that hundreds of people are exceedingly well pleased at the opportunity of patronizing the orchestra is shown in the rush for tickets which took place at the box office last week. While seats went like firecrackers in July and the hall was well sold over before the demand began to abate, a number of excellent seats remain untaken, and those who apply soon for them will find something over which to felicitate themselves on their sagacity.

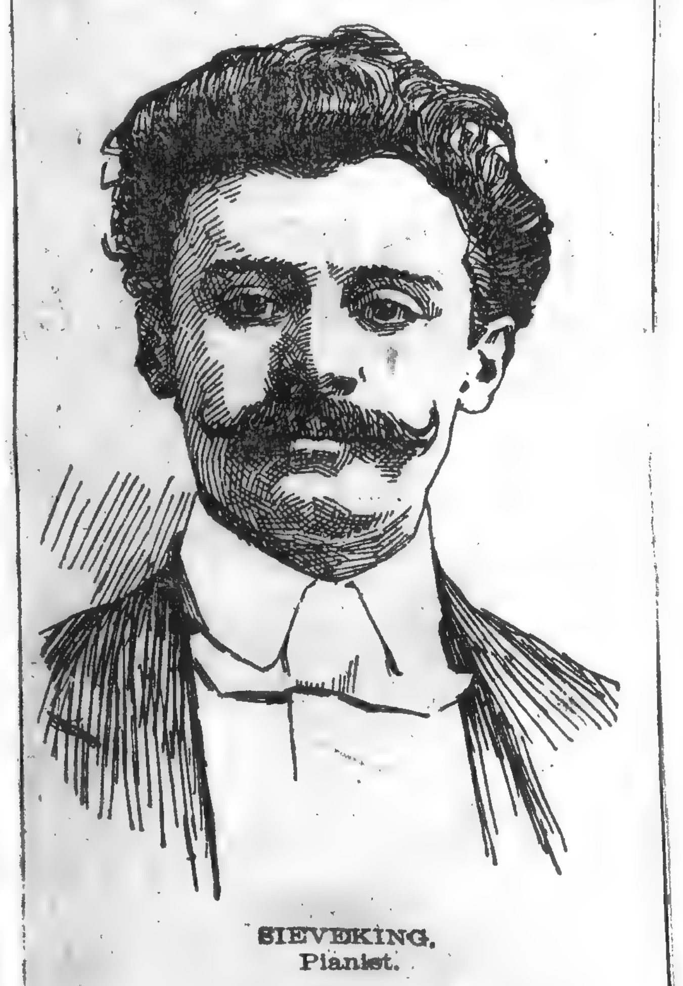


EMIL PAUR,
Conductor.

The program for Wednesday night's concert has been announced as follows:

Overture to "Sakuntala." Op. 13, Karl Goldmark; concerto for pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor, Op. 23, Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky; prelude to act II, "Ingweide" (first time), M. Schillings; symphony in G minor (Koechel, 550,) Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart; I, "Allegro Molto" (G minor), 4-4; II, "Andante" (E-flat major), 6-8; III, "Menuetto; Allegro" (G minor), 3-4; trio (G major), 3-4; IV, finale, "Allegro Assai" (G minor), 4-4; "Invitation to the Dance," Karl Maria Von Weber. Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.

The soloist will be Mr. Martinus Sieveking, the pianist who has heretofore created furore wherever he has appeared. All who attend the event can be guaranteed a treat not to be analyzed in language. Conductor Paur enters upon another season of his leadership with the orchestra. Mr. Paur since his arrival in this country has made a legion of friends. Here in Providence he is especially well liked.



SIEVEKING,
Pianist.

When he first came along with the orchestra, there was a disposition on the part of some of the more churlish to smile at his abilities and his willingness to assume the charge of the orchestra's productions, but time has justified the engagement of so signally efficient a man. He is a thorough genius in more ways than one, and those who really understand his deep musical nature and the accomplishments of which he is capable, know that the orchestra management would have had to search a great distance before his equal would have been found. He is a man of great force, and his personal magnetism is felt the moment he brings his baton into play and begins to exercise his influence. He certainly can be assured of a handsome reception here.

MONDAY, OC[illegible] 19, 1896.

Music Hall: Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A more than usually large audience—that is, for the first night of the season—was present at the first Symphony concert in the Music Hall last Saturday evening; exceedingly few vacant seats in favored parts of the hall giving evidence of season-ticket holders being still out of town. "Full meets" of this sort at the first concert have been growing more and more noticeable of late years, and the times when large batches of empty seats used to show how young the season yet was seem to have gone by.

Some few changes were noticeable in the personnel of the orchestra, but not many. The face most missed was that of Mr. Molé, who is this season to resolve the dissonances of our New England weather into the balmy major triads of the Nice climate. His excellent successor and a new member or two in the bassoons and celli showed about the only faces with which we have yet to become more familiar.

Mr. Paur, as he stepped forward on the platform, was greeted with warm and persistent hand-clapping; and it was some time before he could raise his baton, to turn silence into music. The programme was:

Berlioz: Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," opus 23.
Bourgault-Ducoudray: "L'Enterrement d'Ophélie."
(First time in Boston.)
Saint-Saëns: Orchestral Suite in D major, opus 49.
(First time.)
Beethoven: Symphony No. 8, in F major, opus 93.
Weber: Overture to "Euryanthe."

After the music-free summer months—those months which begin so welcomely as a long-wished-for immunity from musical impressions, and end as a veritable music-famine—how good it was to hear that first attack of the full orchestra upon the brilliant opening measures of the "Cellini" overture! It was worth all the musical dieting, fasting, starving, to get the full freshness of that reviving touch. Berlioz was right enough, when he said that the delights of music were not to be indulged in too gluttonously; the taste for music needs keenness of appetite to make its satisfaction entirely thrilling. And appetite is better whetted by abstemiousness than by stimulants. Perhaps the "Cellini" overture was somewhat needlessly peppery and high-seasoned a dish for a first course after the summer's dieting; but it has genuine solid stuff in it, and is not all seasoning. There was much that was fine in the performance, though we have heard the overture, upon the whole, better played by our orchestra; some phrases went a little over-timidly, showing more of carefulness than of spontaneous vigor in the playing. The men will have to touch elbows a little longer before they can line up to a bold and victorious charge upon Berlioz's rhythmic difficulties and carry them by assault.

On the other hand, the playing of Bourgault-Ducoudray's new "Enterrement d'Ophélie" was exquisitely perfect in every respect. To be sure, the piece presents no difficulties to the performers; but beyond perfection no orchestra can go. The composition in itself is a very flaccid bit of cheap sentimentality, thoroughly commonplace in feeling and expression; but it is exquisitely, wonderfully scored for orchestra, and its coloring is a constant seduction to the ear—luring it on to sensuous delights that almost (but never quite) silence its craving for something more than mere lusciousness. Yet it should be said that, poor and weakly as Bourgault-Ducoudray's feeling for anything but color shows itself to be in this little work, this feeling of his for orchestral color is to be recognized as unspeakably fine. We know nothing comparable to it in any of the famous German instrumental colorists since Wagner; his coloring is not only rich, warm, sensuous, but, even in the most glowing passages for full orchestra, there is a certain refinement and delicacy in it that keeps it from being cloying. It is never in the least vulgar.

Saint-Saëns's suite is an excellently written piece of work—and not much more. It was written at a period of the composer's life that would have led one to expect something more of spontaneous vitality of invention from him. But, with all its Gallic cleverness, it is a pretty arid thing. There is a merely academic flavor to the contrapuntal writing, with its frequent bits of canon, that recalls nothing of the real spirit of the great older contrapuntists from whom Saint-Saëns has plainly sought to draw inspiration. No known musical form can be made so insufferable as the canon! With Bach, even with Schumann, that loving following of the "antecedent" by the "consequent" often seems the most delightful of all musical sports; but with many later writers, notably here with Saint-Saëns, one feels the consequent to be too like a police detective, "shadowing" the antecedent in a manner not wholly agreeable to the latter. Still, with all its academic dryness, this suite is enlivened at moments with unmistakable touches of cleverness; the orchestral coloring is both appropriate and beautiful.

But Beethoven's eighth symphony seemed to blow all that came before it into sheer nothingness! How that opening theme sparkles and scintillates! What a putting of much matter into a nutshell it is! "A now obsolete sort of melodic invention," says one; "Yes, obsolete as a lost art," says another. But here again we were brought face to face with our pet abomination: the modern "slow Allegro." We hear that Weingartner has duly thundered against this new ravager of the classic repertory in his recent pamphlet "Ueber das Dirigiren"; this news is enough in itself to make us want to buy the book. Here is the point on which we find ourselves most hopelessly at odds with Mr. Paur; "rhythmic elasticity" and "modifications of the tempo" are as nothing compared to this terrible "slow Allegro." Was it Brahms's fondness for the "Allegro moderato"—the first movements of his second and fourth symphonies are marked "Allegro non troppo;" that of his first, simply "Allegro;" only that of his third, "Allegro con brio"—that began this tendency? Or what was it? Suffice it to say that it is now the fashion to take Beethoven's Allegros as slow as can possibly be argued into [illegible] give it completely the character of an "Allegro maestoso;" the phrase strides along with pompous magnificence of emphasis, instead of seeming as if it were blown out of a champagne bottle. In the Finale, too, the theme loses all its nimbleness, all its roguish wink, at his moderate tempo. Both first movement and Finale acquire in his hands a certain air of respectability; but pray tell us, when was Beethoven ever respectable? But the winsome Allegretto scherzando went to a charm, and we have never before heard that slight slackening of the tempo in the Trio of the Tempo di Menuetto so skilfully managed. Probably no two conductors quite agree on the proper tempo for this third movement of the eighth symphony; it is a two-horned dilemma. The tempo that gives the first part its due lilt and vivacity makes the second part sound confused and scrambling; the tempo that gives the second part its true character makes the first part sound formal and heavy. And yet the rhythmic character of the whole movement speaks so plainly of the dance that any change of tempo between the two parts seems—from one point of view—well-nigh inconceivable. Mr. Paur takes the dilemma boldly by both horns, and beats a trifle slower for the Trio than for the Menuetto itself. He did the same thing three years ago. We think the value of the device depends wholly upon the way in which it is done. Three years ago, we disliked it thoroughly; last Saturday evening, we found it perfect. As far as the orchestra was concerned, the playing of the symphony was admirable throughout.

Weber's ever-brilliant "Euryanthe" overture went decidedly well. We think it a mistake to play the muted violin episode with all the violins—as was done at this concert; we missed that magical, ghostly tenuity of tone that comes from "8 violini soli e con sordini," beneath which the tremolo of all the violas comes as a sound from this very earth. Neither did we like the extreme slowness with which the second theme was played. But, taken as a whole, the performance was a fine one.

The next programme is: Chabrier, overture to "Gwendoline" (new); Tschaikowsky, pianoforte concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor, opus 23; Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3 (new); Mozart, symphony in C major, "Jupiter." Mr. Martinus Sieveking will be the pianist.

BOSTON HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 111.

MONDAY, OCT. 19, 1896.

What is politics? what is anything? For has not the musical season opened with eclat, and the first Symphony concert brought out all the cream of Boston, just as though everybody was not palpitating with quite another set of emotions? It was a joy to see that big audience Saturday night, for on it appeared to rest a rainbow of peace—or perhaps it was only the women's flowery bonnets and befrilled shoulders that gave this impression; but whatever it was, the whole air of Music Hall was that of satisfaction and content. The season ticket-holders, the casuals, the standees, showed not a trace of anything more ponderous or important on their minds than whether they liked their new places, or if their neighbors were agreeable. For to sit week after week beside the same stranger is a great strain on the cold, have-not-been-introduced Bostonian. Much depends on one's surroundings, whether friend, or snap acquaintance, or unknown but anti-pathetic person in the enjoyment of the classic programmes. But the beginning of each season is always a lottery in regard to neighbors. I must say, however, that the proximity of the habitue—that music-saturated Bostonian who takes the Symphony concerts with a seriousness becoming a religious meeting—is preferable to the charming young girl who has been "invited" by a charming young man, who has hired his seats for that evening only. I have tried both, and been frowned at on the one hand if I expressed rapture at a tuney bit, and scowled at on the other because the charming young girl's giggling made me restless.

It cannot be said of these audiences that they are dull to the eye or that they lack in demonstrativeness. We have greatly changed of late years, and our representative and fashionable gatherings now seem to be as inflammable in the abstract as they were formerly icy in the concrete. There is far more brightness and spontaneity in their recognition of the best in art, and a spirit of expectation animates even the most sophisticated music patron. But it speaks volumes for these concerts that their 16th season finds them so engaging and so delightful. It is a tremendous feather in Boston's cap to have this second-to-none orchestra and to be envied by the rest of the world for its possession is such a comfort!

[illegible]

MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY.

FIRST CONCERT OF THE SEASON A FINE ONE.

Two Novelties Presented by Mr. Paur—The Band in the Finest Condition.

Sixteenth season Boston Symphony Orchestra; first concert. The programme:

Overture, Benvenuto Cellini........Berlioz
Selection from Ophelie........................Bourgault-Ducoudray
(First time.)
Suite op. 49........................Saint-Saens
Overture, Euryanthe..............Weber

The first concert was a brilliant and satisfactory opening of a season that promises much. The audience was large, enthusiastic and warm in its welcome to Conductor Paur as he stepped before his men to again take up the threads of music and weave them into a fabric of enjoyment for the people. That the threads had not become tangled by a summer's disuse was immediately apparent; the orchestra entered upon its work with all the old spirit and brilliancy, while technically it never appeared to better advantage. Mr. Paur himself seems to have a more authoritative beat, and an easier manner of presiding over his forces.

The "Cellini" overture went with immense dash and a beauty of tone that was irresistible. Again one could marvel and rejoice at the perfection of that bank of first violins, perhaps unequalled in the world. Nor was there a single blemish in any portion of the orchestra. Berlioz' instrumentation, complex and precise, was brought out with the utmost clearness, and with a balance of tone that left nothing to be wished for.

The first novelty was Bourgault-Docoudray's descriptive piece, "The Burial of Ophelia." This composer is somewhat unique in that he has won the highest fame as a student and professor of the art of composition, and very little actual favor in the actual practice of that art. A few religious works, and a few miscellaneous pieces and an opera, whose life is already ended, form about all of his achievements. But the "Ophelia" bit, while it scarcely suggests death or the grave, reveals a melodist of much refinement and a composer who handles his orchestration clearly and with a sure knowledge of the effects he wishes to produce. The playing of the piece was delicate and lovely throughout.

Another "first-time" work followed close on the heels of Bourgault-Ducourdray's serene trifle. That a suite by Saint-Saens which has been existence for 27 years should only now make its appearance in a Symphony concert is rather remarkable, especially as the work is well worth hearing. Its old-time flavor is well marked all the way along, except in the somewhat modern "romance," which happens to be the one dull movement of the suite. The last movement, an allegro vivace in the rondo form, is in Saint-Saens' most charming and vivacious style. The new flutists had their first opportunity in the gavotte movement, and their excellent playing of the dainty duet contained therein proved at once that their section of the wood-wind is to be worthy of its surroundings.

The rollicking Eighth Symphony had a clear and sympathetic reading, and every movement was played with consummate skill. Long live this source of pure delight.

A spirited performance of the "Euryanthe" overture closed the concert.

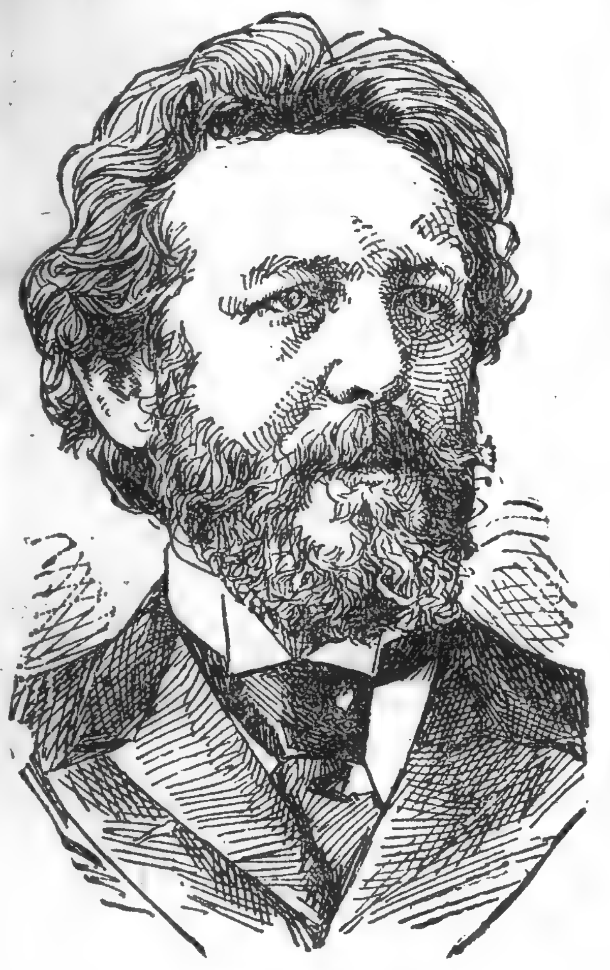
The Press

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

To-morrow morning at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut Street, the sale of season tickets opens for the twelfth season in Philadelphia of the Boston Smyphony Orchestra. Beginning with the first concert by the orchestra in this city, April 10, 1886, fifty-six performances have been given under the leadership of Mr. Gericke, Mr. Nikisch and the present conductor, Mr. Paur. This organization, in its fifteen years of concert giving throughout the country, has found nowhere an audience room more admirably adapted to orchestral performances than the Academy of Music, and Philadelphia enjoys with Brooklyn a reputation of being the only city in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has not been obliged, sometimes each season, to change its auditorium. The dates announced for the coming five concerts are Tuesday evening, November 10, and Monday evenings, December 7, January 18, February 22 and March 22. The soloists are Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist for the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, the pianist; Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the famous violinist from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country.

The Telegram
EVENING AND SUNDAY.
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

Music lovers will be on the tiptoe of excitement Wednesday evening next when the first concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra series will be given in Infantry hall. The commencement of this season's course of orchestral entertainments will be a matter of the largest interest to the musical fraternity. It is always a delightful treat to be able to listen for an evening to the magnificent playing of this unequalled band of artists, but this year the style and identity of the works to be performed and the artistic character of the soloists who have been announced make the concerts more than usually attractive. The fact that hundreds of people are exceedingly well pleased at the opportunity of patronizing the orchestra is shown in the rush for tickets which took place at the box office last week. While seats went like firecrackers in July and the hall was well sold over before the demand began to abate, a number of excellent seats remain untaken, and those who apply soon for them will find something over which to felicitate themselves on their sagacity.

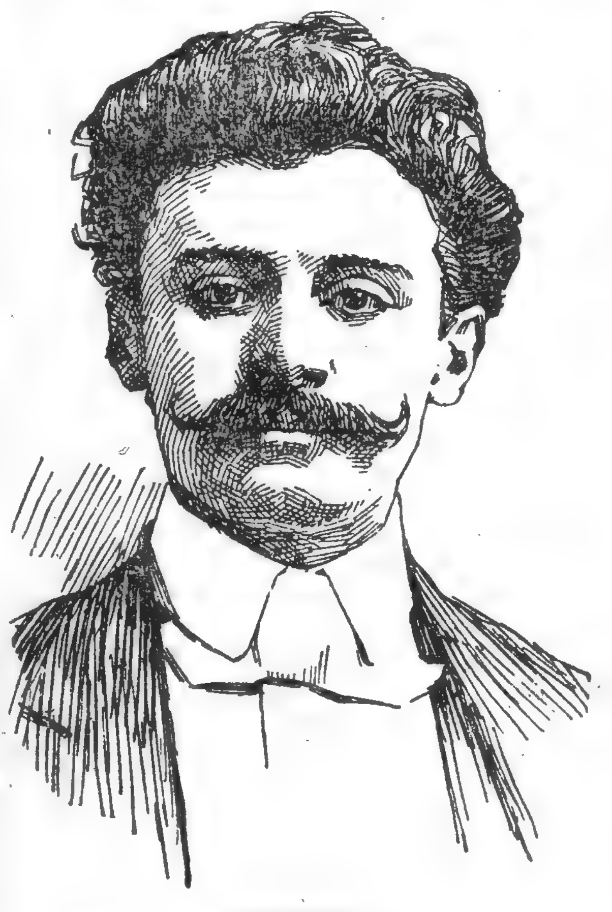


EMIL PAUR,
Conductor.

The program for Wednesday night's concert has been announced as follows:

Overture to "Sakuntala," Op. 13, Karl Goldmark; concerto for pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor, Op. 23, Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky; prelude to act II, "Ingweide" (first time), M. Schillings; symphony in G minor (Koechel, 550,) Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart; I, "Allegro Molto" (G minor), 4-4; II, "Andante" (E-flat major', 6-8; III, "Menuetto; Allegro" (G minor), 3-4; trio (G major), 3-4; IV, finale, "Allegro Assai" (G minor), 4-4; "Invitation to the Dance," Karl Maria Von Weber. Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.

The soloist will be Mr. Martinus Sieveking, the pianist who has heretofore created furore wherever he has appeared. All who attend the event can be guaranteed a treat not to be analyzed in language. Conductor Paur enters upon another season of his leadership with the orchestra. Mr. Paur since his arrival in this country has made a legion of friends. Here in Providence he is especially well liked.



SIEVEKING,
Pianist.

When he first came along with the orchestra, there was a disposition on the part of some of the more churlish to smile at his abilities and his willingness to assume the charge of the orchestra's productions, but time has justified the engagement of so signally efficient a man. He is a thorough genius in more ways than one, and those who really understand his deep musical nature and the accomplishments of which he is capable, know that the orchestra management would have had to search a great distance before his equal would have been found. He is a man of great force, and his personal magnetism is felt the moment he brings his baton into play and begins to exercise his influence. He certainly can be assured of a handsome reception here.

Boston Transcript
MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1896.

Music Hall: Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A more than usually large audience—that is, for the first night of the season—was present at the first Symphony concert in the Music Hall last Saturday evening; exceedingly few vacant seats in favored parts of the hall giving evidence of season-ticket holders being still out of town. "Full meets" of this sort at the first concert have been growing more and more noticeable of late years, and the times when large batches of empty seats used to show how young the season yet was seem to have gone by.

Some few changes were noticeable in the personnel of the orchestra, but not many. The face most missed was that of Mr. Molé, who is this season to resolve the dissonances of our New England weather into the balmy major triads of the Nice climate. His excellent successor and a new member or two in the bassoons and 'celli showed about the only faces with which we have yet to become more familiar.

Mr. Paur, as he stepped forward on the platform, was greeted with warm and persistent hand-clapping; and it was some time before he could raise his baton, to turn silence into music. The programme was:

Berlioz: Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," opus 23.
Bourgault-Ducoudray: "L'Enterrement d'Ophélie."
(First time in Boston.)
Saint-Saëns: Orchestral Suite in D major, opus 49.
(First time.)
Beethoven: Symphony No. 8, in F major, opus 93.
Weber: Overture to "Euryanthe."

After the music-free summer months—those months which begin so welcomely as a long-wished-for immunity from musical impressions, and end as a veritable music-famine—how good it was to hear that first attack of the full orchestra upon the brilliant opening measures of the "Cellini" overture! It was worth all the musical dieting, fasting, starving, to get the full freshness of that reviving touch. Berlioz was right enough, when he said that the delights of music were not to be indulged in too gluttonously; the taste for music needs keenness of appetite to make its satisfaction entirely thrilling. And appetite is better whetted by abstemiousness than by stimulants. Perhaps the "Cellini" overture was somewhat needlessly peppery and high-seasoned a dish for a first course after the summer's dieting; but it has genuine solid stuff in it, and is not all seasoning. There was much that was fine in the performance, though we have heard the overture, upon the whole, better played by our orchestra; some phrases went a little over-timidly, showing more of carefulness than of spontaneous vigor in the playing. The men will have to touch elbows a little longer before they can line up to a bold and victorious charge upon Berlioz's rhythmic difficulties and carry them by assault.

On the other hand, the playing of Bourgault-Ducoudray's new "Enterrement d'Ophélie" was exquisitely perfect in every respect. To be sure, the piece presents no difficulties to the performers; but beyond perfection no orchestra can go. The composition in itself is a very flaccid bit of cheap sentimentality, thoroughly commonplace in feeling and expression; but it is exquisitely, wonderfully scored for orchestra, and its coloring is a constant seduction to the ear—luring it on to sensuous delights that almost (but never quite) silence its craving for something more than mere lusciousness. Yet it should be said that, poor and weakly as Bourgault-Ducoudray's feeling for anything but color shows itself to be in this little work, this feeling of his for orchestral color is to be recognized as unspeakably fine. We know nothing comparable to it in any of the famous German instrumental colorists since Wagner; his coloring is not only rich, warm, sensuous, but, even in the most glowing passages for full orchestra, there is a certain refinement and delicacy in it that keeps it from being cloying. It is never in the least vulgar.

Saint-Saëns's suite is an excellently written piece of work—and not much more. It was written at a period of the composer's life that would have led one to expect something more of spontaneous vitality of invention from him. But, with all its Gallic cleverness, it is a pretty arid thing. There is a merely academic flavor to the contrapuntal writing, with its frequent bits of canon, that recalls nothing of the real spirit of the great older contrapuntists from whom Saint-Saëns has plainly sought to draw inspiration. No known musical form can be made so insufferable as the canon! With Bach, even with Schumann, that loving following of the "antecedent" by the "consequent" often seems the most delightful of all musical sports; but with many later writers, notably here with Saint-Saëns, one feels the consequent to be too like a police detective, "shadowing" the antecedent in a manner not wholly agreeable to the latter. Still, with all its academic dryness, this suite is enlivened at moments with unmistakable touches of cleverness; the orchestral coloring is both appropriate and beautiful.

But Beethoven's eighth symphony seemed to blow all that came before it into sheer nothingness! How that opening theme sparkles and scintillates! What a putting of much matter into a nutshell it is! "A now obsolete sort of melodic invention," says one; "Yes, obsolete as a lost art," says another. But here again we were brought face to face with our pet abomination: the modern "slow Allegro." We hear that Weingartner has duly thundered against this new ravager of the classic repertory in his recent pamphlet "Ueber das Dirigiren"; this news is enough in itself to make us want to buy the book. Here is the point on which we find ourselves most hopelessly at odds with Mr. Paur; "rhythmic elasticity" and "modifications of the tempo" are as nothing compared to this terrible "slow Allegro." Was it Brahms's fondness for the "Allegro moderato"—the first movements of his second and fourth symphonies are marked "Allegro non troppo;" that of his first, simply "Allegro;" only that of his third, "Allegro con brio"—that began this tendency? Or what was it? Suffice it to say that it is now the fashion to take Beethoven's Allegros as slow as can possibly be argued into plausibility. Here is the first movement the "Allegro vivace e con brio" in a way that gives it completely the character of an "Allegro maestoso;" the phrase strides along with pompous magnificence of emphasis, instead of seeming as if it were blown out of a champagne bottle. In the Finale, too, the theme loses all its nimbleness, all its roguish wink, at his moderate tempo. Both first movement and Finale acquire in his hands a certain air of respectability; but pray tell us, when was Beethoven ever respectable? But the winsome Allegretto scherzando went to a charm, and we have never before heard that slight slackening of the tempo in the Trio of the Tempo di Menuetto so skilfully managed. Probably no two conductors quite agree on the proper tempo for this third movement of the eighth symphony; it is a two-horned dilemma. The tempo that gives the first part its due lilt and vivacity makes the second part sound confused and scrambling; the tempo that gives the second part its true character makes the first part sound formal and heavy. And yet the rhythmic character of the whole movement speaks so plainly of the dance that any change of tempo between the two parts seems—from one point of view—well-nigh inconceivable. Mr. Paur takes the dilemma boldly by both horns, and beats a trifle slower for the Trio than for the Menuetto itself. He did the same thing three years ago. We think the value of the device depends wholly upon the way in which it is done. Three years ago, we disliked it thoroughly; last Saturday evening, we found it perfect. As far as the orchestra was concerned, the playing of the symphony was admirable throughout.

Weber's ever-brilliant "Euryanthe" overture went decidedly well. We think it a mistake to play the muted violin episode with all the violins—as was done at this concert; we missed that magical, ghostly tenuity of tone that comes from "8 violini soli e con sordini," beneath which the tremolo of all the violas comes as a sound from this very earth. Neither did we like the extreme slowness with which the second theme was played. But, taken as a whole, the performance was a fine one.

The next programme is: Chabrier, overture to "Gwendoline" (new); Tschaikowsky; pianoforte concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor, opus 23; Dvorak, Rhapsody No. 3 (new); Mozart, symphony in C major, "Jupiter." Mr. Martinus Sieveking will be the pianist.

BOSTON HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 111.
MONDAY, OCT. 19, 1896.

What is politics? what is anything? For has not the musical season opened with eclat, and the first Symphony concert brought out all the cream of Boston, just as though everybody was not palpitating with quite another set of emotions? It was a joy to see that big audience Saturday night, for on it appeared to rest a rainbow of peace—or perhaps it was only the women's flowery bonnets and befrilled shoulders that gave this impression; but whatever it was, the whole air of Music Hall was that of satisfaction and content. The season ticket-holders, the casuals, the standees, showed not a trace of anything more ponderous or important on their minds than whether they liked their new places, or if their neighbors were agreeable. For to sit week after week beside the same stranger is a great strain on the cold, have-not-been-introduced Bostonian. Much depends on one's surroundings, whether friend, or snap acquaintance, or unknown but anti-pathetic person in the enjoyment of the classic programmes. But the beginning of each season is always a lottery in regard to neighbors. I must say, however, that the proximity of the habitue—that music-saturated Bostonian who takes the Symphony concerts with a seriousness becoming a religious meeting—is preferable to the charming young girl who has been "invited" by a charming young man, who has hired his seats for that evening only. I have tried both, and been frowned at on the one hand if I expressed rapture at a tuney bit, and scowled at on the other because the charming young girl's giggling made me restless.

It cannot be said of these audiences that they are dull to the eye or that they lack in demonstrativeness. We have greatly changed of late years, and our representative and fashionable gatherings now seem to be as inflammable in the abstract as they were formerly icy in the concrete. There is far more brightness and spontaneity in their recognition of the best in art, and a spirit of expectation animates even the most sophisticated music patron. But it speaks volumes for these concerts that their 16th season finds them so engaging and so delightful. It is a tremendous feather in Boston's cap to have this second-to-none orchestra and to be envied by the rest of the world for its possession is such a comfort!

The Boston Traveler.
MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY.

FIRST CONCERT OF THE SEASON A FINE ONE.

Two Novelties Presented by Mr. Paur—The Band in the Finest Condition.

Sixteenth season Boston Symphony Orchestra; first concert. The programme:

Overture, Benvenuto Cellini	Berlioz
Selection from Ophelie (First time.)	Bourgault-Ducoudray
Suite op. 49	Saint-Saens
Overture, Euryanthe	Weber

The first concert was a brilliant and satisfactory opening of a season that promises much. The audience was large, enthusiastic and warm in its welcome to Conductor Paur as he stepped before his men to again take up the threads of music and weave them into a fabric of enjoyment for the people. That the threads had not become tangled by a summer's disuse was immediately apparent; the orchestra entered upon its work with all the old spirit and brilliancy, while technically it never appeared to better advantage. Mr. Paur himself seems to have a more authoritative beat, and an easier manner of presiding over his forces.

The "Cellini" overture went with immense dash and a beauty of tone that was irresistible. Again one could marvel and rejoice at the perfection of that bank of first violins, perhaps unequalled in the world. Nor was there a single blemish in any portion of the orchestra. Berlioz' instrumentation, complex and precise, was brought out with the utmost clearness, and with a balance of tone that left nothing to be wished for.

The first novelty was Bourgault-Docoudray's descriptive piece, "The Burial of Ophelia." This composer is somewhat unique in that he has won the highest fame as a student and professor of the art of composition, and very little actual favor in the actual practice of that art. A few religious works, and a few miscellaneous pieces and an opera, whose life is already ended, form about all of his achievements. But the "Ophelia" bit, while it scarcely suggests death or the grave, reveals a melodist of much refinement and a composer who handles his orchestration clearly and with a sure knowledge of the effects he wishes to produce. The playing of the piece was delicate and lovely throughout.

Another "first-time" work followed close on the heels of Bourgault-Ducourdray's serene trifle. That a suite by Saint-Saens which has been existence for 27 years should only now make its appearance in a Symphony concert is rather remarkable, especially as the work is well worth hearing. Its old-time flavor is well marked all the way along, except in the somewhat modern "romance," which happens to be the one dull movement of the suite. The last movement, an allegro vivace in the rondo form, is in Saint-Saens' most charming and vivacious style. The new flutists had their first opportunity in the gavotte movement, and their excellent playing of the dainty duet contained therein proved at once that their section of the wood-wind is to be worthy of its surroundings.

The rollicking Eighth Symphony had a clear and sympathetic reading, and every movement was played with consummate skill. Long live this source of pure delight.

A spirited performance of the "Euryanthe" overture closed the concert.

The Press
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1896.

To-morrow morning at Fischer's Music Store, 1221 Chestnut Street, the sale of season tickets opens for the twelfth season in Philadelphia of the Boston Smyphony Orchestra. Beginning with the first concert by the orchestra in this city, April 10, 1886, fifty-six performances have been given under the leadership of Mr. Gericke, Mr. Nikisch and the present conductor, Mr. Paur. This organization, in its fifteen years of concert giving throughout the country, has found nowhere an audience room more admirably adapted to orchestral performances than the Academy of Music, and Philadelphia enjoys with Brooklyn a reputation of being the only city in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has not been obliged, sometimes each season, to change its auditorium. The dates announced for the coming five concerts are Tuesday evening, November 10, and Monday evenings, December 7, January 18, February 22 and March 22. The soloists are Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist for the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, the pianist; Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the famous violinist from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country.

REDUCTION

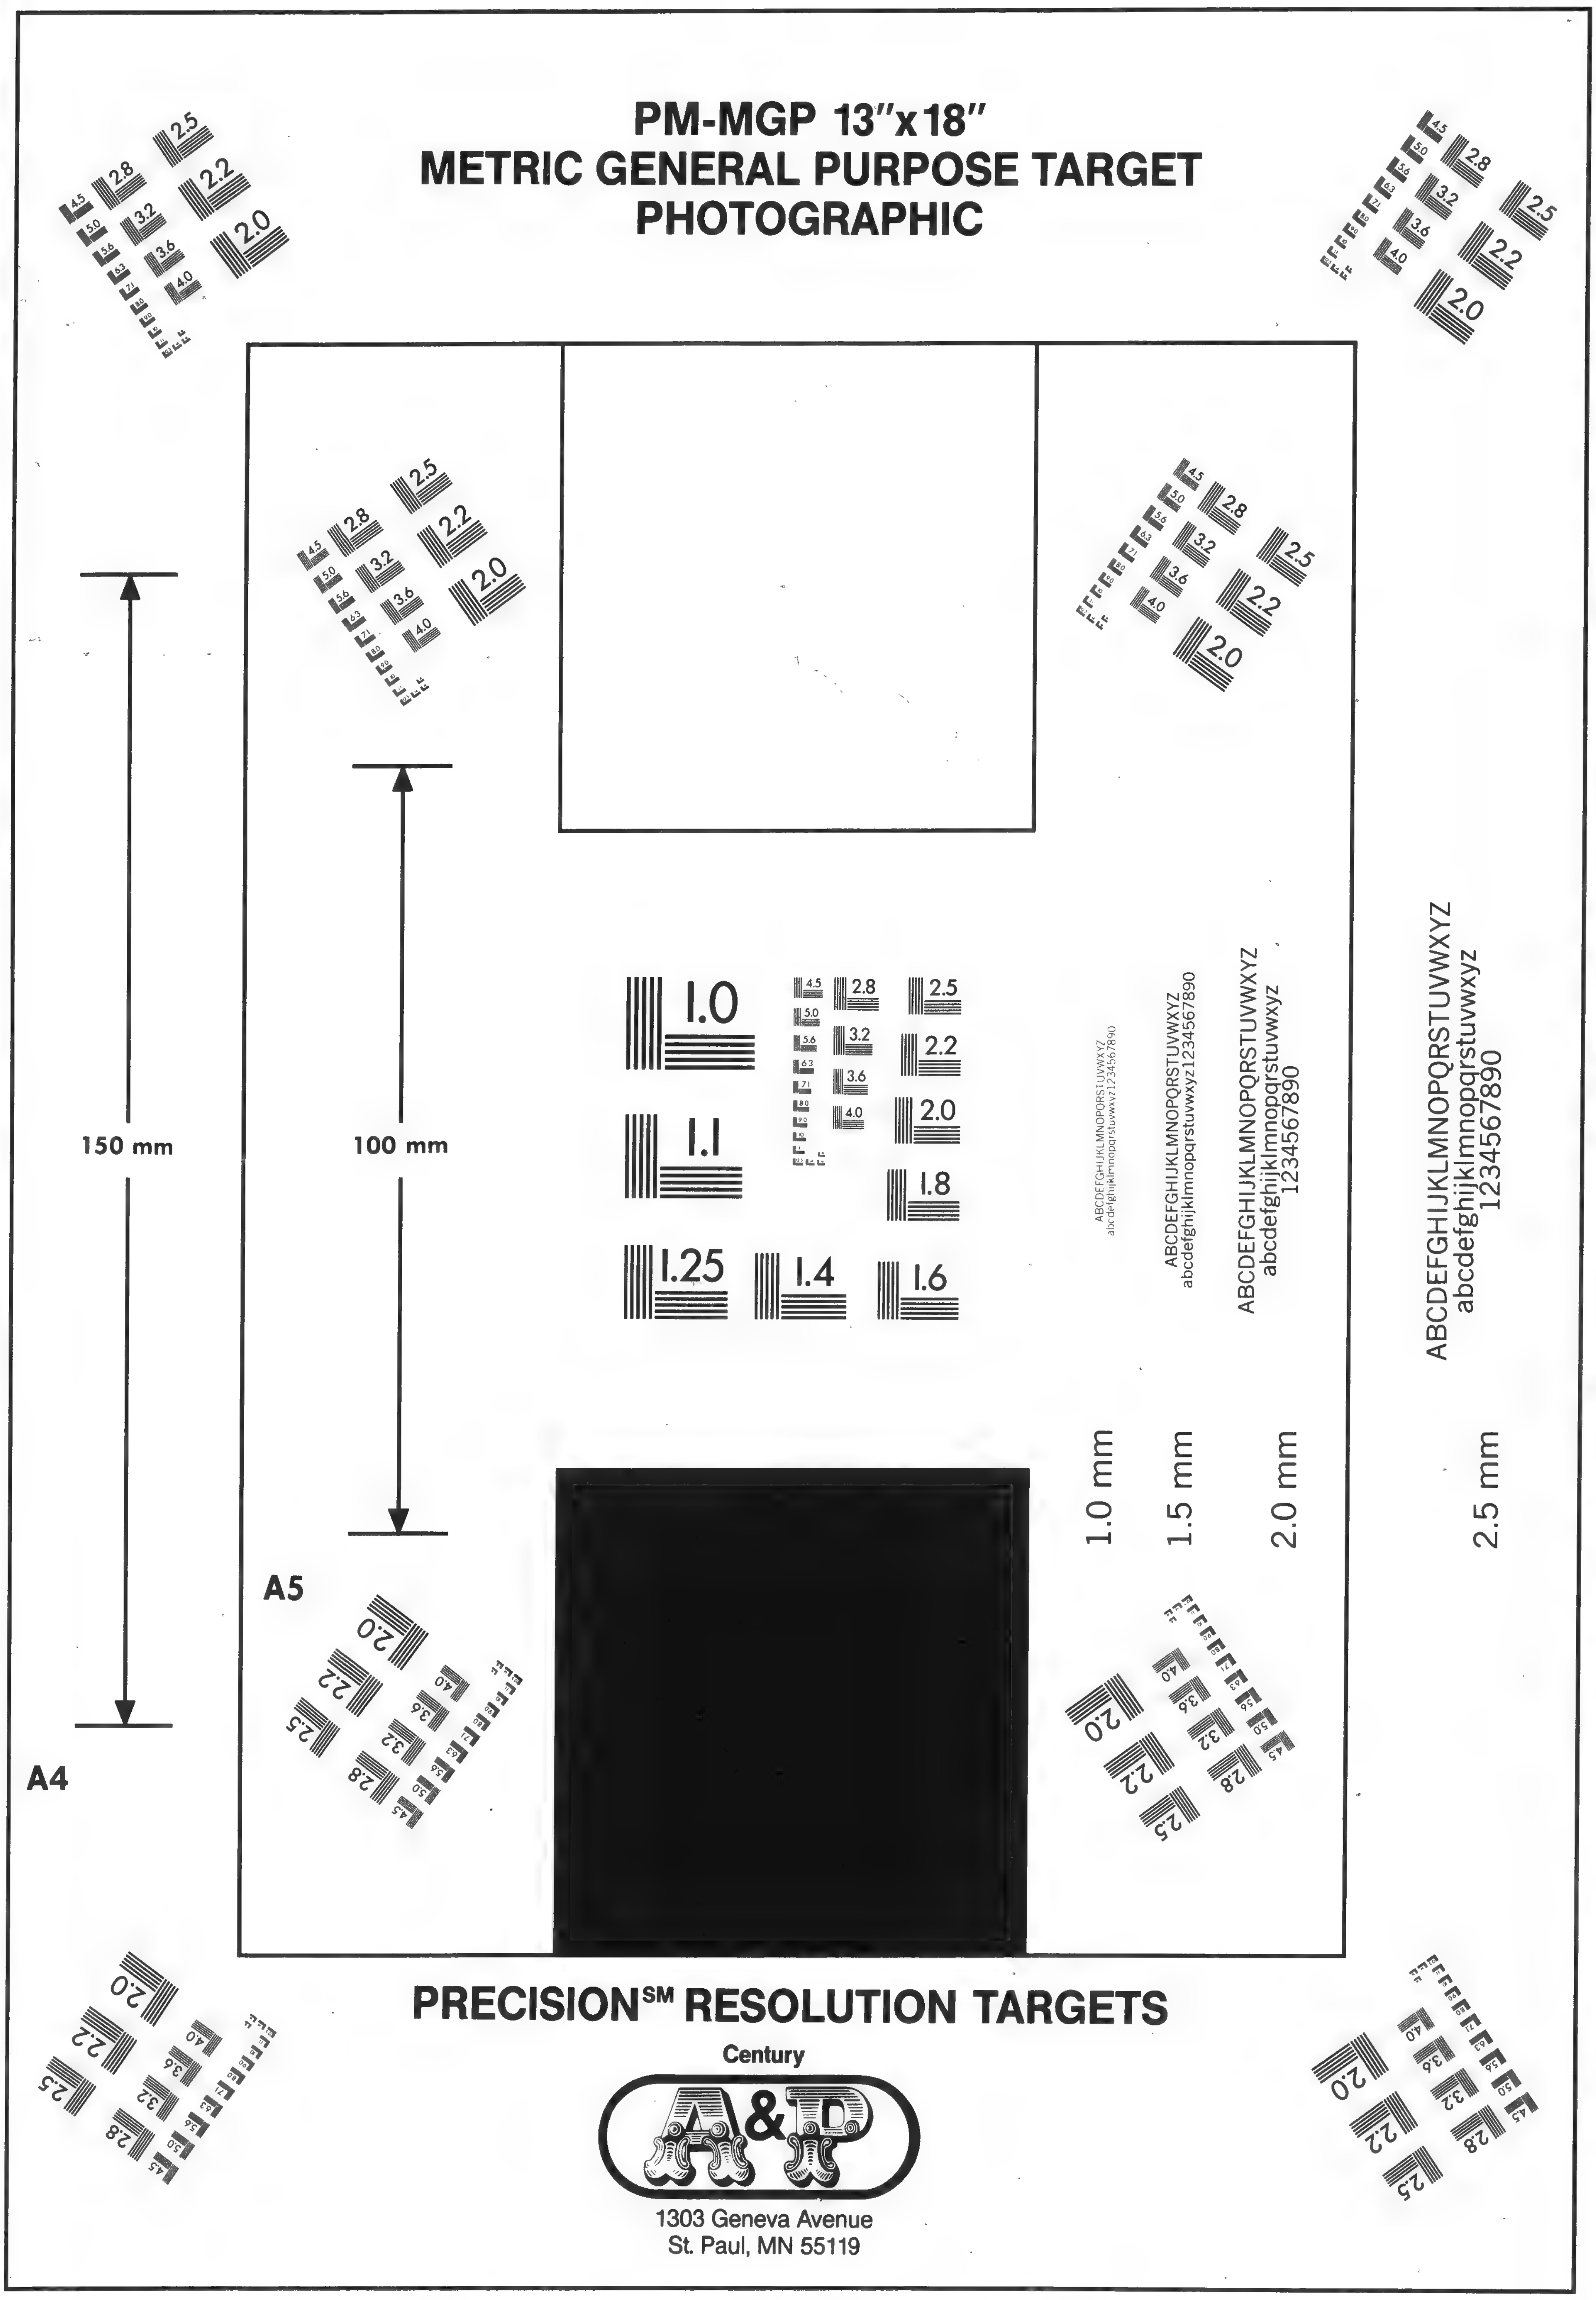
RATIO

14x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890



PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

18, 189
OKLYN DAILY EAGLE—SUNDA

SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

Announcement of the Coming Season's Special Programme.

SOME NOTED SOLOISTS ENGAGED.

Henry E. Krehbiel to Lecture on the Theme of Each Evening's Concert. Desires of Brooklyn's Music Lovers to Be Carefully Considered—Moritz Rosenthal, the Austrian Pianist, Among the Artists.

The first detailed announcement of the Philharmonic concerts in the Academy of Music was sent to thousands of Brooklynites this week. The concerts are given under the joint auspices of the Philharmonic society and the department of music of the Brooklyn Institute, an arrangement which proved very successful when it was tried last year for the first time. There will be five evening concerts and four matinees, the former beginning Monday evening, November 9, and the latter Saturday afternoon, December 12. On the day previous to each of the evening concerts Mr. Henry E. Krehbiel, the musical critic, will give an illustrative lecture on the music to be played, in which he will be assisted by Mr. Henry Holden Huss, the New York pianist.

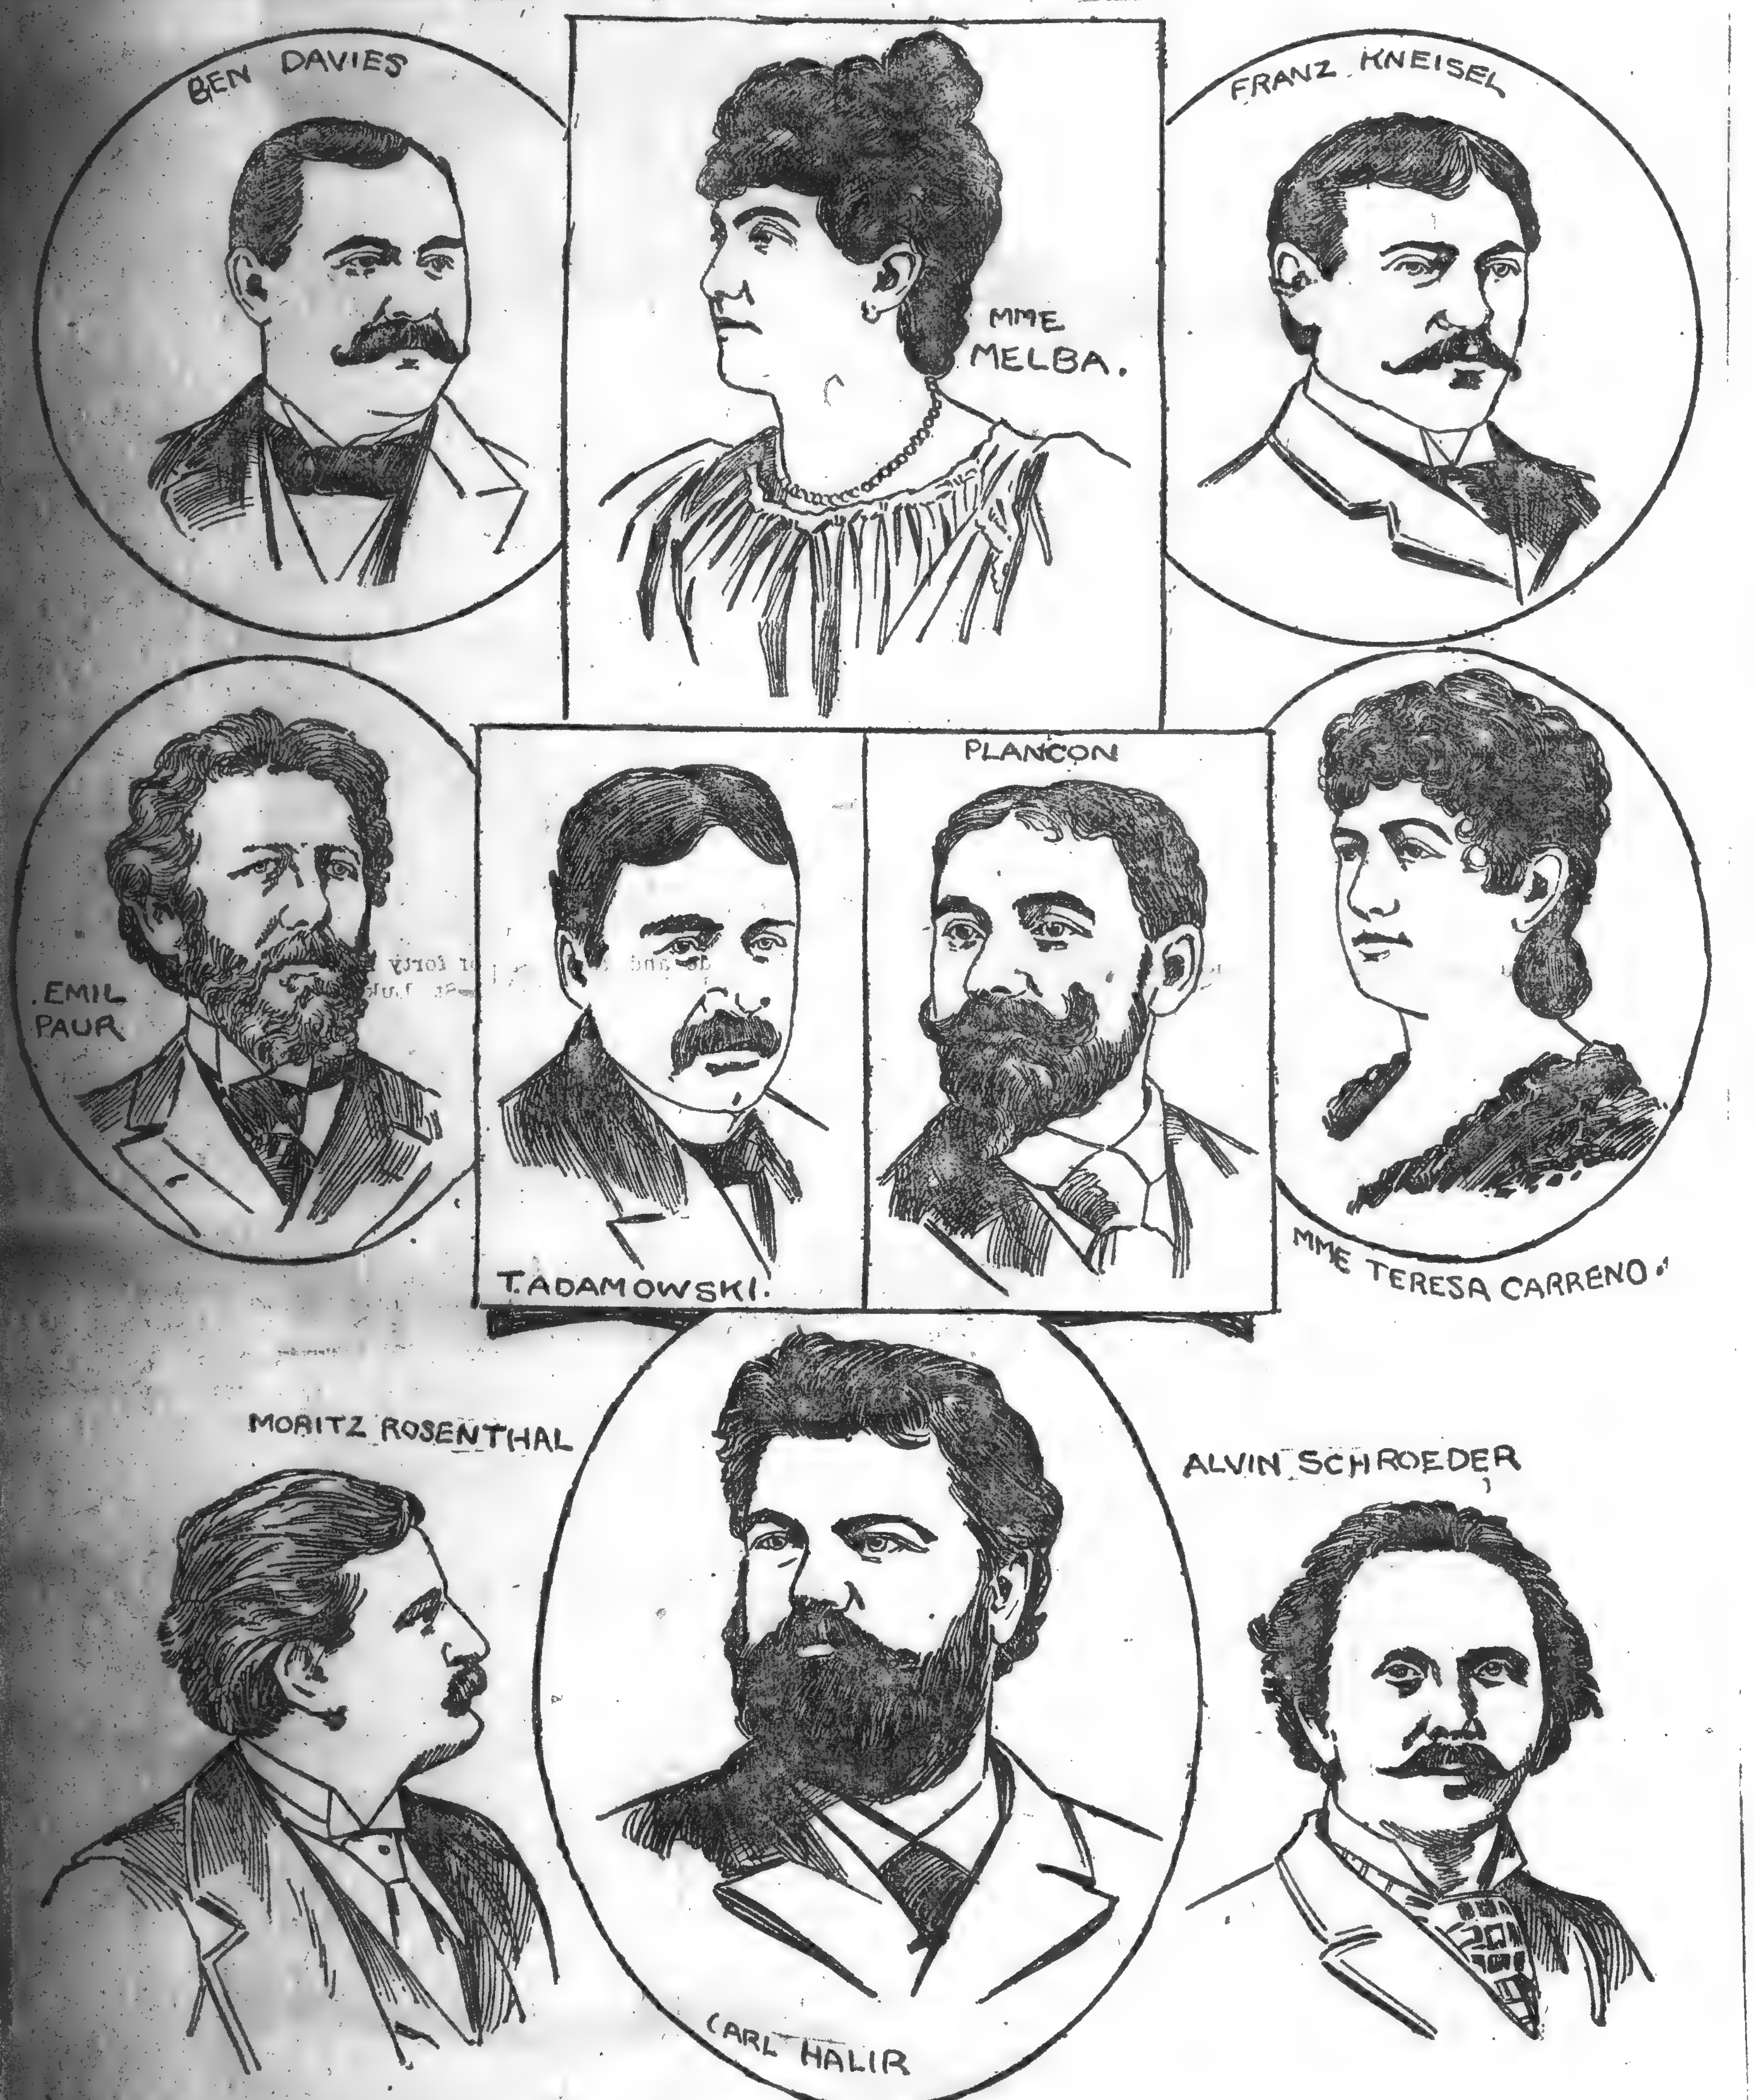
The soloists already engaged include Mme. Melba, soprano; Mr. Ben Davies, tenor; M. Pol Plancon, baritone; Mme. Carreno, piano; Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, piano; Mr. Carl Halir, violin; Messrs. Franz Kneisel and Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello. In addition there will probably appear arranged for the people of the smaller New England cities, including Worcester, Springfield, Hartford and New Haven.

Perhaps the most distinguished soloist who will be heard in the Academy of Music concerts is Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, the Austrian pianist. Rosenthal ranks to-day with Paderewski and Joseffy among the foremost piano virtuosi in the world. He is still a young man, being only 33 or 34 years of age; his features are strong and clear cut and favorably impress the beholder. On the musicianly side Rosenthal is entirely different from Paderewski. He is a player of a more sensational order, though his work is founded on the soundest principles. When he was in America seven years ago his main forte was his dazzling and remarkable technique. Since that time he has broadened and grown and for the last few years the critics have dwelt upon his depth of conception and the poetry he infuses into his interpretation of compositions. Moriz Rosenthal was born in Lemberg, Croatia, and most of his life has been spent in Austria and Germany. In boyhood he showed his musical gifts. When 10 he played in a public concert and when 14 he gave a concert of his own at Vienna, whither his parents had taken him to study under Rafael Joseffy. He was next heard of at Belgrade and Bucharest, where he was appointed court pianist to Carmen Sylva, the beautiful Queen of Roumania. Thence he went to Weimar at the invitation of the composer Liszt and afterward to Paris and St. Petersburg. Rosenthal might now have easily taken up professional work, but his zeal for study led him to enter the state gymnasium at Vienna, where for two years he worked for his master's degree, attending the lectures of Zimmerman, Brentano and Haslick, at the same time pursuing his piano forte studies assiduously. In 1882 he emerged from his retirement and entered upon concert work under flattering auspices. One secret of Rosenthal's success is his immense industry. Even while on concert tours he makes it a rule to practice several hours daily. Visitors are not admitted until 4 P. M., or if the business is imperative they must make themselves heard above the din of the piano, for not a moment's practice must be lost. Like the chess masters one hears of, Rosenthal constantly smokes cigars and cigarettes and sips coffee during these practice hours.

Another European musician who will appear in connection with the Symphony orchestra is Mr. Carl Halir, co-director of the high school of music at Berlin. Halir is a violinist, a sturdy, powerfully built Teuton, whose very frame suggests vast resources of musical capability. He is the intimate friend and co-director in the Berlin high school with Joachim, the great violin composer and virtuoso. Joachim's feeling for his friend is indicated by the fact that he has loaned him his precious red Strad violin for concert work in Halir's American tour. This is the instrument which was presented to Joachim by the city of London on the occasion of his fiftieth jubilee. It derives its name from the circumstance that some of the leather work is finished in that color. Beside Rosenthal and Halir Symphony concert goers will also hear Mme. Carreno, the pianist. Mme. Carreno has been living abroad some years, but she is well known in America, where the greater part of her musical career was passed. She is a Venezuelan by birth and came to this country in her ninth year, subsequently taking up her musical studies in the best schools in the United States. After her musical education was completed Mme. Carreno appeared in the concert companies of Patti, Wilhelmj and Kellogg; she also organized her own company and traveled with it. About five years ago she went to Europe and repeated her American successes in German, Sweden and Norway. As a pianist Mme. Carreno compares favorably with Mlle. Aus der Ohe. It is doubtful if she has any superiors of her own sex on the pianoforte.

The vocal soloists who will appear are too well known on this side of the water to need extended notice. Mme. Melba will be heard in a re-engagement, as also that sonorous Welsh singer, Ben Davies. An addition to the vocal forces will be M. Pol Plancon, baritone of the Metropolitan Operatic company. Other soloists will be Mr. Franz Kneisel, leader of the Kneisel string quartet, and his coadjutors, Mr. Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello.

The dates of the Philharmonic concerts are as follows: Evenings, Monday, November 9, and Fridays, December 11, January 22, February 26 and March 26. Saturday afternoons, December 12, January 23, February 27 and March 27. Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the opening evening concert on November 9, and Mr. Moriz Rosenthal will be the soloist at the opening matinee concert on December 12. The lectures by Mr. Krehbiel will be given on the afternoons preceding the evening concerts. Their object will be to explain the music rendered by the orchestra on the following evening, so that even the musically uneducated can appreciate it. Mr. Krehbiel's word pictures will be helped out by Mr. Henry Holden Huss' illustrations on the pianoforte.



SYMPHONY CONCERT ARTISTS.

Who Will Appear in the Course of the Institute Concert Season.

two prima donna singers of the first rank, making with Melba, Plancon and Ben Davies a force of artists equal to the performance of grand opera. It will thus be seen that the high standard set last year as respects soloists is likely to be surpassed.

Mr. Emil Paur, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has been busy during the summer making up the programmes to be played this season. As the Symphony men play in all the great cities of the East, including Boston, Brooklyn, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, this is considerable of a task. Mr. Paur believes, however, that he has arranged a series of great excellence and one that will appeal to the educated taste of all the centers where his band gives concerts. As in previous years there will be a considerable preponderance of works by German composers, though French, Russian and Slavic works will not be neglected. In a recent interview Mr. Paur spoke of his plans as follows:

"At this time, perhaps more so than at any other during the past fifteen years, there is a growing tendency to go back to the simplicity and naturalness of the old masters and to make ourselves better acquainted with the old works and as a result Mozart, Haydn and others appear on our programmes with more frequency than before. Two novelties will be the symphonic poem, 'Ingwelde' of Schilling and the entr'acte from Bizet's 'Carmen.'" Mr. Paur goes on to say of his Boston prgoramme: "Tschaikowsky, who has met with so signal public favor, will not be forgotten and his second and fourth symphonies, which are included in the programmes, are new here. Bruckner is a renowned Vienna composer who belongs to the extreme modern direction and it appears to me as a duty to bring out one of his works, as hardly anything is known of him in America. Of course, the Brooklyn programme will be largely a selection of the best works performed in the home city of the Symphony band. Among them will be Weber's 'Invitation to the Dance' and the Liszt 'Mephisto Waltz.'"

But it cannot be thought that the desires of the Brooklyn public are not carefully considered in the concerts also. This year the [illegible] board of the department of music has made up a list of works admired here and has sent them on to the Boston Symphony management with the request that they be played in Brooklyn. These works are: Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, Tschaikowsky's No. 6, "Pathetique"; Raff's, "In the Woods"; [illegible] Symphony in D minor, Schubert's unfinished symphony, Mozart's Symphony in G minor and the following overtures: [illegible] "Coriolanus," Berlioz's "Carneval [illegible]" and Schumann's "Genoveva." [illegible] that all these works will be [illegible] during the season here.

[illegible] the Boston Symphony's bookings [illegible] season shows the extent of the [illegible] organization is now doing in the [illegible] musical education. Twenty-four [illegible] announced in Boston, five in [illegible] in New York, nine in Brooklyn [illegible] Philadelphia, several in Baltimore [illegible] theater, Cambridge. Be[illegible] of five concerts has been

---

Philadelphia, October 18, 189

The Coming Boston Symphony Concerts.

The sale of season tickets for the series of five concerts to be given at the Academy of Music monthly from November to March, inclusive, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Emil Paur, will begin at No. 1221 Chestnut street to-morrow morning. The prospectus for these concerts is a particularly attractive one. Among the more important compositions announced for performance are Beethoven's Symphony, No. 2, in D; Mozart's Symphony in G minor; Schubert's Symphony in C major, No. 9, and the "Scotch" Symphony of Mendelssohn. Other selections are the overtures "Carnival Romain," by Berlioz; "Coriolanus," by Beethoven; "Sakuntula," by Goldmark; "Euryanthe," by Weber, and "Manfred" and "Genoveva," by Schumann. The list of soloists contains the names of Melba, Teresa Carreno, Carl Hajir, Pol Plancon and Ben Davis, three vocalists and two instrumentalists. Carl Hajir is a violinist from Berlin, who has not yet been heard here.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH
704 CHESTNUT Street,
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

The sale of tickets for the Boston Symphony concerts is reported to be very large, and instances the admiration our music lovers have for this organization. The first concert is fixed for November 10, and the solo artists are Melba, Carreno, Plancon, Ben Davies, and Carl Halir.

BOSTON SYMPHONY SEASON.

The Celebrated Orchestra Comes with Many New Selections and Soloists.

For eleven years the Boston Symphony Orchestra has visited Washington, and a season without a series of concerts by this now famous organization would be, from a musical standpoint, tame indeed. The musical public of this city recognizes the high standard of these concerts from the beginning, and manifests a pleasant recognition of the fact by showing each season familiar faces in the same seats with a constantly increasing number of new-comers. The twelfth season commences on Thursday evening, November 12, at the new Columbia Theater, the forty-eighth performance in this city. The second concert will be on Tuesday afternoon, December 8, and the remaining three on Tuesday evenings, January 19, February 23, and March 23.

Among the works to be performed this season Conductor Paur announces the following: The Beethoven Symphony No. 4, Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, Mozart G minor Symphony, and the Mendelssohn Symphony in A minor. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Academic" overture of Brahms, the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Melusine" of Mendelssohn, the "Manfred" of Schumann, "Don Giovanni" of Mozart, and the "Oberon" of Weber. Other interesting selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, and the "Invitation to Dance" of Weber. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner.

The list of soloists includes Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who scored a remarkably brilliant success at his appearance with the orchestra in Boston last season; Mr. Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season, and Mme. Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe. Mme. Carreno's playing will be remembered for its extreme brilliancy and warmth, and her recent successes in the European capitals are proof of the claim that her undoubted talents have matured to such an extent that she is to-day one of the leading artists of the world.

It has been decided to divide each programme into two parts by a ten minute intermission, which will undoubtedly prove acceptable to the majority of the patrons.

The sale of season tickets will open at Metzerott's music store, 1110 F street, Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, programme books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The Independent, N. Y. C.

OCT 22 1

1896-'97: The Loca

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's five dates (the concerts being all evening ones, and in the Metropolitan Opera House) are these: November 13th, December 10th, January 21st, February 25th, March 25th, each a Thursday, except the first concert, which occurs on a Friday. In regard to the programs that Mr. Paur will put before us, we have this official list of compositions to be heard from the best orchestra in the world: Symphonies—Beethoven's Fourth, Schumann's Second, Schubert's Ninth, Tschaikovsky's Fourth: Overtures—Goldmark's "Sakuntala," Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave," Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini," Weber's "Oberon." Two new orchestral novelties are Smetana's "Wallenstein" symphonic-poem and an entr'acte from Schilling's opera "Ingwalde." The soloists will include Mme. Teresa Carreño, Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Ben Davies and Mr. Carl Halir.

[33]

OCTOBER 18, 1896.
THE BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE—SUNDAY

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

Announcement of the Coming Season's Special Programme.

SOME NOTED SOLOISTS ENGAGED.

Henry E. Krehbiel to Lecture on the Theme of Each Evening's Concert. Desires of Brooklyn's Music Lovers to Be Carefully Considered—Moritz Rosenthal, the Austrian Pianist, Among the Artists.

The first detailed announcement of the Philharmonic concerts in the Academy of Music was sent to thousands of Brooklynites this week. The concerts are given under the joint auspices of the Philharmonic society and the department of music of the Brooklyn institute, an arrangement which proved very successful when it was tried last year for the first time. There will be five evening concerts and four matinees, the former beginning Monday evening, November 9, and the latter Saturday afternoon, December 12. On the day previous to each of the evening concerts Mr. Henry E. Krehbiel, the musical critic, will give an illustrative lecture on the music to be played, in which he will be assisted by Mr. Henry Holden Huss, the New York pianist.

The soloists already engaged include Mme. Melba, soprano; Mr. Ben Davies, tenor; M. Pol Plancon, baritone; Mme. Carreno, piano; Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, piano; Mr. Carl Halir, violin; Messrs. Franz Kneisel and Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello. In addition there will probably appear two prima donna singers of the first rank, making with Melba, Plancon and Ben Davies a force of artists equal to the performance of grand opera. It will thus be seen that the high standard set last year as respects soloists is likely to be surpassed.

Mr. Emil Paur, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has been busy during the summer making up the programmes to be played this season. As the Symphony men play in all the great cities of the East, including Boston, Brooklyn, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, this is considerable of a task. Mr. Paur believes, however, that he has arranged a series of great excellence and one that will appeal to the educated taste of all the centers where his band gives concerts. As in previous years there will be a considerable preponderance of works by German composers, though French, Russian and Slavic works will not be neglected. In a recent interview Mr. Paur spoke of his plans as follows:

"At this time, perhaps more so than at any other during the past fifteen years, there is a growing tendency to go back to the simplicity and naturalness of the old masters and to make ourselves better acquainted with the old works and as a result Mozart, Haydn and others appear on our programmes with more frequency than before. Two novelties will be the symphonic poem, 'Ingwelde' of Schilling and the entr'acte from Bizet's 'Carmen.'" Mr. Paur goes on to say of his Boston prgoramme: "Tschaikowsky, who has met with so signal public favor, will not be forgotten and his second and fourth symphonies, which are included in the programmes, are new here. Bruckner is a renowned Vienna composer who belongs to the extreme modern direction and it appears to me as a duty to bring out one of his works, as hardly anything is known of him in America. Of course, the Brooklyn programme will be largely a selection of the best works performed in the home city of the Symphony band. Among them will be Weber's 'Invitation to the Dance' and the Liszt 'Mephisto Waltz.'"

But it cannot be thought that the desires of the Brooklyn public are not carefully considered in the concerts also. This year the advisory board of the department of music has made up a list of works admired here and has sent them on to the Boston Symphony management with the request that they be played in Brooklyn. These works are: Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, Tschaikowsky's No. 6, "Pathetique"; Raff's, "In the Woods"; Schumann's Symphony in D minor, Schubert's unfinished symphony, Mozart's Symphony in G minor and the following overtures: Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Berlioz's "Carneval Romain" and Schumann's "Genoveva." It is probable that all these works will be heard during the season here.

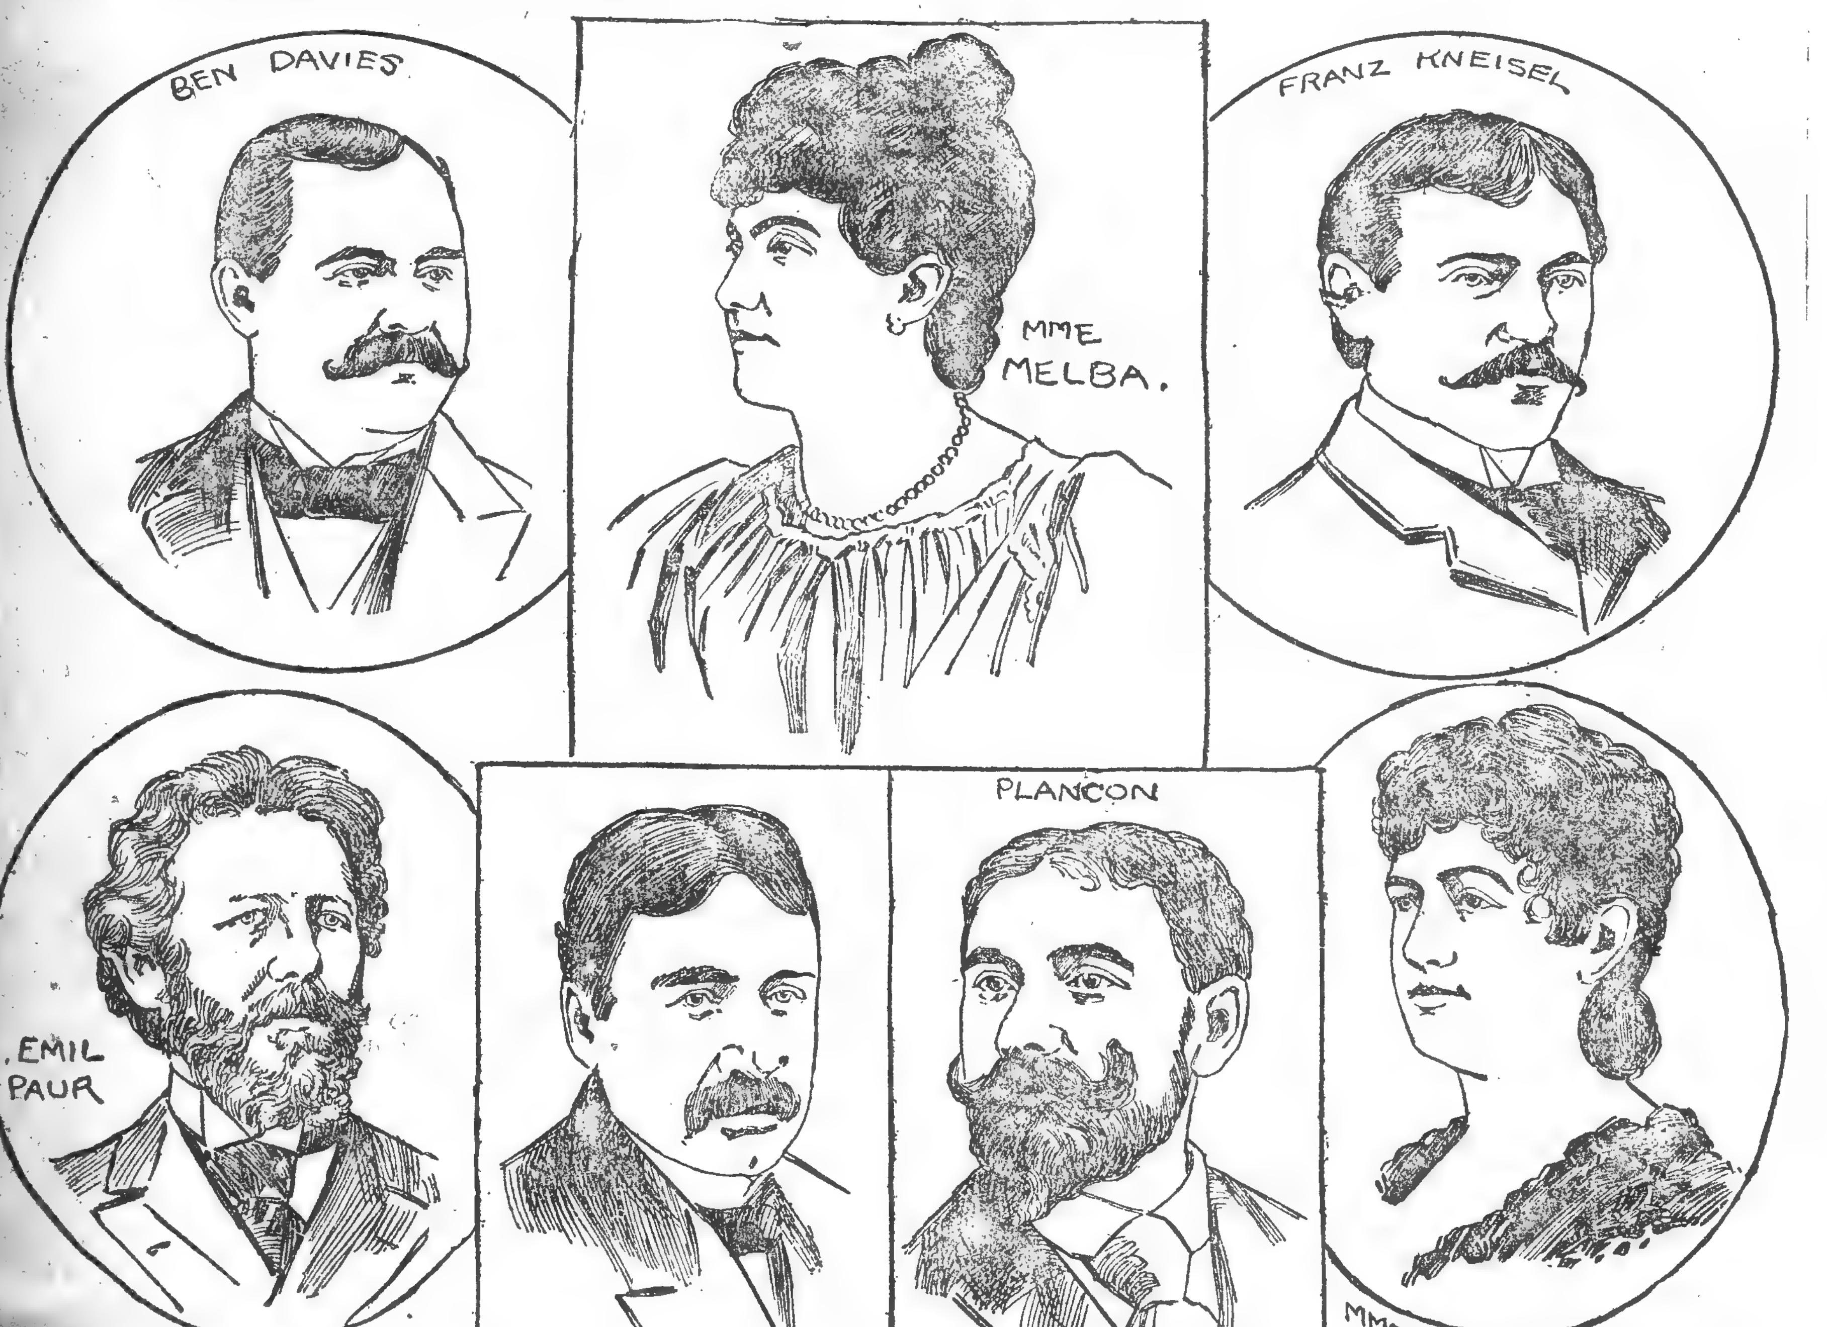
The list of the Boston Symphony's bookings for the coming season shows the extent of the work this organization is now doing in the interests of musical education. Twenty-four concerts are announced in Boston, five in Providence, ten in New York, nine in Brooklyn, ten in Philadelphia, several in Baltimore and six at Sanders' theater, Cambridge. Beside these, a series of five concerts has been arranged for the people of the smaller New England cities, including Worcester, Springfield, Hartford and New Haven.

Perhaps the most distinguished soloist who will be heard in the Academy of Music concerts is Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, the Austrian pianist. Rosenthal ranks to-day with Paderewski and Joseffy among the foremost piano virtuosi in the world. He is still a young man, being only 33 or 34 years of age; his features are strong and clear cut and favorably impress the beholder. On the musicianly side Rosenthal is entirely different from Paderewski. He is a player of a more sensational order, though his work is founded on the soundest principles. When he was in America seven years ago his main forte was his dazzling and remarkable technique. Since that time he has broadened and grown and for the last few years the critics have dwelt upon his depth of conception and the poetry he infuses into his interpretation of compositions. Moriz Rosenthal was born in Lemberg, Croatia, and most of his life has been spent in Austria and Germany. In boyhood he showed his musical gifts. When 10 he played in a public concert and when 14 he gave a concert of his own at Vienna, whither his parents had taken him to study under Rafael Joseffy. He was next heard of at Belgrade and Bucharest, where he was appointed court pianist to Carmen Sylva, the beautiful Queen of Roumania. Thence he went to Weimar at the invitation of the composer Liszt and afterward to Paris and St. Petersburg. Rosenthal might now have easily taken up professional work, but his zeal for study led him to enter the state gymnasium at Vienna, where for two years he worked for his master's degree, attending the lectures of Zimmerman, Brentano and Haslick, at the same time pursuing his piano forte studies assiduously. In 1882 he emerged from his retirement and entered upon concert work under flattering auspices. One secret of Rosenthal's success is his immense industry. Even while on concert tours he makes it a rule to practice several hours daily. Visitors are not admitted until 4 P. M., or if the business is imperative they must make themselves heard above the din of the piano, for not a moment's practice must be lost. Like the chess masters one hears of, Rosenthal constantly smokes cigars and cigarettes and sips coffee during these practice hours.

Another European musician who will appear in connection with the Symphony orchestra is Mr. Carl Halir, co-director of the high school of music at Berlin. Halir is a violinist, a sturdy, powerfully built Teuton, whose very frame suggests vast resources of musical capability. He is the intimate friend and co-director in the Berlin high school with Joachim, the great violin composer and virtuoso. Joachim's feeling for his friend is indicated by the fact that he has loaned him his precious red Strad violin for concert work in Halir's American tour. This is the instrument which was presented to Joachim by the city of London on the occasion of his fiftieth jubilee. It derives its name from the circumstance that some of the leather work is finished in that color. Beside Rosenthal and Halir Symphony concert goers will also hear Mme. Carreno, the pianist. Mme. Carreno has been living abroad some years, but she is well known in America, where the greater part of her musical career was passed. She is a Venezuelan by birth and came to this country in her ninth year, subsequently taking up her musical studies in the best schools in the United States. After her musical education was completed Mme. Carreno appeared in the concert companies of Patti, Wilhelmj and Kellogg; she also organized her own company and traveled with it. About five years ago she went to Europe and repeated her American successes in German. Sweden and Norway. As a pianist Mme. Carreno compares favorably with Mlle. Aus der Ohe. It is doubtful if she has any superiors of her own sex on the pianoforte.

The vocal soloists who will appear are too well known on this side of the water to need extended notice. Mme. Melba will be heard in a re-engagement, as also that sonorous Welsh singer, Ben Davies. An addition to the vocal forces will be M. Pol Plancon, baritone of the Metropolitan Operatic company. Other soloists will be Mr. Franz Kneisel, leader of the Kneisel string quartet, and his coadjutors, Mr. Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello.

The dates of the Philharmonic concerts are as follows: Evenings, Monday, November 9, and Fridays, December 11, January 22, February 26 and March 26. Saturday afternoons, December 12, January 23, February 27 and March 27. Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the opening evening concert on November 9, and Mr. Moriz Rosenthal will be the soloist at the opening matinee concert on December 12. The lectures by Mr. Krehbiel will be given on the afternoons preceding the evening concerts. Their object will be to explain the music rendered by the orchestra on the following evening, so that even the musically uneducated can appreciate it. Mr. Krehbiel's word pictures will be helped out by Mr. Henry Holden Huss' illustrations on the pianoforte.



SYMPHONY CONCERT ARTISTS.
Who Will Appear in the Course of the Institute Concert Season.

THE RECORD
Philadelphia, October 18, 1896.

The Coming Boston Symphony Concerts.

The sale of season tickets for the series of five concerts to be given at the Academy of Music monthly from November to March, inclusive, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Emil Paur, will begin at No. 1221 Chestnut street to-morrow morning. The prospectus for these concerts is a particularly attractive one. Among the more important compositions announced for performance are Beethoven's Symphony, No. 2, in D; Mozart's Symphony in G. minor; Schubert's Symphony in C major, No. 9, and the "Scotch" Symphony of Mendelssohn. Other selections are the overtures "Carnival Romain," by Berlioz; "Coriolanus," by Beethoven; "Sakuntula," by Goldmark; "Euryanthe," by Weber, and "Manfred" and "Genoveva," by Schumann. The list of soloists contains the names of Melba, Teresa Carreno, Carl Hajir, Pol Plancon and Ben Davis, three vocalists and two instrumentalists. Carl Hajir is a violinist from Berlin, who has not yet been heard here.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH
704 CHESTNUT Street,
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

The sale of tickets for the Boston Symphony concerts is reported to be very large, and instances the admiration our music lovers have for this organization. The first concert is fixed for November 10, and the solo artists are Melba, Carreno, Plancon, Ben Davies, and Carl Halir.

WASHINGTON POST.
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 1

BOSTON SYMPHONY SEASON.

The Celebrated Orchestra Comes with Many New Selections and Soloists.

For eleven years the Boston Symphony Orchestra has visited Washington, and a season without a series of concerts by this now famous organization would be, from a musical standpoint, tame indeed. The musical public of this city recognizes the high standard of these concerts from the beginning, and manifests a pleasant recognition of the fact by showing each season familiar faces in the same seats with a constantly increasing number of new-comers. The twelfth season commences on Thursday evening, November 12, at the new Columbia Theater, the forty-eighth performance in this city. The second concert will be on Tuesday afternoon, December 8, and the remaining three on Tuesday evenings, January 19, February 23, and March 23.

Among the works to be performed this season Conductor Paur announces the following: The Beethoven Symphony No. 4, Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, Mozart G minor Symphony, and the Mendelssohn Symphony in A minor. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Academic" overture of Brahms, the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Melusine" of Mendelssohn, the "Manfred" of Schumann, "Don Giovanni" of Mozart, and the "Oberon" of Wéber. Other interesting selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, and the "Invitation to Dance" of Weber. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner.

The list of soloists includes Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who scored a remarkably brilliant success at his appearance with the orchestra in Boston last season; Mr. Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season, and Mme. Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe. Mme. Carreno's playing will be remembered for its extreme brilliancy and warmth, and her recent successes in the European capitals are proof of the claim that her undoubted talents have matured to such an extent that she is to-day one of the leading artists of the world.

It has been decided to divide each programme into two parts by a ten minute intermission, which will undoubtedly prove acceptable to the majority of the patrons.

The sale of season tickets will open at Metzerott's music store, 1110 F street, Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, programme books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The Independent, N. Y. C
OCT 22

M

1896-'97: The Loc

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's five dates (the concerts being all evening ones, and in the Metropolitan Opera House) are these: November 13th, December 10th, January 21st, February 25th, March 25th, each a Thursday, except the first concert, which occurs on a Friday. In regard to the programs that Mr. Paur will put before us, we have this official list of compositions to be heard from the best orchestra in the world: Symphonies—Beethoven's Fourth, Schumann's Second, Schubert's Ninth, Tschaikovsky's Fourth: Overtures—Goldmark's "Sakuntala," Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave," Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini," Weber's "Oberon." Two new orchestral novelties are Smetana's "Wallenstein" symphonic-poem and an entr'acte from Schilling's opera "Ingwalde." The soloists will include Mme. Teresa Carreño, Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Ben Davies and Mr. Carl Halir.

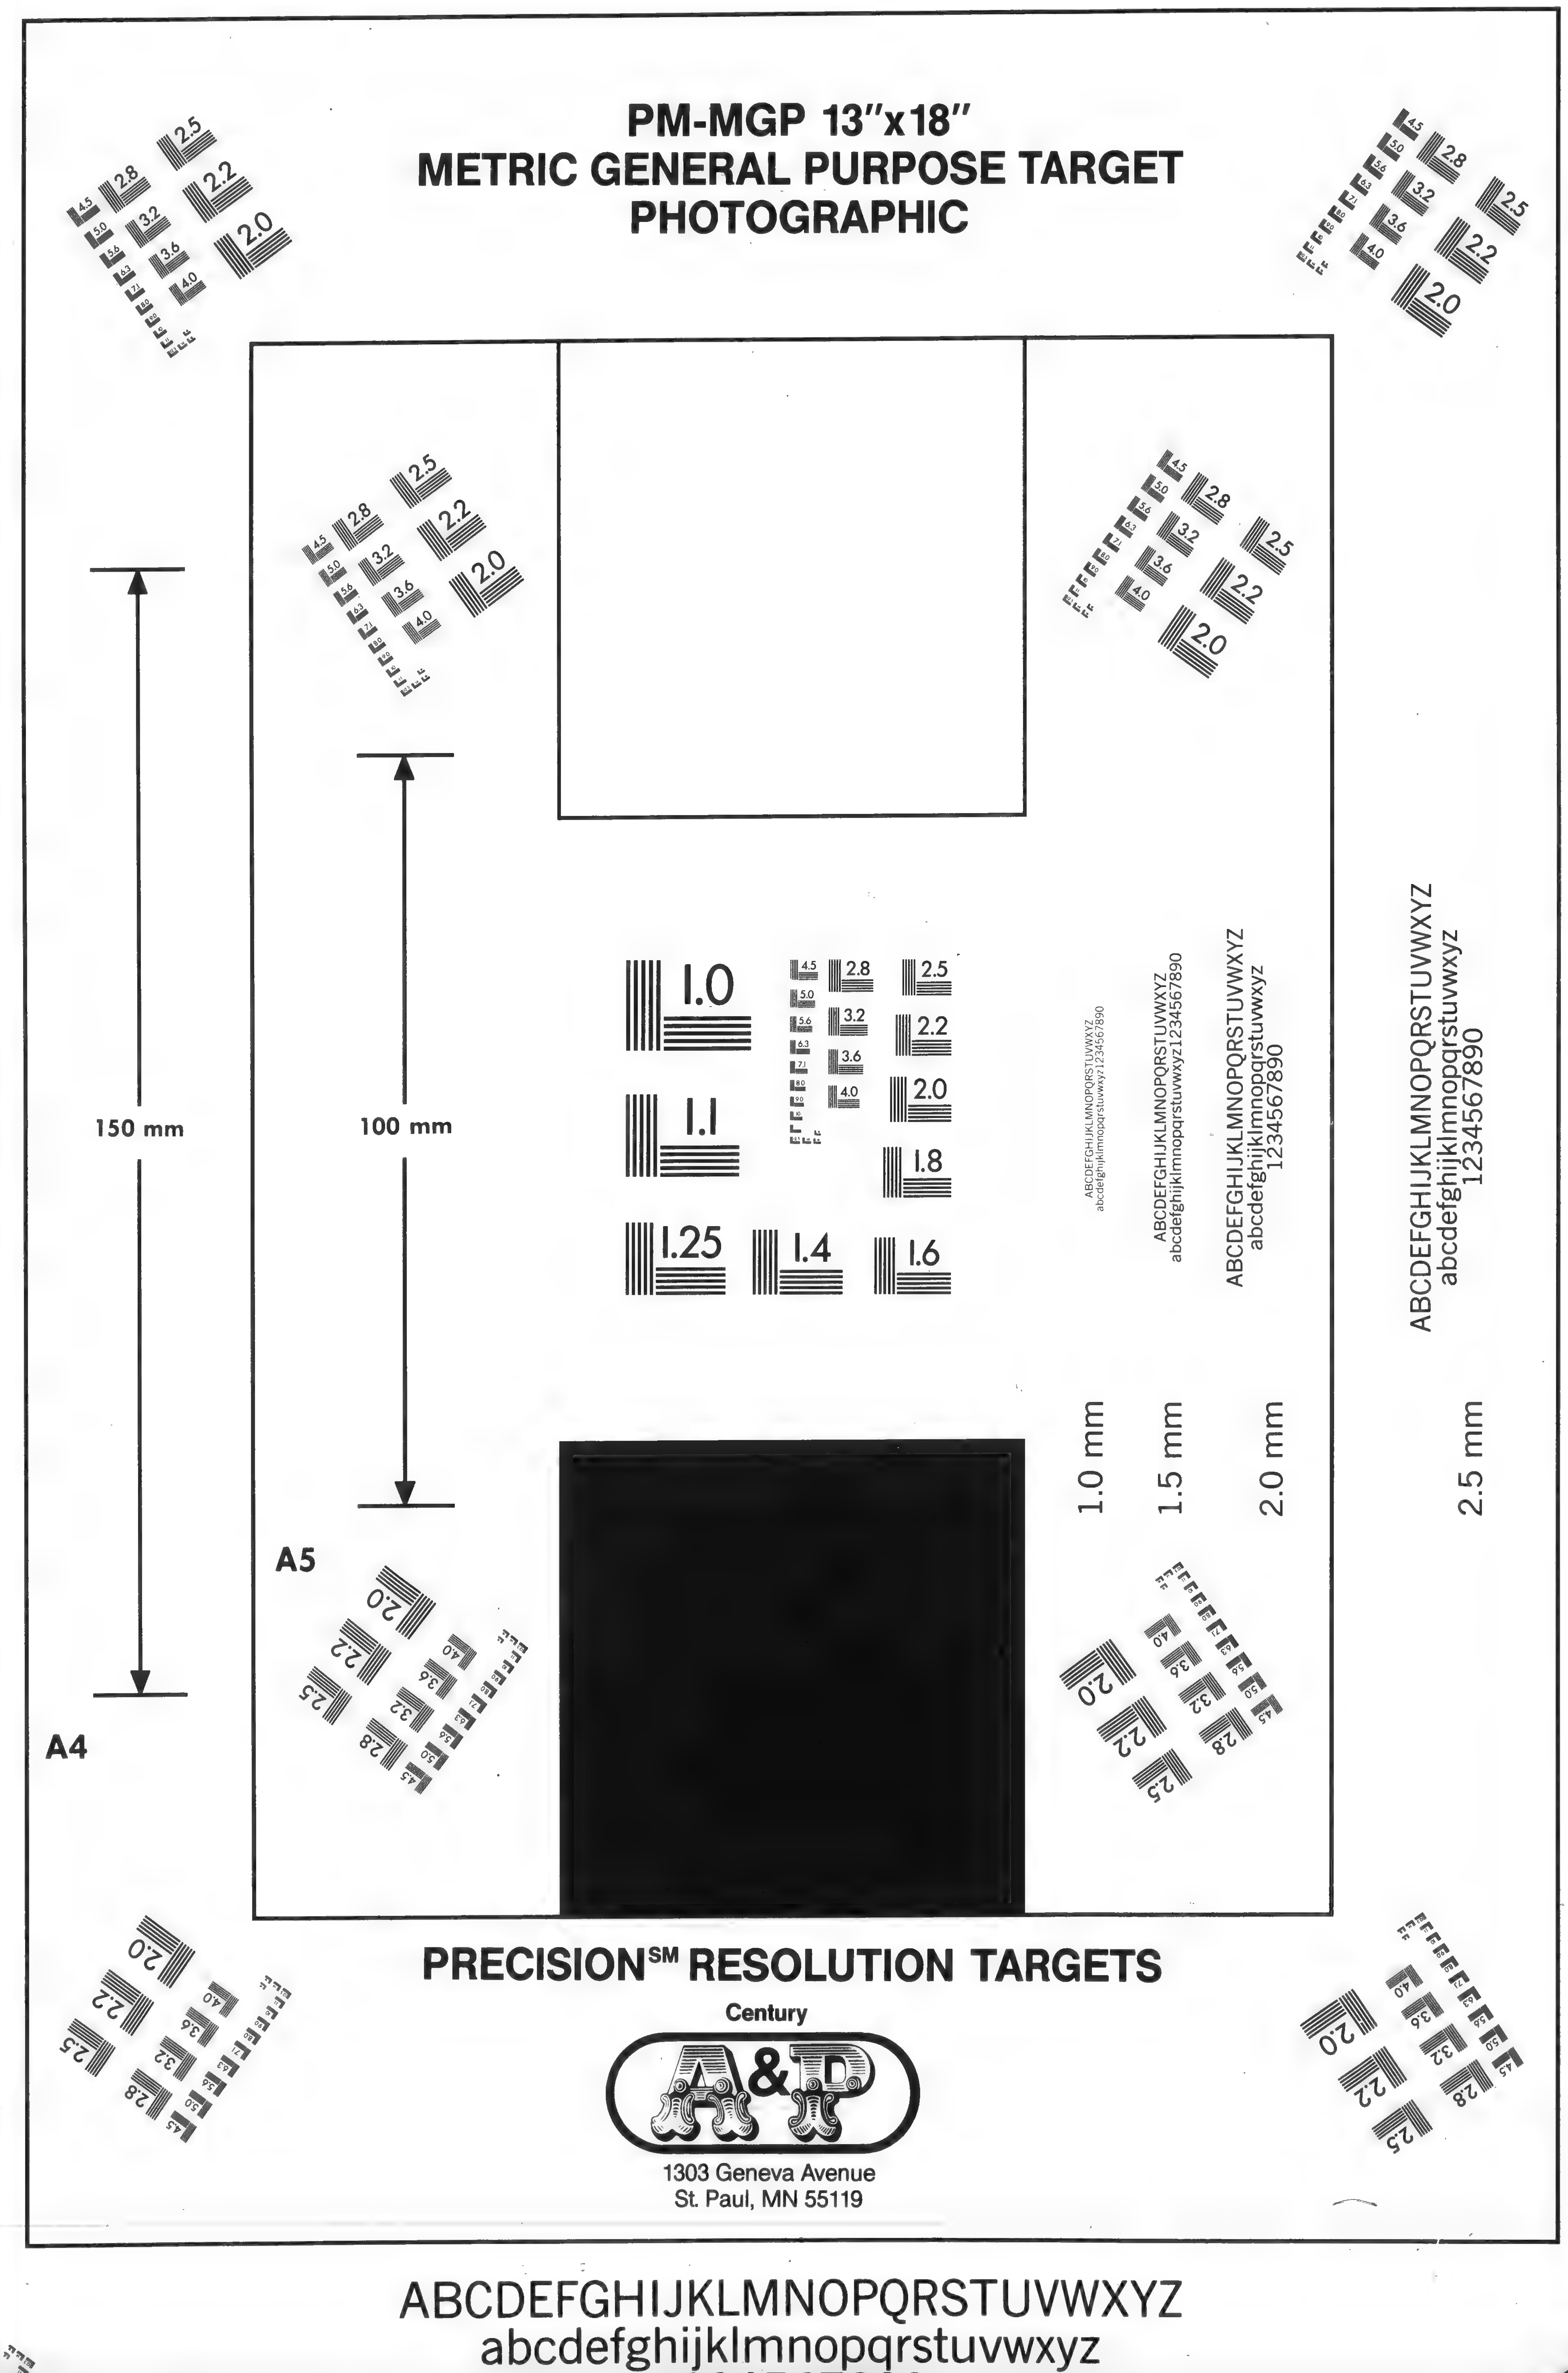
REDUCTION
RATIO
12x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ

18, 18[illegible]
KLYN DAILY [illegible]—SUNDA

[illegible] SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

Announcement of the Coming Season's Special Programme.

SOME NOTED SOLOISTS ENGAGED.

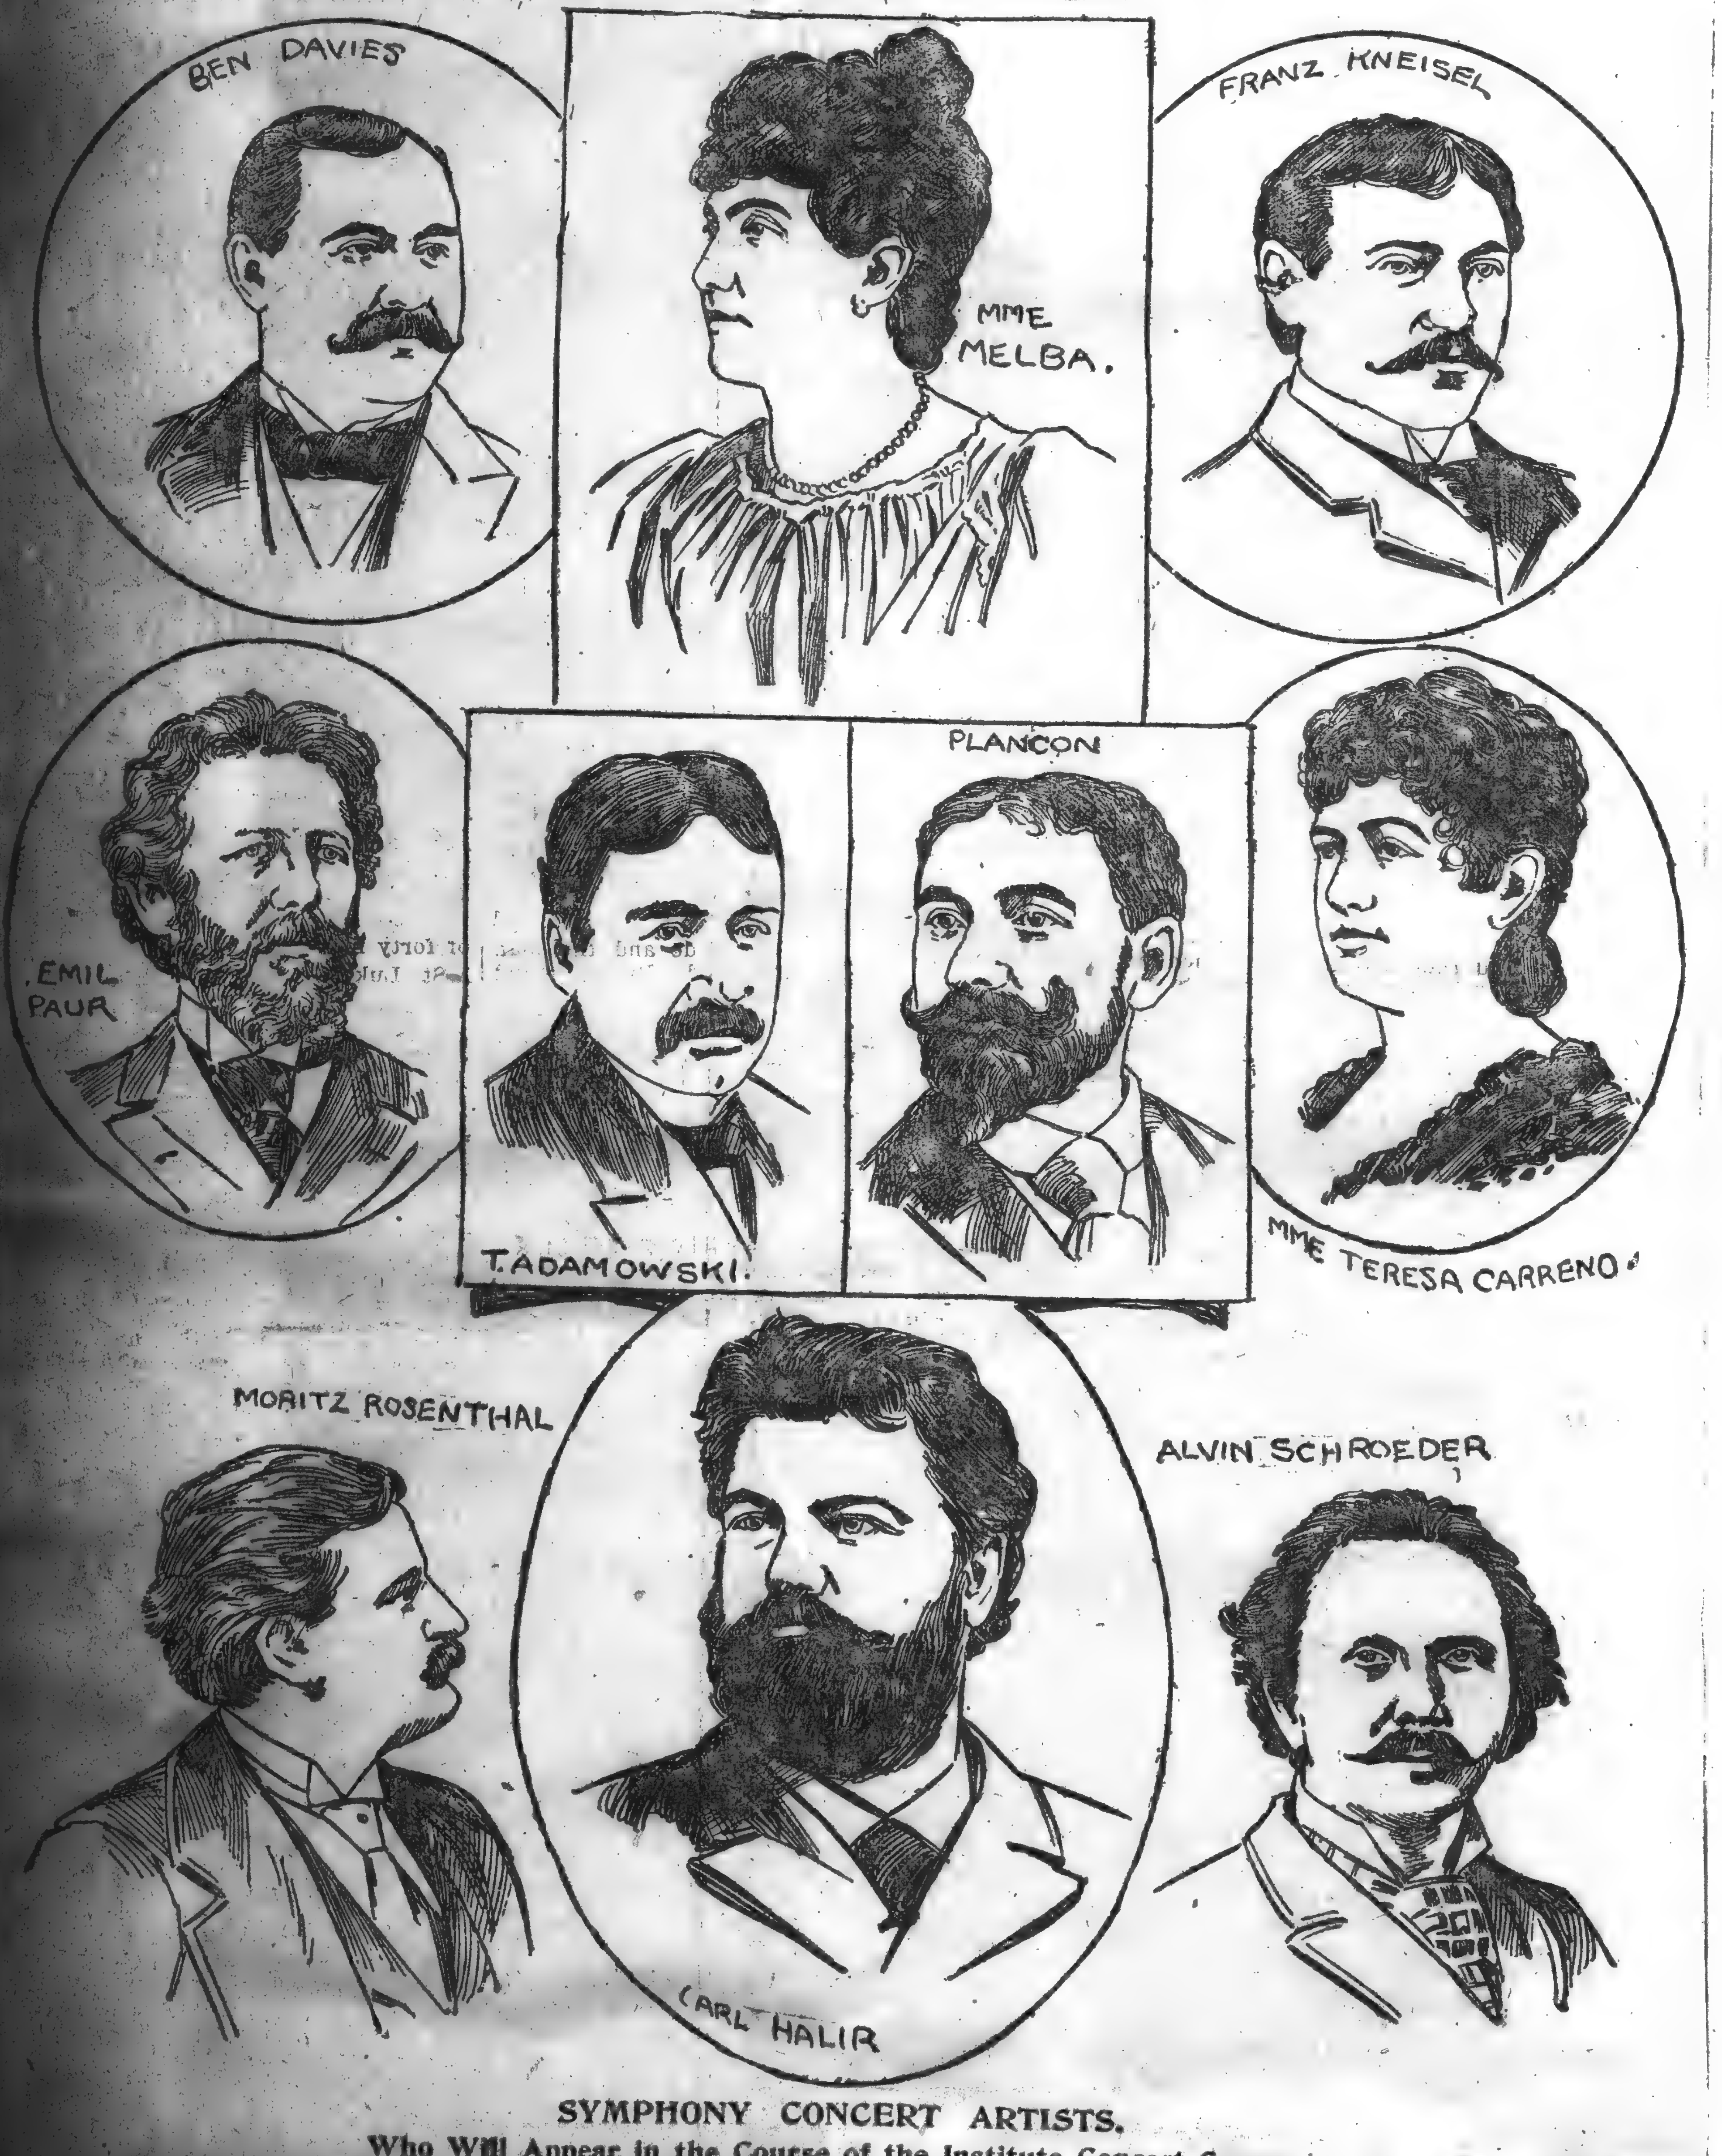
Henry E. Krehbiel to Lecture on the Theme of Each Evening's Concert. Desires of Brooklyn's Music Lovers to Be Carefully Considered—Moritz Rosenthal, the Austrian Pianist, Among the Artists.

The first detailed announcement of the Philharmonic concerts in the Academy of Music was sent to thousands of Brooklynites this week. The concerts are given under the joint auspices of the Philharmonic society and the department of music of the Brooklyn Institute, an arrangement which proved very successful when it was tried last year for the first time. There will be five evening concerts and four matinees, the former beginning Monday evening, November 9, and the latter Saturday afternoon, December 12. On the day previous to each of the evening concerts Mr. Henry E. Krehbiel, the musical critic, will give an illustrative lecture on the music to be played, in which he will be assisted by Mr. Henry Holden Huss, the New York pianist.

The soloists already engaged include Mme. Melba, soprano; Mr. Ben Davies, tenor; M. Pol Plancon, baritone; Mme. Carreno, piano; Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, piano; Mr. Carl Halir, violin; Messrs. Franz Kneisel and Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello. In addition there will probably appear arranged for the people of the smaller New England cities, including Worcester, Springfield, Hartford and New Haven.

Perhaps the most distinguished soloist who will be heard in the Academy of Music concerts is Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, the Austrian pianist. Rosenthal ranks to-day with Paderewski and Joseffy among the foremost piano virtuosi in the world. He is still a young man, being only 33 or 34 years of age; his features are strong and clear cut and favorably impress the beholder. On the musicianly side Rosenthal is entirely different from Paderewski. He is a player of a more sensational order, though his work is founded on the soundest principles. When he was in America seven years ago his main forte was his dazzling and remarkable technique. Since that time he has broadened and grown and for the last few years the critics have dwelt upon his depth of conception and the poetry he infuses into his interpretation of compositions. Moriz Rosenthal was born in Lemberg, Croatia, and most of his life has been spent in Austria and Germany. In boyhood he showed his musical gifts. When 10 he played in a public concert and when 14 he gave a concert of his own at Vienna, whither his parents had taken him to study under Rafael Joseffy. He was next heard of at Belgrade and Bucharest, where he was appointed court pianist to Carmen Sylva, the beautiful Queen of Roumania. Thence he went to Weimar at the invitation of the composer Liszt and afterward to Paris and St. Petersburg. Rosenthal might now have easily taken up professional work, but his zeal for study led him to enter the state gymnasium at Vienna, where for two years he worked for his master's degree, attending the lectures of Zimmerman, Brentano and Haslick, at the same time pursuing his piano forte studies assiduously. In 1882 he emerged from his retirement and entered upon concert work under flattering auspices. One secret of Rosenthal's success is his immense industry. Even while on concert tours he makes it a rule to practice several hours daily. Visitors are not admitted until 4 P. M., or if the business is imperative they must make themselves heard above the din of the piano, for not a moment's practice must be lost. Like the chess masters one hears of, Rosenthal constantly smokes cigars and cigarettes and sips coffee during these practice hours.

Another European musician who will appear



SYMPHONY CONCERT ARTISTS.
Who Will Appear in the Course of the Institute Concert Season.

two prima donna singers of the first rank, making with Melba, Plancon and Ben Davies a force of artists equal to the performance of grand opera. It will thus be seen that the high standard set last year as respects soloists is likely to be surpassed.

Mr. Emil Paur, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has been busy during the summer making up the programmes to be played this season. As the Symphony men [illegible] in all the great cities of the East, including [illegible], Brooklyn, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, this is considerable of a task. Mr. Paur believes, however, that he has arranged a series of great excellence and one that will appeal to the educated taste of all the centers where his band gives concerts. As in previous years there will be a considerable preponderance of works by German composers, though French, Russian and Slavic works will not be neglected. In a recent interview Mr. Paur spoke of his plans as follows:

"At this time, perhaps more so than at any other during the past fifteen years, there is a growing tendency to go back to the simplicity and naturalness of the old masters and to make ourselves better acquainted with the old works and as a result Mozart, [illegible] and others appear on our programmes with more frequency than before. Two novelties will be the symphonic poem, 'Ingwelde' [illegible] Schilling and the entr'acte from Bizet's [illegible]." Mr. Paur goes on to say of his [illegible] programme: "Tschaikowsky, who has [illegible] with so signal public favor, will not be [illegible] and his second and fourth symphonies, which are included in the programme, are new here. Bruckner is a re[illegible] Vienna composer who belongs to the [illegible] modern direction and it appears [illegible] as a duty to bring out one of his [illegible] hardly anything is known of him in [illegible]. Of course, the Brooklyn programme [illegible] a selection of the best works [illegible] in the home city of the Symphony. [illegible] them will be Weber's 'Invitation to [illegible] Dance' and the Liszt 'Mephisto [illegible]

[illegible] be thought that the desires [illegible] public are not carefully con[illegible] This year the [illegible] department of music [illegible]

in connection with the Symphony orchestra is Mr. Carl Halir, co-director of the high school of music at Berlin. Halir is a violinist, a sturdy, powerfully built Teuton, whose very frame suggests vast resources of musical capability. He is the intimate friend and co-director in the Berlin high school with Joachim, the great violin composer and virtuoso. Joachim's feeling for his friend is indicated by the fact that he has loaned him his precious red Strad violin for concert work in Halir's American tour. This is the instrument which was presented to Joachim by the city of London on the occasion of his fiftieth jubilee. It derives its name from the circumstance that some of the leather work is finished in that color. Beside Rosenthal and Halir Symphony concert goers will also hear Mme. Carreno, the pianist. Mme. Carreno has been living abroad some years, but she is well known in America, where the greater part of her musical career was passed. She is a Venezuelan by birth and came to this country in her ninth year, subsequently taking up her musical studies in the best schools in the United States. After her musical education was completed Mme. Carreno appeared in the concert companies of Patti, Wilhelmj and Kellogg; she also organized her own company and traveled with it. About five years ago she went to Europe and repeated her American successes in German. Sweden and Norway. As a pianist Mme. Carreno compares favorably with Mlle. Aus der Ohe. It is doubtful if she has any superiors of her own sex on the pianoforte.

The vocal soloists who will appear are too well known on this side of the water to need extended notice. Mme. Melba will be he[illegible] in a re-engagement, as also that sonoro[illegible] Welsh singer, Ben Davies. An addition to [illegible] vocal forces will be M. Pol Plancon, barito[illegible] of the Metropolitan Operatic company. Other [illegible]loists will be Mr. Franz Kneisel, leader of th[illegible] Kneisel string quartet, and his coadjutors, Mr. Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello.

The dates of the Philharmonic concerts are as follows: Evenings, Monday, November 9, and Fridays, December 11, January 22, February 26 and March 26. Saturday afternoons, December 12, January 23, February 27 and March 27. Mme. Melba will be the solo-

---

HE [illegible]

Philadelphia, October 18, 1896.

The Coming Boston Symphony Concerts.

The sale of season tickets for the series of five concerts to be given at the Academy of Music monthly from November to March, inclusive, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Emil Paur, will begin at No. 1221 Chestnut street to-morrow morning. The prospectus for these concerts is a particularly attractive one. Among the more important compositions announced for performance are Beethoven's Symphony, No. 2, in D; Mozart's Symphony in G. minor; Schubert's Symphony in C major, No. 9, and the "Scotch" Symphony of Mendelssohn. Other selections are the overtures "Carnival Romain," by Berlioz; "Coriolanus," by Beethoven; "Sakuntula," by Goldmark; "Euryanthe," by Weber, and "Manfred" and "Genoveva," by Schumann. The list of soloists contains the names of Melba, Teresa Carreno, Carl Hajir, Pol Plancon and Ben Davis, three vocalists and two instrumentalists. Carl Hajir is a violinist from Berlin, who has not yet been heard here.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH
704 CHESTNUT Street,

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

The sale of tickets for the Boston Symphony concerts is reported to be very large, and instances the admiration our music lovers have for this organization. The first concert is fixed for November 10, and the solo artists are Melba, Carreno, Plancon, Ben Davies, and Carl Halir.

SUNDA[illegible]

BOSTON SYMPHONY SEASON.

The Celebrated Orchestra Comes with Many New Selections and Soloists.

For eleven years the Boston Symphony Orchestra has visited Washington, and a season without a series of concerts by this now famous organization would be, from a musical standpoint, tame indeed. The musical public of this city recognizes the high standard of these concerts from the beginning, and manifests a pleasant recognition of the fact by showing each season familiar faces in the same seats with a constantly increasing number of new-comers. The twelfth season commences on Thursday evening, November 12, at the new Columbia Theater, the forty-eighth performance in this city. The second concert will be on Tuesday afternoon, December 8, and the remaining three on Tuesday evenings, January 19, February 23, and March 23.

Among the works to be performed this season Conductor Paur announces the following: The Beethoven Symphony No. 4, Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, Mozart G minor Symphony, and the Mendelssohn Symphony in A minor. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Academic" overture of Brahms, the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Melusine" of Mendelssohn, the "Manfred" of Schumann, "Don Giovanni" of Mozart, and the "Oberon" of Weber. Other interesting selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, and the "Invitation to Dance" of Weber. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner.

The list of soloists includes Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who scored a remarkably brilliant success at his appearance with the orchestra in Boston last season; Mr. Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season, and Mme. Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe. Mme. Carreno's playing will be remembered for its extreme brilliancy and warmth, and her recent successes in the European capitals are proof of the claim that her undoubted talents have matured to such an extent that she is to-day one of the leading artists of the world.

It has been decided to divide each programme into two parts by a ten minute intermission, which will undoubtedly prove acceptable to the majority of the patrons.

The sale of season tickets will open at Metzerott's music store, 1110 F street, Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, programme books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The Independent, N. Y. C.

M

OCT 22 1[illegible]

1896-'97: The Loca

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's five dates (the concerts being all evening ones, and in the Metropolitan Opera House) are these: November 13th, December 10th, January 21st, February 25th, March 25th, each a Thursday, except the first concert, which occurs on a Friday. In regard to the programs that Mr. Paur will put before us, we have this official list of compositions to be heard from the best orchestra in the world: Symphonies—Beethoven's Fourth, Schumann's Second, Schubert's Ninth, Tschaikovsky's Fourth: Overtures—Goldmark's "Sakuntala," Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave," Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini," Weber's "Oberon." Two new orchestral novelties are Smetana's "Wallenstein" symphonic-poem and an entr'acte from Schilling's opera "Ingwalde." The soloists will include Mme. Teresa Carreño, Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Ben Davies and Mr. Carl Halir.

BER 18, 1896.
HE BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE—SUNDAY

THE SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

Announcement of the Coming Season's Special Programme.

SOME NOTED SOLOISTS ENGAGED.

Henry E. Krehbiel to Lecture on the Theme of Each Evening's Concert. Desires of Brooklyn's Music Lovers to Be Carefully Considered—Moritz Rosenthal, the Austrian Pianist, Among the Artists.

The first detailed announcement of the Philharmonic concerts in the Academy of Music was sent to thousands of Brooklynites this week. The concerts are given under the joint auspices of the Philharmonic society and the department of music of the Brooklyn institute, an arrangement which proved very successful when it was tried last year for the first time. There will be five evening concerts and four matinees, the former beginning Monday evening, November 9, and the latter Saturday afternoon, December 12. On the day previous to each of the evening concerts Mr. Henry E. Krehbiel, the musical critic, will give an illustrative lecture on the music to be played, in which he will be assisted by Mr. Henry Holden Huss, the New York pianist.

The soloists already engaged include Mme. Melba, soprano; Mr. Ben Davies, tenor; M. Pol Plancon, baritone; Mme. Carreno, piano; Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, piano; Mr. Carl Halir, violin; Messrs. Franz Kneisel and Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello. In addition there will probably appear two prima donna singers of the first rank, making with Melba, Plancon and Ben Davies a force of artists equal to the performance of grand opera. It will thus be seen that the high standard set last year as respects soloists is likely to be surpassed.

Mr. Emil Paur, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has been busy during the summer making up the programmes to be played this season. As the Symphony men play in all the great cities of the East, including Boston, Brooklyn, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, this is considerable of a task. Mr. Paur believes, however, that he has arranged a series of great excellence and one that will appeal to the educated taste of all the centers where his band gives concerts. As in previous years there will be a considerable preponderance of works by German composers, though French, Russian and Slavic works will not be neglected. In a recent interview Mr. Paur spoke of his plans as follows:

"At this time, perhaps more so than at any other during the past fifteen years, there is a growing tendency to go back to the simplicity and naturalness of the old masters and to make ourselves better acquainted with the old works and as a result Mozart, Haydn and others appear on our programmes with more frequency than before. Two novelties will be the symphonic poem, 'Ingwelde' of Schilling and the entr'acte from Bizet's 'Carmen.'" Mr. Paur goes on to say of his Boston prgoramme: "Tschaikowsky, who has met with so signal public favor, will not be forgotten and his second and fourth symphonies, which are included in the programmes, are new here. Bruckner is a renowned Vienna composer who belongs to the extreme modern direction and it appears to me as a duty to bring out one of his works, as hardly anything is known of him in America. Of course, the Brooklyn programme will be largely a selection of the best works performed in the home city of the Symphony band. Among them will be Weber's 'Invitation to the Dance' and the Liszt 'Mephisto Waltz.'"

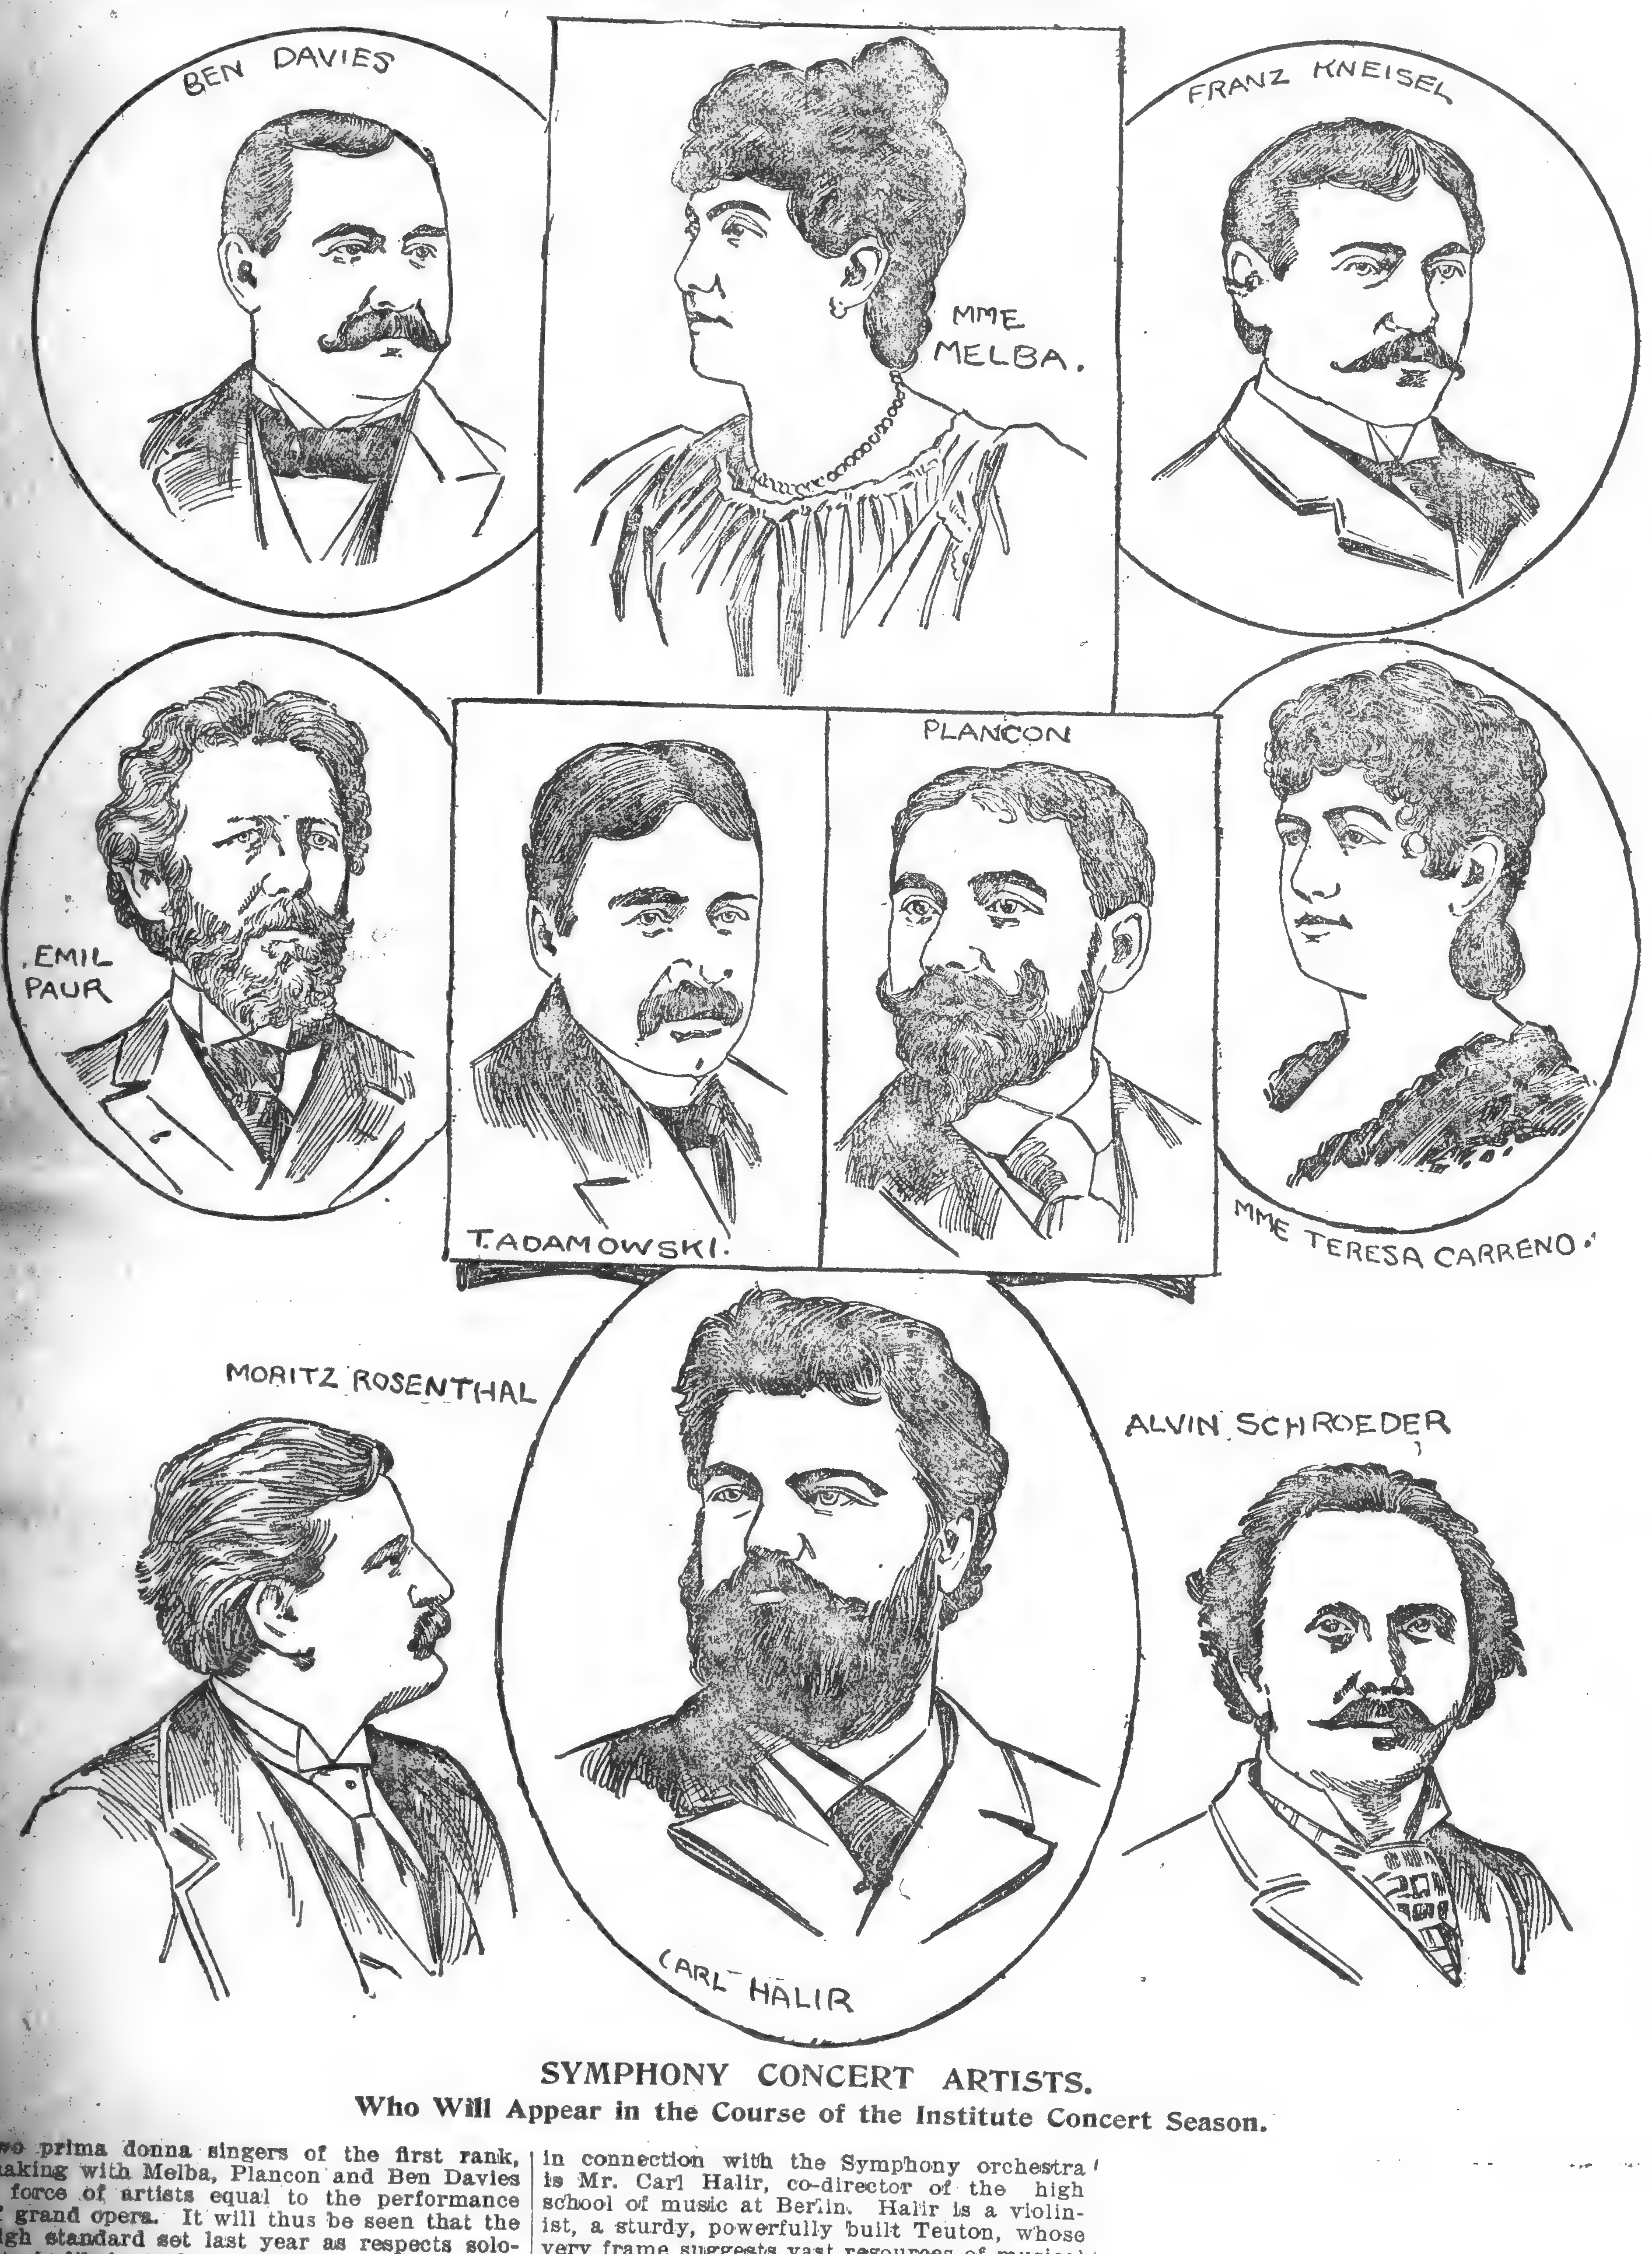
But it cannot be thought that the desires of the Brooklyn public are not carefully considered in the concerts also. This year the advisory board of the department of music has made up a list of works admired here arranged for the people of the smaller New England cities, including Worcester, Springfield, Hartford and New Haven.

Perhaps the most distinguished soloist who will be heard in the Academy of Music concerts is Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, the Austrian pianist. Rosenthal ranks to-day with Paderewski and Joseffy among the foremost piano virtuosi in the world. He is still a young man, being only 33 or 34 years of age; his features are strong and clear cut and favorably impress the beholder. On the musicianly side Rosenthal is entirely different from Paderewski. He is a player of a more sensational order, though his work is founded on the soundest principles. When he was in America seven years ago his main forte was his dazzling and remarkable technique. Since that time he has broadened and grown and for the last few years the critics have dwelt upon his depth of conception and the poetry he infuses into his interpretation of compositions. Moriz Rosenthal was born in Lemberg, Croatia, and most of his life has been spent in Austria and Germany. In boyhood he showed his musical gifts. When 10 he played in a public concert and when 14 he gave a concert of his own at Vienna, whither his parents had taken him to study under Rafael Joseffy. He was next heard of at Belgrade and Bucharest, where he was appointed court pianist to Carmen Sylva, the beautiful Queen of Roumania. Thence he went to Weimar at the invitation of the composer Liszt and afterward to Paris and St. Petersburg. Rosenthal might now have easily taken up professional work, but his zeal for study led him to enter the state gymnasium at Vienna, where for two years he worked for his master's degree, attending the lectures of Zimmerman, Brentano and Haslick, at the same time pursuing his piano forte studies assiduously. In 1882 he emerged from his retirement and entered upon concert work under flattering auspices. One secret of Rosenthal's success is his immense industry. Even while on concert tours he makes it a rule to practice several hours daily. Visitors are not admitted until 4 P. M., or if the business is imperative they must make themselves heard above the din of the piano, for not a moment's practice must be lost. Like the chess masters one hears of, Rosenthal constantly smokes cigars and cigarettes and sips coffee during these practice hours.

Another European musician who will appear in connection with the Symphony orchestra is Mr. Carl Halir, co-director of the high school of music at Berlin. Halir is a violinist, a sturdy, powerfully built Teuton, whose very frame suggests vast resources of musical capability. He is the intimate friend and co-director in the Berlin high school with Joachim, the great violin composer and virtuoso. Joachim's feeling for his friend is indicated by the fact that he has loaned him his precious red Strad violin for concert work in Halir's American tour. This is the instrument which was presented to Joachim by the city of London on the occasion of his fiftieth jubilee. It derives its name from the circumstance that some of the leather work is finished in that color. Beside Rosenthal and Halir Symphony concert goers will also hear Mme. Carreno, the pianist. Mme. Carreno has been living abroad some years, but she is well known in America, where the greater part of her musical career was passed. She is a Venezuelan by birth and came to this country in her ninth year, subsequently taking up her musical studies in the best schools in the United States. After her musical education was completed Mme. Carreno appeared in the concert companies of Patti, Wilhelmj and Kellogg; she also organized her own company and traveled with it. About five years ago she went to Europe and repeated her American successes in German, Sweden and Norway. As a pianist Mme. Carreno compares favorably with Mlle. Aus der Ohe. It is doubtful if she has any superiors of her own sex on the pianoforte.

The vocal soloists who will appear are too well known on this side of the water to need extended notice. Mme. Melba will be heard in a re-engagement, as also that sonorous Welsh singer, Ben Davies. An addition to the vocal forces will be M. Pol Plancon, baritone of the Metropolitan Operatic company. Other soloists will be Mr. Franz Kneisel, leader of the Kneisel string quartet, and his coadjutors, Mr. Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello.

The dates of the Philharmonic concerts are as follows: Evenings, Monday, November 9, and Fridays, December 11, January 22, February 26 and March 26. Saturday afternoons, December 12, January 23, February 27 and March 27. Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the opening



SYMPHONY CONCERT ARTISTS.
Who Will Appear in the Course of the Institute Concert Season.

[33]

THE RECORD
Philadelphia, October 18, 1896.

The Coming Boston Symphony Concerts.

The sale of season tickets for the series of five concerts to be given at the Academy of Music monthly from November to March, inclusive, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Emil Paur, will begin at No. 1221 Chestnut street to-morrow morning. The prospectus for these concerts is a particularly attractive one. Among the more important compositions announced for performance are Beethoven's Symphony, No. 2, in D; Mozart's Symphony in G. minor; Schubert's Symphony in C major, No. 9, and the "Scotch" Symphony of Mendelssohn. Other selections are the overtures "Carnival Romain," by Berlioz; "Coriolanus," by Beethoven; "Sakuntula," by Goldmark; "Euryanthe," by Weber, and "Manfred" and "Genoveva," by Schumann. The list of soloists contains the names of Melba, Teresa Carreno, Carl Hajir, Pol Plancon and Ben Davis, three vocalists and two instrumentalists. Carl Hajir is a violinist from Berlin, who has not yet been heard here.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH
704 CHESTNUT Street,
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

The sale of tickets for the Boston Symphony concerts is reported to be very large, and instances the admiration our music lovers have for this organization. The first concert is fixed for November 10, and the solo artists are Melba, Carreno, Plancon, Ben Davies, and Carl Halir.

WASHINGTON POST.
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18

BOSTON SYMPHONY SEASON.

The Celebrated Orchestra Comes with Many New Selections and Soloists.

For eleven years the Boston Symphony Orchestra has visited Washington, and a season without a series of concerts by this now famous organization would be, from a musical standpoint, tame indeed. The musical public of this city recognizes the high standard of these concerts from the beginning, and manifests a pleasant recognition of the fact by showing each season familiar faces in the same seats with a constantly increasing number of new-comers. The twelfth season commences on Thursday evening, November 12, at the new Columbia Theater, the forty-eighth performance in this city. The second concert will be on Tuesday afternoon, December 8, and the remaining three on Tuesday evenings, January 19, February 23, and March 23.

Among the works to be performed this season Conductor Paur announces the following: The Beethoven Symphony No. 4, Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, Mozart G minor Symphony, and the Mendelssohn Symphony in A minor. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Academic" overture of Brahms, the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Melusine" of Mendelssohn, the "Manfred" of Schumann, "Don Giovanni" of Mozart, and the "Oberon" of Weber. Other interesting selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, and the "Invitation to Dance" of Weber. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner.

The list of soloists includes Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who scored a remarkably brilliant success at his appearance with the orchestra in Boston last season; Mr. Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season, and Mme. Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe. Mme. Carreno's playing will be remembered for its extreme brilliancy and warmth, and her recent successes in the European capitals are proof of the claim that her undoubted talents have matured to such an extent that she is to-day one of the leading artists of the world.

It has been decided to divide each programme into two parts by a ten minute intermission, which will undoubtedly prove acceptable to the majority of the patrons.

The sale of season tickets will open at Metzerott's music store, 1110 F street, Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, programme books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The Independent, N. Y. C.

OCT 22

Mı

1896-'97: The Loca

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's five dates (the concerts being all evening ones, and in the Metropolitan Opera House) are these: November 13th, December 10th, January 21st, February 25th, March 25th, each a Thursday, except the first concert, which occurs on a Friday. In regard to the programs that Mr. Paur will put before us, we have this official list of compositions to be heard from the best orchestra in the world: Symphonies—Beethoven's Fourth, Schumann's Second, Schubert's Ninth, Tschaikovsky's Fourth: Overtures—Goldmark's "Sakuntala," Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave," Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini," Weber's "Oberon." Two new orchestral novelties are Smetana's "Wallenstein" symphonic poem and an entr'acte from Schilling's opera "Ingwalde." The soloists will include Mme. Teresa Carreño, Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Ben Davies and Mr. Carl Halir.

son's Special Programme.

SOME NOTED SOLOISTS ENGAGED.

Henry E. Krehbiel to Lecture on the Theme of Each Evening's Concert. Desires of Brooklyn's Music Lovers to Be Carefully Considered—Moritz Rosenthal, the Austrian Pianist, Among the Artists.

The first detailed announcement of the Philharmonic concerts in the Academy of Music was sent to thousands of Brooklynites this week. The concerts are given under the joint auspices of the Philharmonic society and the department of music of the Brooklyn institute, an arrangement which proved very successful when it was tried last year for the first time. There will be five evening concerts and four matinees, the former beginning Monday evening, November 9, and the latter Saturday afternoon, December 12. On the day previous to each of the evening concerts Mr. Henry E. Krehbiel, the musical critic, will give an illustrative lecture on the music to be played, in which he will be assisted by Mr. Henry Holden Huss, the New York pianist.

The soloists already engaged include Mme. Melba, soprano; Mr. Ben Davies, tenor; M. Pol Plancon, baritone; Mme. Carreno, piano; Mr. Moriz Rosenthal, piano; Mr. Carl Halir, violin; Messrs. Franz Kneisel and Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello. In addition there will probably appear two prima donna singers of the first rank, making with Melba, Plancon and Ben Davies a force of artists equal to the performance of grand opera. It will thus be seen that the high standard set last year as respects soloists is likely to be surpassed.

Mr. Emil Paur, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has been busy during the summer making up the programmes to be played this season. As the Symphony men play in all the great cities of the East, including Boston, Brooklyn, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, this is considerable of a task. Mr. Paur believes, however, that he has arranged a series of great excellence and one that will appeal to the educated taste of all the centers where his band gives concerts. As in previous years there will be a considerable preponderance of works by German composers, though French, Russian and Slavic works will not be neglected. In a recent interview Mr. Paur spoke of his plans as follows:

"At this time, perhaps more so than at any other during the past fifteen years, there is a growing tendency to go back to the simplicity and naturalness of the old masters and to make ourselves better acquainted with the old works and as a result Mozart, Haydn and others appear on our programmes with more frequency than before. Two novelties will be the symphonic poem, 'Ingwelde' of Schilling and the entr'acte from Bizet's 'Carmen.'" Mr. Paur goes on to say of his Boston prgoramme: "Tschaikowsky, who has met with so signal public favor, will not be forgotten and his second and fourth symphonies, which are included in the programmes, are new here. Bruckner is a renowned Vienna composer who belongs to the extreme modern direction and it appears to me as a duty to bring out one of his works, as hardly anything is known of him in America. Of course, the Brooklyn programme will be largely a selection of the best works performed in the home city of the Symphony band. Among them will be Weber's 'Invitation to the Dance' and the Liszt 'Mephisto Waltz.'"

But it cannot be thought that the desires of the Brooklyn public are not carefully considered in the concerts also. This year the advisory board of the department of music has made up a list of works admired here and has sent them on to the Boston Symphony management with the request that they be played in Brooklyn. These works are: Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, Tschaikowsky's No. 6, "Pathetique"; Raff's, "In the Woods"; Schumann's Symphony in D minor, Schubert's unfinished symphony, Mozart's Symphony in G minor and the following overtures: Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Berlioz's "Carneval Romain" and Schumann's "Genoveva." It is probable that all these works will be heard during the season here.

The list of the Boston Symphony's bookings for the coming season shows the extent of the work this organization is now doing in the interests of musical education. Twenty-four concerts are announced in Boston, five in Providence, ten in New York, nine in Brooklyn, ten in Philadelphia, several in Baltimore and six at Sanders' theater, Cambridge. Besides these, a series of five concerts has been virtuosi in the world. He is still a young man, being only 33 or 34 years of age; his features are strong and clear cut and favorably impress the beholder. On the musicianly side Rosenthal is entirely different from Paderewski. He is a player of a more sensational order, though his work is founded on the soundest principles. When he was in America seven years ago his main forte was his dazzling and remarkable technique. Since that time he has broadened and grown and for the last few years the critics have dwelt upon his depth of conception and the poetry he infuses into his interpretation of compositions. Moriz Rosenthal was born in Lemberg, Croatia, and most of his life has been spent in Austria and Germany. In boyhood he showed his musical gifts. When 10 he played in a public concert and when 14 he gave a concert of his own at Vienna, whither his parents had taken him to study under Rafael Joseffy. He was next heard of at Belgrade and Bucharest, where he was appointed court pianist to Carmen Sylva, the beautiful Queen of Roumania. Thence he went to Weimar at the invitation of the composer Liszt and afterward to Paris and St. Petersburg. Rosenthal might now have easily taken up professional work, but his zeal for study led him to enter the state gymnasium at Vienna, where for two years he worked for his master's degree, attending the lectures of Zimmerman, Brentano and Haslick, at the same time pursuing his piano forte studies assiduously. In 1882 he emerged from his retirement and entered upon concert work under flattering auspices. One secret of Rosenthal's success is his immense industry. Even while on concert tours he makes it a rule to practice several hours daily. Visitors are not admitted until 4 P. M., or if the business is imperative they must make themselves heard above the din of the piano, for not a moment's practice must be lost. Like the chess masters one hears of, Rosenthal constantly smokes cigars and cigarettes and sips coffee during these practice hours.

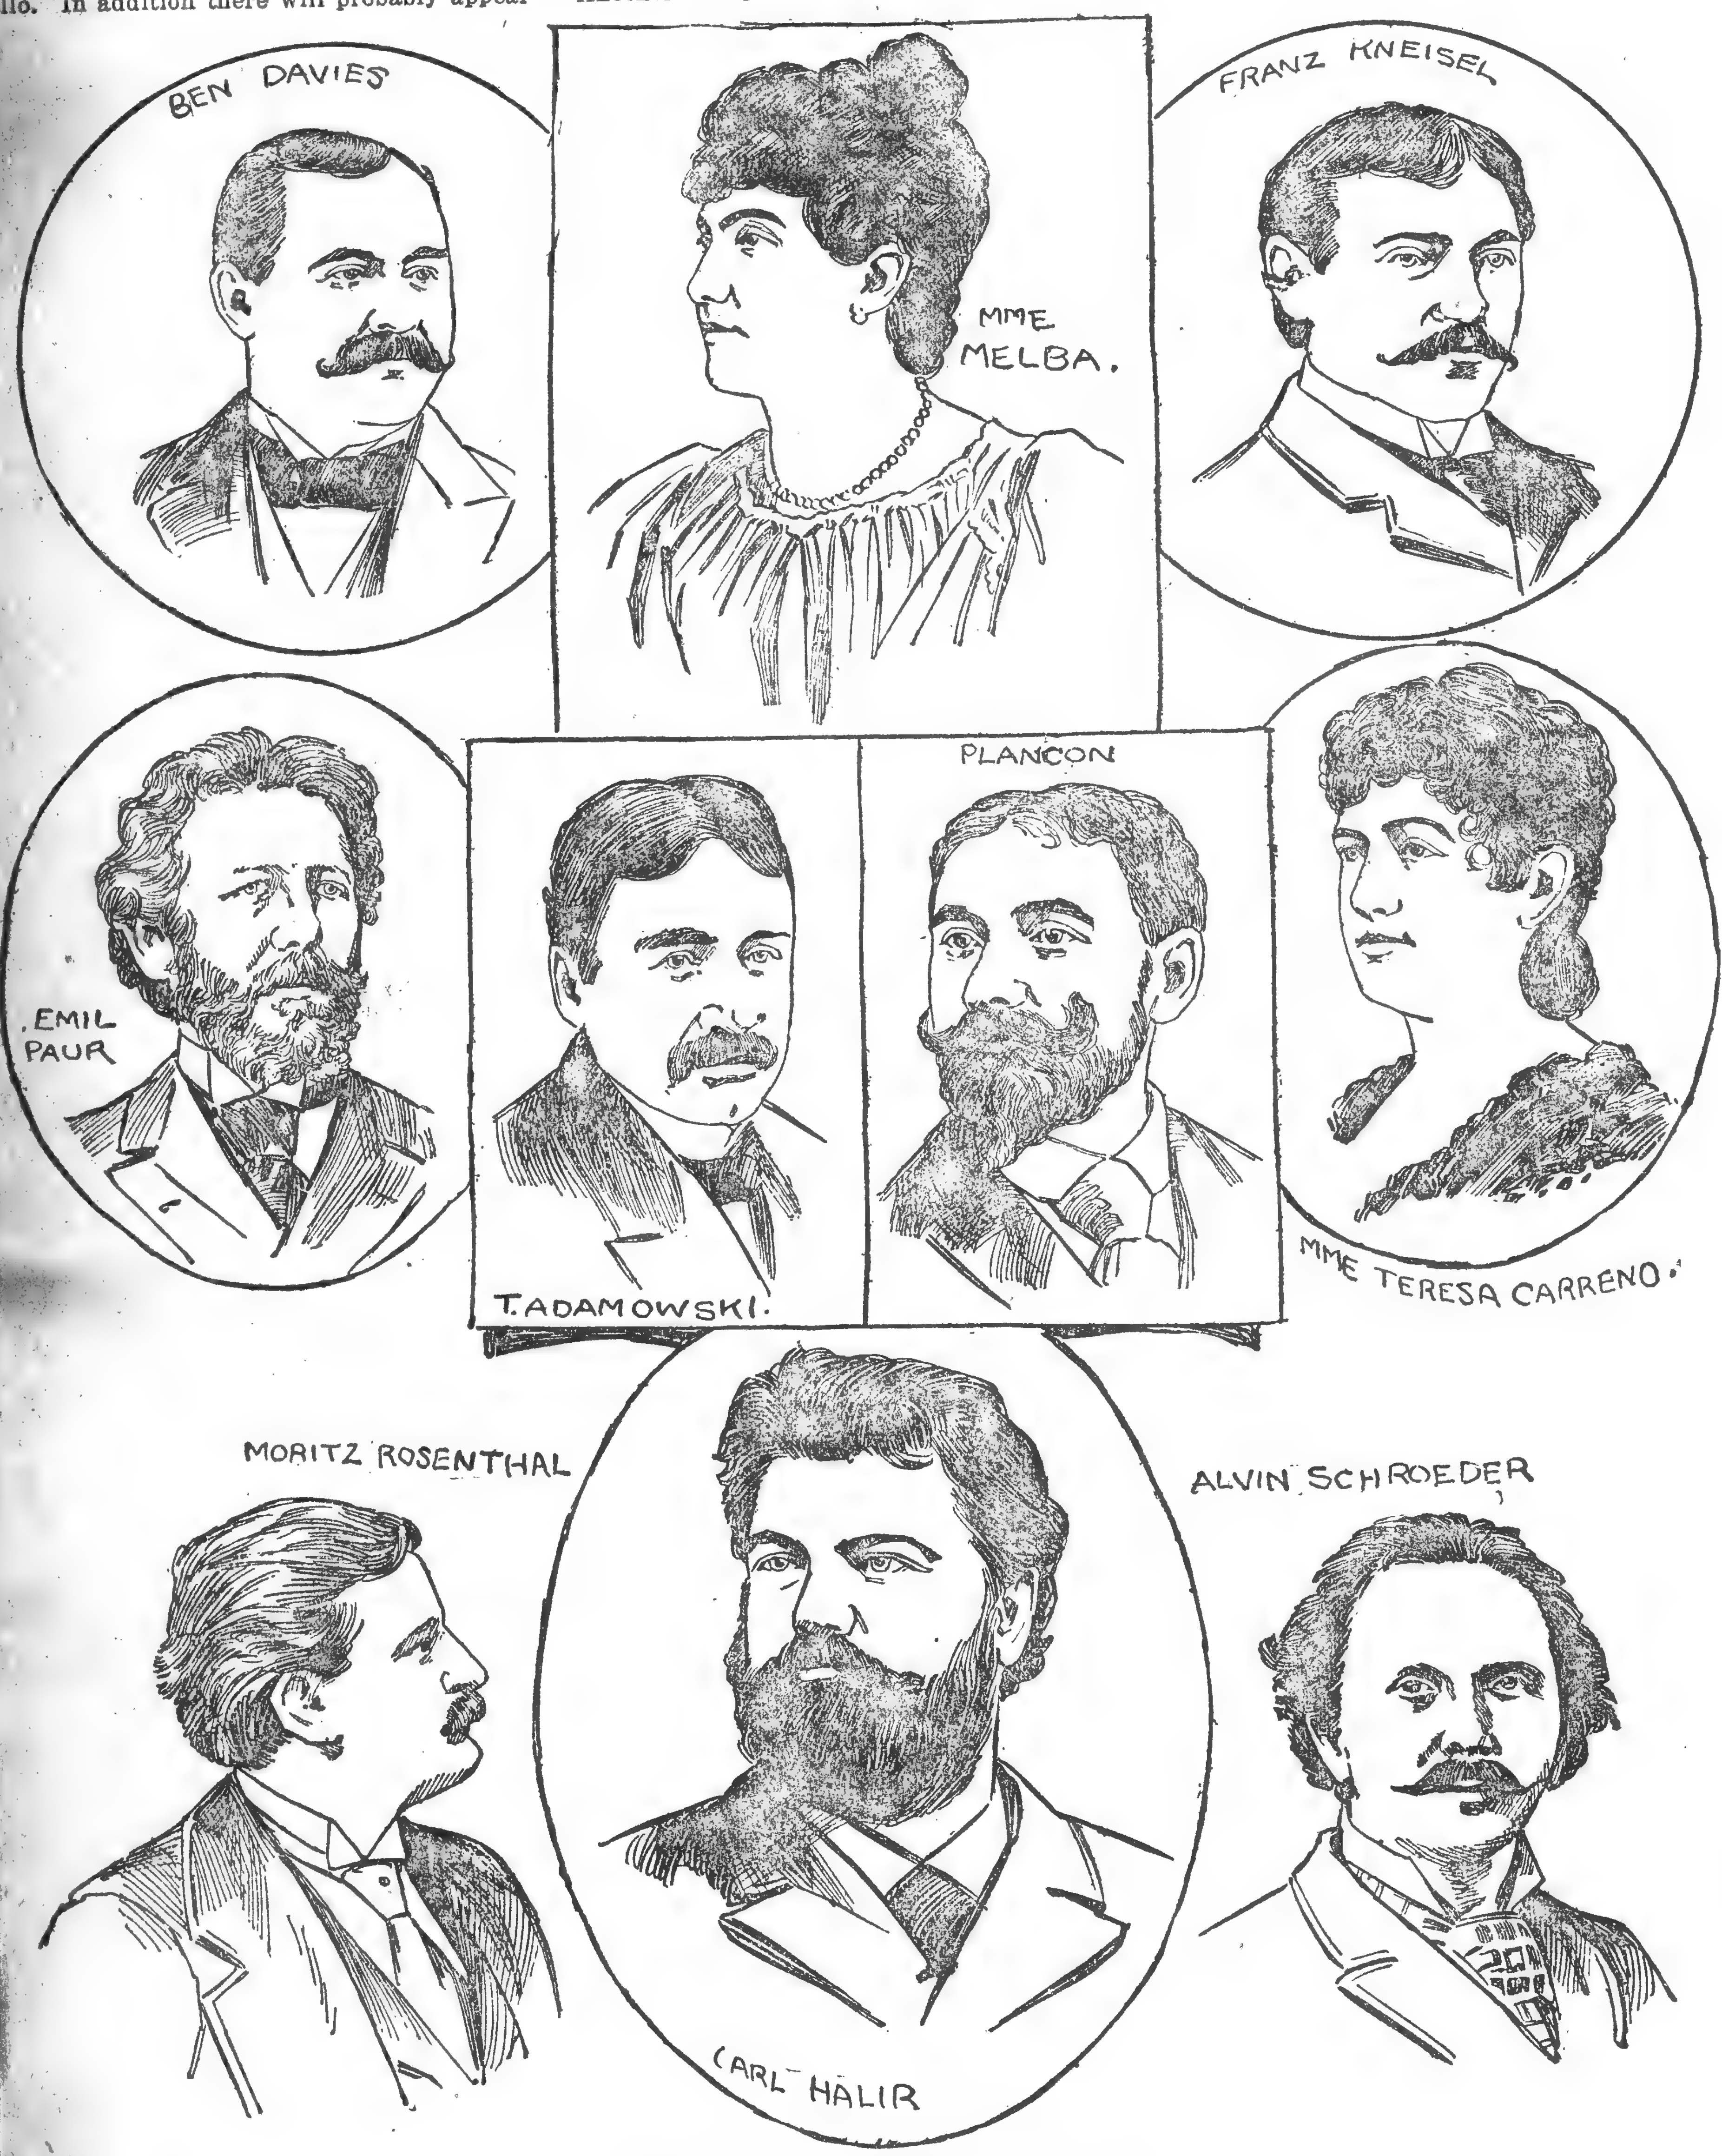
Another European musician who will appear in connection with the Symphony orchestra is Mr. Carl Halir, co-director of the high school of music at Berlin. Halir is a violinist, a sturdy, powerfully built Teuton, whose very frame suggests vast resources of musical capability. He is the intimate friend and co-director in the Berlin high school with Joachim, the great violin composer and virtuoso. Joachim's feeling for his friend is indicated by the fact that he has loaned him his precious red Strad violin for concert work in Halir's American tour. This is the instrument which was presented to Joachim by the city of London on the occasion of his fiftieth jubilee. It derives its name from the circumstance that some of the leather work is finished in that color. Beside Rosenthal and Halir Symphony concert goers will also hear Mme. Carreno, the pianist. Mme. Carreno has been living abroad some years, but she is well known in America, where the greater part of her musical career was passed. She is a Venezuelan by birth and came to this country in her ninth year, subsequently taking up her musical studies in the best schools in the United States. After her musical education was completed Mme. Carreno appeared in the concert companies of Patti, Wilhelmj and Kellogg; she also organized her own company and traveled with it. About five years ago she went to Europe and repeated her American successes in German. Sweden and Norway. As a pianist Mme. Carreno compares favorably with Mlle. Aus der Ohe. It is doubtful if she has any superiors of her own sex on the pianoforte.

The vocal soloists who will appear are too well known on this side of the water to need extended notice. Mme. Melba will be heard in a re-engagement, as also that sonorous Welsh singer, Ben Davies. An addition to the vocal forces will be M. Pol Plancon, baritone of the Metropolitan Operatic company. Other soloists will be Mr. Franz Kneisel, leader of the Kneisel string quartet, and his coadjutors, Mr. Timothee Adamowski, violin, and Mr. Alwin Schroeder, 'cello.

The dates of the Philharmonic concerts are as follows: Evenings, Monday, November 9, and Fridays, December 11, January 22, February 26 and March 26. Saturday afternoons, December 12, January 23, February 27 and March 27. Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the opening evening concert on November 9, and Mr. Moriz Rosenthal will be the soloist at the opening matinee concert on December 12. The lectures by Mr. Krehbiel will be given on the afternoons preceding the evening concerts. Their object will be to explain the music rendered by the orchestra on the following evening, so that even the musically uneducated can appreciate it. Mr. Krehbiel's word pictures will be helped out by Mr. Henry Holden Huss' illustrations on the pianoforte.



SYMPHONY CONCERT ARTISTS.

Who Will Appear in the Course of the Institute Concert Season.

---

of Emil Paur, will begin at No. 1221 Chestnut street to-morrow morning. The prospectus for these concerts is a particularly attractive one. Among the more important compositions announced for performance are Beethoven's Symphony, No. 2, in D; Mozart's Symphony in G. minor; Schubert's Symphony in C major, No. 9, and the "Scotch" Symphony of Mendelssohn. Other selections are the overtures "Carnival Romain," by Berlioz; "Coriolanus," by Beethoven; "Sakuntula," by Goldmark; "Euryanthe," by Weber, and "Manfred" and "Genoveva," by Schumann. The list of soloists contains the names of Melba, Teresa Carreno, Carl Hajir, Pol Plancon and Ben Davis, three vocalists and two instrumentalists. Carl Hajir is a violinist from Berlin, who has not yet been heard here.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH
704 CHESTNUT Street,
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

The sale of tickets for the Boston Symphony concerts is reported to be very large, and instances the admiration our music lovers have for this organization. The first concert is fixed for November 10, and the solo artists are Melba, Carreno, Plancon, Ben Davies, and Carl Halir.

The musical public of this city the high standard of these concerts from the beginning, and manifests a pleasant recognition of the fact by showing each season familiar faces in the same seats with a constantly increasing number of new-comers. The twelfth season commences on Thursday evening, November 12, at the new Columbia Theater, the forty-eighth performance in this city. The second concert will be on Tuesday afternoon, December 8, and the remaining three on Tuesday evenings, January 19, February 23, and March 23.

Among the works to be performed this season Conductor Paur announces the following: The Beethoven Symphony No 4, Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, Mozart G minor Symphony, and the Mendelssohn Symphony in A minor. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Academic" overture of Brahms, the "Sakuntala" of Goldmark, the "Melusine" of Mendelssohn, the "Manfred" of Schumann, "Don Giovanni" of Mozart, and the "Oberon" of Weber. Other interesting selections are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, and the "Invitation to Dance" of Weber. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner.

The list of soloists includes Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who scored a remarkably brilliant success at his appearance with the orchestra in Boston last season; Mr. Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season, and Mme. Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe. Mme. Carreno's playing will be remembered for its extreme brilliancy and warmth, and her recent successes in the European capitals are proof of the claim that her undoubted talents have matured to such an extent that she is to-day one of the leading artists of the world.

It has been decided to divide each programme into two parts by a ten minute intermission, which will undoubtedly prove acceptable to the majority of the patrons.

The sale of season tickets will open at Metzerott's music store, 1110 F street, Monday morning, October 19. As in past seasons, programme books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The Independent, N. Y. C.

OCT 22

M

1896-'97: The Loca

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's five dates (the concerts being all evening ones, and in the Metropolitan Opera House) are these: November 13th, December 10th, January 21st, February 25th, March 25th, each a Thursday, except the first concert, which occurs on a Friday. In regard to the programs that Mr. Paur will put before us, we have this official list of compositions to be heard from the best orchestra in the world: Symphonies—Beethoven's Fourth, Schumann's Second, Schubert's Ninth, Tschaikovsky's Fourth: Overtures—Goldmark's "Sakuntala," Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave," Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini," Weber's "Oberon." Two new orchestral novelties are Smetana's "Wallenstein" symphonic-poem and an entr'acte from Schilling's opera "Ingwalde." The soloists will include Mme. Teresa Carreño, Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Ben Davies and Mr. Carl Halir.

[33]

MUSICAL COURIER

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1896.

The first concert of the sixteenth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Emil Paur conductor, was given October 17 in Music Hall. The program was as follows:

Overture to Benvenuto Cellini.............................. Berlioz
The Burial of Ophelia.................. ....Bourgault-Ducoudray
(First time in Boston.)
Orchestral Suite in D major, op. 49..........................Saint-Saëns
(First time at these concerts.)
Symphony No. 8 in F major..................................Beethoven
Overture to Euryanthe.......................................Weber

These are the changes in the orchestra: The first flute is Mr. L. Jacquet, the second Mr. A. Brooke. Mr. A. Weiss is second oboe. Mr. P. Litke is second bassoon. Mr. F. Zahn is the viola player in the place of Mr. Eugene Gruenberg, who resigned. Mr. A. Kuntz has in turn taken Mr. Zahn's place among the second violins. Mr. A. Blaess has been added to the 'cellos.

* * *

The feature of the concert was The Burial of Ophelia, by Bourgault-Ducoudray. Let me quote from Mr. Apthorp's program book:

> This fugitive composition for orchestra, molto largo (with a sentiment of profound melancholy), in F sharp major, might be called a short symphonic poem. It presents the free development of a single theme, beginning piano, then gradually swelling to the full force of the modern orchestra, and finally diminishing to the softest pianissimo. It is far more a poetic meditation on the death of Shakespeare's heroine than music intended to recall any of the incidents in the respective scene in Hamlet; it is in no sense music that could be used to accompany the actual dramatic scene in question. It is scored for three flutes, one oboe, one English horn, 2 clarinets, two bassoons (with a third bassoon ad libitum), four horns, two trumpets, three trombones, one bass tuba, one pair of kettle drums, cymbals, one bell, one harp, four solo violins, 3 solo violas, three solo celli, and the usual strings. The score bears no dedication.

* * *

What is the origin of this piece? The program book gives no answer.

Maquet, of Paris, published in Paris, 1892, four piano pieces by Bourgault-Ducoudray. The general title was Fumées. The fourth of these pieces bore the particular title L'Enterrement d'Ophélie.

Now L'Enterrement d'Ophélie for orchestra was played at a concert of the National Society at the Salle d'Harcourt, Paris, December 23, 1894. I have not been able to find any note of an earlier performance.

Is the orchestral piece the piano piece enlarged and glorified? Were the piano piece and the orchestral piece published in the same year?

* * *

You remember that poor, dead Ophelia was allowed "her virgin rites, her maiden strewments, and the bringing home of bell and burial." The churlish priest forbad the music of her Church. She would have liked this music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

The Ophelia of Shakespeare is a vague, pitiable creature. She is a sketch of pallor.

Just as the Hamlet of Jules Laforgue is more like Hamlet than is Shakespeare's Hamlet, so his Ophelia is a more faithful portrait of the daughter of Polonius and the Lady Anne, the girl eighteen years old when she was discouraged by the caprices of the prince.

Laforgue shows her to us: Ophelia with blue eyes, thin and too heroic—she always had a perishable air—with a profile—and this is the true standard of female beauty—that did not recall the profile of any animal from the bulldog to the gazelle. She wishes to make Hamlet comfortable. No wonder he rebelled at the thought of a comfortable Hamlet? What would then be his excuse for existence? He consoled himself after her death by the thought that she could never be the mistress of Fortinbras. Her thin shoulders annoyed him. He had seen them too often at court balls. And yet she was a saint in petticoats. "Et dans l'intimité, je ne lui ai jamais surpris la nuance chienne." It would have been a misfortune if she had grown old. The skull of Yorick was on his dressing table between one of Ophelia's gloves and his first tooth.

The information given by Laforgue is not wholly satisfactory to an inquiring mind. Ophelia is a vaporous maiden. Even if Hamlet had not dreamed dreams and had indorsed the domestic and foreign policy of his uncle Fengo, Ophelia would never have been happy with him. But Ophelia would have liked the burial music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

This music is ineffable melancholy. There is the thought of weeping virginity, and, as Hamlet said, to make a young maiden weep is more irreparable than to espouse her.

Now there is funeral music that irritates, that makes the hearer envy the dead body in whose honor it was written. But this music for Ophelia is so tender, so thoughtful, so appreciative.

Ophelia was not a long, sustained, passionate cantilena. She was a broken tune, a fragment of melody, misty, tear-drenched.

True, she sang songs in her madness—the good Lord only knows where she heard them. There were roisterers inflamed with Rhenish about the court. Perhaps Polonius hummed when he threw off cares of deportment and thought of long distant, boyish pranks.

In this piece I do not recognize the learned professor of the Conservatory who lectures on national music, and writes about the ecclesiastical music of Greece, and composes opera and orchestral works to put his theories in practice.

The Bourgault-Ducoudray of Ophelia is a poet of fine imagination, a master of expression. There is not a note that does not weep for the maiden.

And I think Ophelia herself—remember, she was musical—would have liked this vaporous burial music.

And as she heard it she would have thought, "Why did not Bourgault-Ducoudray ever visit Elsinore? I think he would have understood me."

* * *

The suite of Saint-Saëns was first played in Boston December 15, 1877, by the orchestra, under Theodore Thomas. The Prelude is a study in Bach; but the form is more than the spirit. Saint-Saëns is here in scholastic vein. The Sarabande is evidence of his ability to be archaic, but the Gavotte is delightful and the trio is a rare pleasure, with the flute passages, which were played admirably last night by Messrs. Jacquet and Brooke. The Romance is a vain, insincere compliment, and long spun out, monotonous in its glove-box picture amiability. The Final chatters in joy of bringing the end.

* * *

Although the Benvenuto Cellini overture is more thoughtfully developed than is often the case in the overtures of Berlioz, it has not the dazzling brilliancy of its companion, the Carneval Romain; it does not seem to be as spontaneous; yet are the clearness and the individuality of the orchestration remarkable even in these days when orchestration runs in the streets.

* * *

There was much brilliant solo work last evening. Mr. Sautet the first oboe, Mr. Pourtau the first clarinet, and the two flute players covered themselves with glory. As a whole the performance of orchestra was not fully up to the high standard. The attack, for instance, was not always precise. Remember, however, that the concert was the first of the season.

PHILIP HALE.

SYM[illegible] MONDAY

Boston Orchestra's 12th Season in Baltimore.

The sale of season tickets opens Monday for the twelfth season in Baltimore of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Baltimore takes the lead for the greatest variety of places in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has given its concerts, but today no city in this country offers a more admirable audience-room for the best in music than is given in the new Music Hall.

The dates announced for the coming five concerts are Wednesday evenings, November 11, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24. The soloists announced are Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist at the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who will return to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe; Mr. Ben Davies, who made a favorable impression at his appearances with the Orchestra last season; Mr. Pol. Plancon of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the violinist from Berlin, who will make his first visit to this country.

The list of composers whose works are to be performed is sufficiently varied to suit all tastes, including Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Weber, Tschaikowsky, Liszt, Berlioz, Bizet, and our own Mr. Burmeister. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner. As in past years, these concerts will rank as among the principal features in the musical season in this city, and the same high standard of performance will be maintained.

PROVIDENCE JOURNAL.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1896.

SYMPHONY CONCERT.

A Brilliant Opening of the Musical Season.

At Infantry Hall last evening the Boston Symphony Orchestra began its 15th series of concerts in Providence. There was an audience of about the usual size, who proved readily responsive to the magnificent playing of the unequalled band and the extremely brilliant performance of the pianist, Mr. Martinus Sieveking. The first concert of the Symphony Orchestra may be said to mark the formal opening of the musical season, and last night's performance auspiciously inaugurated one that promises to be unusually full of interesting events. The programme for the evening was as follows:

eOverture to "Sakuntala," Op. 13..........
..............................Karl Goldmark
Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1.............
in B-flat minor, Op. 23.................
..................Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky
I. Allegro non troppo e molto moderato.
II. Allegro con spirito.
III. Andantino semplice.
IV. Allegro con fuoco.
Prelude to Act II., "Ingwelde"............
..............................Max Schillings
(First Time.)
Symphony in G minor......................
...............Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
1. Allegro molto (G minor)
II. Andante (E-flat major)
III. Menuetto: Allegro (G minor)
Trio (G major)
IV. Finale: Allegro assai (G minor)
"Invitation to the Dance"...............
.....................Karl Maria von Weber
(Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)

The sticklers for contrast in programme making might revel in this one. Here are the old and the new school side by side; the ancient master of form jostles elbows with modern apostles of the free style; comparison is invited between music that is great through simplicity of structure, keen sense of proportion and genuine melodic invention, and that which arrests attention by complexity of detail, gorgeousness of coloring, powerful dynamic contrasts and increased sonority of the enlarged modern orchestra.

Goldmark's familiar "Sakuntala" overture, effective in spite of—or is it because of—its overloaded instrumentation and almost brutal fortissimos, was given a superbly forceful rendering, particularly by that splendid—perhaps unequalled—body of strings. Then came the famous Dutch pianist, Martinus Sievking, in Tschaikowsky's massive concerto, which the composer wrote for and dedicated to his friend, Hans von Bulow. Mr. Apthorp, in his programme notes, calls attention to the interesting fact that the first public performance of this work was in Boston (Oct. 25, 1875), Von Bulow playing the piano part with an orchestra conducted by Mr. B. J. Lang. It is probably the only instance where an important work by a European composer has been brought out in this country.

The concerto needs no tag for identification. It is Tschaikowsky from first to last in its tremendous, almost barbaric energy, its originality of melody and ingenuity of rhythm, its general broadness of feature, its apparent—but not often real—carelessness of detail, and its unflagging interest throughout a constant series of climaxes. As for the pianist, it can be said at once that he was worthy of his task. Mr. Sieveking is a player who is extremely forceful but never coarse. His technic seems extraordinary, and in fact no lesser equipment would have served here. Such opportunity as was afforded for cantilena or delicate embroidery was skillfully met, but brilliancy and bravura were the main things wanted, and these he furnished in ample measure. He was recalled, and deservedly, four or five times.

The prelude to Schilling's "Ingwelde" fell flat after this gigantic work. The programme notes describe it as a short movement, presenting no salient formal characteristics; it only remains to add that it presents nothing worth remembering, or to incite a wish for a second hearing.

After the great modern masters of gorgeous tone painting and their feeble imitator, the symphony of Mozart came like the sun, the clear blue sky, and the singing of birds when the thunder and the tempest have passed by. Lucidity of ideas, mastery of form that is something more than academic, and the heaven-descended gift of melody still hold their own. The playing was superb. Berlioz's orchestration of Weber's favorite "Invitation a la Valse" brought the concert to a pleasant and happy conclusion.

The programme book contained an interesting statistical table of the work of the orchestra since its foundation. Germany heads the list of composers with 79. America is fourth with 12, chief among whom are Chadwick, Foote, McDowell and the veteran J. K. Paine. In number of programme appearances, Beethoven leads, far ahead of his nearest competitor, Wagner.

The second concert of the Symphony Orchestra will be on Wednesday evening, Nov. 25; the soloist will be Carl Halir, the great German violin virtuoso, now regarded as the legitimate successor of Joachim. He has never been heard in this country.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The sale of season tickets for the twelfth season in this city of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is announced for tomorrow morning at Albert's, 13 North Charles street. The thirty-eight performances which this organization has given in this city, under the leadership of Conductors Gericke, Nikisch and the present leader, Mr. Paur, have established these concerts as the leading musical events of the season. The list of soloists announced for the coming series includes Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist at the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe, where she has won the highest praise in all the principal musical centers; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at his appearance with the orchestra last season; Mr. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the renowned violinist, from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country. The list of composers whose works are to be performed includes Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Weber, Tschaikowski, Liszt, Berlioz, Bizet and our own Mr. Burmeister. One entire program will be devoted to Wagner.

The dates announced for the concerts in this season's series are Wednesday evenings, November 11, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24.

THE SUN.

BALTIMORE, MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1896

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Works to Be Performed During Its Twelfth Annual Season in Baltimore.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which has visited Baltimore annually for the past eleven years, will begin its twelfth season here on Wednesday evening, November 11. This will be its thirty-ninth performance in Baltimore. The dates of the remaining four concerts this winter are December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24. The sale of season seats will open on Monday, October 19.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven Symphony No.2, the Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4 and the Schumann C major Symphony. The overtures are the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" by Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann.

Other selections of interest will be the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance" and a new symphonic poem by Mr. Richard Burmeister, of this city. The success of the Wagner concert last season justifies the announcement of a repetition of this popular form of programme this year.

The list of soloists include Mme. Melba, Mr. Carl Halir, a famous violinist of Berlin, M. Pol Plancon, basso from the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Ben Davies, who made a favorable impression at the closing concert last season.

Especial importance is attached to the announcement of the reappearance in this country, after a seven-years' absence in Europe, of Mme. Teresa Carreno. Mme. Carreno's playing will be readily recalled for its extreme brilliancy and warmth.

The announcement of the five concerts to be given the coming season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will arouse the usual interest among all lovers of the best music in thist city.

For 11 years this organization has visited Baltimore, maintaining from the date of its first concert, on April 12, 1886, the highest standard of performance. No comments have ever been heard as to the variable playing of this orchestra from one season to another, but always the same acknowledged finish and almost perfection of ensemble playing. One of the greatest tributes that could be paid to the quality of these concerts is the attendance each year of the same loyal patronage, occupying practically the same seats, and always an increasing number of newcomers.

Among other great advantages which Baltimore has enjoyed in its new Music Hall is the giving of a permanency to the audience-room, in which these admirable concerts are given, in marked contrast to the wanderings of the orchestra in previous years. Baltimore holds the record for the greatest variety of places in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has given its concerts in any of the cities visited, but today no city in this country offers a more delightful home for the best in music than is given in the new Music Hall.

The dates of the coming season are Wednesday evenings, November 11, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24. It is safe to say that the list of soloists announced is equal, if not superior, to that of any previous season. It includes Mme. Melba, who is to be the soloist at the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe, where she has won the highest praise in all the principal musical centres; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the concert last season; Mr. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the famous violin virtuoso, from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country.

The list of composers whose works are to be performed is sufficiently varied to suit all tastes, including Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Weber, Tschaikowsky, Liszt, Berlioz, Bizent and our own Mr. Burmeister. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner.

MUSICAL COURIER

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1896.

The first concert of the sixteenth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Emil Paur conductor, was given October 17 in Music Hall. The program was as follows:

Overture to Benvenuto Cellini.............................. Berlioz
The Burial of Ophelia..........................Bourgault-Ducoudray
(First time in Boston.)
Orchestral Suite in D major, op. 49.......................Saint-Saëns
(First time at these concerts.)
Symphony No. 8 in F major..................................Beethoven
Overture to Euryanthe...Weber

These are the changes in the orchestra: The first flute is Mr. L. Jacquet, the second Mr. A. Brooke. Mr. A. Weiss is second oboe. Mr. P. Litke is second bassoon. Mr. F. Zahn is the viola player in the place of Mr. Eugene Gruenberg, who resigned. Mr. A. Kuntz has in turn taken Mr. Zahn's place among the second violins. Mr. A. Blaess has been added to the 'cellos.

⁂

The feature of the concert was The Burial of Ophelia, by Bourgault-Ducoudray. Let me quote from Mr. Apthorp's program book:

> This fugitive composition for orchestra, molto largo (with a sentiment of profound melancholy), in F sharp major, might be called a short symphonic poem. It presents the free development of a single theme, beginning piano, then gradually swelling to the full force of the modern orchestra, and finally diminishing to the softest pianissimo. It is far more a poetic meditation on the death of Shakespeare's heroine than music intended to recall any of the incidents in the respective scene in Hamlet; it is in no sense music that could be used to accompany the actual dramatic scene in question. It is scored for three flutes, one oboe, one English horn, 2 clarinets, two bassoons (with a third bassoon ad libitum), four horns, two trumpets, three trombones, one bass tuba, one pair of kettle drums, cymbals, one bell, one harp, four solo violins, 3 solo violas, three solo celli, and the usual strings. The score bears no dedication.

⁂

What is the origin of this piece? The program book gives no answer.

Maquet, of Paris, published in Paris, 1892, four piano pieces by Bourgault-Ducoudray. The general title was Fumées. The fourth of these pieces bore the particular title L'Enterrement d'Ophélie.

Now L'Enterrement d'Ophélie for orchestra was played at a concert of the National Society at the Salle d'Harcourt, Paris, December 23, 1894. I have not been able to find any note of an earlier performance.

Is the orchestral piece the piano piece enlarged and glorified? Were the piano piece and the orchestral piece published in the same year?

⁂

You remember that poor, dead Ophelia was allowed "her virgin rites, her maiden strewments, and the bringing home of bell and burial." The churlish priest forbad the music of her Church. She would have liked this music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

The Ophelia of Shakespeare is a vague, pitiable creature. She is a sketch of pallor.

Just as the Hamlet of Jules Laforgue is more like Hamlet than is Shakespeare's Hamlet, so his Ophelia is a more faithful portrait of the daughter of Polonius and the Lady Anne, the girl eighteen years old when she was discouraged by the caprices of the prince.

Laforgue shows her to us: Ophelia with blue eyes, thin and too heroic—she always had a perishable air—with a profile—and this is the true standard of female beauty—that did not recall the profile of any animal from the bulldog to the gazelle. She wishes to make Hamlet comfortable. No wonder he rebelled at the thought of a comfortable Hamlet? What would then be his excuse for existence? He consoled himself after her death by the thought that she could never be the mistress of Fortinbras. Her thin shoulders annoyed him. He had seen them too often at court balls. And yet she was a saint in petticoats. "Et dans l'intimité, je ne lui ai jamais surpris la nuance chienne." It would have been a misfortune if she had grown old. The skull of Yorick was on his dressing table between one of Ophelia's gloves and his first tooth.

The information given by Laforgue is not wholly satisfactory to an inquiring mind. Ophelia is a vaporous maiden. Even if Hamlet had not dreamed dreams and had indorsed the domestic and foreign policy of his uncle Fengo, Ophelia would never have been happy with him. But Ophelia would have liked the burial music of Bourgault-Ducoudray.

This music is ineffable melancholy. There is the thought of weeping virginity, and, as Hamlet said, to make a young maiden weep is more irreparable than to espouse her.

Now there is funeral music that irritates, that makes the hearer envy the dead body in whose honor it was written. But this music for Ophelia is so tender, so thoughtful, so appreciative.

Ophelia was not a long, sustained, passionate cantilena. She was a broken tune, a fragment of melody, misty, tear-drenched.

True, she sang songs in her madness—the good Lord only knows where she heard them. There were roisterers inflamed with Rhenish about the court. Perhaps Polonius hummed when he threw off cares of deportment and thought of long distant, boyish pranks.

In this piece I do not recognize the learned professor of the Conservatory who lectures on national music, and writes about the ecclesiastical music of Greece, and composes opera and orchestral works to put his theories in practice.

The Bourgault-Ducoudray of Ophelia is a poet of fine imagination, a master of expression. There is not a note that does not weep for the maiden.

And I think Ophelia herself—remember, she was musical—would have liked this vaporous burial music.

And as she heard it she would have thought, "Why did not Bourgault-Ducoudray ever visit Elsinore? I think he would have understood me."

⁂

The suite of Saint-Saëns was first played in Boston December 15, 1877, by the orchestra, under Theodore Thomas. The Prelude is a study in Bach; but the form is more than the spirit. Saint-Saëns is here in scholastic vein. The Sarabande is evidence of his ability to be archaic, but the Gavotte is delightful and the trio is a rare pleasure, with the flute passages, which were played admirably last night by Messrs. Jacquet and Brooke. The Romance is a vain, insincere compliment, and long spun out, monotonous in its glove-box picture amiability. The Final chatters in joy of bringing the end.

⁂

Although the Benvenuto Cellini overture is more thoughtfully developed than is often the case in the overtures of Berlioz, it has not the dazzling brilliancy of its companion, the Carneval Romain; it does not seem to be as spontaneous; yet are the clearness and the individuality of the orchestration remarkable even in these days when orchestration runs in the streets.

⁂

There was much brilliant solo work last evening. Mr. Sautet the first oboe, Mr. Pourtau the first clarinet, and the two flute players covered themselves with glory. As a whole the performance of orchestra was not fully up to the high standard. The attack, for instance, was not always precise. Remember, however, that the concert was the first of the season.

PHILIP HALE.

SYMPHONY SALE MONDAY.

Boston Orchestra's 12th Season in Baltimore.

The sale of season tickets opens Monday for the twelfth season in Baltimore of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Baltimore takes the lead for the greatest variety of places in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has given its concerts, but today no city in this country offers a more admirable audience-room for the best in music than is given in the new Music Hall.

The dates announced for the coming five concerts are Wednesday evenings, November 11, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24. The soloists announced are Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist at the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who will return to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe; Mr. Ben Davies, who made a favorable impression at his appearances with the Orchestra last season; Mr. Pol. Plancon of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the violinist from Berlin, who will make his first visit to this country.

The list of composers whose works are to be performed is sufficiently varied to suit all tastes, including Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Weber, Tschaikowsky, Liszt, Berlioz, Bizet, and our own Mr. Burmeister. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner. As in past years, these concerts will rank as among the principal features in the musical season in this city, and the same high standard of performance will be maintained.

PROVIDENCE JOURNAL.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1896.

SYMPHONY CONCERT.

A Brilliant Opening of the Musical Season.

At Infantry Hall last evening the Boston Symphony Orchestra began its 15th series of concerts in Providence. There was an audience of about the usual size, who proved readily responsive to the magnificent playing of the unequalled band and the extremely brilliant performance of the pianist, Mr. Martinus Sieveking. The first concert of the Symphony Orchestra may be said to mark the formal opening of the musical season, and last night's performance auspiciously inaugurated one that promises to be unusually full of interesting events. The programme for the evening was as follows:

Overture to "Sakuntala," Op. 13..........
..........................Karl Goldmark
Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1..............
in B-flat minor, Op. 23...............
................Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky
I. Allegro non troppo e molto moderato.
II. Allegro con spirito.
III. Andantino semplice.
IV. Allegro con fuoco.
Prelude to Act II., "Ingwelde"..........
..........................Max Schillings
(First Time.)
Symphony in G minor......................
.... Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
1. Allegro molto (G minor)
II. Andante (E-flat major)
III. Menuetto: Allegro (G minor)
Trio (G major)
IV. Finale: Allegro assai (G minor)
"Invitation to the Dance" ....
..................Karl Maria von Weber
(Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)

The sticklers for contrast in programme making might revel in this one. Here are the old and the new school side by side; the ancient master of form jostles elbows with modern apostles of the free style; comparison is invited between music that is great through simplicity of structure, keen sense of proportion and genuine melodic invention, and that which arrests attention by complexity of detail, gorgeousness of coloring, powerful dynamic contrasts and increased sonority of the enlarged modern orchestra.

Goldmark's familiar "Sakuntala" overture, effective in spite of—or is it because of—its overloaded instrumentation and almost brutal fortissimos, was given a superbly forceful rendering, particularly by that splendid—perhaps unequalled—body of strings. Then came the famous Dutch pianist, Martinus Sievking, in Tschaikowsky's massive concerto, which the composer wrote for and dedicated to his friend, Hans von Bulow. Mr. Apthorp, in his programme notes, calls attention to the interesting fact that the first public performance of this work was in Boston (Oct. 25, 1875), Von Bulow playing the piano part with an orchestra conducted by Mr. B. J. Lang. It is probably the only instance where an important work by a European composer has been brought out in this country.

The concerto needs no tag for identification. It is Tschaikowsky from first to last in its tremendous, almost barbaric energy, its originality of melody and ingenuity of rhythm, its general broadness of feature, its apparent—but not often real—carelessness of detail, and its unflagging interest throughout a constant series of climaxes. As for the pianist, it can be said at once that he was worthy of his task. Mr. Sieveking is a player who is extremely forceful but never coarse. His technic seems extraordinary, and in fact no lesser equipment would have served here. Such opportunity as was afforded for cantilena or delicate embroidery was skillfully met, but brilliancy and bravura were the main things wanted, and these he furnished in ample measure. He was recalled, and deservedly, four or five times.

The prelude to Schilling's "Ingwelde" fell flat after this gigantic work. The programme notes describe it as a short movement, presenting no salient formal characteristics; it only remains to add that it presents nothing worth remembering, or to incite a wish for a second hearing.

After the great modern masters of gorgeous tone painting and their feeble imitator, the symphony of Mozart came like the sun, the clear blue sky, and the singing of birds when the thunder and the tempest have passed by. Lucidity of ideas, mastery of form that is something more than academic, and the heaven-descended gift of melody still hold their own. The playing was superb. Berlioz's orchestration of Weber's favorite "Invitation a la Valse" brought the concert to a pleasant and happy conclusion.

The programme book contained an interesting statistical table of the work of the orchestra since its foundation. Germany heads the list of composers with 79. America is fourth with 12, chief among whom are Chadwick, Foote, McDowell and the veteran J. K. Paine. In number of programme appearances, Beethoven leads, far ahead of his nearest competitor, Wagner.

The second concert of the Symphony Orchestra will be on Wednesday evening, Nov. 25; the soloist will be Carl Halir, the great German violin virtuoso, now regarded as the legitimate successor of Joachim. He has never been heard in this country.

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The sale of season tickets for the twelfth season in this city of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is announced for tomorrow morning at Albert's, 13 North Charles street. The thirty-eight performances which this organization has given in this city, under the leadership of Conductors Gericke, Nikisch and the present leader, Mr. Paur, have established these concerts as the leading musical events of the season. The list of soloists announced for the coming series includes Mme. Melba, who will be the soloist at the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe, where she has won the highest praise in all the principal musical centers; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at his appearance with the orchestra last season; Mr. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the renowned violinist, from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country. The list of composers whose works are to be performed includes Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Weber, Tschaikowski, Liszt, Berlioz, Bizet and our own Mr. Burmeister. One entire program will be devoted to Wagner.

The dates announced for the concerts in this season's series are Wednesday evenings, November 11, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24.

THE SUN.

BALTIMORE, MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1896

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Works to Be Performed During Its Twelfth Annual Season in Baltimore.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which has visited Baltimore annually for the past eleven years, will begin its twelfth season here on Wednesday evening, November 11. This will be its thirty-ninth performance in Baltimore. The dates of the remaining four concerts this winter are December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24. The sale of season seats will open on Monday, October 19.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven Symphony No. 2, the Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4 and the Schumann C major Symphony. The overtures are the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" by Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann.

Other selections of interest will be the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance" and a new symphonic poem by Mr. Richard Burmeister, of this city. The success of the Wagner concert last season justifies the announcement of a repetition of this popular form of programme this year.

The list of soloists include Mme. Melba, Mr. Carl Halir, a famous violinist of Berlin, M. Pol Plancon, basso from the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Ben Davies, who made a favorable impression at the closing concert last season.

Especial importance is attached to the announcement of the reappearance in this country, after a seven-years' absence in Europe, of Mme. Teresa Carreno. Mme. Carreno's playing will be readily recalled for its extreme brilliancy and warmth.

The announcement of the five concerts to be given the coming season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will arouse the usual interest among all lovers of the best music in thist city.

For 11 years this organization has visited Baltimore, maintaining from the date of its first concert, on April 12, 1886, the highest standard of performance. No comments have ever been heard as to the variable playing of this orchestra from one season to another, but always the same acknowledged finish and almost perfection of ensemble playing. One of the greatest tributes that could be paid to the quality of these concerts is the attendance each year of the same loyal patronage, occupying practically the same seats, and always an increasing number of newcomers.

Among other great advantages which Baltimore has enjoyed in its new Music Hall is the giving of a permanency to the audience-room, in which these admirable concerts are given, in marked contrast to the wanderings of the orchestra in previous years. Baltimore holds the record for the greatest variety of places in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has given its concerts in any of the cities visited, but today no city in this country offers a more delightful home for the best in music than is given in the new Music Hall.

The dates of the coming season are Wednesday evenings, November 11, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24. It is safe to say that the list of soloists announced is equal, if not superior, to that of any previous season. It includes Mme. Melba, who is to be the soloist at the first concert; Mme. Teresa Carreno, who returns to this country after an absence of seven years in Europe, where she has won the highest praise in all the principal musical centres; Mr. Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the concert last season; Mr. Pol Plancon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Carl Halir, the famous violin virtuoso, from Berlin, who makes his first visit to this country.

The list of composers whose works are to be performed is sufficiently varied to suit all tastes, including Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Weber, Tschaikowsky, Liszt, Berlioz, Bizent and our own Mr. Burmeister. One entire programme will be devoted to the works of Wagner.

THE EVENING BULLETIN

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1896.

SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Brilliant Opening of the Musical Season.

At Infantry Hall last evening the Boston Symphony Orchestra began its 15th series of concerts in Providence. There was an audience of about the usual size, who proved readily responsive to the magnificent playing of the unequalled band and the extremely brilliant performance of the pianist, Mr. Martinus Sieveking. The first concert of the Symphony Orchestra may be said to mark the formal opening of the musical season and last night's performance auspiciously inaugurated one that promises to be unusually full of interesting events. The programme for the evening was as follows:

Overture to "Sakuntala," Op. 13..........
..............................Karl Goldmark
Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1............
in B-flat minor, Op. 23...............
..................Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky
I. Allegro non troppo e molto moderato.
II. Allegro con spirito.
III. Andantino semplice.
IV. Allegro con fuoco.
Prelude to Act II., "Ingwelde"..............
..............................Max Schillings
(First Time.)
Symphony in G minor.......................
..................Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
I. Allegro molto (G minor)
II. Andante (E-flat major)
III. Menuetto: Allegro (G minor)
Trio (G major)
IV. Finale: Allegro assai (G minor)
"Invitation to the Dance"..................
....................Karl Maria von Weber
(Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)

The sticklers for contrast in programme making might revel in this one. Here are the old and the new school side by side; the ancient master of form jostles elbows with modern apostles of the free style; comparison is invited between music that is great through simplicity of structure, keen sense of proportion and genuine melodic invention, and that which arrests attention by complexity of detail, gorgeousness of coloring, powerful dynamic contrasts and increased sonority of the enlarged modern orchestra.

Goldmark's familiar "Sakuntala" overture, effective in spite of—or is it because of—its overloaded instrumentation and almost brutal fortissimos, was given a superbly forceful rendering, particularly by that splendid—perhaps unequalled—body of strings. Then came the famous Dutch pianist, Martinus Sievking, in Tschaikowsky's massive concerto, which the composer wrote for and dedicated to his friend, Hans von Bulow. Mr. Apthorp, in his programme notes, calls attention to the interesting fact that the first public performance of this work was in Boston (Oct. 25, 1875), Von Bulow playing the piano part with an orchestra conducted by Mr. B. J. Lang. It is probably the only instance where an important work by a European composer has been brought out in this country.

The concerto needs no tag for identification. It is Tschaikowsky from first to last in its tremendous, almost barbaric energy, its originality of melody and ingenuity of rhythm, its general broadness of feature, its apparent—but not often real—carelessness of detail, and its unflagging interest throughout a constant series of climaxes. As for the pianist, it can be said at once that he was worthy of his task. Mr. Sieveking is a player who is extremely forceful but never coarse. His technic seems extraordinary, and in fact no lesser equipment would have served here. Such opportunity as was afforded for cantilena or delicate embroidery was skillfully met, but brilliancy and bravura were the main things wanted, and these he furnished in ample measure. He was recalled, and deservedly, four or five times.

The prelude to Schilling's "Ingwelde" fell flat after this gigantic work. The programme notes describe it as a short movement, presenting no salient formal characteristics; it only remains to add that it presents nothing worth remembering, or to incite a wish for a second hearing.

After the great modern masters of gorgeous tone painting and their feeble imitator, the symphony of Mozart came like the sun, the clear blue sky, and the singing of birds when the thunder and the tempest have passed by. Lucidity of ideas, mastery of form that is something more than academic, and the heaven-descended gift of melody still hold their own. The playing was superb. Berlioz's orchestration of Weber's favorite "Invitation a la Valse" brought the concert to a pleasant and happy conclusion.

The programme book contained an interesting statistical table of the work of the orchestra since its foundation. Germany heads the list of composers with 79. America is fourth with 12, among whom are Chadwick, Foote, McDowell and the veteran J. K. Paine. In number of programme appearances, Beethoven leads, far ahead of his nearest competitor, Wagner.

The second concert of the Symphony Orchestra will be on Wednesday evening, Nov. 25; the soloist will be Carl Halir, the great German violin virtuoso, now regarded as the legitimate successor of Joachim. He has never been heard in this country.

The Hebrew Journal.

124 EAST 14th STREET,

Opposite the Academy of Music, NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 23,

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give five concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House this season, the first to take place Friday evening, November 13th, and the other four on Thursday evenings, December 10th, January 21st, February 25th, and March 25th. The list of soloists includes Moritz Rosenthal, who will play Chopin's E minor Concerto; Carl Halir, Teresa Carreno, Ben Davics, and others. Mr. Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven B flat Symphony No. 4, the Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, Schumann's No. 2 and Tschaikowsky's No. 4 Symphonies. Two novelties will be performed, the entr'acte from "Ingwelde," by Schilling, and the symphonic poem, "Wallenstein," by Smetana.

The Telegram

EVENING AND SUNDAY.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1896.

The precision that characterizes every performance of the Boston Symphony orchestra compels the admiration of those who can not always comprehend the music. There are some portions of every program that are unintelligible even with the admirable analyses that are given by Mr. William F. Apthorp but there is no person who can fail to appreciate the wonderful exactness of production that marks every measure. Mr. Emil Paur has kept the great organization up to the standard set in former years and last evening opened the fifteenth Providence season quite as satisfactorily as he and his predecessors on the conductor's stand have done in years previous. He also had the pleasure of entertaining a thoroughly sympathetic audience, one that was in touch with the efforts of the musicians and not alarmed at applause.

The program was made up as follows:

Karl Goldmark, overture to "Sakuntala," op. 13; Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky, concerto for pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor, op. 23; 1, "Allegro non troppo e molto moderato"; 2, "Allegro con spirito"; 3, "Andantino semplice"; 4, "Allegro con fuoco"; Max Schillings, prelude to Act II, "Ingwelde," (first time; Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, symphony in G-minor (Koechel, 550); 1, "Allegro molto" (G minor), 4-4; 2, "Andante" (E-flat major), 6-8; 3. "Menuetto; Allegro" (G minor), 3-4; trio (G major), 3-4; 4, finale "Allegro assai" (G minor), 4-4; Karl Maria von Weber, "Invitation to the Dance." (Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)

It was arranged well, being so constituted as not to become tiresome in any sense and affording opportunities for showing the orchestra at its best. The overture was not too deep to be followed easily and was a little out of the ordinary in that it gave a prominence to the harp that is seldom brought in by composers. The concert aroused the audience to its highest pitch of enthusiasm. Mr. Martinus Sieveking is not a stranger here, as was evidenced by his reception and the hope of a grand performance was never better fulfilled. His playing was without the effort that some performers of equal rank adopt when they face the piano in public. It was graceful, forceful and wonderful. More than that, the concert was of a semi-publican nature, being tuneful and rhythmical enough to please an ordinary listener and at the same time sufficiently classical to conform to the ideas of those who demand something above the average comprehension. The first movement, although the longest of the four, did not provide the chance for display that came in the third and fourth, the last two winning applause that threatened not to end at once. Again and again Mr. Sieveking bowed his acknowledgements, the audience finally subsiding in readiness for the remainder of the program.

There is nothing to wake up an audience in listening to Schilling's prelude and Mozart's symphony being in the same line as all works of that class, more grand and majestic then most of them to be sure, brought out only an ordinary amount of appreciation but the concluding number sent everybody home in the most rollicking good humor. It was almost irresistible, that exquisite waltz movement that everybody knows, and the absolutely faultless manner in which it was played only added to its charm. It was a fitting end to the fifty-second performance in this city.

The next concert occurs Nov. 25.

Boston Journal.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

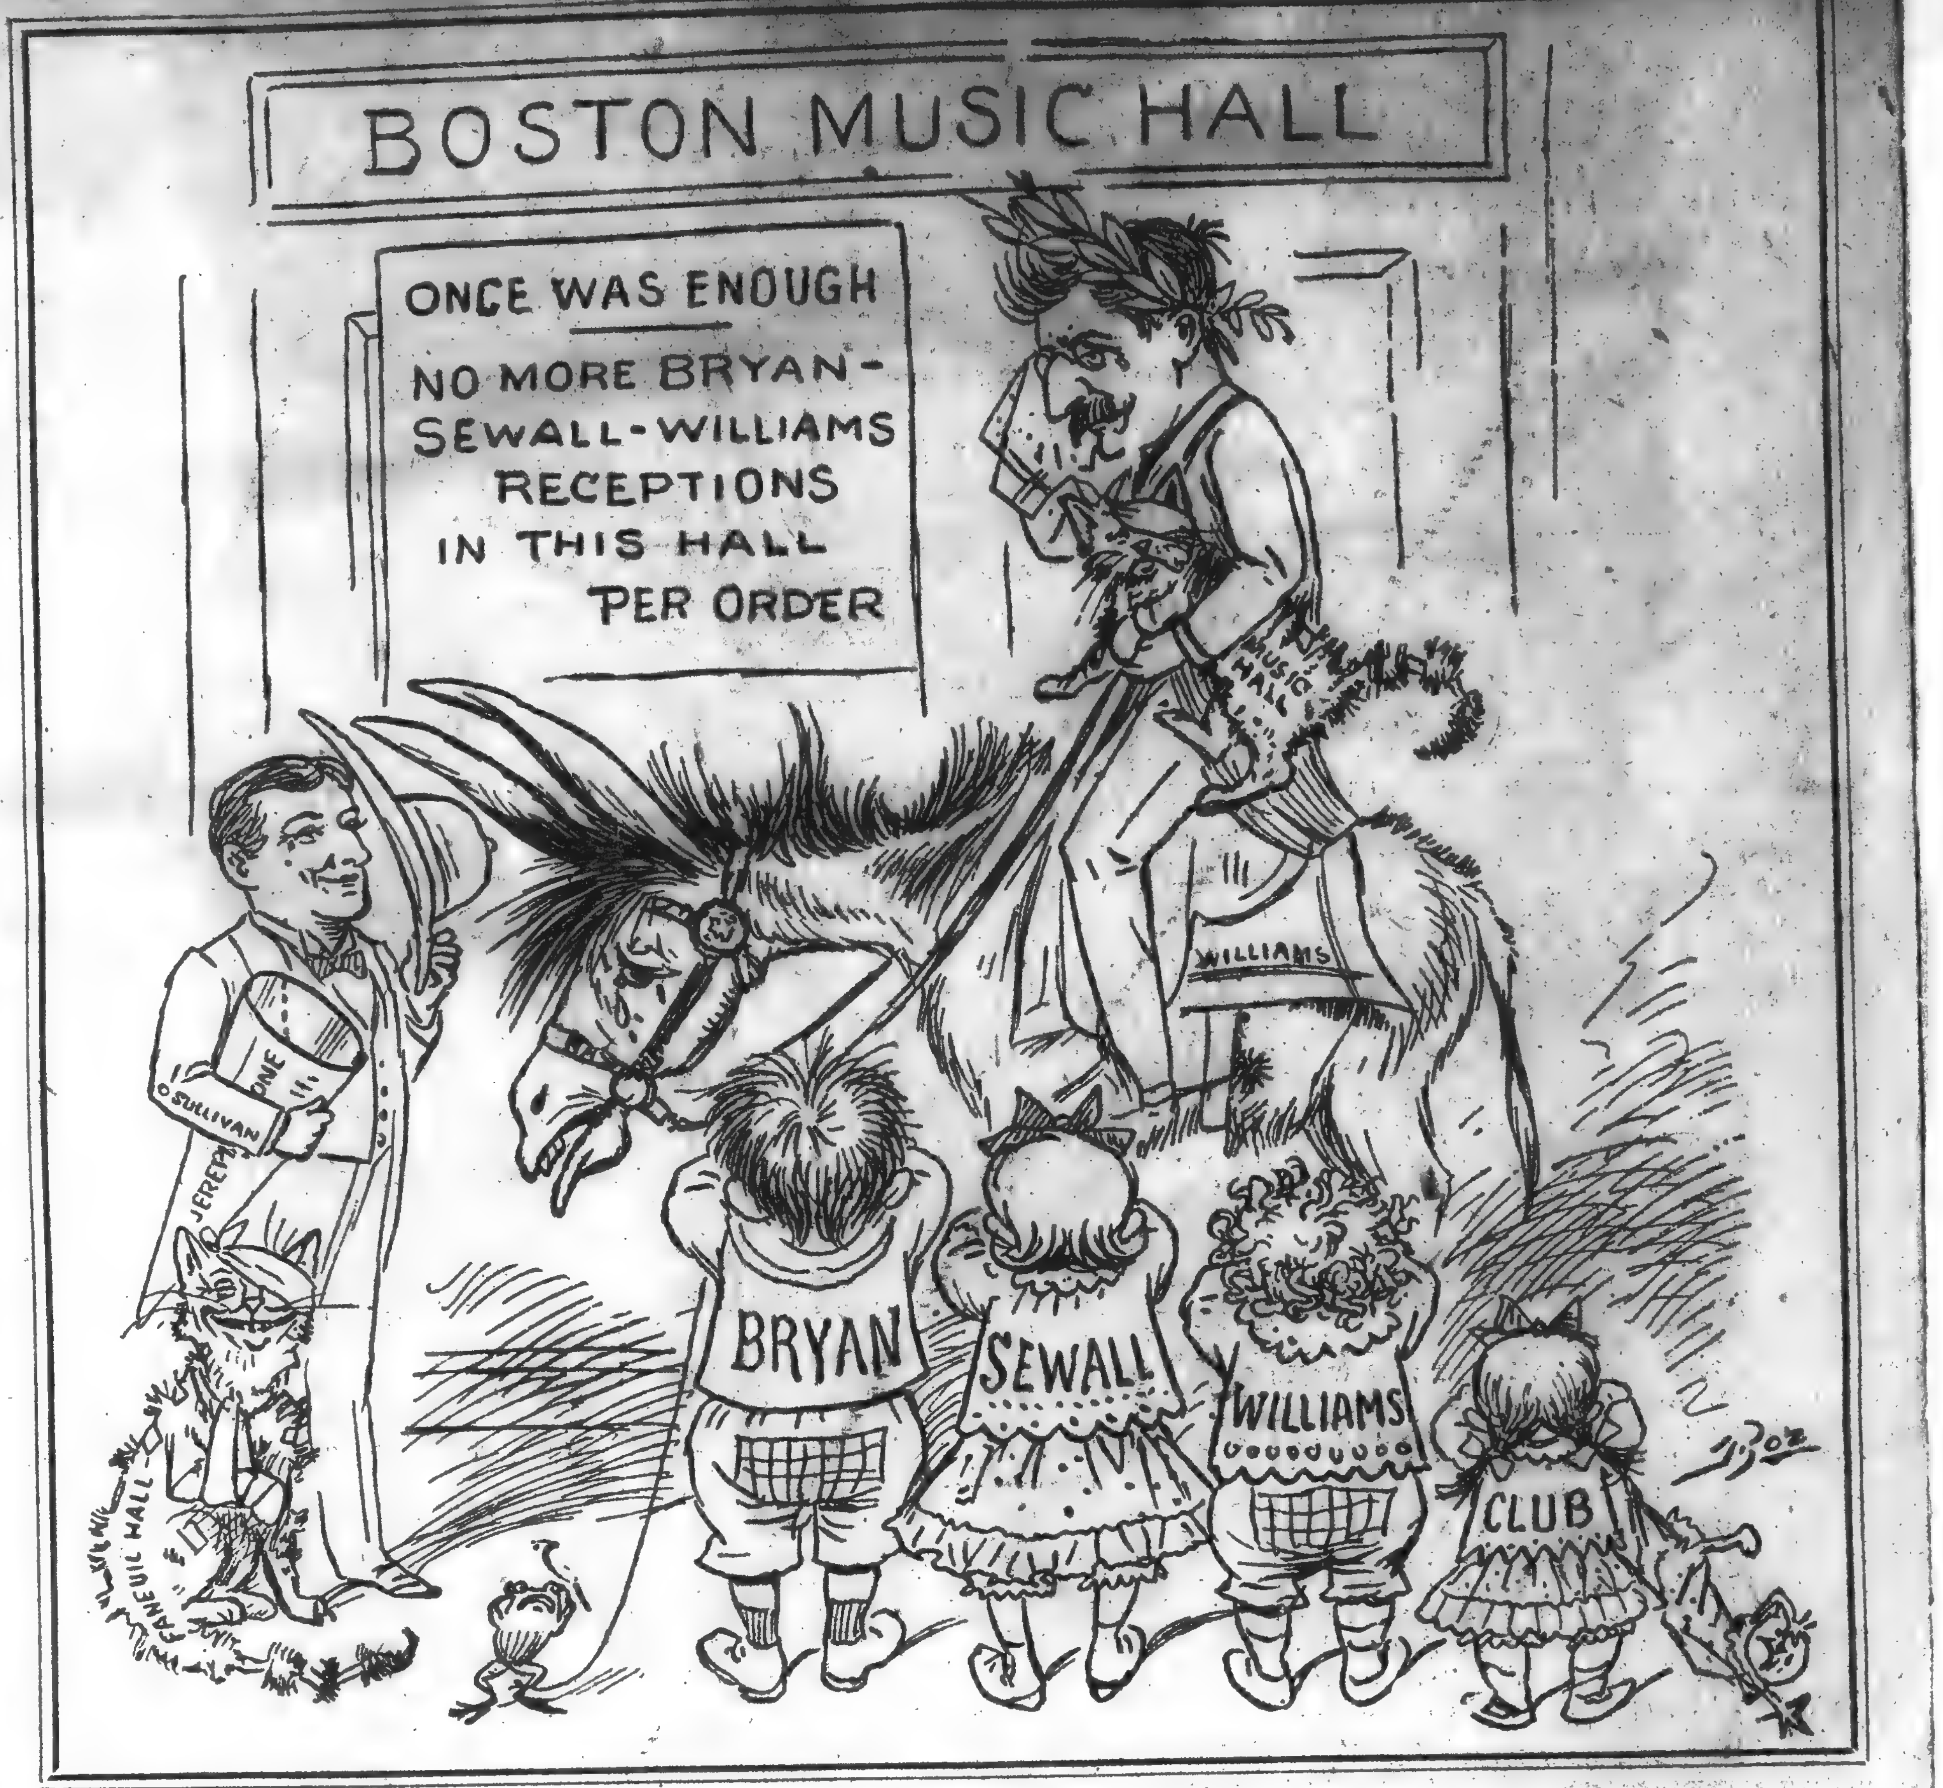
The program of the Symphony concert this evening in Music Hall will include overture to "Gwendoline," Chabrier; concerto for piano No. 1, B flat minor, Tschaikowsky (Mr. Martinus Sieveking, pianist); Rhapsody, No. 3, Dvorak; "Jupiter" symphony, Mozart.

Seats are now on sale at the University Book Store, Cambridge, for the ten concerts to be given in Sanders Theatre by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The concerts will be given Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17, 31. Jan. 14, Feb. 4, March 4, 18, April 8 and 29. Among the soloists will be Mrs. Januschowsky, Messrs. Ben Davies, Carl Halir, Kneisel, Joseffy, Sieveking.

Boston Journal.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1896.

SHUT OUT IN THE COLD.



Music Hall Can Have Its Symphony Concerts, but It Wants No More B. S. W. Concertos.

NOT GOOD TENANTS.

The refusal of the proprietors of Music Hall to allow the Bryan-Sewall-Williams Club to hire the hall for the purpose of giving a reception to Mr. G. F. Williams is a striking indication of how low Mr. Williams and his friends have fallen in the opinion of business men.

The Popocrats, who had the hall when Mr. Bryan was in town, behaved so outrageously that they can not engage it to welcome home their shining light It was Mr. Williams's own scheme that crazy all-night session upon premises which were held by force. It was the silliest of all the cheap tricks the "unterrified" have tried in the Hub, and it must not surprise them to be told that little boys who do not know how to act in an orderly fashion should not expect to be recognized as reputable parties to a business contract.

Prize fighters have never had any difficulty in hiring Music Hall, which has been put to all sorts of uses, from serving as the meeting place of a Baptist church to being the arena for bruisers and bottle-holders. But Popocrats are a class with which business men are not anxious to deal. Bruisers are welcomed, but Bryanites are not wanted.

If the "gang" had secured the hall it would have been a busy night for the police and the ambulances. The Law and Order League, for the sake of public peace, ought to strive to keep Boston Popocrats away from each other.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 25, 1896.
Copyrighted. 1896. Post Publishing Company.

AT THE SYMPHONY

Sieveking Delighted a Large Audience—The Orchestra.

The second Symphony concert last evening brought out a large gathering, many persons undoubtedly being attracted by the appearance of Martinus Sieveking, the pianist, who made a favorable impression at one of these concerts last December.

The programme opened with the overture to "Gwendoline" by Emmanuel Chabrier, which had never before been heard in this city. The composition is written in a free form and there is much elaborate development. The earlier portions are noisy and rather discordant, but toward the close there are several measures of delightful harmony. The work, however, is chiefly interesting because of its similarity in style and treatment to Wagner.

Mr. Sieveking was next heard in the Tschaikowski concerto, No. 1, which was heard for the fourth time only in this city. It was first played by Von Bulow almost exactly twenty-one years ago. In 1885 B. J. Lang played it, and in 1891 it was essayed by Mme. Helen Hopekirk. It is a most stately piece of orchestration and admirably served to show Mr. Sieveking in many styles and moods, because of the varying character of the movements. The concerto was played throughout with exquisite grace and charm and showed him more than ever to be a most finished artist. At every point his work was clear cut and thoroughly well defined and his generally easy manner of execution added much to his effective playing. Mr. Sieveking was given a splendid ovation at the close, and he may

---

Martinus Sieveking made his first appearance this season as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Music Hall Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. The following programme was rendered: Overture, "Gwendoline," Chabrier; concerto for pianoforte No. 1, B-flat minor, Tschaikowsky; rhapsody No. 3, Dvorak; symphony, "Jupiter," Mozart. This year he will make a tour of all the large cities in the United States, under the direction of the well-known impressario, Mr. Victor Thrane. During his brief stay in this city he stopped at the Hotel Brunswick.

The Symphony Orchestra will give ten concerts in Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, this season. Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17-31, Jan. 14, Feb. 14, March 4-18, April 8-29. The soloists will be Mrs. Januschowsky, Miss Little, Messrs. Carl Halir, Franz Kneisel, Ben Davies and Martinus Sieveking.

THE EVENING BULLETIN

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1896.

SYMPHONY CONCERT.

A Brilliant Opening of the Musical Season.

At Infantry Hall last evening the Boston Symphony Orchestra began its 15th series of concerts in Providence. There was an audience of about the usual size, who proved readily responsive to the magnificent playing of the unequalled band and the extremely brilliant performance of the pianist, Mr. Martinus Sieveking. The first concert of the Symphony Orchestra may be said to mark the formal opening of the musical season, and last night's performance auspiciously inaugurated one that promises to be unusually full of interesting events. The programme for the evening was as follows:

Overture to "Sakuntala," Op. 13..........
..........Karl Goldmark
Concerto for Pianoforte, No. 1..........
in B-flat minor, Op. 23..........
..........Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky
I. Allegro non troppo e molto moderato.
II. Allegro con spirito.
III. Andantino semplice.
IV. Allegro con fuoco.
Prelude to Act II., "Ingwelde"..........
..........Max Schillings
(First Time.)
Symphony in G minor..........
..........Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
I. Allegro molto (G minor)
II. Andante (E-flat major)
III. Menuetto: Allegro (G minor)
Trio (G major)
IV. Finale: Allegro assai (G minor)
"Invitation to the Dance"..........
..........Karl Maria von Weber
(Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)

The sticklers for contrast in programme making might revel in this one. Here are the old and the new school side by side; the ancient master of form jostles elbows with modern apostles of the free style; comparison is invited between music that is great through simplicity of structure, keen sense of proportion and genuine melodic invention, and that which arrests attention by complexity of detail, gorgeousness of coloring, powerful dynamic contrasts and increased sonority of the enlarged modern orchestra.

Goldmark's familiar "Sakuntala" overture, effective in spite of—or is it because of—its overloaded instrumentation and almost brutal fortissimos, was given a superbly forceful rendering, particularly by that splendid—perhaps unequalled—body of strings. Then came the famous Dutch pianist, Martinus Sievking, in Tschaikowsky's massive concerto, which the composer wrote for and dedicated to his friend, Hans von Bulow. Mr. Apthorp, in his programme notes, calls attention to the interesting fact that the first public performance of this work was in Boston (Oct. 25, 1875), Von Bulow playing the piano part with an orchestra conducted by Mr. B. J. Lang. It is probably the only instance where an important work by a European composer has been brought out in this country.

The concerto needs no tag for identification. It is Tschaikowsky from first to last in its tremendous, almost barbaric energy, its originality of melody and ingenuity of rhythm, its general broadness of feature, its apparent—but not often real—carelessness of detail, and its unflagging interest throughout a constant series of climaxes. As for the pianist, it can be said at once that he was worthy of his task. Mr. Sieveking is a player who is extremely forceful but never coarse. His technic seems extraordinary, and in fact no lesser equipment would have served here. Such opportunity as was afforded for cantilena or delicate embroidery was skillfully met, but brilliancy and bravura were the main things wanted, and these he furnished in ample measure. He was recalled, and deservedly, four or five times.

The prelude to Schilling's "Ingwelde" fell flat after this gigantic work. The programme notes describe it as a short movement, presenting no salient formal characteristics; it only remains to add that it presents nothing worth remembering, or to incite a wish for a second hearing.

After the great modern masters of gorgeous tone painting and their feeble imitator, the symphony of Mozart came like the sun, the clear blue sky, and the singing of birds when the thunder and the tempest have passed by. Lucidity of ideas, mastery of form that is something more than academic, and the heaven-descended gift of melody still hold their own. The playing was superb. Berlioz's orchestration of Weber's favorite "Invitation a la Valse" brought the concert to a pleasant and happy conclusion.

The programme book contained an interesting statistical table of the work of the orchestra since its foundation. Germany heads the list of composers with 79. America is fourth with 12, chief among whom are Chadwick, Foote, McDowell and the veteran J. K. Paine. In number of programme appearances, Beethoven leads, far ahead of his nearest competitor, Wagner.

The second concert of the Symphony Orchestra will be on Wednesday evening, Nov. 25; the soloist will be Carl Halir, the great German violin virtuoso, now regarded as the legitimate successor of Joachim. He has never been heard in this country.

The Hebrew Journal.

124 EAST 14th STREET,
Opposite the Academy of Music, NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 23,

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give five concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House this season, the first to take place Friday evening, November 13th, and the other four on Thursday evenings, December 10th, January 21st, February 25th, and March 25th. The list of soloists includes Moritz Rosenthal, who will play Chopin's E minor Concerto; Carl Halir, Teresa Carreno, Ben Davics, and others. Mr. Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven B flat Symphony No. 4, the Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, Schumann's No. 2 and Tschaikowsky's No. 4 Symphonies. Two novelties will be performed, the entr'acte from "Ingwelde," by Schilling, and the symphonic poem, "Wallenstein," by Smetana.

The Telegram
EVENING AND SUNDAY.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1896.

The precision that characterizes every performance of the Boston Symphony orchestra compels the admiration of those who can not always comprehend the music. There are some portions of every program that are unintelligible even with the admirable analyses that are given by Mr. William F. Apthorp but there is no person who can fail to appreciate the wonderful exactness of production that marks every measure. Mr. Emil Paur has kept the great organization up to the standard set in former years and last evening opened the fifteenth Providence season quite as satisfactorily as he and his predecessors on the conductor's stand have done in years previous. He also had the pleasure of entertaining a thoroughly sympathetic audience, one that was in touch with the efforts of the musicians and not alarmed at applause.

The program was made up as follows:

Karl Goldmark, overture to "Sakuntala," op. 13; Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky, concerto for pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor, op. 23; 1, "Allegro non troppo e molto moderato"; 2, "Allegro con spirito"; 3, "Andantino semplice"; 4, "Allegro con fuoco"; Max Schillings, prelude to Act II, "Ingwelde," (first time; Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, symphony in G-minor (Koechel, 550); 1, "Allegro molto" (G minor), 4-4; 2, "Andante" (E-flat major), 6-8; 3, "Menuetto; Allegro" (G minor), 3-4; trio (G major), 3-4; 4, finale "Allegro assai" (G minor), 4-4; Karl Maria von Weber, "Invitation to the Dance." (Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)

It was arranged well, being so constituted as not to become tiresome in any sense and affording opportunities for showing the orchestra at its best. The overture was not too deep to be followed easily and was a little out of the ordinary in that it gave a prominence to the harp that is seldom brought in by composers. The concert aroused the audience to its highest pitch of enthusiasm. Mr. Martinus Sieveking is not a stranger here, as was evidenced by his reception and the hope of a grand performance was never better fulfilled. His playing was without the effort that some performers of equal rank adopt when they face the piano in public. It was graceful, forceful and wonderful. More than that, the concert was of a semi-publican nature, being tuneful and rhythmical enough to please an ordinary listener and at the same time sufficiently classical to conform to the ideas of those who demand something above the average comprehension. The first movement, although the longest of the four, did not provide the chance for display that came in the third and fourth, the last two winning applause that threatened not to end at once. Again and again Mr. Sieveking bowed his acknowledgements, the audience finally subsiding in readiness for the remainder of the program.

There is nothing to wake up an audience in listening to Schilling's prelude and Mozart's symphony being in the same line as all works of that class, more grand and majestic then most of them to be sure, brought out only an ordinary amount of appreciation but the concluding number sent everybody home in the most rollicking good humor. It was almost irresistible, that exquisite waltz movement that everybody knows, and the absolutely faultless manner in which it was played only added to its charm. It was a fitting end to the fifty-second performance in this city.

The next concert occurs Nov. 25.

Boston Journal.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

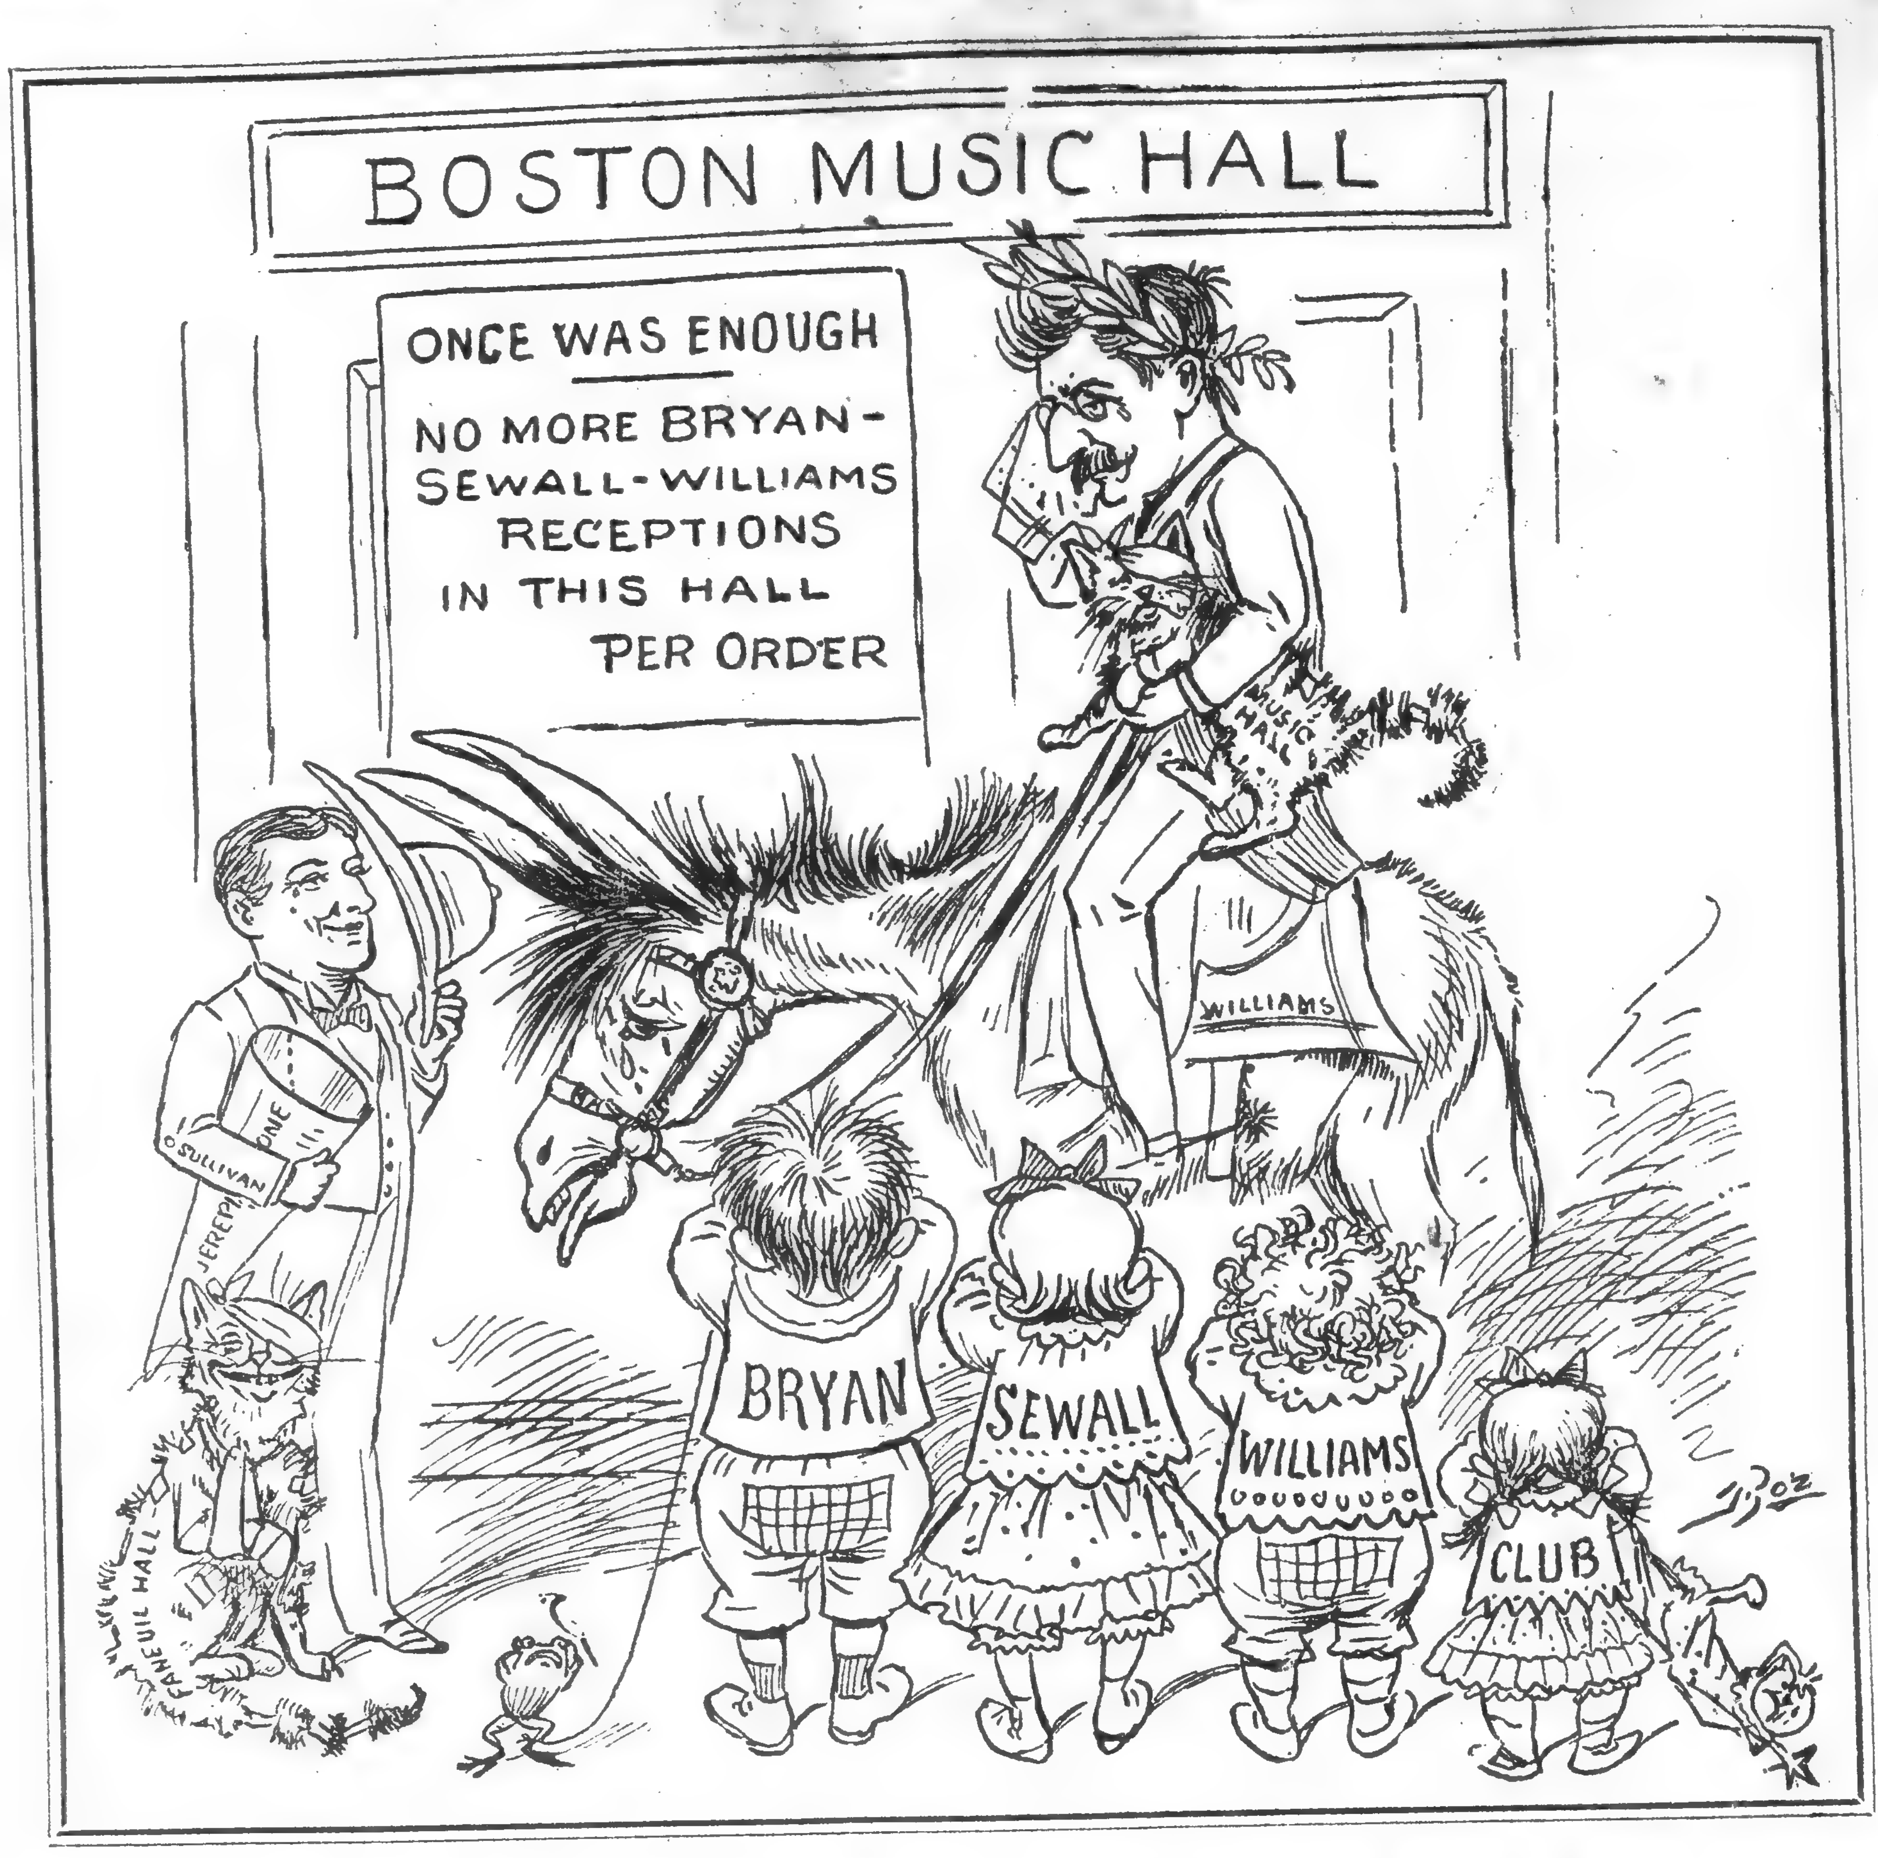
The program of the Symphony concert this evening in Music Hall will include overture to "Gwendoline," Chabrier; concerto for piano No. 1, B flat minor, Tschaikowsky (Mr. Martinus Sieveking, pianist); Rhapsody, No. 3, Dvorak; "Jupiter" symphony, Mozart.

Seats are now on sale at the University Book Store, Cambridge, for the ten concerts to be given in Sanders Theatre by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The concerts will be given Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17, 31 Jan. 14, Feb. 4, March 4, 18, April 8 and 29. Among the soloists will be Mrs. Januschowsky, Messrs. Ben Davies, Carl Halir, Kneisel, Joseffy, Sieveking.

Boston Journal.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1896.

SHUT OUT IN THE COLD.



Music Hall Can Have Its Symphony Concerts, but It Wants No More B. S. W. Concertos.

NOT GOOD TENANTS.

The refusal of the proprietors of Music Hall to allow the Bryan-Sewall-Williams Club to hire the hall for the purpose of giving a reception to Mr. G. F. Williams is a striking indication of how low Mr. Williams and his friends have fallen in the opinion of business men.

The Popocrats, who had the hall when Mr. Bryan was in town, behaved so outrageously that they cannot engage it to welcome home their shining light It was Mr. Williams's own scheme that crazy all-night session upon premises which were held by force. It was the silliest of all the cheap tricks the "unterrified" have tried in the Hub, and it must not surprise them to be told that little boys who do not know how to act in an orderly fashion should not expect to be recognized as reputable parties to a business contract.

Prize fighters have never had any difficulty in hiring Music Hall, which has been put to all sorts of uses, from serving as the meeting place of a Baptist church to being the arena for bruisers and bottle-holders. But Popocrats are a class with which business men are not anxious to deal. Bruisers are welcomed, but Bryanites are not wanted.

If the "gang" had secured the hall it would have been a busy night for the police and the ambulances. The Law and Order League, for the sake of public peace, ought to strive to keep Boston Popocrats away from each other.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 25, 1896.
Copyrighted. 1896. Post Publishing Company.

AT THE SYMPHONY

Sieveking Delighted a Large Audience—The Orchestra.

The second Symphony concert last evening brought out a large gathering, many persons undoubtedly being attracted by the appearance of Martinus Sieveking, the pianist, who made a favorable impression at one of these concerts last December.

The programme opened with the overture to "Gwendoline" by Emmanuel Chabrier, which had never before been heard in this city. The composition is written in a free form and there is much elaborate development. The earlier portions are noisy and rather discordant, but toward the close there are several measures of delightful harmony. The work, however, is chiefly interesting because of its similarity in style and treatment to Wagner.

Mr. Sieveking was next heard in the Tschaikowski concerto, No. 1, which was heard for the fourth time only in this city. It was first played by Von Bulow almost exactly twenty-one years ago. In 1885 B. J. Lang played it, and in 1891 it was essayed by Mme. Helen Hopekirk. It is a most stately piece of orchestration and admirably served to show Mr. Sieveking in many styles and moods, because of the varying character of the movements. The concerto was played throughout with exquisite grace and charm and showed him more than ever to be a most finished artist. At every point his work was clear cut and thoroughly well defined and his generally easy manner of execution added much to his effective playing. Mr. Sieveking was given a splendid ovation at the close, and he may

---

Martinus Sieveking made his first appearance this season as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Music Hall Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. The following programme was rendered: Overture, "Gwendoline," Chabrier; concerto for pianoforte No. 1, B-flat minor, Tschaikowsky; rhapsody No. 3, Dvorak; symphony, "Jupiter," Mozart. This year he will make a tour of all the large cities in the United States, under the direction of the well-known impressario, Mr. Victor Thrane. During his brief stay in this city he stopped at the Hotel Brunswick.

The Symphony Orchestra will give ten concerts in Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, this season. Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17-31, Jan. 14, Feb. 14, March 4-18, April 8-29. The soloists will be Mrs. Januschowsky, Miss Little, Messrs. Carl Halir, Franz Kneisel, Ben Davies and Martinus Sieveking.

BOSTON
HOME JOURNAL
A PAPER OF TO-DAY

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

THAT Conductor Emil Paur has turned over a new leaf as regards symphony concert programmes was happily demonstrated by the unique and exceptionally delightful programme he selected for the first symphony concert of the season.

A greater orchestral conductor than Emil Paur it would be difficult to name, but it has often been suggested in the past not that he loved the quasi international cause of music any the less, but the musical interests of his vaterland more. Quite to the contrary, his programme for the concert last Saturday evening was in the best sense of the term an eclectic and highly judicious choice. The works performed were the overture to Benvenuto Cellini, Berlioz; L'Enterrement d'Ophelie, Bourgault-Ducoudray; Orchestral Suite in D major, op. 49, Saint-Saëns; Symphony in F major, No. 8, Beethoven; and Overture to Euryanthe, Weber.

Void though the supply be of any genuine melody in the overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," its enchanting and veritably drastic orchestration is well-nigh without a parallel. A very individual state of feeling lies quite indisputably at the basis of this overture; but that it is really a great musical work, so far as the representation of an ideal in concrete form is concerned, will be taken even by Berlioz's blindest admirers cum grano salis. The selection by Bourgault-Ducoudray was well worth a single hearing. Despite its composer's nationality it is tinged with the lusciousness of the best kind of Italian music, but at the same time the whole seems inadequate in representing any such genius as has been quite unanimously attributed to Bourgault-Ducoudray.

An inequality of style and an insincerity of purpose seem to cling to the suite by Saint-Saëns.

A thoroughly pleasing, neat and artistically made work it surely is, but that it is also a veritable Janus, with one face turned backward to Bach and Haydn, and the other forwards, is also true.

In this suite Saint-Saëns pays homage to Bach, Händel and Haydn. It is only in the romance that his real individuality is permitted to have its full and free sway.

The prelude has a canonized theme written over a very congenial organ point and in a happy-go-lucky fashion, which nevertheless gives free and spontaneous play to the master's art of counterpoint.

The working out is carried on for a considerable period and with much variety, ingenuity and effect.

Nothing could be more full of frolic than the final. In this respect it never hesitates from first to last. Still it is the weakest part of the work and the style of the music is very considerably influenced by the symphonic finals of Haydn.

Beethoven's 8th symphony was written when the master was seeking health in a quiet Austrian town, and in one of the dreariest periods of his career; yet the work shows the profoundest disregard of melancholy and is unquestionably the liveliest, cheeriest and jolliest of the nine.

Berlioz said of the allegro scherzando that "it had fallen from Heaven into the composer's mind," and that he had written it at a single sitting.

The origin of the quaint and playful clock tune was far more human than the rhetorical Frenchman conceived, for it was originally the subject of a catch which Beethoven wrote to the words, "Ta, ta, ta lieber Mälzel, lebe wohl, sehe wohl"—this on occasion of a supper to Mälzel, the renowned inventor of the metronome.

The coda is fully as remarkable as the rest of the movement.

With an inexplicable waywardness Beethoven stops his music in the very height of its career and concludes with a trivial as well as a very weak Italian cadence. It is as though a street band had played a Rossinian melody under his window and made the enraged master, after making a genuine Rossinian peroration, lay down his pen in abject despair. The finale for the concert was the overture to "Euryanthe"—or Weber's sole grand opera, as the learned Dr. Spita has nicely said.

Of the orchestra's playing at this concert the evidences of a thorough and masterly preparation of a symphony concert programme have seldom been more numerous or gratifying. Conductor Paur was in his most musical mood, and at the opening of the concert the greeting he received from the audience was beyond cavil of the heartiest and most enthusiastic description.

Ten concerts are to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, beginning Tuesday evening of next week. Mr. Emil Paur will conduct, and the solo artists already engaged are, Mrs. Von Januschowsky, Miss Little, Messrs. Davies, Halir, Sieveking, Joseffy, Kneisel and others. A limited number of seats have been reserved for college officers and guests and the remainder go on sale to-day.

OCTOBER 24, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY RUSH.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

Who are the most highly cultivated people in the country? The Bostonians. Of course. Would any dare dispute their claim? Is it not strange then that in their pursuit of the most elevated form of enjoyment, Bostonians should act like greedy animals, like escaped lunatics, like anything but human beings endowed with decent self-respect and regard for others?

The delights of the symphony season are now upon us, and Oh, alas! the horrors of the symphony rush are once more permitted. Why are these things thus? Is anything gained by anybody in this mad scramble, this

"Meleé of hoofs and horns and heads
That wars and wrangles and scatters and spreads,"

to quote from "Lasca," that cowboy story beloved by the "dramatic recitationist?" In view of the women's hats the quotation is really graphic, though in justice to the symphony crowd it must be said that there is very little or no actual wrangling. It is a good-humored company. But it is also very determined, and there is an awful lot of pushing and jamming which belongs only to the age of barbarism, and which is not only outrageous but dangerous. Glasses and spectacles are broken, cape-strings and bonnet-ties are pulled off, jewelry lost and not infrequently some woman becomes faint or is really bruised.

If anything were accomplished by it all there would be more reason for the tolerance of the practice. But since only one can pass the gate at a time, and the opportunity to gain any precedence in seats comes only after the ticket has been taken, what is the sense in this pell-mell crowding the moment the signal is given for opening the door?

Why cannot the waiting be done in line, since, as I said before, only one person is allowed to pass at a time? Once past the gate as much haste may be made as is the direct result of individual ambition. The press will be bad enough then, but the stairs are sufficiently broad to make it at least moderately safe and comfortable. Those who wait, of course, would make a long line in single file, but if it can be done elsewhere why not here?

In answer to this complaint it will be said that "those who don't like it need n't do it." That is probably very true, to a degree, for from appearances one would say that many of those who go on rush tickets could abundantly afford to do otherwise. But the students, for whom there is no alternative! For their sake, and incidentally for those other people who are horribly and needlessly squeezed every Friday afternoon, cannot some other custom be invented?

A. S. B.

American Art Journal.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, OCT. 24, 1896.

WHAT IS GOING ON IN BOSTON.

The First Symphony Concert.

There was the usual crowd, and Director Paur greeted with the usual welcome. Two overtures, Berlioz's Cellini and Weber's Euryanthe. The Symphony was Beethoven's Eighth, with its witching beauty, and that striking air in the metronone movement which seagoers hear sailors sing as a shanty, with the chaotic chorus words, "Victoria, Victoria, Very well done Jim Crow," which is said to have begun years ago in London, prompted by some scandal about a sable valet in her British Majesty's service. Two first times: one the pathetic Burial of Ophelia, by Louis Albert Bourgault Ducoudray, so well played that Paur cried Bravo; the other, the orchestral suite in D, op. 59, by Saint-Saens. It is worth mentioning that Ducondray is 56 years old, first studied law, was taught by Thomas, won the Grand Prix de Rome with a cantata, wrote an opera, visited the Orient officially, and published studies of Greek, Armenian and Turkish music.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 117.

SUNDAY, OCT. 25, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Two Selections That Are New to Boston Played.

Overture from "Gwendoline," by Chabrier, Shows Spirit and Style Notably New—The Dvorak Rhapsody a Brilliant Number—M. Martinus Sieveking the Soloist.

The programme for last evening's concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra cert by the Boston Symphony orchestra, in Music Hall, was:

Overture, "Gwendoline"	E. Chabrier
Concerto for pianoforte, No. 1	Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody, No. 3	Dvorak
Symphony, "Jupiter"	Mozart

The soloist was Mr. Martinus Sieveking. The selections from Chabrier and Dvorak were given for the first time in Boston. The only other work of the former heard here is an entr'acte from the opera of which the composition played last evening is the overture. It is distinctly and characteristically an opera overture, full of the storm of battle, save when a brief moment of tenderly impassioned melody, undoubtedly typical of the heroine of the story, breaks through the uproar. In spirit and style the work is notably new, and it has tremendous fire, and an almost fierce vitality, and its onward sweep and furious pace are maintained with unfaltering vigor. The score is massively gorgeous in color, and though it clearly indicates the influence of Wagner on the composer, yet it savors of an interestingly piquant individuality of its own. What there is of Wagner in it is Wagner Frenchified, but it is, on the whole, Berlioz amplified nearly to exaggeration.

The programme book claims that the overture reflects Wagner's "harmonic habits," but what flowing melody there is in it has too few interrupted cadences for that, and the second theme comes to a close on the tonic with an early straightforwardness that is anything than Wagnerian. It is not music that is perfectly clear on a first hearing, but it left no doubt that it was strong, even noble, and the work of an original thinker and a master in his art. The exactions it makes on the technique of the orchestra are very great, bristling difficulties abound, and in this regard, as in every other, the overture ranks among the most modern of the modern school. It was splendidly played, and with stirring effect.

The Dvorak rhapsody is less attractive, brilliant as it is in its orchestration and ingeniously clever as it is in the development of the one theme on which it is founded. The chief fault of the work is that it is prolonged too far beyond the point at which its interest reaches its climax. Every now and then one imagines and is gratified that the end is near, but the music takes a new start and repeats tiresomely in another form what it has already said to excess. Then, too, although it is all Dvorak, pure and simple, it is not Dvorak in his most individual and most enjoyable mood, and that effect of spontaneity which is so pleasing in his more strikingly characteristic compositions gives way here to something closely resembling laborious effort, and with a result that suggests the highly proper but uninspired kappelmeister music. Mr. Paur's reading brought out all that was interesting in it, with a special feeling for its national color and its many odd rhythmical accents, and its performance by the orchestra was brilliant.

The beauty and clearness of the Mozart symphony, coming as it did at the close of a programme that was modern almost to excess, seemed intensified. That it sounded of a far-away past is unquestionable, but it is a masterpiece of one of the greatest of masters, and as such will always delight, and its finale is as peerless today in its gracefully fluent learning as it was when it first saw the light. Mr. Paur, always happy in his interpretations of Mozart, read it with almost enthusiastic sympathy, and is again to be praised for letting the composer say what he has to say without attempting to embellish him with up-to-date frills and furbelows, and making him speak with an accent that was unknown to him, while the work of the orchestra was exquisite in its finish.

Mr. Sieveking, who was received with great cordiality, renewed the favorable impression he made on his earlier appearance at these concerts by his rendering of the Tschaikowsky concerto. He has decidedly fingers of steel, and their work is always clear, masterly and respond easily to every demand that may be made on them by modern pianoforte technique. Last evening, however, he manifested a tendency to overtax the power of the instrument, a failing that did not attend his playing last season. He frequently caused the strings to jingle unpleasingly, and his tone was at times hard and lacking in variety of color. With these exceptions, his performance was thoughtful, musicianly and interesting, and in the finale his remarkable powers of technique were displayed with a brilliancy, a fire and a precision that earned for him a well-merited outburst of applause, and three as stormy recalls as any artist has received at these concerts.

The next programme is: Symphony in E minor, "Gaelic," op. 32, first time, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach; aria, "Herodiade," Massenet; variations, Brahms; aria, "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo, and overture, "Der Freischutz," Weber. Mr. G. Campanari is to be the soloist.

SUNDAY, OCT. 25, 1896.

Echoes from the Second Symphony Concert.

When Mr Sieveking appeared at the Boston symphony concerts last season the auditors were quick to comprehend the worth of an artist who fully justified an advance heralding which had placed him in the ranks of the foremost pianists of the day. In Mr Sieveking's case the artist proved to be even better than was anticipated, a pleasing as well as an unusual occurrence, for oft-times had the record of so-called foreign successes appeared undeserved to symphony patrons. Mr Sieveking was the soloist at the second concert of this season's series, and played Tschaikowsky's concerto No. 1 in B-flat minor. The other numbers of the program were Chabrier's overture to "Gwendoline," Dvorak's Slavonic "Rhapsody" in A-flat major, and Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony.

The introduction to the Tschaikowsky concerto is one of the composer's finest writings, and the broad, virile interpretation given by Mr Sieveking immediately reestablished that artist in the favorable opinions of his auditors. The sweeping chords were grandly played, the forte passages being very distinct, and this despite the fact that the performer appeared to rely entirely upon his arm and finger power. One feature of Mr Sieveking's playing is that he uses his body but slightly, even in fortissimo chords and runs. The ornamentations of the different themes of the first movement were beautifully set forth, and in the rapid octaves, against the pizzicato of strings, his work was all that could be desired. The climax of the movement was perfectly performed.

The cantabel quality of the lullaby theme was very sweet, making a notable distinction between it and the gypsy-like dance which followed. The characteristics of each were clearly defined, and the subsequent waltz melody was distinct from the others. The cadenza was brilliantly given. The elaborate working out of the dance rhythms of the third movement was very skilfully performed. In the climax the furious octave passages and the final coda on the opening theme displayed the artist's digital powers to the greatest advantage. The performer was recalled again and again at the close of the concerto.

Chabrier's overture to "Gwendoline" was played for the first time in this city. The composition is theatric and at times suggestive of Wagner's form of orchestration. The interpretation by the orchestra was smooth and evidently in keeping with the ideas of the composer. Dvorak's "Raphsody," also given for the first time here, proved the more interesting of the two compositions. In the fortissimo of the allegro the magnificent team work of the orchestra was finely shown, and the musical conversations were most delicately and harmoniously expressed. The concert closed with an excellent interpretation of Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony, the fourth movement being worthy of special mention for the brilliancy of its performance.

Mr G. Campanari will be the soloist this week. The program will be as follows: Symphony in E minor, "Gaelic," op. 32, MS first time, Mrs H. H. A. Beach; aria, "Herodiade," Massenet; variations, Brahms; aria, "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo; overture, "Freischutz," Weber.

—The first of the symphony concerts at Sanders theater, Cambridge, will be given Thursday evening. The soloists during the season will be Mme Januschowsky, Miss Lena Little, Mr Franz Kneisel, Mr Martinus Sieveking, Mr Carl Halir, Mr Ben Davies and Mr Joseffy.

—The first concert by the Boston symphony orchestra in New York this season will be given on the evening of Nov 13 at the Metropolitan opera house.

BOSTON HOME JOURNAL
A PAPER OF TO-DAY

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

THAT Conductor Emil Paur has turned over a new leaf as regards symphony concert programmes was happily demonstrated by the unique and exceptionally delightful programme he selected for the first symphony concert of the season.

A greater orchestral conductor than Emil Paur it would be difficult to name, but it has often been suggested in the past not that he loved the quasi international cause of music any the less, but the musical interests of his vaterland more. Quite to the contrary, his programme for the concert last Saturday evening was in the best sense of the term an eclectic and highly judicious choice. The works performed were the overture to Benvenuto Cellini, Berlioz; L'Enterrement d'Ophelie, Bourgault-Ducoudray; Orchestral Suite in D major, op. 49, Saint-Saëns; Symphony in F major, No. 8, Beethoven; and Overture to Euryanthe, Weber.

Void though the supply be of any genuine melody in the overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," its enchanting and veritably drastic orchestration is well-nigh without a parallel. A very individual state of feeling lies quite indisputably at the basis of this overture; but that it is really a great musical work, so far as the representation of an ideal in concrete form is concerned, will be taken even by Berlioz's blindest admirers cum grano salis. The selection by Bourgault-Ducoudray was well worth a single hearing. Despite its composer's nationality it is tinged with the lusciousness of the best kind of Italian music, but at the same time the whole seems inadequate in representing any such genius as has been quite unanimously attributed to Bourgault-Ducoudray.

An inequality of style and an insincerity of purpose seem to cling to the suite by Saint-Saëns.

A thoroughly pleasing, neat and artistically made work it surely is, but that it is also a veritable Janus, with one face turned backward to Bach and Haydn, and the other forwards, is also true.

In this suite Saint-Saëns pays homage to Bach, Händel and Haydn. It is only in the romance that his real individuality is permitted to have its full and free sway.

The prelude has a canonized theme written over a very congenial organ point and in a happy-go-lucky fashion, which nevertheless gives free and spontaneous play to the master's art of counterpoint.

The working out is carried on for a considerable period and with much variety, ingenuity and effect.

Nothing could be more full of frolic than the final. In this respect it never hesitates from first to last. Still it is the weakest part of the work and the style of the music is very considerably influenced by the symphonic finals of Haydn.

Beethoven's 8th symphony was written when the master was seeking health in a quiet Austrian town, and in one of the dreariest periods of his career; yet the work shows the profoundest disregard of melancholy and is unquestionably the liveliest, cheeriest and jolliest of the nine.

Berlioz said of the allegro scherzando that "it had fallen from Heaven into the composer's mind," and that he had written it at a single sitting.

The origin of the quaint and playful clock tune was far more human than the rhetorical Frenchman conceived, for it was originally the subject of a catch which Beethoven wrote to the words, "Ta, ta, ta lieber Mälzel, lebe wohl, sehe wohl"—this on occasion of a supper to Mälzel, the renowned inventor of the metronome.

The coda is fully as remarkable as the rest of the movement.

With an inexplicable waywardness Beethoven stops his music in the very height of its career and concludes with a trivial as well as a very weak Italian cadence. It is as though a street band had played a Rossinian melody under his window and made the enraged master, after making a genuine Rossinian peroration, lay down his pen in abject despair. The finale for the concert was the overture to "Euryanthe"—or Weber's sole grand opera, as the learned Dr. Spita has nicely said.

Of the orchestra's playing at this concert the evidences of a thorough and masterly preparation of a symphony concert programme have seldom been more numerous or gratifying. Conductor Paur was in his most musical mood, and at the opening of the concert the greeting he received from the audience was beyond cavil of the heartiest and most enthusiastic description.

Ten concerts are to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, beginning Tuesday evening of next week. Mr. Emil Paur will conduct, and the solo artists already engaged are, Mrs. Von Januschowsky, Miss Little, Messrs. Davies, Halir, Sieveking, Joseffy, Kneisel and others. A limited number of seats have been reserved for college officers and guests and the remainder go on sale to-day.

Boston Transcript

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY RUSH.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

Who are the most highly cultivated people in the country? The Bostonians. Of course. Would any dare dispute their claim? Is it not strange then that in their pursuit of the most elevated form of enjoyment, Bostonians should act like greedy animals, like escaped lunatics, like anything but human beings endowed with decent self-respect and regard for others?

The delights of the symphony season are now upon us, and Oh, alas! the horrors of the symphony rush are once more permitted. Why are these things thus? Is anything gained by anybody in this mad scramble, this

"Meleé of hoofs and horns and heads
That wars and wrangles and scatters and
spreads,"

to quote from "Lasca," that cowboy story beloved by the "dramatic recitationist?" In view of the women's hats the quotation is really graphic, though in justice to the symphony crowd it must be said that there is very little or no actual wrangling. It is a good-humored company. But it is also very determined, and there is an awful lot of pushing and jamming which belongs only to the age of barbarism, and which is not only outrageous but dangerous. Glasses and spectacles are broken, cape-strings and bonnet-ties are pulled off, jewelry lost and not infrequently some woman becomes faint or is really bruised.

If anything were accomplished by it all there would be more reason for the tolerance of the practice. But since only one can pass the gate at a time, and the opportunity to gain any precedence in seats comes only after the ticket has been taken, what is the sense in this pell-mell crowding the moment the signal is given for opening the door?

Why cannot the waiting be done in line, since, as I said before, only one person is allowed to pass at a time? Once past the gate as much haste may be made as is the direct result of individual ambition. The press will be bad enough then, but the stairs are sufficiently broad to make it at least moderately safe and comfortable. Those who wait, of course, would make a long line in single file, but if it can be done elsewhere why not here?

In answer to this complaint it will be said that "those who don't like it need n't do it." That is probably very true, to a degree, for from appearances one would say that many of those who go on rush tickets could abundantly afford to do otherwise. But the students, for whom there is no alternative! For their sake, and incidentally for those other people who are horribly and needlessly squeezed every Friday afternoon, cannot some other custom be invented?

A. S. B.

American Art Journal.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, OCT. 24, 1896.

WHAT IS GOING ON IN BOSTON.

The First Symphony Concert.

There was the usual crowd, and Director Paur greeted with the usual welcome. Two overtures, Berlioz's Cellini and Weber's Euryanthe. The Symphony was Beethoven's Eighth, with its witching beauty, and that striking air in the metronone movement which seagoers hear sailors sing as a shanty, with the chaotic chorus words, "Victoria, Victoria, Very well done Jim Crow," which is said to have begun years ago in London, prompted by some scandal about a sable valet in her British Majesty's service. Two first times: one the pathetic Burial of Ophelia, by Louis Albert Bourgault Ducoudray, so well played that Paur cried Bravo; the other, the orchestral suite in D, op. 59, by Saint-Saens. It is worth mentioning that Ducondray is 56 years old, first studied law, was taught by Thomas, won the Grand Prix de Rome with a cantata, wrote an opera, visited the Orient officially, and published studies of Greek, Armenian and Turkish music.

SUNDAY HERALD.
PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 117.

SUNDAY, OCT. 25, 1896.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Two Selections That Are New to Boston Played.

Overture from "Gwendoline," by Chabrier, Shows Spirit and Style Notably New—The Dvorak Rhapsody a Brilliant Number—M. Martinus Sieveking the Soloist.

The programme for last evening's concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra cert by the Boston Symphony orchestra, in Music Hall, was:

Overture, "Gwendoline"	E. Chabrier
Concerto for pianoforte, No. 1	Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody, No. 3	Dvorak
Symphony, "Jupiter"	Mozart

The soloist was Mr. Martinus Sieveking. The selections from Chabrier and Dvorak were given for the first time in Boston. The only other work of the former heard here is an entr'acte from the opera of which the composition played last evening is the overture. It is distinctly and characteristically an opera overture, full of the storm of battle, save when a brief moment of tenderly impassioned melody, undoubtedly typical of the heroine of the story, breaks through the uproar. In spirit and style the work is notably new, and it has tremendous fire, and an almost fierce vitality, and its onward sweep and furious pace are maintained with unfaltering vigor. The score is massively gorgeous in color, and though it clearly indicates the influence of Wagner on the composer, yet it savors of an interestingly piquant individuality of its own. What there is of Wagner in it is Wagner Frenchified, but it is, on the whole, Berlioz amplified nearly to exaggeration.

The programme book claims that the overture reflects Wagner's "harmonic habits," but what flowing melody there is in it has too few interrupted cadences for that, and the second theme comes to a close on the tonic with an early straightforwardness that is anything than Wagnerian. It is not music that is perfectly clear on a first hearing, but it left no doubt that it was strong, even noble, and the work of an original thinker and a master in his art. The exactions it makes on the technique of the orchestra are very great, bristling difficulties abound, and in this regard, as in every other, the overture ranks among the most modern of the modern school. It was splendidly played, and with stirring effect.

The Dvorak rhapsody is less attractive, brilliant as it is in its orchestration and ingeniously clever as it is in the development of the one theme on which it is founded. The chief fault of the work is that it is prolonged too far beyond the point at which its interest reaches its climax. Every now and then one imagines and is gratified that the end is near, but the music takes a new start and repeats tiresomely in another form what it has already said to excess. Then, too, although it is all Dvorak, pure and simple, it is not Dvorak in his most individual and most enjoyable mood, and that effect of spontaneity which is so pleasing in his more strikingly characteristic compositions gives way here to something closely resembling laborious effort, and with a result that suggests the highly proper but uninspired kapelmeister music. Mr. Paur's reading brought out all that was interesting in it, with a special feeling for its national color and its many odd rhythmical accents, and its performance by the orchestra was brilliant.

The beauty and clearness of the Mozart symphony, coming as it did at the close of a programme that was modern almost to excess, seemed intensified. That it sounded of a far-away past is unquestionable, but it is a masterpiece of one of the greatest of masters, and as such will always delight, and its finale is as peerless today in its gracefully fluent learning as it was when it first saw the light. Mr. Paur, always happy in his interpretations of Mozart, read it with almost enthusiastic sympathy, and is again to be praised for letting the composer say what he has to say without attempting to embellish him with up-to-date frills and furbelows, and making him speak with an accent that was unknown to him, while the work of the orchestra was exquisite in its finish.

Mr. Sieveking, who was received with great cordiality, renewed the favorable impression he made on his earlier appearance at these concerts by his rendering of the Tschalkowsky concerto. He has decidedly fingers of steel, and their work is always clear, masterly and respond easily to every demand that may be made on them by modern pianoforte technique. Last evening, however, he manifested a tendency to overtax the power of the instrument, a failing that did not attend his playing last season. He frequently caused the strings to jingle unpleasingly, and his tone was at times hard and lacking in variety of color. With these exceptions, his performance was thoughtful, musicianly and interesting, and in the finale his remarkable powers of technique were displayed with a brilliancy, a fire and a precision that earned for him a well-merited outburst of applause, and three as stormy recalls as any artist has received at these concerts.

The next programme is: Symphony in E minor, "Gaelic," op. 32, first time, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach; aria, "Herodiade," Massenet; variations, Brahms; aria, "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo, and overture, "Der Freischutz," Weber. Mr. G. Campanari is to be the soloist.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, OCT. 25, 1896.

Echoes from the Second Symphony Concert.

When Mr Sieveking appeared at the Boston symphony concerts last season the auditors were quick to comprehend the worth of an artist who fully justified an advance heralding which had placed him in the ranks of the foremost pianists of the day. In Mr Sieveking's case the artist proved to be even better than was anticipated, a pleasing as well as an unusual occurrence, for oft-times had the record of so-called foreign successes appeared undeserved to symphony patrons. Mr Sieveking was the soloist at the second concert of this season's series, and played Tschaikowsky's concerto No. 1 in B-flat minor. The other numbers of the program were Chabrier's overture to "Gwendoline," Dvorak's Slavonic "Rhapsody" in A-flat major, and Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony.

The introduction to the Tschaikowsky concerto is one of the composer's finest writings, and the broad, virile interpretation given by Mr Sieveking immediately reestablished that artist in the favorable opinions of his auditors. The sweeping chords were grandly played, the forte passages being very distinct, and this despite the fact that the performer appeared to rely entirely upon his arm and finger power. One feature of Mr Sieveking's playing is that he uses his body but slightly, even in fortissimo chords and runs. The ornamentations of the different themes of the first movement were beautifully set forth, and in the rapid octaves, against the pizzicato of strings, his work was all that could be desired. The climax of the movement was perfectly performed.

The cantabel quality of the lullaby theme was very sweet, making a notable distinction between it and the gypsy-like dance which followed. The characteristics of each were clearly defined, and the subsequent waltz melody was distinct from the others. The cadenza was brilliantly given. The elaborate working out of the dance rhythms of the third movement was very skilfully performed. In the climax the furious octave passages and the final coda on the opening theme displayed the artist's digital powers to the greatest advantage. The performer was recalled again and again at the close of the concerto.

Chabrier's overture to "Gwendoline" was played for the first time in this city. The composition is theatric and at times suggestive of Wagner's form of orchestration. The interpretation by the orchestra was smooth and evidently in keeping with the ideas of the composer. Dvorak's "Raphsody," also given for the first time here, proved the more interesting of the two compositions. In the fortissimo of the allegro the magnificent team work of the orchestra was finely shown, and the musical conversations were most delicately and harmoniously expressed. The concert closed with an excellent interpretation of Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony, the fourth movement being worthy of special mention for the brilliancy of its performance.

Mr G. Campanari will be the soloist this week. The program will be as follows: Symphony in E minor, "Gaelic," op. 32, MS first time, Mrs H. H. A. Beach; aria, "Herodiade," Massenet; variations, Brahms; aria, "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo; overture, "Freischutz," Weber.

——The first of the symphony concerts at Sanders theater, Cambridge, will be given Thursday evening. The soloists during the season will be Mme Januschowsky, Miss Lena Little, Mr Franz Kneisel, Mr Martinus Sieveking, Mr Carl Halir, Mr Ben Davies and Mr Joseffy.

——The first concert by the Boston symphony orchestra in New York this season will be given on the evening of Nov 13 at the Metropolitan opera house.

[illegible] Journal.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1896.

SYMPHONY NIGHT.

Overture to "Gwendoline" by Emmanuel Chabrier.

Martinus Sieveking in a Concerto by Tschaikowsky.

First Performance Here of Dvorak's Third Rhapsody.

The program of the second Symphony concert, given in Music Hall last night, Emil Paur conductor, was as follows:

Overture to "Gwendoline"..............Chabrier
(First time in Boston.)
Concerto for piano, No. 1, B-flat minor, Op. 23..............Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody No. 3, A-flat major, Op. 45..............Dvorak
(First time in Boston.)
Symphony, C major, "Jupiter"..........Mozart

The prelude to the second act of "Gwendoline" was played at a Symphony concert Oct. 13, 1894. That prelude has been called "Gwendoline." The overture played last night has been called "Harald." I speak of Chabrier and his works in "About Music" today. But who are Gwendoline and Harald? Their story may give a clue to the wild overture.

⁂

This is the tale of Gwendoline, as told by Catulle Mendès, poet, novelist, librettist and Wagnerite.

Long, long ago, on the coast of Britain there lived a petty monarch; his name was Armel. He had a gentle daughter, Gwendoline, a girl of sixteen years. There was peace in the land. The men fished. The women spun and looked after their homes. One day as they were a-gossiping, Gwendoline told a dream: a Dane had borne her away over the ocean. As they laughed at her, there was a great cry. The fishermen were seen running madly, pursued by Danes with Harald at their head. The young chief ordered Armel to hand over his treasure, and, refused, he would fain have slain the old man, but the girl threw her body as a buckler before her father. Harald was troubled. Not knowing that lips and braided hair are deadlier than "fire and iron and the wide-mouthed wars", he wooed and was wooed, and he asked for the hand of Gwendoline. Armel gave consent, with treacherous heart; for it was his plan that the Saxons should butcher their foes, drunk at the nuptial feast. At the marriage ceremony, the old man blessed the couple, and gave secretly a dagger to the bride, saying, "If Harald should escape us, you will kill him as he sleeps in your arms." Now Gwendoline loved Harald. She begged him to leave the coast. She talked of overhanging danger. Lost in love, he laughed and would not listen. Then were there shouts and shrieks. Comrades called for help. Harald fell by a blow from Armel. When Gwendoline saw him dying, for she had followed with unequal footsteps, she uttered a woful lamentation, stabbed herself, and fell into the arms of her husband for a night.

⁂

This overture is by no means without form and void. It would be easy to talk in pedagogic vein of first theme, second theme, transition group and so on and so on. Let us rather look at the tone-painting of invading Danes, the shock of battle, the apparition of Gwendoline, the epipthalamium, the apotheosis of the lovers.

The first theme is taken from the operatic scene of the approaching Danes. The discordant fanfares of trumpets are from the battle music. The essentially and characteristically French theme that appears afterward (in the finale combined with figuration from the legend sung by Gwendoline) is the first phrase chanted by Harald when he tells the wondering maiden of his adventurous life and the glorious fate reserved for heroes slain in battle, who carried by the Valkyries to Valhalla feast there eternally.

This overture is remarkable for skillful and clear polyphony, original and daring harmonic treatment, furious swing, full, heroic blood and gorgeousness of the orchestration. Chabrier's admiration for Wagner did not cause him to give up his birthright. In a hundred matters of detail he is French to the nails. The orchestration is more distinct even in its spasms than is the orchestration of Wagner, and in this respect Chabrier is to be compared rather with Berlioz.

The overture to "Gwendoline" is a composition that well bears repetition. It is to be regretted that there was not the slightest clue in the Program Book to the character of the opera; for this overture is not absolute music; it is an overture to an opera; its motives are taken from the opera; its reason for being is found in the opera house. It is true that an elaborate program of panoramic treatment is almost always an injury to a composer, but the simple narration of the tale of Gwendoline might have put certain hearers in the proper mood.

⁂

The Tschaikowsky concerto was last played in Boston by Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, and not by Mrs. Hopekirk, as stated in the Program Book. Mrs. Hopekirk played it at a Symphony concert Jan. 24, 1891; and Miss Aus der Ohe played it—and superbly—at a Young People's Popular concert Jan. 6, 1892.

Mr. Sieveking made a grievous mistake in taking the allegro vivace as- [illegible] the treatment are eminently Tschaikowskian and his playing of the long winded cadenza did not restore matters to their equilibrium.

Mr. Sieveking is a pianist who should be treated with respect, especially as in the course of his studies he took lessons of Mr. Sandow, the strong man. His playing last night was characterized chiefly by strength and fluency. His interpretation was at times defiant when it should have been authoritative. The tone was crisp, sometimes almost brittle; it was rarely sympathetic. The performance as a whole was virile rather than romantic. Physically it deserved high praise. In tender moments there was little that went quietly yet irresistibly to the heart. Mr. Sieveking displayed the manly and modest bearing that at once command esteeem as well as respect, and the exhibition of strength and brilliancy was rewarded liberally by the long-continued and hearty applause of the audience.

⁂

The Slavonic Rhapsody No. 3, by Dvorak, was first performed at a Sinfonie soirée of the Royal Orchestra, Berlin, under Taubert, Sept. 20, 1879. When it was thus produced, Dvorak was almost unknown. A Dumka for piano which appeared about the same time was sniffed at by German reviewers, and when Joachim soon afterward brought out one of Dvorak's chamber works at a concert in Berlin, people began to rub their eyes and ask, "Who is this Dvorak?"

And yet it was played at a Boston Symphony concert last night for the first time in this city. After hearing it, the wisdom of the delay is evident. The Rhapsodie is not one of the composer's best works. The themes, which are not Bohemian folk tunes, but of Dvorak's invention, are worked to death, and the brilliant orchestration is the only merit of the piece. If the music at times reminds one of Schubert in its friendliness and apparent simplicity, Dvorak also reminds us here of Schubert in his unwillingness to say "Good night." He keeps hold of your hand, pumping it, not being able to find the door. The finale is indeed a deathbed farewell.

⁂

And after all this rage and fret and fury, after screaming dissonances and successions of unrelated chords for an hour, came the Jove-like serenity of Mozart. Not the Jupiter of storms and lightning, but the contemplator of the universe. Does the first movement, with the exception of the reminder of "Figaro," seem hopelessly old fashioned? There is for compensation the sweet melancholy of the andante; there is the flowing grace of the minuet; there is the melodiously polyphonic triumph of the finale. But a Mozart Symphony should be played by an orchestra with a smaller band of strings and in a small hall.

⁂

The program of the concert Saturday night will be as follows: Mrs. Beach, symphony E minor, "Gaelic" (ms. first time); Massenet, air from "Hérodiade"; Brahms variations; Leoncavallo, air from "Pagliacci"; Weber overture "Freischütz"

PHILIP HALE.

Interesting Novelty at the Symphony Concert.

A Sketch of the Composer, Emmanuel Chabrier.

Notes and Comments on Singers, Players and Pieces.

The review of the Symphony concert given last night in Music Hall will be found in the news section of the Journal. Certain features of this concert are discussed more appropriately in this column.

⁂

It was a pleasure to see again the name of Emmanuel Chabrier on a Symphony program.

His name first appeared at these concerts Oct. 13 1894, when the beautiful prelude to Act II. of "Gwendoline" was played.

In November, 1890, some of his music from the operetta "L'Etoile" was heard here, for "The Merry Monarch," in which Francis Wilson played a joyous part, was an adaptation of Chabrier's little work. I say "some of his music," for the majority of the tunes in "The Merry Monarch" were by Mr. Woollson Morse.

Chabrier's "Spanish Rhapsodie" ("Espana") was played by the Philharmonic Orchestra at the Tremont Theatre, Jan. 14, 1892.

Boston knows little of Chabrier's music with the exceptions noted.

⁂

Emmanuel Chabrier was born at Ambert, France, Jan. 18, 1841. The son of a lawyer, he studied law at Paris, and at the age of 20 entered into the office of the Minister of the Interior. Fond of music, he studied under Semet and Hignard. Pougin says, "I will not say he was the most astonishing pianist I ever heard, but he was the most astonishing, eccentric, almost prodigious player of the piano I ever met." He was a chorusmaster for two years of the Lamoureux concerts, and he helped in the concert production of the first two acts of "Tristan and Isolde." His artistic life is best told by the list of his works: "L'Etoile," operetta, Paris, Nov. 23, 1877; "Une Education Manquée," one act, Paris, May 1, 1879; "Gwendoline," opera in three acts (portions played at Lamoureux concerts Nov. 9, 1894; first performance as a whole and an opera, Brussels, April 10, 1886; subsequent performances, Carlsruhe 1888, Munich 1890, Lyons, Paris Dec. 27, 1893; it was revived at Munich [illegible] season. The creators of the chief parts at Brussels were Miss Thuringer, Gwendoline; Béraldi, Harald; and Engel, Armel); "Le Roi Malgré Lui," Paris, May 18, 1887, and in German cities. The music to "Femme de Tabarin," 1887.

There is this list of works outside the theatre: "Espana," Lamoureux, 1883; "La Sulamite," mezzo-soprano with female chorus, 1885; Habenera, Prélude et Marche francaise, Suite pastorale, all at Angers, Nov. 4, 1888; Joyeuse Marche, Lamoureux, Feb. 16, 1890; "A la musique," female chorus, Colonne March 22, 1891; Marche des Cipayes; 10 picturesque pieces for piano; Valses romantiques for 2 pianos; songs, among them "Credo d'amour," "Ballade des gros dindons," "Pastorale des petits cochons roses."

Chabrier left unfinished an opera in three acts, "Briséïs." He had sketched another opera, "Les Muscadins." Other works for the stage, not performed or abandoned, were "Le Sabbat," "Jean Hunyade," and "Vaucochard," an operetta burlesque for which Verlaine had made the scenario.

He was associated with Armand Gouzien and Catulle Mendès in preparing "Les Plus jolies Chansons du pays de France."

⁂

Imbert tells us that Chabrier was a passionate collector of paintings by the Impressionists; that his rooms were gorgeous with pictures by Manet, Renoir, Monet, Sisley, Helleu. Thus he owned Manet's "Bar at the Folies-Bergère" and "Skating." And Imbert hoped that the composer would not rival the zeal of Clapisson, the opera maker, who was such a maniacal collector of whistles that he saw finally nothing in nature but whistles; and to him life itself was one whistle.

In his younger days Chabrier was full of jests and animal spirits. Mad were the pranks played by him in company with Saint-Saëns, Massenet—the play-actors Cooper and Grenier—Manet, the painter, and Taffanel, the flute player, now conductor of the Conservatory concerts. Saint-Saëns would sing and act Gounod's Marguerite, or Calchas in "La Belle Hélène." Chabrier had an organ, unique, imitating cannon, drums, etc. And in his rooms was such Rabelaisian merriment that one night a lounger, one of a crowd in the street, attracted by the fun, exclaimed: "If I were your landlord, I should be so happy to have you in my house I would give you rooms rent free."

This son of Auvergne loved Wagner as well as Spain, which he visited. He would go to Brussels or London to hear Wagner's works, and at Paris, 1884-'85, he was one of a club called "Le Petit-Bayreuth," at the meetings of which arrangements of Wagner's operas for a small orchestra and two pianos were played by him and Garcin, Lamoureux, Charpentier, Teste, Luzzato and other enthusiasts. Vincent d'Indy played the drums.

⁂

Chabrier was very stout, so fat that "Willy" called him the ventripotent and the Falstaff of Wagnerism. Another spoke of him as the Armand Silvestre of music—but I fail to see the force of the comparison.

⁂

Mark the misfortunes of this sunny, lovable musician of extraordinary talent—in orchestration a genius.

"Gwendoline" was produced at Brussels. The performance was a success and the composer had triumphed gloriously. And what happened? The day after the performance, the director of the Monnaie was obliged to resign.

"Le Roi malgré lui" was received with plaudits at the Opéra-Comique. Within seven days therefrom the opera house was burned; just as the composer thought fame and fortune assured.

When "Gwendoline" at last was given at the Paris Opéra Chabrier was unable to know of success or failure. Overwork had ruined his brain. For two years his mind was clouded. To the relief of all that loved him he died Sept. 15, 1894.

He was buried from the Church of Notre Dame de Lorette, which was crowded with mourners of the man and the composer. Armand Silvestre made the address at the cemetery of Montparnasse.

⁂

In Germany as well as France the fame of Chabrier grows brighter year by year. What Pougin wrote of him in 1894 seems now the statement of fact rather than the flourish of eulogy: "The death of Chabrier takes from French musical art one of its most interesting, original and distinguished personalities. The composer of 'Gwendoline,' 'La Sulamite' and 'Espana' was a noble artist, an honor to his country, Wagnerite as he was in theory, Chabrier in practice was essentially French, and he never sacrificed the pure traditions of national art to the undisguised modern tendencies of his mind. Form, foundation, everything with him was clear, logical, full of frankness and true Gallic blood."

⁂

Is this the verdict of a Frenchman? Read the judgment of Ferdinand Pfohl in 1894: "Chabrier is a great talent; he has invention, imagination, temperament; his music, always ingenious and interesting, contains a wealth of moving detail.

⁂

Boston should take a peculiar interest in Tschaikowsky's piano concerto B flat minor, for the first performance of it was in this city. The pianist was Hans von Bülow, who played it in Music Hall, Oct. 25, 1875. Mr. Lang conducted the orchestra on that occasion. The concerto has been played here since then by Mr. Lang (at least twice —once at a Symphony concert Feb. 21, 1885,) Mrs Helen Hopekirk at a Symphony concert Jan. 24, 1891, and by Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, at a Young People's Popular, Jan. 6, 1892.

It was played by Miss Aus der Ohe at the opening of Carnegie Hall, New York, May 9, 1891, under the direction of the composer.

The musical events of the week are the first performance of a new quartet of Dvorak by the Kneisel Quartet; the appearance of Maggie Cline at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, Maggie the amazonian singer of "Throw Him Down, McCloskey" and "If Donavan's a Better Man Than I Am"; and the first performance of a symphony by Mrs. Beach at Music Hall Saturday night.

Philip Hale

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 25.

The Symphony Concert.

The second concert of tne season was given by the Symphony Orchestra last evening in Music Hall. The programme was:

Overture, "Gwendoline,"..................Chabrier
Concerto No. 1; B flat minor, op. 22..Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody No. 3, op. 45............Dvorak
Symphony N. 49, C major....................Mozart
Sololst, Mr. Martinus Sieveking.

The Chabrier overture is a delightful work, everywhere revealing traees of a Wagnerian influence, but with a dash, brilliancy, reserve and effectiveness that belong to artistic France; fine finish is joined to fine art, polish to dazzling brilliancy, and the result is a little gem of the first water. The overture was interpreted by the orchestra with the finest feeling for detail and for contrast and with faultless taste.

The Tschaikowsky concerto introduced Mr. Sieveking for the second time to a Boston audience, and the opinion that was formed of him a year ago, requires very little modification at the present time. Now as then he impresses one with his artistic temperament, with his modesty, and with his sincerity. In the way of technique, Mr. Sieveking is amply provided; yet his finger skill is not used for the exaltation of the pianist, not for display, but as means to an end; in other words, Mr. Sieveking is an interpreter first, and a pianist afterwards. He has fingers of iron that have power and caressing delicacy at the same time; sometimes the strength is abused and the piano strings protest against being ill-treated by wailing in an unmusical nasal objection. As the rule, however, he expends his technical wealth with discretion and skill; rapid passages ring out clearly and brilliantly and with admirable equality of tone; the crescendos and diminuendos are what their names imply; unbroken and even flows of regularly increasing and diminishing sound, from which spasm and effort are absent. Another fact to be noted is that the use of the pedals never degenerates into abuse; they are never used for the purpose of concealing deficiency in touch or in taste.

Mr. Sieveking's style is large and broad, allowing majesty, passion as well as delicacy, but not tinkling sweetness. There is nothing affected in this style; it is strong, vigorous playing that earns approbation not through surprise, but by deliberately winning the approval of cultivated tastes. The varying moods of the noble Tschaikowsky concerto gave the artist ample opportunities to display all the talent and technical skill he possesses and he was rarely disappointing in either direction. Occasionally he allowed his fingers to run away with his judgment and gained brilliancy at the expense of clearness and fluency; sometimes physical strength rose superior to artistic beauty, but the faults were noticeable only at rare intervals and did not mar the general beauty of the work. Mr. Sieveking played with unfailing spirit, dignity and reasonableness that were in evidence even in the most fiery and passionate portions of the concerto; he never allowed his heart to run away with his head, never forgot the composer for the pianist.

It would be, perhaps, premature to dogmatically indicate Mr. Sieveking's positien in the art world for as yet there is not sufficient evidence upon which to found a judgment; but there can be no doubt that he is an artist of rare worth and that although he may have one or two living equals it is doubtful if he has any superior as a pianist. His work is sound, honest work. and back of the all-sufficing technique is the brain of the thinker and the soul of the artist.

The Slavonic Rhapsody is a fine piece of manufactured art, elaborately worked out to the smallest detail, and brilliant with its encrustations of artificial jewels; it is entirely satisfactory to the intellect that is always pleasantly stimulated by ingenious combinations and unexpected variations on combinations. The music is faultless; it possesses all the merits, but that of vitality. And then the test was too severe; he was sandwiched between Tschaikowsky and Mozart; and even a tall man's height is underestimated when he is placed beside giants.

The novelty for the next concert is Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's symphony in E. minor. Mr. G. Campanari will be the soloist.

Boston Journal.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1896.

Seats are now on sale at the University Book Store, Cambridge, for the 10 concerts to be given in Sanders Theatre by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The concerts will be given Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17, 31, Jan. 14, Feb. 4, March 4, 18, April 8 and 29. Among the soloists will be Mrs. Januschowsky, Messrs. Ben Davies, Carl Halir, Kneisel, Joseffy, Sieveking.

The Symphony concert at Cambridge Thursday night will be in memory of Prof. Francis J. Child and Prof. Josiah D. Whitney. The program will include Mozart's G minor symphony, air from Bach's D major suite, Schubert's Funeral March, Tschaikowsky's B flat minor piano concerto and Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture. Mr. Sieveking will be the pianist.

Boston Journal.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1896.

SYMPHONY NIGHT.

Overture to "Gwendoline" by Emmanuel Chabrier.

Martinus Sieveking in a Concerto by Tschaikowsky.

First Performance Here of Dvorak's Third Rhapsody.

The program of the second Symphony concert, given in Music Hall last night, Emil Paur conductor, was as follows:

Overture to "Gwendoline"............Chabrier
(First time in Boston.)
Concerto for piano, No. 1, B-flat minor, Op. 23...........................Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody No. 3, A-flat major, Op. 45.......................................Dvorak
(First time in Boston.)
Symphony, C major, "Jupiter"..........Mozart

The prelude to the second act of "Gwendoline" was played at a Symphony concert Oct. 13, 1894. That prelude has been called "Gwendoline." The overture played last night has been called "Harald." I speak of Chabrier and his works in "About Music" today. But who are Gwendoline and Harald? Their story may give a clue to the wild overture.

⁂

This is the tale of Gwendoline, as told by Catulle Mendès, poet, novelist, librettist and Wagnerite.

Long, long ago, on the coast of Britain there lived a petty monarch; his name was Armel. He had a gentle daughter, Gwendoline, a girl of sixteen years. There was peace in the land. The men fished. The women spun and looked after their homes. One day as they were a-gossiping, Gwendoline told a dream: a Dane had borne her away over the ocean. As they laughed at her, there was a great cry. The fishermen were seen running madly, pursued by Danes with Harald at their head. The young chief ordered Armel to hand over his treasure, and, refused, he would fain have slain the old man, but the girl threw her body as a buckler before her father. Harald was troubled. Not knowing that lips and braided hair are deadlier than "fire and iron and the wide-mouthed wars", he wooed and was wooed, and he asked for the hand of Gwendoline. Armel gave consent, with treacherous heart; for it was his plan that the Saxons should butcher their foes, drunk at the nuptial feast. At the marriage ceremony, the old man blessed the couple, and gave secretly a dagger to the bride, saying, "If Harald should escape us, you will kill him as he sleeps in your arms." Now Gwendoline loved Harald. She begged him to leave the coast. She talked of over-hanging danger. Lost in love, he laughed and would not listen. Then were there shouts and shrieks. Comrades called for help. Harald fell by a blow from Armel. When Gwendoline saw him dying, for she had followed with unequal footsteps, she uttered a woful lamentation, stabbed herself, and fell into the arms of her husband for a night.

⁂

This overture is by no means without form and void. It would be easy to talk in pedagogic vein of first theme, second theme, transition group and so on and so on. Let us rather look at the tone-painting of invading Danes, the shock of battle, the apparition of Gwendoline, the epipthalamium, the apotheosis of the lovers.

The first theme is taken from the operatic scene of the approaching Danes. The discordant fanfares of trumpets are from the battle music. The essentially and characteristically French theme that appears afterward (in the finale combined with figuration from the legend sung by Gwendoline) is the first phrase chanted by Harald when he tells the wondering maiden of his adventurous life and the glorious fate reserved for heroes slain in battle, who carried by the Valkyries to Valhalla feast there eternally.

This overture is remarkable for skillful and clear polyphony, original and daring harmonic treatment, furious swing, full, heroic blood and gorgeousness of the orchestration. Chabrier's admiration for Wagner did not cause him to give up his birthright. In a hundred matters of detail he is French to the nails. The orchestration is more distinct even in its spasms than is the orchestration of Wagner, and in this respect Chabrier is to be compared rather with Berlioz.

The overture to "Gwendoline" is a composition that well bears repetition. It is to be regretted that there was not the slightest clue in the Program Book to the character of the opera; for this overture is not absolute music; it is an overture to an opera; its motives are taken from the opera; its reason for being is found in the opera house. It is true that an elaborate program of panoramic treatment is almost always an injury to a composer, but the simple narration of the tale of Gwendoline might have put certain hearers in the proper mood.

⁂

The Tschaikowsky concerto was last played in Boston by Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, and not by Mrs. Hopekirk, as stated in the Program Book. Mrs. Hopekirk played it at a Symphony concert Jan. 24, 1891, and Miss Aus der Ohe played it—and superbly—at a Young People's Popular concert Jan. 6, 1892.

Mr. Sieveking made a grievous mistake in omitting the allegro vivace as—it has been called the Irish jig—in the treatment are eminently Tschaikowskian and his playing of the long winded cadenza did not restore matters to their equilibrium.

Mr. Sieveking is a pianist who should be treated with respect, especially as in the course of his studies he took lessons of Mr. Sandow, the strong man. His playing last night was characterized chiefly by strength and fluency. His interpretation was at times defiant when it should have been authoritative. The tone was crisp, sometimes almost brittle; it was rarely sympathetic. The performance as a whole was virile rather than romantic. Physically it deserved high praise. In tender moments there was little that went quietly yet irresistibly to the heart. Mr. Sieveking displayed the manly and modest bearing that at once command esteeem as well as respect, and the exhibition of strength and brilliancy was rewarded liberally by the long-continued and hearty applause of the audience.

⁂

The Slavonic Rhapsody No. 3, by Dvorak, was first performed at a Sinfonie soirée of the Roval Orchestra, Berlin, under Taubert, Sept. 20, 1879. When it was thus produced, Dvorak was almost unknown. A Dumka for piano which appeared about the same time was sniffed at by German reviewers, and when Joachim soon afterward brought out one of Dvorak's chamber works at a concert in Berlin, people began to rub their eyes and ask, "Who is this Dvorak?"

And yet it was played at a Boston Symphony concert last night for the first time in this city. After hearing it. the wisdom of the delay is evident. The Rhapsodie is not one of the composer's best works. The themes, which are not Bohemian folk tunes, but of Dvorak's invention, are worked to death, and the brilliant orchestration is the only merit of the piece. If the music at times reminds one of Schubert in its friendliness and apparent simplicity, Dvorak also reminds us here of Schubert in his unwillingness to say "Good night." He keeps hold of your hand, pumping it, not being able to find the door. The finale is indeed a deathbed farewell.

⁂

And after all this rage and fret and fury, after screaming dissonances and successions of unrelated chords for an hour, came the Jove-like serenity of Mozart. Not the Jupiter of storms and lightning, but the contemplator of the universe. Does the first movement, with the exception of the reminder of "Figaro," seem hopelessly old fashioned? There is for compensation the sweet melancholy of the andante; there is the flowing grace of the minuet; there is the melodiously polyphonic triumph of the finale. But a Mozart Symphony should be played by an orchestra with a smaller band of strings and in a small hall.

⁂

The program of the concert Saturday night will be as follows: Mrs. Beach, symphony E minor, "Gaelic" (ms. first time): Massenet, air from "Hérodiade"; Brahms variations; Leoncavallo, air from "Pagliacci"; Weber overture "Freischütz"

PHILIP HALE.

Interesting Novelty at the Symphony Concert.

A Sketch of the Composer, Emmanuel Chabrier.

Notes and Comments on Singers, Players and Pieces.

The review of the Symphony concert given last night in Music Hall will be found in the news section of the Journal. Certain features of this concert are discussed more appropriately in this column.

⁂

It was a pleasure to see again the name of Emmanuel Chabrier on a Symphony program.

His name first appeared at these concerts Oct. 13 1894, when the beautiful prelude to Act II. of "Gwendoline" was played.

In November, 1890, some of his music from the operetta "L'Etoile" was heard here, for "The Merry Monarch," in which Francis Wilson played a joyous part, was an adaptation of Chabrier's little work. I say "some of his music," for the majority of the tunes in "The Merry Monarch" were by Mr. Woollson Morse.

Chabrier's "Spanish Rhapsodie" ("Espana") was played by the Philharmonic Orchestra at the Tremont Theatre, Jan. 14, 1892.

Boston knows little of Chabrier's music with the exceptions noted.

⁂

Emmanuel Chabrier was born at Ambert, France, Jan. 18, 1841. The son of a lawyer, he studied law at Paris, and at the age of 20 entered into the office of the Minister of the Interior. Fond of music, he studied under Semet and Hignard. Pougin says, "I will not say he was the most astonishing pianist I ever heard, but he was the most astonishing, eccentric, almost prodigious player of the piano I ever met." He was a chorusmaster for two years of the Lamoureux concerts, and he helped in the concert production of the first two acts of "Tristan and Isolde." His artistic life is best told by the list of his works: "L'Etoile," operetta, Paris, Nov. 23, 1877; "Une Education Manquée," one act, Paris, May 1, 1879; "Gwendoline," opera in three acts (portions played at Lamoureux concerts Nov. 9, 1894; first performance as a whole and an opera, Brussels, April 10, 1886; subsequent performances, Carlsruhe 1888, Munich 1890, Lyons, Paris Dec. 27, 1893; it was revived at Munich in 1894 and is announced at Munich this season. The creators of the chief parts at Brussels were Miss Thuringer, Gwendoline; Béraldi, Harald; and Engel, Armel); "Le Roi Maigré Lui," Paris, May 18, 1887, and in German cities. The music to "Femme de Tabarin," 1887.

There is this list of works outside the theatre: "Espana," Lamoureux, 1883; "La Sulamite," mezzo-soprano with female chorus, 1885; Habenera, Prélude et Marche francaise, Suite pastorale, all at Angers, Nov. 4, 1888; Joyeuse Marche, Lamoureux, Feb. 16, 1890; "A la musique," female chorus, Colonne March 22, 1891; Marche les Cipayes; 10 picturesque pieces for piano; Valses romantiques for 2 pianos; songs, among them "Credo d'amour," "Ballade des gros dindons," "Pastorale des petits cochons roses."

Chabrier left unfinished an opera in three acts, "Briséis." He had sketched another opera, "Les Muscadins." Other works for the stage, not performed or abandoned, were "Le Sabbat," "Jean Hunyade," and "Vaucochard," an operetta burlesque for which Verlaine had made the scenario.

He was associated with Armand Gouzien and Catulle Mendès in preparing "Les Plus jolies Chansons du pays de France."

⁂

Imbert tells us that Chabrier was a passionate collector of paintings by the Impressionists; that his rooms were gorgeous with pictures by Manet, Renoir, Monet, Sisley, Helleu. Thus he owned Manet's "Bar at the Folies-Bergère" and "Skating." And Imbert hoped that the composer would not rival the zeal of Clapisson, the opera maker, who was such a maniacal collector of whistles that he saw finally nothing in nature but whistles; and to him life itself was one whistle.

In his younger days Chabrier was full of jests and animal spirits. Mad were the pranks played by him in company with Saint-Saëns, Massenet—the play-actors Cooper and Grenier—Manet, the painter, and Taffanel, the flute player, now conductor of the Conservatory concerts. Saint-Saëns would sing and act Gounod's Marguerite, or Calchas in "La Belle Hélène." Chabrier had an organ, unique, imitating cannon, drums, etc. And in his rooms was such Rabelaisian merriment that one night a lounger, one of a crowd in the street, attracted by the fun, exclaimed: "If I were your landlord, I should be so happy to have you in my house I would give you rooms rent free."

This son of Auvergne loved Wagner as well as Spain, which he visited. He would go to Brussels or London to hear Wagner's works, and at Paris, 1884-'85, he was one of a club called "Le Petit-Bayreuth," at the meetings of which arrangements of Wagner's operas for a small orchestra and two pianos were played by him and Garcin, Lamoureux, Charpentier, Teste, Luzzato and other enthusiasts. Vincent d'Indy played the drums.

⁂

Chabrier was very stout, so fat that "Willy" called him the ventripotent and the Falstaff of Wagnerism. Another spoke of him as the Armand Silvestre of music—but I fail to see the force of the comparison.

⁂

Mark the misfortunes of this sunny, lovable musician of extraordinary talent—in orchestration a genius.

"Gwendoline" was produced at Brussels. The performance was a success and the composer had triumphed gloriously. And what happened? The day after the performance, the director of the Monnaie was obliged to resign.

"Le Roi maigré lui" was received with plaudits at the Opéra-Comique. Within seven days therefrom the opera house was burned; just as the composer thought fame and fortune assured.

When "Gwendoline" at last was given at the Paris Opéra Chabrier was unable to know of success or failure. Overwork had ruined his brain. For two years his mind was clouded. To the relief of all that loved him he died Sept. 15, 1894.

He was buried from the Church of Notre Dame de Lorette, which was crowded with mourners of the man and the composer. Armand Silvestre made the address at the cemetery of Montparnasse.

⁂

In Germany as well as France the fame of Chabrier grows brighter year by year. What Pougin wrote of him in 1894 seems now the statement of fact rather than the flourish of eulogy: "The death of Chabrier takes from French musical art one of its most interesting, original and distinguished personalities. The composer of 'Gwendoline,' 'La Sulamite' and 'Espana' was a noble artist, an honor to his country. Wagnerite as he was in theory, Chabrier in practice was essentially French, and he never sacrificed the pure traditions of national art to the undisguised modern tendencies of his mind. Form, foundation, everything with him was clear, logical, full of frankness and true Gallic blood."

⁂

Is this the verdict of a Frenchman? Read the judgment of Ferdinand Pfohl in 1894: "Chabrier is a great talent; he has invention, imagination, temperament; his music, always ingenious and interesting, contains a wealth of moving detail.

⁂

Boston should take a peculiar interest in Tschaikowsky's piano concerto B flat minor, for the first performance of it was in this city. The pianist was Hans von Bülow, who played it in Music Hall, Oct. 25, 1875. Mr. Lang conducted the orchestra on that occasion. The concerto has been played here since then by Mr. Lang (at least twice—once at a Symphony concert Feb. 21, 1885,) Mrs Helen Hopekirk at a Symphony concert Jan. 24, 1891, and by Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, at a Young People's Popular, Jan. 6, 1892.

It was played by Miss Aus der Ohe at the opening of Carnegie Hall, New York, May 9, 1891, under the direction of the composer.

The musical events of this week are the first performance of a new quartet of Dvorak by the Kneisel Quartet; the appearance of Maggie Cline at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, Maggie the amazonian singer of "Throw Him Down, McCloskey" and "If Donavan's a Better Man Than I Am"; and the first performance of a symphony by Mrs. Beach at Music Hall Saturday night.

Philip Hale

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 25.

The Symphony Concert.

The second concert of the season was given by the Symphony Orchestra last evening in Music Hall. The programme was:

Overture, "Gwendoline,"..................Chabrier
Concerto No. 1; B flat minor, op. 22..Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody No. 3, op. 45............Dvorak
Symphony N. 49, C major...................Mozart
Soloist, Mr. Martinus Sieveking.

The Chabrier overture is a delightful work, everywhere revealing traces of a Wagnerian influence, but with a dash, brilliancy, reserve and effectiveness that belong to artistic France; fine finish is joined to fine art, polish to dazzling brilliancy, and the result is a little gem of the first water. The overture was interpreted by the orchestra with the finest feeling for detail and for contrast and with faultless taste.

The Tschaikowsky concerto introduced Mr. Sieveking for the second time to a Boston audience, and the opinion that was formed of him a year ago, requires very little modification at the present time. Now as then he impresses one with his artistic temperament, with his modesty, and with his sincerity. In the way of technique, Mr. Sieveking is amply provided; yet his finger skill is not used for the exaltation of the pianist, not for display, but as means to an end; in other words, Mr. Sieveking is an interpreter first, and a pianist afterwards. He has fingers of iron that have power and caressing delicacy at the same time; sometimes the strength is abused and the piano strings protest against being ill-treated by wailing in an unmusical nasal objection. As the rule, however, he expends his technical wealth with discretion and skill; rapid passages ring out clearly and brilliantly and with admirable equality of tone; the crescendos and diminuendos are what their names imply; unbroken and even flows of regularly increasing and diminishing sound, from which spasm and effort are absent. Another fact to be noted is that the use of the pedals never degenerates into abuse; they are never used for the purpose of concealing deficiency in touch or in taste.

Mr. Sieveking's style is large and broad, allowing majesty, passion as well as delicacy, but not tinkling sweetness. There is nothing affected in this style: it is strong, vigorous playing that earns approbation not through surprise, but by deliberately winning the approval of cultivated tastes. The varying moods of the noble Tschaikowsky concerto gave the artist ample opportunities to display all the talent and technical skill he possesses and he was rarely disappointing in either direction. Occasionally he allowed his fingers to run away with his judgment and gained brilliancy at the expense of clearness and fluency; sometimes physical strength rose superior to artistic beauty, but the faults were noticeable only at rare intervals and did not mar the general beauty of the work. Mr. Sieveking played with unfailing spirit, dignity and reasonableness that were in evidence even in the most fiery and passionate portions of the concerto; he never allowed his heart to run away with his head, never forgot the composer for the pianist.

It would be, perhaps, premature to dogmatically indicate Mr. Sieveking's position in the art world for as yet there is not sufficient evidence upon which to found a judgment; but there can be no doubt that he is an artist of rare worth and that although he may have one or two living equals it is doubtful if he has any superior as a pianist. His work is sound, honest work, and back of the all-sufficing technique is the brain of the thinker and the soul of the artist.

The Slavonic Rhapsody is a fine piece of manufactured art, elaborately worked out to the smallest detail, and brilliant with its encrustations of artificial jewels; it is entirely satisfactory to the intellect that is always pleasantly stimulated by ingenious combinations and unexpected variations on combinations. The music is faultless; it possesses all the merits, but that of vitality. And then the test was too severe; he was sandwiched between Tschaikowsky and Mozart; and even a tall man's height is underestimated when he is placed beside giants.

The novelty for the next concert is Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's symphony in E. minor. Mr. G. Campanari will be the soloist.

Boston Journal.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1896.

Seats are now on sale at the University Book Store, Cambridge, for the 10 concerts to be given in Sanders Theatre by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The concerts will be given Thursday evenings, Oct. 29, Nov. 19, Dec. 17, 31, Jan. 14, Feb. 4, March 4, 18, April 8 and 29. Among the soloists will be Mrs. Januschowsky, Messrs. Ben Davies, Carl Halir, Kneisel, Joseffy, Sieveking.

The Symphony concert at Cambridge Thursday night will be in memory of Prof. Francis J. Child and Prof. Josiah D. Whitney. The program will include Mozart's G minor symphony, air from Bach's D major suite, Schubert's Funeral March, Tschaikowsky's B flat minor piano concerto and Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture. Mr. Sieveking will be the pianist.

MORNING, OCT. 26, 1896.

Some Brilliant Cadenza Work at the Symphony Concert.

The programme of Saturday came in like a lion and went out like a lamb, for, although the final number was Mozart's so-called "Jupiter" symphony, the work does not represent a Jupiter Tonans, but rather Jupiter Seranator, a species of fairweather god (recently quite unknown to Bostonians) and scarcely comes up to its Olympian name. It is the most learned of the three symphonies, his last, which Mozart wrote three years before his death. Yet of these three products of the year 1788 the G minor seems the more impregnated with genius, while the E flat symphony (of the same group) is of especial interest to some wood-wind players as being the first introduction of the clarinette into symphonic usage.

Perhaps Jupiter seemed exceptionally lamblike after the fierce dissonances which represented the modern school in the preceding three numbers. None the less, the unstrained and wonderfully ingenious fugal touches could not be dimmed by any amount of modern crashings, and the calmer school won its victory even after Chabrier and Dvorak had unloaded all their dissonances and rhapsodies. Nor would we be in the least understood as condemning the placing of the fervid modern works upon the programme; on the contrary, there is cause for congratulation in the fact that our symphonic programmes are beginning to reflect all schools and enable the auditor to compare the old with the new, the chaste and classical with the romantic and ecstatic.

Chabrier's "Gwendoline" overture was heard for the first time. It is a bold and audacious work and compels attention without requiring measurement with the Wagnerian yardstick. Agitated orchestral phrases in sequence form, topping off each time with a forcible kettle-drum figure, begin the composition. The piccolo begins to shriek very early in the proceedings and everything is at high pressure from even the initial measure. Moments of beauty there undoubtedly are, as for example the first theme on the violoncellos and deeper wind instruments, but there is little of coherency, and few thoughts are carried to their legitimate conclusion. Occasionally also, trivial and unworthy themes appear, one of these being not on any higher plane than an Offenbach cancan. The final climax is brassy and commonplace. The work is not in the strict form, but that is no disadvantage in these days of free overtures, and there is plenty of development which is at least ingenious and frequently attractive. Bass drum and cymbals are added to the final tumult, and the kettledrum vehemently ends the movement, as it began it.

Tschaikowsky is, to the reviewer's mind, the one composer (in instrumental forms), who can indulge in all the modern spasms and passionate outbursts without ever becoming either vague or incoherent; his is the truest orchestral expression of the most modern romanticism. He was represented on this programme by his B flat minor piano concerto, which also served to bring back the fugitive Sieveking to our programme. The pianist was most successful; from the first broad and massive chords which accompany the theme on the strings, to the terrific wrist-action of the last Coda, he held the strictest attention of the audience and his interpretation was clear and sufficiently impassioned to be in line with the Russian composer's intention, although sometimes the tone was overforced. The introduction was very impressive, the simple plan of inverting the piano and string parts in the treatment of the theme being very effective. The development of the chief theme is masterly, for Tschaikowsky is scarcely behind Brahms in the matter of development while he stands decidedly above him in melodic and emotional power. The pianist gave some very brilliant cadenza work in this movement, and his octave passages were marvellous in their power and surety.

Against the tremendous energy of the first movement the tender and quaint simplicity of the second movement (was it given in full?) comes as the best possible foil; most soothingly the flute sang its slumber-song against the pizzicati of the strings "con sordine," in the opening measures, and the odd dronings and pipings which followed gave to the movement something of the character of the old "Musette," in which the early composers used to imitate the drone of the bagpipe. Of course the oboe, the instrument best adapted to express quaint simplicity, had characteristic work to do here, and it was well done.

There seems to be a good deal of the Cossack in the finale, and Eschaikowsky does not lose his opportunity to give a national flavor to this final rondo. It is always glorious to enjoy folk-music translated into the classical forms by the modern composers; when Rubinstein introduces his folk-music, however, one is at times irritated by the evident intention of display, the marked desire to make an efftct; with Grieg, and his Norwegian tunes, with Dvorak and his Bohemian (and we might add his American) treasures, and with Tschaikowsky and his Russian melodies, one is not impressed as if by a pedlar laying out his wares; they love their national music, and succeed in making the auditor love it, too, and it is a great promise for the future of art, this transfusion of the life-blood of the people's music into the veins of the too formal classical school. It is this national flavor which is one great charm in the first piano concerto by Tschaikowsky, and the brilliant playing of Sieveking added another. The pianist was recalled again and again with much fervor by the audience. The ensemble was throughout excellent.

Spite of the appreciation of Dvorak and his presentations of folk-music in an idealized state, which is expressed above, the reviewer cannot confess to any great amount of pleasure in listening to his third Slavonic Rhapsody, which was heard for the first time in this concert. This composition begins with a harp solo, an entire theme being presented by this instrument without any support, as introduction to the Allegro. After some treatment of this theme, considerable woodwind being employed, the usual frenzy sets in. The composition runs on in alternate layers of tranquillity and fury, and presents all the skill in orchestral scoring of which Dvorak is an acknowledged master. Among other unusual touches the violins and kettledrums sing a strange duet leading to a peaceful episode (the only beautiful portion of the work) in which the oboe bears a prominent part. Again the frenzied style recurs, rather weakly, because all its fury cannot conceal its paucity of material, and then the coda comes to end the matter, but the coda seems to have several appendices; there never was a more marked application of the line, "He [illegible] bade farewell, yet was loth to depart." [illegible] the poorest after-dinner speaker will maunder on and on, vainly hoping that he may yet strike some happy thought and [illegible] down under the cover of it, so does [illegible] composer carry on his endings. A [illegible] bids the auditor [illegible] [illegible] still going on when [illegible] pretty brusque cadence the composer goes off and metaphorically slams the door after him, and the work is ended; but one waits a few moments in doubt as to whether he will not reappear and add a final postscript of a few bars more. The composition has little thematic material, and its development is not very varied; it derives some interest from its skilful scoring, but almost all that it says has been as well, or better said, even by the same composer, before.

It would be folly to search for any details of the Jovian career in the "Jupiter" symphony; the name was given (some assert by J. B. Cramer) exactly as the title "Emperor" was bestowed upon Beethoven's piano concerto in E flat (No. 5), by an enthusiastic admirer, to show that it was a god among lesser deities. Nor was the title misapplied, for this was the most ambitious and earnest symphony of the last century; possibly one can extend the statement and say that not until 1804, when Beethoven brought forth the "Heroic Symphony," was it definitely excelled. Its finale was far in advance of the light, rollicking movements with which the last century composers (even Mozart himself), influenced by the gigue which ended the suites, wound up their symphonies. This finale was most excellently given, every response clear, every part well-balanced, so that the contrapuntal devices were a delight even to those who knew nothing of their great skill. Scarcely ever has profound learning been put forth in so pleasant a guise; not even in Beethoven's symphonies is there so good an instance of the art of concealing art.

There was a slight tendency to anticipate Mr. Paur's beat in one or two passages in the first movement of the symphony, but on the whole the performance must be classed as an excellent one.

Louis C. Elson.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

BOSTON

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Mr. EMIL PAUR.........................Conductor

"It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening."—N. Y. Herald.

"The Boston Orchestra still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country."—N. Y. Sun.

"Last night's concert was far and away the most brilliant orchestral affair that New York has enjoyed this season."—N. Y. Tribune.

"As near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be."—N. Y. Times.

"It is impossible to imagine a higher standard."—N. Y. Staats-Zeitung.

"The 'greatest' orchestra in virtuosity that the musical world knows."—N. Y. Independent.

FIRST CONCERT AND 1,419TH PERFORMANCE,
Friday Evening, Nov. 13, at 8:15.

Programme:—

CHABRIER...............Overture to "Gwendoline"
(First time at these concerts.)
CHOPIN..Concerto for Pianoforte in E minor, No. 1
WEBER...............''Invitation to the Dance"
(Scored for Orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)
SCHUBERT............Symphony No. 9, in C major

Soloist, MORIZ ROSENTHAL.

Tickets at Schuberth's, 23 Union square.

BOSTON

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 25, 1896.

THE SECOND SYMPHONY.

Mr. Paur's second programme began with the overture to the opera of "Gwendoline," written by the French composer, Emmanuel Chabrier. As usual, in the case of a new man or a new thing about which the average concert-goer would like to have some information, the programme book was absolutely empty and valueless, although the compiler is presumably engaged to obtain and print such details. It is only allusively that the reader is told the composer's nationality and that mention is made of his subservient predilection for Wagner, which latter speaks for itself in a roaring, a complicated clangor which nobody with any inkling of modern musical matters could help finding out for himself. For the overture is for the most part a continuity of deafening fortissimos, with an occasional but brief sopho passage during which the brass players can get a second or third wind and the operator on percussion instruments relieve their much exercised muscles. The opening and the chief theme are so like Wagner that one fairly starts to hear them, and is inclined to wonder if Chabrier did not pilfer more from Wagner's work-table. The instrumentation, be it said in justice, is as clever and capable as it is vehement and imitative, and more are passages of grace, beauty and self-control, such as a pleasant episode for violas which brings an agreeable lull about midway of the storm. Does the overture fully introduce the opera? Nobody can tell, because the house-book says no word of the plot or its personages. Going by guess-work alone, one would derive the impression either that the mysterious Gwendoline was a tremendous termagant and threw things round "with a perfect looseness," or else that she had been ruthlessly exposed to a calithumpian serenade or a cyclonic cataclysm. Probably there is appropriateness in this prelude—which the orchestra played with immense spirit, dash and unity—but what benefit might have been derived from knowing so much, was denied the hearers. And this might account for the evident perplexity and moderate applause with which the music was received.

The second place on the programme was assigned to Mr. Martinus Sieveking, the pianist, whose choice had fallen upon that first concerto of Tschaikowsky—in B-flat minor, opus 23—so fine, so full and so free that one is surprised not to hear it oftener. It appeals alike to the virtuosity, the solid art and the sentiment of a player; it would seem to be just such a work as Mr. Baermann ought to enjoy playing and to play nobly, for all his devotion to the great classics of the piano. It has had several performances in Boston (where indeed its first public hearing took place) but nearly six years have elapsed since the last previous one, which was given by Mme. Hopekirk, an artist of sufficient feeling, but whose technique was not equal to all the demands of the score. The present player was adequate to every requisite of the task, and he represented with complete command the boldness and power of the first movement, with its long, intricate and brilliant cadenzas; the gentle, sustained suavity of the second, and the vivacity and wildness of the finale. For Mr. Sieveking has not only that absolute mastery of the keyboard which we expect nowadays from every front of rank player, but he has the faithfully responsive temperament, which answers to a change of rhythm, a touch of motion, a novelty in theme or the transformation of grave eloquence into genial poetry. For all these and more good qualities are in this concerto, which shows its author at his best for chastened thought and eloquent richness of expression, and is devoid of eccentricity, extravagance or an extreme national impressionism. The work, beautifully sustained by the orchestra, was heard with double delight—for its own sake and for that of the player, who was recalled repeatedly and with great warmth.

After the concerto came Dvorak's third "Slavonic Rhapsody"—in A flat major, opus 45—which was the second novelty of the programme. It is a very interesting and able work, built up about a clear and compact theme, first presented by the harp. The composition divides itself into several distinct phases, all richly colored from the full palette of modern orchestral values and developed elaborately but not perplexingly. Unlike many—we might almost say most—rhapsodies, it does not end with a fury of sound and a break-neck rush of speed, but lives in a more modest enthusiasm and contents itself with beauty rather than boisterousness. It was large and sumptuous in the rendering.

If Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony had to be played it should have been put at the top of the progamme, and not have followed three compositions which filled the ear, excited the nerves and tried the attention with their voluminary vocality and their intensity. The very commendable reading could not help seeming cold and thin, and even the thought and language faint and far away.

This is the neat programme: Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Symphony in E minor, "Gaelic," Op. 32, (MS. First Time); Massenet, Aria, "Herodiade"; Brahms, Variations; Leoncavallo, Aria, "I Pagliacci"; Weber, Overture, "Freischutz." Soloist, Mr. G. Campanari.

HOWARD MALCOM TICKNOR.

THE SANDERS THEATRE CONCERTS.

There are no more delightful concerts in the whole season than those which are given in the Sanders Theatre by the Symphony Orchestra. That perfect amphitheatre enfolds the music as naturally as a shell contains its pearl, and, small as it seems to one who sees it for the first time, its space is ample for even the full ensemble effects of the whole band. There is no wonder that Cambridge people do not find it necessary to frequent the Music Hall concerts, or that many Boston folk float out to Cambridge for some special work. The new series of ten concerts, which will begin on Thursday next, is announced elsewhere, and the list of assisting artists insures the best solo participation in the programme.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER [illegible]

The Musical Season.

The musical season which will be opened by the Seidl society on Tuesday night, at the Rink, promises to be even more active than the last and to be of a higher quality, also. The chief factors are the same as last year, the Brooklyn institute, the Seidl society and the various opera companies which appear in New York and give to Brooklyn an occasional night which they cannot put in profitably at home, but the scope of two at least of these enterprises has widened and the result will afford more variety and probably more good music and fewer repetitions for people who wish to hear the best that all the managements have to offer. The Seidl society proposes to lower the prices of its orchestral concerts and give the best music on a popular basis, a field in which it has done good service at Brighton beach, but which has never been tilled in the city in the winter. The concert at the rink will be the first fine orchestral concert in the city with good soloists, to be given for 50 cents and without reserved seats, and as a new departure it is of much interest. The society will give four concerts at the Academy, also at cheaper prices than it has usually given on its evenings there, though it is impracticable not to have reserved seats and gradations of prices in any building built upon the theatrical model. In order to make these concerts most widely accessible the society will boycott the high priced foreign soloists who have been plundering America for several years and whose demands seem to grow more exorbitant as the interest in music in this country increases. This does not mean that it will not have competent soloists. Plenty of these can be had at any time at figures which their work is reasonably worth to a manager who is content to receive capacity without a great name or a sensational reputation to put upon the bill boards, and the society has unusual facilities for getting them through Mr. Seidl's connection with the Metropolitan Opera house. The time is coming when the public will demand of a singer that she shall interpret great music worthily. And that will be hastened by every manager or association which refuses to pay exorbitant prices for those various sorts of celebrity which draw at the box office but which have little to do with art.

The Brooklyn institute, whose musical year will open with a fine song recital at Association hall on Wednesday night, has a scheme broader this season than any which it has attempted before. It will give five evening orchestral concerts and four afternoons at the Academy with the Boston Symphony orchestra, the best in the world. These programmes will be preceded by preliminary lectures designed to help people whose interest in music is new to a full appreciation of the rare treats which the concert programmes will offer. The orchestra will be assisted at the concerts by such soloists as Melba and Eames; Ben Davies, the tenor; Moriz Rosenthal, the wonder pianist, and Carl Halir, a violinist with a great European reputation, who has not yet been heard in this country. The series of song recitals which begins this week will offer examples from one of the most attractive fields of musical literature, interpreted by musicians with the culture and musical spirit necessary to do them justice. Then the institute will offer a series of piano recitals by eminent artists, and with its lectures and choral concerts will provide food enough for the most voracious musical stomach.

The opera of the season is as yet almost an unknown quantity but Colonel Mapleson's offering at least is before us. He will open his New York season to-morrow night, with "Aida," and will come to Brooklyn on November 5 with the same singers in the same work. The Metropolitan people have persistently refused to give "Aida" on this side of the river for the ostensible reason that the scenery was too cumbrous to bring over. So Colonel Mapleson's singers will have a free field in Verdi's beautiful work. It has not been heard here for years and is worth singing and worth singing well. Whether the colonel's singers can do that we shall know better in a few days. He will come again on November 10 and on that occasion will probably introduce the Brooklyn singer, Miss Susan Strong. The Grau opera opens at the Metropolitan Opera house in November and there are plans not yet completed for bringing the artists of that company to Brooklyn. With all this variety no music lover need lack and the person who listens intelligently to the better part of the season's offering can hardly fail to have a broader understanding and a keener appreciation of the most popular but least understood of the arts.

BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

MONDAY MORNING, OCT. 26, 1896.

Some Brilliant Cadenza Work at the Symphony Concert.

The programme of Saturday came in like a lion and went out like a lamb, for, although the final number was Mozart's so-called "Jupiter" symphony, the work does not represent a Jupiter Tonans, but rather Jupiter Serenator, a species of fairweather god (recently quite unknown to Bostonians) and scarcely comes up to its Olympian name. It is the most learned of the three symphonies, his last, which Mozart wrote three years before his death. Yet of these three products of the year 1738 the G minor seems the more impregnated with genius, while the E flat symphony (of the same group) is of especial interest to some wood-wind players as being the first introduction of the clarinette into symphonic usage.

Perhaps Jupiter seemed exceptionally lamblike after the fierce dissonances which represented the modern school in the preceding three numbers. None the less, the unstrained and wonderfully ingenious fugal touches could not be dimmed by any amount of modern crashings, and the calmer school won its victory even after Chabrier and Dvorak had unloaded all their dissonances and rhapsodies. Nor would we be in the least understood as condemning the placing of the fervid modern works upon the programme; on the contrary, there is cause for congratulation in the fact that our symphonic programmes are beginning to reflect all schools and enable the auditor to compare the old with the new, the chaste and classical with the romantic and ecstatic.

Chabrier's "Gwendoline" overture was heard for the first time. It is a bold and audacious work and compels attention without requiring measurement with the Wagnerian yardstick. Agitated orchestral phrases in sequence form, topping off each time with a forcible kettle-drum figure, begin the composition. The piccolo begins to shriek very early in the proceedings and everything is at high pressure from even the initial measure. Moments of beauty there undoubtedly are, as for example the first theme on the violoncellos and deeper wind instruments, but there is little of coherency, and few thoughts are carried to their legitimate conclusion. Occasionally also, trivial and unworthy themes appear, one of these being not on any higher plane than an Offenbach cancan. The final climax is brassy and commonplace. The work is not in the strict form, but that is no disadvantage in these days of free overtures, and there is plenty of development which is at least ingenious and frequently attractive. Bass drum and cymbals are added to the final tumult, and the kettle-drum vehemently ends the movement, as it began it.

Tschaikowsky is, to the reviewer's mind, the one composer (in instrumental forms), who can indulge in all the modern spasms and passionate outbursts without ever becoming either vague or incoherent; his is the truest orchestral expression of the most modern romanticism. He was represented on this programme by his B flat minor piano concerto, which also served to bring back the fugitive Sieveking to our programme. The pianist was most successful; from the first broad and massive chords which accompany the theme on the strings, to the terrific wrist-action of the last Coda, he held the strictest attention of the audience and his interpretation was clear and sufficiently impassioned to be in line with the Russian composer's intention, although sometimes the tone was overforced. The introduction was very impressive, the simple plan of inverting the piano and string parts in the treatment of the theme being very effective. The development of the chief theme is masterly, for Tschaikowsky is scarcely behind Brahms in the matter of development while he stands decidedly above him in melodic and emotional power. The pianist gave some very brilliant cadenza work in this movement, and his octave passages were marvellous in their power and surety.

Against the tremendous energy of the first movement the tender and quaint simplicity of the second movement (was it given in full?) comes as the best possible foil; most soothingly the flute sang its slumber-song against the pizzicati of the strings "con sordine," in the opening measures, and the odd dronings and pipings which followed gave to the movement something of the character of the old "Musette," in which the early composers used to imitate the drone of the bagpipe. Of course the oboe, the instrument best adapted to express quaint simplicity, had characteristic work to do here, and it was well done.

There seems to be a good deal of the Cossack in the finale, and Eschaikowsky does not lose his opportunity to give a national flavor to this final rondo. It is always glorious to enjoy folk-music translated into the classical forms by the modern composers; when Rubinstein introduces his folk-music, however, one is at times irritated by the evident intention of display. the marked desire to make an efftct; with Grieg, and his Norwegian tunes, with Dvorak and his Bohemian (and we might add his American) treasures, and with Tschaikowsky and his Russian melodies, one is not impressed as if by a pedlar laying out his wares; they love their national music, and succeed in making the auditor love it, too, and it is a great promise for the future of art, this transfusion of the life-blood of the people's music into the veins of the too formal classical school. It is this national flavor which is one great charm in the first piano concerto by Tschaikowsky, and the brilliant playing of Sieveking added another. The pianist was recalled again and again with much fervor by the audience. The ensemble was throughout excellent.

Spite of the appreciation of Dvorak and his presentations of folk-music in an idealized state, which is expressed above, the reviewer cannot confess to any great amount of pleasure in listening to his third Slavonic Rhapsody, which was heard for the first time in this concert. This composition begins with a harp solo, an entire theme being presented by this instrument without any support, as introduction to the Allegro. After some treatment of this theme, considerable woodwind being employed, the usual frenzy sets in. The composition runs on in alternate layers of tranquillity and fury, and presents all the skill in orchestral scoring of which Dvorak is an acknowledged master. Among other unusual touches the violins and kettledrums sing a strange duet leading to a peaceful episode (the only beautiful portion of the work) in which the oboe bears a prominent part. Again the frenzied style recurs, rather weakly, because all its fury cannot conceal its paucity of material, and then the coda comes to end the matter, but the coda seems to have several appendices; there never was a more marked application of the line, "He oft bade farewell, yet was loth to depart." As the poorest after-dinner speaker will maunder on and on, vainly hoping that he may yet strike some happy thought and sit down under the cover of it, so does our composer carry on his endings. A furious series of cadences bids the auditor farewell, when, presto, we are landed in a gentle and peacefully breathed "good bye," which is still going on when, with a very brusque cadence the composer goes off and metaphorically slams the door after him, and the work is ended; but one waits a few moments in doubt as to whether he will not reappear and add a final postscript of a few bars more. The composition has little thematic material, and its development is not very varied; it derives some interest from its skilful scoring, but almost all that it says has been as well, or better said, even by the same composer, before.

It would be folly to search for any details of the Jovian career in the "Jupiter" symphony; the name was given (some assert by J. B. Cramer) exactly as the title "Emperor" was bestowed upon Beethoven's piano concerto in E flat (No. 5), by an enthusiastic admirer, to show that it was a god among lesser deities. Nor was the title misapplied, for this was the most ambitious and earnest symphony of the last century; possibly one can extend the statement and say that not until 1804, when Beethoven brought forth the "Heroic Symphony," was it definitely excelled. Its finale was far in advance of the light, rollicking movements with which the last century composers (even Mozart himself), influenced by the gigue which ended the suites, wound up their symphonies. This finale was most excellently given, every response clear, every part well-balanced, so that the contrapuntal devices were a delight even to those who knew nothing of their great skill. Scarcely ever has profound learning been put forth in so pleasant a guise; not even in Beethoven's symphonies is there so good an instance of the art of concealing art.

There was a slight tendency to anticipate Mr. Paur's beat in one or two passages in the first movement of the symphony, but on the whole the performance must be classed as an excellent one. Louis C. Elson.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

BOSTON

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Mr. EMIL PAUR..........................Conductor

"It was simply the perfection of orchestral playing that one heard last evening."—N. Y. Herald.

"The Boston Orchestra still remains the standard by which all other like musical bodies must be measured in this country."—N. Y. Sun.

"Last night's concert was far and away the most brilliant orchestral affair that New York has enjoyed this season."—N. Y. Tribune.

"As near perfection as it is reasonable to expect human work to be."—N. Y. Times.

"It is impossible to imagine a higher standard."—N. Y. Staats-Zeitung.

"The 'greatest' orchestra in virtuosity that the musical world knows."—N. Y. Independent.

FIRST CONCERT AND 1,419TH PERFORMANCE,

Friday Evening, Nov. 13, at 8:15.

Programme:—

CHABRIER.............Overture to "Gwendoline"
(First time at these concerts.)
CHOPIN..Concerto for Pianoforte in E minor, No. 1
WEBER................"Invitation to the Dance"
(Scored for Orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)
SCHUBERT............Symphony No. 9, in C major

Soloist, MORIZ ROSENTHAL.

Tickets at Schuberth's, 23 Union square.

BOSTON

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Boston Courier.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 25, 1896.

THE SECOND SYMPHONY.

Mr. Paur's second programme began with the overture to the opera of "Gwendoline," written by the French composer, Emmanuel Chabrier. As usual, in the case of a new man or a new thing about which the average concert-goer would like to have some information, the programme book was absolutely empty and valueless, although the compiler is presumably engaged to obtain and print such details. It is only allusively that the reader is told the composer's nationality and that mention is made of his subservient predilection for Wagner, which latter speaks for itself in a roaring, a complicated clangor which nobody with any inkling of modern musical matters could help finding out for himself. For the overture is for the most part a continuity of deafening fortissimos, with an occasional but brief sopho passage during which the brass players can get a second or third wind and the operator on percussion instruments relieve their much exercised muscles. The opening and the chief theme are so like Wagner that one fairly starts to hear them, and is inclined to wonder if Chabrier did not pilfer more from Wagner's work-table. The instrumentation, be it said in justice, is as clever and capable as it is vehement and imitative, and more are passages of grace, beauty and self-control, such as a pleasant episode for violas which brings an agreeable lull about midway of the storm. Does the overture fully introduce the opera? Nobody can tell, because the house-book says no word of the plot or its personages. Going by guess-work alone, one would derive the impression either that the mysterious Gwendoline was a tremendous termagant and threw things round "with a perfect looseness," or else that she had been ruthlessly exposed to a calithumpian serenade or a cyclonic cataclysm. Probably there is appropriateness in this prelude—which the orchestra played with immense spirit. dash and unity—but what benefit might have been derived from knowing so much, was denied the hearers. And this might account for the evident perplexity and moderate applause with which the music was received.

The second place on the programme was assigned to Mr. Martinus Sieveking, the pianist, whose choice had fallen upon that first concerto of Tschaikowsky—in B-flat minor, opus 23—so fine, so full and so free that one is surprised not to hear it oftener. It appeals alike to the virtuosity, the solid art and the sentiment of a player; it would seem to be just such a work as Mr. Baermann ought to enjoy playing and to play nobly, for all his devotion to the great classics of the piano. It has had several performances in Boston (where indeed its first public hearing took place) but nearly six years have elapsed since the last previous one, which was given by Mme. Hopekirk, an artist of sufficient feeling, but whose technique was not equal to all the demands of the score. The present player was adequate to every requisite of the task, and he represented with complete command the boldness and power of the first movement, with its long, intricate and brilliant cadenzas; the gentle, sustained suavity of the second, and the vivacity and wildness of the finale. For Mr. Sieveking has not only that absolute mastery of the keyboard which we expect nowadays from every front of rank player, but he has the faithfully responsive temperament, which answers to a change of rhythm, a touch of motion, a novelty in theme or the transformation of grave eloquence into genial poetry. For all these and more good qualities are in this concerto, which shows its author at his best for chastened thought and eloquent richness of expression, and is devoid of eccentricity, extravagance or an extreme national impressionism. The work, beautifully sustained by the orchestra, was heard with double delight—for its own sake and for that of the player, who was recalled repeatedly and with great warmth.

After the concerto came Dvorak's third "Slavonic Rhapsody"—in A flat major, opus 45—which was the second novelty of the programme. It is a very interesting and able work, built up about a clear and compact theme, first presented by the harp. The composition divides itself into several distinct phases, all richly colored from the full palette of modern orchestral values and developed elaborately but not perplexingly. Unlike many—we might almost say most—rhapsodies, it does not end with a fury of sound and a break-neck rush of speed, but lives in a more modest enthusiasm and contents itself with beauty rather than boisterousness. It was large and sumptuous in the rendering.

If Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony had to be played it should have been put at the top of the progamme, and not have followed three compositions which filled the ear, excited the nerves and tried the attention with their voluminary vocality and their intensity. The very commendable reading could not help seeming cold and thin, and even the thought and language faint and far away.

This is the neat programme: Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Symphony in E minor, "Gaelic," Op. 32, (MS. First Time); Massenet, Aria, "Herodiade"; Brahms, Variations; Leoncavallo, Aria, "I Pagliacci"; Weber, Overture, "Freischutz." Soloist, Mr. G. Campanari.

HOWARD MALCOM TICKNOR.

THE SANDERS THEATRE CONCERTS.

There are no more delightful concerts in the whole season than those which are given in the Sanders Theatre by the Symphony Orchestra. That perfect amphitheatre enfolds the music as naturally as a shell contains its pearl, and, small as it seems to one who sees it for the first time, its space is ample for even the full ensemble effects of the whole band. There is no wonder that Cambridge people do not find it necessary to frequent the Music Hall concerts, or that many Boston folk float out to Cambridge for some special work. The new series of ten concerts, which will begin on Thursday next, is announced elsewhere, and the list of assisting artists insures the best solo participation in the programme.

Brooklyn Daily Eagle

SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 25, 1896.

The Musical Season.

The musical season which will be opened by the Seidl society on Tuesday night, at the Rink, promises to be even more active than the last and to be of a higher quality, also. The chief factors are the same as last year, the Brooklyn institute, the Seidl society and the various opera companies which appear in New York and give to Brooklyn an occasional night which they cannot put in profitably at home, but the scope of two at least of these enterprises has widened and the result will afford more variety and probably more good music and fewer repetitions for people who wish to hear the best that all the managements have to offer. The Seidl society proposes to lower the prices of its orchestral concerts and give the best music on a popular basis, a field in which it has done good service at Brighton beach, but which has never been tilled in the city in the winter. The concert at the rink will be the first fine orchestral concert in the city with good soloists, to be given for 50 cents and without reserved seats, and as a new departure it is of much interest. The society will give four concerts at the Academy, also at cheaper prices than it has usually given on its evenings there, though it is impracticable not to have reserved seats and gradations of prices in any building built upon the theatrical model. In order to make these concerts most widely accessible the society will boycott the high priced foreign soloists who have been plundering America for several years and whose demands seem to grow more exorbitant as the interest in music in this country increases. This does not mean that it will not have competent soloists. Plenty of these can be had at any time at figures which their work is reasonably worth to a manager who is content to receive capacity without a great name or a sensational reputation to put upon the bill boards, and the society has unusual facilities for getting them through Mr. Seidl's connection with the Metropolitan Opera house. The time is coming when the public will demand of a singer that she shall interpret great music worthily. And that will be hastened by every manager or association which refuses to pay exorbitant prices for those various sorts of celebrity which draw at the box office but which have little to do with art.

The Brooklyn institute, whose musical year will open with a fine song recital at Association hall on Wednesday night, has a scheme broader this season than any which it has attempted before. It will give five evening orchestral concerts and four afternoons at the Academy with the Boston Symphony orchestra, the best in the world. These programmes will be preceded by preliminary lectures designed to help people whose interest in music is new to a full appreciation of the rare treats which the concert programmes will offer. The orchestra will be assisted at the concerts by such soloists as Melba and Eames; Ben Davies, the tenor; Moriz Rosenthal, the wonder pianist, and Carl Halir, a violinist with a great European reputation, who has not yet been heard in this country. The series of song recitals which begins this week will offer examples from one of the most attractive fields of musical literature, interpreted by musicians with the culture and musical spirit necessary to do them justice. Then the institute will offer a series of piano recitals by eminent artists, and with its lectures and choral concerts will provide food enough for the most voracious musical stomach.

The opera of the season is as yet almost an unknown quantity but Colonel Mapleson's offering at least is before us. He will open his New York season to-morrow night, with "Aida," and will come to Brooklyn on November 5 with the same singers in the same work. The Metropolitan people have persistently refused to give "Aida" on this side of the river for the ostensible reason that the scenery was too cumbrous to bring over. So Colonel Mapleson's singers will have a free field in Verdi's beautiful work. It has not been heard here for years and is worth singing and worth singing well. Whether the colonel's singers can do that we shall know better in a few days. He will come again on November 10 and on that occasion will probably introduce the Brooklyn singer, Miss Susan Strong. The Grau opera opens at the Metropolitan Opera house in November and there are plans not yet completed for bringing the artists of that company to Brooklyn. With all this variety no music lover need lack and the person who listens intelligently to the better part of the season's offering can hardly fail to have a broader understanding and a keener appreciation of the most popular but least understood of the arts.

[illegible] OCTOBER 26, 1896.

[illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The programme of the second symphony concert, given in the Music Hall last Saturday evening, was as follows:

Chabrier: Overture to "Gwendoline."
(First time in Boston.)
Tschaikowsky: Concerto for pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor, opus 23.
Dvorak: Slavonic Rhapsody in A-flat major, opus 45, No. 3.
(First time in Boston.)
Mozart: Symphony No. 49, in C major, "Jupiter."
Mr. Martinus Sieveking was the pianist.

There was one number on this programme that was ill-placed, past all doubt; this was the new Dvorak Rhapsody. Leaving its peculiar character out of the question, one may say that no new, hitherto unheard composition would have been favorably placed after such tremendous and exciting works as the Chabrier overture and the Tschaikowsky concerto; a long-familiar work of the highest genius, like the "Jupiter" symphony, could well come after these; its sharply-contrasted style would be all in favor of its producing its full effect. But few listeners have the staying power to be fresh for entirely new musical impressions after the strain of such an overture and such a concerto. Again, the peculiar character of Dvorak's rhapsody makes it a difficult work to place well on a symphony programme, in any case; we do not say that it cannot be well placed, but that it is difficult to place it well. Here that much-debated Volkslied business comes up again. Whether the principal theme of Dvorak's rhapsody is an authentic Czech folk-song or not, it has unmistakably the character of one; it has the characteristic melancholy wail that belongs to the folk-music of peoples whose national scale (whether complete or defective) gives prominence to minor internals. Whether the music be Irish, Scandinavian, or Slavonic matters little; the characteristic wail is much the same; even when the melody is distinctly in the major mode, something of this wail remains.

Now, this distinctive characteristic may be admiraby poetic, or merely dreary, according to circumstances. There is hardly any music in existence the true impressiveness of which depends so much upon the force of association as the folk-song. Its aroma is exceedingly delicate and volatile. It is, upon the whole, dangerous material to use for the purposes of elaborately developed concert music. Wagner was quite right when he wrote of Weber's basing his melodic style upon the German folk-song, and compared the naive native melody to a tender violet blooming modestly in the woods. "The unhappy man!" he exclaims, referring to Weber, "he plucked it! And it withered!" The aroma of the folk-song will not survive the process of artificial distillation. As regards this rhapsody of Dvorak's, we can well imagine the effect it might produce upon a born Czech, long exiled from his native land, who heard it for the first time even at a symphony concert. What sacred memories might not those once-familiar strains awaen in his heart even to blotting out all consciousness of his prosaic surroundings? Instead of the Music Hall, with its crowding audience, electric lights, and reputably dressed orchestra, he might see himself surrounded for the moment by his native hills and forests; all the poetic surroundings amid which that wailing melody had its home would arise unbidden before his mind's eye, and he could commune once more, for a while, with hallowing memories of home and country, now made present and actual by the music's magic. But the ordinary listener, to whom Slavonic music is no more than any other folk-music, cannot feel all this; with him the music must stand on its own merits—as music; and the more instinctively poetic his disposition, the more keenly will he feel the absence of all that picturesque and suggestive entourage the melody seems to call for, by its very character. To him it will lack its natural mise en scène, and will seem out of its proper element. All that the exiled Czech's stimulated imagination supplies, by force of association, he will instinctively feel the want of. The melody whose voice he feels in his heart [illegible] would be eloquent indeed in the sacred solitude of the desert, loses all conviction and persuasion in the thronged forum of concert performance. We say all this because, although Dvorak's rhapsody bored us a good deal last Saturday evening, we could not but feel that there was that in the music which would have made a very different impression upon us, under other, more favorable, conditions.

The other new number on the programme, Chabrier's overture to "Gwendoline," is a work of entirely different character; one quite able to raise its voice and make its message heard "im Strom der Welt," as Auerbach says. To hear this overture is distinctly a new experience in one's musical life. One would hesitate to call it a wholly great work, after one or two hearings; it is a boisterous, violent, unbridled thing, full of sound and fury—but surely not "signifying nothing!" It is the first orchestral composition we have met with by any Frenchman since Berlioz that gives us the impression of the composer's having been what we of Northern and un-Latin blood call thoroughly in earnest. Here Chabrier seems to have been completely, unresistingly a prey to his own inspiration; he has spoken what was in him to speak with unreserved frankness, with absolute conviction, without any regard whatever for what people might think of it. He has so far outgrown his nationality as to be frankly oblivious of all traditional French canons of style and taste. He has gone at his task with an anthracite glow of Berserker rage in him that melts all merely academic opposition like wax. His work may possibly be excessive, barbarous, offensive to all sorts of smooth-combed sensibilities; but it is grandly genuine and robust. Undoubtedly he "Wagnerizes" somewhat in it. But, of all Frenchmen we know, he is the first to show the effects of what may be called an immediate and personal Wagner influence; not the merely intellectual influence of Wagner's theoretical writings, but the immediate psychical influence of Wagner's works. He writes somewhat in Wagner's style, but by no means with the weak fanaticism of an [illegible] instrumentation he, the Wag-

[illegible] of French brilliancy and incisiveness. Not long ago we heard a certain [illegible] conductor say, referring to a recent composition that had gone the rounds of European and American concerts with not too much glory: "It is well to bring out these new things, no matter what you may think of them yourself; these new men have developed an orchestral technique which is worthy of all encouragement—for some day a man will come along who has something to say!" It seemed to us last Saturday evening that Chabrier might possibly be that man. The way the overture to "Gwendoline" was played was simply superb.

With the first movement of the "Jupiter" symphony we were brought face to face once more with our esteemed new acquaintance, the modern "slow Allegro." Once more did the classic "Allegro vivace" masquerade in the dignified robes of the "Allegro maestoso"! So the "slow Allegro" has burrowed through Beethoven and reached Mozart, has it? In time it may get back as far as Handel. When it does, it may find a rival hard to beat in the matter of stateliness, a movement in C major—like the first movement of the "Jupiter"—which has achieved a certain amount of fame under the title of "Dead March in Saul." But the divine Andante cantabile of the "Jupiter" was exquisitely played; the Minuet went exceedingly well, and the thrice-glorious Finale was given with a splendor that well nigh exhausted the highest possibilities. The performance of this last movement was another bright star in the crown of both orchestra and conductor. And what a movement it is! Who since Mozart has written anything at once so elaborate and so spontaneous? Old Bach himself might have looked down upon the composer and said, "Well done!" With such things as this to rely upon, the classic repertory has little to fear from modern competition.

In the great Tschaikowsky concerto Mr. Sieveking went far toward maintaining the fine impression he made last season with Saint-Saëns's G minor. If his playing left something to be desired in point of technical finish and security, it had a vitality and fire that showed the music in a very true light. His playing of the slow movement was particularly graceful and poetic in conception. But explain who can his omitting the tricksy little allegro vivace intermezzo in this movement! The little modulating cadenza he substituted for it seemed to us rather to call attention to its absence than to supply its place. It should be said that the concerto, as a whole, was not very well accompanied; pianist and orchestra were not always in perfect sympathy, and we could not escape the impression that more rehearsing would have improved matters. In a work full of fitful passionateness, like this concerto, the pianist must feel at liberty to follow the momentary impulse unrestrained, and the orchestra must not seem merely to follow him, but to be with him instinctively, as by a Leibnitzian "harmonia præstabilita;" any half-hearted wavering between the two forces works immediate ruin. To our perception much of the effect of Mr. Sieveking's playing was weakened by this lack of fine orchestral seconding. But the audience did not seem to feel it, for the pianist was rapturously applauded at the close, and recalled four times.

The next programme is: Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, symphony in E minor, "Gaelic," opus 32 (new); Massenet, air, "Vision fugitive," from "Hérodiade;" Brahms, Variations; Leoncavallo, prologue to "I Pagliacci;" Weber, overture to "Der Freischütz." Mr. G. Campanari will be the singer.

THE SYMPHONY MANAGEMENT.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

I make a plea for the protection of orderly and polite persons, against the imposition of the few of every crowd who seem to have no regard for the rights of others.

Time after time, the writer has seen persons come into the hall where a long line has already formed and coolly march up toward the head of the line and take a place better than that held by another who has been standing thirty minutes, and nobody about to prevent this. On the afternoon of the first rehearsal, I saw seven persons do this dishonorable act, and I regret to say, six of these offenders were women. This sort of behavior is seldom witnessed in such lines at the theatres. Surely, symphony-goers ought to be as orderly and polite as theatre-goers.

If people persist in such dishonorable conduct, the management ought to provide some means of protection. C. A. L.

182 West Canton street.

The concert by the Symphony Orchestra in Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, next Thursday evening, will be in memory of Professor Francis J. Child and Professor Josiah D. Whitney. The programme will include Mozart's G-minor symphony, air from Bach's D-major suite, Schubert's "Funeral March," Tschaikowsky's B-flat minor piano concerto, and Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture. Mr. Sieveking will be the pianist.

Boston Symphony Concerts.

The sale of the season tickets for the series of Boston Symphony concerts, at which such artists as Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, pianist; Herr Halier, violinist; M. Plancon, basso, and Ben Davis, tenor, will appear, has been very brisk, and the financial success seems assured. The season-ticket sale will be continued until Saturday, November 7, at Albert's. On the following Monday, November 9, the sale for the first concert, which takes place November 11, will begin. Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the first concert. A very interesting programme is promised.

Herald 10/25

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 25.

The Symphony Concert.

The second concert of the season was given by the Symphony Orchestra last evening in Music Hall. The programme was:

Overture, "Gwendoline,"..................Chabrier
Concerto No. 1; B flat minor, op. 22..Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody No. 3, op. 45..............Dvorak
Symphony N. 49, C major.....................Mozart
Sololst, Mr. Martinus Sieveking.

The Chabrier overture is a delightful work, everywhere revealing traces of a Wagnerian influence, but with a dash, brilliancy, reserve and effectiveness that belong to artistic France; fine finish is joined to fine art, polish to dazzling brilliancy, and the result is a little gem of the first water. The overture was interpreted by the orchestra with the finest feeling for detail and for contrast and with faultless taste.

The Tschaikowsky concerto introduced Mr. Sieveking for the second time to a Boston audience, and the opinion that was formed of him a year ago, requires very little modification at the present time. Now as then he impresses one with his artistic temperament, with his modesty, and with his sincerity. In the way of technique, Mr. Sieveking is amply provided; yet his finger skill is not used for the exaltation of the pianist, not for display, but as means to an end; in other words, Mr. Sieveking is an interpreter first, and a pianist afterwards. He has fingers of iron that have power and caressing delicacy at the same time; sometimes the strength is abused and the piano strings protest against being ill-treated by wailing in an unmusical nasal objection. As the rule, however, he expends his technical wealth with discretion and skill; rapid passages ring out clearly and brilliantly and with admirable equality of tone; the crescendos and diminuendos are what their names imply; unbroken and even flows of regularly increasing and diminishing sound, from which spasm and effort are absent. Another fact to be noted is that the use of the pedals never degenerates into abuse; they are never used for the purpose of concealing deficiency in touch or in taste.

Mr. Sieveking's style is large and broad, allowing majesty, passion as well as delicacy, but not tinkling sweetness. There is nothing affected in this style; it is strong, vigorous playing that earns approbation not through surprise, but by deliberately winning the approval of cultivated tastes. The varying moods of the noble Tschaikowsky concerto gave the artist ample opportunities to display all the talent and technical skill he possesses and he was rarely disappointing in either direction. Occasionally he allowed his fingers to run away with his judgment and gained brilliancy at the expense of clearness and fluency; sometimes physical strength rose superior to artistic beauty, but the faults were noticeable only at rare intervals and did not mar the general beauty of the work. Mr. Sieveking played with unfailing spirit, dignity and reasonableness that were in evidence even in the most fiery and passionate portions of the concerto; he never allowed his heart to run away with his head, never forgot the composer for the pianist.

It would be, perhaps, premature to dogmatically indicate Mr. Sieveking's positien in the art world for as yet there is not sufficient evidence upon which to found a judgment; but there can be no doubt that he is an artist of rare worth and that although he may have one or two living equals it is doubtful if he has any superior as a pianist. His work is sound, honest work, and back of the all-sufficing technique is the brain of the thinker and the soul of the artist.

The Slavonic Rhapsody is a fine piece of manufactured art, elaborately worked out to the smallest detail, and brilliant with its encrustations of artificial jewels; it is entirely satisfactory to the intellect that is always pleasantly stimulated by ingenious combinations and unexpected variations on combinations. The music is faultless; it possesses all the merits, but that of vitality. And then the test was too severe; he was sandwiched between Tschaikowsky and Mozart; and even a tall man's height is underestimated when he is placed beside giants.

The novelty for the next concert is Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's symphony in E. minor. Mr. G. Campanari will be the soloist.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives ten concerts at Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, on Thursday evenings, beginning Oct. 29. The soloists already engaged are Mrs. Von Januschowsky, Miss Lena Little, and the Messrs. Sieveking, Kneisel, Davies and Halir. Tickets for the season of ten concerts on sale at the University Bookstore.

The Washington Capital

WASHINGTON - OCTOBER 26 - 1896

This brilliant programme that the Boston Symphony Orchestra is offering for Thursday, the 12th of next month, is the forty-eighth performance of this organization in Washington. Everyone of these forty-eight concerts of theirs has been fine; it may be said truly, too, that nearly every one has been better than the one before. This is a great record, and perhaps the Boston Symphony Orchestra is the only one with quite such a record in this country. I may mention that in the concert of the 12th, in addition to the performance of the orchestra, Madame Teresa Carino, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Martinus Sieveking, and Mr. Karl Hieler, the famous violin virtuoso from Berlin, will be the solo artists.

Boston Symphony Concerts.

The sale of season tickets for the Boston Symphony Concerts has been very large at Albert's ticket office, and will be continued until Saturday, November 7. On Monday, November 9, the sale for the first concert of the season of this sterling organization will begin. Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the opening concert; Mme. Carreno, pianist; Mr. Hahir, violinist; Mons. Planson, basso, and Mr. Ben Davis, tenor, will appear at the balance of the series of the Boston Symphony Concerts.

MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.
MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
FIVE CONCERTS.

WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, November 11, December 9, January 20, February 24, March 24, at 8 o'clock

SOLO ARTISTS—MME. MELBA, MME. CARRENO, MR. POL PLANCON, MR. BEN DAVIS, MR. CARL HALIR, the famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.00 and $5.00, according to location, now on sale at Albert's, 13 North Charles Street.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.
F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

OMMENT

Jewish Comment

Boston Symphony Concerts.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra begins its twelfth season in Baltimore on Wednesday evening, November 11, at Music Hall, which will be its thirty-ninth performance in this city. The remaining four concerts will be on Wednesday evening, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven symphony No. 2, the Schubert C major symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky symphony No. 4 and the Schumann C major symphony. The overtures are the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann. Other selections of interest are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz," of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance," and the new symphonic poem, by Mr. Richard Burmeister, of this city.

The list of soloists includes Mme. Melba, Mr. Carl Halir, a famous violinist of Berlin, Mr. Pol Plancon, Mr. Ben Davies and Mme. Teressa Carreno, who reappears in this country after an absence of some years in Europe.

Conductor Paur has decided to divide each programme into two parts by a 10-minute intermission, an innovation which will probably prove acceptable to the majority of the patrons. Tickets can now be secured at Alberts, 13 N. Charles street.

Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts.

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, the Boston Symphony Orchestra inaugurates its twelfth season in Baltimore with the first of its series of five concerts in Music Hall, under the direction of Conductor Emil Paur. The success attending these concerts in years past promises to be more than equalled this season, and to emphacise the interest, Manager Ellis will bring to Baltimore on the occasion of the first concert Mme. Melba, the brilliant soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed this season the Beethoven Symphony No. 2, the Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4, and the Schumann C major Symphony. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann. Other selections of interest are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet; the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance" and a new symphonic poem by Prof. Richard Burmeister, of this city. Besides Melba, the list of the season's soloists includes; Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Pol Plancon, basso, from the Metropolitan Opera Company, and, beyond a doubt, one of the most finished artists on the musical stage to-day; and Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season.

Especial importance is attached to the announcement of the reappearance in this city, after a seven-year absence in Europe, of Mme. Teresa Carreno. Mme. Carreno's playing will be readily recalled for its extreme brilliancy and warmth. Season tickets may now be secured at Albert's, 13 North Charles street. As in past seasons, program books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

Boston Transcript

MONDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1896.

Music Hall: Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The programme of the second symphony concert, given in the Music Hall last Saturday evening, was as follows:

Chabrier: Overture to "Gwendoline."
(First time in Boston.)
Tschaikowsky: Concerto for pianoforte, No. 1, in B-flat minor, opus 23.
Dvorak: Slavonic Rhapsody in A-flat major, opus 45, No. 3.
(First time in Boston.)
Mozart: Symphony No. 49, in C major, "Jupiter."
Mr. Martinus Sieveking was the pianist.

There was one number on this programme that was ill-placed, past all doubt; this was the new Dvorak Rhapsody. Leaving its peculiar character out of the question, one may say that no new, hitherto unheard composition would have been favorably placed after such tremendous and exciting works as the Chabrier overture and the Tschaikowsky concerto; a long-familiar work of the highest genius, like the "Jupiter" symphony, could well come after these; its sharply-contrasted style would be all in favor of its producing its full effect. But few listeners have the staying power to be fresh for entirely new musical impressions after the strain of such an overture and such a concerto. Again, the peculiar character of Dvorak's rhapsody makes it a difficult work to place well on a symphony programme, in any case; we do not say that it cannot be well placed, but that it is difficult to place it well. Here that much-debated Volkslied business comes up again. Whether the principal theme of Dvorak's rhapsody is an authentic Czech folk-song or not, it has unmistakably the character of one; it has the characteristic melancholy wail that belongs to the folk-music of peoples whose national scale (whether complete or defective) gives prominence to minor internals. Whether the music be Irish, Scandinavian, or Slavonic matters little; the characteristic wail is much the same; even when the melody is distinctly in the major mode, something of this wail remains.

Now, this distinctive characteristic may be admiraby poetic, or merely dreary, according to circumstances. There is hardly any music in existence the true impressiveness of which depends so much upon the force of association as the folk-song. Its aroma is exceedingly delicate and volatile. It is, upon the whole, dangerous material to use for the purposes of elaborately developed concert music. Wagner was quite right when he wrote of Weber's basing his melodic style upon the German folk-song, and compared the naive native melody to a tender violet blooming modestly in the woods. "The unhappy man!" he exclaims, referring to Weber, "he plucked it! And it withered!" The aroma of the folk-song will not survive the process of artificial distillation. As regards this rhapsody of Dvorak's, we can well imagine the effect it might produce upon a born Czech, long exiled from his native land, who heard it for the first time even at a symphony concert. What sacred memories might not those once-familiar strains awaen in his heart even to blotting out all consciousness of his prosaic surroundings? Instead of the Music Hall, with its crowding audience, electric lights, and reputably dressed orchestra, he might see himself surrounded for the moment by his native hills and forests; all the poetic surroundings amid which that wailing melody had its home would arise unbidden before his mind's eye, and he could commune once more, for a while, with hallowing memories of home and country, now made present and actual by the music's magic. But the ordinary listener, to whom Slavonic music is no more than any other folk-music, cannot feel all this; with him the music must stand on its own merits—as music; and the more instinctively poetic his disposition, the more keenly will he feel the absence of all that picturesque and suggestive entourage the melody seems to call for, by its very character To him it will lack its natural mise en scène, and will seem out of its proper element. All that the exiled Czech's stimulated imagination supplies, by force of association, he will instinctively feel the want of. The melody, whose voice he feels in his heart of hearts, would be eloquent indeed in the sacred solitude of the desert, loses all conviction and persuasion in the thronged forum of concert performance. We say all this because, although Dvorak's rhapsody bored us a good deal last Saturday evening, we could not but feel that there was that in the music which would have made a very different impression upon us under other, more favorable, conditions.

The other new number on the programme, Chabrier's overture to "Gwendoline," is a work of entirely different character; one quite able to raise its voice and make its message heard "im Strom der Welt," as Auerbach says. To hear this overture is distinctly a new experience in one's musical life. One would hesitate to call it a wholly great work, after one or two hearings; it is a boisterous, violent, unbridled thing, full of sound and fury—but surely not "signifying nothing!" It is the first orchestral composition we have met with by any Frenchman since Berlioz that gives us the impression of the composer's having been what we of Northern and un-Latin blood call thoroughly in earnest. Here Chabrier seems to have been completely, unresistingly a prey to his own inspiration; he has spoken what was in him to speak with unreserved frankness, with absolute conviction, without any regard whatever for what people might think of it. He has so far outgrown his nationality as to be frankly oblivious of all traditional French canons of style and taste. He has gone at his task with an anthracite glow of Berserker rage in him that melts all merely academic opposition like wax. His work may possibly be excessive, barbarous, offensive to all sorts of smooth-combed sensibilities; but it is grandly genuine and robust. Undoubtedly he "Wagnerizes" somewhat in it. But, of all Frenchmen we know, he is the first to show the effects of what may be called an immediate and personal Wagner influence; not the merely intellectual influence of Wagner's theoretical writings, but the immediate psychical influence of Wagner's works. He writes somewhat in Wagner's style, but by no means with the weak fanaticism of an acolyte; his instrumentation has the Wag[illegible] and power, it yet with a certain characteristic touch of French brilliancy and incisiveness. Not long ago we heard a certain noted conductor say, referring to a recent composition that had gone the rounds of European and American concerts with not too much glory: "It is well to bring out these new things, no matter what you may think of them yourself; these new men have developed an orchestral technique which is worthy of all encouragement—for some day a man will come along who has something to say!" It seemed to us last Saturday evening that Chabrier might possibly be that man. The way the overture to "Gwendoline" was played was simply superb.

With the first movement of the "Jupiter" symphony we were brought face to face once more with our esteemed new acquaintance, the modern "slow Allegro." Once more did the classic "Allegro vivace" masquerade in the dignified robes of the "Allegro mæstoso"! So the "slow Allegro" has burrowed through Beethoven and reached Mozart, has it? In time it may get back as for as Handel. When it does, it may find a rival hard to beat in the matter of stateliness, a movement in C major—like the first movement of the "Jupiter"—which has achieved a certain amount of fame under the title of "Dead March in Saul." But the divine Andante cantabile of the "Jupiter" was exquisitely played; the Minuet went exceedingly well, and the thrice-glorious Finale was given with a splendor that well nigh exhausted the highest possibilities. The performance of this last movement was another bright star in the crown of both orchestra and conductor. And what a movement it is! Who since Mozart has written anything at once so elaborate and so spontaneous? Old Bach himself might have looked down upon the composer and said, "Well done!" With such things as this to rely upon, the classic repertory has little to fear from modern competition.

In the great Tschaikowsky concerto Mr. Sieveking went far toward maintaining the fine impression he made last season with Saint-Saëns's G minor. If his playing left something to be desired in point of technical finish and security, it had a vitality and fire that showed the music in a very true light. His playing of the slow movement was particularly graceful and poetic in conception. But explain who can his omitting the tricksy little allegro vivace intermezzo in this movement! The little modulating cadenza he substituted for it seemed to us rather to call attention to its absence than to supply its place. It should be said that the concerto, as a whole, was not very well accompanied; pianist and orchestra were not always in perfect sympathy, and we could not escape the impression that more rehearsing would have improved matters. In a work full of fitful passionateness, like this concerto, the pianist must feel at liberty to follow the momentary impulse unrestrained, and the orchestra must not seem merely to follow him, but to be with him instinctively, as by a Leibnitzian "harmonia præstabilita;" any half-hearted wavering between the two forces works immediate ruin. To our perception much of the effect of Mr. Sieveking's playing was weakened by this lack of fine orchestral seconding. But the audience did not seem to feel it, for the pianist was rapturously applauded at the close, and recalled four times.

The next programme is: Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, symphony in E minor, "Gaelic," opus 32 (new); Massenet, air, "Vision fugitive," from "Hérodiade;" Brahms, Váriations; Leoncavallo, prologue to "I Pagliacci;" Weber, overture to "Der Freischütz." Mr. G. Campanari will be the singer.

THE SYMPHONY MANAGEMENT.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

I make a plea for the protection of orderly and polite persons, against the imposition of the few of every crowd who seem to have no regard for the rights of others.

Time after time, the writer has seen persons come into the hall where a long line has already formed and coolly march up toward the head of the line and take a place better than that held by another who has been standing thirty minutes, and nobody about to prevent this. On the afternoon of the first rehearsal, I saw seven persons do this dishonorable act, and I regret to say, six of these offenders were women. This sort of behavior is seldom witnessed in such lines at the theatres. Surely, symphony-goers ought to be as orderly and polite as theatre-goers.

If people persist in such dishonorable conduct, the management ought to provide some means of protection. C. A. L.

182 West Canton street.

The concert by the Symphony Orchestra in Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, next Thursday evening, will be in memory of Professor Francis J. Child and Professor Josiah D. Whitney. The programme will include Mozart's G-minor symphony, air from Bach's D-major suite, Schubert's "Funeral March," Tschaikowsky's B-flat minor piano concerto, and Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture. Mr. Sieveking will be the pianist.

Boston Symphony Concerts.

The sale of the season tickets for the series of Boston Symphony concerts, at which such artists as Mme. Melba, Mme. Carreno, pianist; Herr Halier, violinist; M. Plancon, basso, and Ben Davis, tenor, will appear, has been very brisk, and the financial success seems assured. The season-ticket sale will be continued until Saturday, November 7, at Albert's. On the following Monday, November 9, the sale for the first concert, which takes place November 11, will begin. Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the first concert. A very interesting programme is promised.

Herald 10/25

Gazette

BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, OCT. 25.

The Symphony Concert.

The second concert of the season was given by the Symphony Orchestra last evening in Music Hall. The programme was:

Overture, "Gwendoline,"..................Chabrier
Concerto No. 1; B flat minor, op. 22..Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody No. 3, op. 45.............Dvorak
Symphony N. 49, C major.....................Mozart
Soloist, Mr. Martinus Sieveking.

The Chabrier overture is a delightful work, everywhere revealing traees of a Wagnerian influence, but with a dash, brilliancy, reserve and effectiveness that belong to artistic France; fine finish is joined to fine art, polish to dazzling brilliancy, and the result is a little gem of the first water. The overture was interpreted by the orchestra with the finest feeling for detail and for contrast and with faultless taste.

The Tschaikowsky concerto introduced Mr. Sieveking for the second time to a Boston audience, and the opinion that was formed of him a year ago, requires very little modification at the present time. Now as then he impresses one with his artistic temperament, with his modesty, and with his sincerity. In the way of technique, Mr. Sieveking is amply provided; yet his finger skill is not used for the exaltation of the pianist, not for display, but as means to an end; in other words, Mr. Sieveking is an interpreter first, and a pianist afterwards. He has fingers of iron that have power and caressing delicacy at the same time; sometimes the strength is abused and the piano strings protest against being ill-treated by wailing in an unmusical nasal objection. As the rule, however, he expends his technical wealth with discretion and skill; rapid passages ring out clearly and brilliantly and with admirable equality of tone; the crescendos and diminuendos are what their names imply; unbroken and even flows of regularly increasing and diminishing sound, from which spasm and effort are absent. Another fact to be noted is that the use of the pedals never degenerates into abuse; they are never used for the purpose of concealing deficiency in touch or in taste.

Mr. Sieveking's style is large and broad, allowing majesty, passion as well as delicacy, but not tinkling sweetness. There is nothing affected in this style; it is strong, vigorous playing that earns approbation not through surprise, but by deliberately winning the approval of cultivated tastes. The varying moods of the noble Tschaikowsky concerto gave the artist ample opportunities to display all the talent and technical skill he possesses and he was rarely disappointing in either direction. Occasionally he allowed his fingers to run away with his judgment and gained brilliancy at the expense of clearness and fluency; sometimes physical strength rose superior to artistic beauty, but the faults were noticeable only at rare intervals and did not mar the general beauty of the work. Mr. Sieveking played with unfailing spirit, dignity and reasonableness that were in evidence even in the most fiery and passionate portions of the concerto; he never allowed his heart to run away with his head, never forgot the composer for the pianist.

It would be, perhaps, premature to dogmatically indicate Mr. Sieveking's positien in the art world for as yet there is not sufficient evidence upon which to found a judgment; but there can be no doubt that he is an artist of rare worth and that although he may have one or two living equals it is doubtful if he has any superior as a pianist. His work is sound, honest work, and back of the all-sufficing technique is the brain of the thinker and the soul of the artist.

The Slavonic Rhapsody is a fine piece of manufactured art, elaborately worked out to the smallest detail, and brilliant with its encrustations of artificial jewels; it is entirely satisfactory to the intellect that is always pleasantly stimulated by ingenious combinations and unexpected variations on combinations. The music is faultless; it possesses all the merits, but that of vitality. And then the test was too severe; he was sandwiched between Tschaikowsky and Mozart; and even a tall man's height is underestimated when he is placed beside giants.

The novelty for the next concert is Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's symphony in E minor. Mr. G. Campanari will be the soloist.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives ten concerts at Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, on Thursday evenings, beginning Oct. 29. The soloists already engaged are Mrs. Von Januschowsky, Miss Lena Little, and the Messrs. Sieveking, Kneisel, Davies and Halir. Tickets for the season of ten concerts on sale at the University Bookstore.

The Washington Capital

WASHINGTON - OCTOBER 26 - 1896

This brilliant programme that the Boston Symphony Orchestra is offering for Thursday, the 12th of next month, is the forty-eighth performance of this organization in Washington. Everyone of these forty-eight concerts of theirs has been fine; it may be said truly, too, that nearly every one has been better than the one before. This is a great record, and perhaps the Boston Symphony Orchestra is the only one with quite such a record in this country. I may mention that in the concert of the 12th, in addition to the performance of the orchestra, Madame Teresa Carino Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Martinus Sieveking, and Mr. Kar Hieler, the famous violin virtuoso from Berlin, will be the solo artists.

Boston Symphony Concerts.

The sale of season tickets for the Boston Symphony Concerts has been very large at Albert's ticket office, and will be continued until Saturday, November 7. On Monday, November 9, the sale for the first concert of the season of this sterling organization will begin. Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the opening concert; Mme. Carreno, pianist; Mr. Hahir, violinist; Mons. Planson, basso, and Mr. Ben Davis, tenor, will appear at the balance of the series of the Boston Symphony Concerts.

MUSIC HALL.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.
MR. EMIL PAUR, Conductor.
FIVE CONCERTS.

WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, November 11, December 9, January 20, February 24, March 24, at 8 o'clock

SOLO ARTISTS—MME. MELBA, MME. CARRENO, MR. POL PLANCON, MR. BEN DAVIS, MR. CARL HALIR, the famous Violin Virtuoso from Berlin.

Season tickets, with reserved seats for the series of five concerts, $7.00 and $5.00, according to location, now on sale at Albert's, 13 North Charles Street.

C. A. ELLIS, Manager.
F. R. COMEE, Assistant Manager.

OMMENT Jewish Comment

Boston Symphony Concerts.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra begins its twelfth season in Baltimore on Wednesday evening, November 11, at Music Hall, which will be its thirty-ninth performance in this city. The remaining four concerts will be on Wednesday evening, December 9, January 20, February 24 and March 24.

Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed the Beethoven symphony No. 2, the Schubert C major symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky symphony No. 4 and the Schumann C major symphony. The overtures are the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann. Other selections of interest are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet, the "Mephisto Waltz," of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance," and the new symphonic poem, by Mr. Richard Burmeister, of this city.

The list of soloists includes Mme. Melba, Mr. Carl Halir, a famous violinist of Berlin, Mr. Pol Plancon, Mr. Ben Davies and Mme. Teressa Carreno, who reappears in this country after an absence of some years in Europe.

Conductor Paur has decided to divide each programme into two parts by a 10-minute intermission, an innovation which will probably prove acceptable to the majority of the patrons. Tickets can now be secured at Alberts, 13 N. Charles street.

Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts.

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, the Boston Symphony Orchestra inaugurates its twelfth season in Baltimore with the first of its series of five concerts in Music Hall, under the direction of Conductor Emil Paur. The success attending these concerts in years past promises to be more than equalled this season, and to emphacise the interest, Manager Ellis will bring to Baltimore on the occasion of the first concert Mme. Melba, the brilliant soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Conductor Paur announces among the works to be performed this season the Beethoven Symphony No. 2, the Schubert C major Symphony No. 9, the Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 4, and the Schumann C major Symphony. The overtures are the "Carnival Romain" of Berlioz, "Fingal's Cave" of Mendelssohn, the "Freischutz" of Weber and the "Genoveva" of Schumann. Other selections of interest are the entr'acte from "Carmen," by Bizet; the "Mephisto Waltz" of Liszt, Weber's "Invitation to Dance" and a new symphonic poem by Prof. Richard Burmeister, of this city. Besides Melba, the list of the season's soloists includes; Carl Halir, Berlin's most famous violinist; Pol Plancon, basso, from the Metropolitan Opera Company, and, beyond a doubt, one of the most finished artists on the musical stage to-day; and Ben Davies, who made such a favorable impression at the closing concert last season.

Especial importance is attached to the announcement of the reappearance in this city, after a seven-year absence in Europe, of Mme. Teresa Carreno. Mme. Carreno's playing will be readily recalled for its extreme brilliancy and warmth. Season tickets may now be secured at Albert's, 13 North Charles street. As in past seasons, program books with descriptive notes on the works to be performed, will be mailed in advance of each concert to purchasers of season tickets.

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1896.

The program of the second Symphony concert, given last night, was as follows:

Overture to Gwendoline (First time in Boston.)	Chabrier
Concerto for piano, No. 1, B flat minor	Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody, No. 3, A flat major (First time in Boston.)	Dvorák
Symphony, C major (Jupiter)	Mozart

Boston knows little of Chabrier's music. A few tunes in The Merry Monarch, the operetta lifted from L'Etoile; the España, played by the Philharmonic Orchestra at the Tremont Theatre January 14, 1892, and the beautiful, sensuous prelude to Act II. of Gwendoline, played at a Symphony concert October 13, 1894, and repeated at an afternoon concert in Music Hall. I do not believe that any pianist has played here a piano piece of Chabrier, and I doubt if a singer, local or stranger, has sung a song by him.

* * *

I do not like to growl, and I am fond of Mr. Apthorp, as critic and man. Nevertheless I wish that in the program book of last night he had seen fit to tell the audience something about Chabrier's opera and overture.

There were "Gleanings from the Court Library in Utopia," extracts from the writings of Finocchi, Schwartemag, Fungolfactor, Scriblerus, Montgomery, Bullycarp, and the other authors invented by Mr. Apthorp. I am told that several readers have searched for these works in the Public Library, and that Mr. Otto Roth asked Mr. Apthorp in ecstasy of admiration, "When do you find time for reading such out-of-the-way and learned volumes?" While I often enjoy the jests and the sentiments of Mr. Apthorp thus masked, I am unable to forget that the chief object of a program book is to furnish information concerning the pieces played or sung.

A panoramic program book, with a full explanation of what the music "means," is inevitably a nuisance, and an injury to the composer. But when the overture to Gwendoline is played, in view of the fact that the opera is unknown here, a few words about the story of the opera might well have prepared the hearers for the overture. As it was, the music must have come to many like a slap in the face.

You probably know the libretto of Catulle Mendès. Gwendoline, the daughter of Armel, dreams that she is borne over the sea by a Dane. As she tells her dream the Danes descend on the coast of Britain. The leader Harald loves Gwendoline at sight and she loves him. At the marriage ceremony Armel gives Gwendoline a dagger that she may kill at night the man in her arms. For when the Danes are deep in drunken sleep there is to be butchery. Gwendline loves Harald. She warns him. He laughs as he holds her warm. There are shrieks without. Armel slays Harald. Gwendoline stabs herself, and falls on the body of her husband of a night.

The prelude to Act II. is Gwendoline. The overture is Harald. It opens in a burst of barbaric rage, the first theme being associated in the opera with the swoop of the Danes. Disharmonic trumpet fanfares produce extraordinary effect. The second theme, eminently French in melody and rhythm, is the idea of Harald's song, in which he describes to Gwendoline the joys of his adventurous life and the enviable fate reserved for him to be carried at the last by Valkyries to Valhalla. This theme is given at first to the English horn, horn and violas. The Gwendoline motiv is used sparingly. The finale is the Valhalla cantus firmus declaimed gigantically combined with a development of Gwendoline's legend.

I cannot describe even in painfully sought phrases the impression made by this tumultuous overture. To some the music seemed no doubt brutal, anarchistic. But the polyphony is clear and skillfully worked; the harmonic treatment is daring and original; there is furious swing; there is full, heroic blood, and the orchestration is gorgeous, dazzling, marvelously sonorous, at the same time distinct.

However deeply Chabrier had studied Wagner, however passionately he admired him, he did not give up his birthright. In a hundred passages you recognize the Frenchman; thoroughly French; to the nails a Frenchman. Nor is he ever merely a clever echo of Wagner. This ventripotent composer, this "Falstaff of Wagnerism," as "Willy" called him some years ago in Paris, had a voice of his own—a mighty voice.

* * *

The first performance in public of Tschaikowsky's piano concerto in B flat minor was in Music Hall, Boston, by von Bülow, October 25, 1875, when Mr. Lang conducted the orchestra. The concerto has been played here by Mr. Lang, Mrs. Hopekirk and Miss Aus der Ohe. Mr. Apthorp says in the program book: "It was last played here by Mme. Helen Hopekirk." The statement is incorrect. Mrs. Hopekirk played it in 1891; Miss Aus der Ohe played it in 1892, January 6, at a Young People's Popular Concert, and she played it superbly.

It seems to me that Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who played it last night, made an error in judgment when he cut out the allegro vivace assai in the second movement. This jig tune is eminently and essentially Tschaikowskian. Some call it vulgar. But it is not thin-lipped vulgarity; it is the animal vulgarity of a great man. It is of kin to the vulgarity of Shakespeare, Rabelais, Aristophanes. It is the vulgarity of a remarkable race.

The performance of the long-winded cadenza, although it afforded an opportunity for personal display, did not restore equilibrium, so far as the composition itself is concerned.

The characteristics of Mr. Sieveking's performance were unusual strength modestly exerted without apparent effort, fluency and brilliancy in bravura passages. The finale would have gained if it had been taken at a more furious pace. The applause that followed the performance was long continued, enthusiastic and, above all, honest.

* * *

Dvorák's third rhapsody, first played at a Sinfonie soirée of the Royal Orchestra, Berlin, September 20, 1879, was one of the first works that called the attention of musicians to Dvorák. Looking over files of German music journals to find out about this first performance I came across a sniffing review of Dvorák's Dumka for piano published about the time of the concert at Berlin.

This rhapsodie is not one of Dvorák's best works for orchestra. Its chief merit is the orchestration. The themes are pretty enough, but they are worked to death. There is the fatal exuberance of Schubert, which delays the end. The finale of this rhapsody is a veritable deathbed farewell, with messages to all inquiring friends, and a tiresome distribution of property of little value.

* * *

I should like to hear a Mozart symphony played in a small hall by a small orchestra of Symphony men. I believe its beauties would then stand out in bolder relief, and that which is now dull and hopelessly old fashioned might seem pleasingly archaic. As played last night the first movement, with the exception of the Figaro suggestion, was a good deal of a bore, and there was the thought of sincere and laborious sawing of wood. The andante, a song of sweet melancholy, might have been sung with more delicacy. Thoroughly charming was the minuet. As for the finale it is one of the great masterpieces; not because it is a remarkable solution of a difficult task, but because it is brilliantly beautiful.

* * *

Mr. Apthorp says in the program book: "The name 'Jupiter' probably referred to the (supposable) 'thunder and lightning' fusées of the strings and wood wind in the opening measures of the first movement. At least, very similar fusées precede the general cry of 'Odi il tuon'! (Hear the thunder!) in the first finale of Don Giovanni." And he afterward says: "A yearning phrase, ascending by two successive semitones, followed by a brighter, almost rollicking one—is it Jove laughing at lovers' perjuries?"

Otto Jahn says—"W. A. Mozart," 1859, Vol. IV., p. 135—"Somebody has given this symphony the title 'Jupiter.' I know not when or where. This was to describe the majesty and the brilliany of the symphony rather than to indicate profound symbolism."

* * *

I should not speak thus rudely of Mr. Apthorp's inaccuracy, inexplicable omissions, or opinions, if his articles were published in a newspaper. But he is the editor of the program book of the Symphony Orchestra. This book is alleged by some to be of educational value. At the end of the season bound copies of it are advertised for sale. But there is never a table of errata at the end of the volume.

An occasional slip is pardonable. When number after number of this program book is noticeable for wildness in dates or other statements of fact, when an insufficient or no explanation is given of new works, Mr. Apthorp's attention should be called to his indifference or laziness. The hearer who wishes to find out something about the overture to Gwendoline will not be consoled by a technical analysis of the Jupiter Symphony, which is of no use to musicians and is unintelligible to the average concert goer.

The program book is a nuisance the moment it becomes analytical. A page or too of the important facts concerning the composers and their musical intentions should be sufficient.

The program book to-day in Music Hall prevents many people from real enjoyment of the music. They read. They do not listen.

And all this would probably be true if the program book were written by anyone else on the same general lines. Mr. Apthorp is a very intelligent man in many ways. It would be well for him to reflect that modern music has righteous claims; that a piece is not necessarily bad because it was written by a Frenchman, Russian or Italian in 1895 or 1896; that a little definite information about a new work makes more for musical righteousness than weary pages about "half cadence on the dominant of the dominant" and "a strong subsidiary of brilliant passage work," especially when the weary pages treat of as familiar a work as the Jupiter Symphony.

PHILIP HALE.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Madame Melba, who will be the soloist at the opening concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Tuesday evening, November 10, sailed from Europe on Saturday last. It is against the fixed standard of the management to make any change in its scale of prices under any circumstances, and none will be made on the occasion of Mme. Melba's appearance. A policy like this is warmly to be commended.

The Philharmonic programme in the Acad-

Ledger. Oct 31st,

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH
704 CHESTNUT Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1896.

Madame Melba, who sailed from Europe last Saturday, will be the soloist at the opening concert for the season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will take place at the Academy of Music on Tuesday evening, November 10. Although Melba is such a great and such a high-priced attraction, there will be no advance of price at the concert at which she appears. That would be against the fixed policy of the management.

HOME JOURNAL

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1896.

EMMANUEL CHABRIER, Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky, Anton Dvorak, and Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart were the composers chosen for the second symphony concert in Music Hall last Saturday evening. The concert had for its most noteworthy feature the re-appearance here of Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who performed the Tschaikowsky concerto, No. 1, in B flat minor, op. 23. A renewed experience with this work confirms the impression at its initial hearing in Boston. The work is not a masterpiece of the highest type, but it is nevertheless a masterpiece. One seeks without finding in it any such impassioned and original harmony, effective contrasts, grand climaxes and unique points of architecture as may be found for example in the distinctly modern concertos of Grieg, Saint-Saëns and Paderewski. Its thematic contents are wholly unobjectionable. Its melodies are one and all tuneful and ear-catching without being commonplace; refined and dignified, as well as being quite invariably pleasing, but in no single instance transcendently so. In its points of adaptation to a typical virtuoso's technique its effective octave passages constitute about two-thirds of all the startling virtuosity it contains.

—o—

Mr. Sieveking's success with the work was admirable. Nor is this to be wondered at when, taken in connection with the most sensational feature of the concerto, as above noted, the octave playing of Mr. Sieveking has not been equalled here by any pianist who has visited us with the possible exception of D'Albert. Such rapid, clear and brilliant octave playing as Mr. Sieveking exhibits would seem quite impossible to surpass. Considered as a whole, his performance was lacking in neither strength nor dignity of style. Whenever the opportunity presented itself he did not fail to display the even more commendable attribute of his technical proficiency in impelling his right and left hands as it fairly seemed, to converse with each other, and that with rare freedom, perspicuity and ease. His performance was otherwise characterized by an integrity of purpose, manly intelligence, facility of execution, and refined expression, which, though such qualities in each particular detail were not superlatively well manifested, nevertheless contributed their own important share in rendering his perfomance artistically effective and delightful. At the conclusion of the concerto the prolonged applause showered upon Mr. Sieveking testified unmistakably to the appreciation he received from one of the most critical and intelligent of symphony concert audiences.

—o—

The concert had for one principal novelty the overture to "Gwendoline," by Emmanuel Chabrier, a work which a musician so conservative in his tastes as cian so conservative in his tastes as Mr. Paur might not have been expected to indorse. The "Gwendoline" overture is in no single feature so great as in the brazen disclosure of how the late Richard Wagner, perforce of circumstances beyond his control, has been compelled to furnish Chabrier with the principal suggestions of his incoherent and overcrowded score. In the harmonic endowment of the work the composer has been most exasperatingly wild, giddy and frantic, but, alas, neither graceful nor beautiful. In fact, there is an ill-disguised rottenness at the very core of this overture, while the bizarre effects of the score are often of the most noisy and blatant description.

—o—

The overture doubtless caused more comment than any other selection on the programme. As regards any important expression of such comment, the attitude taken by Mr. B. E. Woolf is, to say the least, interesting. How such music as Chabrier's, such fill up and burst orchestration, such sound and fury signifying nothing, would have sounded to the learned and brilliant critic ten years ago, one can only infer from the premises and points of view of his musical criticisms at that time. If, however, he really enjoys the overture in question, and there would appear to be no doubt of it, one can only hope that he has no intention of deserting the grand old party of Bach, Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven and Brahms, with which he has been so ably identified, and that he has no real intention of becoming identified with any such schemes for the free and unlimited orchestration of brass as he has heretofore so steadfastly renounced. Another esteemed contemporary says of the orchestration to Gwendoline, that it is "more distinct even in its spasms than is the orchestration of Wagner." This is all very true; but, as this contemporary will allow, it is neither the highest nor the healthiest order of orchestration that is attended with "spasms."

—o—

How any such spasmless authorities on musical art as Messrs. W. and H. can really enjoy such "spasms of orchestration" as are experienced by them in the "Gwendoline" overture is inexplicable. Yet information has come to the effect that this very same convulsive and hysterical music with all its free and unlimited orchestration of brass "so distinct in its spasms" will "well bear repetition."

The Musical Courier.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1896.

The program of the second Symphony concert, given last night, was as follows:

Overture to Gwendoline (First time in Boston.)	Chabrier
Concerto for piano, No. 1, B flat minor	Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Rhapsody, No. 3, A flat major (First time in Boston.)	Dvorák
Symphony, C major (Jupiter)	Mozart

Boston knows little of Chabrier's music. A few tunes in The Merry Monarch, the operetta lifted from L'Etoile; the España, played by the Philharmonic Orchestra at the Tremont Theatre January 14, 1892, and the beautiful, sensuous prelude to Act II. of Gwendoline, played at a Symphony concert October 13, 1894, and repeated at an afternoon concert in Music Hall. I do not believe that any pianist has played here a piano piece of Chabrier, and I doubt if a singer, local or stranger, has sung a song by him.

* * *

I do not like to growl, and I am fond of Mr. Apthorp, as critic and man. Nevertheless I wish that in the program book of last night he had seen fit to tell the audience something about Chabrier's opera and overture.

There were "Gleanings from the Court Library in Utopia," extracts from the writings of Finocchi, Schwartemag, Fungolfactor, Scriblerus, Montgomery, Bullycarp, and the other authors invented by Mr. Apthorp. I am told that several readers have searched for these works in the Public Library, and that Mr. Otto Roth asked Mr. Apthorp in ecstasy of admiration, "When do you find time for reading such out-of-the-way and learned volumes?" While I often enjoy the jests and the sentiments of Mr. Apthorp thus masked, I am unable to forget that the chief object of a program book is to furnish information concerning the pieces played or sung.

A panoramic program book, with a full explanation of what the music "means," is inevitably a nuisance, and an injury to the composer. But when the overture to Gwendoline is played, in view of the fact that the opera is unknown here, a few words about the story of the opera might well have prepared the hearers for the overture. As it was, the music must have come to many like a slap in the face.

You probably know the libretto of Catulle Mendès. Gwendoline, the daughter of Armel, dreams that she is borne over the sea by a Dane. As she tells her dream the Danes descend on the coast of Britain. The leader Harald loves Gwendoline at sight and she loves him. At the marriage ceremony Armel gives Gwendoline a dagger that she may kill at night the man in her arms. For when the Danes are deep in drunken sleep there is to be butchery. Gwendline loves Harald. She warns him. He laughs as he holds her warm. There are shrieks without. Armel slays Harald. Gwendoline stabs herself, and falls on the body of her husband of a night.

The prelude to Act II. is Gwendoline. The overture is Harald. It opens in a burst of barbaric rage, the first theme being associated in the opera with the swoop of the Danes. Disharmonic trumpet fanfares produce extraordinary effect. The second theme, eminently French in melody and rhythm, is the idea of Harald's song, in which he describes to Gwendoline the joys of his adventurous life and the enviable fate reserved for him to be carried at the last by Valkyries to Valhalla. This theme is given at first to the English horn, horn and violas. The Gwendoline motiv is used sparingly. The finale is the Valhalla cantus firmus declaimed gigantically combined with a development of Gwendoline's legend.

I cannot describe even in painfully sought phrases the impression made by this tumultuous overture. To some the music seemed no doubt brutal, anarchistic. But the polyphony is clear and skillfully worked; the harmonic treatment is daring and original; there is furious swing; there is full, heroic blood, and the orchestration is gorgeous, dazzling, marvelously sonorous, at the same time distinct.

However deeply Chabrier had studied Wagner, however passionately he admired him, he did not give up his birthright. In a hundred passages you recognize the Frenchman; thoroughly French; to the nails a Frenchman. Nor is he ever merely a clever echo of Wagner. This ventripotent composer, this "Falstaff of Wagnerism," as "Willy" called him some years ago in Paris, had a voice of his own—a mighty voice.

* * *

The first performance in public of Tschaikowsky's piano concerto in B flat minor was in Music Hall, Boston, by von Bülow, October 25, 1875, when Mr. Lang conducted the orchestra. The concerto has been played here by Mr. Lang, Mrs. Hopekirk and Miss Aus der Ohe. Mr. Apthorp says in the program book: "It was last played here by Mme. Helen Hopekirk." The statement is incorrect. Mrs. Hopekirk played it in 1891; Miss Aus der Ohe played it in 1892, January 6, at a Young People's Popular Concert, and she played it superbly.

It seems to me that Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who played it last night, made an error in judgment when he cut out the allegro vivace assai in the second movement. This jig tune is eminently and essentially Tschaikowskian. Some call it vulgar. But it is not thin-lipped vulgarity; it is the animal vulgarity of a great man. It is of kin to the vulgarity of Shakespeare, Rabelais, Aristophanes. It is the vulgarity of a remarkable race.

The performance of the long-winded cadenza, although it afforded an opportunity for personal display, did not restore equilibrium, so far as the composition itself is concerned.

The characteristics of Mr. Sieveking's performance were unusual strength modestly exerted without apparent effort, fluency and brilliancy in bravura passages. The finale would have gained if it had been taken at a more furious pace. The applause that followed the performance was long continued, enthusiastic and, above all, honest.

* * *

Dvorák's third rhapsody, first played at a Sinfonie soirée of the Royal Orchestra, Berlin, September 20, 1879, was one of the first works that called the attention of musicians to Dvorák. Looking over files of German music journals to find out about this first performance I came across a sniffing review of Dvorák's Dumka for piano published about the time of the concert at Berlin.

This rhapsodie is not one of Dvorák's best works for orchestra. Its chief merit is the orchestration. The themes are pretty enough, but they are worked to death. There is the fatal exuberance of Schubert, which delays the end. The finale of this rhapsody is a veritable deathbed farewell, with messages to all inquiring friends, and a tiresome distribution of property of little value.

* * *

I should like to hear a Mozart symphony played in a small hall by a small orchestra of Symphony men. I believe its beauties would then stand out in bolder relief, and that which is now dull and hopelessly old fashioned might seem pleasingly archaic. As played last night the first movement, with the exception of the Figaro suggestion, was a good deal of a bore, and there was the thought of sincere and laborious sawing of wood. The andante, a song of sweet melancholy, might have been sung with more delicacy. Thoroughly charming was the minuet. As for the finale it is one of the great masterpieces; not because it is a remarkable solution of a difficult task, but because it is brilliantly beautiful.

* * *

Mr. Apthorp says in the program book: "The name 'Jupiter' probably referred to the (supposable) 'thunder and lightning' fusées of the strings and wood wind in the opening measures of the first movement. At least, very similar fusées precede the general cry of 'Odi il tuon'! (Hear the thunder!) in the first finale of Don Giovanni." And he afterward says: "A yearning phrase, ascending by two successive semitones, followed by a brighter, almost rollicking one—is it Jove laughing at lovers' perjuries?"

Otto Jahn says—"W. A. Mozart," 1859, Vol. IV., p. 135—"Somebody has given this symphony the title 'Jupiter.' I know not when or where. This was to describe the majesty and the brilliany of the symphony rather than to indicate profound symbolism."

* * *

I should not speak thus rudely of Mr. Apthorp's inaccuracy, inexplicable omissions, or opinions, if his articles were published in a newspaper. But he is the editor of the program book of the Symphony Orchestra. This book is alleged by some to be of educational value. At the end of the season bound copies of it are advertised for sale. But there is never a table of errata at the end of the volume.

An occasional slip is pardonable. When number after number of this program book is noticeable for wildness in dates or other statements of fact, when an insufficient or no explanation is given of new works, Mr. Apthorp's attention should be called to his indifference or laziness. The hearer who wishes to find out something about the overture to Gwendoline will not be consoled by a technical analysis of the Jupiter Symphony, which is of no use to musicians and is unintelligible to the average concert goer.

The program book is a nuisance the moment it becomes analytical. A page or too of the important facts concerning the composers and their musical intentions should be sufficient.

The program book to-day in Music Hall prevents many people from real enjoyment of the music. They read. They do not listen.

And all this would probably be true if the program book were written by anyone else on the same general lines. Mr. Apthorp is a very intelligent man in many ways. It would be well for him to reflect that modern music has righteous claims; that a piece is not necessarily bad because it was written by a Frenchman, Russian or Italian in 1895 or 1896; that a little definite information about a new work makes more for musical righteousness than weary pages about "half cadence on the dominant of the dominant" and "a strong subsidiary of brilliant passage work," especially when the weary pages treat of as familiar a work as the Jupiter Symphony.

PHILIP HALE.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Madame Melba, who will be the soloist at the opening concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Tuesday evening, November 10, sailed from Europe on Saturday last. It is against the fixed standard of the management to make any change in its scale of prices under any circumstances, and none will be made on the occasion of Mme. Melba's appearance. A policy like this is warmly to be commended.

The Philharmonic programme in the Acad-

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH

704 CHESTNUT Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1896.

Madame Melba, who sailed from Europe last Saturday, will be the soloist at the opening concert for the season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will take place at the Academy of Music on Tuesday evening, November 10. Although Melba is such a great and such a high-priced attraction, there will be no advance of price at the concert at which she appears. That would be against the fixed policy of the management.

HOME JOURNAL

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1896.

EMMANUEL CHABRIER, Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsky, Anton Dvorak, and Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart were the composers chosen for the second symphony concert in Music Hall last Saturday evening. The concert had for its most noteworthy feature the re-appearance here of Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who performed the Tschaikowsky concerto, No. 1, in B flat minor, op. 23. A renewed experience with this work confirms the impression at its initial hearing in Boston. The work is not a masterpiece of the highest type, but it is nevertheless a masterpiece. One seeks without finding in it any such impassioned and original harmony, effective contrasts, grand climaxes and unique points of architecture as may be found for example in the distinctly modern concertos of Grieg, Saint-Saëns and Paderewski. Its thematic contents are wholly unobjectionable. Its melodies are one and all tuneful and ear-catching without being commonplace; refined and dignified, as well as being quite invariably pleasing, but in no single instance transcendently so. In its points of adaptation to a typical virtuoso's technique its effective octave passages constitute about two-thirds of all the startling virtuosity it contains.

—o—

Mr. Sieveking's success with the work was admirable. Nor is this to be wondered at when, taken in connection with the most sensational feature of the concerto, as above noted, the octave playing of Mr. Sieveking has not been equalled here by any pianist who has visited us with the possible exception of D'Albert. Such rapid, clear and brilliant octave playing as Mr. Sieveking exhibits would seem quite impossible to surpass. Considered as a whole, his performance was lacking in neither strength nor dignity of style. Whenever the opportunity presented itself he did not fail to display the even more commendable attribute of his technical proficiency in impelling his right and left hands as it fairly seemed, to converse with each other, and that with rare freedom, perspicuity and ease. His performance was otherwise characterized by an integrity of purpose, manly intelligence, facility of execution, and refined expression, which, though such qualities in each particular detail were not superlatively well manifested, nevertheless contributed their own important share in rendering his perfomance artistically effective and delightful. At the conclusion of the concerto the prolonged applause showered upon Mr. Sieveking testified unmistakably to the appreciation he received from one of the most critical and intelligent of symphony concert audiences.

—o—

The concert had for one principal novelty the overture to "Gwendoline," by Emmanuel Chabrier, a work which a musician so conservative in his tastes as cian so conservative in his tastes as Mr. Paur might not have been expected to indorse. The "Gwendoline" overture is in no single feature so great as in the brazen disclosure of how the late Richard Wagner, perforce of circumstances beyond his control, has been compelled to furnish Chabrier with the principal suggestions of his incoherent and overcrowded score. In the harmonic endowment of the work the composer has been most exasperatingly wild, giddy and frantic, but, alas, neither graceful nor beautiful. In fact, there is an ill-disguised rottenness at the very core of this overture, while the bizarre effects of the score are often of the most noisy and blatant description.

—o—

The overture doubtless caused more comment than any other selection on the programme. As regards any important expression of such comment, the attitude taken by Mr. B. E. Woolf is, to say the least, interesting. How such music as Chabrier's, such fill up and burst orchestration, such sound and fury signifying nothing, would have sounded to the learned and brilliant critic ten years ago, one can only infer from the premises and points of view of his musical criticisms at that time. If, however, he really enjoys the overture in question, and there would appear to be no doubt of it, one can only hope that he has no intention of deserting the grand old party of Bach, Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven and Brahms, with which he has been so ably identified, and that he has no real intention of becoming identified with any such schemes for the free and unlimited orchestration of brass as he has heretofore so steadfastly renounced. Another esteemed contemporary says of the orchestration to Gwendoline, that it is "more distinct even in its spasms than is the orchestration of Wagner." This is all very true; but, as this contemporary will allow, it is neither the highest nor the healthiest order of orchestration that is attended with "spasms."

—o—

How any such spasmless authorities on musical art as Messrs. W. and H. can really enjoy such "spasms of orchestration" as are experienced by them in the "Gwendoline" overture is inexplicable. Yet information has come to the effect that this very same convulsive and hysterical music with all its free and unlimited orchestration of brass "so distinct in its spasms" will "well bear repetition."

The sale of single tickets for the first concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Academy of Music opens this (Saturday) morning, October 31st, at 8:30 o'clock, at Chandler's, and at the Brooklyn Institute, 502 Fulton street.

Soloist:

MME. MELBA.

Concert Monday, Nov. 9.

MME. MELBA COMING.

Sails From Europe To-day—Will Sing at the Opening Symphony Concert.

The sale of single seats for the initial concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra at the Academy of Music, November 9, opens to-morrow morning at 8:30 o'clock. Seats may be purchased either at Chandler's, 300 Fulton stree, or at the ticket office of the Brooklyn institute, 502 Fulton stret.

Manager C. A. Ellis of the Boston Symphony organisation, has secured Mme. Nella Melba, who created such a furor when she appeared last years, as the soloist for the first concert. The prima donna sails from Liverpool to-day ,accompanied by Manager Ellis, and will arrive in New York Thursday, November 5. Mr. Ellis has been very fortunate in making arrangements with European singers to appear with the Boston Symphony, but the full list of those he has engaged cannot be made known until he reaches America.

Mme. Melba will have two numbers in the concert of November 9, and the programme otherwise will be one of the strongest presented by Mr. Paur's musicians in recent years. On the Saturday afternoon preceding, Mr. Henry E. Krehbiel, the well known musical critic, will give the first of his lectures under the auspices of the institute on the selections to be played at the concerts. These lectures will be open both to philharmonic ticket holders and to members of the Brooklyn institute, and will form an excellent preparation for the proper enjoyment of the concerts.

The Boston Symphony orchestra [illegible] a very large audience at [illegible] of its 15th season in [illegible] Wednesday evening. It was the opening of the musical season as well. Mr. Paur, upon entering, found his music stand completely covered with smilax, which hung in graceful festoons nearly to its base. Here and there a red carnation was inserted, and at the left corner was a large white chrysanthemum. Mr. Paur has always had some such floral greeting upon the opening of his Providence season.

There were many new faces in the audience, but several of the familiar Symphony attendants were not in their customary seats. Those still lingering in the country did not come up to town for the concert, and, as they also neglected to secure their season seats until the last moment, they will not hear the orchestral strains from their familiar chairs. Only a few were in their usual locations, and these were those accustomed to sit in the balcony.

In the centre of the hall was a mass of strange faces, including several parties of young misses in blue silk blouses, and hatless. Miss Madeleine Goddard's was one of the few familiar faces in the front rows. She was gowned in white silk, with a pink floral spot, a bodice massed with white lace, and a pretty capote of gold embroidery, pink roses and white ribbon bows.

Among others present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Smith, Mr. Frank Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Smith, Mr. Howard O. Sturges, Mrs. Sharpe, Mr. Lucian Sharpe, the Misses Pegram, Mr. Frank Hinckley, Miss Marguerite Dwight, Mr. J. O. Ames, Mrs. H. W. Campbell, Jr., Miss Child and party, Mrs. George H. Corliss, Miss Corliss, Dr. Jules Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Herreshoff, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Metcalf, Mr. William Dorrance, Miss Reeves, Dr. Ham, Miss Annette Ham, who has recently returned from a summer in Europe; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. White, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. Irving P. Irons, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Child, Miss Clara Child, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey.

The absence of the younger set was very noticeable. There were very few of the young men present, but very many of the yet-to-come-out set, with matrons or chaperones.

Only the lights over the musicians were on to their greatest capacity, so the audience sat in a dim light during the concert, and was not strikingly enthusiastic at any time.

The chief interest centred in the piano soloist, Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who played the brilliant concerto by Tschaikowsky. Unlike other male solo pianists, his hair was short, his attire faultless and his manner had not the least suggestion of the solo musician. He played the first movement so brilliantly that Mr. Paur not only applauded him with his baton, but his brother artists joined with the audience in their enthusiasm. He evidently found his solo a very trying one, as he appreciated the intervals between the movements. He was recalled several times at the conclusion of his number, creating the only genuine enthusiasm of the evening.

The allegro movement of the Mozart symphony failed to awaken much enthusiasm, but the andante grew upon the audience, which was in just the mood to appreciate the shading and interpretation that Mr. Paur gave to Weber's familiar "Invitation to the Dance."

The concert was over in season for the orchestra to catch the 10 o'clock train for Boston, accompanied by Mr. Comee, who returned from a hurried visit to Washington to be present at the opening of the season.

The second concert will be given Wednesday evening, Nov. 25, Thanksgiving week.

The Boston Symphony concert Wednesday evening called out the only large assemblage of the week. There was nothing else to attract except the opening of the new theatre, which men only attended.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.
SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 1, 1896.
Copyright, 1896. Post Publishing Company.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERT.

The Symphony concert given last evening quite surpassed the two previous ones. The principal number given was a symphony by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach in E minor, termed "Gaelic."

The work is built on many rather than few themes, and the composer has musicianly manner.

Each movement was enthusiastically applauded, and at the conclusion of the number Mrs. Beach was obliged to acknowledge the ovation several times from her seat on the floor.

Guiseppe Campanari was the soloist of the evening. Of his singing last evening nothing but the warmest praise can be given.

At the next concert Mme. Melba will be the soloist, and the prelude to act II. of Max Schilling's "Ingwelde" will be heard for the first time.

NOVEMBER 1. 1896.

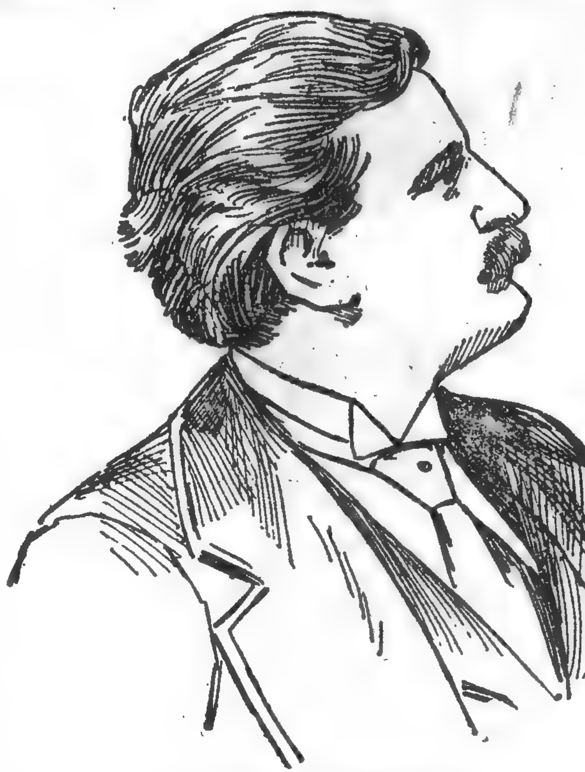
The Austrian Pianist Calls on His Old Friend Joseffy.

WILL PLAY IN BROOKLYN SOON.

He Looks Ruddy and Hearty and Is Prepared for a Continental Tour—Mme. Melba's Surprise—She Was Not Expected to Arrive for Several Days Yet. The Brooklyn Institute Planning a Series of Chamber Music Concerts.

Moriz Rosenthal, the noted Austrian pianist, arrived from Europe on the Hamburg-American liner Augusta Victoria yesterday morning. He was met by his manager for the continetal tour, Mr. Henry Wolfsohn, and went to the Windsor hotel, New York, where he received the representatives of the press between 12 and 1. Later in the afternoon he took a flying trip to Tarrytown, N. Y., to visit his old chum and fellow pianist, Rafael Joseffy.

Rosenthal looked the picture of health. His complexion was of a ruddy bronze, which put one in mind of the rosy cheeked German emigrants which arrive by the score at Ellis island. His eye was clear and his tremendous muscle was, if anything, more marked than when he visited America seven years ago. At the press reception Rosenthal gave those present an opportunity to test the quality of his arm muscle. Neither Corbett nor Fitzsimmons need have been ashamed of it. Rosenthal has gained this great muscular power by hard practice, and it is this which enables him to perform his sensational feats on the piano.



MORIZ ROSENTHAL.

The artist was asked by an Eagle reporter to detail his plans for the season of 1896-7. He said, in response to the inquiry:

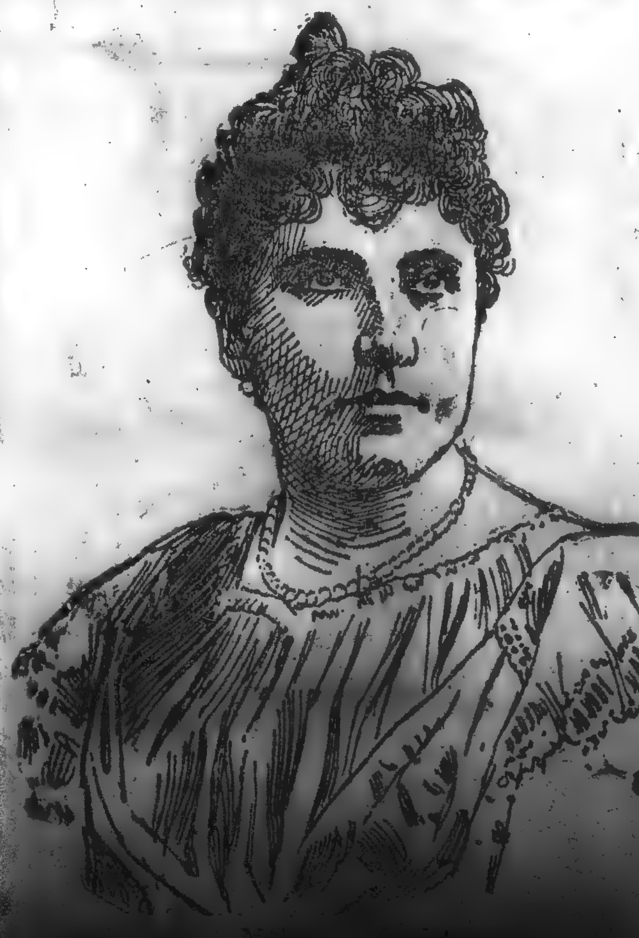
"My first appearance in America will be in orchestral concert at Carnegie Music hall, Tuesday evening, November 10, in which I shall have two orchestral numbers and one in solo. After that I expect to go West and shall not come East again until my appearance in your city with the Boston Symphony orchestra on December 11. In January and February I shall give recitals in New York, Brooklyn, Boston and other cities. There is a possibility of my going to California, my manager, Mr. Wolfsohn, having received some very flattering offers from that quarter, but I have not formed my plans as yet. It will all depend on the success of the concerts in the East."

"Have you played in public recently?"

"No, I have not," replied Rosenthal. "My last European appearance was in March and most of my time since then has been devoted to preparations for the American tour. You may say that I have prepared seven complete recital programmes without repetition of any composition in any one of them, and I expect to give most of these in New York and Boston; that is," added Mr. Rosenthal, with a twinkle in his eye, "if the public is kindly enough disposed to listen to me. You know all we artists are at the mercy of the public. During my last tour American audiences received me so enthusiastically that I am inclined to think that the experience of seven years ago will be repeated."

Mme. Nella Melba, who is to sing at the opening Boston Symphony concert in this city on November 9, was a passenger on the Campania yesterday. Mme. Melba's arrival here was a good deal of a surprise to her American friends, who had not expected to see her before Thursday, November 5. Manager C. A. Ellis said that she had changed her plans before sailing.

Melba's immediate destination is Boston, where she will lend eclat to two concerts of the Boston Symphony season in the home city of that superb organization. She will make her bow in Boston on November 6 and 7; will then come to Brooklyn with the Symphony orchestra and make her initial appearance in the metropolitan district at our Academy of Music, thence journeying to Philadelphia and Baltimore, in which cities she [illegible] at the opening of the [illegible] opera season [illegible] New York.



Melba said yesterday that she remembers with keen pleasure the ovation that Brooklynites gave her last season. She has had a good vacation from work the last two months and is in good singing form.

The department of music of the Brooklyn institute sent out this week the announcement of a series of four chamber music concerts to be given at Association hall on the evening of Wednesday, November 25; Monday, December 14; Wednesday, December 23, and Thursday, January 7. The first concert will be given by the New York Philharmonic club, including the following artists: Eugene Weiner, flute; William Hoffmann, first violin; Frank S. Porte, second violin; Paul Mende, viola; Gustav Hornberger, cello, and Henry Lehman, double bass. The club will be assisted by Miss Inez Grenelli, soprano.

The second concert will be given by the Kneisel string quartet of Boston, Mr. Franz Kneisel, leader. The New York Ladies trio will give the third, assisted by Mr. Mackenzie Gordon, tenor, and the series will be concluded by the Dannreuther string quartet, of which Mr. Gustav Dannreuther is director and first violin. Mozart's famous quintet will be one of the numbers at the latter concert.

The first concert of the Boston Symphony will be given at the Academy on Monday evening, the 9th. Mr. Paur will conduct, of course, and the soloist will be Mme. Melba. The programme is pleasantly diversified with music that is not too heavy and contains one novelty here, the prelude by Max Schillings. Mme. Melba's songs, too, are far outside the hackneyed concert list, the Mozart Aria having fallen completely out of the repertory of modern singers—perhaps because only two or three of them could sing it—and the Massenet has been seldom sung in this country. The complete list is:

Overture to "Genoveva," in C minor, Op. 81 ....Robert Schumann
Aria, "L'amero saro Costante,"
from "I. Re Pastore" Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
(With violin obligato.)
Mme. Melba.
Symphony in G minor (Koechel, 550)......... ....Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
I. Allegro molto (G minor)....................4-4
II. Andante (E flat major) 6-8
III. Menuetto: Allegro (G minor) 3-4
IV. Finale: Allegro assai (G minor)......4-4
Intermission.
Prelude to Act II, "Ingwelde" ....Max Schillings
(First time at these concerts.)
Aria, "Sevillana" ....Jules Massenet
Mme. Melba.
"Invitation to the Dance".Karl Maria von Weber
(Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)

Gazette
BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, NOV. 1.

The Symphony Concert.

The Symphony Orchestra geve its third concert last evening in Music Hall. The programme was:

Symphony, E-minor, "Gaelic," op.32............ Mrs. H. H. A. Beach
(MS. First time")
Air from "Herodiade"....................Massenet
Variations on a Haydn Theme.............Brahms
Prologue to "Pagliacchi"..............Leoncavallo
Overture to "Der Freischutz"...............Weber
Soloist, Mr. G. Campanari.

Much interest was manifested to hear Mrs. Beach's symphony, and expectation was not disappointed, for the work has many merits and sets off Mrs. Beach's talents in a new light. The symphony gives no indication that it was written by a woman; there is no weakness on the side of sentiment; there is no affectation and no pettiness.

On the other hand, it cannot be claimed that the symphony is a masterpiece, however many may be the merits that it possesses, for it has no special art message to deliver; that is, it does not say anything new, and gives hardly any evidence that it was composed through overfulness of imagination, or from the irresistible impulse of creative genius. It is a venture of the intellect rather than of the heart, and one detects the symptoms of heroic struggling rather than of victory. It is also to be noted that at times the composer is dazed by the variety of the resources at her disposal, and seems to choose at random, rather than through the wisdom gained by experience or the instinct touched by inspiration. The result is that the tone coloring is not always effective; the master touch is absent,—that sure, wise touch that plunges the color into the one only place where it belongs, and leaves it there without niggling it into insignificance.

From a true art standpoint a symphony is either a masterpiece or it is nothing. It is the highest product of musical evolution; the touchstone of mastership. Creative genius must be the blood that circulates through the veins to give it vitality; it must glow with beauty even though it wail like a Titan in agony, or smile with the serenity of a passionless god. It must have large passion, large feeling, large dignity or large cheerfulness.

Mrs. Beach's symphony possesses so many excellent characteristics that one feels no hesitation in treating it with full critical freedom, and to do less would be to underestimate it and its composer. We add, then, that the work is stronger on its technical than on its creative side; it is the well-considered handiwork of a painstaking, diligent student. The treatment is sometimes impressive, as in the working out of the themes of the third movement; there is everywhere evidence of careful thought and of ingenuity; but while everything is done correctly, everything is not always done impressively. The effects are sometimes labored, and they are not always reached with a masterful directness or certainty. The last movement, that is not without brilliancy, gives more than one suggestion of this seeming striving after an effect that is not fully attained; this laborious struggling for a climax that does not seem worthy of the labor expended in reaching it.

As the work of a student who, we are told, "studied counterpoint, fugue, musical form and instrumentation by herself," the symphony is deserving of very high praise; for, even though it gives no hint at inspiration, it is a thoughtful and carefully considered piece of work, showing ingenuity and a rare feeling for orchestral effect,—though this effect is not rarely produced by the contrasting of forte with piano. There can be no doubt that most of the faults are due to inexperience, and there is enough talent in evidence to more than excuse the faults. The symphony is fully equal in worth to many produced by the composer's Boston contemporaries, and gives, in addition, more promise of future excellence. The work was played with the utmost care and finish by the orchestra, and was greeted with the liveliest enthusiasm.

In his contributions to the programme Mr. Campanari again revealed himself as the sincere and conscientious artist. The Massenet air was sung with largeness, feeling and finish; and as for Tonio's prologue, Mr. Campanari has already given it more than once as an evidence of his dramatic skill.

Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the next concert.

[41]

Brooklyn Daily Eagle
FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 30, 1896.

The sale of single tickets for the first concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Academy of Music opens this (Saturday) morning, October 31st, at 8:30 o'clock, at Chandler's, and at the Brooklyn Institute, 502 Fulton street.

Soloist:

MME. MELBA.

Concert Monday, Nov. 9.

MME. MELBA COMING.

Sails From Europe To-day—Will Sing at the Opening Symphony Concert.

The sale of single seats for the initial concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra at the Academy of Music, November 9, opens to-morrow morning at 8:30 o'clock. Seats may be purchased either at Chandler's, 300 Fulton stree, or at the ticket office of the Brooklyn institute, 502 Fulton stret.

Manager C. A. Ellis of the Boston Symphony organization, has secured Mme. Nella Melba, who created such a furor when she appeared last years, as the soloist for the first concert. The prima donna sails from Liverpool to-day ,accompanied by Manager Ellis, and will arrive in New York Thursday, November 5. Mr. Ellis has been very fortunate in making arrangements with European singers to appear with the Boston Symphony, but the full list of those he has engaged cannot be made known until he reaches America.

Mme. Melba will have two numbers in the concert of November 9, and the programme otherwise will be one of the strongest presented by Mr. Paur's musicians in recent years. On the Saturday afternoon preceding, Mr. Henry E. Krehbiel, the well known musical critic, will give the first of his lectures under the auspices of the institute on the selections to be played at the concerts. These lectures will be open both to philharmonic ticket holders and to members of the Brooklyn institute, and will form an excellent preparation for the proper enjoyment of the concerts.

PROVIDENCE SOCIAL [illegible]

The Boston Symphony orchestra had a very large audience at the opening of its 15th season in Providence Wednesday evening. It was the opening of the musical season as well.

Mr. Paur, upon entering, found his music stand completely covered with smilax, which hung in graceful festoons nearly to its base. Here and there a red carnation was inserted, and at the left corner was a large white chrysanthemum. Mr. Paur has always had some such floral greeting upon the opening of his Providence season.

There were many new faces in the audience, but several of the familiar Symphony attendants were not in their customary seats. Those still lingering in the country did not come up to town for the concert, and, as they also neglected to secure their season seats until the last moment, they will not hear the orchestral strains from their familiar chairs. Only a few were in their usual locations, and these were those accustomed to sit in the balcony.

In the centre of the hall was a mass of strange faces, including several parties of young misses in blue silk blouses, and hatless. Miss Madeleine Goddard's was one of the few familiar faces in the front rows. She was gowned in white silk, with a pink floral spot, a bodice massed with white lace, and a pretty capote of gold embroidery, pink roses and white ribbon bows.

Among others present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Smith, Mr. Frank Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Smith, Mr. Howard O. Sturges, Mrs. Sharpe, Mr. Lucian Sharpe, the Misses Pegram, Mr. Frank Hinckley, Miss Marguerite Dwight, Mr. J. O. Ames, Mrs. H. W. Campbell, Jr., Miss Child and party, Mrs. George H. Corliss, Miss Corliss, Dr. Jules Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Herreshoff, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Metcalf, Mr. William Dorrance, Miss Reeves, Dr. Ham, Miss Annette Ham, who has recently returned from a summer in Europe; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. White, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. Irving P. Irons, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Child, Miss Clara Child, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey.

The absence of the younger set was very noticeable. There were very few of the young men present, but very many of the yet-to-come-out set, with matrons or chaperones.

Only the lights over the musicians were on to their greatest capacity, so the audience sat in a dim light during the concert, and was not strikingly enthusiastic at any time.

The chief interest centred in the piano soloist, Mr. Martinus Sieveking, who played the brilliant concerto by Tschaikowsky. Unlike other male solo pianists, his hair was short, his attire faultless and his manner had not the least suggestion of the solo musician. He played the first movement so brilliantly that Mr. Paur not only applauded him with his baton, but his brother artists joined with the audience in their enthusiasm. He evidently found his solo a very trying one, as he appreciated the intervals between the movements. He was recalled several times at the conclusion of his number, creating the only genuine enthusiasm of the evening.

The allegro movement of the Mozart symphony failed to awaken much enthusiasm, but the andante grew upon the audience, which was in just the mood to appreciate the shading and interpretation that Mr. Paur gave to Weber's familiar "Invitation to the Dance."

The concert was over in season for the orchestra to catch the 10 o'clock train for Boston, accompanied by Mr. Comee, who returned from a hurried visit to Washington to be present at the opening of the season.

The second concert will be given Wednesday evening, Nov. 25, Thanksgiving week.

The Boston Symphony concert Wednesday evening called out the only large assemblage of the week. There was nothing else to attract except the opening of the new theatre, which men only attended.

BOSTON POST,
The Representative Democratic Paper
OF NEW ENGLAND.
SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 1, 1896.
Copyright, 1896. Post Publishing Company.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERT.

The Symphony concert given last evening quite surpassed the two previous ones. The principal number given was a symphony by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach in E minor, termed "Gaelic."

The work is built on many rather than few themes, and the composer has musicianly manner.

Each movement was enthusiastically applauded, and at the conclusion of the number Mrs. Beach was obliged to acknowledge the ovation several times from her seat on the floor.

Guiseppe Campanari was the soloist of the evening. Of his singing last evening nothing but the warmest praise can be given.

At the next concert Mme. Melba will be the soloist, and the prelude to act II. of Max Schilling's "Ingwelde" will be heard for the first time.

Brooklyn Daily Eagle
NOVEMBER 1, 1896.

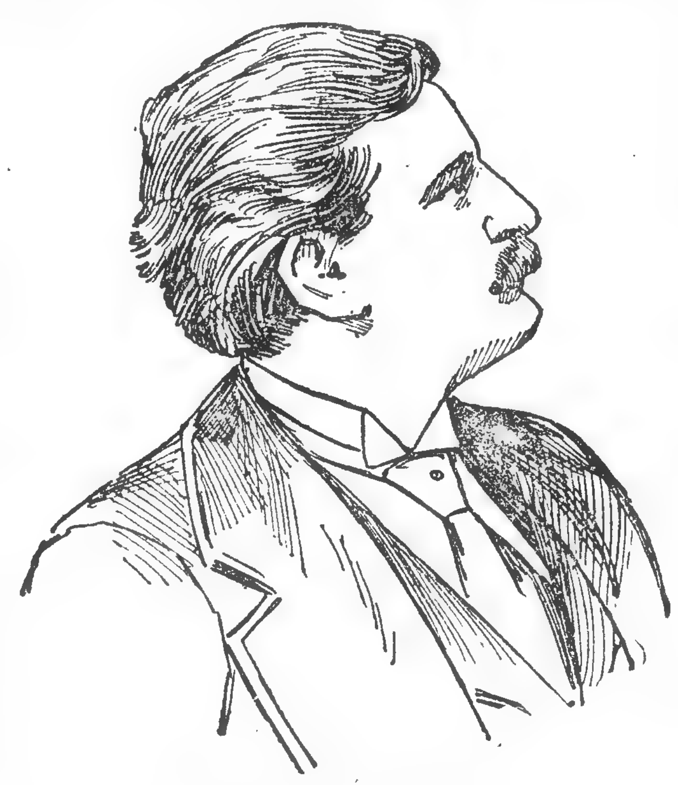
The Austrian Pianist Calls on His Old Friend Joseffy.

WILL PLAY IN BROOKLYN SOON.

He Looks Ruddy and Hearty and Is Prepared for a Continental Tour—Mme. Melba's Surprise—She Was Not Expected to Arrive for Several Days Yet. The Brooklyn Institute Planning a Series of Chamber Music Concerts.

Moriz Rosenthal, the noted Austrian pianist, arrived from Europe on the Hamburg-American liner Augusta Victoria yesterday morning. He was met by his manager for the contineṭal tour, Mr. Henry Wolfsohn, and went to the Windsor hotel, New York, where he received the representatives of the press between 12 and 1. Later in the afternoon he took a flying trip to Tarrytown, N. Y., to visit his old chum and fellow pianist, Rafael Joseffy.

Rosenthal looked the picture of health. His complexion was of a ruddy bronze, which put one in mind of the rosy cheeked German emigrants which arrive by the score at Ellis island. His eye was clear and his tremendous muscle was, if anything, more marked than when he visited America seven years ago. At the press reception Rosenthal gave those present an opportunity to test the quality of his arm muscle. Neither Corbett nor Fitzsimmons need have been ashamed of it. Rosenthal has gained this great muscular power by hard practice, and it is this which enables him to perform his sensational feats on the piano.



MORIZ ROSENTHAL.

The artist was asked by an Eagle reporter to detail his plans for the season of 1896-7. He said, in response to the inquiry:

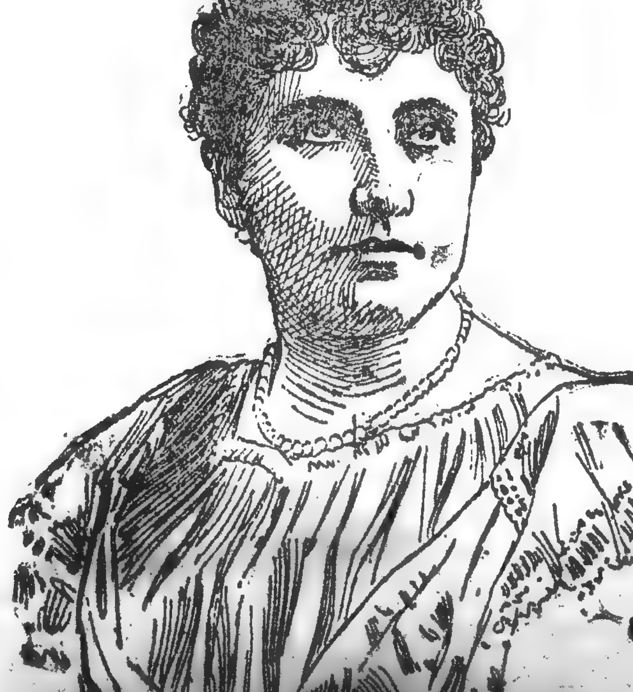
"My first appearance in America will be in orchestral concert at Carnegie Music hall, Tuesday evening, November 10, in which I shall have two orchestral numbers and one in solo. After that I expect to go West and shall not come East again until my appearance in your city with the Boston Symphony orchestra on December 11. In January and February I shall give recitals in New York, Brooklyn, Boston and other cities. There is a possibility of my going to California, my manager, Mr. Wolfsohn, having received some very flattering offers from that quarter, but I have not formed my plans as yet. It will all depend on the success of the concerts in the East."

"Have you played in public recently?"

"No, I have not," replied Rosenthal. "My last European appearance was in March and most of my time since then has been devoted to preparations for the American tour. You may say that I have prepared seven complete recital programmes without repetition of any composition in any one of them, and I expect to give most of these in New York and Boston; that is," added Mr. Rosenthal, with a twinkle in his eye, "if the public is kindly enough disposed to listen to me. You know all we artists are at the mercy of the public. During my last tour American audiences received me so enthusiastically that I am inclined to think that the experience of seven years ago will be repeated."

Mme. Nella Melba, who is to sing at the opening Boston Symphony concert in this city on November 9, was a passenger on the Campania yesterday. Mme. Melba's arrival here was a good deal of a surprise to her American friends, who had not expected to see her before Thursday, November 5. Manager C. A. Ellis said that she had changed her plans before sailing.

Melba's immediate destination is Boston, where she will lend eclat to two concerts of the Boston Symphony season in the home city of that superb organization. She will make her bow in Boston on November 6 and 7; will then come to Brooklyn with the Symphony orchestra and make her initial appearance in the metropolitan district at our Academy of Music, thence journeying to Philadelphia and Baltimore, in which cities she will be heard with [illegible] on the two succeeding days. On Monday evening, November 16, Melba will sing in "Faust" at the opening of the grand opera season in New York.



Melba said yesterday that she remembered with keen pleasure the ovation that Brooklynites gave her last season. She has had a good vacation from work the last two months and is in good singing form.

The department of music of the Brooklyn institute sent out this week the announcement of a series of four chamber music concerts to be given at Association hall on the evening of Wednesday, November 25; Monday, December 14; Wednesday, December 23, and Thursday, January 7. The first concert will be given by the New York Philharmonic club, including the following artists: Eugene Weiner, flute; William Hoffmann, first violin; Frank S. Porte, second violin; Paul Mende, viola; Gustav Hornberger, cello, and Henry Lehman, double bass. The club will be assisted by Miss Inez Grenelli, soprano.

The second concert will be given by the Kneisel string quartet of Boston, Mr. Franz Kneisel, leader. The New York Ladies trio will give the third, assisted by Mr. Mackenzie Gordon, tenor, and the series will be concluded by the Dannreuther string quartet, of which Mr. Gustav Dannreuther is director and first violin. Mozart's famous quintet will be one of the numbers at the latter concert.

The first concert of the Boston Symphony will be given at the Academy on Monday evening, the 9th. Mr. Paur will conduct, of course, and the soloist will be Mme. Melba. The programme is pleasantly diversified with music that is not too heavy and contains one novelty here, the prelude by Max Schillings. Mme. Melba's songs, too, are far outside the hackneyed concert list, the Mozart Aria having fallen completely out of the repertory of modern singers—perhaps because only two or three of them could sing it —and the Massenet has been seldom sung in this country. The complete list is:

Overture to "Genoveva," in C minor, Op. 81 ....Robert Schumann
Aria, "L'amero saro Costante,"
from "Il Re Pastore" Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
(With violin obligato.)
Mme. Melba.
Symphony in G minor (Koechel, 550)......... ....Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
I. Allegro molto (G minor)....................4-4
II. Andante (E flat major) 6-8
III. Menuetto: Allegro (G minor) 3-4
IV. Finale: Allegro assai (G minor)......4-4
Intermission.
Prelude to Act II, "Ingwelde" ....Max Schillings
(First time at these concerts.)
Aria, "Sevillana" ....Jules Massenet
Mme. Melba.
"Invitation to the Dance".Karl Maria von Weber
(Scored for orchestra by Hector Berlioz.)

Gazette
BOSTON, SUNDAY MORNING, NOV. 1.

The Symphony Concert.

The Symphony Orchestra gave its third concert last evening in Music Hall. The programme was:

Symphony, E-minor, "Gaelic," op.32............ Mrs. H. H. A. Beach
(MS. First time!)
Air from "Herodiade"....................Massenet
Variations on a Haydn Theme.............Brahms
Prologue to "Pagliacchi"..............Leoncavallo
Overture to "Der Freischutz"..............Weber
Soloist, Mr. G. Campanari.

Much interest was manifested to hear Mrs. Beach's symphony, and expectation was not disappointed, for the work has many merits and sets off Mrs. Beach's talents in a new light. The symphony gives no indication that it was written by a woman; there is no weakness on the side of sentiment; there is no affectation and no pettiness.

On the other hand, it cannot be claimed that the symphony is a masterpiece, however many may be the merits that it possesses, for it has no special art message to deliver; that is, it does not say anything new, and gives hardly any evidence that it was composed through overfulness of imagination, or from the irresistible impulse of creative genius. It is a venture of the intellect rather than of the heart, and one detects the symptoms of heroic struggling rather than of victory. It is also to be noted that at times the composer is dazed by the variety of the resources at her disposal, and seems to choose at random, rather than through the wisdom gained by experience or the instinct touched by inspiration. The result is that the tone coloring is not always effective; the master touch is absent,—that sure, wise touch that plunges the color into the one only place where it belongs, and leaves it there without niggling it into insignificance.

From a true art standpoint a symphony is either a masterpiece or it is nothing. It is the highest product of musical evolution; the touchstone of mastership. Creative genius must be the blood that circulates through the veins to give it vitality; it must glow with beauty even though it wail like a Titan in agony, or smile with the serenity of a passionless god. It must have large passion, large feeling, large dignity or large cheerfulness.

Mrs. Beach's symphony possesses so many excellent characteristics that one feels no hesitation in treating it with full critical freedom, and to do less would be to underestimate it and its composer. We add, then, that the work is stronger on its technical than on its creative side; it is the well-considered handiwork of a painstaking, diligent student. The treatment is sometimes impressive, as in the working out of the themes of the third movement; there is everywhere evidence of careful thought and of ingenuity; but while everything is done correctly, everything is not always done impressively. The effects are sometimes labored, and they are not always reached with a masterful directness or certainty. The last movement, that is not without brilliancy, gives more than one suggestion of this seeming striving after an effect that is not fully attained; this laborious struggling for a climax that does not seem worthy of the labor expended in reaching it.

As the work of a student who, we are told, "studied counterpoint, fugue, musical form and instrumentation by herself," the symphony is deserving of very high praise; for, even though it gives no hint at inspiration, it is a thoughtful and carefully considered piece of work, showing ingenuity and a rare feeling for orchestral effect,—though this effect is not rarely produced by the contrasting of forte with piano. There can be no doubt that most of the faults are due to inexperience, and there is enough talent in evidence to more than excuse the faults. The symphony is fully equal in worth to many produced by the composer's Boston contemporaries, and gives, in addition, more promise of future excellence. The work was played with the utmost care and finish by the orchestra, and was greeted with the liveliest enthusiasm.

In his contributions to the programme Mr. Campanari again revealed himself as the sincere and conscientious artist. The Massenet air was sung with largeness, feeling and finish; and as for Tonio's prologue, Mr. Campanari has already given it more than once as an evidence of his dramatic skill.

Mme. Melba will be the soloist at the next concert.

SUNDAY HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.
VOL. C., NO. 124.

SUNDAY, NOV. 1, 1896.

A WORK OF DECIDED WORTH.

Initial Concert Performance of Mrs. Beach's "Gaelic."

Given at Last Evening's Symphony Concert—Applause Both Spontaneous and Enthusiastic—Brahms Variations on a Haydn Theme Among Other Features.

The programme for the Boston Symphony orchestra concert last evening was:

Symphony, E-minor, "Gaelic" .... Mrs. H. H. A. Beach
Aria, "Herodiade" .... Massenet
Variations on a theme by Haydn ...... Brahms
Aria, "I Pagliacci" .... Leoncavallo
Overture, "Der Freyschutz" .... Weber

Mr. Giuseppe Campanari was the soloist.

The chief point of interest was, of course, Mrs. Beach's symphony, which had its first concert performance. It is not often that a woman undertakes to compose a symphony, and the works in this class from that source might be counted on the fingers of one hand, and none of them has achieved more than a success of the moment, or, in other words, has not made a tour of the musical world. Perhaps Mrs. Beach's may have better fortune. It is built on a large model, and is wholly modern in style and treatment.

Place aux dames may well be the cry when a woman produces a work of such dimensions, and, all things considered, as creditable a work as this one is; but there is no allowance called for, and there are no apologies to be made on the ground of the composer's sex, for her symphony has not the faintest trace of effeminacy, but is distinctly and thoroughly masculine in effect, and for a first essay in an exacting task may be heartily and justly praised.

The various movements, with the exception of the second, are somewhat longer than the brevity of their themes warrants, and there is also over much of noisy orchestration that is frequently confused and confusing—a failing that, curiously enough, characterizes the scoring of most women composers—but in every direction Mrs. Beach shows a perfect knowledge of the technique of writing for the orchestra, and with experience will obtain a finer sense of discretion in regard to the temptation that besets a young composer to instrument too heavily.

On the whole, the treatment is made of more importance than are the materials with which it deals, and the work often has more of the aspect of a fantasie than of a symphony, and in the opening movement the composer has not made her intention quite clear. It abounds in well conceived and brilliant effects, and the Gaelic theme is charmingly introduced and gracefully used, but, taken altogether, the movement, despite the unflagging vigor with which it is carried on, its force and its occasional impressiveness, sinks too often to noisiness, of which the meaning is vague and which leads nowhere in particular.

The second movement is thoroughly charming, with its graceful Scottish theme, alla Siciliana, daintily and effectively given forth by the wind instruments, and breaking into a piquant and spirited scherzo, through which the first theme breaks with delightful results every now and then, until the first theme returns in its original form, to be more elaborately treated. This is the best and most thoroughly satisfying part of the symphony, and is a little masterpiece in its way in sentiment and orchestration.

The slow movement has some admirable moments, especially in its warm and flowing Gaelic theme, and in the skill with which it is contrapuntally used on its repetition, but it is spun out to a length that becomes at last tiresome, and notably in the prolongation of the close, which is delayed long after it has ceased to interest.

The finale opens with immense vigor, which is sustained without a break to the end, and the fiery pace at which it moves and the massive body of tone that the orchestra is made to produce are stirring in their way, but what is said is often obscured by the noisy way of saying it, and is now and again buried under the volume of brassy tone that blares under and even over it.

Still, when all that there is of fault-finding to utter has been uttered, there can be no question that the symphony has decided worth, creditable alike to the ambition, the knowledge and the skill of the composer, and a work that entitles her to rank prominently and honorably among our native composers. It never falls into triviality, but is steadily high-reaching, dignified and virile, and of an able musicianship that is beyond all question. It was listened to with attentive interest, and at its close the applause was spontaneous and enthusiastic, the stormy call for the composer being responded to by her from her seat in the auditorium.

The Brahms variations were heard again with pleasure, especially under the beautiful rendering accorded them by Mr. Paur and the orchestra. Mr. Campanari, who was greeted on his first appearance with prolonged plaudits, sang the Massenet air with splendid warmth, breadth of style and just dramatic sentiment, and was recalled four times, amid a tornado of applause. His delivery of the "Pagliacci" prologue was a noble bit of declamation of which the climax was worked up to with an effect that was fairly thrilling in its force and emphasis. Once more was he recalled again and again.

There will be no concert next Saturday, but a week later the following programme will be given:

Overture, "Richard III.," Volkmann; aria from "Il Re Pastore," Mozart; prelude to act II. "Ingewelde," Max Schilling, first time; aria from "Lucia," Donizetti; symphony C-major, No. 2, Schumann. Mme. Melba is to be the soloist.

MME. MELBA ARRIVES.

Among the passengers in the Campania, which arrived Friday, was Mme. Melba, the Australian prima donna, who is to sing again at the Metropolitan in New York this season. Since leaving here last spring Mme. Melba has sung in Paris and London. At the close of the Covent Garden season she took a cottage on the Thames through August, and recently she has been sojourning at her home in Paris. She is in excellent health, and eager to get back to work once more. Her rentree at the Metropolitan will be made on the [illegible]

[illegible] to appear in some new roles during the season, but did not care last night to say what they would be.

Before the opening of the opera season she will sing in concert with the Boston Symphony orchestra, in Boston, on Nov. 6 and 7; in Brooklyn, Nov. 9; in Philadelphia, Nov. 10, and in Baltimore, Nov. 11. She has a tempting offer to go to South America next spring, which she will accept if she can get her contract with the Covent Garden management cancelled. In October next she intends to make a concert tour through the English provinces.

Boston Sunday Globe.

SUNDAY, NOV. 1, 1896.

Campanari Soloist at the Symphony Concert.

The usual large audiences were present at the Symphony rehearsal Friday afternoon and the concert last evening. The following uncommonly enjoyable program was superbly interpreted under Mr Paur's direction:

Symphony in E minor, Gaelic, op 32 (MS, first time) .... Mrs H H A Beach
Air, Vision Fugitive, from Herodiade, Jules Massenet
Variations on a theme by Josef Haydn (Chorale Sancti Antoni), in B flat major, op 56a .... Johannes Brahms
Prologue to Pagliacci ..... Ruggiero Leoncavallo
Overture to Der Freischutz, Karl Maria von Weber

The specially interesting feature of the concert was the performance of Mrs Beach's symphony, played from manuscript for the first time in public. It is the most pretentious composition that this talented musician has attempted, and its production entitles her to a high rank among American composers.

Boston is justly proud of her, and yesterday's audience gave emphatic expression of its appreciation. The usually undemonstrative rehearsal audience broke away from tradition and applauded with uncontrolled enthusiasm.

After the performance Mrs Beach responded to the imperative demands for her appearance by standing in the center aisle, bowing and smiling recognition of the demonstrative and long-continued plaudits.

Mrs Beach has been prominent in local musical circles for a number of years. She has won most fame as a pianiste, but she has also earned an enviable reputation as a composer. She has been a prolific writer, and among her larger works are a mass in E flat major, a scena and aria, "Eilende Wolken," a festival jubilate for chorus and orchestra and several cantatas. She has also written more than 60 shorter works for pianoforte and voice.

She was born in New Hampshire in 1867, and most of her musical education has been obtained in Boston. She has played several times with the symphony orchestra and her annual recitals are among the welcome musical events of the season.

Her "Gaelic" symphony is a splendid work. It is both scholarly and entertaining, qualities not always blended in the writings of the greatest masters. It is constructed in a thoroughly musicianly manner; its themes are melodious, well contrasted and clearly defined; most of them are new and all are treated with artistic effect.

The scoring is very elaborate, at times rather too elaborate, but this is a fault common with modern composers, and is, perhaps, to be expected. Indeed, Mrs Beach's work is of such general excellence that it would be hypercritical to enlarge upon its very few shortcomings.

The symphony is in four movements, Allegro con fuoco, Alla Sicicilina and Allegro vivace, Lento con molto and final, Allegro molto. There are some striking effects in the first movement, but over-elaboration tends at times to blur the meaning of the tonal pictures. The second movement is thoroughly delightful, and pleased the audience most of all. The themes are deliciously melodious, and the graceful Siciliano is treated in the daintiest fashion imaginable. The third movement is notable for artistic treatment of Gaelic folk songs, and the finale is impressive for power and brilliancy.

Sig Campanari was greeted with much enthusiasm, and his singing stirred the audience to demonstrative expressions of delight. He is a thorough artist, and deserves all the favor that has been accorded him. He is, perhaps, the best baritone on the operatic stage today; he is certainly foremost among singers residing in America.

The natural modesty and retiring disposition of the man delayed the recognition due him. Had he been constituted as is the average operatic singer he would long ago have won the fame which has finally come to him.

He sang the air from "Herodiade" with magnificent effect, but it was his spirited and expressive interpretation of the "Pagliacci" that received greatest applause from the audience. It was a superb effort.

The orchestra gave a fine performance of Brahams' interesting, but over-long, variations on a theme by Haydn, and interpreted the "Freischutz" overture with splendid effect.

Mme Melba will be the soloist at this week's Symphony concert. The program will be as follows:

Overture, "Richard III," Richard Volkmann; aria, "L'amero saro Costante," from "Il Re Pastore," Mozart, violin obligato, Mr Franz Kneisel; prelude to act II, "Ingwelde," (first time at these concerts), Max Schillings; aria from "Lucia," Donizetti; symphony in C major, No. 2, Schumann.

Established

The Official Paper o

The Official Paper of the City.

DAY MORNING, NOV. 2, 1896.

MUSICAL MATTERS.

The New Symphony of Mrs. Beach, the American Composer.

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach is the foremost American composer among women, yet it is a far cry, even from such a high position in art, to the successful creation of symphonies; neither the male nor the female native composers have as yet produced a musical composition in this large, heroic form, that is going to stand the test of time. The reason for this is not far to seek; there is no form in which such versatility is demanded as in the symphony.

It is the combination of intellectuality and emotion, it is to present variety in unity, it is to give all possible learning in the development which forms the gist of the sonata-allegro (the first movement), the perfection of emotional expression in its slow movement, brightness and popularity in its Scherzo, and technical brilliancy of scoring and a well-workedup climax in its finale. Small wonder that almost every composer is partially overthrown by some of these manifold requirements. A Paine (foremost of all American composers) may give learned development of themes, a Chadwick the spontaneity and brilliancy of a true Scherzo, a Beach the delicate beauty and tenderness of a slow movement, but the musical "Admirable Crichton," who is to shine in all these fields has not yet appeared in the native symphonic repertoire.

The new symphony by Mrs. Beach, entitled "Gaelic" (and upon rather slight grounds), could not have been more advantageously placed upon the programme; it began the concert, was followed by a song, which in turn was succeeded by some Brahms' variations which in no way competed with the scope and purpose of the symphonic work; and it was admirably played too. The first movement was what the German would call "Regelrecht," not breaking any rule in either succession of keys or relation of parts and themes; but it did not present a development of ideas that could be characterized by any higher term than "ingenious," and there was an amount of chromatic agitation everywhere present that seemed to lack a reasonable cause. This storm and stress began in the very first measure and was not absent from the coda. There seemed to be a determination to be powerful, at all hazards. There was some complex work in the mingling of rhythms that suggested midnight oil and musical arithmetic, but the subordinate theme was a charming bit of melody, and the coda was very martial and combative.

